Again, referring to the contention that the absolute promise contained in such certificate was ultra vires the corporation, it observed:

"We deem it unnecessary at this time to determine whether the defendant was authorized by that statute to enter into such contracts, for, if we assume that the making of them was in excess of the express power conferred upon the corporation by that statute, still, as the contracts involved no moral turpitude, and did not offend any express statute, they were not illegal in a sense that would prevent the maintenance of an action thereon. It is now well settled that a corporation cannot avail itself of the defense of ultra vires when the contract has been, in good faith, fully performed by the other party, and the corporation has had the benefit of the performance and of the contract. As has been said, corporations, like natural persons, have power and capacity to do wrong. They may, in their contracts and dealings, break over the restraints imposed upon them by their charters; and when they do so their exemption from liability cannot be claimed on the mere ground that they have no attributes or facilities which render it possible for them thus to act. While they have no right to violate their charters, yet they have capacity to do so, and are bound by their acts where a repudiation of them would result in manifest wrong to innocent parties, and especially where the offender alleges its own wrong to avoid a just responsibility. It may be that, while a contract remains unexecuted upon both sides, a corporation is not estopped to say in its defense that it had not the power to make the contract sought to be enforced; yet, when it becomes executed by the other party, it is estopped from asserting its own wrong, and cannot be excused from payment upon the plea that the contract was beyond its power. Bissell v. Michigan S. & N. I. R. Cos. 22 N. Y. 258; Whitney Arms Co. v. Barlow, 63 N. Y. 62, 20 Am. Rep. 504; Rider Life Raft Co. v. Roach, 97 N. Y. 378; Holmes, B. & H. v. Willard, 125 N. Y. 75, 80, 11 L. R. A. 170, 25 N. E. 1083; Buffalo v. Balcom, 134 N. Y. 532, 32 N. E. 7; Bath Gaslight Co. v. Claffy, 151 N. Y. 24, 36 L. R. A. 664, 45 N. E. 390; Moss v. Cohen, 158 N. Y. 240, 249, 53 N. E. 8; Hannon v. Siegel-Cooper Co. 167 N. Y. 244, 52 L. R. A. 429, 60 N. E. 597."

We deem it unnecessary to add any observations of our own to these satisfactory declarations of the law of New York.

A single matter remains to be noticed. It is contended that the contract evidenced by the certificates was changed by a loan subsequently obtained by the plaintiff from the defendant upon the security of the shares,—a loan obtained after the by-laws had been amended to make, as alleged, more clear the obligations assumed by the issue of share certificates. That amendment is found in § 3, art. 8, which as amended reads:

"Sec. 3. Instalment stock shall mature and be payable when the dues paid thereon, with the profits apportioned and credited thereto, shall equal $100 per share. Paid-up stock shall mature and be payable when the dues thereon, with the profits apportioned and credited thereto in excess of any cash dividends, if any, that may be paid, shall equal $100 per share; and unless otherwise provided all other stock shall be payable as provided by the by-laws or certificates of shares."
189 U. S.

But it is not shown that there was any express agreement between the parties to change the terms of the original contract; the amendment was clearly prospective in its operation (Knights Templars' & M. Life Indemnity Co. v. Jarman, 187 U. S. 197, ante, 139, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 108), and we are unable to perceive that the mere borrowing or the promise to return the money so borrowed had in themselves any effect upon the prior contract.

We see no error in the record, and the judgment of the Supreme Court of South Carolina is affirmed.

Mr. Justice Harlan and Mr. Justice White concurred in the result.

*SAMUEL BELL, Clerk, Petitioner, [131]
v.

COMMONWEALTH TITLE INSURANCE & TRUST COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 131-134.)

Clerks — public records — examination, by title guaranty companies.

A corporation engaged in examining titles and certifying thereto may, so far as necessary to assist in the examination of a title for which it is employed, inspect and examine

NOTE.—On the right to inspect public records—see notes to Re Caswell (R. I.) 27 L. R. A. 82; and Bell v. Commonwealth Title Ins. & T. Co. 49 C. C. A. 210.

Right of access to public records for private abstract purposes.

The extent to which public records may be used for the purposes of a private abstract business depends upon the provisions of the various statutes conferring the right of access to such records.

Under statutory or charter provisions authorizing any person or abstracter to inspect the records, they are entitled to a reasonable use of the same; and other persons, though not abstracters, are entitled to the same privileges. Stockman v. Brooks, 17 Colo. 248, 29 Pac. 746; State ex rel. Cole v. Rachac, 37 Minn. 372, 35 N. W. 7; People ex rel. Title Guarantee & T. Co. v. Reilly, 38 Hun. 429; Hanson v. Eichstaedt, 69 Wis. 538, 35 N. W. 30; Johnson v. Wakulla County, 28 Fla. 720, 9 So. 690; State ex rel. Clark v. Long, 37 W. Va. 266, 16 S. E. 578; Re Chambers, 44 Fed. 786; Burton v. Tuite, 78 Mich. 363, 7 L. R. A. 73, 44 N. W. 282; Burton v. Tuite, 80 Mich. 218, 7 L. R. A. 824, 45 N. W. 88; Day v. Button, 96 Mich. 600, 56 N. W. 3; Altcheson v. Huebner, 90 Mich. 643, 51 N. W. 634.

The Michigan cases above cited in effect overthe indices and cross indices of the judgment records prepared by the clerks of United States courts, which, by the act of August 1, 1888, § 2 (25 Stat. at L. 357, chap. 729, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 701), "shall at all times be open to the inspection and examination of the public," so long as it does not interfere with the clerk or his assistants in the discharge of their duties, or with the equal rights of other persons to make such inspection and examination.
741

[No. 191.]

Submitted March 10, 1903. Decided April 6, 1903.

ON WRIT of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the Circuit Court for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania giving a title guaranty company access to the judgment indices and cross indices kept by a clerk of the United States Court. Affirmed.

rule Webber v. Townley, 43 Mich. 534, 38 Am. Rep. 213, 5 N. W. 971, which required the abstractor to have a special interest in the records to be searched, before he was entitled to the privilege of inspection; but these cases were under a statute which expressly granted the right to abstractors.

A note or fee given for inspection of records to which the public is entitled is without consideration and against public policy. Parsons v. Randolph, 21 Mo. App. 353; Lum v. McCarty, 39 N. J. L. 287.

This last case in effect overruled Flemming v. Hindson County, 30 N. J. L. 280, which held that every person had access to the records, only on payment of a fee for the privilege of search.

While under the foregoing statutory provisions and decisions a reasonable use of the records is allowed, six hours a day when not used by the commissioners, and two hours on such days, is a reasonable regulation. Upton v. Catlin, 17 Colo. 546, 17 L. R. A. 282, 31 Pac. 172.

So, a restriction in the use of the office to three employees of an abstract company was held to be a reasonable regulation. People ex rel. German American Loan & T. Co. v. Richards, 99 N. Y. 620, 1 N. E. 258.

A surveyor has no right to desk room in the recorder's office, to copy all the field notes of all the surveys in the county. Phelan v. State, 76 Ala. 49.

And in Burton v. Reynolds, 102 Mich. 55, 60 N. W. 452, it was held that, while a general use is a matter of public privilege, the claimant must take his turn with the public; and it was said that, if he refuses to pay for special privileges for which others pay, he will not be entitled to such special privileges by mandamus.

Where abstractors have not been expressly provided for by the statutes, they have been refused the privilege of the use of the office when they had no special interest in the record at that time. Bean v. People, 7 Colo. 200, 2 Pac. 909; Buck v. Collins, 51 Ga. 391, 21 Am. Rep. 236; Randolph v. State, 82 Ala. 527, 60 Am. Rep. 761, 2 So. 714; Cornack v. Wolcott, 37 Kan. 391, 15 Pac. 245; Land Title Warranty & S. D. Co. v. Tanner, 99 Ga. 470, 27 S. E. 727; Barber v. West Jersey Title & Guaranty Co. 53 N. J. Eq. 158, 32 Atl. 222, 371, Reversing 49 N. J. Eq. 474, 24 Atl. 381.

See same case below, 49 C. C. A. 208, 110 Fed. 828.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brewer:

By § 828, Rev. Stat. (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 635), clerks of the circuit and district courts are allowed certain fees for searching records for judgments, decrees, etc., and certifying the results of such searches. In the same section is this provision:

"All books in the offices of the clerks of the circuit and district courts, containing the docket or minute of the judgments, or decrees thereof, shall, during office hours, be open to the inspection of any person desiring to examine the same, without any fees or charge therefor."

Section 2 of the act of August 1, 1888 (25 Stat. at L. 357, chap. 729, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 701), reads:

"The clerks of the several courts of the United States shall prepare and keep in their respective offices complete and convenient indices and cross indices of the judg-

But they are entitled to use the same if they have a present interest. Boylan v. Warren, 39 Kan. 301, 18 Pac. 174; Barber v. West Jersey Title & Guaranty Co. 53 N. J. Eq. 158, 32 Atl. 222, 371; Bell v. Commonwealth Title Insurance & Trust Co.

Under Md. Code, art. 17, § 1, providing that every clerk shall have the custody and carefully keep the books and papers of his office, and give copies on payment of a fee, an abstract company cannot compel the clerks of courts to furnish copies or abstracts and to make searches without payment of fees, or search the records of the office through its own employees, although the charter of the company provides for examination of title. Belt v. Prince George's County Abstract Co. 73 Md. 289, 10 L. R. A. 212, 20 Atl. 982.

And the same was held to be the rule in regard to abstractors generally in Illinois prior to the Illinois acts of May 31 and June 16, 1887. Scribner v. Chase, 27 Ill. App. 36.

And in Laughlin v. Hawley, 9 Colo. 174, 11 Pac. 45, it was said that the refusal by the county clerk of the opportunity to examine the files, sought by a land purchaser who was affected by a judgment lien, was a personal matter between him and the clerk.

The clerk of the New Jersey supreme court cannot be compelled to permit a guaranty title company to examine patent or short form indices to judgments, which are not required by law to be kept, though such indices are kept up at the public cost. Fidelity Trust Co. v. Clerk of Supreme Court, 65 N. J. L. 495, 47 Atl. 451.

A foreign corporation owning land was refused the privilege of making abstracts of the whole county, where the charter of the company was not shown. Diamond Match Co. v. Powers, 51 Mich. 145, 16 N. W. 314.

And in Newton v. Fisher, 98 N. C. 20, 3 S. E. 822, an opportunity was refused an attorney to inspect all chattel mortgages of a certain year to ascertain the financial condition of all the debtors of his clients. There appears to have been no statute involved in this case.

By statute in Minnesota the privilege of inspection and examination of public records is now denied when the purpose thereof is to certify abstracts of title. State ex rel. Clay County Abstract Co. v. McCubrey, 84 Minn. 439, 87 N. W. 1126.

ment records of said courts, and such indices and records shall at all times be open to the inspection and examination of the public."

On December 28, 1896, the Commonwealth Title Insurance & Trust Company commenced a suit in the circuit court of the United States for the eastern district of Pennsylvania against Samuel Bell, clerk of that court. The company is engaged in the business of insuring titles to real estate, [132] making searches for liens and encumbrances upon the same, and issuing certificates in respect thereto, and sought a decree giving to it access to the judgment indices and cross indices kept by the clerk. The case proceeded to a decree as follows:

"And now this 16th day of January, 1901, this case having come on to be heard upon pleadings and proofs, and having been argued by counsel, it is ordered, decreed, and adjudged that the respondent shall permit the properly authorized representatives of the complainant to inspect and examine the judgment indices and cross indices kept by the respondent, as clerk of the circuit court of the United States for the eastern district of Pennsylvania, in such way and manner as will enable the complainant to prosecute its business as insurer of titles, but subject to the following restrictions:

"The inspection and examination must in each instance relate and be confined to a transaction or transactions which at the time being shall be current or depending; and such inspection and examination shall be made only at such times and under such circumstances as will not interfere with the respondent or his assistants in the discharge of their duties, or with the exercise of the right of other persons to have access to said indices and cross indices."

This decree was affirmed on September 27, 1901, by the circuit court of appeals. 49 C. C. A. 208, 110 Fed. 828. On December 2 of the same year the case was brought here on certiorari. 183 U. S. 699, 46 L. ed. 396, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 946.

Solicitor General Richards and Assistant Attorney General Beck submitted the cause for petitioner.

Assistant Attorney General Beck filed a separate brief for petitioner:

The complainant must found his case upon a statutory right. If there can be said to have been any rule of common law upon the subject, it was that the right to inspect public records was confined to a person having some direct interest in the particular record sought to be inspected or copied, and that the right did not extend to one seeking to do so from mere curiosity or for his own private gain.

1 Greenl. Ev. 473, 475; Hanson v. Eichstaedt, 69 Wis. 538, 35 N. W. 31; State ex rel. Cole v. Rachae, 37 Minn. 372, 35 N. W. 7; Cormack v. Wolcott, 37 Kan. 391, 15 Pac. 245.

The question here involved has frequently been before the courts, and, although the decisions are not uniform, the majority uphold the position of the petitioner in this case.
189 U. S.

Bean v. People, 7 Colo. 200, 2 Pac. 909; Buck v. Collins, 51 Ga. 391, 21 Am. Rep. 236; Land Title Warranty & S. D. Co. v. Tanner, 99 Ga. 470, 27 S. E. 727; Phelan v. State, 76 Ala. 51; Cormack v. Wolcott, 37 Kan. 391, 15 Pac. 245; Keller v. Stone, 96 Va. 667, 32 S. E. 454; Newton v. Fisher, 98 N. C. 20, 3 S. E. 822; Belt v. Prince George's County Abstract Co. 73 Md. 289, 10 L. R. A. 212, 20 Atl. 982; Barber v. West Jersey Title & Guaranty Co. 53 N. J. Eq. 158, 32 Atl. 222, 371.

Mr. John G. Johnson submitted the cause for respondent:

A person about to take title to real estate, and obliged to inform himself concerning the existence or nonexistence of liens against the same, can make this examination through a person or corporation conducting for him the business of examining the title of the property about to be purchased, and the condition of the encumbrances against the same.

Lum v. McCarty, 39 N. J. L. 287; People ex rel. German American Loan & T. Co. v. Richards, 99 N. Y. 620, 1 N. E. 258; Day v. Button, 96 Mich. 600, 56 N. W. 3; State ex rel. Cole v. Rachae, 37 Minn. 372, 35 N. W. 7; Burton v. Tuile, 78 Mich. 363, 7 L. R. A. 73, 44 N. W. 282; Hanson v. Eichstaedt, 69 Wis. 538, 35 N. W. 30.

Mr. Justice Brewer delivered the opinion of the court:

The question presented is to what extent a company engaged in the business of examining titles and certifying thereto may have access to and use the indices and cross indices of the judgment records prepared by [133] the clerks of United States courts. The statute declares that they "shall at all times be open to the inspection and examination of the public." [25 Stat. at L. 358, chap. 729, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 701.] This company as one of the public has a right to this inspection and examination. It has no monopoly therein, and cannot interfere with the clerk or his assistants in the discharge of their duties, or with the equal rights of other persons to such inspection and examination. But this limitation is expressly provided for by the second of the two restrictions imposed in the decree. Under this decree the clerk, as custodian, can make such reasonable regulations as will secure to him and his assistants full use of all the books and records of his office,—which, of course, is a primary matter to be considered,—and also will guard against any tampering with or injury to those books and records, and at the same time give to the plaintiff and others access to the indices. From the testimony it is clear that there can be no difficulty on the score of time or otherwise in affording to this company and all others interested every proper facility for inspection and examination. Indeed, it is not contended that there is any trouble in that direction.

But the contention is that the office of clerk is not a salaried office; that he is paid by fees; that the fees for searches and certificates thereof have amounted to a very considerable sum, and in this office have resulted in a surplus above the maximum of compensation allowed by law to the clerk, which has gone into the Treasury of the United States, whereas, if this plaintiff and other like companies situated in Philadelphia, which are monopolizing the business of examinations of title, should be permitted to make their own inspection and examination of these indices, a large part of the fees hitherto received by the clerk will be lost, his maximum of compensation will not be reached, and there will be no surplus to be paid into the Treasury of the United States. It is insisted that although, by the terms of § 828 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 635), the judgment records are open to the inspection of any person without any fee or charge therefor, Congress, in directing the preparation of the indices and cross indices, and that they should be open to the inspection and examination of the public, did not add [134]thereto "without any *fee or charge therefor," and thus manifested its intent that they should not be so used as to interfere with the fees theretofore received by the clerk. We cannot so interpret the statute. If these indices were intended merely for the convenience of the clerk and to facilitate his work, the making of them would undoubtedly have been left to his discretion. The convenience of the public and assistance to those interested in the judgments were obviously in the thought of Congress, for it declared that they should be open to the inspection and examination of the public.

Very likely, at the time of the passage of the act, the monopolizing of the business of examining titles by one or two corporations was not contemplated. The work was scattered among the separate members of the bar, each one for his own client examining the title to property in which such client was interested. But if Congress provided and intended to provide that one, interested in the title to real estate and desiring an examination of judgment liens thereon, should, either by himself or agent, have access to these indices, that intent and that provision are not changed by the fact that the business has passed from the many to a few. The same right of inspection exists whether one is examining only the title to a single piece of real estate or the titles to a hundred. The inspection is an assistance to the examination of titles and obviously Congress intended that these indices should be open to the inspection of those rightfully making such examinations.

Whether parties have a right to make copies in full of these indices is not a question before us, for the decree carefully limits the right of inspection to a transaction or transactions at the time current or depending. So that all that this plaintiff is allowed by this decree is an inspection and examination of these indices, so far as may be necessary to assist in the examination of a title for which it is then employed.

We see no error in the decree, and it is affirmed.

*FIDELITY & DEPOSIT COMPANY OF [135]
MARYLAND

v.
L. BUCKI & SON LUMBER COMPANY

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 135-143.)

Damages—in suits on attachment bonds—counsel fees—injury to credit—loss of profits—trial—continuance.

1. Attorneys' fees incurred in dissolving an attachment, which by the local law of the state in which the attachment was issued can be recovered in an action in a court of such state on the attachment bond, are no less an element of damages because the action has been removed to a Federal court.
2. The injury to a vendee's credit, resulting from the bringing of actions by his vendor for a breach of contract and for a balance due thereunder, and any loss of profits because of the vendor's refusal to make further deliveries under the contract, are not elements of damages recoverable in a suit on the attachment bonds issued in such actions.
3. The refusal to discharge a jury and postpone the trial because of the misleading effect of rulings admitting testimony on the question of damages, afterwards excluded from the consideration of the jury, is not an abuse of discretion, where no witnesses had been discharged, nor any books or documents in possession of counsel sent away, during the trial, and there was no offer at the time to present further testimony.

[No. 220.]

Argued March 20, 1903. Decided April 6, 1903.

ON WRIT and Cross Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit to review a judgment modifying, and as modified affirming, a judgment of the United States Circuit Court for the Southern District of Florida in favor of plaintiff in an action on attachment bonds. Affirmed.

See same case below, 48 C. C. A. 436, 109 Fed. 393.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brewer:

On October 1, 1897, the Atlantic Lumber Company commenced two actions at law in NOTE.—As to state decisions and laws as rules of decision in Federal courts—see notes to Wilson v. Perrin, 11 C. C. A. 71; Hill v. Hite, 29 C. C. A. 553; Griffin v. Overman Wheel Co. 9 C. C. A. 548; Elmendorf v. Taylor, 6 L. ed. U. S. 290; Jackson ex dem. St. John v. Chew, 6 L. ed. U. S. 583; United States ex rel. Butz v. Muscatine, 19 L. ed. U. S. 490; Clark v. Graham, 5 L. ed. U. S. 334; and Forepaugh v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. (Pa.) 5 L. R. A. 508.

On the question of damages for tort as affected by loss of profits—see note to Wallace v. Pennsylvania R. Co. (Pa.) 52 L. R. A. 33.

the circuit court of Duval county, Florida, against The L. Bucki & Son Lumber Company. In each of these actions a writ of attachment was issued, the Fidelity & Deposit Company of Maryland being the surety on the attachment bonds. Both of the attachments were dissolved. Soon after such dissolution the Bucki Company brought the present action against the Fidelity Company upon the attachment bonds. The action was commenced in the circuit court of Duval county, Florida, but subsequently removed to the United States circuit court for the southern district of Florida. On a trial in that court the Bucki Company obtained a judgment which by the court of appeals of the fifth circuit was modified, and, as modified, affirmed. 48 C. A. 436, 109 Fed. 393. *Subsequently thereto, each of the parties obtained a writ of certiorari from this court. 184 U. S. 698, 46 L. ed. 64, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 946.

[136] C. A. 436, 109 Fed. 393. *Subsequently thereto, each of the parties obtained a writ of certiorari from this court. 184 U. S. 698, 46 L. ed. 64, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 946.

Mr. R. H. Liggett argued the cause, and, with Mr. Winfield Liggett, filed a brief for Fidelity & Deposit Company:

Attorneys' fees are not an element of actual damages in an action of trespass.

Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Prentice, 147 U. S. 106, 37 L. ed. 101, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 261; Day v. Woodworth, 13 How. 370, 14 L. ed. 181; Flanders v. Tweed, 15 Wall. 453, 21 L. ed. 204.

Nor in an action on a bond.

Oelrichs v. Spain, 15 Wall. 211, sub nom. Oelrichs v. Williams, 21 L. ed. 43; Tullock v. Mulvane, 184 U. S. 524, 46 L. ed. 670, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 372.

There are two Federal decisions which relate directly to the right to recover attorneys' fees upon an attachment bond, and in both of these the right to recover such damages was denied.

Bing Gee v. Ah Jim, 7 Sawy. 117, 7 Fed. 812; Jacobus v. Monongahela Nat. Bank, 35 Fed. 395.

The Federal courts have consistently refused to allow counsel fees, not merely in actions at law, but also in admiralty and patent cases.

Arcambel v. Wiseman, 3 Dall. 306, 1 L. ed. 613; The Baltimore, 8 Wall. 377, 19 L. ed. 463; The Margaret v. The Connestoga, 2 Wall. Jr. 116, Fed. Cas. No. 9,070.

The word "costs" refers only to the costs which the defendant may have taxed in his favor in the attachment proceedings.

Anderson, Law Dict. 267; Apperson v. Mutual Ben. L. Ins. Co. 38 N. J. L. 388.

The fees which parties have to pay counsel for asserting their rights have never been considered as costs chargeable to the party cost.

Melancon v. Robichaud, 19 La. 357; Constant v. Matteson, 22 Ill. 546; Eimer v. Eimer, 47 Ill. 373; McDonald v. Page, Wright (Ohio) 121; Frost v. Jordan, 37 Minn. 546, 36 N. W. 713.

Assuming the word "damages" to be broad enough to include the expenses of defending the suit, yet must the meaning of that word be controlled and restrained by the word "costs," which has special relation to this subject.

Reiche v. Smythe, 13 Wall. 162, 20 L. ed. 566; Sutherland Stat. Constr. § 219.

At the time this Florida statute was passed, attorneys' fees were not treated as an element of damages for any breach of contract or for the commission of any tort.

Skinner v. Pinney, 19 Fla. 48, 45 Am. Rep. 1; Leffingwell v. Elliott, 10 Pick. 204.

There is even less reason for allowing attorneys' fees for the recovery of property taken under process of law than there is for the recovery of property taken by a naked trespasser.

Patton v. Garrett, 37 Ark. 613.

Where the judge who writes the opinion of the court expresses a view upon any point or principle which he is not required to decide, his opinion as to such point is an obiter dictum, and is binding upon no one.

Hart v. Stribling, 25 Fla. 435, 6 So. 455.

State decisions which treat the question of the measure of damages not as one of local law or of statutory construction, are not binding on the Federal courts.

Venice v. Murdock, 92 U. S. 501, 23 L. ed. 583; Pana v. Bowler, 107 U. S. 529, 27 L. ed. 424, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 704; Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Prentice, 147 U. S. 106, 37 L. ed. 101, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 261.

In construing statutes the Federal courts are not required to adopt a construction based on the implications of a judicial opinion.

Caesar v. Capell, 83 Fed. 403.

This is not a question of local law.

Swift v. Tyson, 16 Pet. 18, 19, 10 L. ed. 871, 872.

This court does not follow the state courts in their construction of a will or any other instrument, as they do in the construction of statutes.

Lane v. Vick, 3 How. 476, 11 L. ed. 687, approved in Barber v. Pittsburgh, Ft. W. & C. R. Co. 166 U. S. 100, 41 L. ed. 925, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 488.

The fact that the contract or bond was given in pursuance of statute can make no difference.

Blackburn v. Portland Gold Min. Co. 175 U. S. 571, 44 L. ed. 276, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 222; Florida C. & P. R. Co. v. Bell, 176 U. S. 321, 44 L. ed. 486, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 399; DeLamar's Nevada Gold Min. Co. v. Nesbitt, 177 U. S. 523, 44 L. ed. 872, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 715; Provident Sav. Life Assur. Soc. v. Ford, 114 U. S. 635, 29 L. ed. 261, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1104.

Assuming the question to be one of local law, yet it is the duty of the court to exercise an independent judgment, because of the fact that the Florida court had not, prior to the execution of these bonds, passed upon the right to recover attorneys' fees as damages on an attachment bond.

Burgess v. Seligman, 107 U. S. 23, 34, 27 L. ed. 365, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 10; Pleasant Twp. v. Aetna L. Ins. Co. 138 U. S. 67, 72, 34 L. ed. 864, 866, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 215; Great Southern Fireproof Hotel Co. v. Jones, 54 C. C. A. 165, 116 Fed. 798.

The removal of the attachment suits to the Federal court brought the subject within the purview of the Federal statute; and only such fees as are thereby allowed may be recovered.

Flanders v. Tweed, 15 Wall. 452, 21 L. ed. 204; United States v. Treadwell, 15 Fed. 532.

According to those authorities which recognize the right to recover counsel fees on attachment bonds, all the services rendered in defense of the attachment proceedings must have been capable of separation from those which would have been incurred in the defense of an action in any event.

1 Sedgw. Damages, § 237.

Loss of credit or custom generally involves the intervention of the will of strangers, and it is therefore generally remote. Thus, in a case of wrongful attachment, no compensation is allowed for loss of credit.

1 Sedgw. Damages, § 127.

The impairment of plaintiff's credit, the inability to sell lands levied on, or to contract a loan upon the security of such land, was not a proximate, but a remote, consequence of the attachment.

Elder v. Kutner, 97 Cal. 490, 32 Pac. 563.

Injuries to credit, reputation, or business are too remote and speculative.

Union Nat. Bank v. Cross, 100 Wis. 174, 75 N. W. 992.

Depreciation to real property upon which an attachment has been levied, which occurs while the levy remains in force, if there be no change of possession, is not the immediate result of the attachment, and recovery therefor cannot be had of the attaching creditor.

Tisdale v. Major, 106 Iowa, 1, 75 N. W. 663; Marx Bros. v. Leinkauff, 93 Ala. 453, 9 So. 818; Shinn, Attachm. 694; Gerard v. Moore (Tex. Civ. App.) 24 S. W. 652.

Damages to credit and business, and loss of profits, cannot be recovered in a suit on an attachment bond.

Bates v. Clark, 95 U. S. 204, 24 L. ed. 471; Coulson v. Panhandle Nat. Bank, 4 C. C. A. 616, 13 U. S. App. 39, 54 Fed. 859; Watson v. Sutherland, 5 Wall. 74, 18 L. ed. 580; North v. Peters, 138 U. S. 271, 34 L. ed. 936, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 346; Vance v. W. A. Vandercook Co. 170 U. S. 480, 42 L. ed. 1116, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 645; Howard v. Stillwell & B. Mfg. Co. 139 U. S. 203, 35 L. ed. 149, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 500; 1 Sedgw. Damages, 8th ed. § 127; 1 Sutherland, Damages, 2d ed. § 55; 2 Sutherland, Damages, 2d ed. § 515; Drake, Attachm. §§ 175, 179b; 1 Shinn, Attachm. 342; Wade, Attachm. §§ 300, 301; 2 Sedgw. Damages, 8th ed. §§ 682, 436; Thompson v. Webber, 4 Dak. 240, 29 N. W. 671; Watson v. Sutherland, 5 Wall. 74, 18 L. ed. 580; Hurd v. Barnhart, 53 Cal. 97; Traicick v. Martin Brown Co. 79 Tex. 460, 14 S. W. 564; Kirbs v. Province, 78 Tex. 353, 14 S. W. 849; Sabine & E. T. R. Co. v. Joachimi, 58 Tex. 437; Wallace v. Finberg, 46 Tex. 35; Seattle Crockery Co. v. Haley, 6 Wash. 302, 33 Pac. 650; Crymble v. Mulvaney, 21 Colo. 203, 40 Pac. 499; Casper v. Klippen, 61 Minn.

353, 63 N. W. 737; Anderson v. Sloane, 72 Wis. 566, 40 N. W. 214; Braunsdorf v. Feller, 76 Wis. 1, 45 N. W. 97; Oberne v. Gaylord, 13 Ill. App. 30; Pettit v. Mercer, 8 B. Mon. 51; Reidhar v. Berger, 8 B. Mon. 160; Holliday Bros. v. Cohen, 34 Ark. 707; Campbell v. Chamberlain, 10 Iowa, 337; Lowenstein v. Monroe, 55 Iowa, 82, 7 N. W. 406; Weeks v. Prescott, 53 Vt. 57; John Hutchinson Mfg. Co. v. Pineh, 91 Mich. 156, 51 N. W. 930; Levinski v. Middlesex Bkg. Co. 34 C. C. A. 452, 92 Fed. 455; Witherbee v. Meyer, 155 N. Y. 446, 50 N. E. 58; Central Trust Co. v. Clarke, 34 C. C. A. 354, 92 Fed. 298.

An exceptional rule exists in Alabama and Tennessee, by force of statutes, in those cases where an attachment is maliciously sued out.

Sedgw. Damages, § 683; Jerman v. Stewart, 12 Fed. 268.

Profits that are speculative or conjectural are not generally regarded as elements in fixing damages, not because there is anything in their nature, per se, which demands their rejection, but because they cannot be estimated with reasonable certainty.

Hodges v. Frics, 34 Fla. 64, 15 So. 682; Chiple v. Atkinson, 23 Fla. 206, 1 So. 934.

Mr. H. Bispee argued the cause, and, with Mr. George C. Bedell, filed a brief for L. Bueki & Son Lumber Co.:

Contributing causes do not defeat the right to recover full damages for the cause complained of.

Davis v. Garrett, 6 Bing. 716; Bishop, Noncontract Law, § 39; Grimes v. Bowerman, 92 Mich. 258, 52 N. W. 751; Ring v. Cohoes, 77 N. Y. 83, 33 Am. Rep. 574; Hackett v. Smelsley, 77 Ill. 110; Peck v. Neil, 3 McLean, 22, Fed. Cas. No. 10,892; Lake v. Milliken, 62 Me. 240, 16 Am. Rep. 456; 8 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. pp. 580, 581; Myers v. Malcolm, 6 Hill. 292, 41 Am. Dec. 744; Chaecy v. Fargo, 5 N. D. 173, 64 N. W. 932; Burgett v. Third Ave. R. Co. 45 N. Y. 628; Webster v. Hudson River R. Co. 38 N. Y. 260; Burrows v. Mareh Gas & Coke Co. L. R. 5 Exch. 67; Pastene v. Adams, 49 Cal. 87; Beauchamp v. Saginaw Min. Co. 50 Mich. 163, 45 Am. Rep. 30, 15 N. W. 65.

It was for the jury to decide whether the other so-called causes so infected plaintiff's business with disease that it would have ceased to do business if the other injury,—the attachments,—had not happened.

Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Jones, 83 Ala. 376, 3 So. 902; Jacksonville, T. & K. W. R. Co. v. Peninsular Land, Transp. & Mfg. Co. 27 Fla. 116, 17 L. R. A. 33, 9 So. 653.

And the rule of damages is a question of local law.

8 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 581; Milwaukee & St. P. R. Co. v. Kellogg, 94 U. S. 470, 24 L. ed. 257.

Reasonable certainty does not mean absolute certainty, but reasonable probability. Sedgw. Damages, § 249.

The fact and amount of future loss is a question for the jury, which has discretion in establishing it.

Sedgw. Damages, §§ 249, 560, 561; Allison v. Chandler, 11 Mich. 542; M'Neill v. Reid, 9 Bing. 68; Bagley v. Smith, 10 N. Y. 489, 61 Am. Dec. 756; Driggs v. Dwight, 17 Wend. 71, 31 Am. Dec. 283; Dushane v. Benedict, 120 U. S. 647, 30 L. ed. 814, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 696; Grand Trunk R. Co. v. Ives, 144 U. S. 408, 36 L. ed. 485, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 679; Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Griffith, 159 U. S. 603, 40 L. ed. 274, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 105; Warner v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 168 U. S. 339, 42 L. ed. 491, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 68.

Though there may be difficulty in arriving at the damages, there is no reason for not submitting the subject to the jury.

Simpson v. London & N. W. R. Co. L. R. 1 Q. B. Div. 274; Wakeman v. Wheeler & Wilson Mfg. Co. 101 N. Y. 205, 54 Am. Rep. 676, 4 N. E. 264; 1 Sutherland, Damages, 113; Dennis v. Maxfield, 10 Allen, 138; Wells v. National Life Asso. 53 L. R. A. 33, 39 C. C. A. 476, 99 Fed. 222.

The amount of damages from interruption of plaintiff's business caused by the attachments must be submitted to the jury.

1 Sedgw. Damages, 8th ed. §§ 127, 182; Bagley v. Smith, 10 N. Y. 489, 61 Am. Dec. 756; Anvil Min. Co. v. Humble, 153 U. S. 540, 38 L. ed. 814, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 876; 1 Sutherland, Damages, §§ 54, 59, 70; Brooks v. Coquard, 5 McCrary, 588, 18 Fed. 316; Jerman v. Stewart, 12 Fed. 266; Son-nichorn v. Stewart, 2 Woods, 599, Fed. Cas. No. 13,176; Brewer v. Jacobs, 22 Fed. 220; Marx Bros. v. Leinkauff, 93 Ala. 453, 9 So. 818; Tidwell v. State, 70 Ala. 38; Alexander v. Jacoby, 23 Ohio St. 358; Grim's v. Bow-erman, 92 Mich. 260, 52 N. W. 751; Dushane v. Benedict, 120 U. S. 630-648, 30 L. ed. 810-814, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 696; Pollock v. Gantt, 69 Ala. 373, 44 Am. Rep. 519; Chaffe v. Mackenzie, 43 La. Ann. 1062, 10 So. 372.

It was not the duty of plaintiff, imposed by law, to have had cash in bank, securities, or other property not levied on, to enable it to continue in business.

Illinois C. R. Co. v. Cobb, 64 Ill. 128; Derry v. Flitner, 118 Mass. 131; Watson v. Sutherland, 5 Wall. 74, 18 L. ed. 580; North v. Peters, 138 U. S. 271, 34 L. ed. 936, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 346.

All parties concerned in wrongfully issuing a statutory attachment are in the position of and liable as trespassers as soon as the attachment is dissolved. They are liable in damages sustained by such trespass, though they acted in good faith and in the belief that they were entitled to the writ.

Hundley v. Chadick, 109 Ala. 575, 19 So. 845; Bryan v. Congdon, 29 C. C. A. 670, 57 U. S. App. 505, 86 Fed. 223; Kerr v. Mount, 28 N. Y. 666; Northrup v. McGill, 27 Mich. 234; 1 Sedgw. § 59.

The supreme court of Florida has held that the condition of the attachment bond includes elements of damages for which a naked trespasser is not liable in a common-law action of trespass.

Wittich v. O'Neal, 22 Fla. 592; Gonzales 189 U. S.

v. De Funiak Havana Tobacco Co. 41 Fla. 477.

When no Federal element is involved, the elements of damages recoverable on an injunction and attachment bond are questions of local law.

Tullock v. Mulvane, 184 U. S. 497, 46 L. ed. 657, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 372; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Elliott, 184 U. S. 530, 46 L. ed. 673, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 446.

The condition of the bond, being fixed by the remedial statute, should be liberally construed. At least, it should be given its natural construction, and the well-understood meaning of the words employed should be applied to effectuate the legitimate intent.

Mitchell v. Duncan, 7 Fla. 13; Hardee v. Langford, 6 Fla. 23; Betton v. Willis, 1 Fla. 226; Southern Bell Teleph. & Teleg. Co. v. D'Alemberte, 39 Fla. 25, 21 So. 570; 1 Shinn, Attachm. §§ 153, 173, 294; Frankel v. Stern, 44 Cal. 168.

Compensatory and actual damages are identical, and they should be commensurate with the injury suffered.

Birdsall v. Coolidge, 93 U. S. 64, 23 L. ed. 802; Wicker v. Hoppock, 6 Wall. 99, 18 L. ed. 753; Dow v. Humbert, 91 U. S. 298, 23 L. ed. 370.

The obligors are liable in consequential damages to the extent of all actual and compensatory damages that can be traced to the writs.

1 Sedgw. Damages, §§ 110-112, 125; Eten v. Luyster, 60 N. Y. 252.

Where the plaintiff has been deprived of machinery or other means of carrying on his business, he may recover for loss of business, if such loss naturally followed.

1 Sedgw. Damages, § 133; Waters v. Towers, 8 Exch. 401; New York & C. Min. Syndicate & Co. v. Fraser, 130 U. S. 611, 32 L. ed. 1031, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 665; Jolly v. Single, 16 Wis. 280; Savannah, F. & W. R. Co. v. Pritchard, 77 Ga. 412, 1 S. E. 261; Van Winkle v. Wilkins, 81 Ga. 93, 7 S. E. 644; Sillon v. Maedonald, 25 S. C. 68, 60 Am. Rep. 484; New Haven S. B. Co. v. The Mayor, 36 Fed. 716; 1 Shinn, Attachm. § 184.

Loss of profits by interruption of business and like damages caused by the writs, were proper elements of damages.

Pollock v. Gantt, 69 Ala. 373, 44 Am. Rep. 519; 1 Shinn, Attachm. §§ 188, 190, pp. 327, 342; Carpenter v. Stevenson, 6 Bush, 259; Knapp & S. Co. v. Barnard, 78 Iowa, 347, 43 N. W. 197; Marqueze v. Sontheimer, 59 Miss. 430; Byrne v. Gardner, 33 La. Ann. 6; Flournoy v. Lyon, 70 Ala. 308; Oberne v. Gaylord, 13 Ill. App. 30; Mayer v. Duke, 72 Tex. 445, 10 S. W. 565; 1 Sedgw. Damages, §§ 127, 134, 182; New York & C. Min. Syndicate & Co. v. Fraser, 130 U. S. 611, 32 L. ed. 1031, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 665; Dushane v. Benedict, 120 U. S. 631, 30 L. ed. 810, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 696; McAfee v. Crof-ford, 13 How. 447-455, 14 L. ed. 217-221; Allison v. Chandler, 11 Mich. 542; Bagley v. Smith, 10 N. Y. 489, 61 Am. Dec. 756;

Anvil Min. Co. v. Humble, 153 U. S. 540, 38 L. ed. 814, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 876; Howard v. Stillwell & B. Mfg. Co. 139 U. S. 199-206, 35 L. ed. 147-151, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 500; Cincinnati Siemens-Lungren Gas Illuminating Co. v. Western Siemens-Lungren Co. 152 U. S. 200, 38 L. ed. 411, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 523; Hundley v. Chadick, 109 Ala. 575, 19 So. 845; Birmingham Dry Goods Co. v. Finley, 122 Ala. 534, 26 So. 138; Pollock v. Gantt, 69 Ala. 373, 44 Am. Rep. 519; Flournoy v. Lyon, 70 Ala. 308; Doll v. Cooper, 9 Lea, 576; Grimes v. Bowerman, 92 Mich. 258, 52 N. W. 751; Sonneborn v. Stewart, 2 Woods, 603, Fed. Cas. No. 13,176, Reversed in 98 U. S. 187, 25 L. ed. 116, but not on this ground; Meyer v. Fagan, 34 Neb. 184, 51 N. W. 753; Kyd v. Cook, 56 Neb. 71, 76 N. W. 524; Hangen v. Hachemeister, 114 N. Y. 566, 5 L. R. A. 137, 21 N. E. 1046; Marx Bros. v. Leinkauff, 93 Ala. 453, 9 So. 818; Brewer v. Jacobs, 22 Fed. 220; Kennedy v. Meacham, 18 Fed. 312; Corner v. Mackintosh, 48 Md. 389; 2 Greenl. Ev. § 268; Wilcox v. Plummer, 4 Pet. 172, 182, 7 L. ed. 821, 824; Mayne, Damages, 33-35.

When there is no intermediate efficient cause, the original wrong must be considered as reaching the effect, and as proximate to it. Refinements beyond this rule are too remote for rules of social conduct.

Milwaukee & St. P. R. Co. v. Kellogg, 94 U. S. 470, 476, 24 L. ed. 257, 259; Etna F. Ins. Co. v. Boon, 95 U. S. 117-132, 24 L. ed. 395-399.

The relation of cause and effect is for the jury.

Etna F. Ins. Co. v. Boon, 95 U. S. 117-132, 24 L. ed. 395-399; Jacksonville, T. & K. W. R. Co. v. Peninsular Land, Transp. & Mfg. Co. 27 Fla. 116, 17 L. R. A. 33, 9 So. 653.

Damages to credit, though generally too remote are not always so.

Pettit v. Mercer, 8 B. Mon. 51; Reidhar v. Berger, 8 B. Mon. 160; Holliday Bros. v. Cohen, 34 Ark. 707; State use of Roc v. Thomas, 19 Mo. 613, 61 Am. Dec. 580; Offutt v. Edwards, 9 Rob. (La.) 90; Campbell v. Chamberlain, 10 Iowa, 337; Mitchell v. Harcourt, 62 Iowa, 349, 17 N. W. 581; MacFarland v. Lehman, 38 La. Ann. 351; Kaufman v. Armstrong, 74 Tex. 65, 11 S. W. 1048.

The value of the use of the property seized and taken from defendant by virtue of the writ may be recovered in an action on the bond.

2 Sutherland, Damages, 2d ed. 521; 2 Sedgw. Damages, § 682.

Where, in a case of malicious attachment, injuries to credit are sustained, they may be recovered for.

1 Shinn, Attachm. § 379; Lawrence v. Hagerman, 56 Ill. 68, 8 Am. Rep. 674; Parks v. Young, 75 Tex. 278, 12 S. W. 986; Kaufman v. Armstrong, 74 Tex. 65, 11 S. W. 1048; Marx Bros. v. Leinkauff, 93 Ala. 453, 9 So. 818; Bradley v. Borin, 53 Kan. 628, 36 Pac. 977; Pettit v. Mercer, 8 B. Mon. 51; MacFarland v. Lehman, 38 La.

Ann. 351; Sonneborn v. Stewart, 2 Woods, 599, Fed. Cas. No. 13,176; Wheeler v. Hanson, 161 Mass. 370, 37 N. E. 382.

Damages for injury to credit are sometimes allowed.

Meyer v. Fagan, 34 Neb. 184, 51 N. W. 753; Kyd v. Cook, 56 Neb. 71, 76 N. W. 524; Lewis v. Taylor (Tex. Civ. App.) 24 S. W. 92; Hangen v. Hachemeister, 114 N. Y. 566, 5 L. R. A. 137, 21 N. E. 1046; Haverly v. Elliott, 39 Neb. 201, 57 N. W. 1010; Flournoy v. Lyon, 70 Ala. 308; Pollock v. Gantt, 69 Ala. 373, 44 Am. Rep. 519; Birmingham Dry Goods Co. v. Finley, 122 Ala. 534, 26 So. 138; Doll v. Cooper, 9 Lea, 576; Brewer v. Jacobs, 22 Fed. 220; Kennedy v. Meacham, 18 Fed. 312; Grimes v. Bowerman, 92 Mich. 258, 52 N. W. 751; McVeagh v. Bailey, 29 Ill. App. 606; Sonneborn v. Stewart, 2 Woods, 603, 604, Fed. Cas. No. 13,176; 1 Sedgw. Damages, § 127, p. 184; 1 Sutherland, Damages, § 77; Prehn v. Royal Bank, 5 L. R. Exch. 92; Schaffner v. Ehrman, 139 Ill. 109, 15 L. R. A. 134, 28 N. E. 917; Blair v. Kinch, 1r. L. R. 10 C. L. 234; 8 Am. & Eng. Enc. of Law, 2d ed. p. 634.

Publication of notices of the attachment may be properly put in evidence for the purpose of showing injury to business and credit.

Brand v. Hinchman, 68 Mich. 590, 36 N. W. 664; Waples, Attachm. 2d ed. 1012.

Counsel fees are, under the laws of Florida, proper elements of damages, within the condition of the bonds.

L. Bucki & Son Lumber Co. v. Fidelity & Deposit Co. 48 C. C. A. 436, 109 Fed. 393; Wittich v. O'Neal, 22 Fla. 592; Carter v. Bennett, 6 Fla. 258; Gonzales v. De Funiak Havana Tobacco Co. 41 Fla. 471, 26 So. 1012.

There is a stronger reason for allowing such fees on an attachment than on an injunction bond.

Territory ex rel. Lyser v. Rindskopf, 5 N. M. 93, 20 Pac. 180; Oelrichs v. Spain, 15 Wall. 211, sub nom. Oelrichs v. Williams, 21 L. ed. 43.

The obligor, when the case was removed to the Federal court, must then have contemplated that the Federal court, if not bound by a prior state decision, would construe the bond and determine the liability in harmony with prior decisions of the state court.

Burgess v. Seligman, 107 U. S. 21-34, 27 L. ed. 361, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 10.

The very general rule prevailing in most of the states is that counsel fees are a proper element of damages.

1 Sedgw. Damages, § 237.

Counsel fees were held to be an element of damages in the following Federal cases:

Territory ex rel. Lyser v. Rindskopf, 5 N. M. 93, 20 Pac. 180; Chambers v. Upton, 34 Fed. 474-476; Blunk v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 38 Fed. 311-317; Sonneborn v. Stewart, 2 Woods, 603, Fed. Cas. No. 13,176; Tibbier v. Alford, 12 Fed. 265; Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Prentice, 147 U. S. 103-111, 37 L. ed. 98-102, 13 Sup. Ct.

Rep. 261; Newark Sav. Inst. v. Panhorst, 7 Biss. 99-101, Fed. Cas. No. 10,142.

So far as any question of public policy is involved, each state declares its own upon all questions; and when declared it is conclusive on the Federal courts,—especially so on a rule of damages arising out of contract.

Hartford F. Ins. Co. v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 175 U. S. 91, 44 L. ed. 84, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 33; Meyers v. Block, 120 U. S. 210, 30 L. ed. 643, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 525; Vance v. W. A. Vandercook Co. 170 U. S. 472, 473, 42 L. ed. 1112, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 645.

Mr. Justice Brewer delivered the opinion of the court:

The principal question arises in the claim to recover counsel fees incurred in securing the dissolution of the attachments. The reasonable value of such fees was specially found by the jury to have been $7,500. The circuit court refused to include this in its judgment, but the court of appeals ruled otherwise, and ordered judgment for that sum in addition to the amount of the general verdict.

By the law of Florida, counsel fees incurred in securing the dissolution of an attachment are recoverable in actions upon attachment bonds. This was distinctly ruled in Gonzales v. De Funiak Havana Tobacco Co. 41 Fla. 471, 26 So. 1012, in which the second headnote recites that "attorneys' fees and other expenses incurred in relation to the attachment, or in procuring its dissolution, are properly allowed as elements of damage in actions upon attachment bonds." And this is conclusive, for by McClellan's Dig. 345, § 21, it is provided that "the judges of the supreme court of this state shall, in deciding cases, prepare and make a syllabus or statement of the points and principles intended to be decided by the court, which shall be published in the reports in lieu of that usually prepared by the reporter." Hart v. Stribling, 25 Fla. 435, 6 So. 455. It is true, as contended by counsel, that the case in 41 Fla. was not decided until after the bonds sued on in this case had been executed, but the decision declares the law of the state, and that, in the absence of statutes affecting the question, [137] *must be taken to have been always the law. And in its opinion the court refers as authority, among other cases, to Wittich v. O'Neal, 22 Fla. 592, 599 (decided in 1886), in which it was held that, "in a suit on the bond given to obtain a temporary injunction, counsel fees incurred by the defendant in the suit to dissolve such injunction are damages that may be recovered, if covered by language of the bond." In the opinion in that case the court, while conceding that other appellate courts had ruled differently (among them this court in Oelrichs v. Spain, 15 Wall. 211, sub nom. Oelrichs v. Williams, 21 L. ed. 43), declined to follow such ruling, and said:

"It seems just and right that where a party asks the interposition of the power of the courts, in advance of a trial of the merits of the cause, to deprive the defendant of some right or privilege claimed by him, even though temporarily, that, if on investigation it is found that the plaintiff had no just right either in the law or the facts to justify him in asking and obtaining from the court such a harsh and drastic exercise of its authority, that he should indemnify the defendant in the language of his bond for 'all damages he might sustain,' and that reasonable counsel fees necessary to the recovering of such injunction are properly a part of his damage."

The promise in the bonds sued on here is like that referred to in the language just quoted, and was "to pay all costs and damages which the said L. Bucki Lumber Company may sustain in consequence of it, the said Atlantic Company's improperly suing out said attachment." Liability for these counsel fees, being, as declared by its highest court, a part of the obligation assumed by the obligor in an attachment bond given in the courts of Florida, should be enforced in every court in which an action on such a bond is brought. This action was commenced in a circuit court of the state, and, if it had proceeded there to judgment, unquestionably a liability for counsel fees would have been sustained; and it cannot be that by removing the case to the Federal court such liability has been taken away. In Tullock v. Mulvane, 184 U. S. 497, 505, 46 L. ed. 657, 663, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 372, 375, we held that when a bond had been given in a case pending in the Federal court, and an action was thereafter brought in the state court on such *bond, the rule of liability was [138] that existing in the Federal court in which the bond was given, and said:

"It is clear that if it be true that the bond given in a Federal court of equity on the granting of an injunction is not to be construed with reference to the rules of law applicable to such bonds in such court, then there can be no certain general rule by which to determine the liability of the obligors upon the bond. Their responsibility would be one thing in a court of the United States and a different thing in the courts of the various states, which would imply that the parties did not contract with reference to any definite rule of liability." See also Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Elliott, 184 U. S. 530, 46 L. ed. 673, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 446.

In reference to the other alleged errors, the court of appeals, without referring to them in particular, said: "On the fullest consideration of the whole case, we conclude that the record presents no error on the part of the trial judge for which the judgment should be reversed."

We do not wonder at this observation of the court of appeals, as we find from the record that the plaintiff filed in that court thirty-seven assignments of error, covering seventeen printed pages, and the defendant thirty-nine such assignments. It may be true, as the Scriptures have it, that "in the multitude of counselors there is safety," but it is also true that in a multitude of assignments of error there is danger.

Perhaps it is well to first briefly outline the case and the testimony. Prior to October, 1897, the Atlantic Company had under contract been engaged in furnishing the Bucki Company with logs with which to operate its sawmills, at the rate of 2,000,000 feet per month. It canceled its contract on account of an alleged breach by the Bucki Company, and brought the two actions at law, one for $200,000 damages, resulting from such breach, and the other for $9,980.80, claimed to be due for logs delivered, and in these actions sued out the two attachments. They were levied upon the mill plant, the logs, lumber, and all other personal property of the Bucki Company. While the personal property was taken into possession by the sheriff, the mill was a fixture, a part of the realty, and the writs 139] did *not operate to dispossess the Bucki Company therefrom, but simply established a lien upon it. By forthcoming bonds the personal property was, after a few days, released, and subsequently the attachments were dissolved. On the trial, the plaintiff was permitted to show the extent of its mill plant, the amount of business it had been doing in prior years, the net profits of such business during the nine or ten months preceding the levy of the attachments, the orders and contracts which it had on hand for timber and lumber, an alleged increase in the price of timber in the year succeeding the levy. There was testimony bearing upon the question of its ability to get logs elsewhere, the means of transporting them to its plant, and the existence of negotiations for a loan of money secured by the material it then had on hand. There was evidence also tending to show the financial condition of the company, its default in certain payments, and efforts it made to utilize its property subsequently to the attachments. After all the testimony had been presented, the defendant made a motion in writing to exclude a number of items thereof from the consideration of the jury, upon which motion the court ruled as follows:

"This cause coming on to be heard on a motion of the defendant's attorney to exclude certain testimony from the jury, and it being considered that, under the testimony introduced, any damages arising from the consideration of injury to credit or loss of profits would be too remote, uncertain and speculative, it is therefore ordered that this motion be granted as to the testimony relating to the cost of manufacturing lumber and the supply of timber lands; all testimony to the damage to credit, loss of profits, and all evidence relative to the market prices of lumber subsequent to the attachment. That in regard to the profits plaintiff's mill had been making prior to October 1, 1897, be retained and considered only for the purpose of determining the actual damages suffered during the time the operation of the mill was suspended on account of the attachment, and the motion be denied in all other respects."

And in making this ruling it said:

"This order is made at this time only for the purpose of confining the argument to the jury upon these lines. I am fully *satisfied[140] in my own mind that damages from the loss of profits arising from the subsequent or future business which might possibly have been carried on is, under the evidence, too remote and speculative for the testimony to go to the jury. Some courts have held that every fact should go to the jury to be considered, but the United States courts have uniformly held that where the testimony is such that any reasonable man, or any reasonable court, could view it in but one light, the court may exclude it from the jury. In this matter I have admitted the testimony, but I fail to find that there is such evidence of damage from loss of future profits as should go to the jury. If there was no combination of circumstances other than the attachment; had a third party come in and levied an attachment and stopped the business, and there had been no suspension save by the attachment,—then there might have been such testimony as would prove a loss of profits; but in this case the particular circumstances, the suspension of the contract for the delivery of logs and the bringing of the two common-law suits, so changed the circumstances that there is no certainty that there could have been any profit.

"Every author of authority referred to, even by the plaintiff's attorney, says there must be some certainty.

"Now the certainty of profits here depends upon this: It is claimed that on account of these attachments the plaintiff's credit was injured; that, had it not been for the attachments, money could have been borrowed, timber land or stumpage could have been procured, logs could have been procured profitably; if logs could have been procured profitably, lumber could have been manufactured and marketed profitably. Now, between the borrowing of the money and the marketing of the lumber there are so many uncertainties that the court cannot say that there is sufficient to justify the jury in finding, perhaps, large damages against the defendant in this case on account of loss of credit and profit,—from the levying of the attachments."

The plaintiff excepted on the ground of an invasion of the province of the jury, and because it was, as it alleged, misled by the rulings of the court in admitting such testimony, and therefore failed to introduce other testimony which it claimed *to possess[141] and which upon another theory would have tended to show the damages it had sustained. Because it was so misled it also filed a motion to discharge the jury and postpone the trial of the case, which motion was denied and the case submitted to the jury. Many instructions were asked by counsel on both sides looking to the question of damages, and exceptions were taken to the refusal of the court to give those instructions. In its general charge the court said:

"The only question is a clear-cut question. It is, How much damages did the Bucki Company suffer? This question becomes more difficult by reason of facts and circumstances attending the writs of attachment. At the time the writs of attachment were levied there were two common-law suits commenced, both of which have been terminated. That is one attending circumstance. The other is that the Atlantic Lumber Company canceled its contract or considered it canceled. That is, the Atlantic Company refused and ceased to deliver any more logs to the Bucki Company. So that the three combining circumstances, the levy of the writs of attachment, the ceasing to furnish logs, and the common-law suits unite in being the cause for subsequent suffering of damage by the Bucki Company.

"But in this case the attachment did not cause the stoppage of the furnishing of logs, nor did the issuing of the attachment cause the institution of the common-law suits.

"I have, therefore, as you have seen in the course of the case, granted a motion to exclude from your consideration all testimony as to damages for loss of credit and all testimony as to all profits the Bucki Company might have made in the future in procuring capital, in procuring lands, in procuring logging plants, and procuring logs at a profit, and so manufacturing lumber therefrom at a profit.

[142] "I therefore instruct you, gentlemen, that the damage must be confined to the damages suffered by the detention of the mill for the time being; those damages that have arisen by the *detention of and taking the mill properties from the possession of the plaintiff."

Without further quotations, enough appears to show the general scope of the rulings of the court in reference to the measure of damages, and, even conceding that its action, as said by the court of appeals, "is, in several particulars, subject to the criticism which is leveled at it by some of the other numerous assignments of error," we are of opinion that there was no such substantial error as justifies a reversal of the judgment. That there may be such certainty of profits as in some actions for breach of contract will justify their recovery is undoubtedly true. Howard v. Stillwell & B. Mfg. Co. 139 U. S. 199, 206, 35 L. ed. 147, 150, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 500; Cincinnati Siemens-Lungren Gas Illuminating Co. v. Western Siemens-Lungren Co. 152 U. S. 200, 38 L. ed. 411, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 523; Anvil Min. Co. v. Humble, 153 U. S. 540, 549, 38 L. ed. 814, 817, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 876. If this action had been one by the Bucki Company against the Atlantic Company to recover damages for a breach of its contract to deliver logs, the inquiry as to profits might have been broader than was permitted in the present case. But, as pointed out in the charge of the court, the failure of the Atlantic Company to further deliver logs was not caused by, or the direct result of, the attachments. By signing these bonds the surety did not agree to become responsible for all the damages which the Bucki Company might sustain by every act of the Atlantic Company, but simply that it would be responsible for the damages resulting directly from the attachments. The direct result of the attachments was the placing of a lien upon the realty, and for a certain time interrupting the Bucki Company's business by taking possession of its personal property, and the damages which resulted directly from these alone were the damages which the surety company agreed to become responsible for. The court very properly admitted in evidence, and permitted the jury to consider, the net profits which had been earned from the carrying on of the business in the few months prior, not as in and of itself constituting the measure of damages, but as tending to show what damages the Bucki Company sustained by the brief interruption of its business. When the lien on the realty was ended and the personal property restored, the attachments *had [143] spent their force and the surety company became responsible for all the damages attributable directly to the attachments. The failure to further deliver logs, and the reflection on the credit of the Bucki Company by the bringing of the actions may also have damaged or added to the damages of the Bucki Company, but such result was not due to the attachments. The Atlantic Company, and not the surety company, was the party responsible therefor.

Neither can we see that there was error in refusing to discharge the jury and postpone the trial. A postponement or continuance is largely within the discretion of the trial court, and, unless that discretion is shown to have been abused, there is no sufficient ground for reversal. It does not appear that any witness had been discharged or any books or documents in possession of the counsel sent away during the trial, and there was no offer then and there to present further testimony. It does not seem to us that the Bucki Company was prejudiced by the ruling of the court in this respect.

The liability for counsel fees and the true measure of damages are the main questions in the case. This latter question was presented in different forms and with various limitations, but we think the rulings of the trial court thereon were substantially correct. We see no error in the record which justifies a reversal of the judgment, and it is affirmed.

IDA McCLUNG, Plff. in Err.,
v.

WILLIAM A. PENNY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 143-147.)

Error to territorial supreme court—amount in dispute.

The affirmance by a territorial supreme court of NOTE.—As to review by the United States Supreme Court of territorial decisions — see note to Miners' Bank v. Iowa, 13 L. ed. U. S. 867.

a judgment for plaintiff in an action of forcible entry and detainer, in which defendant set up an equitable title to the land, cannot be reviewed by the Supreme Court of the United States, where the value of the possession, which alone could be in contest in such an action, and which alone was determined by the judgment, was less than $5,000.

[No. 384.]

Argued March 6, 1903. Decided April 6, 1903.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the Territory of Oklahoma to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Probate Court of Kay County in favor of plaintiff in an action of forcible entry and detainer. Dismissed.

See same case below, 69 Pac. 499.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brewer:

This was an action of forcible entry and detainer, commenced by Penny, the defendant in error, in the probate court of Kay county, Oklahoma territory, a court adjudged by the supreme court of the territory to have jurisdiction in such actions by virtue of § 4805, art. 13, chap. 67, and § 1562, art. 15, chap. 18, Rev. Stat. 1893. A judgment for the plaintiff was affirmed by the supreme court of the territory (69 Pac. 499), and thereupon the case was brought here on a writ of error. The testimony on the trial developed these facts: The parties contested in the Land Department the right to enter the tract in controversy as a homestead. The plaintiff's contention was sustained, and he was permitted to make entry. Having received the homestead certificate, he commenced this action.

Mr. Samuel H. Harris argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The title to real estate is involved in the action.

Black v. Jackson, 177 U. S. 349, 44 L. ed. 801, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 648; Langford v. Monteith, 102 U. S. 145, 26 L. ed. 53. See also New Orleans P. R. Co. v. Parker, 143 U. S. 42, 36 L. ed. 66, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 364; Price v. Olds, 9 Kan. 66; Alderman v. Boeken, 25 Kan. 658; Duffey v. Rafferty, 15 Kan. 9; Simpson v. Boring, 16 Kan. 248; Mooney v. Olsen, 21 Kan. 697; Hollenback v. Ess, 31 Kan. 88, 1 Pac. 275; Conaway v. Gore, 27 Kan. 122.

Messrs. Samuel H. Harris and J. J. Darlington also filed a supplemental brief for plaintiff in error:

The real matter to be adjudicated is the question of title, and this court cannot properly determine how that question should be adjudicated until the controversy is before the court from a court having jurisdiction to determine that matter and permit of its being properly brought to this court for review.

Malloy v. Malloy, 24 Neb. 766, 40 N. W. 285.

It is admitted by the record before this court that the plaintiff in error has done all things necessary to entitle her to a patent to the land in dispute, unless the defendant in error is entitled to have the legal title of the government conveyed to him. This, we think, constitutes an equity in the premises, and a right which the court should respect.

Black v. Jackson, 177 U. S. 349, 44 L. ed. 801, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 648; Cornelius v. Kessel, 128 U. S. 456, 32 L. ed. 482, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 122.

A justice of the peace has no jurisdiction in an action of forcible entry and detainer.

Smith v. Kirchner, 7 Okla. 166, 54 Pac. 439; Nightingale v. Barens, 47 Wis. 389, 2 N. W. 767; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Skupa, 16 Neb. 341, 20 N. W. 393.

The Code of Oklahoma territory prior to its adoption from the state of Kansas was construed to make provision for equitable titles, both in support of, and in defense to, actions of forcible entry and detainer and ejectment.

Alderman v. Boeken, 25 Kan. 658; Hollenback v. Ess, 31 Kan. 87, 1 Pac. 275; Conaway v. Gore, 27 Kan. 122; Duffey v. Rafferty, 15 Kan. 9; Simpson v. Boring, 16 Kan. 248; Mooney v. Olsen, 21 Kan. 697; Gale v. Eckhart, 107 Mich. 465, 65 N. W. 274.

Mr. A. G. C. Bierer argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Frank Dale and C. W. Ransom, filed a brief for defendant in error:

Title to real estate is not an issue, and cannot be put in issue, in forcible entry and detainer.

Armour Packing Co. v. Howe, 62 Kan. 587, 64 Pac. 42; McClain v. Jones, 60 Kan. 639, 57 Pac. 500; Wideman v. Taylor, 63 Kan. 884, 65 Pac. 664; McDonald v. Stiles, 7 Okla. 327, 54 Pac. 487; Dysart v. Enslow, 7 Okla. 386, 54 Pac. 550; Cope v. Braden, 11 Okla. 291, 67 Pac. 475; Waite v. Teeters, 36 Kan. 604, 14 Pac. 146; Redden v. Tefft, 48 Kan. 302, 29 Pac. 157.

The property which is the subject of the possession not being involved, its value should not be considered.

Lowndale v. Parish, 21 How. 290, 16 L. ed. 80; Cameron v. United States, 146 U. S. 533, 36 L. ed. 1077, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 184; Carne v. Russ, 152 U. S. 250, 38 L. ed. 428, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 578.

In order to give jurisdiction in a case dependent upon the amount in controversy, the matter in dispute must be money, or some right the value of which in money can be calculated and ascertained.

Potts v. Chumasero, 92 U. S. 358, 23 L. ed. 499; Barry v. Mercien, 5 How. 120, 12 L. ed. 77; United States v. Union P. R. Co. 105 U. S. 263, 26 L. ed. 1021.

A jurisdiction, conferred by Congress upon any court of the United States, of suits at law or in equity in which the matter in dispute exceeds the sum or value of a certain number of dollars, includes no case in which the right of neither party is capable of being valued in money.

Kurtz v. Moffitt, 115 U. S. 487, 29 L. ed. 458, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 148.

Where the issue between the parties to a suit is not the right of ownership, but the right of possession, and the value of the latter right is, as to amount, below the appellate jurisdiction of the supreme court, an appeal taken to that court will be dismissed ex proprio motu.

Re Genella, 45 La. Ann. 1377, 14 So. 302.

Where the issue in a case is not the right of ownership of specific property, but of the possession thereof, it is the value of the latter right which determines the jurisdiction on appeal to the supreme court.

Lea v. Orleans, 46 La. Ann. 1444, 16 So. 456.

The supreme court of Kansas in Duncan v. Yordy, 27 Kan. 349, held that the mere filing of an answer stating that the boundaries of land are in dispute, although verified, as required by statute, will not necessarily oust the justice of jurisdiction.

This construction, having been placed upon this statute before its adoption into Oklahoma, was adopted as a part of the statute.

Willis v. Eastern Trust & Bkg. Co. 169 U. S. 295, 42 L. ed. 752, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 347.

An entryman may maintain an action of forcible entry and detainer.

Black v. Jackson, 177 U. S. 349, 44 L. ed. 801, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 648.

That the successful contestant for the right to make homestead entry is entitled to the possession of the land has been repeatedly affirmed by the supreme court of Oklahoma.

Brown v. Hartshorn (Okla.) 69 Pac. 1049; McQuiston v. Walton (Okla.) 69 Pac. 1048; Anderson v. Ferguson (Okla.) 71 Pac. 225.

So long as the title remains in the United States the courts have no jurisdiction, and will not interfere with departmental decisions concerning the disposition of the public domain.

Johnson v. Towsley, 13 Wall. 72, 20 L. ed. 485; Moore v. Robbins, 96 U. S. 530, 24 L. ed. 848; Wilbourne v. Baldwin, 5 Okla. 265, 47 Pac. 1045.

Mr. Justice Brewer delivered the opinion of the court:

The defendant in error has filed a motion to dismiss the writ of error for want of jurisdiction, on the ground that the value of the matter in controversy does not exceed $5,000, and in support thereof has filed the [145] affidavits of himself and five *others that the reasonable rental value of the land is not more than $620 per annum. The plaintiff in error contends that the matter in dispute is in fact not the possession of the land, but the ownership, and at the time the writ of error was allowed he filed the affidavits of four persons; one, his counsel, who testified that the action involved both the possession and the ownership of the lands, that the matter in controversy exceeded in value the sum of $6,000, that the value consisted in the right of possession and power to relinquish to the government the homestead entry; the others, who stated that the value of such relinquishment was $8,000 or $8,500. The record shows that in the answer was this averment: "That said land, with the improvements of the defendant thereon, is reasonably worth, and the relinquishment thereof could be sold for, the sum of $5,000; that this defendant demands the right to remain in possession of said land by virtue of her vested interest therein, and as against the claims of said plaintiff under his void and unlawful homestead entry, in order to protect the limited title which defendant has acquired in said land, and to acquire a perfect legal title therein, under and by virtue of the laws of the United States;" and also that on the trial she testified that the value of the land was $5,000. In her answer she set up facts which she insisted showed that she had an equitable right to the land, and averred that she intended, as soon as the patent was issued to the plaintiff, to begin an action in the proper court to have the same declared a title in trust for her benefit, and asserted that by reason thereof an action of forcible entry and detainer could not be maintained against her. The supreme court of the territory, in affirming the judgment, held that the matter in controversy was simply the right of possession. It closed its opinion in these words:
189 U. S.

"This court, in the case of Kirtley v. Dykes, 10 Okla. 18, 62 Pac. 808, says: ' . . . When the matter was finally decided by the Land Department, and a judgment rendered in favor of the plaintiff, her right to the possession of the premises was completed.' Armour Packing Co. v. Howe, 62 Kan. 587, 64 Pac. 43; Wideman v. Taylor, 63 Kan. 884, 65 Pac. 664. The entire theory of this action is that it is purely possessory; that it deals with the possessory rights, *and not the ultimate rights, of the [146] parties. Questions other than the immediate rights of the parties cannot be litigated in such action. If the party desires to have an adjudication on her right to a resulting trust in the land, she must resort to another forum and another form of action."

Affidavits on the motion to dismiss show the value of possession to be not more than $640 per annum. Her own allegation in the answer is that the land and the relinquishment thereof were reasonably worth $5,000. Her testimony on the trial, and there was none other, was that the land was worth $5,000. Affidavits of witnesses assert that the ownership was in controversy, and that the value of that ownership with the right of relinquishment was in excess of $5,000.

Upon these facts, we think the motion to dismiss should be sustained. The matter in dispute being only the possession, clearly the value of that possession was but a few hundred dollars. Even if the title had been in controversy, the record up to the time of the decision of the supreme court showed that there was not exceeding $5,000 in controvery. The supreme court held that the matter in dispute was only the right of possession, and that right of possession was all that it decided. If the question of title was involved an action of forcible entry and detainer could not have been maintained, and the probate court had no jurisdiction of an action of ejectment. But before we can inquire whether the supreme court committed any error in its decision, it must appear that we have jurisdiction of the case. Now, whether the supreme court erred in permitting this forcible entry action to be maintained involves an inquiry whether it erred in permitting an action to be maintained in respect to something whose value is less than $5,000. If that which alone could be in contest in the action, and which alone was determined by the judgment, is of a value less than $5,000, then it is beyond our jurisdiction to inquire whether the court erred in permitting the action to be maintained.

[147] Further, neither of the four witnesses whose affidavits were filed to secure the writ of error testified directly to the value of the land, and while they said that the value of the relinquishment was from $6,000 to $8,500, yet, clearly, the value of a relinquishment *cannot be greater than that of the land itself. But what is the relinquishment to which these witnesses refer? When one has made a homestead or pre-emption entry he may file in the land office a relinquishment of all rights obtained thereby, and if he does so the land becomes open to entry by another. If there has been no contest and the land records are free from any other claim than that which is relinquished, the second entryman may perfect a title. But if the records of the land office show that there has been a contest, and the successful contestant makes a relinquishment, a third party entering the land is charged with notice of the equitable rights of the unsuccessful contestant; and if, as a matter of law, those rights are entitled to protection, they can be enforced whenever the legal title has passed from the government. In other words, the relinquishment operates only against the party making the relinquishment, and does not destroy any adverse rights of which there is in the land office an existing record. The plaintiff, although possession be obtained by him through this forcible entry and detainer action, cannot, by thereafter relinquishing his entry, and permitting someone else to make an entry, destroy the equitable rights, if any, which defendant possesses. Hence, as a relinquishment will not deprive the defendant of her equitable rights, and simply substitutes one party for another in any legal proceedings which she may hereafter institute to assert those rights, it is clear that it cannot have any such value as is ascribed to it in these affidavits.

The writ of error is dismissed.

*ROBERT L. WINEBRENNER, Appt., [148]
v.

EDWARD C. FORNEY

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 148-154.)

Public lands—settlement in Cherokee Outlet—100-foot strip.

The description in the President's proclamation of August 19, 1893, opening to settlement a portion of the land ceded by the Cherokee Nation, of the 100-foot strip which might, without gaining any settlement right, be occupied in advance of the time set for the opening by persons intending to take part in the race for the land, as running "around and immediately within the outer boundaries of the entire tract of country to be opened to settlement under this proclamation," controls any doubt arising from the further statement in that portion of the proclamation defining the purposes for which the strip was to be used, that the inner boundary of such strip "shall be 100 feet from the exterior boundary of the country known as the Cherokee Outlet."

[No. 409.]

Argued March 6, 1903. Decided April 6, 1903.

APPEAL from the Supreme Court of the Territory of Oklahoma to review a judgment which affirmed a decree of the District Court of Kay County dismissing a suit to establish an equitable right to real property. Affirmed.

See same case below, 69 Pac. 879.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brewer:

The appellee holds the government patent to the southwest quarter of section 19, township 26 north, range 1 east, of the Indian meridian in Kay county, Oklahoma territory. The appellant claimed an equitable right to the land, and brought this suit to have the defendant declared a trustee of the title for his benefit. A demurrer to a second amended petition was sustained by the trial court, and a decree entered dismissing the suit. This decree was affirmed by the supreme court of the territory (69 Pac. 879), and from that decision this appeal was taken. The tract is within that portion of the Cherokee Outlet opened to settlement by the President's proclamation of August 19, 1893, and the only question, as agreed by counsel on both sides, is whether appellee was disqualified by reason of being within prohibited limits on September 16, 1893, the day on which by the President's proclamation the land was opened for settlement.

Mr. Samuel H. Harris argued the cause, and, with Mr. J. J. Darlington, filed a brief for appellant:

The court will take judicial knowledge of the general conditions surrounding the opening of the lands in the country known as the Cherokee Outlet.

Smith v. Townsend, 148 U. S. 490, 37 L. ed. 533, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 634.

Contemporaneous construction both by the Secretary of the Interior and the Commissioner of the General Land Office, the President of the United States and the Secretary of War, the vast number of intending settlers, and the lawyers of the country who were their advisers, is entitled to consideration.

United States v. State Bank, 6 Pet. 29, 8 L. ed. 308; United States v. Moore, 95 U. S. 760, 24 L. ed. 588; United States v. Johnston, 124 U. S. 236, 31 L. ed. 389, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 446; Pennoyer v. McConaughy, 140 U. S. 1, 35 L. ed. 363, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 699; United States v. Alabama G. S. R. Co. 142 U. S. 615, 35 L. ed. 1134, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 306.

Mr. A. G. C. Bierer argued the cause, and, with Mr. Frank Dale, filed a brief for appellee:

Where the language of an act is clear, it needs no construction.

Yerke v. United States, 173 U. S. 439, 43 L. ed. 760, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 441.

One section or part of a statute will not be so construed as to destroy another.

Bernier v. Bernier, 147 U. S. 242, 37 L. ed. 152, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 244.

Courts in construing a state statute may, with propriety, recur to the history of the times when it was passed; and this is frequently necessary in order to ascertain the reason as well as the meaning of the particular provisions in it.

Smith v. Townsend, 148 U. S. 490, 37 L. ed. 533, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 634.

Nothing is better settled than that statutes should receive a sensible construction, such as will effectuate the legislative intention, and, if possible, avoid an unjust or absurd conclusion.

Lau Ow Bew v. United States, 144 U. S. 47, 36 L. ed. 340, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 517.

When a provision admits of more than one construction, that one will be adopted which best serves to carry out the purposes of the act.

Bernier v. Bernier, 147 U. S. 242, 37 L. ed. 152, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 244.

The boundaries of Oklahoma, as defined by the organic act, did not include the Cherokee Outlet.

United States v. Pidgeon, 153 U. S. 48, 38 L. ed. 631, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 746.

The departmental construction placed upon the President's proclamation, even if the language is conceded to be open to construction, should have very great weight with this court, and in case of doubt should be given controlling weight.

United States v. State Bank, 6 Pet. 29, 8 L. ed. 308; United States v. Moore, 95 U. S. 760, 24 L. ed. 588; United States v. Johnston, 124 U. S. 236, 31 L. ed. 389, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 446; Pennoyer v. McConaughy, 140 U. S. 1, 35 L. ed. 363, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 699; United States v. Alabama G. S. R. Co. 142 U. S. 615, 35 L. ed. 1134, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 306.

The Department of the Interior has uniformly held that the 100-foot strip on the east line of the Cherokee Outlet was west of the Osage Nation and Ponca and Otoe reservations.

189 U. S.

Cagle v. Mendenhall, 20 Land Dec. 446; Brady v. Williams, 23 Land Dec. 533.

The intention of the prohibitory words was to give absolute equality to the intending homesteaders, and this equality was intended to be maintained by requiring the homesteaders to start from the border of the territory that was being opened to settlement, at the moment of the opening.

Smith v. Townsend, 148 U. S. 490, 37 L. ed. 533, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 634.

The evident intention of Congress was to give all persons desiring homes an equal chance to obtain them.

Kingfisher Townsite v. Wood, 11 Land Dec. 330; Guthrie Townsite v. Paine, 12 Land Dec. 653.

*Mr. Justice Brewer delivered the opinion of the court: [149]

The President's proclamation, after reciting that the Cherokee Nation of Indians had "ceded, conveyed, transferred, relinquished, and surrendered all its title, claim, and interest of every kind and character in and to that part of the Indian territory bounded on the west by the one hundredth degree (100°) of west longitude; on the north by the state of Kansas; on the east by the ninety-sixth degree (96°) of west longitude; and on the south by the Creek Nation, the territory of Oklahoma and the Cheyenne and Arapahoe reservation created or defined by executive order dated August 10th, 1869" [28 Stat. at L. 1223]; and also that Congress had passed an act authorizing the President of the United States to open to settlement any or all lands included in such cession not allotted or reserved, declared that on September 16, 1893, the lands so acquired would be open to settlement, saving and excepting certain specified tracts and portions, including in the latter the Osage, the Kansas, the Ponca, the Otoe, and Missouri reservations. The diagram on the next page shows in a general way the land first above described as ceded and relinquished by the Cherokee Indians, the land opened to settlement, and the excepted reservations. The proclamation declared that the land should be opened to settlement "under the terms of, and subject to all the conditions, limitations, reservations, and restrictions contained in, said agreements, the statutes above specified, the laws of the United States applicable thereto, and the conditions prescribed by this proclamation." The act of 1893 (27 Stat. at L. 640, 643, chap. 209), which is one of the statutes referred to, contained this provision:

"No person shall be permitted to occupy or enter upon any of the lands herein referred to, except in the manner prescribed by the proclamation of the President opening the same to settlement; and any person otherwise occupying or entering upon any of said lands shall forfeit all right to acquire any of said lands. The Secretary of the Interior shall, under the direction of the President, prescribe rules and regulations not inconsistent with this act for the occupation and settlement of *said lands, to be incorporated in the proclamation of the President, which shall be issued at least twenty days before the time fixed for the opening of said lands."

151]

755

And in the President's proclamation it was declared:

"Said lands, so to be opened as herein proclaimed, shall be entered upon and occupied only in the manner and under the provisions following, to wit:

"A strip of land, 100 feet in width, around and immediately within the outer boundaries of the entire tract of country to be opened to settlement under this proclamation, is hereby temporarily set apart for the following purposes and uses, viz.:

"Said strip, the inner boundary of which shall be 100 feet from the exterior boundary of the country known as the Cherokee Outlet, shall be open to occupancy in advance of the day and hour named for the opening of said country, by persons expecting and intending to make settlement pursuant to

There is a manifest equity in the latter contention, especially when we consider the great multitude (according to reports 100,000 and over) who at the *appointed time[152] surrounded this tract with a view of entering the same and obtaining homesteads. And such we think is the true construction of the proclamation. The strip is described as "around and immediately within the outer boundaries of the entire tract of country to be opened to settlement under this proclamation." If this were all there would be no doubt. The doubt arises from subsequent words, "said strip, the inner boundary of which shall be 100 feet from the exterior boundary of the country known as the Cherokee Outlet." It is contended that what was known as the Cherokee Outlet extended from the ninety-sixth to the one hundredth degree of longitude, and included the three or four Indian reservations east of the tract opened to settlement. Undoubtedly this entire tract was originally the Cherokee Out-this proclamation. Such occupancy shall not be regarded as trespass, or in violation of this proclamation, or of the law under which it is made; nor shall any settlement rights be gained thereby."

The defendant was on the day named, September 16, 1893, within the limits of the Ponca reservation, and from such reservation went into the territory opened to settlement, and made his homestead entry.

The contention of the plaintiff is that the strip is to be taken as extending around the outer boundaries of the entire tract specified in the cession and relinquishment of the Cherokee Indians, while the contention of the defendant is that it is to be considered as simply around the outer boundaries of the tract opened to settlement. If the contention of the plaintiff is correct, the strip on the north, west, and south would be immediately contiguous to the land opened to settlement, while on the east it would be a distance of many miles therefrom. If the contention of the defendant is correct, it would on all sides be contiguous to such land.

let. Cherokee Nation v. Journeycake, 155 U. S. 196, 206, 39 L. ed. 120, 123, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 55, and treaties cited. It was originally set apart for the use of the Cherokees as a sort of appurtenance to the 7,000,000 acres specifically granted as their reservation. Subsequently, by various treaties, portions of it were withdrawn from the Cherokees' possession and set apart as reservations for the various tribes named. Still the entire territory was commonly known as the Cherokee Outlet, and was referred to as such in the act of 1893, which ratified the settlement and relinquishment by the Cherokees, and authorized the opening to settlement of such portions of the land so ceded and relinquished as the President should determine. There is thus a seeming contradiction between the two clauses of the proclamation. But the first is used in special description of the strip, while the second clause is found in that portion of the proclamation which defines the purposes for which the strip is to be used. As between the two clauses, therefore, the first is entitled to preference, as at that time the attention of the writer must be supposed to have been directed to the location of the strip. But there are other reasons which make more clear the true construction. In addition to the equity referred to heretofore, these matters may be noticed: If the strip was within the tract to be opened to settlement it was public land, and the President might well set that apart for temporary occupancy by those who were designing to [153] go into "the body of lands to be opened to settlement; whereas, if the contention of the plaintiff is correct, the President would be setting apart a strip 100 feet in width through lands reserved to certain Indian tribes, and allowing a temporary occupancy thereof. We do not mean to deny the power of the President, but it is more reasonable to suppose that he was setting apart a strip of the public domain than a strip of Indian reservations for such temporary occupancy. Further, the last sentence in the paragraph from which the second clause is taken says that the occupancy of the strip "shall not be regarded as trespass, or in violation of this proclamation, or of the law under which it is made; nor shall any settlement rights be gained thereby,"—language which is apt if it described a portion of the larger body of the public domain to be opened to settlement, and not apt if it referred to a portion of Indian reservations. The significance of the description, "around and immediately within the outer boundaries of the entire tract of country to be opened to settlement," is found in the purpose to prevent anyone from being upon a railroad right of way running through the tract or upon any of the separate quarter sections or sections reserved by the proclamation for school and county purposes within the limits of the entire body. Smith v. Townsend, 148 U. S. 490, 37 L. ed. 533, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 634; Payne v. Robertson, 169 U. S. 323, 42 L. ed. 764, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 337.

Our conclusions, therefore, are that the contention of the defendant is correct, and that the strip was one which ran around and immediately within the outer boundaries of the entire body of lands opened to settlement.

Such conclusion is in accord with the rulings of the Land Department. It is true that at or about the time of the opening of the land to settlement there were one or two contradictory orders and despatches sent out from that Department, but these were simply responses to requests for information, and made without any hearing from parties interested adversely, and it is also true that in the subsequent consideration of the question there were some differences of opinion between successive Secretaries of the Interior, but the final conclusions were in harmony with the views we have expressed. Cagle v. Mendenhall, 20 Land Dec. 446, 26

[154] Land Dec. 177; Welch v. Butler, 21 *Land 189 U. S.

Dec. 369; Brady v. Williams, 23 Land Dec. 533, 25 Land Dec. 55, 402.

The judgment of the Supreme Court of Oklahoma is affirmed.

Mr. Justice White and Mr. Justice Peckham dissented.

JOSEPH A. SAWYER and Nellie A. Sawyer, Plffs. in Err.,

v.

DANIEL S. PIPER.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 154-158.)

Error to state court—Federal question.

A claim that a right under the Federal Constitution would be denied by the rendition of a decree of foreclosure by a state court, unless leave to file a supplementary answer should be granted, is so clearly without foundation, where the defense sought to be interposed is without merit, as to confer no jurisdiction on the Supreme Court of the United States of a writ of error to the state court.

[No. 225.]

Argued April 6, 7, 1903. Decided April 27, 1903.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Minnesota to review a judgment which affirmed a decree of foreclosure entered in the District Court of Steele County of that State. Dismissed.

See same case below, 78 Minn. 221, 80 N. W. 970.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brewer:

On April 27, 1897, Daniel S. Piper, the defendant in error, commenced a suit in the district court of Steele county, Minnesota, against the plaintiffs in error and L. C. Woodman. The complaint alleged the ownership by the Sawyers of a tract containing 790 acres, upon which were several mortgages, all of them fully set forth and all belonging to the plaintiff. It also averred an agreement, made on February 19, 1895, by the terms of which the Sawyers were to pay plaintiff the sum of $20,400, with, in addition, monthly payments of $100; that the Sawyers were to convey the land to plaintiff; that he should execute a deed to them, the deed to be placed in escrow in the hands of Woodman, the other defendant, and to be delivered to them on full payment of the sums named; with a proviso that upon *fail- [155] ure of the Sawyers to make payment of the $20,400, with the monthly additions of $100, all their rights under the contract should cease and determine. The complaint further alleged a failure to make the monthly payments. The prayer was for a judgment of strict foreclosure of the contract unless deemed within a year by the payment of the amount due, with interest; or, in the alternative, if the court should deem it inequitable to adjudge a strict foreclosure, that the contract and all the mortgages be foreclosed by the sale of the mortgaged premises, and for such other and further relief as should seem just and equitable. The defendant Woodman, who held the deed in escrow, made no defense. The Sawyers answered, admitting the allegations of the complaint in respect to the mortgages and contract, and alleged that by such contract the amount due the plaintiff was fixed at $20,400, which included interest upon all the mortgages up to February 19, 1895. They also averred that the plaintiff had commenced in the same court an action of ejectment, which was still pending, and therefore this action should be abated. In his reply the plaintiff admitted the commencement of the action of ejectment, but alleged that it had been dismissed prior to this suit. On the trial the Sawyers offered the plaintiff a decree of foreclosure for the $20,400, named in the contract, and all unpaid monthly payments, which offer was declined. The court thereupon found the facts in respect to the mortgages and agreement as alleged in the complaint; ruled that such agreement did not extinguish, by merger or otherwise, the several mortgages, and that the plaintiff was entitled to foreclosure of each of the mortgages for the amount due thereon, and rendered judgment of foreclosure and sale accordingly. The case was taken to the supreme court of the state, which held (73 Minn. 332, 76 N. W. 57), that the prior mortgages were merged in the agreement, which created an equitable mortgage on the land, and remanded the case with instructions to the court below to determine the amount due upon such equitable mortgage, and amend its findings of fact and conclusions of law accordingly. On the second trial, the Sawyers applied for leave to file a supplementary answer, setting forth their offer on the first trial to let judgment and [156] decree be entered for the foreclosure of the equitable mortgage, and the refusal of the plaintiff to accept such offer, and asserting that thereby the plaintiff had waived the lien of such equitable mortgage and precluded himself from foreclosing the same; and, further, that a judgment in plaintiff's favor foreclosing said lien for any sum would deprive them of property without due process of law, and deny to them the equal protection of the laws. The court declined to permit the filing of such supplementary answer, amended its findings of fact and conclusions of law so as to show that the defendants had defaulted in the monthly payments referred to, and that therefore the equitable mortgage had become due, and entered a decree of foreclosure thereof and for the sale of the mortgaged premises. This decree was taken to the supreme court and affirmed (78 Minn. 221, 80 N. W. 970), and thereupon this writ of error was sued out.

NOTE.—On writs of error from United States Supreme Court to state courts—see notes to Hamblin v. Western Land Co. 37 L. ed. U. S. 267; Kipley v. Illinois, 42 L. ed. U. S. 998; and Re Buchanan, 39 L. ed. U. S. 884.

Mr. J. A. Sawyer argued the cause, and, with Mr. H. W. Childs, filed a brief for plaintiffs in error:

While this court, jurisdiction being already vested in it, may examine this record to determine whether the conclusion of the state court is justified, such examination is in the exercise of, and not a condition of, jurisdiction.

Kelley v. Rhoads, 188 U. S. 1, ante, 359, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 260; Blythe v. Hinckley, 180 U. S. 333, 45 L. ed. 557, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 390.

A correct decision therein by the state court could not affect the jurisdiction.

Andrews v. Andrews, 188 U. S. 14, ante, 366, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 237.

A decision by a state court that it has not passed upon a Federal question, or has decided one correctly, does not affect either the fact or the extent of the jurisdiction of this court.

McCullough v. Virginia, 172 U. S. 102, 43 L. ed. 382, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 134; Columbia Water Power Co. v. Columbia Electric Street R. Light & P. Co. 172 U. S. 475, 43 L. ed. 521, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 247; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Elliott, 184 U. S. 695, 46 L. ed. 763, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 937.

The opinion of the state supreme court, showing, as it does, that the refusal to hear these offered defenses by the trial court (based, as it is, solely on res judicata) was by the supreme court affirmed on that precise ground, shows on its face that the Federal question was in fact considered and decided by it. That is sufficient, though the record did not show any further fact.

Meyer v. Richmond, 172 U. S. 82, 43 L. ed. 374, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 106; Bellingham Bay Improv. Co. v. New Whatcom, 172 U. S. 320, 43 L. ed. 463, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 873; Columbia Water Power Co. v. Columbia Electric Street R. Light & P. Co. 172 U. S. 475, 43 L. ed. 521, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 247; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Chicago, 166 U. S. 258, 41 L. ed. 994, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 992.

The demand was based upon the first clause of the 14th Amendment to the Federal Constitution, and presented a purely Federal question. That this demand was refused, and the asserted Federal right denied by both state courts, is patent from the record, and stands admitted. Jurisdiction in this court follows necessarily.

Swafford v. Templeton, 185 U. S. 487, 46 L. ed. 1005, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 783; Equitable Life Assur. Soc. v. Brown, 187 U. S. 308, ante, 190, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 123; Great Western Tel. Co. v. Purdy, 162 U. S. 334, 40 L. ed. 989, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 810.

Mr. Robert Taylor argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Frank B. Kellogg, Wesley A. Sperry, and Lewis L. Wheelock, filed a brief for defendant in error:

This court has no jurisdiction of a writ of error to review the judgments of state courts, unless a real, and not a fictitious, Federal question is involved.

Hamblin v. Western Land Co. 147 U. S. 531, 37 L. ed. 267, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 353.

The bare averment of a Federal question is not in all cases sufficient. It must not be wholly without foundation. There must be at least color of ground for such averment, otherwise a Federal question might be set up in almost any case, and the jurisdiction of this court invoked simply for the purpose of delay.

New Orleans v. New Orleans Waterworks Co. 142 U. S. 79, 35 L. ed. 943, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 142; Millingar v. Hartuppee, 6 Wall. 258, 18 L. ed. 829.

To give this court jurisdiction of a writ of error to a state court, it must appear affirmatively, not only that a Federal question was presented for decision by the highest court of the state having jurisdiction, but that its decision was necessary for the determination of the cause, and that it was actually decided, or that the judgment as rendered could not have been given without deciding it.

De Saussure v. Gaillard, 127 U. S. 216, 32 L. ed. 125, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1053; Johnson v. Fisk, 137 U. S. 300, 34 L. ed. 683, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 111; Cook County v. Calumet & C. Canal & Dock Co. 138 U. S. 635, 34 L. ed. 1110, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 435; Haley v. Breeze, 144 U. S. 130, 36 L. ed. 373, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 836.

Even the averment of the alleged Federal question in this cause was made entirely too late.

Bushnell v. Crooke Min. & Smelting Co. 148 U. S. 682, 37 L. ed. 610, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 771; Loeber v. Schroeder, 149 U. S. 580, 37 L. ed. 856, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 934; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Southern P. Co. 137 U. S. 48, 34 L. ed. 614, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 10; Sayward v. Denny, 158 U. S. 180, 39 L. ed. 941, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 777.

The question on which the jurisdiction of this court depends (if such jurisdiction exists) is so frivolous as not to need further argument; and such question was rightly decided in the state court, and therefore it is unnecessary to keep the case in this court for further argument.

Spies v. Illinois, 123 U. S. 131, 31 L. ed. 80, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 21; Church v. Kelsey, 121 U. S. 282, 30 L. ed. 960, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 897; Arrowsmith v. Harmoning, 118 U. S. 194, 30 L. ed. 243, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1023.

Mr. Justice Brewer delivered the opinion of the court:

In their application for leave to file a supplementary answer, the plaintiffs in error averred that to render a decree foreclosing the equitable mortgage would, under the circumstances, be a taking of property without due process of law, and denying to them the equal protection of the laws, and claimed "the protection guaranteed to all citizens of the United States by the provisions of § 10 of art. 1 of the Constitution of the United States and of § 1 of the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States." While they thus asserted the existence of a Federal question, yet it is well settled that the mere averment of such a question is not sufficient. As said in Hamblin v. Western Land Co. 147 U. S. 531, 532, 37 L. ed. 268, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 353, 354:

"A real, and not a fictitious, Federal[157] question is essential to the jurisdiction of this court over the judgments of state courts. Millingar v. Hartuppee, 6 Wall. 258, 18 L. ed. 829; New Orleans v. New Orleans Waterworks Co. 142 U. S. 79, 87, 35 L. ed. 943, 946, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 142, 145. In the latter case it was said that 'the bare averment of a Federal question is not, in all cases, sufficient. It must not be wholly without foundation. There must be at least color of ground for such averment; otherwise a Federal question might be set up in almost any case, and the jurisdiction of this court invoked simply for the purpose of delay.'"

See also Wilson v. North Carolina, 169 U. S. 586, 42 L. ed. 865, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 435; St. Joseph & G. I. R. Co. v. Steele, 167 U. S. 659, 42 L. ed. 315, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 925; New Orleans Waterworks Co. v. Louisiana, 185 U. S. 336, 46 L. ed. 936, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 691.

We think this case comes within that rule. Rulings in respect to the amendment of pleadings are largely within the discretion of the trial court, and, unless a gross abuse of that discretion is shown, there is no ground for reversal. Gornley v. Bunyan, 138 U. S. 623, 34 L. ed. 1086, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 453. Here the trial court refused to permit any amendment of the pleadings,—for a supplementary answer is substantially such an amendment. We cannot see that the trial court abused its discretion, even if that were a Federal question and properly before us for consideration. All the facts in reference to the original mortgages and the agreement were set forth in full in the original complaint, and relief was asked in the alternative,—either a strict foreclosure of the agreement, or, if that were deemed inequitable, a foreclosure of the original mortgages. The defendants, in their answer, set up all their defenses to plaintiff's claim of relief upon the facts stated in the complaint. That at the hearing they offered to consent to a decree of foreclosure of the equitable mortgage created by the agreement (which offer was declined by the plaintiff) did not pay the debt, or release the property from the liens. Debts are not paid nor liens canceled in that way. A defendant cannot, by offering on a trial to consent to a judgment or decree for a part of the claim sued on, prevent the plaintiff from subsequently obtaining the judgment or decree demanded by the facts of the case, although it be that which had been offered and also declined. All the facts were before the trial court as well as the supreme court, and the decision[158] was that which right and justice demanded. There is no merit in the defense which was sought to be interposed, and certainly nothing which calls upon this court to interfere with the decision of the state court.

The writ of error is dismissed.

THE OSCEOLA.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 158-177.)

Admiralty—liability of ship for seaman's injuries.

1. A vessel is not liable in rem to one of the crew, under the general principles of admiralty, for damages for personal injuries sustained by him through the improvident and negligent order of the master in directing a gangway for the discharge of cargo to be hoisted before the arrival of the vessel at her dock and during a heavy wind.
2. Injuries sustained by a member of the crew on board a ship in attempting to hoist a gangway in a heavy wind are not done "by such ship," within the meaning of Wis. Rev. Stat. 1898, § 3348, imposing liability on every ship "for all damages arising from injuries done to persons or property by such ship," as such statute was intended to cover only cases of damage done by the ship herself, as the offending thing, to persons or property outside the ship.

[No. 98.]

Argued December 2, 1902. Decided March 2, 1903.

ON A CERTIFICATE from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit presenting questions as to the liability of a vessel in rem to a member of the crew for injuries sustained through the negligence of the master. Answered in the negative.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brown:

This was a libel in rem filed in the district court for the eastern district of Wisconsin, in admiralty, against the propeller Osceola, to recover damages for a personal injury sustained by one Patrick Shea, a seaman on board the vessel, through the negligence of the master.

The case resulted in a decree for the libellant, from which an appeal was taken by the owners to the circuit court of appeals, which certified to this court certain questions arising upon the following statement of facts:

"The owners had supplied the vessel with a movable derrick for the purpose of raising the gangways of the vessel when in port, in order to discharge cargo. The appliance was in every respect fit and suitable for the purpose for which it was intended and furnished to be used, and at the time of the injury was in good repair and condition. The gangways which were to be raised by the derrick were each about 10 feet long lengthwise of the ship, about 7 feet high, and weighed about 1,050 pounds. In the month of December, 1896, the vessel was on a voyage bound for the port of Milwaukee, and when within 3 miles of that port, and while in the open lake, the master of the vessel ordered the forward port gangway to be hoisted by means of the derrick, in order that the vessel might be ready to discharge cargo immediately upon arrival at her dock. At this time the vessel was proceeding at the rate of 11 miles an hour against a head wind of 8 miles an hour. Under the supervision of the mate, the crew, including the appellee, Patrick Shea, who was one of the crew, proceeded to execute the order of the master. The derrick was set in place to raise the gangway. As soon as the gangway was swung clear of the vessel, the front end was caught by the wind and turned outward broadside to the wind, and by the force of the wind was pushed aft and pulled the derrick over, which in falling struck and injured the libellant. The negligence, if any there was, consisted solely in the order of the master that the derrick should be used and that the gangway*should[160] be hoisted while the vessel was yet in the open sea, when the operation might be impeded and interfered with by the wind. The mate and the crew in executing the orders of the master of the vessel acted in all respects properly, and were guilty of no negligence in the performance of the work. The libel charged negligence upon the owners of the vessel in 'requiring and permitting the work of unshipping said gangway to be done while the said vessel was at sea and running against the wind.' The owners were not present upon the vessel, nor was the master a part owner of the vessel. It is contended that the vessel and its owners are liable for every improvident or negligent order of the captain in the course of the navigation or management of the vessel."

The questions of law upon which that court desired the advice and instruction of the Supreme Court are—

"First. Whether the vessel is responsible for injuries happening to one of the crew by reason of an improvident and negligent order of the master in respect of the navigation and management of the vessel.

"Second. Whether in the navigation and management of a vessel the master of the vessel and the crew are fellow servants.

"Third. Whether, as a matter of law, the vessel or its owners are liable to the appellee, Patrick Shea, who was one of the crew of the vessel, for the injury sustained by him by reason of the improvident and negligent order of the master of the vessel in ordering and directing the hoisting of the gangway at the time and under the circumstances declared; that is to say, on the assumption that the order so made was improvident and negligent."

Mr. John H. Roemer argued the cause and filed a brief for appellees:

If a state statute gives a right of action touching a subject of maritime nature, admiralty can administer the law by a proceeding in rem if the statute grants a lien, or in personam, no lien being granted.

The Corsair, 145 U. S. 335, sub nom. Barton v. Brown, 36 L. ed. 727, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 949; Bigelow v. Nickerson, 30 L. R. A. 336, 17 C. C. A. 1, 34 U. S. App. 261, 70 Fed. 113.

If the Wisconsin statute merely applies to causes in personam already maintainable under the statute, or the common or the maritime law, it is submitted that it is effective to create liens in all cases within its scope, and that such liens may be enforced by proceeding in rem in admiralty.

Mendell v. The Martin White, Hoff. Op. 450, Fed. Cas. No. 9,419; The J. E. Rumbell, 148 U. S. 1, 37 L. ed. 340, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 498; The Oregon, 158 U. S. 186, 39 L. ed. 943, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 804; The J. F. Warner, 22 Fed. 342.

The subjects of admiralty jurisdiction include all affairs relating to mariners, whether ship officers, or common mariners; their rights and privileges respectively; their office and duty; their wages; their offenses, whether by wilfulness, casualty, ignorance, negligence, or insufficiency, with their punishments.

Chamberlain v. Chandler, 3 Mason, 242, Fed. Cas. No. 2,575.

The rule of the English courts that, unless the owner is liable at common law, the vessel cannot be held in admiralty, has been rejected in this country.

Homer Ramsdell Transp. Co. v. La Compagnie Générale Transatlantique, 182 U. S. 406, 45 L. ed. 1155, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 831.

Even in cases of marine torts, independent of prize, courts of admiralty are in the habit of giving or withholding damages upon enlarged principles of justice and equity, and have not circumscribed themselves within the positive boundaries of mere municipal law. They have exercised a conscientious discretion on the subject.

The Marianna Flora, 11 Wheat. 54, 6 L. ed. 405; The Palmyra, 12 Wheat. 1, 6 L. ed. 531; The Explorer, 20 Fed. 135; The Wanderer, 20 Fed. 140; The Max Morris, 24 Fed. 860, 28 Fed. 881, 137 U. S. 1, 34 L. ed. 586, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 29.

If it should be determined that the proceeding should have been commenced in personam, and not in rem, the question cannot be raised at this time.

Betts, Admiralty Practice, 99; The Zenobia, Abb. Adm. 48, Fed. Cas. No. 18,208; Roberts v. The Huntsville, 3 Woods, 386, Fed. Cas. No. 11, 904; The Union, 4 Blatchf. 90, Fed. Cas. No. 14,346; The White Squall, 4 Blatchf. 103, Fed. Cas. No. 17,570; The Monte A. 12 Fed. 331; The Willamette, 31 L. R. A. 715, 18 C. C. A. 366, 44 U. S. App. 26, 70 Fed. 874; Leathers v. Blessing, 105 U. S. 626, 26 L. ed. 1192; Chamberlain v. Ward, 21 How. 554, 16 L. ed. 211; The Charles Morgan, 115 U. S. 69, 29 L. ed. 316, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1172; 2 Brown, Civil & Adm. Law, p. 400; The Warren, 2 Ben. 498, Fed. Cas. No. 17,192; The Bilbao, Lush. 149.

The reported cases show that there is a conflict of opinion as to whether or not the vessel and its owners are liable in admiralty for the negligence of the master in the management and navigation of the ship, proximately causing injury to an ordinary seaman. The line of cases holding that the vessel and its owners are responsible in such cases is certainly supported by the better reasoning.

Peterson v. The Chandos, 4 Fed. 645; The Clatsop Chief, 7 Sawy. 274, 8 Fed. 163, 767; The Titan, 23 Blatchf. 177, 23 Fed. 413; The A. Heaton, 43 Fed. 592; The Julia Fowler, 49 Fed. 277; The Frank & Willie, 45 Fed. 494; McCullough v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. 9 C. C. A. 521, 20 U. S. App. 570, 61 Fed. 364.

To the same effect see also Kcating v. Pacific Steam Whaling Co. 21 Wash. 415, 58 Pac. 224.

Mr. Charles H. Van Alstine argued the cause and filed a brief for appellants:

A proceeding in rem in admiralty is a proceeding to give effect to a maritime lien; and such a lien must always exist, to form the basis of such a proceeding.

Beane v. The Mayurka, 2 Curt. C. C. 72, Fed. Cas. No. 1,175; The Rock Island Bridge, 6 Wall. 213, 215, sub nom. Galena, D. D. & M. Packet Co. v. Rock Island R. Bridge, 18 L. ed. 753, 754; The Corsair, 145 U. S. 335, 347, sub nom. Barton v. Brown, 36 L. ed. 727, 731, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 949; Vandewater v. Mills, 19 How. 82, 89, 15 L. ed. 554, 556; The Glide, 167 U. S. 606, 612, 42 L. ed. 296, 298, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 930.

The question as to the true limits of maritime law and admiralty jurisdiction is undoubtedly exclusively a judicial question. But what the law is within those limits, assuming the general maritime law to be the basis of the system, depends upon what has been received as law in the maritime usages of this country, and on such legislation as may have been competent to affect it.

The Lottawanna, 21 Wall. 558, sub nom. Rodd v. Heartt, 22 L. ed. 654.

The ancient maritime codes are insufficient to give a seaman a lien upon the vessel for damages based on mental and physical pain and loss of earning capacity.

Appendix to 30 Fed. Cas. pp. 1174, 1191, 1200, 1209; The City of Alexandria, 17 Fed. 390.

The court cannot make the law; it can only declare it. If, within its proper scope, any change is desired in its rules other than those of procedure, it must be made by the legislative department.

The Lottawanna, 21 Wall. 576, 577, sub nom. Rodd v. Heartt, 22 L. ed. 662, 663.

As the appellee resorted to a libel in rem, the court is bound by the maritime law.

Homer Ramsdell Transp. Co. v. La Compagnie Générale Transatlantique, 182 U. S. 406, 45 L. ed. 1155, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 831.

By the maritime law of this country the liability of the vessel owner, in cases like the present, is limited to medical and surgical attendance, and wages to the end of the voyage.

The City of Alexandria, 17 Fed. 390.

Cases holding the owner liable in personam are rested on the common law.

The Titan and The Hills, 23 Blatchf. 177, 23 Fed. 413; The A. Heaton, 43 Fed. 592; The Sachem, 42 Fed. 66; McCullough v.

New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. 9 C. C. A. 521, 20 U. S. App. 570, 61 Fed. 364.

The Federal courts enforce liens created by state statutes, upon vessels, when such statutes are not in conflict with the laws and usages of the United States, because, and only because, the lien touches a subject within the constitutional jurisdiction of the Federal courts; and it necessarily follows that they cannot go beyond the state or municipal law creating the cause of action and lien.

Bigelow v. Nickerson, 30 L. R. A. 336, 17 C. C. A. 1, 34 U. S. App. 261, 70 Fed. 113; The City of Norwalk, 55 Fed. 98, 107, 108, 112; Sherlock v. Alling, 93 U. S. 104, 23 L. ed. 820; The Corsair, 145 U. S. 347, sub nom. Barton v. Brown, 36 L. ed. 731, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 949.

Under the facts certified, appellee and the master of the vessel were fellow servants; and the owners are not liable under the laws of the state.

Hedley v. Pinkney & Sons S. S. Co. [1892] 1 Q. B. 58; Dwyer v. American Exp. Co. 82 Wis. 307, 52 N. W. 304; Stutz v. Armour, 84 Wis. 623, 54 N. W. 1000; Cadden v. American Steel Barge Co. 88 Wis. 409, 60 N. W. 800; Hartford v. Northern P. R. Co. 91 Wis. 374, 64 N. W. 1033; Klochinski v. Shores Lumber Co. 93 Wis. 417, 67 N. W. 934; McMahon v. Ida Min. Co. 95 Wis. 308, 70 N. W. 478; Albrecht v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 108 Wis. 530, 53 L. R. A. 653, 84 N. W. 882; Wiskie v. Montello Granite Co. 111 Wis. 443, 87 N. W. 461; Thompson v. Hermann, 47 Wis. 602, 32 Am. Rep. 784, 3 N. W. 579; Mathews v. Case, 61 Wis. 491, 50 Am. Rep. 151, 21 N. W. 513.

Mr. Justice Brown delivered the opinion of the court:

In the view we take of this case, we find it necessary to express an opinion only upon the first and third questions, which are, in substance, whether the vessel was liable in rem to one of the crew by reason of the improvident and negligent order of the master in directing the hoisting of the gangway for the discharge of cargo, before the arrival of the vessel at her dock, and during a heavy wind. As this is a libel in rem, it is unnecessary to determine whether the owners would be liable to an action in personam, either in admiralty or at common law, although cases upon this subject are not wholly irrelevant.

If the rulings of the district court were correct, that the vessel was liable in rem for these injuries, such liability must be founded either upon the general admiralty law or upon a local statute of the state within which the accident occurred. As the admiralty law upon the subject must be gathered from the accepted practice of courts of admiralty, both at home and abroad, we are bound in answering this [169] question to examine *the sources of this law and its administration in the courts of civilized countries, and to apply it, so far as it is consonant with our own usages and principles, or, as Mr. Justice Bradley observed in The Lottawanna, 21 Wall. 558, sub nom. Rodd v. Heartt, 22 L. ed. 654, "having regard to our own legal history, Constitution, legislation, usages, and adjudications."

By article 6 of the Rules of Oleron, sailors injured by their own misconduct could only be cured at their own expense, and might be discharged; "but if, by the master's order and commands, any of the ship's company be in the service of the ship, and thereby happen to be wounded or otherwise hurt, in that case they shall be cured and provided for at the cost and charges of the said ship." By article 18 of the Laws of Wisbury, "a mariner being ashore in the master's or the ship's service, if he should happen to be wounded, he shall be maintained and cured at the charge of the ship," with a further provision that, if he be injured by his own recklessness, he may be discharged and obliged to refund what he has received. Practically the same provision is found in article 39 of the Laws of the Hanse Towns; in the Marine Ordinances of Louis XIV. book III. title 4, article 11; and in a Treatise upon the Sea Laws, published in 2 Pet. Adm. Dec. In neither of these ancient Codes does there appear to be any distinction between injuries received accidentally or by negligence, nor does it appear that the seaman is to be indemnified beyond his wages and the expenses of his maintenance and cure. We are also left in the dark as to whether the seaman in such a case has recourse to the ship herself, or is remitted to an action against the owners.

By the modern French Commercial Code (art. 262), "seamen are to be paid their wages, and receive medical treatment at the expense of the ship, if they fall sick during a voyage, or be injured in the service of the vessel." Commenting upon this article, Goirand says in his commentaries upon the French Code, that "when a sailor falls ill before the sailing of the vessel he has no right to his wages; if he becomes ill during the voyage, and from no fault of his own, he is paid his wages, and tended at the expense of the ship," and if he is left on shore, the ship is also liable for the expense of his return home; and *under article 263 [170] the same treatment is accorded to sailors wounded or injured in the service of the ship. The expenses of treatment and dressing are chargeable to the ship alone, or to the ship and cargo, according to whether the wounds or injuries were received in the service of the ship alone, or that of the ship and cargo.

Similar provisions are found in the Italian Code, article 363; the Belgian, article 262; the Dutch, articles 423 and 424; the Brazilian, article 560; the Chilian, article 944; the Argentine, article 1174; the Portuguese, article 1469; the Spanish, articles 718 and 719; the German, articles 548 and 549. In some of these Codes, notably the Portuguese, Argentine, and Dutch, these expenses are made a charge upon the ship and her cargo and freight, and considered as a subject of general average. By the Argentine Code, article 1174, the sailor is also entitled to an indemnity beyond his wages and cure in case of mutilation; and by the German Code he appears to be entitled to an indemnity in all cases for injuries incurred in defense of his ship; and by the Dutch Code, the sailor, if disabled, is entitled to such damages as the judge shall deem equitable. In all of them there is a provision against liability in case of injuries received by the sailor's wilful misconduct.

Except as above indicated, in a few countries, the expense and maintenance and cure do not seem to constitute a privilege or lien upon a ship, since by the French Code, article 191, classifying privileged debts against vessels, no mention is made of a lien for personal injury. The other Continental and South American Codes do not differ materially from the French in this particular. Probably, however, the expenses of maintenance and cure would be regarded as a mere incident to the wages, for which there is undoubtedly a privilege.

By the English merchants' shipping act (17 & 18 Vict. chap. 104, § 228, subd. 1), "if the master or any seaman or apprentice receives any hurt or injury in the service of the ship to which he belongs, the expense of providing the necessary surgical and medical advice, with attendance and medicines, and of his subsistence until he is cured, or dies, or is brought back to some port in the United Kingdom, if shipped in [171] the *United Kingdom, or, if shipped in some British possession, to some port in such possession, and of his conveyance to such port, and the expense (if any) of his burial, shall be defrayed by the owner of such ship, without any deduction on that account from the wages of such master, seaman, or apprentice."

These provisions of the British law seem to be practically identical with the Continental Codes. In the English courts the owner is now held to be liable for injuries received by the unseaworthiness of the vessel, though not by the negligence of the master, who is treated as a fellow servant of the owner. Responsibility for injuries received through the unseaworthiness of the ship is imposed upon the owner by the merchants' shipping act of 1876 (39 & 40 Vict. chap. 80, § 5), wherein, in every contract of service, express or implied, between an owner of a ship and the master or any seaman thereof, there is an obligation implied that all reasonable means shall be used to insure the seaworthiness of the ship before and during the voyage. Hedley v. Pinkney & Sons' S. S. Co. [1894] A. C. 222, an action at common law. Beyond this, however, we find nothing in the English law to indicate that a ship or its owners are liable to an indemnity for injuries received by negligence or otherwise in the service of the ship. None such is given in the admiralty court jurisdiction act of 1861, although it seems an action in admiralty will lie against the master in personam for an assault committed upon a passenger or seaman. The Agineourt, 1 Hagg. Adm. 271; The Lowther Castle, 1 Hagg. Adm. 384. This feature of the law we have ourselves adopted in general admiralty rule 16, declaring that "in all suits for assault or beating on the high seas, or elsewhere within the admiralty and maritime jurisdiction, the suit shall be in personam only." In England the master and crew are also treated as fellow servants, and hence it would follow that no action would lie by a member of the crew against either the owners or the ship for injuries received through the negligence of the master. Hedley v. Pinkney & Sons' S. S. Co. [1894] A. C. 222. It is otherwise, however, in Ireland (Ramsay v. Quinn, Ir. Rep. 8, C. L. 322), and in Scotland, where *the master is regarded as a [172] vice principal. Leddy v. Gibson, 11 Ct. Sess. Cas. 3d series, 304.

The statutes of the United States contain no provision upon the subject of the liability of the ship or her owners for damages occasioned by the negligence of the captain to a member of the crew; but in all but a few of the more recent cases the analogies of the English and Continental Codes have been followed, and the recovery limited to the wages and expenses of maintenance and cure. The earliest case upon the subject is that of Harden v. Gordon, 2 Mason, 541, Fed. Cas. No. 6,047, in which Mr. Justice Story held that a claim for the expenses of cure in case of sickness constituted in contemplation of law a part of the contract for wages, over which the admiralty had a rightful jurisdiction. The action was in personam against the master and owner for wages and other expenses occasioned by the sickness of the plaintiff in a foreign port in the course of the voyage, all of which were allowed. The question of indemnity did not arise in this case, but the court held that upon the authority of the Continental Codes, and by its intrinsic equity, there was no doubt of the seaman's right to the expenses of his sickness.

This case was followed in The George, 1 Sumn. 151, Fed. Cas. No. 5,329, and in Reed v. Canfield, 1 Sumn. 195, Fed. Cas. No. 11,641. Though the last case did not involve the question of indemnity, Mr. Justice Story, in delivering the opinion, remarked that "the sickness or other injury may occasion a temporary or permanent disability, but that is not a ground for indemnity from the owners. They are liable only for expenses necessarily incurred for the cure; and when the cure is completed, at least so far as the ordinary medical means extend, the owners are freed from all further liability. They are not in any just sense liable for consequential damages. The question, then, in all such cases is, What expenses have been virtually incurred for the cure?"

The question of indemnity, however, was fully considered by Judge Brown, of the southern district of New York, in The City of Alexandria, 17 Fed. 390, which was an action in rem for personal injuries received by the cook in falling through the fore hatch into the hold; and it was held that upon common-law principles the claim could not be sustained, as the *negligence [173] through which the accident occurred was that of fellow servants engaged in a common employment. The court, however, went on to consider whether the negligence, upon the recognized principles of maritime law, entitled the libellant to compensation from the ship or her owners in cases not arising from unseaworthiness. After going over the Continental Codes, the cases above cited, and a few others, Judge Brown came to the conclusion that he could find "no authority in the ancient or modern Codes, in the recognized text-books or the decisions on maritime law, for the allowance of consequential damages resulting from wounds or hurts received on board ship, whether arising from ordinary negligence of the seaman himself or of others of the ship's company. Considering the frequency of such accidents and the lasting injuries arising from them in so many cases, the absence of any authority holding the vessel liable beyond what has been stated is evidence of the strongest character that no further liability under the maritime law exists."

The general rule that a seaman receiving injury in the performance of his duty is entitled to be treated and cured at the expense of the ship was enforced in The Atlantic, Abb. Adm. 451, Fed. Cas. No. 620, though it was said in this case, and in Nevitt v. Clarke, Olcott, 316, Fed. Cas. No. 10,138, that the privilege of being cured continues no longer than the right to wages under the contract in the particular case. In The Ben Flint, 1 Abb. (U. S.) 126, 1 Biss. 562, Fed. Cas. No. 1,229, the claim to be cured at the expense of the ship is held to be applicable to seamen employed on the lakes and navigable rivers within the United States. See also Brown v. Overton, 1 Sprague, 462, Fed. Cas. No. 2,024; Croucher v. Oakman, 3 Allen, 185; Brown v. The Bradish Johnson, 1 Woods, 301, Fed. Cas. No. 1,992.

In The Edith Godden, 23 Fed. 43, the vessel was held liable in rem for personal injuries received from the neglect of the owner to furnish appliances adequate to the place and occasion where used; in other words, for unseaworthiness. This is readily distinguishable from the previous case of The City of Alexandria, 17 Fed. 390, and is in line with English and American authorities holding owners to be responsible to the seamen for the unseaworthiness of [174] the ship and her appliances. *In The Titan, 23 Blatchf. 177, 23 Fed. 413, the ship was held liable to a deck hand who was injured by a collision occasioned partly by fault of his own vessel. The question of general liability was not discussed but assumed. In the case of The Noddleburn, 12 Sawy. 129, 28 Fed. 855, the question of jurisdiction was not pressed by counsel, but merely stated and submitted. The case is put upon the ground that, as the accident was occasioned by the master knowingly allowing a rope to remain in an insecure condition, the vessel was consequently unseaworthy. In Olson v. Flavel, 13 Sawy. 232, 34 Fed. 477, libellant was allowed to recover damages for personal injury suffered by him while employed as mate; but if there were any negligence on the part of the respondent, it appears to have been not providing proper appliances, so that the case was one really of unseaworthiness. In the case of The A. Heaton, 43 Fed. 592, a seaman was allowed to recover consequential damages for negligence of the owners in not providing suitable appliances, although in the opinion, which was delivered by Mr. Justice Gray, he seems to assume the right of the seaman to recover against the masters or owners for injuries caused by their wilful or negligent acts. The case, however, was one of injuries arising from unseaworthiness, although the learned judge in his discussion does not draw a distinction between the cases arising from the unseaworthiness of the ship and the negligent act of the master. It is interesting to note that in The Julia Fowler, 49 Fed. 277, a seaman employed in scraping the main mast on a triangle surrounding the mast was allowed to recover for the breaking of the rope which held the triangle, and precipitated libellant to the deck; while in a case almost precisely similar (Kalleck v. Dcering, 161 Mass. 469, 37 N. E. 450), the owners were held not to be liable for an injury caused by the negligence of the mate in constructing the triangle and ordering the seaman to use it. In The Frank & Willie, 45 Fed. 494, the ship was held liable to a sailor who was injured by the negligence of the mate in not providing safe means for discharging the cargo. As the opinion was delivered by Judge Brown, who was also the author of the opinion in The City of Alexandria, 17 Fed. 390, the case can be reconciled with that upon the ground that the *question was really one of [175] unseaworthiness, and not of negligence.

Upon a full review, however, of English and American authorities upon these questions, we think the law may be considered as settled upon the following propositions:

1. That the vessel and her owners are liable, in case a seaman falls sick, or is wounded, in the service of the ship, to the extent of his maintenance and cure, and to his wages, at least so long as the voyage is continued.

2. That the vessel and her owner are, both by English and American law, liable to an indemnity for injuries received by seamen in consequence of the unseaworthiness of the ship, or a failure to supply and keep in order the proper appliances appurtenant to the ship. Scarff v. Metcalf, 107 N. Y. 211, 13 N. E. 796.

3. That all the members of the crew, except, perhaps, the master, are, as between themselves, fellow servants, and hence seamen cannot recover for injuries sustained through the negligence of another member of the crew beyond the expense of his maintenance and cure.

4. That the seaman is not allowed to recover an indemnity for the negligence of the master, or any member of the crew, but is entitled to maintenance and cure, whether the injuries were received by negligence or accident.

It will be observed in these cases that a departure has been made from the Continental Codes in allowing an indemnity beyond the expense of maintenance and cure in cases arising from unseaworthiness. This departure originated in England in the merchants' shipping act of 1876, above quoted (Couch v. Steel, 3 El. & Bl. 402; Hedley v. Pinkney & Sons' S. S. Co. 7 Asp. M. L. Cas. 135 [1894] A. C. 222), and in this country, in a general consensus of opinion among the circuit and district courts, that an exception should be made from the general principle before obtaining, in favor of seamen suffering injury through the unseaworthiness of the vessel. We are not disposed to disturb so wholesome a doctrine by any contrary decision of our own.

2. It is insisted, however, that a lien is given upon the vessel by a local statute of [176] Wisconsin (Rev. Stat. 1898, § 3348), *repeating a previous statute upon the same subject, which provides that every ship, boat, or vessel used in navigating the waters of that state shall be liable "for all damages arising from injuries done to persons or property by such ship, boat, or vessel," and that the claim for such damages shall constitute a lien upon such ship, boat, or vessel, which shall take precedence of all other claims or liens thereon. As the accident happened within 3 miles of the port of Milwaukee, and as the Constitution of Wisconsin fixes the center of Lake Michigan as the eastern boundary of the state, there is no doubt that the vessel was navigating the waters of that state at the time of the accident. But the vital question in the case is whether the damages arose from an injury done to persons or property by such ship, boat, or vessel. The statute was doubtless primarily intended to cover cases of collision with other vessels or with structures affixed to the land, and to other cases where the damage is done by the ship herself, as the offending thing, to persons or property outside of the ship, through the negligence or mismanagement of the ship by the officers or seamen in charge. To hold that it applies to injuries suffered by a member of the crew on board the ship is to give the act an effect beyond the ordinary meaning of the words used. Would it apply, for instance, to injuries received in falling through an open hatchway; or to a block blown against a seaman by the force of the wind, though the accident in either case might have resulted from the negligence of the master? We think not.

The act in this particular uses the same language as the 7th section of the English admiralty court act of 1861, which declares that "the high court of admiralty shall have jurisdiction over any claim for damage done by any ship." Construing that act, it has been held by the court of admiralty that it applies to damages occasioned by a vessel coming in collision with a pier (The Uhla, L. R. 2 Adm. & Eccl. 29, note), and also to cases of personal injury (The Sylph, L. R. 2 Adm. & Eccl. 24, where a diver, while engaged in diving in the river Mersey, was caught by the paddle wheel of a steamer and suffered considerable injury); but not to a case where personal injuries were sustained by a seaman falling down into the [177] hold of a vessel, *owing to the hatchway being insufficiently protected (The Theta [1894] Prob. 280), or to loss of life (The Vera Cruz, L. R. 9 Prob. Div. 96). As we have indicated above, the statute was confined to cases of damage done by those in charge of a ship with the ship as the "noxious instrument," and that cases of damages done on board the ship were not, within the meaning of the act, damages done by the ship.

In the case under consideration the damage was not done by the ship in the ordinary sense of the word, but by a gangway, which may be assumed to be an ordinary appliance of the ship, being blown against the libellant by the force of the wind.

It results that the first and third questions must be answered in the negative.

SAN JOSE LAND & WATER COMPANY,
Plff. in Err.,
v.

SAN JOSE RANCH COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 177-185.)

Error to state court—Federal question—railroad land grants—forfeiture—bona fide purchasers—rights as against prior appropriators.

1. A Federal right is "specially set up or claimed in a state court," within the meaning of U. S. Rev. Stat. § 709 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 575), so as to confer jurisdiction on the Supreme Court of the United States of a writ of error to such court, where a claim of such right sufficiently appears in a motion for new trial and in the assignments of error in the state supreme court, and was fully considered in the opinion of that court, whose decision was adverse to such claim.
2. Land within the indemnity limits of the grant made by the act of Congress of July 27, 1866 (14 Stat. at L. 292, chap. 278), to the Atlantic & Pacific Railroad did not, by reason of the forfeiture of such grant by the act of July 6, 1886 (24 Stat. at L. 123, chap. 637), pass to the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, although such land was within the place limits of the grant to the Texas & Pacific Railroad made by the act of March 3, 1871 (16 Stat. at L. 573, chap. 122), the rights under which subsequently became vested in the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, which built the road and selected the land under that act, since the forfeiture of the earlier grant did not inure to the benefit of the later grantee, but to the benefit of the United States.
3. One who enters on public land and constructs a pipe line thereon, under a claim of ownership of a water right, is entitled to the protection afforded vested ditch and water rights by the act of Congress of July 26, 1866 (14 Stat. at L. 251, chap. 262), § 9, as against subsequent purchasers of the land from the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, whose only claim to such land rests upon the right of purchase from the United States, given by the act of March 3, 1887 (24 Stat. at L. 556, chap. 376, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1595), § 5, to bona fide purchasers from railway companies of forfeited lands.

NOTE.—On writs of error from United States Supreme Court to state courts—see notes to Hamblin v. Western Land Co. 37 L. ed. U. S. 267; Kipley v. Illinois, 42 L. ed. U. S. 998; and Re Buchanan, 39 L. ed. U. S. 884.

As to land grants to railroads—see note to Kansas P. R. Co. v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 28 L. ed. U. S. 794.

4. Bona fide purchasers of forfeited lands from a railroad company, who are not in possession and have not attempted to exercise their right under the act of Congress of March 3, 1887 (24 Stat. at L. 556, chap. 376, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1595), § 5, to purchase the lands from the United States, are not, by reason of such right to purchase, entitled to maintain an action to quiet title against persons claiming an adverse interest therein.

[No. 113.]

Submitted December 2, 1902. Decided March 2, 1903.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of California to review a decree which affirmed a judgment of the Superior Court in favor of defendant in an action to quiet title. Affirmed.

See same case below, 129 Cal. 673, 62 Pac. 269.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brown:

- [178] *This was an action brought in 1889 by the Land & Water Company, under the Code of Civil Procedure of California, to quiet the title of the plaintiff and determine the nature of the adverse claim of the defendant to the half of a quarter section of land, which had been sold by the Southern Pacific Railroad Company February 28, 1887, to plaintiff's predecessors in title, as part of its land grant of 1871.

The case was tried in 1890, though the decree was not entered until 1897. The facts found by the court were substantially that the Southern Pacific Railroad Company had accepted the benefit of a land grant made March 3, 1871, to the Texas & Pacific railroad, filed its map of location April 3, 1871, and on August 12, 1873, formed a new corporation, also known as the Southern Pacific Railroad Company; built and constructed a road from Tehachapi pass by way of Los Angeles to Yuma, and selected the land in question under the act of March 3, 1871; that such land was within the place limits of the Southern Pacific, and also within the indemnity limits of a land grant to the Atlantic & Pacific railroad by act of July 27, 1866. This latter company never complied with the terms of the grant, and never built its road.

That on February 28, 1887, the Southern Pacific agreed with two parties named Nolan and Heckenlively to sell them this land, and, after the receipt from the United States of a patent therefor, to deliver them a deed; that by subsequent conveyances, and on August 29, 1888, the right of the grantees became vested in the plaintiff, the San José Land & Water Company; that the land is situated in San Dimas canyon, through a portion of which the San Dimas creek flows; that prior to December, 1883, one Stowell claimed to own a water right in the waters flowing down such creek, the character and extent of which the court did not adjudicate, and about that time entered upon the land and constructed across a portion of it a 12-inch pipe line for the purpose of conducting the water so claimed by him from its point of diversion across said lands to other lands; that prior to July, 1887, the San José Ranch Company, defendant, had, by mesne conveyances, succeeded to the rights of Stowell, and also constructed upon such land, at a point where the waters of San Dimas creek flowed, a brick and cement forebay, sand box, or dam, and laid therefrom across a portion of said land a 14-inch pipe line, both of which pipe lines it claims the right to maintain, but makes no other claim of right to such lands.

Upon this state of facts the superior court entered a judgment in favor of the defendant, which was affirmed by the supreme court. 129 Cal. 673, 62 Pac. 269. Whereupon the plaintiff sued out this writ of error.

Mr. W. H. Anderson submitted the cause for plaintiff in error. Messrs. James Anderson and Richard Dunnigan were with him on the brief:

This is an action under a state statute which permits the holder of any kind of interest in real property, whether equitable or legal, to maintain an action to determine the claims of others adverse to him; and this, whether in or out of possession, the only limitation being that the holder of an equitable title may not maintain the action against the holder of the legal title.

Pennie v. Hildreth, 81 Cal. 130, 22 Pac. 398; Pierce v. Felter, 53 Cal. 18; Tuffree v. Polhemus, 108 Cal. 670, 41 Pac. 806.

The act of March 3, 1857, confers some right or interest in the land upon the bona fide purchaser thereof in good faith for value from the railroad company, which may be enforced and protected.

Sethman v. Clise, 17 Land Dec. 307; Stephan v. Morris, 21 Land Dec. 557; Telford v. Keystone Lumber Co., 19 Land Dec. 141; Gasper v. St. Louis River Water Power Co., 22 Land Dec. 587; Durrell v. Windom, 23 Land Dec. 508; Hunt v. Maxwell, 23 Land Dec. 183; Holton v. Rutledge, 20 Land Dec. 227; Skinrik v. Longstreet, 22 Land Dec. 32; Focum v. Keystone Lumber Co., 22 Land Dec. 558; Union P. R. Co. v. McKinley, 14 Land Dec. 237.

The right of a homestead settler who has made entry, but has not made final proof of residence and cultivation, or obtained a patent, amounts to an equitable interest in the land, subject to the future performance of certain conditions; and, until forfeited by failure to perform the conditions, it must prevail, not only against individuals, but against the government.

McGuire v. Brown, 106 Cal. 660, 30 L. R. A. 384, 39 Pac. 1060.

The effect of a withdrawal of the lands from settlement, by virtue of a grant to the railroad company, is well settled.

St. Paul & P. R. Co. v. Northern P. R. Co. 139 U. S. 1, 17, 35 L. ed. 77, 84, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 389; Buttz v. Northern P. R. Co. 119 U. S. 69, 30 L. ed. 336, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 100; Sage v. Swenson, 64 Minn. 517, 67 N. W. 544; Wolcott v. Des Moines Nav. & R. Co. 5 Wall. 681, 18 L. ed. 689; Williams v. Baker, 17 Wall. 144, 153, sub nom. Cedar Rapids & M. R. Co. v. Martindale, 21 L. ed. 561, 563; United States v. Des Moines Nav. & R. Co. 142 U. S. 510, 546, 35 L. ed. 1099, 1109, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 308; Riley v. Welles, 154 U. S. 578, 19 L. ed. 648, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1166; Wood v. Beach, 156 U. S. 548, 39 L. ed. 528, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 410; Northern P. R. Co. v. Musser-Sauntry Land, Logging & Mfg. Co. 168 U. S. 608, 611, 42 L. ed. 598, 599, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 205.

The right to acquire any kind of interest in the United States public domain, whether it be a right to settle upon, to appropriate water upon it, or to construct or maintain a ditch upon it, or to divert water upon it, is confined to such portion of such domain as is legally known as "public land."

By public lands is meant such land as is open to sale or other disposition under the general laws. Land to which any claims or rights of others attach does not fall within the designation of public lands.

Bardon v. Northern P. R. Co. 145 U. S. 535, 36 L. ed. 806, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 856.

The term "public lands," in a statute authorizing location of scrip, does not include "tide lands." The words "public lands" are habitually used in our legislation to describe such as are subject to sale or other disposal under general laws.

Mann v. Tacoma Land Co. 153 U. S. 274, 38 L. ed. 715, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 820.

One who has acquired a right to maintain a pipe line over public lands cannot, after the rights of others have intervened in the land, acquire any new rights on the land different from those already acquired by virtue of his old easement.

McGuire v. Brown, 106 Cal. 670, 30 L. R. A. 384, 39 Pac. 1060; Sturr v. Beck, 133 U. S. 541, 33 L. ed. 761, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 350.

One who has an easement for a ditch cannot change it to a 12-inch pipe line.

Allen v. San Jose Land & Water Co. 92 Cal. 138, 15 L. R. A. 93, 28 Pac. 215.

By parity of reason, a 12-inch pipe across the land cannot be changed to a 14-inch pipe connected with a forebay or dam constructed upon the land.

Mr. W. H. Anderson also filed a separate brief for plaintiff in error:

The court's opinion upon writ of error from the decision of the highest judicial tribunal of the state is part of the record.

Cousin v. Labatut, 19 How. 202, 15 L. ed. 601; Murdock v. Memphis, 20 Wall. 633, 22 L. ed. 443; Gross v. United States Mortg. Co. 108 U. S. 485, 27 L. ed. 795, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 940; Fire Asso. of Philadelphia v. New York, 119 U. S. 116, 30 L. ed. 346, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 108; Creiger v. Shelby R. Co. 125 U. S. 189 U. S.

S. 44, 31 L. ed. 678, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 752; Scudder v. Coler, 175 U. S. 36, 44 L. ed. 64, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 26.

Where the record affirmatively shows that a Federal question was raised,—that is, that it was "set up" or "claimed,"—whether that fact is deducible from the pleadings or from the judgment or from any other part of the record, it is sufficient to confer jurisdiction; and it is immaterial where, when, or how it was raised, provided it was raised prior to the final judgment, and was determined and passed upon adversely in the final judgment.

Maxwell v. Newbold, 18 How. 511-516, 15 L. ed. 506-508; Sully v. American Nat. Bank, 178 U. S. 289, 44 L. ed. 1072, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 935; Gross v. United States Mortg. Co. 108 U. S. 484, 27 L. ed. 797, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 940; Fire Asso. of Philadelphia v. New York, 119 U. S. 116, 30 L. ed. 346, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 108; Sayward v. Denny, 158 U. S. 180, 181, 39 L. ed. 941, 942, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 777; Meyer v. Richmond, 172 U. S. 82, 43 L. ed. 374, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 106; Dewey v. Des Moines, 173 U. S. 193-201, 43 L. ed. 665-667, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 379.

Mr. John S. Chapman submitted the cause for defendant in error:

Under U. S. Rev. Stat. § 709a, title, right, privilege, or immunity claimed under the Constitution must be specifically made. And, more than that, such right or title must be specially set up or claimed on the record.

Murdock v. Memphis, 20 Wall. 590, 634, 22 L. ed. 429, 444; Clark v. Pennsylvania, 128 U. S. 395, 397, 32 L. ed. 487, 488, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 2, 113.

The arguments of counsel cannot be looked into to show a Federal question.

Sayward v. Denny, 158 U. S. 180, 39 L. ed. 941, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 777; Zadig v. Baldwin, 166 U. S. 485, 41 L. ed. 1087, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 639.

Nor are the assignments of error available to show the Federal question, for they are not a part of the record.

Sayward v. Denny, 158 U. S. 180, 39 L. ed. 941, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 777; Fowler v. Lamson, 164 U. S. 252, 41 L. ed. 424, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 112.

Nor is it sufficient that such a claim appears in the petition for the writ.

Clark v. Pennsylvania, 128 U. S. 395, 32 L. ed. 487, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 2, 113.

Nor can it be made out by the certificate of the judge.

Caperton v. Bowyer, 14 Wall. 216, 236, 20 L. ed. 882, 885; Dibble v. Bellingham Bay Land Co. 163 U. S. 63, 41 L. ed. 72, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 939.

The claim made must be distinct and positive, and not left to mere inference. "Specially set up" means unmistakably, distinctly, and positively brought to the attention of the court.

F. G. Oxley Stave Co. v. Butler County, 166 U. S. 648, 652, 41 L. ed. 1149, 1151, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 709; Green Bay & M. Canal Co. v. Patten Paper Co. 172 U. S. 58, 66-70, 43 L. ed. 364, 368, 369, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 97.

A special reference must be made to the particular statute or law of the United States under which the party claims.

Speed v. McCarthy, 181 U. S. 269, 272-276, 45 L. ed. 855, 858, 859, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 613.

This court sometimes takes jurisdiction where it manifestly appears from the record that a Federal question was involved; but that is not done when the case comes under the particular provision of the act of Congress which we are now considering.

Eastern Bldg. Asso. v. Welling, 181 U. S. 47, 48, 45 L. ed. 739, 741, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 531.

The plaintiff had no title under the facts as found in this case.

129 Cal. 673, 62 Pac. 269.

Mr. Justice Brown delivered the opinion of the court:

Motion is made to dismiss this writ of error upon the ground that no Federal right, title, privilege, or immunity was "specially set up or claimed" by the plaintiff in error, as required by the 3d clause of Rev. Stat. § 709 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 575). None such appears in the complaint, although we think it sufficiently appears in the motion for a new trial and in the assignments of error in the state supreme court. It also appears from the opinion of the court that plaintiff relied upon the act of Congress of March 3, 1887, for the readjustment of land grants (24 Stat. at L. 556, chap. 376, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1595); and the question considered by the court, and upon which the case turned, was whether the plaintiff had brought itself within the scope of that act. This question was fully considered by the court, and it was held that the defendant, having acquired its rights prior to the act of 1887, must prevail against the right claimed by the plaintiff.

[180] While the right under the act of 1887, thus considered, was not originally specially set up and claimed by the plaintiff, inasmuch as it was not an original right, but a right available in rebuttal of the defense, it is one which appears to have been insisted upon in the argument; and under the rule of this court *requiring the opinions to be sent up with the record, it has been frequently held to be a sufficient compliance with the words "specially set up and claimed," that it was fully considered in the opinion of the court and ruled against the plaintiff in error. Murdoek v. Memphis, 20 Wall. 590, 633, 22 L. ed. 429, 443; Gross v. United States Mortg. Co. 108 U. S. 477, 27 L. ed. 795, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 940; Fire Asso. of Philadelphia v. New York, 119 U. S. 110, 115, 30 L. ed. 342, 345, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 108; Egan v. Hart, 165 U. S. 188, 41 L. ed. 680, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 300; Sayward v. Denny, 158 U. S. 180, 184, 39 L. ed. 941, 942, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 777; Mallett v. North Carolina, 181 U. S. 589, 45 L. ed. 1015, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 730. These must be considered as leading, under our change of rule, to a different result from that reached in some prior cases (Williams v. Norris, 12 Wheat. 117, 6 L. ed. 571; Reetor v. Ashley, 6 Wall. 142, 18 L. ed. 733, and Gibson v. Chouteau, 8 Wall. 314, 19 L. ed. 317), in which we held that the opinion of the state court could not be resorted to for the purpose of showing that a question of Federal cognizance was decided.

2. The case upon the merits presents but little difficulty. The action is brought under § 738 of the Code of Civil Procedure of California, which provides that "an action may be brought by any person against another who claims an estate or interest in real property adverse to him, for the purpose of determining such adverse claim."

The land in question was within the indemnity limits of the land grant of July 27, 1866 (14 Stat. at L. 292, chap. 278), to the Atlantic & Pacific Railroad Company. Plaintiff, however, claims nothing under this grant, as the railroad company never complied with its terms; never built its road; and the grant was forfeited by act of July 6, 1886 (24 Stat. at L. 123, chap. 637), and the land restored to the public domain. The act, however, becomes pertinent in another connection.

The land in question was also within the place limits of the grant to the Texas & Pacific Railroad Company by act of March 3, 1871 (16 Stat. at L. 573, chap. 122), and subsequently became vested in the Southern Pacific, which constructed the road and selected the land in question, claiming it under that act.

It was held by this court, however, in United States v. Southern P. R. Co. 146 U. S. 570, 36 L. ed. 1091, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 152, that the forfeiture of the Atlantic & Pacific grant of July 6, 1886, did not inure to the benefit of the Southern Pacific, which held the *later grant of the same land, but to the benefit of the United States, and thereby became a part of their public lands. In the next following case (United States v. Colton Marble & Lime Co. 146 U. S. 615, 36 L. ed. 1104, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 163), this ruling was extended to the indemnity lands of the Atlantic & Pacific, which, upon forfeiture of its land grant, also reverted to the United States.

Hence, on February 28, 1887, when the Southern Pacific company contracted to sell these lands to Nolan and Heckenlively, it had really nothing to sell, and no interest in the land that could pass under that agreement. There was a stipulation in it to make a deed of the premises as soon as the railroad had received a patent therefor from the United States; that it would use ordinary diligence to procure such patent, and that if, in consequence of circumstances beyond its control, it failed to obtain a patent, it guaranteed nothing with regard to the title, but agreed to repay everything which had been paid by the grantees. There was a further agreement that the contract should not be assignable except by indorsement, and with the written consent of the company, and a written promise of the assignee to perform all the undertakings and promises of the grantees.

After making the first payment and paying the annual interest to February 28, 1892, the grantees ceased all further payments. The findings show that at the time of the execution of the contract "said tract of land was not in the bona fide occupation of any adverse claimant under the pre-emption or homestead laws of the United States, and the same had not been settled upon at the date of such purchase, or on the 3d day of March, 1887, or subsequent to December 1, 1882, by any person claiming to enter the same under the settlement laws of the United States." That neither the grantees nor their assigns ever settled upon the land, cultivated or fenced it, although Heckenlively did, shortly after the purchase, enter upon the land and begin the construction of a ditch and tunnel thereon. Subsequently the land passed by intermediate conveyances to the plaintiff. Manifestly, however, there was a clear failure of title on the part of the plaintiff to maintain this action. The Southern Pacific had [182] no title to convey, and, beyond this, there *is no finding that the contract was assigned by indorsement or with the written consent of the railroad company, or that there was any promise on the part of the assignees to perform the undertakings of the original grantees.

Plaintiff's claim to the land must rest, if at all, upon the act of Congress of March 3, 1887 (24 Stat. at L. 556, chap. 376, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1595), entitled "An Act to Provide for the Adjustment of Land Grants made by Congress to Aid in the Construction of Railroads, and for the Forfeiture of Unearned Lands, and for Other Purposes,"—the main purpose of which act was to relieve bona fide purchasers from railway companies of forfeited lands, by permitting such purchasers or settlers to perfect their entries upon compliance with the public land laws. By § 5 of this act, "where any said company shall have sold to citizens of the United States, . . . as a part of its grant, lands not conveyed to or for the use of such company, . . . and where the lands so sold are for any reason excepted from the operation of the grant to said company, it shall be lawful for the bona fide purchaser thereof from said company to make payment to the United States for said lands, at the ordinary government price for like lands, and thereupon patents shall issue therefor to the said bona fide purchaser, his heirs or assigns." The section, however, contained provisos excepting from its terms all lands which at the date of such sales from the government were in the bona fide occupation of adverse claimants under the pre-emption or homestead laws, and also of lands settled upon subsequent to the 1st day of December, 1882, by persons claiming to enter the same under the settlement laws of the United States.

There are two difficulties connected with the application of this statute: (1) Assuming that Nolan and Heckenlively were bona fide purchasers in good faith from the government, which, indeed, is a part of the finding, there is nothing to indicate that they had ever made payment to the United States for the lands, or ever applied to do so; nor does a patent ever appear to have been issued to them. In short, the plaintiff relies upon the statute without showing that anything was done under it. (2) The provisions of this section do not apply to lands occupied adversely under the pre-emption, homestead, or settlement laws *of the [183] United States, and the finding in this connection is that in 1883 one Stowell owned, or claimed to own, a certain water right in the waters of San Dimas creek, which flowed through a portion of the land, the character and extent of which water right the court did not find; and that in November of that year Stowell entered on the land, laid and constructed across a portion of it a 12-inch pipe line for the purpose of taking the water across the land to other lands, probably for the purposes of irrigation; and that in July, 1887, the defendant, which had by mesne conveyances succeeded to this water right of Stowell, entered upon the land and built and constructed thereon a stone, brick, and cement forebay, sand box, or dam, and also a 14-inch pipe line across a portion of the lands. It still claims the right to these improvements, but makes no other claim of right, title, or interest to the land or any part thereof.

The record does not show exactly how Stowell obtained his rights to the waters of this creek, although the testimony sent up with the record indicates that one Haynes settled upon the land in question in 1869, and obtained a patent either in August or September, 1878; that he used the water from the creek to irrigate the land; made a dam and a ditch and ran it down to the ranch; that he began using the water in March, 1870, and so used it up to the spring of 1878, when he obtained the patent, sold to Stowell, and conveyed the land by deed.

Conceding, however, that, under the findings, we cannot look back of 1883, when Stowell entered the land and laid a 12-inch pipe line there, under a claim of ownership of the water right, we see no reason why he and his grantees are not protected by § 9 of the act of July 26, 1866 (14 Stat. at L. 251, chap. 262), which declares that, "whenever, by priority of possession, rights to the use of water for mining, agricultural, manufacturing, or other purposes have vested and accrued, and the same are recognized and acknowledged by the local customs, laws, and the decisions of courts, the possessors and owners of such vested rights shall be maintained and protected in the same; and the right of way for the construction of ditches and canals for the purposes aforesaid is hereby acknowledged and confirmed."

Bearing in mind that these lands were from July 6, 1886, the *date of the forfeit- [184] ure, public lands, subject to the pre-emption, homestead, or settlement laws, and that at the time Stowell entered upon the land, and constructed a pipe line thereon (1883), which at that time seems to have been wholly unoccupied, we think the fact that Heckenlively, under his agreement of purchase of February 28, 1887, and shortly after the same was executed, entered upon the land and began the construction of a ditch and tunnel there, becomes immaterial, since there is a finding that he never settled upon the land, cultivated or fenced it, or took possession of it, and no finding how long he continued the construction of the ditch or tunnel, or the amount of work in connection therewith. For aught that appears he may have abandoned it immediately. There is no evidence that the original grantees from the railroad company, or their successors in interest, ever sought to take advantage of the act of 1887, or ever applied to purchase the lands, or made payment to the United States, or did anything whatever before the beginning of this suit to indicate that they relied upon this statute. We agree with the supreme court of California that the plaintiff was not entitled, upon the showing of a mere right to purchase, to demand that its title be adjudged good and valid, and that the defendant had no estate or interest in the land, or that it should be enjoined from asserting any claim adverse to the plaintiff, or that it should recover possession of the land, with the right of ousting the defendant from the improvements which its predecessors had made thereon.

An inceptive right under the statute was an insufficient basis of recovery. A party cannot rest forever on such a right, but is required by the statute, before asserting it against innocent third parties, to take some steps to perfect it. The litigation seems to turn really upon the respective rights of the parties to the waters of San Dimas creek, and as defendant's predecessors first appropriated them, and the plaintiff shows no superior title, it cannot prevail against the ranch company. In view of the uncertain character of the finding that Heckenlively did, shortly after his purchase, enter upon the land and commence the construction of a ditch and tunnel thereon, we are unable to see how the case is affected by the fact [185] that, in July and August of the same year, the defendant entered upon the land and constructed their forebay or dam, and laid a 14-inch pipe in addition to the 12-inch pipe which Stowell had laid in 1883. We express no opinion as to the possibility of the plaintiff maintaining a second action upon its patent since obtained, or how far this case may, if at all, operate as res judicata in that.

There was no error in the decree of the Supreme Court, and it is therefore affirmed.

Mr. Justice McKenna took no part in the disposition of this case.

THE ROANOKE.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 185-199.)

Constitutional law—validity of state statute creating lien on foreign vessels—in-

NOTE.—On the validity of state statutes creating liens on vessels—see note to Balzley v. The Odorilla (Pa.) 1 L. R. A. 505.

interference with Federal admiralty jurisdiction.

An unlawful interference with the exclusive jurisdiction of admiralty and maritime cases, vested by the Federal Constitution in the courts of the United States, is made by the attempt by 2 Bal. (Wash.) Code & Stat. §§ 5953, 5954, to create a preferred lien on ocean-going vessels owned in other states or countries for work done and materials furnished on the order of a contractor, which lien may be enforced at any time within three years, although such contractor has been paid in full by the owner without knowledge of any unpaid claims.

[No. 123.]

Submitted December 17, 1902. Decided March 2, 1903.

APPEAL from the District Court of the United States for the District of Washington to review a decree enforcing a lien for labor and materials furnished to a contractor charged with the repair of a vessel. Reversed and remanded, with directions to dismiss the libel.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brown:

This was a libel in rem for materials, and also for work and labor, alleged to have been furnished by the libellants King and Winge in the repair of the steamship Roanoke, to certain contractors with the owners, who had full charge of the alteration and repair of the steamship. An intervening libel was also filed by one Fraser for labor and material furnished under the same conditions.

The cases resulted in decrees for the libellants, from which the North American Transportation & Trading Company, owner of the steamship, appealed directly to this court, and the following facts were found:

"The North American Transportation & Trading Company appeared as claimant and owner, and the vessel was released upon its stipulation.

"It admitted all the allegations of the libel except that the work was done on the credit of the ship, which it denied except that it admitted that libellants had acted under the belief that they had a lien by virtue of law. It then alleged its incorporation and existence under the laws of the state of Illinois, the residence there at all times of its president and general manager, its maintaining only agencies at Seattle and at other places in Alaska and Canada, and its enjoying a high credit. The Roanoke it alleged to be an ocean-going vessel, registered at Chicago, Illinois, under the navigation laws of the United States, with the name of "Chicago" painted on her stern. She was alleged to have been purchased by [187] claimant in 1898 on the Atlantic coast, and, upon the Pacific coast since that time, employed between Seattle and the mouth of the Yukon in the summer, and between San Francisco and southern ports in the winter. It was further alleged that the claimant had never given any order for the material and labor described in the libel, and that these were furnished on the order of the contractor, who, before the filing of the libel and without any knowledge by claimant of these unpaid claims, had been paid by this claimant for these materials and labor in full. It was alleged in conclusion that the lien claimed by libellants was claimed under §§ 5953 and 5954 of Ballinger's Code and Statutes of Washington, that such a lien was in this instance void, being in violation of the 8th section of the 1st article of the Constitution of the United States, conferring upon Congress the power to regulate commerce among the several states, was an illegal burden upon interstate commerce, and in violation also of the 14th article of the Constitution of the United States, as depriving claimant of its property without due process of law and without its equal protection, and was in violation of the 2d section of the 3d article of the Constitution conferring on the courts of the United States admiralty and maritime jurisdiction.

"To the intervening libel of Fraser the same answer was made.

"To each of these answers respectively the libellants and intervening libellant excepted as insufficient, and the whole of each, to constitute any answer or defense to the libel.

"The exceptions were sustained, the claimant elected to stand on its answer, and a decree was entered against it and its stipulators for the whole sum claimed in the libels."

Messrs. Frederick Bausman and Daniel Kelleher submitted the cause for appellant:

Whatever encroachments of state law may be tolerated in commerce on land, commerce on sea is a subject even more exclusively within the national care.

Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Maryland, 21 Wall. 456, 470, 22 L. ed. 678, 683; Pullman's Palace Car Co. v. Pennsylvania, 141 U. S. 32, 35 L. ed. 620, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 595, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 876.

Hard as it is to conceive that the Federal government will ever permit the encroachment of state liens where both commerce and admiralty are concerned, it is altogether too hard to imagine that they will permit such liens to be unreasonable in themselves.

The Belfast, 7 Wall. 624, 19 L. ed. 266.

As regards the admiralty jurisdiction of the Federal government, such laws, whether reasonable in terms or not, are void as to vessels of other states, because wholly unnecessary and in their nature incompatible with the complete system of admiralty and its policy.

The General Smith, 4 Wheat. 438, 4 L. ed. 609; Peyroux v. Howard, 7 Pet. 324, 8 L. ed. 700; The Belfast, 7 Wall. 624, 19 L. ed. 266; The Lottawanna, 21 Wall. 558, sub nom. Rodd v. Heartt, 22 L. ed. 654; The J. E. Rumbell, 148 U. S. 1, 37 L. ed. 345, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 498; The Chusan, 2 Story, 455, 189 U. S.

Fed. Cas. No. 2,717; The New York v. Rae, 18 How. 223, 15 L. ed. 359; Hall v. De Cuir, 95 U. S. 485, 24 L. ed. 547; The Globe, 2 Blatchf. 427, Fed. Cas. No. 5,483; The Selah, 4 Sawy. 40, Fed. Cas. No. 12,636; The Lyndhurst, 48 Fed. 839; Hughes, Admiralty, p. 108.

Mr. Harold Preston submitted the cause for appellees. Messrs. Benton Embree and Clarence S. Preston were with him on the brief:

The laws of the state in which personal property is situated govern respecting the transfer of title to and liens thereon, even where the owner is a nonresident of the state.

Wulworth v. Harris, 129 U. S. 355, 32 L. ed. 710, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 340; Brown v. Smart, 145 U. S. 454, 36 L. ed. 773, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 958; Pullman's Palace Car Co. v. Pennsylvania, 141 U. S. 32, 35 L. ed. 619, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 595, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 876; The Iris, 40 C. C. A. 301, 100 Fed. 104, 106; Green v. Van Buskirk, 5 Wall. 307, 18 L. ed. 599, 7 Wall. 139, 19 L. ed. 109.

In those respects in which Congress has not exercised its power to regulate interstate and foreign commerce, state legislation is valid so long as it affects such commerce only indirectly or remotely.

Kidd v. Pearson, 128 U. S. 1, 32 L. ed. 346, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 232, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 6, and citations; Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Ohio, 173 U. S. 285, 43 L. ed. 702, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 465, and citations; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Haber, 169 U. S. 613, 42 L. ed. 878, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 488; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Kentucky, 161 U. S. 677, 40 L. ed. 849, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 714; Re Rahrer, 140 U. S. 545, sub nom. Wilkerson v. Rahrer, 35 L. ed. 572, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 865.

There seems to be no just ground for a distinction between commerce on land and commerce by water.

Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Maryland, 21 Wall. 456, 22 L. ed. 678; Sherlock v. Alling, 93 U. S. 99, 23 L. ed. 819.

This court draws a distinction between the effect of taxation upon the instruments of interstate commerce, and the regulation of such commerce by other means.

Sherlock v. Alling, 93 U. S. 99, 23 L. ed. 819; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Haber, 169 U. S. 613, 632, 42 L. ed. 878, 884, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 488; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Kentucky, 161 U. S. 677, 701, 40 L. ed. 849, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 714; Pittsburg & S. Coal Co. v. Louisiana, 156 U. S. 590, 598, 599, 39 L. ed. 544, 548, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 18, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 459.

Compulsory pilotage laws of a state, while admitted to be regulations of commerce, are held valid so long as Congress refrains from legislating on the subject.

Cooley v. Philadelphia Port Wardens, 12 How. 299, 320, 13 L. ed. 996, 1005; Huus v. New York & P. R. S. S. Co. 182 U. S. 392, 393, 45 L. ed. 1146, 1147, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 827; The China, 7 Wall. 53, 19 L. ed. 67; Ex parte McNiel, 13 Wall. 236, 20 L. ed.

624; Pacific Mail S. S. Co. v. Joliffe, 2 Wall. 450, 17 L. ed. 805.

So long as Congress does not interpose to regulate the subject, the rights of materialmen furnishing necessities to a vessel in her home port may be regulated in each state by state regulation.

The Lottawanna, 21 Wall. 558, sub nom. Rodd v. Heartt, 22 L. ed. 654.

There would be no reason or justice in exempting vessels owned by nonresidents, when employed within this state, from liabilities and burdens imposed upon vessels having resident owners.

McKae v. Bowers Dredging Co. 86 Fed. 344, 350.

Any law which discriminates in favor of nonresident shipowners is equally as obnoxious to the principles of justice and the requirements of fair trade as a law which discriminates against nonresident shipowners.

The Robert Dollar, 115 Fed. 218, 221.

A lien conferred by a state statute as incident to a maritime contract is, for all practical purposes, a maritime lien; and such a lien is cognizable in the admiralty.

The J. E. Rumbell, 148 U. S. 1, 20, 37 L. ed. 345, 350, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 498; The Glide, 167 U. S. 606, 42 L. ed. 296, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 930; The Robert Dollar, 115 Fed. 218.

It will not do to confound questions of jurisdiction with those of mere procedure.

The Glide, 167 U. S. 612, 42 L. ed. 298, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 930.

The changes made in the 12th admiralty rule by this court seem to evince a purpose to place vessels, both domestic and foreign, on an equal footing as regards the enforcement of liens, whether arising under the general maritime law or created by state statutes.

The Robert Dollar, 115 Fed. 223; The Lottawanna, 21 Wall. 558, sub nom. Rodd v. Heartt, 22 L. ed. 654.

The distinction between the effect in admiralty of local laws which are consistent with the principles of the general maritime law, and those which are inconsistent therewith, is upheld in Workman v. New York, 179 U. S. 552, 45 L. ed. 314, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 212.

Mr. Justice Brown delivered the opinion of the court:

This case is appealed directly from the district court to this court under that clause of § 5 of the court of appeals act which permits such appeal "in any case in which the Constitution or law of a state is claimed to be in contravention of the Constitution of the United States." [26 Stat. at L. 828, chap. 517, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 549.] No additional significance is given to the appeal by certain questions certified by the district court, as the power to certify is only given in cases appealed upon questions of jurisdiction. But as the case is properly before us upon direct appeal from the district court; we proceed to dispose of the question of the constitution-ality of the law of Washington, under which these proceedings were taken.

*By that law (2 Ballinger's Codes and [193] Statutes, §§ 5953 and 5954)—

"5953. All steamers, vessels, and boats, their tackle, apparel, and furniture, are liable—

"3. For work done or material furnished in this state, for their construction, repair, or equipment, at the request of their respective owners, masters, agents, consignees, contractors, subcontractors, or other person or persons having charge in whole or in part of their construction, alteration, repair, or equipment; and every contractor, subcontractor, builder, or person having charge, either in whole or in part, of the construction, alteration, repair, or equipment of any vessel, shall be held to be the agent of the owner, for the purposes of this chapter;

"Demands for these several causes constitute liens upon all steamers, vessels, and boats, and their tackle, apparel, and furniture, and have priority in their order herein enumerated, and have preference over all other demands; but such liens only continue in force for the period of three years from the time the cause of action accrued."

"5954. Such liens may be enforced in all cases of maritime contracts or service by a suit in admiralty, in rem, and the law regulating proceedings in admiralty shall govern in all such suits; and in all cases of contracts or service not maritime by a civil action in any district court of this territory."

In this connection the following propositions may be considered as settled:

1. That by the maritime law, as administered in England and in this country, a lien is given for necessities furnished a foreign vessel upon the credit of such vessel (The General Smith, 4 Wheat. 438, 4 L. ed. 609; The Grapeshot, 9 Wall. 129, sub nom. The Grapeshot v. Wallerstein, 19 L. ed. 651; Gen. Admiralty Rule 12); and that in this particular the several states of this Union are treated as foreign to each other. The General Smith, 4 Wheat. 438, 4 L. ed. 609; The Kalorama, 10 Wall. 204, 212, sub nom. Pendergast v. The Kalorama, 19 L. ed. 943.

2. That no such lien is given for necessities furnished in the home port of the vessel or in the port in which the vessel is owned, registered, enrolled, or licensed, and the remedy in such *case, though enforceable [194] in the admiralty, is in personam only. The Lottawanna, 21 Wall. 558, sub nom. Rodd v. Heartt, 22 L. ed. 654; The Edith, 94 U. S. 518, sub nom. Poole v. Tyler, 24 L. ed. 167. This is a distinct departure from the Continental system, which makes no account of the domicile of the vessel, and is a relic of the prohibitions of Westminster Hall against the court of admiralty, to the principle of which this court has steadily adhered.

3. That it is competent for the states to create liens for necessities furnished to domestic vessels, and that such liens will be enforced by the courts of admiralty under their general jurisdiction over the subject of necessities. The General Smith, 4 Wheat. 438, 4 L. ed. 609; Peyroux v. Howard, 7 Pet. 324, 8 L. ed. 700; The St. Lawrence, 1 Black, 522, sub nom. Meyer v. Tupper, 17 L. ed. 180; The Lottawanna, 21 Wall. 558, sub nom. Rodd v. Heartt, 22 L. ed. 654; The Belfast, 7 Wall. 624, sub nom. The Belfast v. Boon, 19 L. ed. 266; The J. E. Rumbell, 148 U. S. 1, 12, 37 L. ed. 345, 347, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 498. The right to extend these liens to foreign vessels in any case is open to grave doubt. The Chusan, 2 Story, 455, Fed. Cas. No. 2,717; The Lyndhurst, 48 Fed. 839.

The question involved in this case, however, is whether the states may create such liens as against foreign vessels (vessels owned in other states or countries), and under such circumstances as would not authorize a lien under the general maritime law. The question is one of very considerable importance, as it involves the power of each state, which a vessel may visit in the course of a long voyage, to impose liens under wholly different circumstances and upon wholly different conditions. In the case under consideration the vessel was owned by an Illinois corporation, enjoying a high credit, and maintaining agencies at Seattle and at other places in Alaska and Canada. The Roanoke was an ocean-going vessel, registered at Chicago under the navigation laws of the United States, with the name "Chicago" painted on her stern, although she was engaged in trade upon the Pacific coast between Seattle and the mouth of the Yukon in summer, and between San Francisco and southern ports in winter. Neither the owner nor master nor other officers of the vessel had given an order for the material and labor set forth in the libel, which were furnished upon the order of a contractor, who, before the filing of the libel and without any knowledge by the owner of these unpaid claims, had been paid in full for these claims.

Although this court has never directly decided whether materials and labor furnished by workmen or subcontractors constitute a lien upon a vessel,—in other words, whether the contractor can be regarded as an agent of the vessel in the purchase of such labor and materials,—there is a general consensus of opinion in the state courts and in the inferior Federal courts that labor and materials furnished to a contractor do not constitute a lien upon the vessel, unless at least notice be given to the owner of such claim before the contractor has received the sum stipulated by his contract. Smith v. The Eastern Railroad, 1 Curt. C. C. 253, Fed. Cas. No. 13,039; Southwick v. The Clyde, 6 Blackf. 148; Hubbell v. Denison, 20 Wend. 181; Burst v. Jackson, 10 Barb. 219; The Whitaker, 1 Sprague, 229, 282, Fed. Cas. Nos. 17,524, 17,525; Harper v. The New Brig, Gilpin, 536, Fed. Cas. No. 6,090; Ames v. Swett, 33 Me. 479; Squire v. 100 Tons of Iron, 2 189 U. S.

Ben. 21, Fed. Cas. No. 13,270; The Marquette, Brown, Adm. 354, Fed. Cas. No. 9,101.

The injustice of permitting such claims to be set up is plainly apparent. The master is the agent of the vessel and its owner in more than the ordinary sense. During the voyage he is in fact the alter ego of his principal. He is intrusted with an uncontrolled authority to provide for the crew, and for the preservation and repair of the ship. He engages the cargoes, receives the freight, hires and pays his crew, and is intrusted, perhaps for years, with the command and disposition of the vessel. With full authority to bind the vessel, his position is such that it is almost impossible for him to acquaint himself with the laws of each individual state he may visit, and he has a right to suppose that the general maritime law applies to him and his ship, wherever she may go, unhampered by laws which are mainly intended for local application, or for domestic vessels. Local laws, such as the one under consideration, ordinarily protect the ship by requiring notice of the claim to be filed in some public office, limiting the time to a few weeks or months within which the laborer or subcontractor may proceed against her, requiring notice to be given of the claim, before the contractor himself has been paid, and limiting his recovery *to the amount remaining unpaid at the time such notice is received. The statute of Washington, however, provides for an absolute lien upon the ship for work done or material furnished at the request of the contractor or subcontractor, and makes no provision for the protection of the owner in case the contractor has been paid the full amount of his bill before notice of the claim of the subcontractor is received. The finding in this case is that the contractor, who had agreed, in consonance with the usual course of business, to make the repairs upon this vessel, had been paid in full by the claimant. The injustice of holding the ship under the circumstances is plainly manifest.

Not only is the statute in question obnoxious to the general maritime law in declaring every contractor and subcontractor an agent of the owner, but it establishes a new order of priority in payment of liens, abolishes the ancient and equitable rule regarding "stale claims," and permits the assertion of a lien at any time within three years, regardless of the fact that the vessel may have been sold to a bona fide purchaser, not only without notice of the claim, but without the possibility of informing himself by a resort to the public records. It also gives, or at least creates the presumption of, a lien, though the materials be furnished upon the order of the owner in person.

No opinion upon this subject can afford to ignore the admirable discussion of Mr. Justice Story in the case of The Chusan, 2 Story, 455, Fed. Cas. No. 2,717, in which he refused to apply to a Massachusetts vessel a law of the state of New York, requiring a lien for supplies to be enforced before the vessel left the state:

"This statute is, as I conceive, perfectly constitutional, as applied to cases of repairs of domestic ships, that is, of ships belonging to the ports of that state. . . . But in cases of foreign ships and supplies furnished to them the jurisdiction of the courts of the United States is governed by the Constitution and laws of the United States, and is in no sense governed, controlled, or limited by the local legislation. . . . For myself, I can only say that during the whole of my judicial life I have never up to the present hour heard a single doubt breathed upon the subject." To the same effect is The Lyndhurst, 48 Fed. 839.

[197] *While no case involving this precise question seems to have arisen in this court, we have several times had occasion to hold that where Congress has dealt with a subject within its exclusive power, or where such exclusive power is given to the Federal courts, as in cases of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction, it is not competent for states to invade that domain of legislation, and enact laws which in any way trench upon the power of the Federal government. Cases arising in other branches of the law furnish apt analogies. The principle is stated in a nutshell by Chief Justice Marshall in Sturges v. Crowninshield, 4 Wheat. 122, 193, 4 L. ed. 529, 548: "But it has never been supposed that this concurrent power of legislation extended to every possible case in which its exercise by the states has not been expressly prohibited. The confusion resulting from such a practice would be endless. . . . That whenever the terms in which a power is granted to Congress, or the nature of the power, required that it should be exercised exclusively by Congress, the subject is as completely taken from the state legislatures as if they had been expressly forbidden to act on it." This was said of a bankrupt law of New York which assumed to discharge the debtor from all liability for debts previously contracted, notwithstanding the Constitution had vested the power in Congress of establishing uniform laws on the subject of bankruptcy. It was held that the states had a right to pass bankrupt laws until the power had been acted upon by Congress, though the law of New York discharging the debtor from liability was held to be void as impairing the obligation of prior contracts within the meaning of the Constitution.

In Hall v. DeGuir, 95 U. S. 485, 498, 24 L. ed. 547, 551, it was said that, inasmuch as interstate commerce is regulated very largely by congressional legislation, it followed that such legislation must supersede all state legislation upon the same subject, and, by necessary implication, prohibit it, except in cases where the legislation of Congress manifests an intention to leave some particular matter to be regulated by the several states, as, for instance, in the case of pilotage. Cooley v. Philadelphia Port Wardens, 12 How. 299, 13 L. ed. 996. Upon this principle it was held that a law of Louisiana excluding colored passengers from the cabin set apart for the use of whites during the passage of steamboats down the Mississippi, was a regulation of interstate commerce, and therefore unconstitutional. To the same effect is Sinnot v. Davenport, 22 How. 227, 16 L. ed. 243. In the subsequent cases of Louisville, N. O. & T. R. Co. v. Mississippi, 133 U. S. 587, 33 L. ed. 784, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 801, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 348, and Plessy v. Ferguson, 163 U. S. 537, 41 L. ed. 256, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1138, state laws requiring separate railway carriages for the white and colored races were sustained upon the ground that they applied only between places in the same state.

In the very recent case of Easton v. Iowa, 188 U. S. 220, ante, 452, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 288, it was held that a state law punishing presidents of banks receiving deposits of money at a time when the bank was insolvent, and when such insolvency was known to them, was unconstitutional as applied to national banks whose operations were governed exclusively by acts of Congress. Said Mr. Justice Shiras: "But we are unable to perceive that Congress intended to leave the field open for the states to attempt to promote the welfare and stability of national banks by direct legislation. If they had such power it would have to be exercised and limited by their own discretion, and confusion would necessarily result from control, possessed and exercised by two independent authorities." See also Farmers' & M. Nat. Bank v. Dearing, 91 U. S. 29, 23 L. ed. 196; M'Culloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheat. 425, 4 L. ed. 606.

The following cases are also to the same general effect: Degant v. Michael, 2 Ind. 396; State v. Pike, 15 N. H. 83; Lynch v. Clarke, 1 Sandf. Ch. 583, 644; Jack v. Martin, 12 Wend. 311; Ex parte Hill, 38 Ala. 429, 450; People v. Fonda, 62 Mich. 401, 29 N. W. 26. Although it is equally true that where Congress, having the power, has exercised it but incidentally, and obviously with no intention of covering the subject, the states may supplement its legislation by regulations of their own not inconsistent with it. Reid v. Colorado, 187 U. S. 137, ante, 108, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 92.

Bearing in mind that exclusive jurisdiction of all admiralty and maritime cases is vested by the Constitution in the Federal courts, which are thereby made judges of the scope of such jurisdiction, subject, of course, to congressional legislation, the statute of the state of Washington, in so far as it attempts to control the administration of the maritime law by creating and superadding conditions for the benefit of a particular class of creditors, and thereby depriving the owners of vessels of defenses to which they would otherwise have been entitled, is an unlawful interference with that jurisdiction, and to that extent is unconstitutional and void.

The decree of the District Court is therefore reversed, and the case remanded to that court with directions to dismiss the libels.
189 U. S.

Mr. Justice Harlan concurred in the result.

UNITED STATES, Appt.,
v.
EVETT D. NIX. (No. 142)

EVETT D. NIX, Appt.,
v.
UNITED STATES. (No. 195)

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 199-206.)

Marshals—mileage fees—per diem fee—approval of account by court—statutes—repeal—special and general acts—evidence—escape of prisoner—presumption of negligence.

1. A United States marshal is not entitled to mileage for the distance traveled in serving warrants of arrest, in excess of the usually traveled route between the place of receiving the writs and the place of service, however great the necessity of pursuing a circuitous route, in view of U. S. Rev. Stat. § 829 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 636), which directs such mileage to be computed "from the place where the process is returned to the place of service."
2. The per diem fee for the attendance of a United States marshal at a court which has been opened for business by order of the judge is allowable, although business may not have been transacted in court on such day, and the judge may not have been present.
3. The special provision of 26 Stat. at L. 81, chap. 182, § 10, that persons charged with any offense against the territory of Oklahoma shall in all cases be taken before the United States commissioner whose office is nearest to the place where the offense was committed, was not repealed by the general provisions of the sundry civil appropriation bill of August 18, 1894 (28 Stat. at L. 372, chap. 301), that marshals shall take arrested persons before the commissioner nearest the place of arrest, or shall be entitled to no mileage therefor.
4. The allowance by the district judge of the account of a United States marshal is prima facie evidence of the correctness of the mileage items of such account.
5. The expense of transporting a prisoner under a warrant of commitment cannot be allowed a United States marshal, where such prisoner escaped from the custody of his deputy before he could be delivered to the penitentiary, and there is no finding of due diligence on the part of the officer to prevent the escape.
6. A prisoner who escapes from the custody of a deputy marshal while going to supper in a hotel will be presumed to have escaped through the officer's negligence.

[Nos. 142, 195.]

Submitted December 18, 1902. Decided March 2, 1903.

ON APPEALS from the Court of Claims to review a judgment in favor of a
189 U. S.

United States marshal for a portion of the fees claimed by him in his petition. Reversed and remanded for further proceedings.

See same case below, 36 Ct. Cl. 598.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brown:

This is a petition for marshal's fees for the district of Oklahoma, upon which the court of claims made the findings of fact set forth in the margin.†

†I. The claimant, Evett D. Nix, was United States marshal for the district of Oklahoma from July 1, 1893, to February 24, 1896, appointed, qualified, and acting.

II. During said period the claimant, as such marshal, by his deputies, performed services and travel and incurred expenses in behalf of the United States, and his accounts therefor, verified by his oath and approved by the court in accordance with the law, were finally acted upon by the accounting officers of the Treasury Department, and part thereof was allowed and paid, but a part thereof, as more specifically set forth in finding 3, was disallowed, and no portion thereof has been paid to the claimant.

III. Item 2. To travel, 1,153 miles in going to serve warrants of arrest, at 6 cents per mile, $69.18, being for travel in excess of the distance from the place of arrest to the place of receiving writs. The travel charged for was in a new and unsettled Indian country, without postoffices, post routes, or section lines. The defendants were moving about from place to place to avoid arrest, and it was necessary to travel a circuitous route. The deputies had to find fordable places to cross the river to locate the defendants, there being no bridges. After arrest the defendants were taken by the most direct routes to commissioners for examination.

Item 10. For attendance of the marshal at court, by deputy, for twenty days, at $5 per day, $100.00.

It does not appear whether business was transacted in the court on said days, although the court was opened for business by order of the judge. It does not appear that the judge was present at court on any of these days.

Item 12. This item was charged in claimant's accounts as transportation of prisoners, deputies, and guards from the several places of arrest, for hearing before the United States commissioners whose offices were nearest the places where the crimes for which the prisoners were arrested were committed. The number of miles charged in claimant's accounts for this travel was 51,355 miles, at 10 cents a mile, amounting to $5,135.50.

Those accounts were submitted to the United States district court for Oklahoma under the provisions of the act of February 22, 1875 (18 Stat. at L. chap. 95, 333), and the said accounts, including this item, as above charged, were approved by that court. When the accounts so approved were submitted to the accounting officers, all the charges for travel included in that item were disallowed by them under the provisions of the sundry civil appropriation act of August 18, 1894 (28 Stat. at L. 372-416 chap. 301, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 717), which made it the duty of the marshal to take the defendant before the nearest circuit court commissioner or the nearest judicial officer having jurisdiction under existing laws, for a hearing, commitment, or taking bail for trial. Subsequently the accounting officers allowed and paid claimant of this item $27.

After suit was brought in this court, the

Mr. Felix Brannigan and Assistant Attorney General Pradt submitted the causes for the United States.

Messrs. Franklin H. Mackey and Frank B. Crosthwaite, submitted the cause for Nix:

The approval of the marshal's accounts is prima facie evidence of its correctness, and, in the absence of clear and unequivocal proof to the contrary, it should be conclusive.

United States v. Jones, 134 U. S. 483, 488, 33 L. ed. 1007, 1008, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 615; United States v. Poinier, 140 U. S. 163, 35 L. ed. 395, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 752; United States v. Barber, 140 U. S. 179, 35 L. ed. 399, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 751; United States v. Harmon, 147 U. S. 268, 37 L. ed. 164, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 327.

Specific and general statutory provisions may subsist together, the former qualifying the latter.

Magone v. King, 2 C. C. A. 363, 1 U. S. App. 267, 51 Fed. 525, 526; State ex rel. Fosdick v. Perrysburg, 14 Ohio St. 480; Churchill v. Crease, 5 Bing. 177; State v. Clarke, 25 N. J. L. 54. See also State, Bartlett, Prosecutor, v. Trenton, 38 N. J. L. 64, to same effect; Noy, Maxims; Townsend v. Little, 109 U. S. 504, 27 L. ed. 1012, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 357; London, C. & D. R. Co. v. Wandsworth Dist. Bd. of Works, L. R. 8 C. P. 185; Bishop, Written Laws, § 112a.

Mr. Justice Brown delivered the opinion of the court:

Item 2 of the third finding, namely, [201] "traveling 1,153 miles* in going to serve warclaimant's deposition was taken in respect to this item, and he proved that, of his own knowledge, 11,433 miles were traveled in the transportation of said prisoners, deputies, and guards. As to the remainder of the travel, he could not testify of his own knowledge, because that travel had been performed by certain of his deputies who were not then in the territory, and who, he supposed, were in Alaska or the Philippine Islands. The depositions of those deputies were not taken. No other evidence was offered by the claimant to establish the number of miles actually traveled than the approval of the district court for Oklahoma and his own deposition subsequently taken, as above stated. If the approval of his account by said district court is competent evidence to establish the number of miles actually traveled, this court finds the ultimate fact that he traveled 51,355 miles. If such approval of the district court is incompetent to establish the number of miles actually traveled, this court finds that the number of miles so traveled was 11,433 in the transportation of prisoners, deputies, and guards, as before set forth.

Item 16. For service of a capias and transportation (mileage) of a deputy, prisoner, and guard. The capias was issued by the clerk of the United States district court at Topeka, Kansas, on an indictment found by the grand jury at Topeka. The capias was received by the claimant in Oklahoma city and was executed by arresting the prisoner named in the capias, who was transported to the United States district court at Wichita, Kansas.

The claimant charged 6 cents a mile for going 62 miles, from Oklahoma city to Perry, to rants of arrest, at 6 cents per mile, $69.18," involves the question whether travel in excess of the distance from the place of service to the place of receiving the writs can be allowed, in view of the fee bill for marshals. Rev. Stat. § 829 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 636), provides "for travel, in going only, to serve any process, warrant, attachment, or other writ, including writs of subpœna in civil or criminal cases, 6 cents a mile, to be computed, from the place where the process is returned to the place of service." This has always been interpreted to mean by the usual traveled route (Hitch v. United States, 66 Fed. 937), the length of which is not given in the finding. The excuse for not pursuing the route in this case is that it was a new and unsettled Indian country; that defendants were moving about from place to place to avoid arrest, and it was necessary to travel a circuitous route; and that, in the absence of bridges, the deputies had to find fordable places to cross the river to locate the defendants.

*However equitable the charge may have [202] been in this particular case, there is no authority of law for its allowance. There is, however, a special provision in the last clause of § 829 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 636) by which "in all cases where mileage is allowed to the marshal he may elect to receive the same or his actual traveling expenses, to be proved on his oath to the satisfaction of the court." This seems to contemplate the very contingency which arose in this case, of a number of miles actually and necessarily traveled in excess of the direct route from the place where the process serve the writ, $2 for the service of the writ, and 10 cents per mile each for the deputy, prisoner, and guard for 111 miles, $33.30, from Perry, Oklahoma, to Wichita, Kansas, and one meal for the prisoner, 75 cents, making a total of $39.77.

Item 24. For actual expenses for transporting a prisoner from Springfield, Ohio, to the penitentiary at Brooklyn, New York, under a warrant of commitment. The warrant of commitment was issued at Oklahoma, and the marshal transported the prisoner on that warrant to Springfield, Ohio, where the prisoner was temporarily detained as a witness for the United States in a counterfeiting case. The prisoner having been discharged as a witness in that case at Springfield, the marshal continued his transportation from Springfield to New York city on the original warrant of commitment. The prisoner, with a deputy and guard, arrived in New York city too late for the prisoner to be received at the Brooklyn penitentiary on the day of arrival in New York, and he escaped from the custody of the deputy on the night of the same day while they were going to supper in the hotel where they were stopping. The marshal made every effort to retake the prisoner, and failed. $90.50.

Conclusion of Law.

Upon the foregoing findings of fact the court decides, as a conclusion of law, that the claimant recover judgment of and from the United States in the sum of one hundred and eight dollars and ninety-five cents ($108.95) on items 2 and 16 of finding 3.

All other items disallowed.

was returned to the place of service. It reimburses the marshal his expenses, but denies him a profit upon them. This item must be disallowed.

[203] (2) Item 10. "For attendance of the marshal at court by deputy, 20 days at $5 per day, $100." The fact that it did not appear whether business was transacted in court on these days, or whether the judge was present in court, was immaterial, in *view of the fact that the court was opened for business by order of the judge. United States v. Finnell, 185 U. S. 236, 46 L. ed. 890, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 633; McMullen v. United States, 146 U. S. 360, 36 L. ed. 1007, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 127. For aught that appears, the attendance may have been under the circumstances in which a similar charge was allowed in United States v. Pitman, 147 U. S. 669, 37 L. ed. 324, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 425. Where the court is opened for business by order of the judge, it is the duty of the marshal to attend, and there is no reason why he should not receive his per diem therefor as if the judge were actually present. This claim is not contested by the government, and should be allowed.

(3) Item 12, for the transportation of prisoners arrested under warrants issued by United States commissioners, involves two questions: First, whether travel should have been charged from the place of arrest to the nearest circuit court commissioner, or to the office of the commissioner nearest to the place where the crimes were committed; second, whether, assuming the position of the claimant in this particular to be correct, as matter of law, there was sufficient evidence of the number of miles traveled to entitle him to the charge of $5,135.50.

[204] By "An Act to Provide a Temporary Government for the Territory of Oklahoma" (26 Stat. at L. 81, chap. 182), a certain portion of the Indian territory was set off as a territorial government under the *name of Oklahoma. By § 9 the judicial power of the territory was vested in certain courts, and the usual executive and judicial offices created. By § 10, "persons charged with any offense or crime in the territory of Oklahoma, and for whose arrest a warrant has been issued, may be arrested by the United States marshal or any of his deputies, wherever found in said territory, but in all cases the accused shall be taken, for preliminary examination, before a United States commissioner, or a justice of the peace of the county, whose office is nearest to the place where the offense or crime was committed. All offenses committed in said territory, if committed within any organized county, shall be prosecuted and tried within said county." By § 28, "the Constitution and all the laws of the United States not locally inapplicable shall, except so far as modified by this act, have the same force and effect as elsewhere within the United States."

This is the act upon which the claimant relies for his right to travel, while, upon the other hand, the government contends that this act was repealed by a general act of August 18, 1894 (28 Stat. at L. 372, chap. 301), making appropriations for sundry civil expenses for the year 1895, one of the clauses of which, under the head of "Judicial," provides that "it shall be the duty of the marshal, his deputy or other officer, who may arrest a person charged with any crime or offense, to take the defendant before the nearest circuit court commissioner, or the nearest judicial officer, having jurisdiction under existing laws, for a hearing, commitment, or taking bail for trial; and the officer or magistrate issuing the warrant shall attach thereto a certified copy of the complaint, . . . and no mileage shall be allowed any officer violating the provisions hereof."

The object of this statute was manifestly to amend Rev. Stat. § 829, which provided that the mileage of the marshal for transportation of prisoners should be computed from the place where the process was served to the place where it was returned. This statute provides that he shall be taken to the circuit court commissioner nearest the place of arrest, regardless of the fact by whom the warrant was issued. Inasmuch as the later act is a general one, applicable to marshals generally throughout *the coun- [205] try, we do not think it was intended to repeal or interfere with the former act, providing specially for persons charged with any offense or crime in the territory of Oklahoma, and that in all cases, whether the crime was committed against the territory or the general government, the accused shall be taken before a commissioner whose office is nearest to the place where the offense or crime was committed.

The rule of statutory construction is well settled that a general act is not to be construed as applying to cases covered by a prior special act upon the same subject. On this principle we held in Townsend v. Little, 109 U. S. 504, 27 L. ed. 1012, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 357, that special and general statutory provisions may subsist together, the former qualifying the latter. See also Churchill v. Crease, 5 Bing. 177; Magone v. King, 2 C. C. A. 383, 1 U. S. App. 267, 51 Fed. 525, and cases cited; State v. Clarke, 25 N. J. L. 54.

It would seem that this construction works no particular hardship upon the government, since in all cases where the criminal is unable to give bail he is required to be ultimately transported for trial to the county wherein the crime was committed.

The second question connected with this item is whether the marshal produced sufficient evidence of the number of miles traveled. His claim was for 51,350 miles at 10 cents per mile. He was unable to prove, of his own knowledge, more than 11,433 miles. As to the remainder he could not testify of his own knowledge, because that travel had been performed by certain of his deputies who were not then in the territory, and who, he supposed, were in Alaska or the Philippine islands. The depositions of those deputies were not taken. He showed, however, that his accounts had been allowed by the district judge. That was sufficient to cast upon the government the burden of showing any error of fact in his account. United States v. Jones, 134 U. S. 483, 33 L. ed. 1007, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 615. In that case we held that the approval of the commissioner's account by a circuit court of the United States, under the act of February 22, 1875 (18 Stat. at L. 333, chap. 95), was prima facie evidence of the correctness of the items of that account, and, in the absence of clear and unquestionable proof of mistake on the part of the court, it should be conclusive. We adhere to that view. It would be an insupportable burden upon the officers of courts if, every time a question was made before the accounting officers of the Treasury of the correctness of their account, they were required to produce affirmative evidence of every item. This was evidently not contemplated by the statute. Notwithstanding this, however, there is no doubt that the account may be impeached for error of law. McMullen v. United States, 146 U. S. 360, 36 L. ed. 1007, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 127. This item should have been allowed in full, less the amount paid.

(4) Item 24, for actual expenses in transporting a prisoner from Springfield, Ohio, to the penitentiary at Brooklyn, New York, under a warrant or commitment, is the only other one contested. The prisoner with a deputy and guard arrived in New York too late for the prisoner to be received at the Brooklyn penitentiary on the same day, and that night he escaped from the custody of the deputy while they were going to supper in the hotel where they were staying.

As there is no finding, either by the district judge in approving his accounts or by the court of claims, of due diligence on the part of the officer to prevent the escape, the item was properly disallowed. The presumption is that he escaped by negligence. State v. Hunter, 94 N. C. 829; State v. Lewis, 113 N. C. 622, 18 S. E. 69; Shattuck v. State, 51 Miss. 575.

The judgment of the Court of Claims will therefore be reversed, and the case remanded to that court for further proceedings in conformity with this opinion.

207] *DAVIS & FARNUM MANUFACTURING COMPANY, Appt.,

v.

CITY OF LOS ANGELES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 207-221.)

Appeal—direct appeal from circuit court—equity—injunction against criminal proceedings—adequate remedy at law.

1. An appeal lies directly to the Supreme Court

NOTE.—On direct review in the Supreme Court of the United States of circuit and district court judgments—see note to Gwin v. United States, 46 L. ed. U. S. 741.

On the jurisdiction of equity where remedy of the United States from a decree of a circuit court dismissing a bill which is based, not only upon diversity of citizenship, but upon the alleged unconstitutionality of certain municipal ordinances as impairing the obligation of a contract with the municipality under prior ordinances.

2. The absence of an adequate remedy at law cannot be urged by a subcontractor who has contracted to erect gas works on certain premises, as a ground for injunctive relief to prevent the enforcement, by criminal proceedings against his employees, of municipal ordinances prohibiting the erection or maintenance of such structures within certain limits, which are alleged to infringe the obligation of the contract of the owner of the land with the municipality under prior ordinances, since his remedy, if any, is by action against the principal contractor, who is presumed to be able to respond in damages for all such which the subcontractor may have suffered by the interruption of the contract.

[No. 507.]

Submitted January 12, 1903. Decided March 2, 1903.

ON APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of California to review a decree which dismissed a bill to enjoin the enforcement of certain municipal ordinances alleged to impair the obligation of a contract with the municipality under prior ordinances. Affirmed.

See same case below on motion for preliminary injunction, 115 Fed. 537.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brown:

This was a bill in equity filed in the circuit court for the southern district of California by appellant, a citizen of Massachusetts, to restrain the city of Los Angeles and its officers from enforcing certain municipal ordinances prohibiting the erection or maintenance of gas tanks or reservoirs within certain portions of the city.

The gravamen of the bill was that on September 1, 1901, Caroline W. Dobbins made a contract with the Valley Gas & Fuel Company, a California corporation, to build certain gas works for her, including all things necessary for the manufacture, *recovery, [208] and storage of gas, on lands thereafter to be designated; that on September 17 the appellant made a contract with the gas and fuel company to erect upon Mrs. Dobbins's premises a water tank and gas holder having a capacity of 100,000 cubic feet of gas, and that immediately thereafter it constructed and prepared the material and machinery necessary for the erection of the tank and gas holder, and shipped the same to Los Angeles; that on September 28 Mrs. Dobbins purchased certain lands in Los Angeles, which were within the limits wherein it was lawful to erect gas works as described in a municipal ordinance adopted August 26, 1901, and on November 1 applied to the board of fire commissioners for a permit to erect such gas works; that on November 22 her petition came on for hearing before the fire commissioners, and after proof had been made that all provisions of prior ordinances had been complied with, the matter was duly considered, and finally resulted, November 29, in a vote to grant a permit to erect and maintain the gas works.

at law exists—see notes to Meldrum v. Meldrum (Colo.) 11 L. R. A. 65; Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. v. Central Stock Yards & Transit Co. (N. J. Eq.) 6 L. R. A. 835; and Tyler v. Savage, 36 L. ed. U. S. 83.

That upon the 22d day of November Mrs. Dobbins's contractors began at once to lay the foundation for said works at a cost of upwards of $2,500, when, on November 25, the city adopted an ordinance, amending that of August 26, 1901, including her property in the prohibited territory for the erection or maintenance of gas works (which ordinance, however, seems to have proved defective), and subsequently, in February, 1902, caused certain of the employees of the gas and fuel company to be arrested, charging them with a violation of this ordinance. Subsequently, under new proceedings, certain employees of the plaintiff were arrested and the work stopped.

Another ordinance was passed on March 3, 1902, also amending that of August 26, 1901, and other arrests were made of the employees for a violation of this ordinance. It was averred that the gas works are in an uncompleted condition, exposed to the elements and in danger of being destroyed, and that all of the aforesaid ordinances were adopted by the common council at the instigation of the Los Angeles Light Company, which has enjoyed a monopoly of the gas business for the last ten years.

[209] *A demurrer was filed to this bill by the city for want of equity and of jurisdiction, which was sustained by the court, and the bill dismissed (115 Fed. 537), apparently upon the ground that a court of chancery has no power to restrain criminal proceedings, unless they are instituted by a party to a suit already pending before it, and to try the same right that is in issue there. Whereupon an appeal was taken to this court.

Messrs. Lynn Helm and Henry T. Helm submitted the cause for appellant. Messrs. Edward C. Bailey, Henry T. Lee, and J. R. Scott were with them on the brief:

This court having jurisdiction of this case for the purpose of determining whether the ordinances are in contravention of the Constitution of the United States, there exists the power in this court to consider all other questions arising on the record.

Horner v. United States, 143 U. S. 570, 36 L. ed. 266, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 522; Chappell v. United States, 160 U. S. 499, 40 L. ed. 510, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 397; Loeb v. Columbia Trp. 179 U. S. 472, 478, 45 L. ed. 280, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 174; Penn Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Austin, 168 U. S. 685, 695, 42 L. ed. 626, 630, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 223.

A court of equity has power to restrain by injunction a municipality from instituting criminal proceedings, when such criminal prosecutions are threatened under color of an invalid ordinance, for the purpose of compelling the relinquishment of a property right.
189 U. S.

Central Trust Co. v. Citizens' Street R. Co. 80 Fed. 225, 82 Fed. 1; Reagan v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 154 U. S. 362, 38 L. ed. 1014, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 560, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1047; Southern Exp. Co. v. Ensley, 116 Fed. 756; Louisiana State Lottery Co. v. Fitzpatrick, 3 Woods, 222, Fed. Cas. No. 8,541; Springhead Spinning Co. v. Riley, L. R. 6 Eq. 558; Osborn v. Bank of United States, 9 Wheat. 738, 6 L. ed. 204; Wood v. Brooklyn, 14 Barb. 425; Manhattan Iron Works Co. v. French, 12 Abb. N. C. 446; Rushville v. Rushville Natural Gas Co. 132 Ind. 575, 15 L. R. A. 321, 28 N. E. 853; Davis v. Fasig, 128 Ind. 271, 27 N. E. 726; Platte & D. Canal & Mill. Co. v. Lee, 2 Colo. App. 184, 29 Pac. 1036; Smith v. Bangs, 15 Ill. 399; Baltimore v. Radeeke, 49 Md. 218, 33 Am. Rep. 239; Cape May & S. L. R. Co. v. Cape May, 35 N. J. Eq. 419; Los Angeles City Water Co. v. Los Angeles, 103 Fed. 711; Atlanta v. Gate City Gaslight Co. 71 Ga. 106; Austin v. Austin City Cemetery Asso. 87 Tex. 330, 28 S. W. 528; Port of Mobile v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 84 Ala. 115, 4 So. 106; Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 466, 517, 42 L. ed. 819, 838, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; Detroit v. Detroit Citizens' Street R. Co. 184 U. S. 368, 378, 46 L. ed. 592, 600, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 410; Vicksburg Waterworks Co. v. Vicksburg, 185 U. S. 65, 82, 46 L. ed. 808, 815, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585.

The plaintiff has no remedy against the defendant for damages for the wrongful arrest of its employees, or for the destruction of its business and property rights.

Stedman v. San Francisco, 63 Cal. 193; Chope v. Eureka, 78 Cal. 588, 4 L. R. A. 325, 21 Pac. 364; Doeg v. Cook, 126 Cal. 213, 58 Pac. 707.

It is not enough that the plaintiff has a remedy at law. It must be as efficient and as prompt in its administration as the remedy in equity.

Boyce v. Grundy, 3 Pet. 210, 7 L. ed. 655; Walla Walla v. Walla Walla Water Co. 172 U. S. 1, 12, 43 L. ed. 341, 346, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77; Phoenix Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Bailey, 13 Wall. 616, 621, 20 L. ed. 501, 503; Kilbourn v. Sunderland, 130 U. S. 505, 514, 32 L. ed. 1005, 1008, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594; Tyler v. Savage, 143 U. S. 79, 95, 36 L. ed. 82, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 340; 2 Story, Eq. Jur. § 928.

A court of equity will entertain a bill in the nature of a bill of peace to restrain the enforcement of void city ordinances, where numerous prosecutions are threatened or instituted thereunder, causing irreparable damage.

Hutchinson v. Beckham, 55 C. C. A. 333, 118 Fed. 399.

A court of equity may by injunction restrain the enforcement of a municipal ordinance, provided a proper showing be made to warrant the extraordinary relief.

21 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. 998.

Another distinction is made between the power of a court of equity to enjoin the enforcement of criminal statutes adopted by the legislature, and the power to enjoin the enforcement of municipal ordinances.

Sylvester Coal Co. v. St. Louis, 130 Mo. 323, 32 S. W. 649; Southern Exp. Co. v. Ensley, 116 Fed. 756.

Mr. Albert H. Crutcher submitted the cause for appellee. Messrs. W. B. Matheus, Le Compte Davis, and J. R. Rush were with him on the brief:

A court of equity has no power to interfere with the enforcement of criminal laws.

Re Sawyer, 124 U. S. 200-225, 31 L. ed. 402-410, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 482; Suess v. Noble, 31 Fed. 855; Hemsley v. Myers, 45 Fed. 286; Fitts v. McGhee, 172 U. S. 528, 43 L. ed. 541, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 269; Minneapolis Brewing Co. v. McGillivray, 104 Fed. 259.

A bill in equity will not lie to restrain prosecutions under a municipal ordinance, upon the mere ground of its alleged invalidity.

Denver v. Beede, 25 Colo. 172, 54 Pac. 624; St. Peter's Episcopal Church v. Washington, 109 N. C. 21, 13 S. E. 700; State ex rel. Kenamore v. Wood, 155 Mo. 425, 48 L. R. A. 425, 56 S. W. 477; Crichton v. Dahmer, 70 Miss. 602, 21 L. R. A. 84, 13 So. 237; Wolfe v. Burke, 56 N. Y. 115; Wallack v. Society for Reformation of Juvenile Delinquents, 67 N. Y. 28; West v. New York, 10 Paige, 539; Bainbridge v. Reynolds, 111 Ga. 758, 36 S. E. 935; Moultrie v. Patterson, 109 Ga. 370, 34 S. E. 600.

Mr. Justice Brown delivered the opinion of the court:

As the bill in this case is based, not only upon diversity of citizenship, but upon the alleged unconstitutionality of the municipal ordinances of November 25, 1901, and March 3, 1902, as impairing the obligation of Mrs. Dobbins's contract with the city under prior ordinances, an appeal lies directly to this court, and upon such appeal the whole case is opened for consideration. Horner v. United States, 143 U. S. 570, 36 L. ed. 266, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 522; Chappell v. United States, 160 U. S. 499, 40 L. ed. 510, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 397. The state having delegated certain powers to the city, the ordinances of the municipal authorities in this particular are the acts of the state through one of its properly constituted instrumentalities, and their unconstitutionality is the unconstitutionality of a state law [217] within the *meaning of § 5 of the circuit court of appeals act. [26 Stat. at L. 827, chap. 517, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 549.] City R. Co. v. Citizens' Street R. Co. 166 U. S. 557, 41 L. ed. 1114, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 653; Penn Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Austin, 168 U. S. 685, 694, 42 L. ed. 626, 630, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 223; St. Paul Gaslight Co. v. St. Paul, 181 U. S. 142, 148, 45 L. ed. 788, 791, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 575.

2. The court below did not pass upon the validity of these ordinances, but came to the conclusion that a bill in equity would not lie to restrain their enforcement, and in this aspect we shall discuss the case. As the only method employed for the enforcement of these ordinances was by criminal proceedings, it follows that the prayer of the bill to enjoin the city from enforcing these ordinances, or prevent plaintiff from carrying out its work, must be construed as demanding the discontinuance of such criminal proceedings as were already pending, and inhibiting the institution of others of a similar character.

That a court of equity has no general power to enjoin or stay criminal proceedings unless they are instituted by a party to a suit already pending before it, and to try the same right that is in issue there, or to prohibit the invasion of the rights of property by the enforcement of an unconstitutional law, was so fully considered and settled in an elaborate opinion by Mr. Justice Gray, in Re Sawyer, 124 U. S. 200, 31 L. ed. 402, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 482, that no further reference to prior authorities is deemed necessary, and we have little more to do than to consider whether there is anything exceptional in the case under consideration to take it out of the general rule. The plaintiff in the case of Sawyer sought to restrain the mayor and committee of a city in Nebraska from removing a city officer under charges filed against him for malfeasance in office. This was held to fall within the general rule, and not within the exception.

The general rule that a circuit court of the United States sitting as a court of equity cannot stay by injunction proceedings pending in a state court to enforce the criminal laws of such state was applied in Harkrader v. Wadley, 172 U. S. 148, 43 L. ed. 399, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 119, to a case where the plaintiff sought to enjoin proceedings against him for the embezzlement of the assets of a bank; and in Fitts v. McGhee, 172 U. S. 516, 43 L. ed. 535, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 269, to a suit brought by the receiver of a railroad against the attorney general of the state to restrain him from instituting or prosecuting criminal proceedings *to enforce against the plaintiff the provisions of a state law reducing the tolls [218] which had been exacted of the public by the railroad, of which the plaintiff was receiver. This was held to be in reality a suit against the state to enjoin the institution of criminal proceedings, and hence within the general rule. See also Prout v. Starr, 188 U. S. 537, ante, 584, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 398.

Plaintiff seeks to maintain its bill under the exception above noted, wherein, in a few cases, an injunction has been allowed to issue to restrain an invasion of rights of property by the enforcement of an unconstitutional law, where such enforcement would result in irreparable damages to the plaintiff. It cites in that regard the case of Reagan v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 154 U. S. 362, 38 L. ed. 1014, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 560, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1047, in which, under a law of Texas giving express authority to a railroad company or other party in interest to bring suit against the railroad commissioners of that state, a bill was sustained against such commission to restrain the enforcement of unreasonable and unjust rates, and in the opinion a few instances were cited where bills were sustained against officers of the state, who, under color of an unconstitutional statute, were committing acts of wrong and injury to the rights and property of the plaintiff acquired under a contract with the state. It would seem that, if there were jurisdiction in a court of equity to enjoin the invasion of property rights through the instrumentality of an unconstitutional law, that jurisdiction would not be ousted by the fact that the state had chosen to assert its power to enforce such law by indictment or other criminal proceeding. Springhead Spinning Co. v. Riley, L. R. 6 Eq. 558.

In order to determine the exact property rights at stake in the case under consideration, it should be borne in mind that this is not a bill by Mrs. Dobbins, the owner of the land and of the proposed gas works, to enjoin the city from interfering with carrying out the permit she had obtained to erect these gas works, nor by the Valley Gas & Fuel Company, with which she had made a contract to erect these works but by a subcontractor which had made a contract with the gas and fuel company to erect for it, and upon premises to be designated by Mrs. Dobbins, a water tank and [219] gas holder; and, without even alleging that the gas and fuel company had refused to carry out its contract, or pay to plaintiff damages, or that Mrs. Dobbins had refused to settle any claim the gas and fuel company might have against her, seeks to enjoin the city of Los Angeles in the assumed right of Mrs. Dobbins from interfering with its servants and employees, and from preventing plaintiff from carrying out the work of erecting the water tank and gas holder, and also to desist and refrain from enforcing its ordinances. It sets up no contract of its own with the city which the municipal ordinances have impaired, but a contract of the city with Mrs. Dobbins, to which it was no party, in which it had no direct interest, and that, too, without averring that the gas and fuel company was insolvent, or unable to respond to its claim for damages. It proceeds wholly upon the assumption that the revocation of Mrs. Dobbins's license will operate injuriously to it, and that it cannot obtain a full and adequate remedy at law by an action against the gas and fuel company upon its contract to pay the price agreed upon between them.

It is true the bill is based upon the theory that plaintiff would suffer great and irreparable loss by the interference of the city and by the exposed condition of the works, and that the refusal of an injunction would result in innumerable actions at law and a multiplicity of suits, which would have to be instituted at great expense and without the possibility of recovering indemnity. We are not, however, bound by this allegation, when the facts set forth in the bill show that, if the plaintiff be entitled to a remedy at all, it has an action against the gas and fuel company, which is presumed at least to be able to respond in damages for all such as plaintiff may have suffered by the interruption of the contract. Whether the gas and fuel company in such action could defend upon the ground that the municipality had forbidden the prosecution of the work might depend somewhat upon the terms of the contract, and upon the right of the gas and fuel company to take advantage of the interference of the city. As to this we express no opinion. It is true the employees of the plaintiff were arrested, but that fact alone wrought no legal injury to the plaintiff, since, if it were prevented from any cause for which the gas and fuel company were chargeable, it might bring an action for damages against that company, with which alone its contract was made, and recover such damages as it could prove to have sustained.

It is true that in a number of cases bills have been sustained by one or more stockholders in a corporation against the corporation and other parties, to restrain the enforcement of an unconstitutional law against the corporation itself, but it has always been held, and general equity rule 94 requires, that such bill must contain an allegation under oath that the suit is not a collusive one to confer on a court of the United States jurisdiction, and must also contain an allegation that the directors of a corporation have refused to institute the proceedings themselves in the name of such corporation, and the efforts of the plaintiff to secure such action on the part of the directors, and the cause of his failure to obtain it. Dodge v. Woolsey, 18 How. 331, 15 L. ed. 401; Hawes v. Oakland, 104 U. S. 450, sub nom. Hawes v. Contra Costa Water Co. 26 L. ed. 827; Corbus v. Alaska Treadwell Gold Min. Co. 187 U. S. 455, ante, 256, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 157. This rule, however, has no application to subcontractors, who stand in no position to enforce the right of their immediate contractors, such as was the gas and fuel company, or of the owner of the property, who had agreed with such immediate contractors to do the work. The plaintiff in this case stands practically in the position of one who seeks to take advantage of the unconstitutionality of a law in which it has only an indirect interest, and by the enforcement of which it has suffered no legal injury. In this it stands much in the position of the plaintiff in Tyler v. Registration Ct. Judges, 179 U. S. 405, 45 L. ed. 252, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 206; and in Turpin v. Leamon, 187 U. S. 51, ante, 70, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 20; Wellington, Petitioner, 16 Pick. 87, 96, 26 Am. Dec. 631; Sinclair v. Jackson, 8 Cow. 543; Jones v. Black, 48 Ala. 540; Shehane v. Bailey, 110 Ala. 308, 20 So. 359; Dejarnett v. Haynes, 23 Miss. 600.

In this connection, also, the appellant cites the case of Reagan v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 154 U. S. 362, 393, 38 L. ed. 1014, 1022, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 560, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1047, in which we held that the trustee of the bondholders of a railway corporation could maintain a suit against the state railway commission to restrain the enforcement of unreasonable and unjust rates. The case, however, was put upon the express ground that the bondholders were the equitable and the beneficial owners of the property of the corporation, and in that capacity might "invoke the judgment of the Federal courts as to whether the contract rights created by the charter, and of which it is the beneficial owners, are violated by subsequent acts of the state in limitation of the right to collect tolls." In that case the bondholders were not only the beneficial owners of the property, but a reduction of the tolls might have resulted in the practical destruction of their securities, and unless the bill were maintained they were practically remediless. The case has but a remote analogy to the one under consideration.

As the appellant has shown no legal interest in this litigation, and no lack of a complete and adequate remedy at law, it results that the bill was properly dismissed, and the decree of the court below is therefore affirmed.

NASHUA SAVINGS BANK, Petitioner,
v.
ANGLO-AMERICAN LAND, MORTGAGE, & AGENCY COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 221-232.)

Evidence—proof of foreign law—foreign corporations—liability of shareholder for calls—pleading—defective declaration cured by verdict—sufficiency of notice of call—necessity of express promise to pay.

1. Copies of acts of Parliament are sufficiently

NOTE.—On the right to enforce stockholder's liability outside the state of incorporation—see note to Cushing v. Perot (Pa.) 34 L. R. A. 737.

As to what defects are cured by verdict—see note to Wills v. Claflin, 23 L. ed. U. S. 490.

On subscriptions to corporate stock; implied promise to pay—see note to Winston v. Brooks (Ill.) 4 L. R. A. 507.

Proof of the statute law of foreign countries.

Foreign statutory law is to be proved as a fact (Talbot v. Seeman, 1 Cranch. 1, 2 L. ed. 15), by the law itself or by exemplified copies (Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Glenn, 28 Md. 287, 92 Am. Dec. 688; De Sobry v. De Laistre, 2 Harr. & J. 191, 3 Am. Dec. 535; Gardner v. Lewis, 7 Gill. 379).

The production of an exemplified copy of the foreign statute, properly authenticated under the seal of the state, is sufficient. Ennis v. Smith, 14 How. 400, 14 L. ed. 472; Allen v. Watson, 2 Hill L. 319; Lincoln v. Battelle, 6 Wend. 475.

The statute may be proved by a sworn copy. Ennis v. Smith, 14 How. 400, 14 L. ed. 472; Innerarity v. Mims, 1 Ala. 660; Lincoln v. Battelle, 6 Wend. 475; Phillips v. Gregg, 10 Watts, 158, 36 Am. Dec. 158.

A copy proved to be a true copy by a witness who has examined and compared it with the original will be received in evidence. Ennis v. Smith, 14 How. 400, 14 L. ed. 472; Anglo-American Land Mortg. & Agency Co. v. Dyer, 181 Mass. 593, 64 N. E. 416.

It has even been held that an expert in foreign law might testify orally as to what such authenticated to be admissible in evidence in a Federal court sitting in New Hampshire, when produced by an attorney and solicitor of the supreme court of judicature in England of thirty years' experience, in connection with his testimony that he was intimately acquainted with such acts, and that the copies were "Issued by authority, being printed by Her Majesty's printer, and are as such by law receivable in evidence without further proof."

2. By subscribing to stock in a foreign corporation the subscriber subjects himself to the laws of the foreign country in respect to the powers and obligations of such corporation.
3. Courts cannot, in the absence of fraud, inquire into the necessity for an assessment by the directors of a foreign corporation upon its capital stock.
4. The lack of essential averments in a declaration in indebitatus assumpsit is cured by the verdict, if the evidence offered was sufficient to support the verdict, and no objection was made to a variance between allegations and proof.
5. The posting of a notice of a call upon shareholders in an English corporation, in a conspicuous place in the registered office of the company, for more than a month before the call was payable, and the forwarding of a printed notice of the call to a foreign shareholder, is a sufficient compliance with the provisions of the articles of association that notices for a nonresident shareholder who neglects to give his address, as therein provided, shall be posted in a conspicuous place in such office, which, for all purposes of the regulations shall be deemed to be his registered place of abode.
6. A sale or forfeiture of a stockholder's shares in an English corporation is not a condition precedent to the maintenance of an action against him to recover an assessment on the capital stock of the corporation, although laws were, and might produce a copy of the foreign statutes or code, and refer to the same for the purpose of refreshing his recollection. Barrows v. Downs, 9 R. 1. 446, 11 Am. Rep. 283.

So, in Hall v. Costello, 48 N. H. 176, 2 Am. Rep. 207, New Hampshire attorneys who had investigated the Canadian laws were permitted to give the results of their investigation.

To the contrary are a number of cases holding that a copy of the law, properly authenticated, is essential. Hemphill v. Bank of Alabama, 6 Smedes & M. 50; Gardner v. Lewis, 7 Gill. 379; Robinson v. Clifford, 2 Wash. C. C. 1, Fed. Cas. No. 11,948; Lincoln v. Battelle, 6 Wend. 475.

Parol testimony as to foreign written laws was rejected in Innerarity v. Mims, 1 Ala. 660.

And the evidence of a Canadian attorney concerning the Canadian law of interest was held inadmissible to show the terms of the Canadian statute, in Kermott v. Ayer, 11 Mich. 181.

And in United States v. Ortega, 4 Wash. C. C. 531, Fed. Cas. No. 15,971, the court stated that, although the unwritten law of foreign countries might be proved by witnesses, the written law could be proved only by itself.

A copy of the Irish statutes, sworn to by an Irish barrister as having been received from the King's printer, and as receivable in evidence in all courts in Ireland as authentic, was held admissible in Jones v. Maffet, 5 Serg. & R. 523.

And the English written law was allowed to be proved by printed statutes proved to be officially published by that government, a copy of a remedy by forfeiture is given by its articles of association.

7. An express promise by a stockholder in an English corporation need not be proved in an action to recover an assessment on its capital stock, in view of the promise implied from a subscription to the shares by 25 & 26 Vict. chap. 89, which declares that all moneys payable by any member in pursuance of the articles of the company shall be deemed a debt due by such member.

[No. 167.]

Submitted January 29, 1903. Decided March 16, 1903.

ON WRIT of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the First Circuit to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Circuit Court for the District of New Hampshire in favor of plaintiff in an action by a foreign corporation to recover an assessment on its capital stock. Affirmed.

See same case below, 48 C. C. A. 15, 108 Fed. 764.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brown:

This was an action by the defendant in error, a British corporation, in the circuit court for the district of New Hampshire, against the Nashua Savings Bank, a New Hampshire corporation, to recover an assessment made by such corporation in pursuance of its charter and by-laws, upon defendant's subscription to a thousand shares of its stock.

The case was tried before the circuit the statutes being shown, to the reasonable satisfaction of the court, to be genuine. The Pawashick, 2 Low. Dec. 142, Fed. Cas. No. 10,851.

So, where the books offered in evidence purported to contain the laws of a British province, printed by the printer to His Majesty, and distributed by the government to its officers, and cited and read in the courts there as laws in force, regulating the administration of justice, and receiving the sanction of the executive and judicial officers of the province as containing its laws, the latter fact being proved by the oath of witnesses, the court held that such evidence was equally as satisfactory as the exemplification of a roll found in the possession of the custos rotulorum, accompanied by the oath of the person making it, and was no departure from the rule requiring the best evidence. Owen v. Boyle, 15 Me. 147, 32 Am. Dec. 143.

And where the claimant offered in evidence of the French law volumes of the 4th, 24th, and others of the Bulletin Des Lois, sent to the supreme court by the French government, they were held admissible in evidence without further proof, for the purpose of proving the French law. Dauphin v. United States, 6 Ct. Cl. 221.

But the laws regulating the court of consulado of Havana were held not provable by a printed book purchased in Havana, purporting to contain the royal charter establishing that court. Packard v. Hill, 2 Wend. 411.

And in Chanolue v. Fowler, 3 Wend. 173, the chancellor of the French consulate of New York produced a book in the French language containing the Commercial Code of France, which, he stated, though not the official edition, 189 U. S.

judge and a jury, and resulted in a verdict for the plaintiff by direction of the court, and a judgment against the bank in the sum of $7,131.10, which was affirmed on writ of error by the circuit court of appeals. 48 C. C. A. 15, 108 Fed. 764.

Mr. John S. H. Frink, submitted the cause for petitioner. Mr. A. T. Batchelder was with him on the brief:

The statutes of Great Britain are facts of which this court does not take cognizance without proof.

Liverpool & G. W. Steam Co. v. Phenix Ins. Co. 129 U. S. 445, 32 L. ed. 793, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 469.

The ordinary modes of proof are: (1) By exemplification under great seal; (2) by certificate of an officer having authority to make it; (3) by testimony from comparison with original enrollment.

Church v. Hubbard, 2 Cranch, 187, 2 L. ed. 249; Emery v. Berry, 28 N. H. 485, 61 Am. Dec. 622.

If it is enough to present a portion of the enactment of a foreign country, purporting to be printed by authority, without any verification, then these statutes have been proved, otherwise not.

Beach v. Workman, 20 N. H. 379.

The general rule as to the proof of foreign laws is that the law which is written—that is, statute law—must be proved by a copy properly authenticated, and that the unwritten law must be proved by the testimony of experts; that is, by those acquainted with the law.

Ennis v. Smith, 14 How. 400, 14 L. ed.

was conformable to that edition, and testified that he regulated his official conduct by the laws as contained in that book, which, he stated, was an exact copy of the laws furnished by the French government to his consul, and the defendant agreed so to consider it; but the court held such book was not evidence of the laws of France.

But testimony of a former United States consul at Santiago de Cuba, that a book printed in Spanish contained the general ordinances of the customhouse of that island in existence "by the force of the law" and was the official book in general use, is sufficient evidence of its publication by authority of the Spanish government to warrant its reception in evidence under N. Y. Code Civ. Proc. § 942, over an objection that no proper foundation had been laid for its introduction. Hecia Powder Co. v. Sigua Iron Co. 157 N. Y. 437, 52 N. E. 650.

Marine ordinances of foreign countries, promulgated by the executive by order of the legislature of the United States, may be read in the courts of the United States without further authentication or proof. Talbot v. Seeman, 1 Cranch, 1, 2 L. ed. 15.

Spanish pamphlets which purport to be regulations of railroads in and for the Republic of Mexico are not receivable in evidence as Mexican laws, under Sayles' Civ. Stat. (Tex.) art. 2304, where there is no proof that they were printed under the authority of the laws of Mexico. Mexican National R. Co. v. Ware (Tex. Civ. App.) 60 S. W. 343.

For other authorities upon the question of the oral proof of foreign laws, see note to State v. Behrman (N. C.) 25 L. R. A. 449.

472; Pierce v. Indseth, 106 U. S. 546, 27 L. ed. 254, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418.

The rule that the courts of one country cannot take cognizance of the laws of another without plea and proof has constantly been maintained at law and in equity, in England and America.

Bank of North America v. Rindge, 154 Mass. 203, 13 L. R. A. 56, 27 N. E. 1015; Hancock Nat. Bank v. Ellis, 166 Mass. 414, 44 N. E. 349.

In the absence of anything to show the contrary, there is a presumption that the common law of another state (foreign country) is like that prevailing here.

Kelley v. Kelley, 161 Mass. 111, 25 L. R. A. 806, 36 N. E. 837.

Contracts made in a foreign country, in the absence of evidence of what their legal effect would be in the place in which they were executed, receive the same construction and have the same effect as if they were executed in the place where the action to enforce them is brought.

Whidden v. Seelye, 40 Me. 247, 63 Am. Dec. 661.

Great Britain being an alien country, the burden was on plaintiff to prove its laws.

Liverpool & G. W. Steam Co. v. Phenix Ins. Co. 129 U. S. 397, 32 L. ed. 788, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 469; Pierce v. Indseth, 106 U. S. 546, 27 L. ed. 254, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418.

Under the law of New Hampshire an express promise is necessary to sustain this action.

Franklin Glass Co. v. Alexander, 2 N. H. 381, 9 Am. Dec. 92; New Hampshire C. R. Co. v. Johnson, 30 N. H. 390, 64 Am. Dec. 300; Rockingham Bldg. Co. v. Burlingame, 67 N. H. 301, 31 Atl. 23; Shattuck v. Robbins, 68 N. H. 565, 44 Atl. 694.

There are no Federal decisions contravening the New Hampshire cases, and the Federal courts will therefore follow the views of the state courts.

Burgess v. Seligman, 107 U. S. 20, 27 L. ed. 359, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 10.

There seems to be a principle of reciprocity attending the administration of the laws of an alien country, which would, as a matter of international comity, induce our country to give the same weight to these acts that they give to ours.

Hilton v. Guyot, 159 U. S. 113, 40 L. ed. 95, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 139.

The delivery and receipt of shares of stock does not imply a promise to pay a call or assessment.

New Hampshire C. R. Co. v. Johnson, 30 N. H. 390, 64 Am. Dec. 300; Rockingham Bldg. Co. v. Burlingame, 67 N. H. 301, 31 Atl. 23; Shattuck v. Robbins, 68 N. H. 565, 44 Atl. 694.

Mr. Omar Powell submitted the cause for respondent. Messrs. Gilbert A. Davis and Daniel L. Cady were with him on the brief:

The New Hampshire law of evidence is that of the United States circuit court when sitting in that district.

M'Neil v. Holbrook, 12 Pet. 84, 9 L. ed. 1009; Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Union

Trust Co. 112 U. S. 250, 28 L. ed. 708, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 119.

Foreign statutory laws may be proved by a printed copy produced by a licensed practicing attorney of the foreign country, authenticated by his oath as having been officially printed, and as receivable in evidence in that country without further proof.

Hall v. Costello, 48 N. H. 176, 2 Am. Rep. 207; Kennard v. Kennard, 63 N. H. 303; State ex rel. Bartlett v. Davis, 69 N. H. 350, 41 Atl. 267; Barrows v. Downs, 9 R. I. 446, 11 Am. Rep. 283; The Pawashick, 2 Low. Dec. 142, Fed. Cas. No. 10,851; Jones v. Maffet, 5 Serg. & R. 523; Lacon v. Higgins, 3 Stark. 178; Merrifield v. Robbins, 8 Gray, 150.

When a judge will take a book from his library shelf, cite it as the law of England, and follow it as an authority, why should an attorney do more than present the same book and swear to it as the officially printed laws?

Church v. Hubbard, 2 Cranch, 238, 2 L. ed. 265; Ennis v. Smith, 14 How. 426, 14 L. ed. 484; Pacific Pneumatic Gas Co. v. Wheelock, 80 N. Y. 278; Dundee Mortg. & Trust Invest. Co. v. Cooper, 26 Fed. 665.

By becoming a stockholder the petitioner subjected himself to the laws of England governing the respondent company, and to all reasonable rules of the company.

Canada Southern R. Co. v. Gebhard, 109 U. S. 527, 27 L. ed. 1020, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 363; Hudson River Pulp & Paper Co. v. H. H. Warner & Co. 39 C. C. A. 452, 99 Fed. 187; Mandel v. Swan Land & Cattle Co. 154 Ill. 177, 27 L. R. A. 313, 40 N. E. 462.

In the absence of fraud a stockholder cannot question the wisdom or necessity of a call.

Oglesby v. Attrill, 105 U. S. 605, 26 L. ed. 1186.

A stockholder cannot question the necessity or advisability of a call.

Cook, Stock & Stockholders, §§ 111-113.

A call made by directors is conclusive evidence of its necessity, and binds the stockholder without notice.

Great Western Teleg. Co. v. Purdy, 162 U. S. 339, 40 L. ed. 991, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 810; Bailey v. Birkenhead, L. & C. Junction R. Co. 12 Beav. 443; Anglo-American Land, Mortg. & Agency Co. v. Dyer, 181 Mass. 593, 64 N. E. 416; 2 Thomp. Corp. § 1710.

The accepting and holding of the shares by petitioner created an implied, if not an express, promise to pay the balance when called.

Tucker v. Haughton, 9 Cush. 350; Buffalo & N. Y. City R. Co. v. Dudley, 14 N. Y. 351; Howarth v. Lombard, 175 Mass. 574, 49 L. R. A. 301, 56 N. E. 888; Webster v. Upton, 91 U. S. 67, 23 L. ed. 386; Upton v. Tribilcock, 91 U. S. 45, 23 L. ed. 203; Anglo-American Land, Mortg. & Agency Co. v. Dyer, 181 Mass. 593, 64 N. E. 416.

Comity is the common law of this country, which the courts must enforce.

Bank of Augusta v. Earle, 13 Pet. 589, 10 L. ed. 308.

A corporation organized under a foreign government stands in this respect upon the same footing as corporations of other states.

British American Land Co. v. Ames, 6 Met. 391; Story, Conf. L. §§ 5-65; 2 Morawetz, Priv. Corp. §§ 960, 961.

Petitioner's share certificate expressly bound him to an English contract.

Milliken v. Pratt, 125 Mass. 374, 28 Am. Rep. 241.

It requires no greater quantum of proof to make a case for an English corporation than it would for a corporation of anyone of the United States.

Canada Southern R. Co. v. Gebhard, 109 U. S. 527, 27 L. ed. 1020, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 363.

To save the right of objection upon the ground of variance, the party must object to the admission of the evidence when it is offered, and if he does not do so, it is waived.

Roberts v. Graham, 6 Wall. 578, 18 L. ed. 791; Boston & A. R. Co. v. O'Reilly, 158 U. S. 334, 39 L. ed. 1006, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 830; Graves v. State, 121 Ind. 359, 23 N. E. 155; Dunstan v. The R. R. Kirkland, 3 Hughes, 641, Fed. Cas. No. 4,181.

If the objection be not taken when the evidence is offered, the court may instruct the jury upon the whole field of inquiry covered by the evidence.

Boyce v. California Stage Co. 25 Cal. 460.

As the common-law rules of pleadings prevail in New Hampshire, it is submitted that debitatus assumpsit is the proper form of action.

1 Chitty, Pl. 13th Am. ed. 340, 341, 401, 106; 2 Chitty, Pl. 52; Pullman v. Upton, 96 U. S. 328, 24 L. ed. 818; Mandel v. Swan Lake & Cattle Co. 154 Ill. 177, 27 L. R. A. 313, 40 N. E. 462; Dermott v. Jones, 2 Wall. 1, sub nom. Ingle v. Jones, 17 L. ed. 762.

Mr. Justice Brown delivered the opinion of the court:

The assessment in question had been made by the directors of the company, in pursuance of their amended articles of association, which declared that "the directors may, from time to time, make such calls as they think fit upon the members in respect of all moneys unpaid on their shares, and each member shall pay the amount of every call so made upon him to the persons, and at the times and places, appointed by the directors."

1. In order to prove the incorporation of the plaintiff company, as well as the liability and rights of the stockholders, the deposition of an attorney and solicitor of the supreme court of judicature in England, who was also managing director of the plaintiff company, was read in evidence. His testimony showed that the plaintiff was a corporation organized with limited liability under five different acts of Parliament, from 1862 to 1880, copies of which he produced and delivered to the commissioner, stating that these copies were "issued by authority, being printed by Her Majesty's printer, and are as such by law receivable in evidence without further proof." To the *admission of the statutes[228] the defendant excepted upon the ground that they were not proved according to the established rules of law.

As these statutes were the basis of the plaintiff's corporate existence, and its right to bring this action, they must undoubtedly be proved as facts. Liverpool & G. W. Steam Co. v. Phenix Ins. Co. 129 U. S. 397, 445, 32 L. ed. 788, 793, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 469. While it was stated by this court in the early case of Church v. Hubbard, 2 Cranch, 187, 238, 2 L. ed. 249, 266, that foreign judgments are usually and most properly authenticated either by an exemplification under the great seal, by a copy proved to be a true copy, or by the certificate of an officer authorized by law, which certificate must itself be properly authenticated, the circuit court of the United States sitting in New Hampshire may, under Rev. Stat. § 721 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 581), declaring that "the laws of the several states," with certain exceptions, "shall be regarded as rules of decision in trials at common law in the courts of the United States," receive such evidence of the authentication of foreign statutes as the practice of the courts in that state may authorize and justify. M'Niel v. Holbrook, 12 Pet. 84, 89, 9 L. ed. 1009, 1011; Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Union Trust Co. 112 U. S. 250, 255, 28 L. ed. 708, 710, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 119; Vance v. Campbell, 1 Black, 427, 17 L. ed. 168. The "laws of the several states" with respect to evidence within the meaning of this section apply, not only to the statutes, but to the decisions of their highest courts. Bucher v. Cheshire R. Co. 125 U. S. 555, 582, 31 L. ed. 795, 798, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 974; Ex parte Fisk, 113 U. S. 713, 720, 28 L. ed. 1117, 1120, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 724; Ryan v. Bindley, 1 Wall. 66, 17 L. ed. 559.

The law of New Hampshire upon this subject appears to have been settled in Hall v. Costello, 48 N. H. 176, 2 Am. Rep. 207, in which an attorney, resident in New Hampshire, who had gone to Canada to investigate Canadian law, was permitted to state orally what he found the law to be, as embodied in the Queen's proclamation of neutrality. To same effect are Barrows v. Downs, 9 R. I. 446, 11 Am. Rep. 283; Jones v. Maffet, 5 Serg. & R. 523. There is an even greater reason for permitting a local attorney, of thirty years' experience, who, as he states, was intimately acquainted with the English company or corporation laws, to produce as evidence of such laws copies of the statutes printed by authority *of the English government, and used as[229] proofs of statutes in the English courts.

It would appear that such authentication of foreign laws would be deemed sufficient in the English courts, as in Lacon v. Higgins, 3 Starkie, 178, it was held that the French Code was sufficiently proved by a witness—a French vice consul—who produced a book printed by authority of the French government, which the witness stated contained the French Code, upon which he acted in his office as vice consul. In most, if not all, of the states of this Union statutes have been passed permitting laws of sister states to be proved simply by the production of a book containing what purports to be an authorized edition of such laws printed by state authority. Emery v. Berry, 28 N. H. 473, 61 Am. Dec. 622. While the same liberality is not extended to foreign laws required to be proved as facts, it would seem like sticking in the bark to hold that a foreign expert might testify orally as to what such laws were, and not be able to produce what purports to be the official edition of such laws, and to testify as to the authenticity of such edition, and to the fact that it was received as evidence in the domestic courts of that country. To the average mind it would seem as though there was much less liability to mistake in a printed copy of a statute from the official printer, than in a copy written and compared by an ordinary scrivener. The evidence was properly received.

2. Exception was also taken to the declaration, in that it contained no averment or allegation upon what conditions the plaintiff was authorized to make assessments. In this connection, it is insisted that the declaration should have averred that such an assessment was necessary to pay the debts of the plaintiff, or was made for the benefit of its creditors; that it is also defective in that it contains no averment of notice of such assessment to defendant, or that defendant ever made an express promise to pay such assessment; and no direct allegation that defendant was a stockholder at the time the assessment was made. It appears, however, by the act of 25 and 26 Vict., chap. 89, "for the incorporation, regulation, and winding up of trading companies and other associations," that the articles of association, "when registered, . . . shall bind the company and the members thereof to the same extent as if each member had subscribed his name and affixed his seal thereto, and there were in such articles contained a covenant on the part of himself, his heirs, executors, and administrators, to conform to all the regulations contained in such articles, subject to the provisions of this act; and all moneys payable by any member of the company, in pursuance of the conditions and regulations of the company or any of such conditions or regulations shall be deemed to be a debt due from such member to the company, and in England and Ireland to be in the nature of a specialty debt." It also appeared by the articles of association of the plaintiff corporation, No. 3, "that every person who has accepted any share or shares in this company, and whose name is entered in the registry of members, and no other person, shall be deemed to be a member." These regulations also contained the provision heretofore mentioned, that the directors might from time to time make such calls as they think fit upon the members in respect of all moneys unpaid on their shares. The board of directors is thus constituted a tribunal to determine when and to what amount assessments shall be made upon the unpaid shares of stock. By subscribing to stock in a foreign corporation, defendant subjected itself to the laws of such foreign country in respect to the powers and obligations of such corporation. Canada Southern R. Co. v. Gebhard, 109 U. S. 527, 27 L. ed. 1020, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 363; Relfe v. Rundle, 103 U. S. 222, sub nom. Life Asso. of America v. Rundle, 26 L. ed. 337.

In the absence of fraud the necessity for an assessment upon the capital stock cannot be made the subject of inquiry by the courts. As was said by Mr. Justice Field in Oglesby v. Attrill, 105 U. S. 605, 609, 26 L. ed. 1186, 1188: "As to the wisdom of an assessment, or its necessity at the time, or the motives which prompt it, the courts will not inquire, if it be within the legitimate authority of the directors to levy it, and the objects for which the company was incorporated would justify the expenditure of the money to be raised. They will not examine into the affairs of a corporation to determine the expediency of its action, or the motives for it, when the action itself is lawful." Builey v. Birkenhead, L. & C. Junction R. Co. 12 Beav. 433. See also *Cook, Stock & *Stockholders*, § 113; Great [231] Western Teleg. Co. v. Purdy, 162 U. S. 329, 40 L. ed. 986, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 810. Whether such assessment could be impeached by showing that the corporation was not a bona fide enterprise, or had never actually engaged in business, or become a going concern, or that the assessment was made unnecessarily and in bad faith, or that a discrimination was made against foreign stockholders, it is unnecessary to determine, since no evidence to that effect was offered on behalf of the defendant. Certainly, under the cases above cited, it would be unnecessary in order to make a prima facie case to negative these facts. There is a presumption of good faith attaching as well to foreign, as to domestic, corporations.

The trial proceeded under the third count of the declaration, which was in indebitatus assumpsit, and no objection was made to the evidence offered upon the ground of variance. Under such circumstances, and without expressing an opinion as to the admissibility of the evidence offered, the declaration is good after verdict. In Roberts v. Graham, 6 Wall. 578, 18 L. ed. 791, we held that variances between the allegation and proof must be taken when the evidence is offered, and if such evidence be sufficient to support the verdict the defect in the declaration is cured. Patrick v. Graham, 132 U. S. 627, 33 L. ed. 460, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 194.

The court in charging the jury in this case instructed them that there was no doubt the call for this assessment had been properly proved; that the only possible question which could have arisen was whether or not certain persons were directors of the corporation at the time of the call, and that as the amended articles of the association provided that calls might be made by the directors, there was no doubt that the call in question was properly made.

As the bill of exceptions contains nothing to indicate that the call was not properly made, and does not show that it contained all the evidence in the case, we should be at liberty, if the circumstances of the case required it, to infer that there was other evidence to supply any defect in respect to the legality of the call. Hansen v. Boyd, 161 U. S. 397, 40 L. ed. 746, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 571; Providence v. Babcock, 3 Wall. 240, sub nom. Gardner v. Babcock, 18 L. ed. 31; United States v. Patrick, 20 C. C. A. 11, 36 U. S. App. 645, 73 Fed. 800. The sufficiency of the evidence cannot be re-

[232] viewed on writ of error. Generes v. Campbell, 11 Wall. 193, 199, 20 L. ed. 110, 112; Dower v. Richards, 151 U. S. 658, 38 L. ed. 305, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 452.

It appears from the testimony of the secretary of the company that a notice of the call was posted up in a conspicuous place in the registered office of the company for more than a month before the call was payable, and in addition thereto a printed notice of the call was also forwarded to the defendant bank. This was a sufficient compliance with article 140 of the articles of association, which provides that "if any member resident out of the United Kingdom neglect to give such address as is heretofore required, notices for him may be posted up in a conspicuous place in the registered office of the company, and for all the purposes of these regulations the registered office of the company shall be deemed to be the registered place of abode of such member."

3. A sale or forfeiture of defendant's shares was not a condition precedent to the right to recover this assessment. While a remedy by forfeiture is given by the articles of the association, this remedy is cumulative, and is no bar to an action at law for the debt. This is clearly intended as a concurrent remedy.

4. Nor do we think there was any necessity of proving an express promise to pay this assessment. The English statute above quoted provides that all moneys payable by any member in pursuance of the articles of the company shall be deemed a debt due by such member of the company, and as this statute implies a promise to pay from a subscription to the shares, it clearly obviates the necessity of proving an express promise. Upton v. Tribilcock, 91 U. S. 45, 23 L. ed. 203; Webster v. Upton, 91 U. S. 65, 23 L. ed. 384; Chubb v. Upton, 95 U. S. 665, 24 L. ed. 523; Howarth v. Lombard, 175 Mass. 574, 49 L. R. A. 301, 56 N. E. 888. Although the law of New Hampshire seems to be that, in the absence of an express promise, no personal action will lie (Shattuck v. Robbins, 68 N. H. 565, 44 Atl. 694), yet even there an obligation created by the charter is treated as the equivalent of an express promise. Cook, Stock & Stockholders, § 71; Anglo-American Land, 189 U. S.

Mortg. & Agency Co. v. Dyer, 181 Mass. 593, 64 N. E. 416.

There was no error in the action of the court below, and its judgment is, therefore, affirmed.

*MARIANO F. SENA, Appt.,

v.

UNITED STATES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 233-242.)

Private land claims—adoption of findings of court below—right to confirmation—abandonment—laches.

1. A finding of the court of private land claims, that "the evidence as to the settlement and occupation of the tract purporting to have been granted, continuity of possession, cultivation, residence, improvement, claim of ownership, notoriety of the grant, and knowledge of the existence in the community or by the oldest inhabitants now living is so vague, contradictory, and uncertain as to be almost wholly wanting," will, in the absence of clear evidence to the contrary, be adopted on appeal by the Supreme Court of the United States.
2. Confirmation of a Spanish land grant cannot be had in the court of private land claims, where possession of the land had been abandoned by the descendants of the grantee for at least nine years before the treaty of 1848 with Mexico, under which the land passed into the possession of the United States, and there has been no possession by representatives of such grantee since the treaty, and no attempt to assert their title thereto for more than fifty years thereafter.

[No. 40.]

Argued January 16, 19, 1903. Decided April 6, 1903.

A PPEAL from the Court of Private Land Claims to review a decree dismissing a petition for confirmation of a Spanish land grant. Affirmed without prejudice to further proceedings.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brown:

This was a petition for the confirmation of a tract of land in the county of Santa Fé, New Mexico, known as the José de Leyba grant, which has never been officially surveyed, but is estimated to contain about 18,000 acres.

After filing the petition, it was found there were a number of persons holding portions of the tract sued for under a claim of title adverse to the grant; and, upon motion of the United States, requiring these adverse claimants to be made parties defendant, the original petition was amended, and two of these, the American Turquoise Company and one McNulty, joined with the United States in defending the case.

*The court disallowed the claim upon the [234] ground that the evidence did not show a perfect grant, inasmuch as there was no evidence of a compliance with the royal ordinance of 1754, which provided that all grants subsequent to 1700 must be confirmed as a prerequisite to their validity; and that, if it were an imperfect grant, it should, under the act creating the court of private land claims, have been filed within two years from the taking effect of the act, and was therefore barred.

Since the decree of the court of private land claims, certain additional evidence has been discovered, tending to show possession of the land covered by the grant for a long period subsequent thereto, and which, it is now insisted, supplies the defects which caused the rejection of the grant.

Mr. Frank W. Clancy argued the cause, and, with Mr. H. S. Clancy, filed a brief for appellant:

Possession in 1783, under the grant of 1728, shows a perfect title and a compliance with the ordinance of 1754.

United States v. Chavez, 175 U. S. 520, 44 L. ed. 258, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 159; United States v. Pendell, 185 U. S. 189, 46 L. ed. 866, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 624.

Existence of ownership, or possession or both, being proved, it is a well-recognized presumption that they continue unless their cessation is proved by evidence; and the rule is that the burden of proof is upon him who disputes their continued existence.

Lazarus v. Phelps, 156 U. S. 205, 39 L. ed. 398, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 271; Gray v. Finch, 23 Conn. 513; Leport v. Todd, 32 N. J. L. 128; Bayard v. Colefax, 4 Wash. C. C. 41, Fed. Cas. No. 1,130; Kidder v. Stevens, 60 Cal. 419; Table Mountain G. & S. Min. Co. v. Waller's Defeat Min. Co. 4 Nev. 220, 97 Am. Dec. 526; Bates v. Prickett, 5 Ind. 22, 61 Am. Dec. 73; Lind v. Lind, 53 Minn. 51, 54 N. W. 934; Anderson v. Watt, 138 U. S. 706, 34 L. ed. 1082, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 449; Adams v. Slate, 87 Ind. 575; Sullivan v. Goldman, 19 La. Ann. 13; Thomas v. Hatch, 3 Sumn. 182, Fed. Cas. No. 13,899; Clements v. Hays, 76 Ala. 280; Cargile v. Wood, 63 Mo. 514; Gilleland v. Martin, 3 McLean, 491, Fed. Cas. No. 5,433; Higdon v. Higdon, 6 J. J. Marshall, 51; O'Gara v. Eisenlohr, 38 N. Y. 299; Best, Presumptions, 186; Wilkins v. Parle, 44 N. Y. 172, 3 Am. Rep. 655; Scales v. Key, 11 Ad. & El. 819; Brown v. King, 5 Met. 173; Currier v. Gale, 9 Allen, 525; Rowland v. Updike, 28 N. J. L. 101.

A complete legal title to land, once vested, cannot be lost by failure to occupy.

1 Escriche, Dictionary of Legislation & Jurisp. pp. 6-8, ed. of 1847; 3 Washb. Real Prop. chap. 2, §§ 1, 5; Robie v. Sedgwick, 35 Barb. 329; Pickett v. Dowdall, 2 Wash. (Va.) 115; 1 Moreau-Lislet & Carleton, Partidas. 365, 400; Philadelphia v. Riddle, 25 Pa. 263; Crespin v. United States, 168 U. S. 218, 42 L. ed. 441, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 53; Jones v. Montes, 15 Tex. 353.

Evidence of reputation of ancient ownership and possession of land, as shown by statements of aged persons now deceased, is competent.

Casey v. Inloes, 1 Gill. 492, 39 Am. Dec. 658; Boardman v. Reed, 6 Pet. 341, 8 L. ed. 415; Shutte v. Thompson, 15 Wall. 162, 21

L. ed. 126; Sanscrainte v. Torongo, 87 Mich. 69, 49 N. W. 497; Wooster v. Butler, 13 Conn. 313; Scott v. Ollabaugh, 3 Harr. & M'H. 511; Sparrow v. Hovey, 44 Mich. 64, 6 N. W. 93; McCausland v. Fleming, 63 Pa. 38.

Mr. Matthew G. Reynolds argued the cause, and, with Solicitor General Richards and Messrs. William H. Pope and Edward L. Bartlett, filed a brief for appellee:

Where there is uncertainty in specific description, the quantity named may be of decisive weight, and necessarily so if the intention to convey only so much, and no more, is plain.

Ainsa v. United States, 161 U. S. 208, 40 L. ed. 673, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 544; Ely v. United States, 171 U. S. 220, 43 L. ed. 142, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 840; United States v. Maish, 171 U. S. 242, 43 L. ed. 150, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 948; Perrin v. United States, 171 U. S. 292, 43 L. ed. 169, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 861; Reloj Cattle Co. v. United States, 184 U. S. 624, 46 L. ed. 721, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 499; Arivaca Land & Cattle Co. v. United States, 184 U. S. 649, 46 L. ed. 731, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 525.

Where doubt arises respecting a royal grant, even a congressional grant, it is resolved in favor of the government.

Slidell v. Grandjean, 111 U. S. 412, 28 L. ed. 321, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 475; United States v. Oregon & C. R. Co. 164 U. S. 526, 41 L. ed. 541, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 165.

As bearing upon the exercise by the Crown of the jus disponendi of the overplus within the metes and bounds, the absence of serious open, exclusive, actual possession anciently begun and consistently continued cannot be overlooked as affecting the original intent and assertion of ownership to the exclusion of others, in determining the estate granted, and the extent thereof.

Bergere v. United States, 168 U. S. 66, 42 L. ed. 383, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 4.

This court will defer to the judgment of the court below on matters of fact, such as possession.

United States v. Pendell, 185 U. S. 189, 46 L. ed. 866, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 624.

This claim is a stale one, and not entitled to recognition, according to justice and right, from a court proceeding upon equitable principles.

United States v. Martinez, 184 U. S. 441, 46 L. ed. 632, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 422; Gildersleeve v. New Mexico Min. Co. 161 U. S. 573, 40 L. ed. 812, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 663; United States v. Moore, 12 How. 209, 13 L. ed. 958; Indiana v. Kentucky, 136 U. S. 479, 34 L. ed. 329, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1051; United States v. Repentigny, 5 Wall. 211, 18 L. ed. 627; Muse v. Arlington Hotel Co. 68 Fed. 637; Tiebout v. Millican, 61 Tex. 514.

Knowledge, on the part of the Leybas, of the passage of the act of July 22, 1854, and their right to file their claim with the surveyor general and preserve their evidence, is to be presumed.

Gildersleeve v. New Mexico Min. Co. 161 U. S. 573, 40 L. ed. 812, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 663.

A court of equity will not aid a party whose application is destitute of conscience, good faith, and reasonable diligence, but will discourage stale demands, for the peace of society, by refusing to interfere where there have been gross laches in prosecuting rights, or where long acquiescence in the assertion of adverse rights has occurred.

Hammond v. Hopkins, 143 U. S. 224, 36 L. ed. 134, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418.

This claim is void because of abandonment.

1 Moreau-Lislet & Carleton, Partidas, 50, p. 365; Landes v. Perkins, 12 Mo. 238; Fine v. St. Louis Public Schools, 30 Mo. 166; Tayon v. Ladew, 33 Mo. 205; Clark v. Hammerle, 36 Mo. 639; Sideck v. Duran, 67 Tex. 256, 3 S. W. 264.

There must be such proof of boundaries as will, with reasonable certainty, define and limit the thing claimed, differentiating it from other things of the same kind.

United States v. Delespine, 15 Pet. 229, 10 L. ed. 720; United States v. King, 3 How. 773, 11 L. ed. 824; Arivaca Land & Cattle Co. v. United States, 184 U. S. 649, 46 L. ed. 731, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 525.

Mr. James W. Vroom filed a brief on behalf of respondent L. Bradford Prince, for the purpose of raising the question of jurisdiction of the court of private land claims.

Mr. Justice Brown delivered the opinion of the court:

The petition of Leyba, upon which the grant was originally made, and which is the material document in this case, and is in the Spanish language, is thus translated in the record:

City of Santa Fé, May 24, 1728, before the governor and captain general of this kingdom, there was presented this petition with its contents:

Joseph de Leyba, resident of the city of Santa Fé, appear before your excellency in due legal form, and state that, in accordance with the royal ordinance of His Royal Majesty, I enter a piece of land and wood, vacant and unsettled, enough for half a fanega of corn-planting land, somewhat more or less, which is bounded on the east by the San [235] Marcos road; on the *south by an arroyo called Cuesta del Oregano; on the west by land of Juan Garcia de las Rivas, and on the north by lands of Captain Sebastian de Vargas.

Therefore, I ask and pray, your excellency be pleased to make me, in the name of His Majesty, a grant for the said piece of land, for myself and my children, heirs and successors, and that the act of royal possession be executed to me, whereby I will receive benefit and favor as well as justice which I seek. And I swear in due form that this, my petition, is not made in malice, and as it may be necessary, etc.

Joseph de Leyba.

Annexed thereto is the grant of the governor and captain general of the province, with the condition that the grantees settle the land within the term prescribed by the royal ordinances, and a direction to the alcalde to put the party in possession.
189 U. S.

Following this is the report of the chief alcalde of the city of Santa Fé, that, having taken witnesses and "inspected the lands and woods prayed for by the said petitioner," he put him in royal possession by performing the customary ceremonies of livery of seisin.

There are two disputed propositions connected with this petition of Leyba's: (1) As to the quantity of land granted; (2) as to its boundaries. It is admitted by both parties that the above translation from the record of the quantity of the land granted "as a piece of land and wood, vacant and unsettled, enough for half a fanega of corn-planting land, somewhat more or less," is incorrect, the original Spanish being as follows: "Registro un pedaso de tierras y monte, yermo y despoblado, que cabe media fanega de maiz de sembradura, poco mas ó menos."

The argument of the government is that the quantity covered by the grant was only enough land to plant half a fanega of corn, a little more or less, and that, as a fanega de maiz is a measure of corn which will plant 8.82 acres, half of a fanega would measure 4.41 acres; the government translation being: "I register a piece of land and woods, uncultivated and unsettled, that will contain half a fanega de maiz de sembradura, a *lit. [236] tle more or less." The inference from this is that all that was conveyed was a piece of land that "will contain" enough for half a fanega of maiz. Claimant's translation, however, of the words que cabe is that it is a tract of land that "contains" within its outer boundaries half a fanega of corn, that is, of land capable of cultivation.

The probabilities, aside from the fact that the word cabe is a verb of the present tense, favor the construction of the claimant, as the words "lands and woods" would hardly be used as descriptive of a tract of 4½ acres. In addition to that, however, the description of quantity is wholly inconsistent with the boundaries (hereafter stated), which evidently contemplated a large tract of land, according to the Spanish and Mexican customs of making grants to settlers. Indeed, a grant of 4½ acres of land at a distance from any town, city, or settlement is so rare that the presumptions are all against it. If the boundaries were defined with accuracy, we should have very little difficulty in holding that they would not be controlled by the vague description of "a parcel of land and woods, uncultivated and unsettled, which includes half a fanega of corn-planting land."

This is the more apparent by an inspection of the subsequent documents, which include a will of Simon de Leyba, son of the grantee, of the year 1783, giving the boundaries of the tract, and a deed of Salvador Antonio de Leyba, grandson of José, to his son in 1834, also describing the lands by similar boundaries. Indeed, none of the subsequent documents make any reference whatever to the half fanega of corn-planting land. The will also contains a bequest of live stock and farming tools seemingly appurtenant to the ranch and greatly in excess of what would naturally belong to a tract of  $\frac{1}{4}$  acres.

2. The difficulty, however, is with the description of the boundaries themselves, which is: "On the east by the San Marcos road; on the south by an arroyo called Cuesta del Oregano; on the west by land of Juan Garcia de las Rivas, and on the north by lands of Captain Sebastian de Vargas." In the will of Simon de Leyba of 1783, the boundaries are the same upon the south and east, and on the north "the road which [237] goes *towards Pecos from the Cerrillos, or lands of Captain Sebastian de Vargas," and on the west "with the lands of the old pueblo of the Cienega." The land is described in substantially the same terms in the deed of 1834. The description of the lands on the east side as bounded by the San Marcos road is clearly defined. The description of the north boundary as the road from Pecos to the Cerrillos is also defined with somewhat less certainty, the lands of Sebastian de Vargas having been located, surveyed, and confirmed several miles to the east of the Leyba grant; but upon the west and south the boundaries, even as sworn to orally by witnesses, are so uncertain as to afford little guide to a surveyor in attempting to locate the tract.

The west boundary, which is described in the grant as "the lands of Juan Garcia de las Rivas," is described in the will of 1783 as "the lands of the old pueblo of the Cienega." While there is some evidence from the archives that the father of Garcia de las Rivas, in 1701, owned a piece of land somewhere west of the Leyba tract, known even then as the old Pueblo of la Cienega, there is nothing to show the east boundary of the pueblo, and consequently the west boundary of the Leyba tract. The south boundary, said to be "an arroyo called Cuesta del Oregano," it seems to be impossible to locate with any degree of certainty, though it was probably near the Coyote spring, at which the only house built upon this tract appears to have been located. This house long since fell into ruins, and there is no evidence that it has been occupied since the last owner of the grant, Juan Angel de Leyba, was supposed to have been killed by the Indians in 1839.

The evidence of possession subsequent to the grant does not afford much aid in fixing the boundaries, since the land, like most of that in Spanish-American territories, was not of a kind admitting of a well-defined, actual, and adverse possession, such as that of cultivated land. The most favorable view for petitioner that can be taken of this evidence is that possession of a house or a certain field of arable land may be referable to the entire tract included within the boundaries of the grant; but when the boundaries themselves are indefinite, the possession of a house is of no value in fixing [238] the boundaries. A grant too *indefinite to be located, and never fixed by any survey, is void as against the United States. As was observed in United States v. Delespine, of a Spanish grant in Florida (15 Pet. 319, 335, 10 L. ed. 753, 758), "the public domain cannot be granted by the courts." They may locate the boundaries fixed by grant, but the boundaries must be so fixed as to admit of a survey. United States v. Miranda, 16 Pet. 153, 160, 10 L. ed. 920, 922; United States v. King, 3 How. 773, 11 L. ed. 824; Villalobos v. United States, 10 How. 551, 13 L. ed. 535; Arivaca Land & Cattle Co. v. United States, 184 U. S. 649, 652, 46 L. ed. 731, 733, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 525.

The grant was made and possession was given to the grantee in 1728. Nothing being shown to the contrary, we presume that the possession continued until 1783, the date of the will of Simon de Leyba to his son, Salvador Antonio de Leyba, "whom I recognize as my sole heir." The next item of interest tending to show possession is the deed of Salvador Antonio de Leyba in 1834 to his son, Juan Angel de Leyba, who are both described as residents of the city of Santa Fé, wherein the same boundaries are also given, although the land is called "the rancho of the Coyote spring, with its houses and corrals, together with the grant in which the said ranch is situated, which was given to my grandfather by the King of Spain, May 25, 1728." Juan Angel appears to have been killed by Indians a few years after this deed was made, but it seems to have been uncertain whether he was in actual possession of the tract.

To rebut the case made by the claimant, the government offered in evidence the depositions of several residents of that neighborhood, who swore that they had never heard of the José de Leyba grant, or its boundaries. Objection was made to the reading of these depositions upon the ground that the witnesses named were present in court, and might be sworn orally. It is unnecessary to determine whether the court erred in admitting the depositions under such circumstances, in view of the vague and unsatisfactory evidence on behalf of the claimant of the boundaries and possession of this tract.

Admitting that the documents introduced afforded a sufficient presumption of a continued possession from 1783 to 1834, there was no evidence of the occupation of the land by any member of the Leyba family subsequent to 1839. This fact of *a total [239] absence of any claim to the land made by the last heirs of the occupant, and that the house was allowed to fall into ruins, is strong evidence either that the land was abandoned as not worth cultivating, or that a residence there had become too dangerous by reason of the presence of hostile Indians. In this connection the court below found that the evidence as to the settlement and occupation of the tract purporting to have been granted, continuity of possession, cultivation, residence, improvement, claim of ownership, notoriety of the grant, and knowledge of the existence in the community or by the oldest inhabitants now living, is so vague, contradictory, and uncertain as to be almost wholly wanting." In the absence of clear evidence to the contrary, we deem it our duty to adopt the opinion of the court below in that particular. United States v. Pendell, 185 U. S. 189, 197, 46 L. ed. 866, 870, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 624.

While, in construing these Spanish grants, owing to the loose manner in which they were made and the boundaries described, we have been extremely liberal, still we are bound to consider that grants of this description, as of all others, must be construed favorably to the government, and the grantee is bound to show, not only the grant itself, but that the boundaries were fixed with reasonable certainty. Slidell v. Grandjean, 111 U. S. 412, 437, 28 L. ed. 321, 329, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 475; United States v. Oregon & C. R. Co. 164 U. S. 526, 539, 41 L. ed. 541, 544, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 165.

3. But, conceding that an experienced surveyor, acquainted with the land in that neighborhood, might locate the boundaries of this tract, there is a still more serious difficulty in the evidence of abandonment and the laches of the claimant, which defenses may properly be considered together. Under our Anglo-Saxon system of jurisprudence, questions of the abandonment of land by the owner rarely arise, since they are usually sold to a purchaser or to the state for taxes; but the Spanish law recognizes distinctly the right to abandonment. It is stated in 1 Partidas, Law 50, p. 365, that "if a man be dissatisfied with his immovable estate and abandons it, immediately he departs from it corporally, with an intention that it shall be no longer his, it will become the property of him who first enters thereon." See also Hall's Mexican Law, § 1489. The same principle is stated by [240] Eseriche, title, Abandono de cosas: "If an owner voluntarily abandons a thing, whether personal or real, with intent no longer to count it in the number of his possessions, because it is useless or burdensome, or for mere caprice, he loses his ownership, and the first who occupies it makes it his." We are also referred by counsel to a law of the Departmental Council of New Mexico, enacted in 1837, which declares that "every individual who abandons the land upon which he has settled, and which he acquired by grant, with the intention of establishing himself elsewhere to live there, and does not leave someone to take his place in ordinary labor, shall lose the real property he had acquired." See also Landes v. Perkins, 12 Mo. 238, 256; Sideck v. Duran, 67 Tex. 256, 3 S. W. 264.

As there is no testimony tending to show that the Leybas ever sought to resume possession of the land after the death of Juan Angel, in 1839, there was, at least, a presumption of abandonment. Not only is there no evidence tending to show possession of the land by representatives of the original grantee since 1839, but for sixty years thereafter there was no attempt made to assert title thereto. By § 7 of the private land claims act [26 Stat. at L. 854, chap. 539, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 765], "all proceedings" therein "shall be conducted, as near as may be, according to the practice of the courts of equity of the United States;" and, by § 13, no claim shall be allowed upon an imperfect title unless "the claimant would have had a lawful right to make perfect had the territory not been acquired by the United States;" nor upon a perfect title, "if the same was not at said date already complete and perfect." While it is true that we have held that evidence of possession since the date of the treaty cannot be regarded as an element going to make up a title (Crespin v. United States, 168 U. S. 208, 42 L. ed. 438, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 53; Hayes v. United States, 170 U. S. 637, 653, 42 L. ed. 1174, 1180, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 735; Hays v. United States, 175 U. S. 248, 259, 44 L. ed. 150, 154, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 80), it does not follow that abandonment of the land, and failure to assert a title since the treaty, may not operate as a bar. It is clear that, in the establishment of a title as of a certain date, possession subsequent to that date *is of no value; but, considering the title [241] to have been sufficient as of that date, failure to assert such title within a reasonable time thereafter opens the case to the defense of laches.

In United States v. Moore, 12 How. 209, 13 L. ed. 958, it was said of a Spanish grant in Louisiana: "We are called on to decide in this case according to the rules governing a court of equity, and are bound to give due weight to lapse of time. The party was under no disability, and slept on his rights, as he now claims them, for nearly fifty years, without taking a single step. He makes no excuse for his long delay, and cannot now get relief by having his title completed. No case has come within our experience where the obscurity and antiquity of the transaction more forcibly than in the present case required a court of equity to bar a complainant on legal presumptions founded on lapse of time; and where the bar should take the place of individual belief." To the same effect are Gildersleeve v. New Mexico Min. Co. 161 U. S. 573, 40 L. ed. 812, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 663, and United States v. Martinez, 184 U. S. 441, 46 L. ed. 632, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 422.

There are facts connected with this case which render the doctrine of laches peculiarly applicable. This land passed into the possession of the United States under the treaty with Mexico of 1848. Possession of the land had then been abandoned by the descendants of the grantees for at least nine years, and probably longer. In 1854, six years after the treaty, a surveyor general was appointed for New Mexico (10 Stat. at L. 308, chap. 103), whose duty it was to ascertain the origin, nature, character, and existence of all claims to lands under the laws, usages, and customs of Spain and Mexico, and report to Congress with a view of confirming bona fide grants, and giving full effect to the treaty. No action appears to have been taken before him to ascertain the validity or boundaries of this grant, although the act seems to have remained in force until 1891, when the court of private land claims was created. The public land surveys were extended over the tract in 1861; homestead and other entries were made, improvements established, patents secured, mines opened and developed, but no attempt made to assert the rights of the grantee or his descendants. The court of private land claims was established in 1891, and all persons having imperfect *titles were required to present them within two years, and all having perfect titles had the right, but were not bound, to apply to that court for confirmation of such title. It was not until 1899 that the petition in this case was filed by a person who appears, in 1895, to have found lineal descendants of the original grantee, from whom he had secured deeds of this abandoned grant, the very existence of which seems to have been forgotten. If this be considered an imperfect grant, the right to file it expired years ago; if it be a perfect grant, as now claimed, we see no reason why the owner may not prosecute his claim in the territorial courts. Without expressing an opinion as to whether this was a perfect or imperfect grant within the meaning of the law, or whether the boundaries might not still be ascertained by a survey, we are satisfied that it is one which the court of private land claims could not be called upon to confirm, and that, if for no other reason, the petition should be dismissed upon the ground of laches.

The decree of the court below is therefore affirmed.

On petition for modification of the above decree of affirmance, Mr. Justice Brown announced on June 1, 1903, the order of the court that such decree be amended by adding the following words: "So far as such decree orders that the petition be dismissed, but without prejudice to such further proceedings as petitioner may be advised to take."

GEORGE C. RANKIN, Receiver, etc., Plff. in Err.,
v.

FIDELITY INSURANCE, TRUST & SAFE DEPOSIT COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 242-254.)

National banks—personal liability of shareholder—when pledgee liable as owner—evidence—province of court and jury.

1. A pledgee of national bank stock which he took as collateral security for a loan is not chargeable with the personal liability for the debts of the bank imposed on "shareholders"

NOTE.—On enforcement of statutory liability of stockholders in national bank—see note to Williamson v. American Bank, 52 C. C. A. 6.

As to who are liable as shareholders in national banks—see notes to Earle v. Carson, 46 C. C. A. 503; and Beal v. Essex Sav. Bank, 15 C. C. A. 130.

by U. S. Rev. Stat. § 5151 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3465), unless he has either become the owner of the shares in fact, or has held himself out to be the owner, and thereby estopped himself to deny his personal liability as such.

2. A memorandum made by the assignee of a pledgee of national bank stock, without the knowledge or acquiescence of the pledgee, to the effect that such stock had been converted by the latter and did not sell for enough to pay the debt for which it was pledged, is inadmissible in evidence on the issue whether such pledgee had become the owner of the shares, and as such chargeable with the personal liability of the shareholders,—especially where such memorandum was obviously untrue, as the stock had never been sold.
3. Whether a pledgee of national bank stock is estopped to deny his personal liability as a shareholder by speaking of himself as holding or owning the stock, in letters to the officers of the bank, who understood perfectly the capacity in which such stock was retained, is a question for the jury.
4. A pencil memorandum in the stock ledger of a national bank, at the top of an account with the person to whom certain pledged shares of stock had been transferred at the request of the pledgee, which consists merely of the name of the latter, with whom the correspondence in regard to such account was carried on, is inadmissible in evidence on the issue whether such pledgee had become the owner of the stock and was chargeable with the personal liability of a shareholder.
5. A case which turns upon the proper conclusions to be drawn from a commercial correspondence, in connection with other facts and circumstances, is properly referred to a jury, although the construction of written instruments is ordinarily a question for the court.

[No. 178.]

Argued February 26, 27, 1903. Decided April 6, 1903.

IN ERROR to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Circuit Court for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania entered upon a verdict for the defendant in an action to recover an assessment upon shareholders in a national bank. Affirmed.

See same case below, 46 C. C. A. 509, 108 Fed. 475.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brown:

This was an action at law by the receiver of the Keystone National Bank of Erie, Pennsylvania, against the defendant company, as the actual owner and holder of 172½ shares of the capital stock of the bank, standing upon its books in the name of one William W. Hand, to recover an assessment upon the shareholders of 100 per cent made by the Comptroller of the Currency pursuant to Rev. Stat. § 5151 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3465).

The facts of the case are substantially as follows: On November 15, 1890, Delamater & Co., a banking firm of Meadville, Pa., borrowed $15,000 of defendant company, in renewal of prior loans, giving therefor their note for sixty days, and as collateral security deposited 230 shares of the capital stock of the Keystone National Bank of the par value of $100 per share, standing in the name of the individual members of the firm. The shares were valued at the time at par, $23,000; the bank was in good credit, and for twenty-seven years had regularly, and was then paying, semiannual dividends. With its certificates of stock thus deposited, powers of attorney signed by the individual holders of the stock were also delivered to the defendant. These documents [244] empowered the defendant to *transfer the shares—the name of the transferee and the attorney being blank.

Twenty days thereafter, and on December 5, 1890, Delamater & Co. failed and made a general assignment for the benefit of their creditors, and on December 17, defendant having received notice of the assignment, wrote to the assignees declining to renew the note, but offering to anticipate its payment and return the collaterals. It seems the assets of Delamater & Co. were insufficient for this purpose.

On January 10, 1891, defendant sent to the Keystone National Bank of Erie the original certificates, deposited as collateral, and requested the bank to transfer the shares to William W. Hand, a clerk in the employ of the defendant. Three days later, and on January 13, the bank paid a semi-annual dividend of 2 per cent, but it does not appear who received this dividend, which proved to be the last one paid by the bank. The transfer was made on the books of the bank, and new certificates issued in the name of Hand, dated January 15, 1891, and were transmitted by the bank to the company, which acknowledged receipt of the stock, and stated that it would like to have a bid for the stock "if you know of a purchaser." Hand signed the transfer in blank on the back of these certificates, and in that form they were retained by the defendant. There was no receipt for the certificates except a memorandum in the handwriting of the clerk on the stub of the stock book: "Sent to the Fidelity Insurance, Trust, and Safe Deposit Company, Philadelphia, Penn., 1/17/91."

Fourteen months thereafter, and on March 16, 1892, the Comptroller of the Currency, finding that the capital of the bank was impaired, ordered an assessment of 25 per cent on the capital stock to make good the deficiency. The assessment upon these shares amounted to $5,750. This amount was paid by the defendant and charged on its books to Delamater & Co. as an additional advance. Its check was sent to the bank in a letter signed by Mr. Hand.

On December 22, 1892, pursuant to Rev. Stat. § 5143 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3463), and with the approval of the Comptroller of the Currency, the capital stock of the bank was reduced from $250,- [245] 000 to $150,000, *divided into 1,500 shares of $100 each. Thereupon, and on January 24, 1893, the defendant sent to the bank the certificates for 230 shares, and on February 189 U. S. U. S., Book 47.

7 received the certificates in the name of Hand, for 172½ shares, being the reduced number. Hand signed a transfer in blank on the back of the certificates, and in that form they remained in the possession of the defendant. On March 20, 1894, the vice president of the defendant company addressed a letter to the bank, stating that the company held 172½ shares of the stock registered in the name of W. W. Hand, and requesting a copy of their last statement and any other information regarding the business of the bank, and as to whether there were any sales of stock, saying "We would like to sell our holdings, if marketable." No reply being received to this letter, the defendant company repeated its substance in another letter of April 4, stating that "as we have a loan of $22,000 depending upon the value of 172½ shares, we desire the above information." Several other letters were written to the same purport.

On June 20, 1897, the Keystone National Bank closed its doors, on July 26, the Comptroller of the Currency appointed a receiver, and on November 3 ordered an assessment of 100 per cent on the stockholders. Whereupon this action was brought to recover an assessment of $17,500 on the shares registered in the name of Hand.

The case was tried before a jury, and the question submitted to them "whether, before this Keystone National Bank failed, the defendant company, the Fidelity Trust Company of this city, was the real owner of these shares of stock, or whether it continued to be the pledgee of the stock,—whether the stock had become theirs in the sense in which we use in ordinary speech the word 'owner,' or whether it had been continued to be pledged to them as collateral security for the payment of the note which has been offered in evidence."

Upon the issue thus submitted the jury returned a verdict for the defendant, upon which judgment was entered, and the case taken to the circuit court of appeals upon writ of error. That court affirmed the judgment. 46 C. C. A. 509, 108 Fed. 475.

Mr. Asa W. Waters argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The trial court erred in excluding from the jury the evidence that defendant, upon its notice that it owned the shares, had been entered upon the books of the bank, before its failure, as a stockholder, by the bank's cashier.

Carey v. Williams, 25 C. C. A. 227, 51 U. S. App. 204, 79 Fed. 906; Turnbull v. Payson, 95 U. S. 418, 24 L. ed. 437.

The refusal of the trial court to permit the assignees to testify that their memory was refreshed and recollections confirmed as to the representations made by the officers of the defendant company to them, by their own official report, was error.

Greenl. Ev. Lewis's ed. 1896, § 436.

Defendant in error is estopped to deny ownership of the 172½ shares, to the insolvent bank's creditors.

Priestly v. Fernie, 3 Hurlst. & C. 977;

Bigelow, Estoppel, 5th ed. 124; Kingsley v. Davis, 104 Mass. 178; Kirk v. Hartman, 63 Pa. 97; 2 Morawetz, Priv. Corp. § 870; Hobart v. Johnson, 19 Blatchf. 359, 8 Fed. 495; Langtry v. Wallace, 38 C. C. A. 510, 97 Fed. 867; Upton v. Englehart, 3 Dill. 496, Fed. Cas. No. 16,800; Schalucky v. Field, 124 Ill. 617, 16 N. E. 904; Sawyer v. Hoag, 17 Wall. 610, 21 L. ed. 731; Bouvier, Law Dict. title Estoppel; Bigelow, Estoppel, 4th ed. 445; Lewis v. Carstairs, 5 Watts. & S. 205; Turnipseed v. Hudson, 50 Miss. 429, 19 Am. Rep. 15; Mayer v. Ramsey, 46 Tex. 371; Coleman v. Pearce, 26 Minn. 123, 1 N. W. 846; Vermont Copper Min. Co. v. Ormsby, 47 Vt. 709; Barnard v. German American Seminary, 49 Mich. 444, 13 N. W. 811; Pawson v. Brown, 10 C. C. A. 135, 27 U. S. App. 49, 61 Fed. 274; Philadelphia, W. & B. R. Co. v. Howard, 13 How. 307, 335, 337, 14 L. ed. 157, 169, 170; Dickerson v. Colgrove, 100 U. S. 578, 580, 584, 25 L. ed. 618, 619, 621; Southern L. Ins. Co. v. McCain, 96 U. S. 74-86, 24 L. ed. 653, 654; Bronson v. Chappell, 12 Wall. 681, sub nom. Townsend v. Chappell, 20 L. ed. 436; Thompson v. First Nat. Bank, 111 U. S. 529, 28 L. ed. 507, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 689; Ewart, Estoppel.

The registry of the shares on the books of the bank by defendant in error in the name of W. W. Hand, its agent, in contemplation of law was a registry, upon the facts in this case, in its own name, and closes its mouth to contradict ownership, just as if its own name had been registered. This is because of the legal identity of agent and principal. Hubbell v. Houghton, 86 Fed. 547; Davis v. Stevens, 17 Blatchf. 259, Fed. Cas. No. 3,653; Case v. Small, 4 Woods, 78, 10 Fed. 722.

The defendant in this case is not a "mere pledgee;" it at least became a mortgagee, and it is "registered" upon the books of the bank in legal effect, because of the legal identity of agent and principal, and further, because the cashier of the bank did, in fact, enter its name in the stock ledger of the bank as a shareholder.

Germania Nat. Bank v. Case, 99 U. S. 628, 25 L. ed. 448.

If the owner transfers his shares to another person as collateral security for a debt due to the latter from such owner, and if, by the direction or with the knowledge of the pledgee, the shares are placed on the books of the association in such a way as to imply that he is the real owner, then he may be treated as a shareholder.

Pauly v. State Loan & T. Co. 165 U. S. 606, 41 L. ed. 844, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 465.

The estoppel upon all the evidence is a question of law for the court.

Lewis v. Carstairs, 5 Watts & S. 205; Keating v. Orne, 77 Pa. 89; Ewart, Estoppel, pp. 189-191.

Mr. Richard C. Dale argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error:

A mere pledgee of stock is not chargeable with the stockholder's liability, where he is not registered as owner.

Anderson v. Philadelphia Warehouse Co.

111 U. S. 479, 28 L. ed. 478, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 525; National Park Bank v. Harmon, 25 C. C. A. 214, 51 U. S. App. 148, 79 Fed. 891; Wilson v. Merchants' Loan & T. Co. 39 C. C. A. 231, 98 Fed. 688; Robinson v. Southern Nat. Bank, 36 C. C. A. 584, 94 Fed. 964; Matteson v. Dent, 176 U. S. 521, 44 L. ed. 571, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 419; Pauly v. State Loan & T. Co. 165 U. S. 606, 41 L. ed. 844, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 465.

The books of a corporation in themselves are not evidence, against persons charged as stockholders, to establish the fact of their ownership of stock.

Sigua Iron Co. v. Greene, 44 C. C. A. 221, 104 Fed. 854, 31 C. C. A. 458, 88 Fed. 203, 31 C. C. A. 477, 59 U. S. App. 555, 88 Fed. 207; Carey v. Williams, 25 C. C. A. 227, 51 U. S. App. 204, 79 Fed. 906.

Mr. Justice Brown delivered the opinion of the court:

There being but little conflict in the testimony as to the actual facts, the question really is whether the court should have submitted the case to the jury, or instructed a verdict for the plaintiff.

By Rev. Stat. § 5151 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3465), "the shareholders of every national banking association shall be held individually responsible, equally and ratably, and not one for another, for all contracts, debts and engagements for such association to the extent of the amount of their stock therein, at the par value thereof, in addition to the amount invested in such shares;" and by § 5234 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3507), the receiver may, upon order of the proper court, enforce this individual liability.

Most of the cases arising under this section have turned upon the question whether defendant was in fact the owner of the shares. In this connection the following propositions may be considered as settled:

1. That liability may be established by allowing one's name to appear upon the books of the corporation as owner, though in fact he be only a pledgee. Pullman v. Upton, 96 U. S. 328, 24 L. ed. 818. Nor can the real owner exonerate himself from responsibility by making a colorable transfer of the stock, with the understanding that, at his request, it shall be retransferred. Germania Nat. Bank v. Case, 99 U. S. 628, 25 L. ed. 448; Bowden v. Johnson, 107 U. S. 251, sub nom. Adams v. Johnson, 27 L. ed. 386, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 246; Stuart v. Hayden, 169 U. S. 1, 42 L. ed. 639, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 274.

2. Stockholders of record are liable for unpaid instalments, though in fact they may have parted with their stock, or held it for others. Hawkins v. Glenn, 131 U. S. 319, 33 L. ed. 184, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 739.

3. A mere pledgee, however, who receives from his debtor a transfer of shares, surrenders the certificate to the bank and takes out new ones in his own name, in which he is described as "pledgee," and holds them afterwards in good faith, and as *collateral security for the payment of his debt, is not subject to personal liability as a shareholder. Pauly v. State Loan & T. Co. 165 U. S. 606, 41 L. ed. 844, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 465. But it is otherwise if he allow his name to appear on the book as owner, or, being the owner, makes a colorable transfer of the stock. Germania Nat. Bank v. Case, 99 U. S. 628, 25 L. ed. 448.

Three cases in this court are specially pertinent to the one under consideration, and we have little more to do than to point out the salient facts of each and determine by which one of them this case is controlled.

In Germania Nat. Bank v. Case, 99 U. S. 628, 25 L. ed. 448, it appeared that the Germania Bank lent $14,000 to the firm of Phelps, McCullough, & Co., who, to secure the payment of the loan, pledged to the bank 100 shares of the stock of the Crescent City Bank, with power, on nonpayment of the note, to dispose of the stock for cash at public or private sale, without recourse to legal proceedings. At the same time a power of attorney was given, authorizing a transfer of the stock to the Germania Bank. The note not being paid at maturity, a transfer was made to the Germania Bank on the transfer books of the Crescent City Bank. The stock was subsequently transferred to one of the clerks of the Germania Bank with an understanding between him and the officers of the bank that he should retransfer it at their request. It was held that, notwithstanding the transfer to the clerk, the stock remained subject to the bank's control; that the transfer was made to evade the liability of the true owners; and that, as Phelps, McCullough, & Co. had ceased to be the owners of the stock, the bank was liable. The liability was put by the court upon the ground that the stock was transferred to the Germania Bank upon the transfer books of the Crescent City Bank, and thereby the bank became subject to the liabilities of a stockholder, and that, as a transfer of the stock to its clerk, Waldo, was colorable, it had not exonerated itself from that liability.

The case is distinguishable from the instant case by the fact that the stock was actually transferred to the bank upon the transfer books of the Crescent City Bank, which thus appeared as owner, and that the subsequent transfer to Waldo was merely [248] *colorable. There was also the further fact that the Crescent City Bank was in a failing condition when the transfer to Waldo was made, and there was no reasonable doubt that the defendant, Germania Bank, knew it, and made the transfer to escape responsibility. In the present case the stock was never transferred to the defendant, and the transfer to Hand took place within two months of the time of the original pledge, when the Keystone Bank was supposed to be perfectly solvent, and remained so for more than a year thereafter, when the assessment of 25 per cent was made, the bank continuing in business until June 20, 1897, more than six years after the transfer to Hand.

In Anderson v. Philadelphia Warehouse 189 U. S.

Co. 111 U. S. 479, 28 L. ed. 478, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 525, the law as laid down in the prior case was somewhat relaxed, and a tendency manifested to look more closely at the equities. In that case Blumer & Co. borrowed a sum of money from the defendant, and as security for the loan transferred 450 shares of stock of the First National Bank of Allentown standing in the name of one Kern, a partner in the firm of Blumer & Co., on the books of the bank, and had a new certificate issued in the name of one Henry, president of the defendant warehouse company. The fact of the transfer of this stock to its president was brought to the attention of the directors of the warehouse company, who deemed it inadvisable to have the stock stand in the name of the president, and it was therefore transferred to one McCloskey, a porter in the employ of the company, and irresponsible. McCloskey never had possession of the certificate, and, at the request of the warehouse company, gave a power of attorney for the sale and transfer of the stock, and shortly thereafter died. The stock was subsequently transferred to one Ferris, another employee, also irresponsible. Dividends were regularly paid on this stock to Kern, and the warehouse company never acted as a shareholder. It was held that, as there was no evidence of fraud or bad faith,—as the warehouse company was never the owner of the stock, and never held itself out as such; never consented to a transfer of the stock on the books; never claimed dividends, or acted as a shareholder, or ever pretended to be anything but a mere pledgee,—it was not liable. *Said the court: [249] "The creditors were put in no worse position by the transfers that were made than they would have been if the stock had remained in the name of Kern, or Blumer & Co. who were always the real owners." It was held that, as the defendant promptly declined to allow itself to stand as a registered shareholder, because it was unwilling to incur the liability such a registry would impose, and asked that the transfer be made to McCloskey, from that time the case stood precisely as it would if the transfer had been originally made to him instead of to Henry, the president of the company. "All this was done in good faith, when the bank was in good credit and paying large dividends, and years before its failure or even its embarrassment." The case differs from this only in the fact that here there was some evidence (enough to go to the jury) that defendant had held itself out as the owner of the shares.

In Pauly v. State Loan & T. Co. 165 U. S. 606, 41 L. ed. 844, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 465, the stock which was delivered to the defendant as collateral security was reissued, and new certificates issued to the defendant as "pledgee." It was held that, as the stock book gave information that the defendant held the stock as pledgee only, it was not liable to an assessment. See also Robinson v. Southern Nat. Bank, 180 U. S. 295, 45 L. ed. 536, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 383; National Park Bank v. Harmon, 25 C. C. A. 214, 51

U. S. App. 148, 79 Fed. 891, S. C. 172 U. S. 644, 43 L. ed. 1182, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 877.

There is no doubt whatever that the defendant originally took blank transfers of the certificates of stock in question as security for its loan to the Delamaters; that at that time the stock was worth its face value, $23,000; had paid dividends for twenty-seven years prior thereto, and was in good credit. To charge the defendant with liability as a shareholder it must be made to appear that it had either become the owner of the shares in fact, or had held itself out to be the owner, and thereby estopped itself to deny its liability as such.

[250] The first change in its attitude toward the stock took place within two months after the original pledge, and was caused by the failure of the Delamaters, which occurred within twenty days after the loan was made. The change consisted in sending back, January 10, 1891, the original certificates, and requesting the bank to transfer the shares to Hand, which was *done. Defendant evidently did not then intend to become the owner of the stock, as, immediately after receiving notice of the failure of the Delamaters, the vice president of the company addressed a note to them, or their assignees, calling attention to the note and the pledge of the stock, and saying that if they were prepared to anticipate the payment of the note and have the collateral returned, they would be glad to so arrange it; and in a further letter of May 5, 1891, to the Delamaters, he notified them that the note was secured by the Keystone Bank stock, and "if we cannot secure payment for the note and interest, I have to notify you that we shall proceed to sell the collateral at auction." It also appears that on July 7, 1892, the vice president of the company addressed a letter to the auditor of the Delamater estate, notifying him of their claim against that estate upon the note for $15,000, and stating that the company held the shares of the Keystone Bank as collateral for the loan. Thereafter, and on March 30, 1893, the company received a dividend of $795.60, to which it was undoubtedly entitled as pledgee.

Even so late as 1894 the vice president of the defendant company addressed a note to the Keystone Bank, requesting information regarding their business; whether there had been any sales of the stock and at what price, and saying that "as we have a loan of $22,000 depending upon the value of 172½ shares, we desire the above information." It is true that the defendant in 1892 paid an assessment of $5,750 upon this stock, but the amount was charged to the Delamaters as an additional advance, and was evidently paid to save its interest in the stock from forfeiture. Rev. Stat. § 5205 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3495), as amended in 1876 (19 Stat. at L. 64, chap. 156, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 3509, 2398, 3500, 3514). It is not easy to see how the defendant could have done otherwise than it did without prejudice to its own rights, as well as to the rights of the assignees of the pledgeors.

It is also evident that the assignees of the Delamaters treated the interest of the defendant in the stock as a mere pledge, since in their account filed in the court of common pleas of Crawford county, July 13, 1896, they charge themselves in the account as follows: "Equities in stocks and bonds, pledges as collateral on loan unadjusted, as follows: (a) $23,000, stock of *the Key-[251] stone National Bank of Erie, pledged for a loan of $15,000, appraised at $8,000." Proof was offered that in this account the assignees had made another entry, "said stock having been converted by the holder of the note, and said stock having been assessed to the amount of 25 per cent of its face value, did not sell for enough to pay the debt for which it was pledged." This memorandum was excluded, and properly so, by the court below, inasmuch as it was a mere assertion of fact made by these assignees without the knowledge of the defendant. The company could not be bound by a statement thus made by these assignees without its knowledge or acquiescence. Again, it was obviously untrue, as the stock had never been sold. Evidently all that was intended by the word "converted" was that the stock was not worth enough "to pay the debt for which it was pledged." There can be no doubt that defendant would have been willing at any time to surrender the stock upon payment of the debt, and that it retained it simply because it was forced to do so.

It is also true that a number of letters were written during the time the defendant held possession of its certificates, in which it made inquiries as to the value of the stock, the number of sales made, and spoke of itself as holding or owning the stock which it desired to sell, and that Hand once or twice voted the shares by proxy; but the bank clearly could not have been misled, as the nature of such ownership was shown in the letter of April 4, 1894, in which they spoke of a loan of $22,000 depending upon the value of 172½ shares, and repeatedly thereafter, and as late as April, 1897, said they were anxious to sell this stock "to close an account" for which it was collateral.

If such representations had been made either by a formal entry upon the books of the bank or to the public, or to anyone who could have been prejudiced by them, defendant might be held to be estopped, but as they were made to officers of the bank, who understood perfectly the capacity in which the defendant retained the stock, it was properly held to be a question for the jury.

Plaintiff also offered to show in the stock ledger of the *bank over the name of W. W. [252] Hand, in an account opened with him at the request of the defendant, a pencil memorandum at the top of the page in these words: "Fidelity Trust & Safe Deposit Company, Philadelphia." As it does not appear who made this memorandum, when or for what purpose it was made, or what it was intended to indicate, it was properly excluded from the consideration of the jury. It was probably explanatory of the fact that correspondence with regard to Hand's account was kept up with the defendant company. It had no tendency, however, to show anything inconsistent with defendant's position as pledgee of the stock. As the stock stood in Hand's name, the entry had no tendency to prove ownership in another. Carey v. Williams, 25 C. C. A. 227, 51 U. S. App. 204, 79 Fed. 906; Sigua Iron Co. v. Greene, 44 C. C. A. 221, 104 Fed. 854.

The fact that the certificates were put in the name of Hand, though calculated upon its face to awaken suspicion, wrought no material change in the situation. If defendant were in fact the owner of the shares, it could not avoid liability by listing them in the name of another. Germania Nat. Bank v. Case, 99 U. S. 628, 25 L. ed. 448. If it were the pledgee, it had the option of listing these shares in its own name as pledgee; Pauly v. State Loan & T. Co. 165 U. S. 606, 41 L. ed. 844, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 465; or in the name of another and irresponsible party, even though this were done for the purpose of avoiding liability. Anderson v. Philadelphia Warehouse Co. 111 U. S. 479, 28 L. ed. 478, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 525. The creditors were not injured, since if the exact truth had appeared upon the face of the certificates, by registering the shares as pledgee, they would have had no recourse against the defendant. Upon the other hand, if defendant had really owned the shares, it would have been a fraud to list them in the name of Hand. Perhaps it would have been less open to criticism to have listed them in its own name as pledgee, but as its failure to do so, under the theory of the defendant that it was in fact the pledgee, misled no one, it should not be held liable for what was done in good faith and with no intent to defraud.

The case then really turned upon the actual ownership of the shares, and this question was properly left to the jury as one of fact. Although the construction of [253] written instruments is one *for the court, where the case turns upon the proper conclusions to be drawn from a series of letters, particularly of a commercial character, taken in connection with other facts and circumstances, it is one which is properly referred to a jury. Brown v. M'Gran, 14 Pet. 479, 10 L. ed. 550. In that case it was said by Mr. Justice Story that "there certainly are cases in which, from the different senses of the words used or their obscure and indeterminate reference to unexplained circumstances, the true interpretation of the language may be left to the consideration of the jury for the purpose of carrying into effect the real intention of the parties. This is especially applicable to cases of commercial correspondence, where the real objects, and intentions, and agreements of the parties are often to be arrived at only by allusions to circumstances which are but imperfectly developed." This case is specially applicable to the one under consideration, inasmuch as plaintiff relies chiefly upon the fact that defendant, in its correspondence with the bank, spoke of itself as owning or holding the shares standing in the name of Hand. Under the circumstances, it is entirely possible that the word "owner" may have been used in its ordinary sense, or as representing a pledgee upon whom the ownership of the shares had been cast by the failure of the pledgeor, and the depreciation of the value of the shares to an amount insufficient to pay the note. It can hardly be possible that the statute was intended to impose a liability upon a pledgee who had taken the shares as collateral security, and, through the failure of the pledgeors, had been forced against its will into the position of ownership. Such a result might operate to destroy altogether the possibility of raising money upon the deposit of national bank shares as collateral. See also Fagin v. Connolly, 25 Mo. 94, 69 Am. Dec. 450; Prather v. Ross, 17 Ind. 495; Roberts v. Bonaparte, 73 Md. 191, 10 L. R. A. 689, 20 Atl. 918; Macdonald v. Morrill, 154 Mass. 270, 28 N. E. 259.

This case could only have been withdrawn from the jury upon the theory that, taking all the testimony together, there could be but one reasonable interpretation put upon the conduct of the defendant with respect to these certificates. Such, in our opinion, is not the case. The fact undoubtedly was that the *defendant did not intend to impose [254] upon itself the statutory liability of a shareholder, and, considering that it had not only lost its original debt of $15,000 (less a small dividend) by the failure of the Delamaters, as well as the additional assessment of $5,750, paid to save the shares from forfeiture, that there was no evidence of fraud or double dealing in its conduct, and that its liability was purely a technical one, it was not unnatural for the jury to require that such liability should be clearly established, before imposing upon it an additional burden of $17,250, for which it had received no possible consideration.

Some stress is laid by the plaintiff upon the fact that neither the Delamaters nor their assignees ever gave their consent to the transfer of the stock to Hand; but, as the power of attorney originally given upon the deposit of the stock expressly authorized such transfer, and the rights of the defendant could only be protected in that way, there is no force in the objection, particularly in view of the fact that neither the Delamaters nor their assignees complained of such transfer. Being an act which it was authorized to take as pledgee, it cannot be made responsible as owner therefor.

There was no error in the action of the Court of Appeals, and its judgment is therefore affirmed.

Mr. Justice Harlan dissented.

[255]*CHARLES J. GLIDDEN, Trustee, Plff. in Err.,
v.

JOHN H. HARRINGTON, Collector.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 255-260.)

Constitutional law — due process in taxation proceedings.

Due process of law is not violated by proceedings taken in conformity with a state statute providing that personal property held in trust shall be assessed to the trustee, which requires the assessors to give public notice to the inhabitants to return a list of their personal estates, and, in case of failure to make such return, to ascertain as nearly as possible the particulars of the estate, and estimate its just value, which shall be conclusive upon the owner unless he can show a reasonable excuse for omitting to make his return; and which makes provision for an application to the assessors for an abatement of taxes, and for an appeal to the county commissioners in case of a refusal of the assessors to abate the tax.

[No. 199.]

Argued March 12, 1903. Decided April 6, 1903.

IN ERROR to the Superior Court of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts to review a judgment entered in pursuance of the mandate of the Supreme Judicial Court of that State in favor of plaintiff in a suit to recover a tax upon personal property. Affirmed.

See same case below, 179 Mass. 486, 61 N. E. 54.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brown:

This was an action brought in the superior court of Middlesex county by Harrington, collector of taxes for the city of Lowell, to recover a tax upon personal property, assessed upon the defendant as trustee, for the year 1889.

The case resulted in a verdict for the plaintiff, which was carried by exceptions to the supreme judicial court, where the exceptions were ordered overruled (179 Mass. 486, 61 N. E. 54) and the case remanded to the superior court, in which judgment was entered.

Mr. Harvey M. Shepard argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The statutes in question provide a remedy which, if the person assessed is an inhabitant of the town or city levying the tax, and has property subject to taxation by the assessors, is exclusive. He cannot recover such a tax if paid under protest, or defend in an action by the collector to collect it, on the ground that the assessment is partially unlawful.

Bates v. Boston, 5 Cush. 93; Wright v. Boston, 9 Cush. 233; Bourne v. Boston, 2 Gray, 494; Davis v. Macy, 124 Mass. 193; Chapel of Good Shepherd v. Boston, 120 Mass. 212.

Whether the excess is due to placing too great a valuation upon property lawfully taxable, or to including property for which the person is not lawfully taxable, there is merely an overvaluation, and the remedy must be by abatement.

Little v. Greenleaf, 7 Mass. 236; Osborn v. Danvers, 6 Pick. 98; Lincoln v. Worcester, 8 Cush. 55.

In this respect the three classes of taxes—polls, personal property, and real property—are separate. If a person is properly assessable for any tax of a certain class, the inclusion of property of that class for which he is not properly assessable can be shown only in proceedings for abatement.

Salem Iron Factory Co. v. Danvers, 10 Mass. 514; Preston v. Boston, 12 Pick. 7; Lincoln v. Worcester, 8 Cush. 55.

An injunction does not lie to restrain the collection of a tax or assessment.

Brewer v. Springfield, 97 Mass. 152; Loud v. Charlestown, 99 Mass. 208; Norton v. Boston, 119 Mass. 194.

The decisions of a state court upon the construction of its own statutes are final, and are adopted by this court without regard to this court's opinion of their correctness.

State Railroad Tax Cases, 92 U. S. 617, sub nom. Taylor v. Secor, 23 L. ed. 674; New York v. Weaver, 100 U. S. 539, 25 L. ed. 705; Bell's Gap R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 134 U. S. 232, 33 L. ed. 892, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 533; McElwaine v. Brush, 142 U. S. 155, 35 L. ed. 971, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 156; Wood v. Brady, 150 U. S. 18, 37 L. ed. 981, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 6; First Nat. Bank v. Ayers, 160 U. S. 660, 40 L. ed. 573, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 412; First Nat. Bank v. Chchalis County, 166 U. S. 440, 41 L. ed. 1069, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 629; W. W. Cargill Co. v. Minnesota, 180 U. S. 452, 45 L. ed. 619, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 423; Columbus Southern R. Co. v. Wright, 151 U. S. 475, 38 L. ed. 241, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 396; Pittsburgh, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Backus, 154 U. S. 425, 38 L. ed. 1036, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1414; Commercial Nat. Bank v. Chambers, 182 U. S. 556, 45 L. ed. 1227, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 863.

The Federal requirement of due process of law extends to judicial, as well as to legislative, action of the states. The judgment of a court may invade the requirement, no less than a statute.

Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Chicago, 166 U. S. 226, 41 L. ed. 979, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581.

NOTE.—As to what constitutes due process of law—see Kuntz v. Sumption (Ind.) 2 L. R. A. 655, and note; Re Gannon (R. I.) 5 L. R. A. 359, and note; Ulman v. Baltimore (Md.) 11 L. R. A. 224, and note; and Gillman v. Tucker (N. Y.) 13 L. R. A. 304, and note. And see notes to People v. O'Brien (N. Y.) 2 L. R. A. 255; Pear- son v. Yewdall, 24 L. ed. U. S. 436; and Wilson v. North Carolina, 42 L. ed. U. S. 865.
798

On notice and hearing required to constitute due process of law—see notes to Kuntz v. Sumption (Ind.) 2 L. R. A. 657; Chauvin v. Valiton (Mont.) 3 L. R. A. 194; and Ulman v. Baltimore (Md.) 11 L. R. A. 225.

The collection of taxes is within the phrase "due process of law."

United States v. Ferreira, 13 How. 40, 14 L. ed. 42.

The courts have uniformly recognized the necessity of some sort of hearing before property can be seized under the power of taxation. Notice and an opportunity to be heard are essential to due process of law.

Violett v. Alexandria, 92 Va. 561, 31 L. R. A. 382, 23 S. E. 909; Bowler v. Huston, 30 Gratt. 273, 32 Am. Rep. 673; Cook v. Gregg, 46 N. Y. 442; Happy v. Mosher, 48 N. Y. 317; Overing v. Fooite, 65 N. Y. 263; Stuart v. Palmer, 74 N. Y. 183, 30 Am. Rep. 289; Patten v. Green, 13 Cal. 329; Mulligan v. Smith, 59 Cal. 206; Boorman v. Santa Barbara, 65 Cal. 313, 4 Pac. 31; People v. Pittsburg R. Co. 67 Cal. 625, 8 Pac. 381; Brewster v. Newark, 11 N. J. Eq. 118; Savannah, F. & W. R. Co. v. Savannah, 96 Ga. 680, 23 S. E. 847; Thomas v. Gain, 35 Mich. 155, 24 Am. Rep. 535; Kundinger v. Saginaw, 59 Mich. 355, 26 N. W. 634; Marshall v. McDaniel, 12 Bush, 378; Dasey v. Skinner, 33 N. Y. S. R. 15, 11 N. Y. Supp. 821, 823; Griswold College v. Davenport, 65 Iowa, 633, 22 N. W. 904; McFadden v. Longham, 58 Tex. 579; Relfe v. Columbia L. Ins. Co. 11 Mo. App. 378; Darling v. Gunn, 50 Ill. 424; Kuntz v. Sumption, 117 Ind. 1, 2 L. R. A. 655, 19 N. E. 474; Griffin v. Mixon, 38 Miss. 424; Neave v. Weather, 3 Q. B. 984; Den ex dem. Murray v. Hoboken Land & Improv. Co. 18 How. 276, 15 L. ed. 374; Railroad Tax Case, 8 Sawy. 238, 13 Fed. 722; Santa Clara County v. Southern P. R. Co. 9 Sawy. 165, 18 Fed. 385; Meyers v. Shields, 61 Fed. 713; Davidson v. New Orleans, 96 U. S. 97, 24 L. ed. 616; Palmer v. McMahon, 133 U. S. 660, 33 L. ed. 772, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 324; Lent v. Tillson, 140 U. S. 316, 35 L. ed. 419, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 825; Holden v. Hardy, 169 U. S. 366, 42 L. ed. 780, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 383; King v. Mullins, 171 U. S. 404, 43 L. ed. 214, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 925; Hagar v. Reclamation Dist. No. 108, 111 U. S. 701, 28 L. ed. 569, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 663.

A notice essential to confer jurisdiction upon any tribunal in any proceeding must point to the party to whom it is addressed, to the tribunal in which, and to the time when, and to the place where, he may be heard in that proceeding.

State, Brinkley, Prosecutor, v. Perth Amboy, 29 N. J. L. 259; State, Boice, Prosecutor, v. Plainfield, 38 N. J. L. 96; State, Central R. Co., Prosecutors, v. Bayonne, 49 N. J. L. 313, 8 Atl. 296; Lent v. Tillson, 140 U. S. 316, 35 L. ed. 419, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 825.

Due process of law implies the right to be present before the tribunal which pronounces judgment upon the question of life, liberty, or property, in its most comprehensive sense; to be heard by testimony or otherwise, and to have the right of controverting, by proof, every material fact which bears on the question of right in the matter involved. If any question of fact or liability be conclusively presumed against him, this is not due process of law.

Zeigler v. South & North Ala. R. Co. 58 Ala. 594; McGavock v. Omaha, 40 Neb. 75, 58 N. W. 543.

A distinction is to be made, in considering the legality of assessment laws, between cases where taxes can be collected by distraint or arrest, and cases where the inhabitant has an opportunity to defend in court.

Davidson v. New Orleans, 96 U. S. 97, 24 L. ed. 616; Meyers v. Shields, 61 Fed. 713; Hagar v. Reclamation Dist. No. 108, 111 U. S. 701, 28 L. ed. 569, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 663.

Opportunity to redeem property forfeited under the statute was given under the statute invalidated by the decision in Marshall v. McDaniel, 12 Bush, 378.

Where the city charter provided for appointment, by the board of aldermen, of assessors to assess damage caused by the construction of highways, no provision for notice to property holders being included, nor for the promulgation of their decision when made, it was held that the statute was not rendered valid by the provision that any property holder affected might appeal to a jury in a superior court.

Savannah, F. & W. R. Co. v. Savannah, 96 Ga. 680, 23 S. E. 847; Violett v. Alexandria, 92 Va. 561, 31 L. R. A. 382, 23 S. E. 909.

The Massachusetts statutes discriminate against the inhabitant who has failed to bring in a list. Discrimination of some sort is usual in several states, and may be unobjectionable, but it cannot go to the extent of inflicting a penalty without a trial.

Railroad Tax Case, 8 Sawy. 238, 13 Fed. 722; Meyers v. Shields, 61 Fed. 713; King v. Mullins, 171 U. S. 404, 43 L. ed. 214, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 925; Marshall v. McDaniel, 12 Bush, 378.

It is not within the power of the legislature by a simple act to deprive a person of his property by declaring it shall be forfeited to the state. A judicial judgment is necessary under our Constitution and form of government.

Griffin v. Mixon, 38 Miss. 424.

There can be no proceedings against life, liberty, or property, which may result in the deprivation of either, without the observance of those general rules established in our system of jurisprudence for the security of private rights.

Hagar v. Reclamation Dist. No. 108, 111 U. S. 708, 28 L. ed. 572, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 663.

Mr. George F. Richardson argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Francis W. Qua and William A. Hogan, filed a brief for defendant in error:

In judging what is due process of law, respect must be had to the cause and object of the taking, whether under the taxing power, the power of eminent domain, or the power of assessment for local improvements, or none of these, and, if found to be suitable or admissible in the special case, it will be adjudged to be due process of law, but if found to be arbitrary, oppressive, and unjust, it may be declared to be not due process of law.

Davidson v. New Orleans, 96 U. S. 97, 24 L. ed. 616.

Proceedings to raise the public revenue by levying and collecting taxes are not necessarily judicial, and due process of law as applied to that subject does not imply or require the right to such notice and hearing as are considered to be essential to the validity of the proceedings and judgments of judicial tribunals. Notice by statute is generally the only notice given, and that has been held sufficient.

Kentucky Railroad Tax Cases, 115 U. S. 321, sub nom. Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. v. Kentucky, 29 L. ed. 414, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 57.

A tax law which grants to the taxpayer a right to be heard on the assessment of his property before final judgment provides due process of law for determining the valuation, although it makes no provision for a rehearing.

Pittsburgh, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Backus, 154 U. S. 421, 38 L. ed. 1031, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1414.

If the supreme court of a state has acted in consonance with the constitutional laws of a state and its own procedure, it could only be in very exceptional circumstances that this court would feel justified in saying that there had been a failure of due legal process.

Allen v. Georgia, 166 U. S. 138, 41 L. ed. 949, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 525.

The manner of notice, and the specific period of time in the proceedings when a party may be heard, are not very material, if reasonable opportunity is afforded before he has been deprived of his property or the lien thereon is irrevocably fixed. So it has been held that it is sufficient if the party is accorded the right of appeal or to be heard upon an application for abatement, or the assessment is to be enforced by a suit to which he is to be made a party.

King v. Portland, 184 U. S. 61, 46 L. ed. 431, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 290.

A property owner need not have notice of every step of the proceedings.

Weyerhaeuser v. Minnesota, 176 U. S. 550, 44 L. ed. 583, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 485; Voigt v. Detroit, 184 U. S. 115, 46 L. ed. 459, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 337.

If the essential requisites of full notice and an opportunity to defend were present, this court will accept the interpretation given by the state court as to the regularity, under the state statute, of the practice pursued in the particular case.

Simon v. Craft, 182 U. S. 427, 45 L. ed. 1165, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 836.

The due process clause in the 14th Amendment to the Constitution does not require that the proceedings in a state court should be by a particular mode, but only that there should be a regular course of proceedings in which notice was given of the claim asserted, and an opportunity offered to defend against it.

New Orleans Waterworks Co. v. Louisiana

ana, 185 U. S. 336, 46 L. ed. 936, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 691

Due process of law, under New York Constitution, need not be a legal proceeding according to the course of the common law; neither must there be a personal notice to the party whose property is in question. It is sufficient if a kind of notice is provided by which it is reasonably probable that the party proceeded against will be apprised of what is going on against him, and an opportunity offered him to defend.

Happy v. Mosher, 48 N. Y. 313.

Mr. Justice Brown delivered the opinion of the court:

This case involves the question whether the proceedings taken to enforce this tax deprived the defendant Glidden of his property without due process of law, within the meaning of the 14th Amendment.

The facts of the case are substantially that a resolution for the assessment of taxes for the year 1889 was passed by the municipal council of Lowell, and approved by the mayor on March 22 of that year; and it was ordered that a copy of the resolution be furnished to the assessors on or before April 1. Before proceeding to make the assessment, the assessors, in the latter part of April, gave proper notice to the inhabitants of the city, by posting in public places in the several wards of said city, notifications that they were about to assess taxes, and requiring the inhabitants to bring into the assessor's office on or before June 15 of that year true lists of their polls and personal estates not exempt from taxation.

Two members of the board of assessors were appointed a committee "to inquire into telephone matters for taxation." The committee "advised that a suitable person be sent to Albany to look up matters in that direction," which committee was authorized by the board to use its discretion in the matter. The expert employed by the committee to look up foreign corporations reported stock of the Erie Telegraph & Telephone Company held by individuals in Lowell, and mentioned seven trustees one of whom was the defendant. On July 25, 1889, the board "voted to tax (assess) the directors of the Erie Telegraph & Telephone Company as trustees $160,000 each." There were $1,600,000 held by ten trustees, of which the defendant was one. No list of personal estate held in trust had been or was submitted by [257] defendant. The tax bill, as trustee, was delivered personally to the defendant about September first. About two months after such assessment, September 10, the warrant for the collection of the taxes was put in the hands of the collector.

On February 24, 1890, defendant filed a statement to the effect that, although he was informed that certain shares of stock stood in his name as trustee, he was not the owner of the shares and not taxable therefor, and thereupon made application as trustee for an abatement, upon which application a number of hearings were had. But, before the proceedings were determined, this action was brought by a succeeding collector.

Upon the trial in the superior court, it appeared that the defendant was assessed as trustee upon certain shares of three telephone companies, which the assessors understood were held by him in trust for the Erie Telegraph & Telephone Company. The basis of valuation adopted by the assessors was the market price of the shares of this latter company. Defendant offered evidence tending to show that at the time of the assessment he owned no personal property whatever as trustee; that said shares were owned by the Erie Telegraph & Telephone Company and were in its possession and control, although they stood in his name; and further evidence tending to show that said property was not taxable to him, and was not within the jurisdiction of the assessors or of the state. This evidence was excluded by the court, which ruled that the only questions for the jury were "whether the assessors ascertained as nearly as possible the particulars of the personal estate held by the defendant as trustee, for the purposes of making this assessment, and whether, having obtained those particulars, they estimated such property at its just value, according to their best information and belief."

[258] The court held the validity of the tax to depend upon the question whether the assessors had jurisdiction to make the assessment. Having found that the defendant was an inhabitant of Lowell, and had taxable personal property there, it was thought that he was within the jurisdiction of the assessors, *and that it made no difference whether such property was all held by him individually, or partly as individual and partly as trustee, inasmuch as it was all a personal tax. The court, having held that the proceedings conformed to the state statute, and that defendant's only remedy was the statutory proceeding for abatement, it only remains for us to consider whether these proceedings constitute due process of law within the 14th Amendment.

This was not a special assessment, but the ordinary annual tax upon personal property. The act requires that all personal estate, within or without the commonwealth, shall be assessed to the owner; that personal property held in trust, the income of which is payable to another person, shall be assessed to the trustee in the city or town in which such other person resides, if within the commonwealth; and, if he resides out of the commonwealth, shall be assessed in the place where the trustee resides. Before making the assessment, the assessors shall give notice by posting in some public place or places; that in case the taxpayer shall fail to make return, they shall ascertain, as nearly as possible, the particulars of the estate and estimate its just value, which shall be conclusive upon the owner, unless he can show a reasonable excuse for omitting to make his return. Provision is also made for an application to the assessors for an abatement of taxes, and for an appeal to the county commissioners in case of a refusal of the assessors to abate the tax.

These proceedings are sufficient to constitute due process of law. Although, with respect to this class of taxes, we have never had occasion to determine exactly what the 14th Amendment required, we have held that the proceedings should be construed with the utmost liberality, and, while a notice may be required at some stage of the proceedings, such notice need not be personal, but may be given by publication or by posting notices in public places. It can only be said that such notices shall be given as are suitable in a given case, and it is only where the proceedings are arbitrary, oppressive, or unjust that they are declared to be not due process of law. Davidson v. New Orleans, 96 U. S. 97, 24 L. ed. 616; Hagar v. Reclamation Dist. No. 108, 111 U. S. 701, 28 L. ed. 569, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 663; **Paulsen* [259] v. Portland, 149 U. S. 30, 37 L. ed. 637, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 750; Pittsburgh, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Backus, 154 U. S. 421, 38 L. ed. 1031, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1114; Allen v. Georgia, 166 U. S. 138, 41 L. ed. 949, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 525; King v. Portland, 184 U. S. 61, 46 L. ed. 431, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 290; Simon v. Craft, 182 U. S. 427, 46 L. ed. 1165, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 836; Turpin v. Lemon, 187 U. S. 51, ante, 70, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 20.

In the Kentucky Railroad Tax Cases, 115 U. S. 321, sub nom. Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. v. Kentucky, 29 L. ed. 414, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 57, it was held that a state statute for the assessment of taxes, which gave notice of the proposed assessment to the owner by requiring him, at a time named, to present a statement of his property, with an estimate of its value, which fixed time and place for public sessions of other officers, at which this statement and estimate were to be considered, where the party interested had a right to be present and to be heard and which gave him opportunity to judicially contest the validity of the proceedings, was due process of law within the 14th Amendment. In Lent v. Tillson, 140 U. S. 316, 35 L. ed. 419, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 825, it was held that in a case of a special assessment for widening streets, publication in a newspaper was sufficient notice to property owners interested.

The complaint in this case is based upon the proposition thus stated by plaintiff: That it is not due process of law for a state "to compel a man, who holds no property in trust and makes no return to the assessors, to pay a tax assessed against him as such trustee, without opportunity to show that he held no property in trust." This proposition, however, assumes that no opportunity was given the defendant to show that he held no property in trust, when the fact was that public notice was given the inhabitants to produce before the assessors a list of their personal estates, among which there was specified by the statute personal property held in trust. Defendant did not choose to comply with that notice by submitting a list of the property held by him in trust, although he subsequently made application for abatement, upon which application a number of hearings were had. Upon his failure to make his returns the assessors did the only thing they could do: ascertain as nearly as possible the particulars of the personal estate and estimate it at what they believed its just value. If defendant held personal property as trustee it was as much his duty to disclose it as if it had been individual property, and his contention now, that he had no reason to anticipate that he would be taxed for *property held in trust, because he held none, is met by the fact that he applied for an abatement of this tax, and that, after several hearings upon the case, it was refused him. Kentucky Railroad Tax Cases, 115 U. S. 321, 335, sub nom. Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. v. Kentucky, 29 L. ed. 414, 418, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 57.

There was nothing in the proceedings of which the plaintiff had any right to complain as a violation of the 14th Amendment, and the judgment of the Superior Court is therefore affirmed.

Mr. Justice White, not having heard the argument, took no part in the decision of this case.

CLINTON B. WISER et al., Appts.,
v.

JOHN LAWLER et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 260-274.)

Fraud—misstatements as to title—effect of owner's silence.

The owners of the legal title to a group of mines being operated by a corporation pursuant to the terms of an escrow agreement which required the proceeds of operation to be applied on the purchase price, and provided for a forfeiture in case of default in payment, are not chargeable, because of their silence, with the fraud perpetrated on subscribers to the stock of such corporation by misstatements as to the corporation's title, contained in prospectuses, issued to promote the sale of its stock, although they may have known the contents of such prospectuses, and that some of the payments on account of the purchase price were from proceeds of the sales of the stock.

[No. 174.]

Argued February 25, 26, 1903. Decided April 27, 1903.

APPEAL from the Supreme Court of the Territory of Arizona to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the District Court of Yavapai County dismissing a bill which seeks to charge the owners of mining properties with the fraud perpetrated on subscribers to the stock of a corporation in possession of such property by misstatements as to title contained in its prospectuses. Affirmed.

See same case below (Ariz.) 62 Pac. 695.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brown:

This was a complaint in the nature of a bill in equity filed in the district court of Yavapai county, Arizona, by appellants, *for [261] themselves and all others interested, against John Lawler and Edward W. Wells, principal defendants, and the Seven Stars Gold Mining Company, the Industrial Mining & Guaranty Company, and John Griffin, receiver of such companies, to adjudge Lawler and Wells to be estopped from disputing the title of the Seven Stars Company to certain mining properties, and to decree such properties to belong to that company, and for an account of the proceeds of all ore taken from the mines and received by defendants Lawler and Wells, or, in the alternative, for a money decree against them for the aggregate amount paid by plaintiffs and others for stock in the company, upon the representations contained in certain prospectuses and maps, by which the plaintiffs were induced to purchase stock in such company, and for a confirmation of the title to the property in such defendants.

The cause came on for hearing upon the pleadings, and at first resulted in an interlocutory decree in favor of the plaintiffs, with an order for an accounting by defendants. The case was then referred to a master to report the number of shares in the Seven Stars Company subscribed and paid for, and to ascertain the amount paid to defendants Lawler and Wells on account of the purchase price of the property. This was finally fixed at the sum of $180,139.82, which was held to be a lien, and the property was ordered sold in satisfaction thereof. A new trial was subsequently granted, upon the hearing of which, upon pleadings and evidence, it was held that plaintiffs were entitled to no relief, and the complaint was dismissed, and an appeal taken to the supreme court of Arizona, which affirmed the decree of dismissal. 62 Pac. 695.

The supreme court made a finding of facts in sixty-four paragraphs, which is quite too long to be reproduced here, but which may be summarized as follows:

In May, 1892, the defendants Lawler and Wells were the owners of the legal title to a collection of mines known as the "Hillside Group," the muniments of such title being of record in the county recorder's office of Yavapai county.

Lawler and Wells offered these mines for sale at $450,000 cash, and on May 12 one Warner visited the mines and contracted *for [262] their purchase for $450,000, paying $20,000 in cash, the remainder to be paid in installments in accordance with the terms of an escrow agreement entered into between Lawler and Wells and one Cowland. This agreement provided, among other things, that a deed conveying the mines to Cowland be held in escrow by the Bank of Arizona and be delivered upon paying the full sum of $450,000; and that, upon the failure of the payments, the deed should be redelivered to Lawler and Wells, and all payments be forfeited. Cowland agreed that all moneys paid by him should belong to Lawler and Wells, and should be retained by them as liquidated damages accruing from the failure to pay for the property, and Lawler and Wells be released from any obligation to convey the property. It was further agreed that Cowland might take possession of the property, develop and operate it, the proceeds to be paid to the vendors and credited upon the purchase price; that Lawler and Wells should, nevertheless, remain in legal possession of the property until full payment, but should not work it or interfere with its operation by Cowland. It was further agreed that, should Cowland fail to make any payments, all improvements on the property and ore taken therefrom should be the property of Lawler and Wells. A deed of the property was executed to Cowland and placed in escrow as above stated. Warner was the real party in interest and Cowland only his agent.

NOTE.—As to when silence amounts to fraudulent concealment—see note to Jackson v. Combs (D. C.) 1 L. R. A. 742.

On June 14 Warner and Cowland, with some others, incorporated the Industrial Mining & Guaranty Company for the purpose of handling mines and buying and selling stock, to which company Cowland delivered a written assignment of all his interest in the escrow agreement, as well as a deed of the mining properties, with a covenant of warranty against encumbrances. The new company assumed all the covenants of Cowland in the escrow agreement, to make the payments therein stipulated, and to procure the escrow deed, then in the hands of the Bank of Arizona. Possession of the properties was delivered to the new company with full knowledge on its part of the terms of the escrow agreement. The company remained in possession until October 1, 1892.

[263] On August 15, 1892, Warner and several others incorporated the Seven Stars Gold Mining Company under the laws of New Jersey, of which certain persons, including one of the plaintiffs, were elected directors. About the same time the guaranty company offered to sell and convey all its interests in certain mining properties, including a part of those described in the escrow agreement, to the Seven Stars Company, upon receiving $2,800,000 in cash or stock of such company. On October 1 the guaranty company placed the Seven Stars Company in possession of the Hillside Group, with full knowledge on the part of the latter of the terms of the escrow agreement.

The guaranty company, as the agent of the Seven Stars Company, issued in September, 1892, a prospectus, known as the American prospectus, to promote the sale of the stock of the Seven Stars Company, 300,000 of which prospectuses, accompanied by a map and an application for subscription to stock, were circulated throughout the United States. In October, 1892, the guaranty company directed the issuing of an English prospectus, which was never circulated, but another, issued without the authority of the 189 U. S.

guaranty company or the Seven Stars Company, was prepared, supervised, and circulated by Cowland. The descriptive matter in this prospectus was obtained from data furnished by the officers of the guaranty company. The circulation of this prospectus amounted to 80,000 copies, and accompanying each copy was a map and application for subscription to stock; but neither Lawler nor Wells had any knowledge or information that this prospectus had been or was being circulated in England, or had any knowledge of its contents until some time in October, 1893. The further material facts are set forth in the opinion.

Mr. Michael F. Gallagher and G. W. Kretzinger argued the cause and filed a brief for appellants:

In statements sent to the public for the purpose of inducing investments in a corporation, representations of fact must be made with strict accuracy, and every fact material to the investment must be disclosed.

Bispham, Eq. 5th ed. § 208; Central R. Co. v. Kisch, L. R. 2 H. L. 113; Lagunas Nitrate Co. v. Lagunas Nitrate Syndicate, 68 L. J. Ch. N. S. 699; New Brunswick & C. R. & Land Co. v. Mugeridge, 1 Drew. & S. 363; Re Olympia [1898] 2 Ch. Div. 153; Edgington v. Fitzmaurice, L. R. 29 Ch. Div. 459; Henderson v. Lacon, L. R. 5 Eq. 262; Hubbard v. Weare, 79 Iowa, 678, 44 N. W. 915; Hayward v. Leeson, 176 Mass. 310, 49 L. R. A. 725, 57 N. E. 656.

The prospectus and accompanying documents must be construed together, to determine the meaning of any part.

Schuylkill Nav. Co. v. Moore, 2 Whart. 491.

The effect produced by the whole prospectus and map is to be considered.

Andrews v. Mockford [1896] 1 Q. B. 372; Arnison v. Smith, L. R. 41 Ch. Div. 359.

The court, in reading statements of this character circulated generally among the people, will consider how they would influence the ordinary mind.

New Brunswick & C. R. & Land Co. v. Mugeridge, 1 Drew. & S. 363; Sessions v. Rice, 70 Iowa, 306, 30 N. W. 735; Arnison v. Smith, L. R. 41 Ch. Div. 359; Ellsworth v. Campbell Bros. 87 Iowa, 532, 54 N. W. 477; Greenwood v. Leather Shod Wheel Co. 69 L. J. Ch. N. S. 135.

Due weight should be given to the testimony of the large number of persons who say they were led by the statements in the prospectus to believe the company the absolute owner of the mines.

Clarke v. Dickson, 6 C. B. N. S. 463.

The public had the right to rely on the prospectus without inquiry.

Bosher v. Richmond & H. Land Co. 89 Va. 455, 16 S. E. 360; Clarke v. Dickson, 6 C. B. N. S. 463; Andrews v. Mockford [1896] 1 Q. B. 372; Wilson v. Higbee, 62 Fed. 723; Quirk v. Thomas, 6 Mich. 120; Morgan v. Skiddy, 62 N. Y. 325; Thomp. Corp. § 1312; Richardson v. Silvester, L. R. 9 Q. B. 34.

The false representation must be material to the investment, but it need not be the sole inducement.

Morgan v. Skiddy, 62 N. Y. 319; Peck v. Derry, L. R. 37 Ch. Div. 541; 1 Bigelow, Fr. p. 544; James v. Hodsdon, 47 Vt. 127; Arnison v. Smith, L. R. 41 Ch. Div. 359; Pulford v. Richards, 17 Beav. 96; Smith v. Chadwick, L. R. 20 Ch. Div. 27; Edgington v. Fitzmaurice, L. R. 29 Ch. Div. 459.

The law presumes that subscriptions coming in within a reasonable time after the general circulation of a prospectus were induced by it. The estoppel will be extended far enough to protect everyone who may be presumed to have acted upon or been governed by it.

Herman, Estoppel & Res Adjudicata, §§ 794, 795; Hatch v. Spooner, 35 N. Y. S. R. 151, 13 N. Y. Supp. 642; Bradley v. Poole, 98 Mass. 183, 93 Am. Dec. 144; Smith v. Chadwick, L. R. 9 App. Cas. 187.

The principle of the doctrine of equitable estoppel is honesty and fair dealing, and in its application the court seeks to make parties do what honesty and fair dealing require.

Gill v. Griffith, 2 Md. Ch. 270; Wendell v. Van Rensselaer, 1 Johns. Ch. 353; 2 Pom. Eq. Jur. § 802; Watson v. Threlkeld, 2 Esp. 637; Ramsden v. Dyson, L. R. 1 H. L. 135; Jones v. Bolles, 9 Wall. 364, 19 L. ed. 734; Horn v. Cole, 51 N. H. 287, 12 Am. Rep. 111; Gregg v. Wells, 10 Ad. & El. 90; Jowers v. Phelps, 33 Ark. 465; Lucas v. Hart, 5 Iowa, 415; Anderson v. Hubble, 93 Ind. 570, 47 Am. Rep. 394; Herman, Estoppel & Res Adjudicata, 943, 938, 939, 952-954; Kettlcwell v. Watson, L. R. 26 Ch. Div. 507; Radant v. Werheim Mfg. Co. 106 Wis. 600, 82 N. W. 562; Cairncross v. Lorimer, 3 MacQ. H. L. Cas. 829; Truesdail v. Ward, 24 Mich. 117; O'Connor v. Clark, 170 Pa. 318, 29 L. R. A. 607, 32 Atl. 1029; Erie County Sav. Bank v. Roop, 48 N. Y. 292; Heyn v. O'Hagen, 60 Mich. 150, 26 N. W. 861; Pickard v. Sears, 6 Ad. & El. 469; Wells v. Pierce, 27 N. H. 503; Powers v. New Haven, 120 Ind. 185, 21 N. E. 1083; Hendrix v. Southern R. Co. 130 Ala. 205, 30 So. 596; Greene v. Smith, 57 Vt. 268; Logan v. Gardner, 136 Pa. 588, 20 Atl. 625; Tilton v. Nelson, 27 Barb. 595; Storrs v. Barker, 6 Johns. Ch. 166, 10 Am. Dec. 316; Richardson v. Hyams, 1 La. Ann. 286.

No contractual or fiduciary relation is necessary; knowledge imposes the duty to disclose the legal title.

Logan v. Gardner, 136 Pa. 588, 20 Atl. 625; Anderson v. Hubble, 93 Ind. 570, 47 Am. Rep. 394; The Ottumwa Belle, 78 Fed. 643; Bosher v. Richmond & H. Land Co. 89 Va. 455, 16 S. E. 360; Clarke v. Dickson, 6 C. B. N. S. 463; Andrews v. Mockford [1896] 1 Q. B. 372; Wilson v. Higbee, 62 Fed. 723; Quirk v. Thomas, 6 Mich. 120; Morgan v. Skiddy, 62 N. Y. 325; Thomp. Corp. § 1312; Richardson v. Silvester, L. R. 9 Q. B. 34.

Intent to mislead is unnecessary; "fraudulent effect" or "unjust result" is sufficient.

Hart v. Giles, 67 Mo. 179; Dair v. United States, 16 Wall. 1, 4, 21 L. ed. 491, 492; Hill v. Blackwelder, 113 Ill. 283; The Ottumwa Belle, 78 Fed. 643; Horn v. Cole, 51

N. H. 287, 12 Am. Rep. 111; Anderson v. Hubble, 93 Ind. 570, 47 Am. Rep. 394; Commercial Loan & Bldg. Asso. v. Trevette, 160 Ill. 390, 43 N. E. 769.

The presence of title on the record is no excuse or justification for the acquiescence, participation, and receipt of benefits here shown on the part of Lawler and Wells.

Sumner v. Seaton, 47 N. J. Eq. 103, 19 Atl. 884; Kingman v. Graham, 51 Wis. 232, 8 N. W. 181; Carr v. Wallace, 7 Watts, 394; Markham v. O'Connor, 52 Ga. 183, 21 Am. Rep. 249; Dodge v. Pope, 93 Ind. 480.

There need be no direct communication between parties claiming the estoppel and the party alleged to be estopped.

Anderson v. Hubble, 93 Ind. 570, 47 Am. Rep. 394; Clarke v. Dickson, 6 C. B. N. S. 463; Kelley v. Fisk, 110 Ind. 552, 11 N. E. 453; Stevens v. Ludlum, 46 Minn. 160, 13 L. R. A. 270, 48 N. W. 771.

"Standing by" does not necessarily mean actual presence.

Anderson v. Hubble, 93 Ind. 570, 47 Am. Rep. 394; Herman, Estoppel, § 954; Thompson v. Blanchard, 4 N. Y. 309; Richardson v. Chickering, 41 N. H. 380, 77 Am. Dec. 769; Powers v. Large, 75 Wis. 494, 43 N. W. 1120; Gatling v. Rodman, 6 Ind. 289.

Estoppel may arise in favor of one not purchasing directly into the title. The doctrine has been applied for the protection of stockholders and creditors.

Jones v. Bolles, 9 Wall. 364, 19 L. ed. 734; Trenton Bkg. Co. v. Duncan, 86 N. Y. 222; Herman, Estoppel & Res Adjudicata, § 397; Livermore v. Maxwell, 87 Iowa, 705, 55 N. W. 37.

The persons defrauded in the act of purchasing stock are, under no theory of the law, chargeable with the notice of what the records of the company showed. Even stockholders are not chargeable, as a matter of law, with notice of the acts of officers or resolutions of the directors.

Thomp. Corp. § 4455; Cook, Stockholders, § 731.

A party who receives benefits gained by representations that the title to his property is in another will not be permitted to assert rights inconsistent with the transaction, to the injury of the person misled.

Brewster v. Boker, 16 Barb. 613; Wilkinson v. Blades [1896] 2 Ch. 788; Breeding v. Stamper, 18 B. Mon. 175; Whitaker v. Williams, 20 Conn. 109.

A party cannot participate in the fruits of a fraud, and at the same time repudiate it as not his act.

Perry, Tr. § 172; Texas Consol. Compress & Mfg. Asso. v. Dublin Compress & Mfg. Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 38 S. W. 404; Olmsted v. Hotailing, 1 Hill, 317; Crans v. Hunter, 28 N. Y. 389; Morse v. Ryan, 26 Wis. 356.

He who receives money or property or a benefit of any kind, under an instrument, whatever its character or his relation to the maker, cannot question the instrument in whole or in part.

Re Peaslee, 73 Hun, 113, 25 N. Y. Supp. 940; Havens v. Sackett, 15 N. Y. 365; Bir- mingham v. Kirwan, 2 Sch. & Lef. 444; Wood v. Seely, 32 N. Y. 105.

The following are different applications of the same principle:

Field v. Doyon, 64 Wis. 560, 25 N. W. 653; Leathers v. Ross, 74 Iowa, 630, 38 N. W. 516; Maple v. Kussart, 53 Pa. 348, 91 Am. Dec. 214; Herman, Estoppel & Res Adjudicata, §§ 1063, 800; Wilkinson v. Blades [1806] 2 Ch. 788; McConnell v. People, 71 Ill. 481; Daniels v. Tearney, 102 U. S. 415, 26 L. ed. 187; Franklin v. Pollard Mill Co. 88 Ala. 318, 6 So. 685; Swain v. Scamens, 9 Wall. 254, 19 L. ed. 554; Fry v. Morrison, 159 Ill. 244, 42 N. E. 774; Kinyon v. Kinyon, 6 Misc. 584, 27 N. Y. Supp. 627.

The concealment of the important terms of a transaction, or the secret retention of benefits, by a grantor, has always been held sufficient to show the fraud of a transaction, and support a decree for the restoration of the property or money of the deceived purchaser or creditor.

Robinson v. Elliott, 22 Wall. 513, 22 L. ed. 758; Gill v. Griffith, 2 Md. Ch. 270; Wendell v. Van Rensselaer, 1 Johns. Ch. 353.

That one or two of the stockholders may have purchased with knowledge is no defense. Otherwise, to corrupt one would protect the fraud.

New Sombrero Phosphate Co. v. Erlanger, L. R. 5 Ch. Div. 73.

Equitable estoppel is frequently held a ground for affirmative relief.

Jones v. Bolles, 9 Wall. 364, 19 L. ed. 734; Kirk v. Hamilton, 102 U. S. 68, 26 L. ed. 79; Storrs v. Barker, 6 Johns. Ch. 166, 10 Am. Dec. 316; Lucas v. Hart, 5 Iowa, 415; Anderson v. Hubble, 93 Ind. 570, 47 Am. Rep. 394; Drexel v. Berney, 122 U. S. 241, 30 L. ed. 1219, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1200.

The estoppel is commensurate with the representation, and operates to put the title where it was represented to be.

Grissler v. Powers, 81 N. Y. 57, 37 Am. Rep. 475; Beach, Modern Eq. Jur. 800; Trenton Bkg. Co. v. Dunean, 86 N. Y. 221; Ellsworth v. Campbell Bros. 87 Iowa, 532, 54 N. W. 477.

A court of equity has power to decree a title to real estate, as against a party whose conduct raises an estoppel.

Jones v. Bolles, 9 Wall. 364, 19 L. ed. 734; Robbins v. Moore, 129 Ill. 57, 21 N. E. 934; Lucas v. Hart, 5 Iowa, 415; Kirk v. Hamilton, 102 U. S. 68, 26 L. ed. 79; Stone v. Tyrec, 30 W. Va. 701, 5 S. E. 878; Storrs v. Barker, 6 Johns. Ch. 166, 10 Am. Dec. 316.

The moneys obtained from appellants and others in like estate, by the fraudulent misrepresentations and concealment, will be impressed with a trust in the hands of the Industrial Mining & Guaranty Company.

Fulton v. Jansen, 99 Cal. 591, 34 Pac. 331; Nebraska Nat. Bank v. Johnson, 51 Neb. 546, 71 N. W. 294; Dunn v. Zuilling Bros. 94 Iowa, 233, 62 N. W. 746; American Sugar Ref. Co. v. Fancher, 145 N. Y. 552, 27 L. R. A. 757, 40 N. E. 206; Nester v. Gross, 66 Minn. 371, 69 N. W. 39; Perry, Tr. §§ 171, 217; Beach, Trusts & Trustees, § 182.
189 U. S.

The funds thus impressed with a trust will be followed into the hands of Lawler and Wells.

Bundy v. Monticello, 84 Ind. 119; Smith v. Bowen, 35 N. Y. 83; Holmes v. Gilman, 138 N. Y. 384, 20 L. R. A. 566, 34 N. E. 205; Knight v. Knight, 75 Ga. 386; Calhoun v. Burnett, 40 Miss. 599; United States v. Waterborough, 2 Ware, 158, Fed. Cas. No. 16,648; Continental Ins. Co. v. Insurance Co. 2 C. C. A. 541, 1 U. S. App. 201, 51 Fed. 884; Clarke v. Shee, Cowp. 197; Morrow Shoe Mfg. Co. v. New England Shoe Co. 24 L. R. A. 417, 6 C. C. A. 508, 18 U. S. App. 256, 57 Fed. 685; Sadler's Appeal, 87 Pa. 154; Swift v. Williams, 68 Md. 236, 11 Atl. 835.

Upon the facts found by the supreme court of Arizona the court should adjudge, as a matter of law, that if Lawler and Wells did not have actual, they had implied or constructive, notice of how such funds had been obtained.

Condit v. Maxwell, 142 Mo. 266, 44 S. W. 467; Williamson v. Brown, 15 N. Y. 364; 1 Perry, Tr. § 223, note b; First Nat. Bank v. National Broadway Bank, 156 N. Y. 459, 42 L. R. A. 139, 51 N. E. 398; Baltimore v. Whittington, 78 Md. 231, 27 Atl. 984; Hewitt v. Loosemore, 9 Hare, 455; Whitbread v. Boulnois, 1 Younge & C. Exch. 303.

The question as to whether, upon conceded facts, implied or constructive notice arises, is a question of law.

Claflin v. Lenheim, 66 N. Y. 306; Birdsall v. Russell, 29 N. Y. 220; Van Doren v. Robinson, 16 N. J. Eq. 261; Plumb v. Fluitt, 2 Anst. 432; Hewitt v. Loosemore, 9 Hare, 455; Kennedy v. Green, 3 Mylne & K. 699.

The fact that the Industrial Mining & Guaranty Company deposited the funds obtained from the stockholders in its general bank account, and therefrom drew in favor of Lawler and Wells to make the payments on account of the Cowland contract, does not destroy the identity of the funds and make relief by money decree impossible. The withdrawals on account of the Seven Stars Gold Mining Company will be attributed to its funds.

Re Hallett, L. R. 13 Ch. Div. 696; Central Nat. Bank v. Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co. 104 U. S. 54, 26 L. ed. 693; Pennell v. Deffell, 4 DeG. M. & G. 372; Woodhouse v. Crandall, 197 Ill. 104, 58 L. R. A. 385, 64 N. E. 292; Hall v. Otis, 77 Me. 122.

Where money or property obtained by fraud passes into the hands of a third person, he cannot retain it without showing its receipt in due course of business, for a valuable consideration, and without any notice of the fraud.

1 Bigelow, Fr. p. 494; Miller v. Fraley, 21 Ark. 35; Haskins v. Warren, 115 Mass. 514; Chaffin v. Kimball, 23 Ill. 36; Campbell v. Whitson, 68 Ill. 240, 18 Am. Rep. 553; Brown v. Fitch, 43 Conn. 512; Throckmorton v. Rider, 42 Iowa, 84; Perry, Tr. § 219.

Where a note is shown to have been fraudulently put into circulation, the burden shifts to the holder to show he received it before maturity, without notice, and for a valuable consideration.

Thompson v. Sioux Falls Nat. Bank, 150 U. S. 237, 37 L. ed. 1065, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 94; Stewart v. Lansing, 104 U. S. 509, 26 L. ed. 868; Smith v. Livingston, 111 Mass. 342; Camden Safe Deposit & T. Co. v. Abbott, 44 N. J. L. 257; 2 Randolph, Com. Paper, § 1026; Louisville, N. A. & C. R. Co. v. Ohio Valley Improv. & Contract Co. 57 Fed. 42; Shain v. Goodwin, 46 Fed. 564; Merchants Exch. Nat. Bank v. New Brunswick Sav. Inst. 33 N. J. L. 170.

In cases like that at bar, equity requires the most positive and specific denial and disproof of knowledge.

Perry, Tr. § 219; Story, Eq. Jur. § 400; Holly v. Missionary Society, 180 U. S. 284, 45 L. ed. 531, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 395.

Before the party can retain the funds, he must show he gave credit on the faith of them.

Wilson v. Smith, 3 How. 763, 11 L. ed. 820; United States v. State Nat. Bank, 96 U. S. 30, 24 L. ed. 647.

Where an agent receives funds of his principal, and mingles them with his own, and then draws from the common fund, withdrawals for his own use will be attributed to his funds, and withdrawals in behalf of his principal attributed to the funds of his principal.

Pearce v. Dill, 149 Ind. 142, 48 N. E. 788; Blair v. Hill, 165 N. Y. 672, 59 N. E. 1119; Smith v. Combs, 49 N. J. Eq. 420, 24 Atl. 9.

Messrs. W. C. Scarritt and H. C. McDougal argued the cause, and, with Mr. E. L. Scarritt, filed a brief for appellees:

There is no such thing as an estoppel in pais for neglecting to speak or act, where the party did not know the facts which, if known, would have made it his duty to speak.

Delaplaine v. Hitchcock, 6 Hill, 14; Acton v. Dooley, 74 Mo. 63; Galbreath v. Newton, 30 Mo. App. 380; Boggs v. Merced Min. Co. 14 Cal. 279.

Mere silence or inaction of one who holds the record title to real property will not estop him from asserting his title thereto as evidenced and proclaimed by the public records.

Kingman v. Graham, 51 Wis. 232, 8 N. W. 181; Rice v. Dewey, 54 Barb. 455; Sulphine v. Dunbar, 55 Miss. 255; Mayo v. Cartwright, 30 Ark. 407; Knouff v. Thompson, 16 Pa. 357; Markham v. O'Connor, 52 Ga. 183, 21 Am. Rep. 249; Bigelow, Estoppel, pp. 575, 576; Viele v. Judson, 82 N. Y. 32; M'Kenzie v. British Linen Co. L. R. 6 App. Cas. 82; Leather Mfrs. Nat. Bank v. Morgan, 117 U. S. 96, 29 L. ed. 811, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 657; People v. Bank of N. A. 75 N. Y. 548; 11 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 432; Thompson v. Simpson, 128 N. Y. 270, 28 N. E. 627; Dameron v. Jamison, 143 Mo. 483, 45 S. W. 258.

And he will not be estopped by his silence, though he may know or be informed that others are negotiating for rights and interests in property bound by his title of record, as he is under no obligation to warn or apprise them of that which the record discloses.

Porter v. Wheeler, 105 Ala. 451, 17 So. 221; Knouff v. Thompson, 16 Pa. 357; Sulphine v. Dunbar, 55 Miss. 255; Bales v. Perry, 51 Mo. 449; Frazee v. Frazee, 79 Md. 27, 28 Atl. 1105; Rice v. Dewey, 54 Barb. 455; Brinekerhoff v. Lansing, 4 Johns. Ch. 65, 8 Am. Dec. 538.

Knowledge by an owner of land that one is about to buy it from another does not impose upon the owner the duty to seek out that one, and advise him not to buy.

Bramble v. Kingsbury, 39 Ark. 131.

A landowner is not estopped, by knowing that a lithographed map showing a subdivision of his land into lots and blocks is in circulation, to deny the validity of such subdivision.

Sullivan v. Davis, 29 Kan. 28.

The party who has placed his written title on record has given the notice which every person is bound to know and respect. The law does not require him to go further. But if he speaks or acts, it must be consistent with his legal title. The law distinguishes between silence and encouragement.

Knouff v. Thompson, 16 Pa. 357.

The doctrine of estoppel in pais should not be too readily extended, when the effect of it is to divest men of their estates in lands.

Davis v. Davis, 26 Cal. 23, 85 Am. Dec. 157; Trenton Bkg. Co. v. Dunean, 86 N. Y. 221.

It is difficult to imagine how the concealment of a fact which an individual of common prudence and sagacity can discover can constitute a fraud.

Alexander v. Kerr, 2 Rawle, 90, 19 Am. Dec. 616.

Plaintiffs were not justified in relying on the statements of the prospectus as establishing, as against the world, that the title to the mines was vested in the Gold Company.

Banque Franco-Egyptienne v. Brown, 34 Fed. 196; MacSwinney, Mines, pp. 187, 189; Curling v. Flight, 2 Phill. Ch. 613; Holmes v. Powell, 8 DeG. M. & G. 572.

If the purchaser is intending to rely upon the loose expressions of a prospectus, it becomes his duty to read every word of it, and to give those words their usually accepted meaning.

Bigelow, Estoppel, p. 562.

The representation to justify a prudent man in acting upon it must be plain, not doubtful or matter of questionable inference.

Tillotson v. Mitchell, 111 Ill. 518; Blodgett v. Perry, 97 Mo. 263, 11 S. W. 891; Bennett v. Dean, 41 Mich. 472, 2 N. W. 680; Keating v. Orne, 77 Pa. 89.

It must have reference to a present or past state of things.

Bigelow, Estoppel, p. 555; Jackson v. Allen, 120 Mass. 64; Burgess v. Seligman, 107 U. S. 20, 27 L. ed. 359, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 10; Starry v. Korab, 65 Iowa, 267, 21 N. W. 600.

Presumptions favor defendants.

Southern Development Co. v. Silva, 125 U. S. 249, 31 L. ed. 680, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 881.

The words "belonging to" mean about the same as "the property of," and these terms when applied to real estate are of a vague and indefinite significance.

Gitchell v. Kreidler, 84 Mo. 476; People ex rel. Morgenthau v. Cady, 105 N. Y. 299, 11 N. E. 810.

The silence and inaction which create an estoppel occur under such circumstances, and are committed by a person sustaining such a relation to the other, that the person seeking to enforce the estoppel would reasonably presume such silence and inaction to be a positive representation, on the part of the other, of the truth of the fact, of which the contrary is sought to be asserted.

Pom. Eq. Jur. § 805; Bloomfield v. Charter Oak Nat. Bank, 121 U. S. 121, 30 L. ed. 923, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 865; Bigelow, Estoppel, 4th ed. p. 445; Gray v. Gray, 83 Mo. 106; Yates v. Hurd, 8 Colo. 343, 8 Pac. 575; Dela-plaine v. Hitchcock, 6 Hill, 14; Sulphine v. Dunbar, 55 Miss. 255; Herman, Estoppel & Res Adjudicata, § 948; Com. v. Moltz, 10 Pa. 527, 51 Am. Dec. 499; Brewer v. Boston & W. R. Corp. 5 Met. 479, 39 Am. Dec. 694; Boggs v. Merced Min. Co. 14 Cal. 279; Henshaw v. Bissell, 85 U. S. 255, 21 L. ed. 835; Morgan v. Chicago & A. R. Co. 96 U. S. 716, 24 L. ed. 743; Leather Mfrs. Nat. Bank v. Morgan, 117 U. S. 108, 29 L. ed. 816, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 657; Brant v. Virginia Coal & I. Co. 93 U. S. 326, 23 L. ed. 927.

When one has got the estate of another, he ought not, in conscience, to be allowed to keep it without paying consideration.

Chilton v. Braiden, 67 U. S. 458, 17 L. ed. 304; Slide & S. Gold Mines v. Seymour, 153 U. S. 509, 38 L. ed. 802, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 842.

Mr. Justice Brown delivered the opinion of the court:

The principal defendants to this suit are [264] Lawler and Wells * (hereinafter termed "the defendants"), and the case turns upon their complicity in, and responsibility for, the contents of the prospectuses, which are full of exaggerated and delusive statements, and were undoubtedly a gross fraud upon persons who took stock upon the faith of their exuberant promises. Indeed, they were of such a character as to create surprise that intelligent investors should have believed their statements to be true. The representation upon which the greatest reliance is placed is that contained in the American prospectus; that "the titles are unquestionable to the Seven Stars, Hillside, Happy Jack, and other mines, being held under United States patents;" and in the English prospectus, that "the mines owned by the company are situated in the Eureka mining district, Yavapai county, Arizona," and that "the title is indefeasible, being United States patents to five claims, together with several locations as easements."

Attached to these prospectuses was a map entitled "map of the group of mines belonging to the Seven Stars Gold Mining Company." It is true that there is neither in the prospectuses nor in the map a distinct assertion that the legal title to the properties mentioned was vested in the Seven Stars Company; but we think that no one can read them without inferring and believing that the Seven Stars was the owner of these properties, and that the net proceeds of their operation would be distributed in dividends to stockholders. As they were circulated as an inducement to take stock in the enterprises, we are bound to interpret them by the effect they would produce upon an ordinary mind. Andrews v. Mockford [1896] 1 Q. B. 372. They were, however, even more damaging in their omissions than in their statements. No mention was made of the fact that the title to these properties stood in the names of Lawler and Wells; no allusion to the Cowland agreement, with its provisions for forfeiture, nor to the fact that the only interest of the company was an equitable right to the properties after the sum of $450,000 had been realized from the profits and paid to defendants. In estimating the probability of subscribers being misled by these prospectuses we may take into consideration, not only the facts stated, but the facts suppressed. *New Brunswick & *C. R.* [265] & Land Co. v. Muggeridge, 1 Drew. & S. 363. They are entitled to know the cons as well as the pros. Gluckstein v. Barnes [1900] A. C. 240; Hubbard v. Weare, 79 Iowa, 678, 44 N. W. 915; Hayward v. Leeson, 176 Mass. 310, 49 L. R. A. 725, 57 N. E. 656; Re Leeds & H. Theatres [1902] 2 Ch. 809.

It does not appear, however, that these defendants were promoters or interested in the organization of the guaranty company, or the Seven Stars Company, or in the sale of the capital stock of such companies, although they knew that Warner's intention was to incorporate a company, and, to use the language of one of the defendants, "work it for all there was in it." As they were not concerned in the methods used to procure subscriptions to stock, or in the statements made in the prospectuses, it is difficult to see how they can be held responsible, unless they are made so by the fact that they knew and connived in the misstatements as to the title of the company. But while they might have known that the prospectuses were being issued, they were under no obligation to read them or contradict their exaggerated statements and promises. In their agreement with Cowland they had stipulated that he, or his assignee, should explore, work, and operate the property, and they could not have failed to know that this would be done through a company organized for that purpose. Such company would be authorized to issue prospectuses and obtain subscriptions to stock as best it could, and, clearly, defendants were not bound to supervise its methods in doing so, or render themselves responsible for statements made by the company, provided they did not indorse them. There were no relations between them and the purchasers of the capital stock, and no duty on their part to interfere with the circulation and distribution of the prospectuses and maps, or to inform the subscribers personally that they were the owners of the legal title to the property. They had the right to rely, so far as respected these companies and their stockholders, upon the fact that their title was of record, and was notice of their rights to every one who contemplated taking stock in the company.

[266] The testimony bearing upon the complicity of Lawler and Wells with the preparation of these prospectuses and maps is *such as amounts rather to a suspicion that they may have known and approved of their contents, than to positive proof that they received their indorsement. Of course, if it were shown that they were put forth by them personally, with knowledge upon their part of their contents, and of the falsity of their statements, and that they were issued as a basis of obtaining subscriptions to stock, they would be justly held liable as participants in the fraud; but the mere fact that they turned over the organization of the company to other parties, who would pursue the usual course of issuing prospectuses for the purpose of raising subscriptions, would not, of itself, charge them with the duty of examining and verifying their statements.

The facts principally relied upon are that the defendants caused to be delivered to Mr. Rickard, an agent of Cowland, a report previously made upon the mines, known as the Blauvelt report, together with a map of the underground workings of the mines, known as the Blauvelt map, as well as copies of the smelter and milling returns of ores shipped from the mines, known as the "smelters' returns." It is not found, however, that these documents were false in any particular, except the map, which was prepared by one Brodie, without the knowledge of the defendants, but was seen by defendant Lawler hanging in the office of the companies in New York, and was entitled "Plat of the Hillside and adjoining claims," although it appears that afterwards, without the knowledge of Lawler, these entitling words were changed, before the maps were distributed, to the words, "Map of group of mines belonging to the Seven Stars Gold Mining Company." It thus appears that when Lawler saw this map it contained no words indicative of ownership in the Seven Stars Company. It also appeared that in August of the same year defendant Wells visited the office of the guaranty company in New York, and while there had an interview with Warner, president of both companies; but the evidence does not show that anything was said to Wells about the plans of the companies, or the issue and circulation of a prospectus; although Lawler became aware of the fact that the prospectus was being prepared for circulation, and [267] for the *purpose of promoting the sale of the stock of the company, and that the Blauvelt report and map were being used in connection with it.

In October, 1892, Warner represented to the defendants that he was unable to place the securities he held, in time to meet the payment of that portion of the price falling due November 12, and, relying upon his representations and requests, defendants agreed to an extension of the time; but on May 8, 1893, the whole scheme, so far as Warner was connected with it, collapsed by his executing a general assignment of his property for the benefit of his creditors. Defendants, learning of this, made a further agreement with Cowland, extending the time for payment under his agreement, receiving as part of the consideration, $50,000 par value of the guaranteed capital stock of the Seven Stars Company, and the appointment of Lawler as manager of the mines. In May, 1893, Lawler received notice in writing that remittances on account of the Cowland contract were being made from money derived from the sale of stock of the Seven Stars Company, and in August, 1893, the chancery court of New Jersey, in which state the company was incorporated, appointed defendant Griffin receiver of both companies. In September, defendants, as owners of the legal title, and exercising their rights under the original esrow agreement, entered into possession of the group of mines, and remained in exclusive possession until September, 1897, when a receiver was appointed by an Arizona court.

The most important item of testimony, and one which lies at the basis of this suit, is the fact that the defendants received from the proceeds of the mines, during their operation by the Seven Stars Company, sums aggregating $47,812.25, and also received from Warner and others, on account of the purchase price of the property, $112,339.96. This, however, they had a perfect right to do under their contract, unless they were distinctly apprised of the fact that it was fraudulently procured. But the prospectus, map, and application were prepared under the supervision of Warner, and the documents framed in accordance with his views. The evidence tends to show that while defendants had knowledge of the preparation and circulation of the prospectus *and maps, [268] knowledge of the statements and representations contained in them is not brought home to them, nor were they bound to inform themselves as to their contents.

There are further findings that defendants in October, 1892, became aware that the American prospectus was being distributed by the guaranty company, and that they did not at any time protest against its preparation or circulation, or in any way give notice of their rights in the mines to any of the purchasers of the stock of the Seven Stars Company, except as such notice might be imputed to them through the record title in defendants. But it is further found that they did not, at the time the subscriptions to the stock were being made, make any representations or communications to any subscriber to said stock; nor did they have any notice or knowledge that any moneys received by them on account of the purchase price formed a part of the money raised from subscriptions to stock and paid by the guaranty company on account of the purchase price,—at least, not until May 20, 1893, when nearly all the payments had been made. Neither were they interested, as promoters or otherwise, in the organization of either of the corporations, or in the issue or circulation of the prospectuses, or the sale of the capital stock.

Were they bound to refuse the money when it was tendered them? Even if defendants had knowledge or notice that payments received by them on account of the purchase price were made from moneys raised from subscriptions to stock, there was no impropriety in receiving their money from the proceeds of the sales of the stock, although the contract specified only that they should be entitled to the proceeds of the ore mined. As they had agreed to sell their interests at $450,000, and Cowland had agreed to pay that amount, it may be assumed that this was the real value of the properties at that time. This amount defendants had a right to receive before they surrendered the deed of the properties, but how it was to be raised was no concern of theirs. Granting the provision in the contract for the forfeiture of all moneys paid, in case the sale finally fell through, to have been a harsh one (and in fact it was much less harsh than it appeared to be), it was [269] fully understood *and agreed upon by both parties; and while a bill in equity might not have lain to enforce it, it does not follow that defendants will be compelled to return the money unless they actively participated in the representations under which it was raised. The case would have been stronger if the Cowland agreement had provided distinctly that a mining company should be formed and defendants paid from the proceeds of sales of its stock, but the agreement made no provision how the money should be raised or from what fund it should be paid, except that the proceeds of the operation of the mines and the ores should be at once paid to the defendants and be credited on the agreement. It was not provided, however, that this should be the only source from which the money should be raised.

As matter of fact, the guaranty company was engaged in promoting sundry mining and industrial enterprises, including the business of the Seven Stars Company; and during the time the payments were being made, it received and disbursed the sum of $824,142.13, which was deposited in its own name in a common fund in the Continental National Bank, and checked out by the guaranty company in its various business enterprises as required, and, amongst others, to the defendants on account of the Cowland agreement. These checks, which were generally payable to Cowland, were collected by the payee, the money transmitted to the Bank of Arizona, and placed to the credit of defendants on account of the purchase price of the property. Between June 15, 1892, and September 18, 1893, the guaranty company paid out for operating expenses, purchase of machinery, purchase price of the Hillside group of mines, dividends, and all other expenses, an aggregate sum of $380,295.81,—over $100,000 more than the amount of money received from the sale of the Seven Stars guaranteed stock.

The case, then, comes to this: Whether the mere facts that defendants knew that a prospectus was to be issued, that they furnished the Blauvelt report (not shown to be false) to which was appended a map indicating (though not to their knowledge) that the mines belonged to the Seven Stars Company, and that *they might have informed [270] themselves, if they had chosen to do so, of the contents of the prospectus, and did actually receive a large amount of money without knowing the source from which it came,—render them liable as participants in the fraud perpetrated by the circulation of the prospectus.
189 U. S. U. S., Book 47.

Putting the case in the most favorable light for the plaintiffs, it was only a case of estoppel by silence. Indeed, it was not even an ordinary case of estoppel by silence, but an estoppel by silence concerning facts of which defendants may have had no actual knowledge. To constitute an estoppel by silence there must be something more than an opportunity to speak. There must be an obligation. This principle applies with peculiar force where the persons to whom notice should be given are unknown. So, too, to constitute an estoppel, either by express representation or by silence, there must not only be a duty to speak, but the purchase must have been made in reliance upon the conduct of the party sought to be estopped; and the express finding of the court in this case is "that the subscribers to the capital stock of the Seven Stars Company, in making their several subscriptions therefor and payments thereon, did so without any knowledge of, and without relying on, anything said or done, or omitted to be said or done, in the premises by the said Lawler and Wells, or either of them." Granting that if these subscribers had known all the defendants knew regarding the title to this property, they would not have subscribed to the stock of the company, it does not follow that defendants were bound to take active steps to inform the public of that which already appeared upon the record.

This case does not belong to that class of which Gregg v. Von Phul, 1 Wall. 274, 17 L. ed. 536, is an example, wherein it was said that "if one has a claim against an estate, and does not disclose it, but stands by and suffers the estate [to be] sold and improved, with knowledge that the title has been mistaken, he will not be allowed afterwards to assert his claim against the purchaser." Such cases are believed to be confined to those where the party's silence is inconsistent with the position subsequently assumed by him, as where he suffers land to be improved while holding an unrecorded deed of it. In this case, however, defendants' position *was perfectly consistent with their title of record and with the Cowland agreement, which distinctly provided that Cowland or his assignees should enter into possession, develop and work the mines upon their own account, though paying the proceeds to them. [271]

But, conceding defendants to have been apprised of the contents of the prospectus, it would certainly be an exceptional case if a person holding a deed of property which he has placed upon record would be bound to disclose his title to a person contemplating purchasing or making improvements upon the land, or would be estopped from making his claim thereto by mere silence, since he has a right to rely upon the constructive notice given by the record; although the rule would be otherwise in case of positive misrepresentations upon his part. Brant v. Virginia Coal & I. Co. 93 U. S. 326, 337, 23 L. ed. 927, 929; Knouff v. Thompson, 16 Pa. 357; Brinckerhoff v. Lansing, 4 Johns. Ch. 65, 8 Am. Dec. 538; Rice v. Dewey, 54 Barb. 455; Kingman v. Graham, 51 Wis. 232, 8 N. W. 181; Sulphine v. Dunbar, 55 Miss. 255; Porter v. Wheeler, 105 Ala. 451, 17 So. 221. The authorities also recognize a distinction between mere silence and a deceptive silence accompanied by an intention to defraud, which amounts to a positive beguilement. Sumner v. Seaton, 47 N. J. Eq. 103, 19 Atl. 884; Hill v. Epley, 31 Pa. 331; Markham v. O'Connor, 52 Ga. 183, 21 Am. Rep. 249.

For instance, if a mortgagee stood by while a mortgagor was selling a piece of property to a person whom the mortgagee knew was purchasing the property upon the supposition that it was unencumbered, he might be estopped by his silence, even though his mortgage were of record. But, upon the other hand, if he were merely informed that the mortgagor was endeavoring to sell the property as unencumbered, he would clearly be under no obligation to look up the purchaser, or to inform the public generally of the existence of the mortgage. In such case he might safely rely upon the record. No duty to speak arises from the mere fact that a man is aware that another may take an action prejudicial to himself if the real facts are not disclosed. Sullivan v. Davis, 29 Kan. 28. As stated by Bigelow on Estoppel, 5th ed. page 596: "So long as he is not brought into contact with the person [272] about to act, and does *not know who that person may be, he is under no obligation to seek him out, or to stop a transaction which is not due to his own conduct as the natural and obvious result of it." It cannot be that A would be estopped by silence with respect to his title to property which B is about to purchase, when he has no knowledge that B contemplates buying and B has no knowledge that A is connected with the property. We know of no case holding that a man is estopped by silence as against the public, or any particular person with whom he has no fiduciary relation. It was said by the court of appeals of New York in Viele v. Judson, 82 N. Y. 32, 40, of the cases holding a party to be estopped by his silence: "In all of them the silence operated as a fraud and actually itself misled. In all there was both the specific opportunity and apparent duty to speak. And, in all, the party maintaining silence knew that some one else was relying upon that silence, and either acting or about to act as he would not have done, had the truth been told. These elements are essential to create a duty to speak."

Before holding that defendants are liable

by reason of their silence it ought to be made to appear what action they could have taken to prevent the perpetration of the fraud embodied in the prospectus and maps. If they had actually participated in it by circulating these documents, or representing them to be true, the case would have been different; but if they be held at all it must be by reason of their silence and inaction, when it is not even shown that they were cognizant of the statements contained in them. They may have seen them, but they were not bound to read them, or inform themselves of the truth of their statements, since they were no party to them in any way whatever, and were interested only in obtaining payment for their property. But, conceding that they were fully apprised of their contents, what action were they bound to have taken? They could not give notice to the hundreds of thousands to whom the prospectuses were sent, since they were not even apprised of their names or addresses. A notice to the company not to send out these prospectuses would have been equally futile, in case the directors chose to disregard *it, since they could not [273] control their action, nor could they have sustained a bill for injunction, since they could have shown no personal injury to themselves by reason of the action of the promoters.

The difficulty of doing exact justice to the plaintiffs in this case, without also doing an injustice to the defendants, suggests another reason why they should not be charged with liability for the circulation of this prospectus and map, without clear proof of their complicity. At the time of the sale of these mining properties their real value must have been unknown. If the mines proved successful they may have been worth millions; if unsuccessful, they would be of little value,—perhaps worthless. The amount agreed upon, $450,000, was one which the defendants were willing to take as a compromise, and one which the plaintiffs† were willing to pay as a speculation. Each party to the sale took his own chances, and no complaint is made of unfair dealing on either side. In their cross complaint defendants tendered to the court, and offered to deliver, the deed and possession of the mines, upon the payment of the residue due them under the escrow agreement. If the property be now more valuable than the amount agreed to be paid, no reason is apparent why the tender should not have been accepted. If, as appears to be more probable, it is of less value, or wholly valueless, the defendants in refunding the amount paid would not only lose that amount, but all possibility of reselling the mines to other parties, and would thereby assume the risk of an unfortunate speculation, which the whole design of the sale was to impose upon the purchasers under the Cowland agreement, namely, the plaintiffs.‡ In making the purchase the vendees were willing to assume the risk of the mines proving unsuccessful. The vendors were evidently unwilling to take this risk, and preferred to take a sum certain for their speculative chances. Assuming that, in equity, the defendants could be called upon to refund the money paid, it seems unjust that they should also be saddled with the burden of an unfortunate speculation. In short, the circumstances have so changed that justice cannot be done without imposing damages upon the defendants which were not within the contemplation of the parties.

†[The word "plaintiffs" is obviously here inadvertently used for "other defendants" or "co-defendants."—Ed.]

[274] *If the first alternative prayer of the bill were granted, and it were adjudged that the defendants were estopped from asserting that the Seven Stars Company was not the owner of the mining properties, and adjudging such company to have full title thereto, and that defendants should also repay all the proceeds of ore taken therefrom and received by them, amounting to $47,812.25, it will result that of the $450,000, agreed upon as the price of the property, they would have received but $112,339.96, and would lose $337,660.04 of the amount agreed to be paid. Upon the other hand, if the second alternative prayer were granted, and defendants were adjudged to return the money found due in the first decree of the district court, namely, $180,139.82, and retake the property, which now appears to be of little value, they would be practically, in either case, charged with the entire burden of the venture which it was the express object of the Cowland agreement to avoid. A decree that would bring about this result would savor of punishment to defendants rather than of compensation to plaintiffs.

We think the plaintiffs have wholly failed to make out such a complicity on the part of the defendants with the preparation and circulation of these prospectuses as would make them liable for the losses which the plaintiffs have doubtless sustained.

The decree of the court below is therefore affirmed.

MISSOURI PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY, Appt.

v.

UNITED STATES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 274-291.)

Commerce — discrimination by carriers — right of Federal law officers to maintain suit to restrain.

1. A suit to enjoin a common carrier from discriminating between localities in violation of the Act to Regulate Commerce could not be brought on behalf of the United States by its law officers at the request of the Interstate Commerce Commission prior to the passage of the act of Congress of February 19, 1903, the 3d section of which expressly authorizes the prosecution of such suits.
2. The new remedies to compel compliance with the Act to Regulate Commerce, given by the act of Congress of February 19, 1903, § 3, are so far made applicable to prior pending proceedings to enforce the former act by the provision of § 4, that pending causes shall not be affected by the repeal of conflicting laws provided for therein, but shall be prosecuted to a conclusion in the manner theretofore provided "and as modified by the provisions of this act," that a decree granting the relief prayed for in a suit brought on behalf of the United States by its law officers to enjoin discrimination between localities, which suit was unauthorized because brought before the passage of the later act, must be reversed and the cause remanded for further proceedings consistent with the Act to Regulate Commerce as originally enacted and subsequently amended.

[No. 108.]

Argued January 23, 26, 1903. Decided March 9, 1903.

A PPEAL from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the Circuit Court for the Second Division of the District of Kansas enjoining a common carrier from discriminating between localities in violation of the Act to Regulate Commerce. Reversed and remanded to the Circuit Court for further proceedings.

Statement by Mr. Justice White:

The original bill of complaint in this cause was filed on behalf of the United States against the present appellant in the circuit court of the United States for the second division of the district of Kansas on July 26, 1893. To the bill a demurrer was filed and overruled. 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 106, 65 Fed. 903. Subsequently, exceptions were sustained to an answer, and thereafter an amended answer and a replication were filed. The questions now presented for decision, however, were raised by an amended bill filed on July 19, 1897. In such amended bill it was alleged that the suit was brought on behalf of the United States by the United States attorney for the district of Kansas, by the authority of and under the direction of the Attorney General of the United States, and that such authority and direction had been given in pursuance of a request of the Interstate Commerce Commission of the United States "that the United States attorney for the district of Kansas be authorized and directed to institute and prosecute all necessary proceedings, legal or equitable, for the enforcement of the provisions of the Interstate Commerce Law against the defendant in relation to the matters herein complained of." It was further averred, in substance, that the respondent was subject to the terms and provisions of the Act to Regulate Commerce, and operated lines of railway between the city of St. Louis, in the state of Missouri, and the city of Omaha, in the state of Nebraska, a distance of 501 miles, and between the city of St. Louis and the city of Wichita, in the state of Kansas, a distance of 458 miles. It was charged that in the transportation of freight between St. Louis and said cities of Omaha and Wichita the service was *substantially of a like, con-der substantially similar circumstances and conditions, but that, notwithstanding such fact, the rates exacted upon shipments of freight between St. Louis and Wichita very much exceeded the rates charged on freight shipped between St. Louis and Omaha. It was averred that the collection of such alleged excessive freight rates or any rate of freight on shipments between St. Louis and Wichita in excess of the rate charged for shipments of freight of a similar character and classification between St. Louis and Omaha, operated an unjust and unreasonable prejudice and disadvantage against the city of Wichita and the localities tributary thereto, and against the shippers of freight between St. Louis and the city of Wichita. Averring that the wrongs complained of "are remediless in the premises under the ordinary forms and proceedings at law, and are relievable only in a court of equity and in this form of procedure," the ultimate relief asked was the grant of a perpetual injunction restraining the respondent from continuing to exact a greater rate for transportation of freight of like classification between the city of Wichita and the city of St. Louis than was asked between the city of St. Louis and the city of Omaha. A demurrer was filed to the amended bill upon various grounds, one of which denied the right of the United States to institute the suit.

On hearing, the demurrer was overruled exception was reserved, and, the defendant electing to stand on its demurrer, a final decree was entered granting a perpetual injunction as prayed, and, on appeal, the circuit court of appeals affirmed the decree, but filed no opinion. An appeal was thereupon allowed.

Mr. John F. Dillon argued the cause, and, with Messrs. J. H. Richards, C. E. Benton, B. P. Waggener, and Alexander G. Cochran, filed a brief for appellant:

The Interstate Commerce Act is a complete code of laws and rules of procedure, both civil and criminal, governing interstate commerce and it radically revolutionizes all prior procedure.

Interstate Commerce Commission v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 145 U. S. 263, 36 L. ed. 699, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 92, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 844; Re Morris, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 617, 40 Fed. 101; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. 167 U. S. 505, 42 L. ed. 255, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 896.

By every rule of construction the Interstate Commerce Act is necessarily exclusive as a rule or system of procedure for primary examination into the facts, and, in the language of the act, for "the execution and enforcement of its provisions."

Sutherland, Stat. Constr. §§ 204, 325, 326; Fourth Nat. Bank v. Francklyn, 120 U. S. 747, 30 L. ed. 825, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 757.

No court of the United States has jurisdiction, right, or power to hear and determine causes, except such as is derived from Congress; and the only laws enforceable in such courts are such laws as are enacted by Congress in pursuance of the Constitution.

United States v. Hudson, 7 Cranch, 32, 3 L. ed. 259.

The hitherto uniform course of procedure in cases of this character is against the right to maintain the present suit.

Interstate Commerce Commission v. Northeastern R. Co. 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 650, 74 Fed. 70; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 657, 73 Fed. 409; Swift v. Philadelphia & R. R. Co. 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 633, 58 Fed. 858, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 116, 64 Fed. 59; State v. Republican Valley R. Co. 17 Neb. 647, 52 Am. Rep. 424, 24 N. W. 329; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Alabama Midland R. Co. 168 U. S. 174, 42 L. ed. 425, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 45; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. 167 U. S. 495, 42 L. ed. 251, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 896; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 162 U. S. 204, 40 L. ed. 942, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 405, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 666.

An original bill in equity will not lie against a railway company for discriminatory rates, unless the Commission has first investigated and acted.

Vanderslice-Lynde Mercantile Co. v. Missouri P. R. Co. (U. S. C. C. Kan., Jan. 7, 1902.)

In the absence of an express statute, a remedy by bill in equity is not the proper remedy to enforce the performance by a corporation of public duties prescribed by law, and especially to enforce by injunction penal statutes.

Atty. Gen. v. Utica Ins. Co. 2 Johns. Ch. 371; People v. Utica Ins. Co. 15 Johns. 358, 8 Am. Dec. 243; Com. v. Commercial Bank, 28 Pa. 389.

The remedy to compel performance of public duty by corporations is by mandamus, and not in equity.

Walkley v. Muscatine, 6 Wall. 481, 18 L. ed. 930; Heine v. Levee Comrs. 19 Wall. 655, 22 L. ed. 223; Burkley v. Levee Comrs. 93 U. S. 258, 23 L. ed. 893; Thompson v. Allen County, 115 U. S. 550, 29 L. ed. 472, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 140; Rosenbaum v. Bauer, 120 U. S. 450, 30 L. ed. 743, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 633; Smith v. Bourbon County, 127 U. S. 105, 32 L. ed. 73, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1043; Butterworth v. United States, 112 U. S. 50, 28 L. ed. 656, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 25; Re Sawyer, 124 U. S. 200, 31 L. ed. 402, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 482; Hannewinkle v. Georgetown, 15 Wall. 547, 21 L. ed. 231; Dows v. Chicago, 11 Wall. 108, 20 L. ed. 65; Dill. Mun. Corp. §§ 826, 906-908.

There can be no case of equitable cognizance where there is a plain and adequate remedy at law.

Ewing v. St. Louis, 5 Wall. 413, 18 L. ed. 657.

Mr. W. C. Perry argued the cause, and, with Assistant Attorney General Beck, filed a brief for appellee:

The purpose of the Act to Regulate Commerce was to compel equality of treatment, to provide a new remedy, and preserve all existing remedies.

Interstate Commerce Commission v. Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. 167 U. S. 479, 42 L. ed. 243, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 896.

Proceedings before the Commission are not exclusive of other remedies.

State ex rel. Mattoon v. Republican Valley R. Co. 17 Neb. 648; State ex rel. Webster v. Nebraska Teleph. Co. 17 Neb. 126, 52 Am. Rep. 404, 22 N. W. 237; Lowry v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. 46 Fed. 86; Little Rock & M. R. Co. v. East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 261, 47 Fed. 771; Vincent v. Chicago & A. R. Co. 49 Ill. 33; Sutherland Stat. Const. § 202; Smith v. Stevens, 10 Wall. 321, 19 L. ed. 933; United States v. Macon County, 99 U. S. 590, 25 L. ed. 332; Nashville v. Ray, 19 Wall. 475, 22 L. ed. 168; Thomas v. West Jersey R. Co. 101 U. S. 72, 25 L. ed. 950; South v. Maryland, 18 How. 402, 15 L. ed. 435; Hearne v. New England Mut. Marine Ins. Co. 20 Wall. 493, 22 L. ed. 397; Amy v. Salma, 12 Fed. 414; Oregon Short Line & U. N. R. Co. v. Northern P. R. Co. 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 249, 51 Fed. 465; Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Osborne, 48 Fed. 49, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 257, 3 C. C. A. 347, 10 U. S. App. 430, 52 Fed. 912; Union P. R. Co. v. Goodridge, 149 U. S. 680, 37 L. ed. 896, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 970; Kentucky & I. Bridge Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 2 L. R. A. 289, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 351, 37 Fed. 567; Wight v. United States, 167 U. S. 512, 42 L. ed. 258, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 822; Atty. Gen. v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 35 Wis. 425; Buck Mountain Coal Co. v. Lchigh Coal & Nav. Co. 88 Am. Dec. 537, note; 2 Morawetz, Corp. § 1132; Cumberland Valley R. Co.'s Appeal, 62 Pa. 227; Sparhawk v. Union Pass. R. Co. 54 Pa. 421; State ex rel. Circuit Attorney v. Saline County Ct. 51 Mo. 350, 11 Am. Rep. 454; State ex rel. Circuit Attorney v. Callaway County Ct. 51 Mo. 395; High, Inj. §§ 1303, 1304, 1554; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. 167 U. S. 479, 42 L. ed. 243, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 896.

Even if the Commission has exclusive original jurisdiction of complaints made by individuals, the rule does not apply to the government.

The Dollar Sav. Bank v. United States, 19 Wall. 239, 22 L. ed. 82; Booth v. United States, 11 Gill. & J. 373; Com. v. Baldwin, 1 Watts. 54, 26 Am. Dec. 33; United States v. Hoar, 2 Mason, 314, Fed. Cas. No. 15, 373; People v. St. Louis, 10 Ill. 351, 48 Am. Dec. 339; Re Debs, 158 U. S. 564, 39 L. ed. 1092, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 900.

Section 12 specially authorizes this suit.

Sutherland, Stat. Const. § 240; Wilkinson v. Leland, 2 Pet. 627, 7 L. ed. 542.

In the following cases mandatory injunctions have been granted.

Great North of England C. & H. Junction R. Co. v. Clarence R. Co. 1 Colly. Ch. Cas. 507; Lindsey v. Great Northern R. Co. 10 Hare, 664; Corning v. Troy Iron & Nail Factory, 40 N. Y. 191; Storer v. Great Western R. Co. 2 Younge & C. Ch. Cas. 48; Wilson 189 U. S.

v. Furness R. Co. L. R. 9 Eq. 28; Sanderson v. Cockermouth & W. R. Co. 11 Beav. 497; Great Northern R. Co. v. Manchester, S. & L. R. Co. 5 DeG. & S. 138; Greene v. West Cheshire R. Co. L. R. 13 Eq. 44; Hood v. North Eastern R. Co. 8 Eq. 666; Com. v. Eastern R. Co. 103 Mass. 259, 4 Am. Rep. 555; Harris v. Cockermouth & W. R. Co. 3 C. B. N. S. 693; Marriott v. London & S. W. R. Co. 1 C. B. N. S. 489; Vincent v. Chicago & A. R. Co. 49 Ill. 37; District Attorney v. Boston R. Co. 16 Gray, 242; Atty. Gen. v. Boston Wharf Co. 12 Gray, 553; Atty. Gen. v. Tudor Ice Co. 104 Mass. 244, 6 Am. Rep. 232; Atty. Gen. v. Cohoes Co. 6 Paige, 133, 29 Am. Dec. 755; Thompson v. Paterson & H. River R. Co. 9 N. J. Eq. 526; Com. v. Pittsburgh & C. R. Co. 24 Pa. 159, 62 Am. Dec. 372; Georgetown v. Alexandria Canal Co. 12 Pet. 98, 9 L. ed. 1012; Atty. Gen. v. Street R. Co. 14 Grant Ch. (U. C.) 673; Atty. Gen. v. Great Northern R. Co. 1 Drew. & Sm. 154; Atty. Gen. v. Leicester, 7 Beav. 176.

Equity is equal to every emergency.

2 Redf. Railways, § 205; Taylor v. Salmon, 4 Myl. & C. 14; Mare v. Malachy, 1 Myl. & C. 559; Walkworth v. Holt, 4 Myl. & C. 619; Munn v. Illinois, 94 U. S. 113, 24 L. ed. 77; Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Union P. R. Co. 47 Fed. 24; Joy v. St. Louis, 138 U. S. 1, 34 L. ed. 843, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 243; Atty. Gen. v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 35 Wis. 425.

That there may be a remedy at law to persons for damages is no defense to this suit.

Atty. Gen. v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 35 Wis. 425; United States v. Barker, 1 Paine, 156, Fed. Cas. No. 14,517.

Mr. Justice White, after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

The violation of the Act to Regulate Commerce, complained of in the amended bill, was an asserted discrimination between localities by a common carrier subject to the act, averred to operate an unjust preference or advantage to one locality over another. The right to bring the suit was expressly rested upon a request made by the Interstate Commerce Commission to do so, in order to compel compliance with the provisions of the Act to Regulate Commerce relating to the matters complained of in the bill.

Bearing in mind that, prior to the request of the Commission upon which the suit was brought, no hearing was had before the Commission concerning the matters of fact complained of, and therefore no finding of fact whatever was made by the Commission, and it had issued no order to the carrier to desist from any violation of the law found to exist, after opportunity afforded to it to defend, the question for decision is whether, under such circumstances, the law officers of the United States at the request of the Commission were authorized to institute this suit.

Testing this question by the law which was in force at the time when the suit was begun and when it was decided below, *we [283] 813 are of the opinion that the authority to bring the suit did not exist.

But this is not the case under the law as it now exists, since power to prosecute a suit like the one now under consideration is expressly conferred by an act of Congress adopted since this cause was argued at bar, that is, the act "to Further Regulate Commerce with Foreign Nations and among the States," approved February 19, 1903. By § 3 of that act it is provided:

"That whenever the Interstate Commerce Commission shall have reasonable ground for belief that any common carrier is engaged in the carriage of passengers or freight traffic between given points at less than the published rates on file, or is committing any discrimination forbidden by law, a petition may be presented alleging such facts to the circuit court of the United States sitting in equity having jurisdiction; and when the act complained of is alleged to have been committed or is being committed in part in more than one judicial district of state, it may be dealt with, inquired of, tried, and determined in either such judicial district or state, whereupon it shall be the duty of the court summarily to inquire into the circumstances upon such notice and in such manner as the court shall direct, and without the formal pleadings and proceedings applicable to ordinary suits in equity. . . ."

And the same section, moreover, provides as follows:

"It shall be the duty of the several district attorneys of the United States, whenever the Attorney General shall direct, either of his own motion or upon the request of the Interstate Commerce Commission, to institute and prosecute such proceedings, and the proceedings provided by this act shall not preclude the bringing of suit for the recovery of damages by any party injured or any other action provided by said act approved February 4, 1887, entitled 'An Act to Regulate Commerce,' and the acts amendatory thereof."

284 Although by the 4th section of the act conflicting laws are repealed, it is provided, "but such repeal shall not affect causes now pending, nor rights which have already accrued, but *such causes shall be prosecuted to a conclusion and such rights enforced in a manner heretofore provided by law [italics ours] and as modified by the provisions of this act." We think the purpose of the latter provision was to cause the new remedies which the statute created to be applicable as far as possible to pending and undetermined proceedings brought, prior to the passage of the act, to enforce the provisions of the Act to Regulate Commerce. In the nature of things, it cannot be ascertained from the record whether the railroad company now exacts the rates complained of as being discriminatory and which it was the purpose of the suit to correct; but if it does, of course the power to question the legality of such rates by a suit in equity, brought like the one now here, clearly exists. Under these conditions we think the ends of justice will best be served by reversing the decrees below and remanding the cause to the circuit court for such further proceedings as may be consistent with the Act to Regulate Commerce as originally enacted and as subsequently amended,—especially with reference to the powers conferred and duties imposed by the act of Congress approved February 19, 1903, heretofore referred to.

The decree of the Circuit Court of Appeals is reversed; the decree of the Circuit Court is also reversed, and the cause is remanded to the Circuit Court for further proceedings in conformity with this opinion.

Mr. Justice Brown concurs in the result.

Mr. Justice Brewer, dissenting:

I am unable to concur in either the opinion or the judgment in this case.

I think there was no final decree in the circuit court, and that, therefore, the court of appeals should have dismissed the appeal. After the cause had been once put in issue by bill, answer, and replication, a stipulation was filed as follows:

Whereas, after joining issue upon the pleadings heretofore filed in the above-entitled suit, to wit, the original bill of complaint, the demurrer thereto, the original answer, the amended *answer, and the repli- [285] cation thereto, it has been determined by all of the parties to, and all of the parties interested in, said suit, that it is desirable and best that the questions of law arising upon the bill of complaint as amended and a demurrer thereto be first finally adjudicated and put at rest by the circuit court of appeals of the United States and the Supreme Court of the United States;

Now, therefore, it is hereby agreed and stipulated by and between the above-named complainants, by their solicitors, W. C. Perry and M. Oliggitt, and the above-named defendant, by its solicitors, J. H. Richards and C. E. Benton, that said complainants shall file an amended bill of complaint in said suit, to which said defendant shall file a demurrer, and that, if the court before which said cause is now pending shall overrule said demurrer and allow the relief prayed for in said amended bill of complaint, then said defendant shall proceed to appeal said cause in due course, and that the party, complainants or defendant, against which said circuit court of appeals shall decide adversely, shall, if said party so desires, in due course appeal said cause for final determination to the Supreme Court of the United States.

And it is further hereby agreed and stipulated that pending said appeal and all the procedure incident thereto the decree and order of said courts, whether it be said circuit court of the United States for the district of Kansas, or said circuit court of appeals, or said Supreme Court of the United States, if adverse to said defendant, allowing and decreeing the reliefs and remedies prayed for in said amended bill of complaint, shall be suspended and not enforced against said defendant the Missouri Pacific Railway Company, and when a decision has been rendered in said suit by said circuit court of appeals, or by the Supreme Court of the United States, if the cause is taken to that court, then it is further hereby agreed and stipulated that the decision and judgment of either or both of said courts, if adverse to said defendant the Missouri Pacific Railway Company, shall be vacated, set aside, and annulled, and shall not be regarded as of any force or effect against said defendant the Missouri Pacific Railway Company except so far *as holding the amended bill to be sufficient, but that said the Missouri Pacific Railway Company shall have the right and shall be permitted to file an answer in said suit, to which said complainants the United States of America shall in due course file a replication thereto, and the issues shall be duly joined and the cause proceed to hearing and determination upon its merits in due course, the intention of this agreement being that the proceedings had upon the demurrer to said amended bill of complaint and the proposed appeal of said suit to a higher court shall in no manner prejudice the right of said defendant to a trial of said suit upon its merits.

Dated this 16th day of July, 1897.

W. C. Perry,

Morris C. Cliggitt,

Solicitors for Complainant.

On an application made by the complainant, supported by the affidavit of its solicitor, stating that the defendant consented thereto, an order was entered giving the complainant leave to file an amended bill, and also to the defendant, with consent of the complainant, like leave to file a demurrer. An amended bill of complaint and a demurrer thereto were filed, the demurrer was sustained, and, the defendant electing to stand on its demurrer, a decree was entered in behalf of the complainant. A transcript before us shows that all this, from the filing of the stipulation to the entering of the decree, took place on the same day, to wit, July 19. Obviously, all subsequently thereto was done in pursuance of the stipulation. That the stipulation was not signed by the solicitors for the defendant is immaterial, as it was for its benefit alone. In the brief for the government in this court, after a statement of preliminary proceedings, it is said:

"It being manifest that the great volume of testimony would have to be taken, and as the defendant had raised the serious question whether the United States could maintain the suit, or had the right, in its own name, and without a preliminary hearing before the Interstate Commerce Commission, to enforce, by injunction, the provisions of the Interstate Commerce *Act thought best to finally settle that question. Therefore, the stipulation on pages 53, 54 was entered into. That stipulation provides for the filing of an amended bill, the leveling of a demurrer thereat, and an appeal or appeals to the United States circuit court of appeals and to this court. The amended bill was filed (pp. 55-60); the defendant demurred (p. 61); the court overruled the demurrer, and the defendant, electing to stand on its demurrer, final decree was entered in favor of the complainant. (pp. 62-73.)"

[287] which forbids discrimination, it was 189 U. S.

And in the brief for the defendant and appellant it is in like manner said:

"After all this, the parties made the stipulation found on page 53, to the effect that 'it is desirable and best that the questions of law arising upon the bill of complaint as amended and a demurrer thereto be first, finally adjudicated and put at rest by the circuit court of appeals of the United States and the Supreme Court of the United States,' which it was stipulated might be done without prejudice to the right of the defendant if it were held that the bill was maintainable to a trial of the suit upon its merits.

"The amended bill was accordingly filed (Record, pp. 55-60); demurrer thereto was filed (p. 61), and a decree rendered in favor of the complainant."

Now, although it may be that the stipulation was not brought into the record by means of a bill of exceptions, and, although it does not affirmatively appear that the trial court was made aware of this stipulation, or acted in pursuance thereof, yet as the railway company brings here a record containing the stipulation, and as it is admitted by counsel for both parties that it was entered into, and that subsequent proceedings were had in pursuance of its agreements, I think notice should be taken of it by this court. Indeed, if nothing appeared of record, and counsel should admit before us that a stipulation had been entered into between the parties in respect to the finality of the decree, ought we not to act on such admission? Can parties stipulate that questions of law shall alone be presented to this court, and that if our decision be one way the case shall thereafter *proceed in the trial court for an inquiry [288] and decree upon the facts? I know that the statutes of some states permit the taking of a case to the appellate court upon a ruling made on a demurrer, but we have always held that the decree or judgment must be final before we are called upon to review it. When a case has once been decided by this court no further proceedings can be had in the trial court except upon our direction, whereas here the parties have stipulated that without such direction a new trial may be had. In other words, our decision is not to be final although we affirm the decree. It seems to me that the decree of the court of appeals should be reversed, and the case remanded to that court with directions to dismiss the appeal.

Upon the merits, also, I dissent. The bill is an original bill in behalf of the United States, filed under the direction of the Attorney General, and the fact that the Interstate Commerce Commission requested him to cause this suit to be instituted in no manner adds to or affects the question of the government's right to maintain it. The Commission was not asking the Department of Justice to enforce any of its orders, in which case, as we held in East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 181 U. S. 1, 45 L. ed. 719, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 516, it would become our duty to examine the proceedings had before the Commission. This is an independent suit instituted by the government, not to carry into effect any orders of the Commission, but to enforce a duty cast upon carriers of interstate commerce, and the right of the government to maintain such a suit does not depend upon the request of any individual or board. The 22d section of the Act to Regulate Commerce provides that "nothing in this act contained shall in any way abridge or alter the remedies now existing at common law or by statute, but the provisions of the act are in addition to such remedies." Every remedy, therefore, that the government or any individual had to compel the performance by carriers of interstate commerce of their legal obligations remains unaffected by that act.

We held in Re Debs, 158 U. S. 564, 39 L. ed. 1092, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 900, that the United States had a right, even in the absence of a statute specially authorizing [289] such action, to come into the Federal courts by an original bill to restrain parties from obstructing and interfering with interstate commerce. It seems to me singular that the government can maintain a bill to prevent others from obstructing and interfering with interstate commerce, and yet cannot maintain a bill to compel carriers to fully discharge their duties in respect to such commerce. Can it be that the government has power to protect the carriers of interstate commerce, and not power to compel them to discharge their duties?

It is said that this is a suit to compel the carrier to refrain from discriminating between places; that there was no common-law duty to abstain from such discrimination; that it is forbidden only by statute. But, confessedly, it was a common-law duty of a carrier to make no unreasonable charges. It is distinctly averred in the amended bill (Rec. 57, 59):

"And your orators further aver and show unto your honors that said defendant has established, and for a long time has maintained, and still maintains, in force on the line of its railroad between the city of St. Louis and the city of Wichita rates, rules, and regulations governing all freight traffic between said cities over the said railroad which are unjust and unreasonable, in this, that said charges for services rendered by said company in the transportation of property and freight of each and every classification between the said city of St. Louis and the city of Wichita is excessive, exorbitant, unreasonable, and unjust to the extent and amount that such rates and charges exceed the rates and charges on the line of said defendant's railroad between the cities of St. Louis and Omaha, all of which is to the great detriment and hindrance of commerce and trade between the said cities of St. Louis and Wichita, and between the localities to which said cities contribute as a supply point, and to the irreparable injury of the public and to the people of the United States.

"And your orators further aver and show unto your honors that any schedule rates and freight charges for the various shipments and classifications, hereinbefore set forth between the said cities of St. Louis and Wichita, that are in excess of the *tariff [290] schedules and freight charges for shipments of the like kind and class of property between the cities of St. Louis and Omaha, are unreasonable, excessive, exorbitant, and unjust in and of themselves, and constitute an unreasonable discrimination against Wichita and the localities tributary thereto and the people living therein and against persons shipping freight between the cities of Wichita and St. Louis, and subject such persons and localities to an unjust and unreasonable prejudice and disadvantage."

The truth of these allegations is admitted by the demurrer. The charges for shipments for freight between St. Louis and Wichita are "unreasonable, excessive, exorbitant, and unjust in and of themselves." Surely, here is a disregard of what was at common law a plain and recognized duty of the carrier.

Further, while at common law a mere difference in the prices charged by the carrier to two shippers respectively might not have been forbidden, yet it may well be doubted whether, if the difference was so great as to amount to an unreasonable discrimination, the rule would not have been otherwise. In Interstate Commerce Commission v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 145 U. S. 263, 275, 36 L. ed. 699, 703, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 92, 96, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 844, 847, we said:

"Prior to the enactment of the Act of February 4, 1887, to Regulate Commerce, commonly known as the Interstate Commerce Act (24 Stat. at L. 379, chap. 104), railway traffic in this country was regulated by the principles of the common law applicable to common carriers, which demanded little more than that they should carry for all persons who applied, in the order in which the goods were delivered at the particular station, and that their charges for transportation should be reasonable. It was even doubted whether they were bound to make the same charge to all persons for the same service. Fitchburg R. Co. v. Gage, 12 Gray, 393; Baxendale v. Eastern Counties R. Co. 4 C. E. N. S. 63; Great Western R. Co. v. Sutton, L. R. 4 H. L. 226, 237; Ex parte Benson, 18 S. C. 38, 44 Am. Rep. 564; Johnson v. Pensacola & P. R. Co. 16 Fla. 623, 26 Am. Rep. 731, 189 U. S.

though the weight of authority in this country was in favor of an equality of charge to all persons for similar service."

[291] But beyond this, the Interstate Commerce Act itself forbids "unjust discrimination, and such discrimination is also clearly and fully set forth in the bill. Can it be that the government is powerless to compel the carriers to discharge their statutory duties? It is nowhere said in the Interstate Commerce Act that this duty or any other duty prescribed by statute is to be enforced only through the action of the Commission. On the contrary, as we have seen, it expressly provides that all other remedies are left unaffected by the act, and a duty cast by statute equally with a common-law duty may by the very language of the act be enforced in any manner known to the law.

Further, the Act to Regulate Commerce, as originally passed, in § 16, required the district attorneys of the United States, under the direction of the Attorney General, to prosecute suits to compel carriers to obey the orders of the Commission. If all remedies were to be secured only through action in the first instance by the commission that provision was all that was necessary, but in the amendatory act of 1889 (25 Stat. at L. 855, chap. 382), there was added in § 12 this clause: "The Commission is hereby authorized and required to execute and enforce the provisions of this act; and, upon the request of the Commission, it shall be the duty of any district attorney of the United States to whom the Commission may apply to institute in the proper court and to prosecute, under the direction of the Attorney General of the United States, all necessary proceedings for the enforcement of the provisions of this act, and for the punishment of all violations thereof." Clearly, that contemplates just such a case as the present, and when, in the judgment of the Commission, it is better that the proceedings should be had primarily in the courts, it may call upon the legal officers of the United States to bring the proper actions.

For these reasons, I am compelled to dissent, and I am authorized to say that Mr. Justice Harlan concurs in this opinion.

[292] *THOMAS W. POTTER, Appt.,
v.
MARY HALL.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 292-301.)

Public lands — right to participate in race for Oklahoma lands as affected by entry within prohibited period—conclusiveness of decision of Land Department.

1. One who was outside the territory opened to settlement by the acts of March 1, 1889, NOTE.—On the conclusiveness and effect of the decisions of Land Department—see notes to Hartman v. Warren, 22 C. C. A. 38; and Carson City Gold & S. Min. Co. v. North Star Min. Co. 28 C. C. A. 344.

189 U. S.

(25 Stat. at L. 757, chap. 317), March 2, 1889 (25 Stat. at L. 980, 1005, chap. 412), and the President's proclamation of March 23, 1889 (26 Stat. at L. 1546), at the time of such opening, was not disqualified from participating in the race for the land, because, prior to that date and within the prohibited period, he had been within such territory, where no manifest advantage over his competitors resulted to him from his prior entry into such territory.

2. The final conclusion of the Land Department that no substantial advantage over others taking part in the race for land opened to settlement by the acts of March 1, 1889, March 2, 1889, and the President's proclamation of March 23, 1889, resulted to an entryman who made the start from the boundary line with the others, because of his prior entry into such territory some three or four hours before the start was made, involves but the finding of an ultimate fact, and not a conclusion of law, and is therefore not reviewable by the courts.

[No. 168.]

Submitted February 24, 1903. Decided April 6, 1903.

A PPEAL from the Supreme Court of the Territory of Oklahoma to review a judgment which affirmed a decree of the District Court of Canadian County in favor of defendant in a suit involving conflicting claims to a tract of land. Reversed and remanded for further proceedings.

See same case below, 65 Pac. 841.

Statement by Mr. Justice White:

This case involves conflicting claims to a tract of land in Oklahoma. Potter, the appellant, who was plaintiff below, claiming to be the owner by title derived under the homestead laws of the United States, sued to recover the property. Mrs. Hall, the appellee, the defendant below, by answer and cross petition averred that herself and husband, being duly qualified to enter the land under the homestead laws, were the first to enter upon and occupy it in the year 1889, when it was opened for settlement, and that they had resided on it as their homestead up to the time of the death of the husband, and she thereafter had *continued to reside [293] on it as a homestead up to the bringing of the suit. It was alleged that Potter, claiming that he had duly entered upon the land, contested the right of Hall to make entry thereof, on the ground that Hall did not possess the requisite qualifications and had abandoned the land, and that Hall, on the other hand, had contested the right of Potter on the ground that he had unlawfully entered upon the land prior to the time when it was open for settlement in violation of the act of 1889 and the proclamation of the President, carrying out the provisions of that act. It was, moreover, alleged that the result of these contests was a recommendation by the local land officers that Hall's application be approved and that Potter's be rejected. A copy of the report of the register and receiver was made a part of the cross petition. It was then averred that the Secretary of the Interior, in reviewing the action of the Commissioner of the General Land Office, passing on the recommendation of the register and receiver, had approved the finding of the local officers, but that subsequently the Acting Secretary had reviewed the previous decision of the Secretary, had rejected the claim of Hall and sustained the right of Potter, and that the patent of the United States had issued to Potter in consequence of such decision. The opinion of the Secretary on the first hearing and that on the second were also made part of the cross petition. Charging that the decision of the Secretary in favor of Potter involved error of law reviewable by the court, the prayer of the cross petitioner was that, as the widow of Hall, she be recognized as entitled to make entry of the land; that Potter be adjudged to hold the land under the patent of the United States for her benefit, and that a decree be awarded directing a conveyance. To the cross petition Potter demurred on the ground of no cause of action. The demurrer having been overruled, and Potter declining to plead further, a decree was entered in favor of the defendant Hall, adjudging the land to her and decreeing a conveyance. The supreme court of the territory affirmed the decree. The material facts found by the Land Department are these: Potter entered on the land the 22d of April, 1889, the day upon which it was open for settlement, and continuously maintained *his residence thereon. Hall first entered upon a part of the land about six months after, that is, in October, 1889. The facts concerning Potter's entry were stated by the Secretary in his opinion on the first hearing as follows:

[294]

"The history of the case and the material facts are set out in the decision appealed from and need not be restated in detail. The tract in question formed a part of the lands in Oklahoma which were opened to settlement at noon on April 22, 1889; shortly before this date Potter had been appointed by the Indian agent of the Cheyenne and Arapahoe agency as assistant chief of police, with instructions to proceed to the east line of the reservation, preserve order and prevent any settlement on the same. The east line of the Cheyenne and Arapahoe reservation is also the west line of the lands opened for settlement as aforesaid, and is within possibly a quarter of a mile from the tract in question. On this morning of April 22, 1889, some three or four hours before the hour of noon, Potter, who it seems was at said line, seeing some freighters camped on the land involved, went thereon to order them off; he then returned to the line, and (at) the hour of noon started in the race for a claim; he reached the land before any of his competitors, and, as he states, commenced his settlement at one-half or one minute after twelve o'clock."

The deduction which the Secretary drew from these facts was thus stated by him:

"In my opinion the facts just stated sustain the conclusion reached by the local officers to the effect that Potter was not qualified to enter the tract in question by going into the territory on the morning of April 22, 1889, before the hour when the lands therein were opened to settlement; he necessarily secured an opportunity to observe the various tracts lying near the line and the ways of reaching them, and this, taken in connection with the fact that at the said hour he went directly from the line to the land in question, makes it plain in my mind that if he did not previously select the tract of land in dispute, he obtained information that gave him an advantage over rival claim seekers. It follows under the prevailing rulings (Dean v. Simmons, 17 Land Dec. 526), and cases cited, that *Potter is [295] not qualified to make entry of land in Oklahoma, and that his application to enter the tract in question must be rejected."

818

The Acting Secretary, when he came to consider the case on a rehearing or review, whilst accepting the facts concerning Potter's entry as stated in the previous opinion, drew from them a different conclusion from that which had previously been deduced. He said:

"Accepting this statement as correct, and a re-examination of the record satisfies me of its correctness so far as it goes, I scarcely think the conclusion warranted that he necessarily secured an opportunity to observe the various tracts of land lying near the land and the way of reaching them, so that he obtained information that gave him an advantage over rival claim seekers. He had been employed at the Cheyenne and Arapahoe agency near by since 1883, and for six years before the opening of the country to settlement he had lived in close proximity to the land in dispute. He had nothing to gain or to learn. Therefore, by the short excursion with which he is charged, and which, it cannot be denied, was made in the performance of duty devolved upon him by the orders of the agent who appointed him to the command of the police at that point, he neither gained nor sought advantage, and it was error to hold that under the circumstances of entry into the territory he was disqualified thereby."

Messrs. J. W. Shartell and J. H. Everest submitted the cause for appellant:

The act of the plaintiff in entering the Oklahoma country on the morning of the day those lands were thrown open to settlement did not disqualify him from making entry on any of such lands.

Donnell v. Kittrell, 15 Land Dec. 580; Roff v. Coplin, 18 Land Dec. 128; Higgins v. Adams, 18 Land Dec. 598; Curnutt v. Jones, 21 Land Dec. 40; Tipton v. Maloney, 23 Land Dec. 186; Metz v. Seely, 21 Land Dec. 148; McCormick v. Turner, 21 Land Dec. 151; Jackson v. Garrett, 25 Land Dec. 273; Hensley v. Waner, 24 Land Dec. 92; Blanchard v. White, 13 Land Dec. 66; Guthrie Townsite v. Paine, 13 Land Dec. 562; White v. Marvel, 18 Land Dec. 560; Mullen v. Porter, 20 Land Dec. 334.

The finding of the Secretary of the Interior that Potter, in the discharge of his duty in charge of the border police, went into the country to warn campers who had gone over the line, to get out, was, at least, a mixed conclusion of law and fact, if not strictly a finding of fact, which the courts must recognize as final and accept as conclusive.

Marquez v. Frisbie, 101 U. S. 473-479, 25 L. ed. 800-802; Lee v. Johnson, 116 U. S. 48, 29 L. ed. 570, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 249; Johnson v. Towsley, 13 Wall. 72, 20 L. ed. 485; Warren v. Van Brunt, 19 Wall. 646, 22 L. ed. 219; United States v. Minor, 114 U. S. 233, 29 L. ed. 110, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 836.

Mr. Charles P. Lincoln submitted the cause for appellee. Mr. Mark D. Libby was with him on the brief:

As there is no exception in the language of the statute, there can be none in its enforcement.

Smith v. Townsend, 148 U. S. 490, 37 L. ed. 533, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 634.

That portion which describes the qualification for entry must be liberally construed, in order that no one be permitted to avail himself of the bounty of Congress, unless evidently in one of the classes Congress intended should enjoy that bounty.

ibid.; Payne v. Robertson, 169 U. S. 323, 42 L. ed. 764, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 337; Calhoun v. Violet, 173 U. S. 60-65, 43 L. ed. 614-616, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 324.

The doctrine of "no advantage gained," contended for in this case, has no place within the meaning of the statute.

Patterson v. Wilson, 11 Okla. 75, 65 Pac. 921.

Mr. Justice White, after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

[296] The supreme court of the territory disregarded the final action of the Land Department as expressed in the opinion of the Acting Secretary on the rehearing, and decreed that Potter held the land in trust for the defendant and appellee on two *grounds: First, because the final action of the Department was held to be a violation of the provisions of the law opening the land in question to settlement; and second, because, as stated by the court, "We feel the less hesitation in reversing the conclusion of the last tribunal of the Land Department 'on review,' not only because the conclusion we now arrive at is that which must necessarily be arrived at upon the facts (italics ours), but also because it was the one accepted by the Secretary of the Interior, as well as the Commissioner of the General Land Office." The conclusion of the court, that the final action of the Land Department was contrary to law, was rested upon what was deemed to be the controlling effect of the rulings in Smith v. Townsend, 148 U. S. 490, 37 L. ed. 533, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 634; Payne v. Robertson, 169 U. S. 323, 42 L. ed. 764, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 337, and Calhoun v. Violet, 173 U. S. 60, 43 L. ed. 614, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 324. But the decisions relied upon do not sustain the conclusion which the court deduced from them. In all 189 U. S.

three of the cases the only question decided was the validity of an entry made by one who was within the inhibited territory at the time when the land was opened by law for settlement. The cases, therefore, did not involve whether one who was outside of the territory at the moment of time when the land was opened lost his right to take part in the race into the territory because, at a time previous to that moment, he had been within the territory in question. Indeed, not only was the question which this case presents not embraced within the decisions upon which the court below based its conclusion, but it was expressly excluded from the rulings made in the cases in question. Thus, in Smith v. Townsend, in referring to the statute and the President's proclamation opening the land for settlement, it was said in the concluding passage of the opinion (p. 501, L. ed. p. 536, Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 638):

"It may be said that if this literal and comprehensive meaning is given to these words it would follow that anyone who after March 2 and before April 22 should chance to step within the limits of the territory would be forever disqualified from taking a homestead therein. Doubtless he would be within the letter of the statute; but if, at the hour of noon on April 22, when the legal barrier was by the President destroyed, he was in fact outside of the limits of the territory, it may perhaps be *said that if within the letter he was not [297] within the spirit of the law, and, therefore, not disqualified from taking a homestead. Be that as it may,—and it will be time enough to consider that question when it is presented,—it is enough now to hold that one who was within the territorial limits at the hour of noon April 22 was, within both the letter and the spirit of the statute, disqualified to take a homestead therein."

The court below having, then, erroneously held that the case was controlled by the previous adjudications of this court, we are called upon to determine the question which was expressly reserved in Smith v. Townsend; that is, whether one who was outside of the legal barrier at twelve o'clock M. on April 22, the day and time when that barrier was removed by operation of law and the terms of the proclamation of the President, was disqualified from participating in the race for the land because, prior to that date and within the prohibited period, he had been within the territory which was thereafter to be opened for settlement. The statutes and proclamation of the President by which this question is controlled were fully set out in Smith v. Townsend, 148 U. S. 490, 37 L. ed. 533, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 634, and need not be at length restated. Suffice it to say, that the provisions opening the land for settlement, regulating the mode of settlement, and the President's proclamation executing these statutes, are found in the act of March 1, 1889 (25 Stat. at L. 757, chap. 317), the act of March 2, 1889 (25 Stat. at L. 980 and 1005, chap. 412), and the proclamation of the President of March 23, 1889 (26 Stat. at L. 1546). The first of these acts contained the provision that "any person who may enter upon any part of said lands in said agreement mentioned prior to the time that the same are opened to settlement by act of Congress shall not be permitted to occupy or to make entry of such lands or lay any claim thereto." The act of the subsequent day (March 2, 1889) contained the following provision:

"But until said lands are opened for settlement by proclamation of the President, no person shall be permitted to enter upon and occupy the same, and no person violating this provision shall ever be permitted to enter any of said lands or acquire any rights thereto."

The proclamation of the President contained these words:

[298] *"Warning is hereby again expressly given, that no person entering upon and occupying said lands before said hour of twelve o'clock, noon, of the 22d day of April, A. D. 1889, hereinbefore fixed, will ever be permitted to enter any of said lands or acquire any rights thereto."

Doubtless, as observed in Smith v. Townsend, a rigorous adherence to the mere letter of these statutes and the terms of the proclamation would exclude every person from the right to enter and occupy land within the prohibited territory, even although such person was outside of the territory, and, therefore, on an equality with all others, if, perchance, such persons had accidentally or otherwise gone into the prohibited territory between the 2d day of March and the 22d day of April. But it is also true that if the provisions of the statute and proclamation be enforced, not according to their mere letter, but in harmony with the intention which may be fairly deduced from them, a contrary rule would result. Whilst, as held in Smith v. Townsend and the cases referred to which have followed it, obviously the purpose of the statute was to exclude anyone from entering land who was within the territory at the period fixed for the opening, it may well be doubted whether the words "enter upon and occupy," as used in the act of 1889 and in the President's proclamation, embrace the mere accidental or casual presence in the prohibited territory subsequent to the 2d of March and prior to the 22d of April of one who was outside on the 22d of April, and, therefore, in a position of substantial equality with others seeking to make the race for the land.

The Land Department, charged with the execution of the act, was early called upon to determine whether one who was outside of the territory at the time of the opening, and took part in the race for land, was disqualified because, subsequent to the 2d of March, and before the opening, he had been within the limits. In the case referred to the entryman had, on the 20th of April, crossed the line accidentally and gone two miles into the territory; but, on being informed of the fact, had retired and waited with others on the line until the 22d, the day *of opening. After considering the[299] terms of the statute the conclusion was reached that an entry of this kind was not within the spirit of the prohibition of the statute, and the entry was confirmed. Donnell v. Kittrell (1892) 15 Land Dec. 580. This ruling was followed in Higgins v. Adams, 18 Land Dec. 598, where it was held that one who had gone into the disputed territory on the morning of the day of the opening for the purpose of watering his team, and who, on completing this object, had returned to the boundary and made a start with the others, did not come within the spirit of the statute. In Curnutt v. Jones (1895) 21 Land Dec. 40, the whole subject was elaborately reviewed and many prior cases referred to. Briefly, the facts in the case were these: The entryman had resided for several years in the vicinage of the prohibited territory, and had habitually entered therein for the purpose of getting his mail. On the day, however, of the opening he was at the line with others and took part in the race for land. It was held that the prior entry did not deprive him of the right to enter land; that whether entry prior to the day of the opening affected the right to make entry would depend upon the facts of each particular case, and upon whether, in considering them, it was concluded that the prior entry placed the one who had made it in such a position of advantage over others as to render it unjust and inequitable to allow him to make an entry of land. In summing up the case, Mr. Secretary Smith, in his opinion, said:

"Jones, the defendant in this case, had lived for some time on the border of the territory, within less than a mile from the line, and, almost from the necessity of his situation, was familiar with the lands in the immediate vicinity. His information respecting them, and particularly respecting the tract subsequently entered by him, is shown to have been acquired long prior to March 2, 1889, and, as was well said in the case of Golden v. Cole, 16 Land Dec. 375, 'it was impossible to deprive people who had been over the territory of a knowledge that they had thus acquired.' His periodical visits to Oklahoma City, which was at once his postoffice, his most convenient and accessible railway station, and his market town, do not appear to have brought him any advantage over other persons seeking lands in the territory."

*In Tipton v. Maloney (1896) 23 Land[300] Dec. 186, it was held that one who within the prohibited period had passed along the highways in the territory was not disqualified for making an entry, provided he was outside of the line on the day of the opening and took part on an equality with others in the effort to secure land. And rulings to the like effect were made in Hensley v. Waner, 24 Land Dec. 92, and Henderson v. Smith, 28 Land Dec. 303. The settled rule

then applied by the Land Department in the execution of the statute is that one who took part in the race for land on the day of the opening was not prohibited from taking land because of a prior entry into the territory unless it be shown that manifest advantage resulted to the entryman from his previous going into the territory. The rule thus for a long period and consistently enforced must obviously have become the foundation of many rights of property. And, as we consider that the rule thus applied in the practical administration of the statute by the officials by law charged with its execution conforms to its intention, we are unwilling to overthrow it by a resort to a narrow and technical construction. It remains only to consider whether error was committed by the Department in finally ruling that the entry made by Potter on the morning of the 22d, before he returned to the line to take part in the race, which involved error of law reviewable by the courts. But as such entry did not, as a matter of law, preclude Potter's right to go outside of the territory and take part in the race for land, but depended upon whether, as a matter of fact, he obtained by his previous going into the territory a substantial advantage over others, which he would not have otherwise possessed, it follows that the final conclusion of the Department that no such advantage resulted involved but the finding of an ultimate fact, and not a conclusion of law, and it is therefore not reviewable. If the facts found by the Secretary had no tendency to sustain the conclusion reached by him, it might be that a question of law would arise, but such is not the case. Indeed, in view of the finding that Potter had been for a long period of time living across the line, in close proximity to the land which he entered, and which was only a quarter of a mile distant from the place [301] where the *race began, and that he reached the land in two minutes from the time when the start was made, it might well be argued that his going into the territory, as stated, had no tendency to establish that he obtained an advantage by reason of acquiring information which he had not previously possessed. But so to say would lead only to the conclusion that, as a matter of law, the Department rightly held that Potter was a qualified entryman. The fact that the final conclusion as to the ultimate facts reached by the Department differed from the conception of such ultimate facts entertained by the Department in previous stages of the controversy, affords no ground for disregarding the conclusion of ultimate fact finally reached, which was binding between the parties.

The judgment of the Supreme Court of the Territory must be reversed, and the cause remanded for further proceedings in accordance with this opinion.

And it is so ordered.

189 U. S.

FARMERS' & MERCHANTS' INSURANCE COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,

v.

FRANK DOBNEY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 301-306.)

Error to state court—Federal question—constitutional law—equal protection of the laws—validity of state statute allowing attorneys' fees in successful actions on insurance policies.

1. A Federal question was not set up too late to confer jurisdiction on the Supreme Court of the United States of a writ of error to a state court, where it was raised by the assignments of error in the state supreme court, and was considered and decided by a commission appointed to aid that court in the discharge of its duties, and the judgment of such commission was, for the reasons stated in its report, affirmed by the state supreme court.
2. The equal protection of the laws is not denied insurance companies by the provisions of Neb. Comp. Stat. chap. 43, §§ 43-45, allowing a reasonable attorney's fee to plaintiff in case of the unsuccessful defense by an insurance company of a suit on a policy of insurance covering real property which has been totally destroyed by the causes insured against.

[No. 189.]

Submitted March 9, 1903. Decided April 6, 1903.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Nebraska to review a judgment which affirmed, for the reasons stated in the report of a commission appointed to aid

NOTE.—On writs of error from United States Supreme Court to state courts—see notes to Hamblin v. Western Land Co. 37 L. ed. U. S. 267; Kipley v. Illinois, 42 L. ed. U. S. 998; and Re Buchanan, 39 L. ed. U. S. 884.

As to the validity of class legislation—see State v. Goodwill (W. Va.) 6 L. R. A. 621, and note; and State v. Loomis (Mo.) 21 L. R. A. 789, and note.

As to constitutional equality of privileges, immunities, and protection—see Louisville Safety Vault & T. Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. (Ky.) 14 L. R. A. 579, and note.

Unconstitutional inequality or discrimination in statutes allowing attorneys' fees.

The question first came before the Supreme Court of the United States on a writ of error to the supreme court of Texas to review a judgment of that court sustaining the validity of a statute of that state which allowed an attorney's fee of $10 to the successful plaintiff in suits against railroad companies founded upon certain classes of claims, not exceeding $50 in amount, which the company had omitted to pay within a certain time after presentation. The judgment of the state court was reversed, and the statute held unconstitutional as a denial of the equal protection of the laws to a certain class of debtors arbitrarily singled out and penalized for failure to pay certain debts. Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U. S. 150, 41 L. ed. 666, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255, Reversing 87 Tex. 19, 26 S. W. 985. (The state court had also sustained the validity of this statute in Gulf, such court in discharging its duties, a judgment of the District Court of Holt County in favor of plaintiff in a suit on a policy of fire insurance. Affirmed.

See same case below, 62 Neb. 213, 86 N. W. 1070.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Halleck F. Rose submitted the cause for plaintiff in error.

The provision of the valued policy law of Nebraska, directing the taxation of an attorney's fee to plaintiff on rendition of judgment on a policy insuring real estate, is violative of the equality of the 14th Amendment of the Constitution of the United States.

Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U. S. 150-165, 41 L. ed. 666-671, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep.

C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis (Tex.) 17 L. R. A. 286, 18 S. W. 723.)

It has been held in Michigan that a statute allowing plaintiff, if successful, to tax an attorney's fee as part of his costs in an action against a railroad company to recover damages for killing cattle was an unconstitutional discrimination between suitors, where no such advantage is conferred on the defendant if successful. Wilder v. Chicago & W. M. R. Co. 70 Mich. 382, 38 N. W. 289; Schut v. Chicago & W. M. R. Co. 70 Mich. 433, 38 N. W. 291; Rinear v. Grand Rapids & I. R. Co. 70 Mich. 620, 38 N. W. 599; Lafferty v. Chicago & W. M. R. Co. 71 Mich. 35, 38 N. W. 660.

So, in Washington, the allowance of attorneys' fees, which was provided for by Wash. Laws 1893, p. 418, § 4, in favor of successful plaintiffs in actions for injuries to stock by collision with moving railroad trains, was held an invalid attempt to grant special privileges to one class of litigants at the expense and detriment of another. Jolliffe v. Brown, 14 Wash. 155, 44 Pac. 149.

In deference to the decision in Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U. S. 150, 41 L. ed. 666, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255, the supreme court of Missouri held unconstitutional a statute which authorized an allowance of attorneys' fees to the successful plaintiff in a suit to recover damages from the railroad company for the loss of stock due to its failure to furnish for the shipment of the stock ears with trap doors in the roof, as required by such statute. Paddock v. Missouri P. R. Co. 155 Mo. 524, 56 S. W. 453.

The court overruled Perkins v. St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. 103 Mo. 52, 11 L. R. A. 426, 15 S. W. 320, which upheld a statute allowing an attorney's fee on recovery against a railroad company for injury to live stock because of a defective fence, and must be deemed likewise to have overruled Briggs v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. 111 Mo. 168, 20 S. W. 32, which reaffirmed the former holding.

But the Missouri court seems to have given greater effect to the decision in Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U. S. 150, 41 L. ed. 666, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255, than the court announcing that decision was willing to accord it; for when the Kansas statute, which allows a reasonable attorney's fee to the successful plaintiff in an action against a railroad company for damages from fire caused by operating the railroad came before it for adjudication as to its constitutionality, it laboriously distinguished its former decision, and upheld the statute. Atchison, T. &

255; Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Matthews, 174 U. S. 97, 43 L. ed. 910, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 609; South & North Ala. R. Co. v. Morris, 65 Ala. 199.

The Nebraska court, in analogous cases, has itself upheld the position contended for by plaintiff in error.

Moore v. Herron, 17 Neb. 703, 24 N. W. 451; Garneau v. Omaha Printing Co. 42 Neb. 847, 61 N. W. 100; Coburn v. Watson, 48 Neb. 257, 67 N. W. 171; Atchison & N. R. Co. v. Baty, 6 Neb. 47; Grand Island & W. C. R. Co. v. Swinbank, 51 Neb. 521, 71 N. W. 48.

A law of Texas imposing, as a condition of perfecting appeals by receivers, special provisions in all cases touching appeal bonds, was held void by the supreme court of that state.

S. F. R. Co. v. Matthews, 174 U. S. 96, 43 L. ed. 909, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 609. The object of the statute under consideration, the court said, was protection against fire,—a matter in the nature of a police regulation,—while the object of the Texas statute was simply to compel the payment of small debts, and compelling the payment of indebtedness does not come within the purpose of police regulations.

The Kansas statute had previously been upheld in Missouri P. R. Co. v. Merrill, 40 Kan. 404, 19 Pac. 793, which decision was also followed in Clark v. Ellithorpe, 7 Kan. App. 337, 51 Pac. 940, though the court apparently saw no ground for distinguishing Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U. S. 150, 41 L. ed. 666, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255, which it regarded as having decided that "a similar statute in the state of Texas was unconstitutional."

A statute allowing attorneys' fees to successful plaintiffs in actions to recover for damages done to live stock by railroad trains was held constitutional in Illinois on the ground that such attorneys' fees may be upheld as a penalty for failure to fence. Peoria, D. & E. R. Co. v. Duggan, 109 Ill. 537, 50 Am. Rep. 619.

So, the imposition of an attorney's fee upon a railroad company which unsuccessfully defends an action to recover the value of stock killed upon or near its unfenced tracks does not violate the constitutional rule of equality of right, privilege, and exemption by imposing a burden upon one class of litigants in favor of another, since the legislation is intended to compel railroad companies to fence in their tracks, and the liability imposed is a consequence of their neglect to take such precaution. Illinois C. R. Co. v. Crider, 91 Tenn. 489, 19 S. W. 618.

The provision for an attorney's fee for the successful prosecution of an action, under Kan. Laws 1893, chap. 100, for failure of a carrier to safely transport and deliver goods committed to its charge, is constitutional. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Simonson, 64 Kan. 802, 57 L. R. A. 765, 68 Pac. 653.

So, in Arkansas an attorney's fee provided for by statute as part of the penalty for an overcharge by a carrier does not violate a constitutional provision against partial and unequal legislation. Dow v. Beideman, 49 Ark. 455, 5 S. W. 718.

And in Iowa, permitting the allowance of attorneys' fees on recovery against a railroad company for violation of a statute regulating rates does not violate the constitutional provision as to equality. Burlington, C. R. & N. R.

Dillingham v. Putnam (Tex.) 14 S. W. 303. To the same effect are Durkee v. Janesville, 28 Wis. 465, 9 Am. Rep. 500; South & North Ala. R. Co. v. Morris, 65 Ala. 199; St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Williams, 49 Ark. 492, 5 S. W. 883; Chicago, St. L. & N. O. R. Co. v. Moss, 60 Miss. 641.

A statute which declared that no costs should be recovered against the city in any action where the same is commenced to set aside any tax assessment or tax deed, or to prevent the collection of taxes or assessments in said city, has been held invalid.

To the same effect are Durkee v. Janesville, 28 Wis. 465, 9 Am. Rep. 500; Calder v. Bull, 3 Dall. 387, 388, 1 L. ed. 648, 649; Fletcher v. Peck, 6 Cranch, 143, 3 L. ed. 180; Wilkinson v. Leland, 2 Pet. 656, 658, 7 L. ed. 552, 553; Terret v. Taylor, 9 Cranch, 50, 3 L. ed. 653.

Co. v. Dey, 82 Iowa, 312, 12 L. R. A. 436, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 584, 48 N. W. 98.

The decision in Gulf. C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U. S. 150, 41 L. ed. 666, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255, was held by the Georgia supreme court to be conclusive as to the unconstitutionality of the provision of Ga. Civ. Code, § 2140, allowing damages and attorneys' fees to plaintiff in an action upon an insurance policy in case of the refusal of the insurance company to pay a loss within sixty days after demand, where it shall appear to the jury that the refusal to pay was in bad faith. Phenix Ins. Co. v. Hart, 112 Ga. 765, 38 S. E. 67; Phoenix Ins. Co. v. Schwartz, 115 Ga. 113, 57 L. R. A. 752, 41 S. E. 240.

But when the question came before the Supreme Court of the United States, that court again refused to sanction the state court's interpretation of Gulf. C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U. S. 150, 41 L. ed. 666, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255, but still further refined away that decision, and held that the equal protection of the laws was not denied to life or health insurance companies by the provision of Tex. Rev. Stat. art. 4071, imposing on such companies, upon failure to pay a loss within the time specified in the policy after demand therefor, a liability to the holders of the policy for damages and reasonable attorneys' fees, although such obligation was not imposed upon other classes of insurance companies or associations. Fidelity Mut. Life Asso. v. Mettler, 185 U. S. 308, 46 L. ed. 922, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 662.

And this ruling was reaffirmed in Iowa L. Ins. Co. v. Lewis, 187 U. S. 335, ante, 204, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 126.

The Texas courts, with the exception of a decision on rehearing in New York L. Ins. Co. v. Smith (Tex. Civ. App.) 41 S. W. 684, in which the court said that the decision in Gulf. C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis was conclusive against the validity of the statute, uniformly upheld the validity of such legislation. Union Cent. L. Ins. Co. v. Chowning, 86 Tex. 654, 24 L. R. A. 504, 26 S. W. 982, 8 Tex. Civ. App. 455, 28 S. W. 117; Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. Blodgett, 8 Tex. Civ. App. 45, 27 S. W. 286; Washington L. Ins. Co. v. Gooding, 19 Tex. Civ. App. 490, 49 S. W. 123; Sun L. Ins. Co. v. Phillips (Tex. Civ. App.) 70 S. W. 603; Fidelity & C. Co. v. Allibone, 90 Tex. 660, 40 S. W. 399; Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. Walden (Tex. Civ. App.) 26 S. W. 1012; New York L. Ins. Co. v. Orlopp (Tex. Civ. App.) 61 S. W. 336. And the same conclusion was reached in Merchants' Life Asso. v. Yeakum, 98 Fed. 251, 39 C. C. A. 56.

189 U. S.

An act allowing a plaintiff in a suit against a railroad company to recover for killing cattle, to tax as part of his costs an attorney's fee of $25, is unconstitutional.

Wilder v. Chicago & W. M. R. Co. 70 Mich. 382, 38 N. W. 289; Lafferty v. Chicago & W. M. R. Co. 71 Mich. 37, 38 N. W. 660; Jolliffe v. Brown, 14 Wash. 159, 44 Pac. 149; Grand Rapids Chair Co. v. Runnels, 77 Mich. 104, 111, 43 N. W. 1006; Chicago, St. L. & N. O. R. Co. v. Moss, 60 Miss. 641; Denver & R. G. R. Co. v. Outcalt, 2 Colo. App. 406, 31 Pac. 177.

A statute declaring that in the event of a railroad company's refusing to pay an employee within fifteen days of demand, "it shall be liable to pay such employee 20 per cent on the amount due him as damages," is invalid and unconstitutional because "not protecting alike the interest of employer and employee."

Similar legislation in Kansas allowing attorneys' fees to plaintiffs in suits upon fire insurance policies has been held not to deny the equal protection of the laws. British America Assur. Co. v. Bradford, 60 Kan. 82, 55 Pac. 335; Shawnee F. Ins. Co. v. Bayha, 8 Kan. App. 169, 55 Pac. 474.

And the Nebraska legislation assailed in FARMERS' & M. INS. CO. V. DOBNEY had been sustained by the state courts in prior litigation. Insurance Co. of North America v. Bachler, 44 Neb. 549, 62 N. W. 911; Lancashire Ins. Co. v. Bush, 60 Neb. 116, 82 N. W. 313.

The imposition of attorneys' fees upon unsuccessful appellants in particular kinds of actions has been held unconstitutional as unequal, partial, and discriminatory legislation.

For this reason the supreme court of Alabama declared invalid a statute allowing attorneys' fees against unsuccessful appellants from judgments of justices of the peace in suits to enforce the liability of railroads for damages to live stock. South & North Ala. R. Co. v. Morris, 65 Ala. 193.

And for a like reason the provision of Miss. Acts 1882, p. 110, imposing a reasonable attorney's fee upon unsuccessful appellants from the "judgment of any court in any action for damages brought by any citizen of this state against any corporation," was held invalid in Chicago, St. L. & N. O. R. Co. v. Moss, 60 Miss. 641.

An analogous case is St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Williams, 49 Ark. 492, 5 S. W. 883, holding invalid a statute which in effect provided for the assessment of attorneys' fees as a penalty for refusing to abide by the decision of a board appointed to assess the damages for the killing of stock by railway trains, in the event that the dissatisfied party did not recover in the courts a more favorable judgment than the award of the board.

But in Iowa a statute requiring a railroad company seeking to condemn a right of way to pay an attorney's fee to the landowner in case of his successful appeal from the award of the sheriff's jury is held not to be an unconstitutional discrimination against the company, a denial to it of the equal protection of the law, or the conferring of an illegal special privilege on the landowner. Gano v. Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. 114 Iowa, 713, 55 L. R. A. 263, 87 N. W. 714. The court rests its decision on the ground that the condemnation proceedings not being a common or natural right, but a remedy created by the legislature, that body might impose conditions on its exercise.

San Antonio & A. P. R. Co. v. Wilson (Tex. App.) 19 S. W. 910.

An act directing dismissal of certain classes of suits growing out of the reservations of land to heads of Indian families, upon a certain state of facts being made to appear, was held unconstitutional.

Wally v. Kennedy, 2 Yerger, 554, 24 Am. Dec. 511.

To the same effect are Bank of the State v. Cooper, 2 Yerger, 605; Jones v. Perry, 10 Yerger, 71, 30 Am. Dec. 430; Budd v. State, 3 Humph. 491, 39 Am. Dec. 189.

An act which provides for the appointment of a board to assess damages, and that if either party refuses to abide by such assessment, and makes it necessary for the other to sue, he shall be taxed with an attorney's fee in the event the judgment of the court is not more favorable than the award, is invalid.

St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Williams, 49 Ark. 492, 5 S. W. 883.

Mr. M. P. Kinkaid submitted the cause for defendant in error. Mr. M. F. Harrington was with him on the brief:

It is the settled law of Nebraska that, unless the attention of the trial court is called to it, a question cannot be raised for the first time in the supreme court.

Dunham v. Courtney, 24 Neb. 629, 39 N. W. 784; Dayton Spice-Mills Co. v. Sloan, 49 Neb. 622, 68 N. W. 1040; Hyde v. Hyde, 60 Neb. 502, 83 N. W. 673; Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. O'Neill, 58 Neb. 239, 78 N. W. 521; Broadwater v. Foxworthy, 57 Neb. 406, 77 N. W. 1103; Union P. R. Co. v.

James, 163 U. S. 485, 41 L. ed. 236, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1109; Baekus v. Ft. Street Union Depot Co. 169 U. S. 557, 42 L. ed. 853, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 445.

No exception having been saved to the interlocutory order directing taxation of attorney's fees as costs, the question could not be reviewed in Nebraska by the supreme court. The order having been made without objection or exception on the part of the insurance company, it must stand.

Reynolds v. State, 58 Neb. 49, 78 N. W. 483; Tuomey v. Willma, 43 Neb. 28, 61 N. W. 126; Lowrie v. France, 7 Neb. 191; Murray v. School Dist. No. 3, 11 Neb. 438, 9 N. W. 573; Hosford v. Stone, 6 Neb. 378; Morgan v. State, 51 Neb. 672, 71 N. W. 788.

It has been held by this court that an order of the judge of a state court at chambers cannot be regarded as an order of the court.

McKnight v. James, 155 U. S. 685, 39 L. ed. 310, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 248.

A reference to the "Constitution" must be construed as a reference to the Nebraska Constitution alone, and not the 14th Amendment to the Federal Constitution.

Kipley v. Illinois, 170 U. S. 182, 42 L. ed. 998, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 550; Miller v. Cornwall R. Co. 168 U. S. 131, 42 L. ed. 409, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 34.

The Federal question was raised too late to be available in this court.

Erie R. Co. v. Purdy, 185 U. S. 148, 46 L. ed. 847, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 605; Re Buchanan, 158 U. S. 31, 39 L. ed. 884, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 723.

To the objection that the statute did not impose the obligation on corporations other than railway companies exercising the power of eminent domain, the court replied that because of the special privileges granted to railroad companies they formed a special class upon which peculiar burdens might be imposed as a condition of exercising the powers granted; and that, even were the objections valid, the unconstitutionality of the statute could not be insisted upon by a corporation attempting to exercise rights under it.

A Minnesota statute allowing reasonable attorneys' fees in an action to recover the possession of land taken without compensation by a railroad company for its right of way, in cases where the company does not elect to convert the action into condemnation proceedings, is not unconstitutional as class discrimination. Cameron v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 63 Minn. 384, 31 L. R. A. 553, 65 N. W. 652; Pfaender v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 86 Minn. 218, 90 N. W. 393.

In a number of cases, statutes allowing attorneys' fees to successful plaintiffs in suits to foreclose liens have been held invalid as discriminating and class legislation. Randolph v. Builders & Painters Supply Co. 106 Ala. 501, 17 So. 721; Los Angeles Gold Mine Co. v. Campbell, 13 Colo. App. 1, 56 Pac. 246; Davidson v. Jennings, 27 Colo. 187, 48 L. R. A. 340, 60 Pac. 354; Brubaker v. Bennett, 19 Utah, 401, 57 Pac. 170.

On the other hand, such provisions have been upheld in Dell v. Marvin, 41 Fla. 221, 45 L. R. A. 201, 26 So. 188; Duckwall v. Jones, 156 Ind. 682, 58 N. E. 1055, 60 N. E. 797; Wortman v. Kleinschmidt, 12 Mont. 316, 30 Pac. 280; Ivall v. Willis, 17 Wash. 645, 50 Pac. 467.

The provision of Utah Rev. Stat. § 2006, for the allowance of attorneys' fees to a successful plaintiff in a suit to cancel a mortgage which the mortgagee fails to release or discharge after it has been fully satisfied, with no provision for a like allowance to the defendant if he succeeds, is unconstitutional as discriminating and special legislation. Openshaw v. Hain, 24 Utah, 426, 68 Pac. 138.

A statute authorizing an attorney's fee to be taxed by a justice in entering judgment for personal services in favor of the plaintiff only violates a constitutional prohibition against class legislation. Grand Rapids Chair Co. v. Runnels, 77 Mich. 104, 43 N. W. 1006.

And the provision for an attorney's fee to a successful plaintiff in an action for wages, which is made, by Ohio Rev. Stat. § 6563a, in case the wages have not been paid within three days after a demand in writing, is an unconstitutional denial of the equal protection of the laws, since the statute imposes the restriction against invoking the courts except at the peril of being mulcted in an attorney's fee if unsuccessful, upon one class of citizens only. Hocking Valley Coal Co. v. Rosser, 53 Ohio St. 12, 29 L. R. A. 386, 41 N. E. 263.

A similar statute in Illinois was, however, upheld in Vogel v. Pekoc, 157 Ill. 339, 30 L. R. A. 491, 42 N. E. 386, over an objection that it was obnoxious as special legislation.

A Texas statute requiring the appointment of an attorney for the defense in suits against nonresidents, with an allowance of reasonable compensation to be taxed as costs, is not unconstitutional because imposing on plaintiffs in suits against nonresidents a burden not imposed in suits against other persons. Williams v. Sapieha (Tex. Civ. App.) 59 S. W. 947.

That the legislature may prescribe the conditions under which an insurance corporation may do business within a state has been recognized by this court.

Fidelity Mut. Life Asso. v. Mettler, 185 U. S. 316, 46 L. ed. 929, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 662; Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v. Texas, 177 U. S. 42, 44 L. ed. 663, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 518; New York L. Ins. Co. v. Cravens, 178 U. S. 395, 44 L. ed. 1122, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 962.

The term "citizen" does not include a corporation.

Orient Ins. Co. v. Daggs, 172 U. S. 557, 43 L. ed. 552, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 281; Blake v. McClung, 172 U. S. 239, 43 L. ed. 432, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 165; Paul v. Virginia, 8 Wall. 168, 19 L. ed. 357.

The right of the Nebraska legislature to enact the statute in question is fully recognized, by implication at least, by this court in the following cases:

John Hancock Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Warren, 181 U. S. 73, 45 L. ed. 755, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 535; Orient Ins. Co. v. Daggs, 172 U. S. 557, 43 L. ed. 552, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 281; Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Matthews, 174 U. S. 96, 43 L. ed. 909, 29 Sup. Ct. Rep. 609.

Mr. Justice White delivered the opinion of the court:

Having been adjudged to pay the amount of a fire policy written on the dwelling house of the defendant in error, which was totally destroyed by fire, the plaintiff in error prosecutes this writ. The judgment was for $861.40 with interest, costs, and $150 as a reasonable attorney's fee. This latter amount was fixed under authority conferred on the court by §§ 43, 44, and 45 of chapter 43 of the Compiled Statutes of Nebraska, which are a reproduction of chapter 48 of the Laws of Nebraska for 1899. The sections in question are reproduced in the margin.† The allowance of the attorney's fee is the basis of the Federal right asserted. It is moved to dismiss the writ on the ground that the Federal right was not specially set [303] up*below as required by Rev. Stat. § 709 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 575), or was, in any event, alleged too late to enable the supreme court of Nebraska to consider it. Among the assignments of error contained in the petition in error filed before the hearing in the supreme court of Nebraska was the following:

"Section 45 of chapter 43 of the Compiled Statutes, under which the court assumed to allow and order an attorney fee to be taxed, is unconstitutional and void for want of mutuality of the provisions, and for excluding defendant from the benefits and privileges thereby given to plaintiff, and for depriving defendant of the equal protection of the laws; in each of which particulars the said section is in conflict with § 1 of the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, and in conflict with § 3 of article 1 and § 15 of article 3 of the Constitution of Nebraska."

The case was considered by commissioners appointed pursuant to the Nebraska law to aid the supreme court of the state in the discharge of its duties. The commission in an elaborate opinion recommended the affirmance of the judgment. In such opinion the assignment of error concerning the attorney's fee, above quoted, was considered and numerous cases decided by the supreme court of Nebraska sustaining its allowance under the statute in question were referred to. It was said in the opinion that the legality of the attorney's fee "was not an open question in this state" because the right to allow the fee had been previously sustained by the supreme court of the state in many cases. A passage from the case of Lancashire Ins. Co. v. Bush, 60 Neb. 116, 82 N. W. 313, expressly declaring that the statute concerning the allowance of the attorney's fee was consistent both with the Constitution of the United States and of the state of Nebraska, was approvingly cited, the passage in question being as follows:

"These decisions are vigorously attacked, but we are convinced, as a result of further investigation of the subject, that they are sound and should be adhered to. There is nothing in the Constitution of the United States or of this state which forbids classification of subjects for the purpose of legislation."

The supreme court of Nebraska, for the reasons stated in *the report of the commis-[304] sion, affirmed the judgment. It results that not only was the Federal question relied upon specially called to the attention of the supreme court of the state of Nebraska, but it was by that court expressly decided. The grounds upon which the motion to dismiss is predicated are, therefore, without merit, and it is overruled.

All the grounds relied upon to demonstrate that the statute allowing a reasonable attorneys' fee in case of the unsuccessful defense of a suit to enforce certain insurance policies is repugnant to the equality clause of the 14th Amendment are embraced in the following propositions: First, because it arbitrarily subjects insurance companies to a liability for attorneys' fees when other defendants in other classes of cases are not subjected to such burden; second, because, †Compiled Statutes of Nebraska, chapter 43.

Sec. 43. Whenever any policy of Insurance shall be written to insure any real property in this state, against loss by fire, tornado, or lightning, and the property insured shall be wholly destroyed, without criminal fault on the part of the insured or his assigns, the amount of the insurance written in such policy shall be taken conclusively to be the true value of the property insured and the true amount of loss and measure of damages.

Sec. 44. This act shall apply to all policies 189 U. S. U. S., Book 47.

of Insurance hereafter made or written upon real property in this state, and also to the renewal, which shall hereafter be made, of all policies heretofore written in this state, and the contracts made by such policies and renewals shall be construed to be contracts made under the laws of this state.

Sec. 45. The court, upon rendering judgment against an Insurance company upon any such policy of Insurance, shall allow the plaintiff a reasonable sum as an attorney's fee, to be taxed as part of the costs.

whilst the obligation to pay attorneys' fees is imposed on insurance companies in the cases embraced by the statute, no such burden rests on the plaintiff in favor of the insurance companies where the suit on a policy is successfully defended; and, third, because the statute arbitrarily distinguishes between insurance policies by allowing an attorney's fee in case of a suit on a policy covering real estate, where the property has been totally destroyed, and excluding the right to such fees in suits to enforce policies on other classes of property, or where there has not been a total destruction of the property covered by the insurance. Each and all of these propositions must rest on the assumption that contracts of insurance, generically considered, do not possess such distinctive attributes as to justify their classification separate from other contracts, and that contracts of insurance, as between themselves, may not be classified separately depending upon the nature of the insurance, the character of the property covered, and the extent of the loss which may have supervened. But the unsoundness of these propositions is settled by the previous adjudications of this court. Orient Ins. Co. v. Daggs, 172 U. S. 557, 43 L. ed. 552, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 281; John Hancock Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Warren, 181 U. S. 73, 45 L. ed. 755, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 535; Fidelity Mut. Life Assn. v. Mettler, 185 U. S. 308, 46 L. ed. 922, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 662. In the Orient Case, a statute of the state of Missouri, which subjected fire insurance contracts to an excep-[305] tional rule, was upheld, *not only on the ground of the right of the state to prescribe the conditions upon which an insurance company should transact business within its borders, but also because the rule in question was the lawful exercise of the power to classify. In the Warren Case a like principle was applied to a statute of the state of Ohio establishing a particular regulation as to life insurance companies. In the Mettler Case a statute of the state of Texas was sustained, applicable, alone, to life insurance policies, which authorized the enforcement, not only of a reasonable attorney's fee, but also of 12 per cent damages after demand in case of the unsuccessful defense of a suit to enforce a life insurance policy. In all three of the cases referred to, therefore, it was necessarily held that insurance contracts were so distinct as to justify legislative classification apart from other contracts or to authorize a classification of insurance contracts so as to subject one character of such contracts when put in one class to one rule and other varieties of such contracts when placed in another class to a different rule. The only claimed distinction between the cases previously decided and the present one is that in this case the classification is made to depend, not alone upon the general character of the contract, but upon the kind of property insured and the extent of the loss. This, it is elaborately argued, takes this case out of the rule established by the previous cases, and causes the statute to be repugnant to the 14th Amendment.

But as the rule settled by the previous cases is that contracts of insurance from their very nature are susceptible of classification, not only apart from other contracts, but from each other, it must follow, as the lesser is included in the greater, that the character of the property insured and the extent of the loss afford reasons for subclassification.

It is, however, argued that no reason could have existed for classifying losses on real estate separately from losses on other property. And by what process of reasoning, it is asked, could the legislative mind have discovered the foundation for allowing the recovery of a reasonable attorney's fee in case of a total loss of real estate insured, and not permit recovery of such fee when the property insured has been only partially destroyed? *The distinction between real and [306] personal property has in all systems of law constantly given rise to different regulations concerning such property. The differences of relation which may arise between the insurer and the insured, depending upon whether the property insured has been only partially damaged or has been totally destroyed, needs but to be suggested. In the one case, the amount of the damage affords possibilities for a reasonable difference of opinion between the parties in adjusting the payment under the policy. In the other, the amount being determined under the statute by the value fixed by both parties in the policy, the question of legal liability under the policy would be, as a general rule, the only matter to be considered in determining whether payment under the contract will be made. Besides, it is obvious that the total destruction of real estate covered by insurance necessarily concerns the homes of many of the people of the state. If, in regulating and classifying insurance contracts, the legislature took the foregoing considerations into view and provided for them, we cannot say that in doing so it acted arbitrarily and wholly without reason.

Affirmed.

Mr. Justice Harlan, Mr. Justice Brewer, and Mr. Justice Brown dissented.

ONONDAGA NATION et al., Plffs. in Err.,
v.

JOHN BOYD THACHER.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 306-311.)

Error to state court — Federal question — dismissal.

A writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States to a state court will be dismissed for want of jurisdiction, where no claim of Federal right was specially set up or called to the attention of the state court in any way.

NOTE.—On writs of error from United States Supreme Court to state courts—see notes to Hamblin v. Western Land Co. 37 L. ed. U. S. 267; Kipley v. Illinois, 42 L. ed. U. S. 998; Re Buchanan, 39 L. ed. U. S. 884.

[No. 234.]

Argued April 8, 9, 1903. Decided April 27, 1903.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of New York to review a judgment establishing defendant's absolute ownership of certain Indian wampum belts, entered in pursuance of the mandate of the Court of Appeals of that State, which had affirmed a judgment of the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court of New York for the Fourth Judicial Department affirming the judgment of the Special Term of the Supreme Court of Onondaga County. Dismissed.

See same case below, 53 App. Div. 561, 65 N. Y. Supp. 1014.

Statement by Mr. Justice White:

This action was originally brought by the Onondaga Nation and Te-has-ha, an Onondaga Indian. Subsequently, several other Onondaga Indians, one Seneca Indian, a [307] Cayuga Indian, *and the University of the State of New York were made additional plaintiffs. The ultimate object of the action was to recover from the defendant four wampum belts to which defendant asserted ownership by purchase, but which were averred by the plaintiffs to be the property of a league, or confederacy of Indian tribes, known as the "Ho-de-no-sau-nee." The Onondaga Nation, through an officer selected by it, was averred to be the lawful keeper, or custodian, of said belts. The league, or confederacy, referred to was also at one time known as the Iroquois Confederacy, as the Five Nations (consisting of the Mohawk, Onondaga, Seneca, Oneida, and Cayuga tribes), and after the Tuscarora Nation of Indians came into the league, as the Six Nations. By an amendment to the complaint it was alleged that on February 26, 1898, "the Onondaga Nation elected the University of the State of New York to the office of wampum keeper, and, by bill of sale, sold and transferred to the University of the State of New York all its interest in the said wampums;" and the right to the custody of the belts was alleged to be in said university. These wampum belts were thus described:

"One belt of dark wampum beads, representing the confederation organization of the Five Nations under Hiawatha; one belt representing the first treaty stipulation between the Six Nations and General George Washington, picturing in wampum beadwork the council house, General Washington, the O-do-ta-ho, or president of the tribes, and thirteen representatives of the colonies; also two fragments of other belts, one representing the first approach to the Indians of the 'people with white faces,' and the other, a narrow belt, representing the unity of the Five Nations."

The complaint contained no allusion to the Constitution, treaties, or statutes of the United States.

189 U. S.

In substance the answer contained a recital of the facts connected with the purchase of the belts, and it was asserted that absolute ownership thereof existed in the defendant.

The action was tried at a special term of the supreme court of Onondaga county, New York. After the introduction of oral and documentary evidence, the court filed findings of fact *and conclusions of law. The defendant was found to be the absolute owner of the property in question; the Onondaga Nation was held not to have legal capacity to sue; the University of the State of New York was decided not to have such interest in the subject-matter of the action as entitled it to bring an action for the recovery of any or either of the wampum belts; and the individual Indians made parties plaintiff were adjudged not to possess such a community of interest with the members of the various tribes constituting the league, or confederacy, which, it was alleged, originally owned the belts, as to permit the maintenance by them of the action. Beyond statements made in testimony or in recitals of historical facts, showing that the general government had made treaties with the confederacy of the Six Nations and with certain of the tribes which had composed the confederacy, and that said treaties had been evidenced by the exchange of belts of wampum, there was not contained in the evidence, or in the findings referred to, or in the judgment rendered, or in the exceptions thereafter filed by the plaintiffs to the findings of the court, any allusion to the Constitution, treaties, or statutes of the United States.

On appeal the appellate division of the supreme court of New York for the fourth judicial department affirmed the judgment of the trial court. An appeal was then taken to the court of appeals of the state of New York, and that court affirmed the judgment (169 N. Y. 584, 62 N. E. 1098) upon the following per curiam opinion:

"We think the judgment appealed from should be affirmed, upon the ground that neither the Onondaga Nation nor the individual Indians named as plaintiffs had legal capacity to bring and maintain the action. Strong v. Waterman, 11 Paige, 607; Seneca Nation v. Christie, 126 N. Y. 122, 27 N. E. 275; Johnson v. Long Island R. Co. 162 N. Y. 462, 56 N. E. 992.

"As to the University of the State of New York, one of the plaintiffs, the finding of fact by the trial judge 'that the University of the State of New York never purchased any or either of the wampum belts mentioned and described in the complaint, and that said University of the State of New York never was selected or "raised up" to the position or office of "wampum *keeper," [309] and no official proceedings were ever begun on the part of any of the tribes of Indians which formerly composed the Iroquois Confederacy for the purpose of conferring any such position or office upon said University of the State of New York, assuming that there is or was, at the time of said alleged proceedings, any such official position,' is supported by evidence, and the judgment having been affirmed at the appellate division, it is, therefore, conclusive upon us."

827

The record and the proceedings in the cause having been remitted to the supreme court of Onondaga county, and the judgment of the court of appeals having been made the judgment of the lower court, a writ of error was allowed to review this latter judgment.

Mr. Edward Winslow Paige argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiffs in error.

Mr. John A. Delehanty argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error.

Mr. Justice White, after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

The jurisdiction of this court to review the judgment complained of is controlled by § 709 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 575). Now, so far as we have been able to ascertain from a careful examination of the record, there was not drawn in question in the courts of the state of New York in the case at bar, in any manner, the validity of a treaty or statute of, or an authority exercised under, the United States, and the courts of the state of New York rendered no decision against the validity of any such treaty, statute, or authority. Nor is there anything contained in the record to indicate that there was drawn in question in the state courts the validity of any statute of, or the validity of an authority exercised under, a state, and necessarily there was no decision sustaining the validity of any state statute or authority exercised under a state, alleged to be repugnant to the Constitution, treaties, or laws of the United States. Neither can we find anything in the record to warrant the contention that the plaintiffs in error ever, specially or otherwise, *set up the claim, in the course of the litigation in the courts of New York which is under review, of any title, right, privilege, or immunity under the Constitution, or a treaty or statute of, or commission held or authority exercised under, the United States.

There are no formal assignments of error in the record or in the brief of counsel for plaintiffs in error. It is, however, asserted in such brief that a Federal question arises upon the record because of the ruling by the court of appeals of the state of New York, that there was evidence supporting "the finding of fact by the trial judge 'that the University of the State of New York never purchased any or either of the wampum belts mentioned and described in the complaint, and that said University of the State of New York never was selected or "raised up" to the position or office of "wampum keeper," and no official proceedings were ever begun on the part of any of the tribes of Indians which formerly composed the Iroquois Confederacy for the purpose of conferring any such position or office upon said University of the State of New York, assuming that there is or was, at the time of said alleged proceedings, any such official position.'"

Referring to this ruling of the court of appeals of New York, counsel for plaintiffs in error say:

"It is plain that this is a holding that the council of the Onondagas had no power to select a depositary for the wampums. It is not that the University could not take, could not act, and could not sue, but 'that it never was selected' for the position of wampum keeper. As the action of the council selecting it, or voting its selection, is admitted on the record, this can only mean that the action of the council of the Onondagas was void as beyond its power, and thus the Federal question is right up, because the case was decided by the court of appeals upon that question solely."

But, even if the quoted matter is susceptible of the construction that it adjudged that the council of the Onondaga Nation of Indians did not possess the power which it is claimed they attempted to exercise in 1898, to select the University of the State of New York as the depositary for the wampums, it is not apparent, and no reason has been advanced which enables *us to discover, [311] how a Federal question can be evolved from the holding referred to which would entitle us to review the judgment below. Certainly, the court of appeals of New York did not suppose that a Federal question was lurking in the record presented for its consideration.

In any event, as we find that no claim of Federal right was specially set up, or called to the attention of the state court in any way, we are without jurisdiction to review the judgment of the state court. Telluride Power Transmission Co. v. Rio Grande Western R. Co. 187 U. S. 569, 580, ante, 307, 312, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 178.

Writ of error dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

FERDINAND N. SHURTLEFF, Appt.,

v.

UNITED STATES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 311- 319.)

Officers—removal by President.

1. A Federal official sought to be removed from office by the President for any of the causes specified by Congress as grounds for such removal is entitled to notice and hearing.
2. The removal of a Federal official by the President without notice or opportunity to defend will be presumed to have been made for other causes than those specified by Congress as grounds for his removal.
3. The general power of the President to remove a Federal official for any reason he may think sufficient, even though such official was appointed by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, is not restricted, as regards general appraisers of merchandise, to a removal for "inefficiency, neglect of duty, or malfeasance in office" by the provision in the customs administrative act of June 10, 1890, § 12 (26 Stat. at L. 131, 136, chap. 407, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 1886, 1922, 1895, 1924, 1931), which authorizes the appointment of such officials, that they "may be removed from office at any time by the President" for those causes.

NOTE.—On the right to remove officers summarily—see note to Trainor v. Wayne County (Mich.) 15 L. R. A. 95.

[No. 76.]

Argued January 20, 1903. Decided April 6, 1903.

A PPEAL from the Court of Claims to review a judgment denying the right of a general appraiser of merchandise to be paid his salary after he was removed from office by the President. Affirmed.

See same case below, 36 Ct. Cl. 34.

Statement by Mr. Justice Peckham:

The appellant seeks to review a judgment of the court of claims denying his right to [312] be paid the salary pertaining to *the office of a general appraiser of merchandise and accruing between May 15 and November 1, 1899. The court refused to decree payment of the claim on the ground that he was not one of the appraisers during the time for which he demanded such salary.

The facts, as they appear in the findings of the court of claims, are that the appellant was nominated on July 17, 1890, to be one of the general appraisers of merchandise under the act of June 10, 1890, chapter 407 (26 Stat. at L. 131, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1886), and that nomination was consented to on the following day by the Senate, and the appellant was thereupon commissioned to be such general appraiser of merchandise. He accepted that office and took the oath required on July 24, 1890, and remained in such office and was paid the salary attached thereto up to May 15, 1899. On May 3 of that year he received the following communication from the President:

Executive Mansion,
Washington, D. C., May 3, 1899.

Sir:—

You are hereby removed from the office of general appraiser of merchandise, to take effect upon the appointment and qualification of your successor.

William McKinley.

The appellant never resigned his office nor acquiesced in any attempted removal therefrom, and he was never notified or informed of any charges made against him, either of inefficiency, neglect of duty, or malfeasance in office, and he knows of no cause for his removal from the office having been ascertained or assigned by the President.

Since May 15, 1899, he has been ready and willing and offered to discharge the duties of the office, and has not been paid any salary since that date. He has made monthly demand upon the Treasury Department for the salary attaching to the office from May 15 to November 1, and such demand has been refused.

On May 12, 1899, an appointment was made during the recess of the Senate to fill the vacancy caused by the removal of the petitioner from his office, and such appointment was to be *in effect not longer than to [313] the end of the next session of the Senate of the United States. The appointee under that commission took the oath of office and entered upon the duties thereof on May 12, 1899, and has received pay as such officer, beginning on May 19, 1899, up to the present time. On December 15, 1899, he was nominated to the Senate and the nomination to that office was confirmed on January 17, 1900, and he was commissioned by the President under the above confirmation on January 22, 1900, and took the oath of office under that appointment on January 26, 1900, and since that time has remained in the office to which he was so appointed.

Upon these findings the court of claims decided as a conclusion of law that the appellant was not entitled to recover, and his petition was therefore dismissed.

Mr. Edwin B. Smith argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Smith & Barker, filed a brief for appellant:

Where causes of removal are specified by the Constitution or statute, as also where the term of office is for a fixed period, notice and hearing are essential.

Reagan v. United States, 182 U. S. 425, 45 L. ed. 1164, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 842.

Congress can restrict removals from such inferior offices as it may establish.

Ex parte Hennen, 13 Pet. 229, 10 L. ed. 136; Marbury v. Madison, 1 Cranch, 162, 2 L. ed. 60; United States ex rel. Goodrich v. Guthrie, 17 How. 306, 15 L. ed. 107.

Those who control the right of appointment to an office may declare its terms and tenure. This has been many times decided in states whose Constitutions in this respect were like that of the United States.

Fox v. McDonald, 101 Ala. 72, 74, 21 L. R. A. 529, 13 So. 416; People ex rel. Dunham v. Morgan, 90 Ill. 562; Baltimore v. State, 15 Md. 455, 74 Am. Dec. 572; People ex rel. Waterman v. Freeman, 80 Cal. 233, 22 Pac. 173; People ex rel. Le Roy v. Hurlbut, 24 Mich. 63, 9 Am. Rep. 103; People ex rel. Brown v. Woodruff, 32 N. Y. 364; State v. Constantine, 42 Ohio St. 441, 51 Am. Rep. 833; Long v. New York, 81 N. Y. 425; Taft v. Adams, 3 Gray, 130; People v. Osborne, 7 Colo. 608, 4 Pac. 1074; State ex rel. Atty. Gen. v. Hawkins, 44 Ohio St. 114, 5 N. E. 228; State ex rel. Kennedy v. McGarry, 21 Wis. 498.

Where the Constitution confers the power, it imposes the only limitations of it. Where it is only derived from a law establishing the office, that law may prescribe the requirement for the appointment, and, necessarily, the conditions for removal from the office.

Hovey v. State, 119 Ind. 403, 21 N. E. 21;

Collins v. State, 8 Ind. 344; State ex rel. Rosenstock v. Swift, 11 Nev. 137; Field v. People, 3 Ill. 79; People ex rel. Hatfield v. Comstock, 78 N. Y. 361; People ex rel. Ward v. Scheu, 167 N. Y. 296, 60 N. E. 650.

The distinction is one that has been frequently recognized by the courts.

People ex rel. Ward v. Scheu, 60 App. Div. 594, 69 N. Y. Supp. 597; People ex rel. Burby v. Howland, 155 N. Y. 270, 41 L. R. A. 838, 49 N. E. 775; People ex rel. Le Roy v. Foley, 148 N. Y. 677, 43 N. E. 171; People ex rel. Mitchell v. Sturges, 156 N. Y. 580, 51 N. E. 295, 27 App. Div. 387, 50 N. Y. Supp. 5, 21 Misc. 605, 47 N. Y. Supp. 999.

The legislature can do what it thinks best with a public office, or public officer. All statutory offices are taken subject to legislative action.

People ex rel. Mitchell v. Sturges, 21 Misc. 607, 47 N. Y. Supp. 999.

The power which creates an office can regulate the incidents to its creation and existence.

2 Story, Const. § 1537; People ex rel. Hatfield v. Comstock, 78 N. Y. 361; People ex rel. Ward v. Scheu, 167 N. Y. 296, 60 N. E. 650.

"Tenure" means the other terms, manner, and conditions of holding an office, as well as the calendar time prescribed for it.

United States v. Hartwell, 6 Wall. 393, 18 L. ed. 832; People v. Waite, 9 Wend. 58; Ex parte Herriek, 78 Ky. 32.

When Congress by law vests the appointment of inferior officers in the heads of departments, it may limit and restrict the power of removal as it deems best for the public interest. The constitutional authority in Congress thus to vest the appointment implies authority to limit, restrict, and regulate the removal by such laws as Congress may enact in relation to the officers so appointed.

United States v. Perkins, 116 U. S. 485, 29 L. ed. 700, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 449.

Having the power to confer the right of nomination upon the President, or head of a department, or a court, or to leave it to the President subject to the Senate's approval, the correlative power existed to restrict the original selection or limit the power of removal. Determining where these powers shall be lodged has naught to do with the restrictions to be placed upon their exercise.

Marbury v. Madison, 1 Cranch, 167, 2 L. ed. 60; People ex rel. Peek v. Departments of Fire & Bldgs. Comrs. 106 N. Y. 68, 12 N. E. 641; Biggs v. McBride, 17 Or. 651, 5 L. R. A. 115, 21 Pac. 878.

The formulation of charges and an investigation of them are conditions precedent to any removal from the office in question.

Mechem, Puh. Off. § 454; Throop, Puh. Off. § 364; 25 Am. Law Rev. 212; Denver v. Darrow, 13 Colo. 460, 22 Pac. 784; Com. ex rel. Bowman v. Slifer, 25 Pa. 23, 64 Am. Dec. 680; Field v. Com. 32 Pa. 478; State. Clark, Prosecutor, v. Cape May, 50 N. J. L. 558, 14 Atl. 581; State ex rel. Campbell v. Police Comrs. 14 Mo. App. 305, Affirmed in 88 Mo. 144; Biggs v. McBride, 17 Or. 651, 5 L. R. A. 115, 21 Pac. 878.

Removal for cause, though no particular cause is statutorily specified, by implication imposes investigation before action.

People ex rel. Gere v. Whitlock, 92 N. Y. 191.

Where the statute states causes for dismissal, the plain implication is that they cannot be made in any other cases or for any other causes.

People ex rel. Peek v. Departments of Fire & Bldgs. Comrs. 106 N. Y. 68, 12 N. E. 641.

An officer has the right to be heard before being removed for cause, whether the statute expressly requires a hearing or not. If not expressed, it is implied.

Bagg's Case, 11 Coke, 98; King v. Gaskin, 8 T. R. 209; Ex parte Ramshay, 18 Q. B. 190; Queen v. Canterbury, 1 El. & El. 545; Capel v. Child, 2 Crompt. & J. 574; Williams v. Bagot, 3 Barn. & C. 786; Re Brook, 16 C. B. N. S. 416; Dullam v. Willson, 53 Mich. 402, 51 Am. Rep. 128, 19 N. W. 112; Page v. Hardin, 8 B. Mon. 672; Willard's Appeal, 4 R. I. 601; Com. ex rel. Bowman v. Slifer, 25 Pa. 28, 64 Am. Dec. 680; People ex rel. Andrews v. Lord, 9 Mich. 227; People ex rel. Mead v. Ingham County, 36 Mich. 418; State ex rel. Atty. Gen. v. Hawkins, 44 Ohio St. 115, 5 N. E. 228; State ex rel. Kennedy v. McGarry, 21 Wis. 496; Biggs v. McBride, 17 Or. 651, 5 L. R. A. 115, 21 Pac. 878; Ham v. Boston Bd. of Police, 142 Mass. 90, 7 N. E. 540; West River Bridge Co. v. Dix, 6 How. 548, 12 L. ed. 552.

In ascertaining and determining whether charges such as require or justify removal are sustained, the President acts judicially, and his jurisdiction to remove is not to be inferred argumentatively.

Runkle v. United States, 122 U. S. 556, 30 L. ed. 1170, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1141; Re Guden, 171 N. Y. 531, 64 N. E. 451.

Assistant Attorney General Pradt argued the cause and filed a brief for appellee:

The incumbents of these offices are removable from office at the pleasure of the President, although no limitation in respect to the tenure of the offices has been prescribed by law.

Parsons v. United States, 167 U. S. 324, 42 L. ed. 185, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 880.

The greatest force that can be given to the words, "and may be removed from office at any time by the President for inefficiency, neglect of duty, or malfeasance in office" is to regard them as directory, and therefore not intended as an encroachment upon the executive power of removal.

Blake v. United States, 103 U. S. 232, 26 L. ed. 464; Keyes v. United States, 109 U. S. 336, 27 L. ed. 954, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 202.

Even in cases where the statute has expressly provided for a four years' term of office, this court has held that the fixing of a definite term of years does not grant any tenure of the office against the President's will. The court holds that the purpose of such legislation is to limit the duration of the term of office, and not to secure to the incumbent a term of office for that period.

Parsons v. United States, 167 U. S. 338, 42 L. ed. 190, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 880.

Mr. Justice Peckham, after making the foregoing statement of facts, delivered the opinion of the court:

The office of general appraiser of merchandise was created by the 12th section of the act of Congress approved June 10, 1890, commonly called the customs administrative act. 26 Stat. at L. 131, 136, chap. 407, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 1886, 1922, 1895, 1924, 1931. The material portion of that section reads as follows:

"Sec. 12. That there shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, nine general appraisers of merchandise, each of whom shall receive a salary of seven thousand dollars a year. Not more than five of such general appraisers shall be appointed from the same political party. They shall not be engaged in any other business, avocation, or employment, and may be removed from office at any time by the President for inefficiency, neglect of duty, or malfeasance in office. . . ."

[314] There is, of course, no doubt of the power of Congress to create such an office as is provided for in the above section. Under the provision that the officer might be removed from office at any time for inefficiency, neglect of duty, or malfeasance in office, we are of opinion that if the removal is sought to be made for those causes, or either of them, the officer is entitled to notice and a hearing. Reagan v. United States, 182 U. S. 419, 425, 46 L. ed. 1162, 1164, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 845. In speaking of causes of removal, Mr. Chief Justice Fuller said in that case:

"The inquiry is, therefore, whether there were any causes of removal prescribed by law March 1, 1895, or at the time of the removal. If there were, then the rule would apply that where causes of removal are specified by constitution or statute, as also where the term of office is for a fixed period, notice and hearing are essential. If there were not, the appointing power could remove at pleasure or for such cause as it deemed sufficient."

Various state courts have also held that, where an officer may be removed for certain causes, he is entitled to notice and a hearing. See Dullam v. Willson, 53 Mich. 392, 401, 51 Am. Rep. 128, 19 N. W. 112; Page v. Harlin, 8 B. Mon. 668, 672; Willard's Appeal, 4 R. I. 597; Com. ex rel. Bowman v. Slifer, 25 Pa. 23, 28, 64 Am. Dec. 680; State ex rel. Atty. Gen. v. Hawkins, 44 Ohio St. 98, 114, 5 N. E. 228; Biggs v. McBride, 17 Or. 640, 650, 5 L. R. A. 115, 21 Pac. 878; Ham v. Boston Bd. of Police, 142 Mass. 90, 7 N. E. 540.

It must be presumed that the President did not make the removal for any cause assigned in the statute, because there was given to the officer no notice or opportunity to defend. The question then arises, Can the President exercise the power of removal for any other causes than those mentioned in the statute? In other words, Is he restricted to a removal for those causes alone, or can he exercise his general power of removal without such restriction?

We assume, for the purposes of this case only, that Congress could attach such conditions to the removal of an officer appointed under this statute as to it might seem proper; and, therefore, that it could provide that the officer should only be removed for the causes stated, and for no other, and after notice and an opportunity for a hearing. Has Congress, by the 12th section of the above act, so provided?

It cannot now be doubted that, in the absence of constitutional *or statutory provi-[315] sion, the President can, by virtue of his general power of appointment, remove an officer, even though appointed by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. Ex parte Hennen, 13 Pet. 230; Parsons v. United States, 167 U. S. 324, 42 L. ed. 185, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 880, and cases cited. To take away this power of removal in relation to an inferior office created by statute, although that statute provided for an appointment thereto by the President and confirmation by the Senate, would require very clear and explicit language. It should not be held to be taken away by mere inference or implication. Congress has regarded the office as of sufficient importance to make it proper to fill it by an appointment to be made by the President and confirmed by the Senate. It has thereby classed it as appropriately coming under the direct supervision of the President, and to be administered by officers appointed by him (and confirmed by the Senate) with reference to his constitutional responsibility to see that the laws are faithfully executed. Art. 2, § 3.

In Blake v. United States, 103 U. S. 227, 26 L. ed. 462, there were two constructions that might have been placed upon the act there under consideration, determining the tenure by which army and naval officers held their commissions in time of peace, and that construction was placed upon the 5th section of the act of July 13, 1866, chapter 176 (14 Stat. at L. 92), which left with the President his power to remove an officer of the Army or Navy, by the appointment of his successor, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. Although the question was regarded as not free from difficulty, it was held that there was no intention on the part of Congress to deny or restrict the power of the President, with the consent of the Senate, to displace army and naval officers in time of peace by the appointment of others in their places. This indicates the tendency of the court to require explicit language to that effect before holding the power of the President to have been taken away by an act of Congress.

The appellant contends that, because the statute specified certain causes for which the officer might be removed, it thereby impliedly excluded and denied the right to remove for any *other cause, and that the Pres-[316] ident was therefore by the statute prohibited from any removal excepting for the causes, or some of them, therein defined. The maxim, Expressio unius est exclusio alterius, is used as an illustration of the principle upon which the contention is founded. We are of opinion that, as thus used, the maxim does not justify the contention of the appellant. We regard it as inapplicable to the facts herein. The right of removal would exist if the statute had not contained a word upon the subject. It does not exist by virtue of the grant, but it inheres in the right to appoint, unless limited by constitution or statute. It requires plain language to take it away. Did Congress, by the use of language providing for removal for certain causes, thereby provide that the right could only be exercised in the specified causes? If so, see what a difference in the tenure of office is effected as to this office, from that existing generally in this country. The tenure of the judicial officers of the United States is provided for by the Constitution; but, with that exception, no civil officer has ever held office by a life tenure since the foundation of the government. Even judges of the territorial courts may be removed by the President. McAllister v. United States, 141 U. S. 174, 35 L. ed. 693, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 949. To construe the statute as contended for by appellant is to give an appraiser of merchandise the right to hold that office during his life, or until he shall be found guilty of some act specified in the statute. If this be true, a complete revolution in the general tenure of office is effected, by implication, with regard to this particular office. We think it quite inadmissible to attribute an intention on the part of Congress to make such an extraordinary change in the usual rule governing the tenure of office, and one which is to be applied to this particular office only, without stating such intention in plain and explicit language, instead of leaving it to be implied from doubtful inferences. The rule which is expressed in the maxim is a very proper one and founded upon justifiable reasoning in many instances, but should not be accorded controlling weight when to do so would involve the alteration of the universal practice of the government for over a century, and the consequent curtailment of the powers of the Executive in such an unusual manner. *We can see no reason for such action by Congress with reference to this office or the duties connected with it.

The appellant has cited some cases in the state courts, where, under the peculiar circumstances therein set forth, and with regard to the particular provisions of the statutes, it has been held that the power to remove is restricted to the causes stated in such statutes. We do not regard them as applicable to a case like this.

In making removals from office it must be assumed that the President acts with reference to his constitutional duty to take care that the laws are faithfully executed, and we think it would be a mistaken view to hold that the mere specification in the statute of some causes for removal thereby excluded the right of the President to remove for any other reason which he, acting with a due sense of his official responsibility, should think sufficient.

By the 4th section of article 2 of the Constitution it is provided that all civil officers shall be removed from office on impeachment for, and conviction of, treason, bribery, or other high crimes and misdemeanors. No one has ever supposed that the effect of this section was to prevent their removal for other causes deemed sufficient by the President. No such inference could be reasonably drawn from such language.

We are not unmindful of the force of the contention that, if the power of removal is not limited to the causes specified in the statute, that then those words providing for a removal for inefficiency, neglect of duty, or malfeasance in office fulfil no function, because without them the President has unlimited power of removal, and with them he still has the same power.

It may be said, however, that there is some use for the provision for removal for the causes named in the statute. A removal for any of those causes can only be made after notice and an opportunity to defend; and therefore, if a removal is made without such notice, there is a conclusive presumption that the officer was not removed for any of those causes, and his removal cannot be regarded as the least imputation on his character for integrity or capacity. Other causes for removal may, however, exist, and be demanded by the interests of the *service,[316] in order that the office may be better conducted, although the officer may not be proved guilty of conduct coming within the statute as a cause for removal. It is true that, under this construction, it is possible that officers may be removed for causes unconnected with the proper administration of the office. That is the case with most of the other officers in the government. The only restraint in cases such as this must consist in the responsibility of the President, under his oath of office, to so act as shall be for the general benefit and welfare.

It may be, perhaps, that the suggestion above indicated, of the purpose of the statute as evidenced by this language is not entirely satisfactory as a reason for its employment. We by no means overlook the objections to it. But we are called upon to place a meaning upon language which, as used in this section of the statute, gives rise to doubts as to what its true meaning is. We are asked not alone to interpret the language actually used, but to infer or imply therefrom a further meaning as to its effect, which does not necessarily flow from the language itself, and, if adopted, results in the creation of a tenure of this particular office, not attached to a single other civil office in the government, with the exception of judges of the courts of the United States. We cannot bring ourselves to the belief that Congress ever intended this result while omitting to use language which would put that intention beyond doubt. But we are not shut up to the necessity of finding some other and more plausible reason for the use of this language, or else to adopt the meaning contended for by the appellant. The right of removal, as we have already remarked, would exist as inherent in the power of appointment unless taken away in plain and unambiguous language. This has not been done, and although language has been used from which we might speculate or guess that possibly Congress did intend the meaning contended for by appellant, yet it has not in fact expressed that meaning in words plain enough to call upon the courts to determine that such intention existed.

The claim made by the appellant, it will be seen, is for salary accruing prior to the appointment and confirmation of his successor by the President and Senate; but holding, as we do, that *the President had the power to remove on other grounds than those mentioned in the act, he exercised that power by appointing the appellant's successor for the time which elapsed between such appointment and his reappointment after the meeting of the Senate and his confirmation by that body.

We are of opinion that the judgment of the Court of Claims should be affirmed.

JOHN E. SEXTON, Plff. in Err.,
v.

PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 319-325.)

Federal courts—exclusive jurisdiction over crimes against Federal laws—exceptions.

The offense of extorting money under a threat to accuse a person of a criminal violation of a Federal internal revenue law, though made a crime by U. S. Rev. Stat. § 5484 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3702), is excepted from the exclusive jurisdiction conferred on the Federal courts by §§ 629, 711 (pp. 507, 577), of "all crimes and offenses cognizable under the authority of the United States," by the provision of § 5328 (p. 3622), that "nothing in this title shall be held to take away or impair the jurisdiction of the courts of the several states under the laws thereof."

[No. 155.]

*Argued and submitted January 28, 1903.
Decided April 6, 1903.*

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of California to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of conviction, in the Superior Court of the County of El Dorado in that State, of the crime of extortion. Affirmed.

See same case below, 132 Cal. 37, 64 Pac. 107.

NOTE.—On concurrent jurisdiction of Federal and state courts—see Copp v. Louisville & N. R. Co. (La.) 12 L. R. A. 725, and note.
189 U. S.

Statement by Mr. Justice Peckham:

Plaintiff in error was convicted in the superior court of the county of El Dorado, California, of the crime of extortion. Judgment was entered, and, upon appeal to the supreme court of California, it was there affirmed, and the plaintiff in error brings the case here for review.

The indictment upon which the conviction was had alleged that on June 20, 1898, at the county of El Dorado, state of California, one S. H. Briggs and the plaintiff in error—
" . . . did wilfully, unlawfully, and feloniously obtain from one C. Greenwald certain personal property consisting of money, the property of the said C. Greenwald, to the amount and value of $30, with the consent of said Greenwald, induced by the wrongful use and exercise upon him of fear by means of a threat then and there made by the said John E. Sexton and S. H. Briggs to accuse him, the said Greenwald, of *the crime of having, in violation of the laws of the United States of America, sold and delivered cigars in a form other than in a new box not before used for the purpose of packing cigars therein, contrary to the form, force, and effect of the statute in such case made and provided."

After the finding of this indictment the defendant Sexton moved the court to set it aside on various grounds, the ninth being that the court had no jurisdiction of the offense charged in the indictment, nor of the person of the defendant, and it was contended that the Federal court alone had jurisdiction over the act for which he was indicted in the state court. The motion was denied, and the defendant then pleaded not guilty. Upon the trial the jury found the defendant guilty, as charged in the indictment, and he was sentenced to be imprisoned in the state's prison for the term of two years.

Mr. James Parker argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error.

Messrs. John E. Sexton and George D. Collins also filed briefs for plaintiff in error.

Mr. Henry H. Glassie submitted the cause for defendant in error. Messrs. R. Woodland Gates, U. S. Webb, and George A. Sturtevant were with him on the brief.

Messrs. Tiley L. Ford and C. N. Post also filed a brief for defendant in error.

Contentions of counsel sufficiently appear in the opinion.

Mr. Justice Peckham, after making the foregoing statement of facts, delivered the opinion of the court:

The record now before us raises but a single question for our determination, and that is whether the state court, upon the facts alleged in the indictment, had any jurisdiction over the subject-matter.

The plaintiff in error contends that the right of the general government to exercise jurisdiction over the crime of which he was convicted is exclusive, and therefore the state court had no right to try him upon the indictment found in that court.

The act which the plaintiff in error is alleged to have threatened to accuse Greenwald of committing is mentioned in § 3392 of the Revised Statutes of the United States (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2219), which makes it an offense to sell cigars unless in [321] new boxes, with the *exception therein detailed. Having created the offense above described, Congress also provided for the punishment of the offense of extortion by threats to accuse an individual of a violation of the provisions of that among other sections of the internal revenue law.

Sec. 5484, Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3702), provides that—“Every person who shall receive any money or other valuable thing under a threat of informing or as a consideration for not informing against any violation of any internal revenue law shall, on conviction thereof, be punished by a fine not exceeding two thousand dollars, or by imprisonment not exceeding one year, or both, at the discretion of the court, with costs of prosecution.”

The provision prohibiting the sale of cigars in any but new boxes is part of the internal revenue law.

By the 20th subdivision of § 629, Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 507), there is given to the United States circuit courts—

“Exclusive cognizance of all crimes and offenses cognizable under the authority of the United States, except where it is or may be otherwise provided by law, and concurrent jurisdiction with the district courts of crimes and offenses cognizable therein.”

The Revised Statutes also provide:

“Sec. 711. The jurisdiction vested in the courts of the United States in the cases and proceedings hereinafter mentioned shall be exclusive of the courts of the several states:

“First. Of all crimes and offenses cognizable under the authority of the United States.” (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 577.)

Upon these various statutes the plaintiff in error founds his contention that, as the offense which it is alleged in the indictment he threatened to accuse Greenwald of having committed is one which exists solely under § 3392 of the Revised Statutes which creates it, and as § 5484 provides the penalty for extorting money by threatening to inform or as a consideration for not informing against any violation of that law, the authority to punish for extorting upon such grounds is exclusively in the Federal courts.

On the other hand, it is claimed upon the [322] part of the state *that the offense of which the plaintiff in error has been convicted was one against the state, under §§ 518 and 519 of the Penal Code of the state of California.

Those sections provide that—

“Sec. 518. Extortion is the obtaining of property from another, with his consent, induced by a wrongful use of force or fear, or under color of official right.

“Sec. 519. Fear such as will constitute extortion may be induced by a threat, either:

“2. To accuse him, or any relative of his or member of his family, of any crime.”

Upon this subject the supreme court of California said:

“In substance it may be said that defendant threatened to accuse Greenwald of violating the United States revenue laws, and under fear induced by such threat secured from Greenwald the aforesaid sum of $30. It is insisted that the facts alleged do not constitute an offense against the laws of the state of California, but, upon the contrary, constitute a crime exclusively within the jurisdiction of the Federal courts. We find nothing in this contention. The defendant is charged with the crime of extortion,—an offense directly within the jurisdiction of the state courts. He is not charged with a violation of a Federal statute, but with a violation of a state statute. He threatened to accuse a man with the commission of a crime. It makes no difference if that crime be one solely triable in the Federal courts, for defendant is not being tried for that crime. If he had threatened to have Greenwald arrested upon the charge of counterfeiting the money of this country, and was charged with the crime of extortion for that reason, clearly his offense would be one against the laws of this state. It would be extortion as defined by the Penal Code of this state, and this court would not be concerned as to whether or not defendant's crime was also punishable under Federal laws. The court finds no substantial defect in the indictment, and the demurrer thereto is not well taken.”

The case of counterfeiting the money of the United States is excepted by statute from the law giving exclusive jurisdiction *to the United States courts of offenses [323] against the laws of the United States. Fox v. Ohio, 5 How. 410, 12 L. ed. 213; Houston v. Moore, 5 Wheat. 26, 5 L. ed. 25. It has also been held that the United States could punish the crime of counterfeiting coin under the Federal statute. The same act may be an offense both against the state and the United States, punishable in each jurisdiction under its laws.

The foundation of the claim of counsel for the state is the statement that the defendant was not tried for or convicted of an offense under the Federal statute, but the indictment simply alleged that he extorted money by threatening to accuse Greenwald of an offense under the Federal statute. It was the extorting of the money by reason of fear induced by the threat that constituted the crime, and that was a crime provided for by the state statute, and it is insisted that the state is not prevented from trying the individual under that statute because he might have been proceeded against in the Federal court under a Federal statute (§ 5484 [U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3702]) of a somewhat similar nature; that the threat to accuse another of crime is the material matter in the state statute, and it is not material that the threat was pointed at a crime made such only by the Federal statute.

It is true that the offense of extortion by threats to accuse a person of a violation of any part of the internal revenue law is made a crime by virtue of the Federal statute. If there were no statute in regard to the sale of cigars other than in new boxes, as provided for in § 3392 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2219), a threat to accuse a person of doing such an act would not be a threat to accuse him of any crime, and hence would not be punishable. As the crime itself exists only by virtue of the above section, and as the threat to accuse one of the commission of such an act is also provided for by another section, there might be some plausibility in the contention of the plaintiff in error that, under the Federal statutes above cited, jurisdiction of the United States courts was exclusive. We do not decide that such contention is well or ill founded, nor do we express an opinion thereon, because we do not regard it as necessary for our decision in this case.

[324] *The section which makes it an offense to extort money under a threat of informing in regard to an alleged violation of any internal revenue law (§ 5484) is contained in title 70, denominated Crimes, in the United States Revised Statutes, and in that title is found another section, which provides that—

"Sec. 5328. Nothing in this title shall be held to take away or impair the jurisdiction of the courts of the several states under the laws thereof." (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3622.)

Assuming that, but for this section, the state court would be without jurisdiction, we are of opinion that it takes the case out of the provisions of the other sections of the Revised Statutes above cited, namely, the 20th subdivision of § 629 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 507), and § 711 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 577). Sec. 5328 must be construed as creating an exception to the general rule declared in these other sections in regard to the jurisdiction of the Federal courts. The New York court of appeals placed the same construction on that section, in a very well reasoned opinion prepared by Andrews, Ch. J., in the case of People v. Welch, 141 N. Y. 266-277, 24 L. R. A. 117, 36 N. E. 328. Although § 3392 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2219) is the sole foundation for the creation of the offense which the plaintiff in error threatened to accuse Greenwald of having committed, yet the jurisdiction of the state courts is neither taken away nor impaired on that account. The state statute provides for the punishment of the crime of extortion, committed as therein described, and, when the Federal statute creates the crime, the threat to accuse a person of the commission of such crime becomes of itself a crime under the state statute, and the Federal statute which provides for extortion does not take away or impair the jurisdiction of the courts of the several states under 189 U. S.

their laws to proceed and punish as is therein provided for.

The jurisdiction of the state court over the crime of extortion when perpetrated under the circumstances stated in the indictment is at least concurrent with that of the courts of the United States.

The section (5328) was not intended to merely permit a state court to punish a different offense involved in the one act. It was intended to leave with the state court, unimpaired, the *same jurisdiction over the [325] act that it would have had if Congress had not passed an act on the subject.

There is, also, as we think, considerable weight to be attached to the contention that the Federal statute is not essentially the same as the state statute regarding extortion. In the state statute it is specified that the property must be obtained from another with his consent, and that such consent must be induced by a wrongful use of force or fear, while those words are lacking in the other statute. Without expressing an opinion upon the question whether the indictment and conviction could be sustained without the provisions of § 5328, Revised Statutes, we hold that, taking such section into consideration, the state court had jurisdiction in this case. The judgment, therefore, must be affirmed.

GEORGE A. FOSTER, Sheriff of Noble County, Oklahoma Territory, et al., Appts.,

v.

I. T. PRYOR et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 325-335.)

Taxes—uniformity throughout taxing district—Indian reservation attached to county.

An Indian reservation attached to a county for judicial purposes by order of the supreme court of the territory of Oklahoma pursuant to the organization act of May 2, 1890, § 9 (26 Stat. at L. 81, 85, chap. 182), was not, by Okla. Sess. Laws 1895, chap. 43, art. 6, making personal property in such reservations subject to taxation in the counties to which they were so attached, so made a part of the same taxing district as the county as to render invalid for want of uniformity Okla. Sess. Laws 1899, p. 216, limiting the right of taxation in such reservations to taxes for territorial and court purposes.

[No. 173.]

*Argued and submitted February 25, 1903.
Decided April 6, 1903.*

APPEAL from the Supreme Court of the Territory of Oklahoma to review a judgment which reversed a judgment of the trial court dismissing a petition in an action to enjoin the payment of certain taxes levied on property situated in an Indian reservation. Affirmed.

NOTE.—On uniformity in taxation—see notes to Chaddock v. Day (Mich.) 4 L. R. A. 809; Cook v. Port of Portland (Or.) 13 L. R. A. 533.

See same case below, 66 Pac. 348.

Statement by Mr. Justice Peckham:

This is an action to enjoin the payment of certain taxes levied upon property belonging to the appellees (plaintiffs below) [326] and *situated in an Indian reservation within the territory of Oklahoma. The appellee, Hite, resides in the Ponca and Otoe Indian reservation within that territory; the Stafford Land & Cattle Company is a corporation organized under the laws of the state of Texas and doing business in the above-named territory; and the 101 Live Stock Cattle Company is a corporation organized under the laws of the state of Kansas. The appellees, severally, owned large numbers of cattle which were grazing in the Indian reservation, and they were assessed therein for purposes of taxation by the taxing officer of Noble county, to which such reservation had been attached for judicial purposes. The reservation is without the boundaries of Noble county and is not within those of any organized county of the territory, and it comprises land owned and occupied by Indian tribes, consisting principally of wild, unimproved, and unallotted land used for grazing purposes. The reservation was duly attached to the county of Noble for judicial purposes by order of the supreme court of the territory, pursuant to the provisions of § 9 of the act organizing the territory, approved May 2, 1890 (26 Stat at L. 81, 85, chap. 182).

By art. 6, chap. 43, Session Laws of Oklahoma, 1895, it is provided:

"That § 13, art. 2, chap. 70, of the Oklahoma statutes relating to revenue, be and the same is hereby amended so as to read as follows: § 13. That when any cattle are kept or grazed, or any other personal property is situated in any unorganized country, district or reservation of this territory, then such property shall be subject to taxation in the organized county to which said country, district or reservation is attached for judicial purposes, and the board of county commissioners of the organized county or counties to which such unorganized country, district or reservation is attached shall appoint a special assessor each year, whose duty it shall be to assess such property thus situated or kept; such special assessor shall have all the powers and be required to perform all the duties of a township assessor, and shall give a similar bond and take the same oath as required of such township assessor, and receive the same fees as a township assessor, and the officer whose [327] duty *it shall be to collect the taxes in the organized county to which such country, district or reservation is attached shall collect the taxes, and is vested with all the powers which he may exercise in the organized county, and his official bond shall cover such taxes," etc.

In 1899 (p. 216, Session Laws), the Oklahoma legislature passed an act which provided—

"That from and after the passage and approval of this act no taxes shall be assessed, levied or collected in any unorganized country, district or reservation which shall be or which may hereafter be attached to any county for judicial purposes, except taxes for the territorial and court funds. All acts and parts of acts in conflict herewith are hereby repealed."

The tax assessor of Noble county being of opinion that the law of 1899 was void for reasons hereafter stated, proceeded to assess for taxation under the act of 1895, supra, the cattle of the appellees which were grazing in the Indian reservation, instead of assessing such property for territorial and court funds only, as provided for in the act of 1899. The assessment for all purposes was at the rate of 26.2 mills on the dollar of valuation, divided as follows: For territorial purposes 5.2 mills, for court purposes 3 mills, for salaries 6 mills, for road and bridge fund 2 mills, for sinking fund 4 mills, for poor and insane 1 mill, for supplies 2 mills, for county school fund 2 mills, and for contingent purposes 1 mill, making a total of 26.2 mills. If the assessment had been for territorial and court purposes only it would have been at the rate of 8.2 mills on the dollar of valuation.

The appellees insisted that the taxing officer had no right to assess them upon their property in the reservation at any greater rate than 8.2 mills for territorial and court purposes, as provided for by the act of 1899, while the appellants contended that the act of 1899 was void, and that the tax assessor had the power, and it was his duty under the act of 1895, to assess the property of the appellees situated in the reservation, for all purposes; or, in other words, for the whole 26.2 mills.

The trial court held in favor of the tax officials and dismissed the petition of the appellees, but upon appeal the judgment of *dismissal was reversed by the territorial su- [328] preme court and the tax declared invalid for more than 8.2 mills, assessed for territorial and court purposes. The tax authorities have brought the case here by appeal.

Mr. Horace Speed argued the cause and filed a brief for appellants.

Messrs. Horace Speed, William J. Hughes, and William R. Harr also filed a brief for appellants.

Mr. Henry E. Asp submitted the cause for appellees. Messrs. S. H. Harris and W. L. Barnum were with him on the brief.

Contentions of counsel sufficiently appear in the opinion.

Mr. Justice Peckham, after making the foregoing statement of facts, delivered the opinion of the court:

If the statute of 1899, limiting the right of assessment, is valid, it follows that the judgment of the supreme court of the territory, setting aside an assessment for more than such limited amount, must be affirmed. But it is urged that the act of 1899 is void, and that, being void, the taxing officer was justified and required by the act of 1895 to make the assessment he did. The grounds upon which the appellants base their claim that the act of 1899 is invalid rest upon the provisions of § 6 of the organic act, approved May 2, 1890 (26 Stat. at L. 81, chap. 182), and upon § 1 of the act approved July 30, 1886 (24 Stat. at L. 170, chap. 818).

That portion of the 6th section of the act of May 2, 1890, material to the present inquiry, reads as follows:

"That the legislative power of the territory shall extend to all rightful subjects of legislation not inconsistent with the Constitution and laws of the United States, but no law shall be passed interfering with the primary disposal of the soil; no tax shall be imposed upon the property of the United States, nor shall the lands or other property of nonresidents be taxed higher than the lands or other property of residents, nor shall any law be passed impairing the right to private property, nor shall any unequal discrimination be made in taxing different kinds of property, but all property subject to the taxation shall be taxed in proportion to its value."

§ 1 of the act approved July 30, 1886 (24 Stat. at L. 170, chap. 818), provides:

[329] * "That the legislatures of the territories of the United States now or hereafter to be organized shall not pass local or special laws in any of the following enumerated cases, that is to say:

"For the assessment and collection of taxes for territorial, county, township or road purposes."

The main objection offered to the act of 1899 is that it results in a violation of the rule of uniformity which, as appellants allege, must exist in the same taxing district with reference to the same kind of property. The appellants contend that the Indian reservation is, for taxing purposes, a part of the county of Noble, and, therefore, part of the same taxing district as that county, and that the taxation under the act of 1899, for that reason, violates the rule of uniformity above referred to. As a basis for the contention that it is the same taxing district, it is maintained that the order of the supreme court made by virtue of § 9, of the act of 1890, attaching the reservation to Noble county for judicial purposes, made it a part of the judicial district of that county, and that the subsequent act of the legislature in substance placed the reservation under the general taxing jurisdiction of Noble county, and therefore made it a part of the same taxing district, and, being a part of the same district, the personal property in the reservation must be taxed at the same rate, and for all the purposes that personal property is taxed in the organized county of Noble.

It must be remembered at the outset that the reservation was never any part of Noble county, for the legislature had no power to make it such. Thomas v. Gay, 169 U. S. 264, 275, 42 L. ed. 740, 744, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 340. It was, as its name implies, a reservation set apart by the general government as a home for the Indians, and as such it formed no part of any organized county. Although, by reason of the act of 1895, the personal property in the reservation was subject to taxation in the organized county to which it was attached for judicial purposes, but of which it formed no part, yet that act did not thereby make the reservation a part of the same taxing district as the county. The act of 1895 (and that of 1899) reached for taxation the owners of *cattle, or any other personal property situated in the reservation, and that was the full effect of each act. All other property than above described was left untouched, and, we assume, could not have been taxed if owned by Indians, by reason of the treaties or agreements under which the reservation was set apart for the use of such Indians. The right of taxation in the reservation was not as full and entire, even under the act of 1895, as it is in an organized county. This is a most important, if not conclusive, distinction, between the organized county and the reservation, when considering whether one and the same taxing district has been created by legislation which does not in terms purport to create it. That legislation was only for the purpose of thereby reaching for taxation a certain class of property in the reservation, and the whole balance that was in the reservation was left untouched. What is there in such legislation which necessarily creates a single taxing district, within which all property must be taxed alike?

Then, too, the property under the act of 1895 was assessed by a separate officer, and although the same officer who collected the taxes in the organized county was authorized and required to collect the taxes in the reservation, yet that fact did not make it part of the same taxing district so as to prevent the legislature from altering the proportion of the taxes which the owner of property in the reservation should be liable to pay as compared with the owner of property in the organized county to which it was attached for certain purposes only. It was simply a convenient method of collecting the taxes on property in the reservation; but the legislature was not thereby prevented from exercising the right to recognize the difference between property situated within an organized county and that which was situated in a reservation, and to make a difference in the rate of taxation in the two cases. If a separate taxing district was not created under the act of 1895, still less can it be contended that one was created by the act of 1899, which enacted a different rate of taxation than prevailed in Noble county.

Even the assessment of the same amount of taxes and their collection by the same officers that acted for the organized *county [331] would not necessarily render the reservation part of the same taxing district as the organized county. The material and important fact remains that the reservation is no part of the county, but is a totally distinct and separate domain, set apart for a home for Indians under the care and custody of the general government, and that taxation therein is permitted only to a limited extent and upon certain kinds of property, not including Indians or their property; and the imposition and collection of those taxes which are permitted do not thereby render the reservation a part of the same taxing district as the organized county to which it is attached for judicial purposes. The difference between the two domains, the reservation and the organized county, is radical and wide. The lands in the former are, as we have said, mostly wild and uncultivated and used principally for grazing purposes, and the domain is the home of a different and distinct race from that occupying the organized county, the inhabitants of which are of civilized races, following the customs of civilized life, and in almost everything differing from their Indian neighbors. Property therein is clearly very differently placed than the same kind in an organized county. Those who live and own property in an organized county receive more benefit from the taxes levied for general purposes than do the owners of property located in a reservation. The act of 1899 makes certain personal property in the reservations bear its proportion of the burdens of taxation for territorial and court purposes, from which such property derives some benefit. The owners of such personal property can derive very little, if any, benefit from the taxes raised for other purposes than those just mentioned. There is no township government existing there; no provision for the organization of school and road districts or for the establishment of other municipal governments, and hence it may be seen that, even assuming the power of the legislature to tax for all such purposes at the same rate as in an organized county, and to provide for the collection and payment of such taxes into the county treasury for disbursement for county purposes, yet still the injustice of such a rate of taxation would naturally appeal to the legislature and result in some legislation of the kind passed in 1899. The territorial legislature has evidently recognized that fact and enacted that statute in consequence.

All this goes to show the legislature never intended to create a single taxing district of an organized county and a reservation composed of such different materials. As further evidence of the substantial difference between the two places, attention is called to the fact that the general laws providing for taxation in an organized county do not authorize such taxation in a reservation, even after it has been attached to a county for judicial purposes. There must be special legislative authority for it. Wagoner v. Evans, 170 U. S. 588, 592, 42 L. ed. 1154, 1156, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 730.

Whether the legislature, by the act of 1897, providing the method of thereafter making assessments in townships by means of one assessor for each county, did thereby repeal the provision in the act of 1895, in relation to a special assessor for the Indian reservations, we do not determine, because, even if such were the case, and the assessor for the county were the one to make the assessment in the reservations also, the mere fact of the change of the officer who was to make the assessment did not on that account make a reservation part of the same taxing district as the county to which it was attached for judicial purposes, within the meaning of the rule requiring uniformity of taxation within the same taxing district, assuming such rule to apply to the territory named.

The foundation of the rule which may be said generally to obtain, that there shall be uniformity in taxation of the same kind of property in the same taxing district, rests on the assumption that in such district the circumstances regarding the property to be taxed are ordinarily the same in substance, although there may, and necessarily must be, some differences as to the extent to which the different owners of property may be benefited by the taxes collected thereon, and it is to be assumed that an alteration as to rate would work an unjust and illegal discrimination in taxing property situated alike. When the difference is deep and radical between the two domains in which the same kind of property may be situated, the law which makes them one district for taxation, so that all the property *of the same [333] kind in the same district must be taxed alike, and no reasonable distinction be permitted, must itself be so plain and urgent that no other intention can be suggested. No such case is now before us.

It is true the taxation in the reservation under the act of 1895 was for all purposes, and this court held that the act was not for that reason an illegal exercise of legislative power. It was recognized that there were differences in the amount of benefits derived from such taxation by the organized county as compared with the reservation, but it was not thought that, for that reason, the law was invalid. Thomas v. Gay, 169 U. S. 264, 275, 42 L. ed. 740, 744, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 340. It was a matter of legislative discretion with which the courts had in general no concern.

It has not, however, been held that the legislature could not recognize the difference in circumstances and provide for a different rate of taxation for property in the reservation from that levied on property in the organized county to which the reservation was attached for judicial purposes. The power to make this distinction does not depend upon the existence of a separate officer to assess or to collect the tax.

If it required special legislative authority to tax at all, how can it reasonably be maintained by the taxing officer that the act which provides for the taxation, although at a reduced rate, is illegal? And if an act were once passed which authorized the same rate of taxation as in the organized county, could not the legislature repeal it? And if it could repeal, why could it not modify it by reducing the rate of taxation, although not totally exempting property from all taxation? If the legislature had repealed the act of 1895, and had passed no other, there plainly would be in that case no law for taxing the property in the reservation. If subsequently it passed an act for the taxation of such property at a reduced rate from that existing in the organized county, it could not be said there was any exemption from taxation, but, on the contrary, it would be the case of an act providing for taxation.

The only answer made by the appellants is the assumed fact that all property of the same kind in the same taxing district of this territory must, in all circumstances, be [334] taxed at the *same rate or must be wholly exempted, and that no discrimination can, in any event or under any circumstances, be permitted; otherwise there is a discrimination which is illegal. But if it be not in the same taxing district the reasoning fails, even if otherwise good.

The recognition by the legislature of the difference in the situation between Noble county proper and the Indian reservation attached to it for judicial purposes, and the taxation of the property in the latter at a different rate from that in the county, may be upheld upon the same principle as in the case of general city taxation, where the whole of the city is first assessed equally as a taxing district and then the more compact portions thereof are assessed at a greater rate and required to pay a greater proportionate share of the expense of the city government, because of the fact of the greater proportionate protection and benefit afforded by the police and fire departments and other like matters, to the portions of the city thus subjected to greater taxation.

Cooley, in his work on Taxation (p. 118), affirms the validity of such legislation, and refers in a note (3) to cases which establish it, and he dissents from the view taken by the Wisconsin court in Knowlton v. Rock County, 9 Wis. 410, 421. Where the difference between the different portions of territory is plain and palpable, the right of the legislature to recognize that difference and to provide for a difference in taxation cannot be denied without imposing, as said by Judge Cooley, restraints upon the constitutional power of the legislature which cannot in reason be justified. Whether there is such a difference would generally be for the legislature to determine, although we would not say that the courts could not in any possible state of facts, review that determination. In the case before us the legislative act providing for this difference in taxation amounts, in itself, to a provision for a different taxing district within the principles just stated, and certainly no one would say that it was not a most reasonable and just recognition of a plain difference in circumstances, which ought to lead to a difference in the proportion of taxation between the two places.

Whether the proper officer made the assessment or not is immaterial *in this case. The defendants in error have not only not appealed from the decree of the supreme [335] 189 U. S.

court, but they have paid the taxes assessed for the purposes mentioned in the act of 1899, and do not seek to recover them back in this case, and the question is of no consequence to them.

In the view we take of the case we are unable to see that any provision of the act of Congress of 1890, organizing the territory, or the other act of 1886, in regard to territories then or thereafter to be organized, has been violated by the territorial act of 1899, and the judgment of the Supreme Court of Oklahoma is therefore affirmed.

A. C. FINNEY, as Receiver, et al., Plffs. in Err.,
v.

MARY A. GUY, etc.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 335-346.)

Judgments—full faith and credit—enforcement of stockholders' liability outside state of incorporation—pleadings—construction of statutes of other state not admitted by demurrer—comity.

1. Full faith and credit are not denied to a judgment of a Minnesota court against resident stockholders of a domestic corporation in an action to enforce their statutory liability, by the judgment of a court of another state denying the right to maintain a further action to enforce such liability outside the state of incorporation, where, under the Minnesota laws as construed by its courts, the only remedy provided for the enforcement of the liability of stockholders in domestic corporations is a suit in equity in that state by a creditor in behalf of himself and all other creditors against the stockholders who can be served with process.
2. A state court is not concluded as to the proper construction of the statutes of another state and the decision of its courts construing them, on the theory that defendant, by demurring to the complaint, which contained an allegation in the form of an averment of fact as to the meaning of such laws and decisions set forth therein, admitted that such was the correct conclusion to be drawn from them.
3. Whether a state court should permit an action to be maintained therein on the principle of comity between the states is a question exclusively for the courts of that state to decide.

[No. 180.]

Argued February 27, March 2, 1903. Decided April 6, 1903.

NOTE.—As to full faith and credit to be given to state records and judicial proceedings—see Lindley v. O'Reilly (N. J. L.) 1 L. R. A. 79, and note; Cumington v. Belchertown (Mass.) 4 L. R. A. 131, and note; Rand v. Hanson (Mass.) 12 L. R. A. 574, and note. And see notes to Wiese v. San Francisco Musical Fund Soc. (Cal.) 7 L. R. A. 578; Darby v. Mayer, 6 L. ed. U. S. 367; and Mills v. Duryee, 3 L. ed. U. S. 411.

On the right to enforce stockholder's liability outside of state of incorporation—see note to Cushing v. Perot (Pa.) 34 L. R. A. 737.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Wisconsin to review a judgment which reversed a judgment of the Circuit Court of Pierce County in favor of plaintiff in an action to enforce the liability of stockholders in a foreign corporation. Affirmed.

See same case below, 111 Wis. 296, 87 N. W. 255.

Statement by Mr. Justice Peckham:

[336] *This action was commenced in the proper court of the state of Wisconsin to enforce the shareholders' liability under a Minnesota statute, in a corporation of Minnesota and doing business in that state. The defendant demurred to the complaint on the ground, among others, that it did not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action. The demurrer was overruled by the trial court and judgment given for the plaintiff, which was reversed by the supreme court of the state, and the case has been brought here by plaintiff to review the judgment of reversal.

The facts alleged in the complaint are in substance these: That during all the times therein mentioned the American Savings & Loan Association, one of the plaintiffs herein, was a corporation organized under the laws of the state of Minnesota, and on June 18, 1896, William D. Hale, another plaintiff in this action, was appointed receiver thereof; that the Farmers' & Merchants' State Bank was on June 6, 1888, a banking organization, by virtue of the laws of the state of Minnesota, and doing business as such; that the bank became insolvent in June, 1893, and the entire net proceeds of the bank's assets amounted to the sum of $12,539.95, all of which had been paid over to the state of Minnesota on account of the indebtedness of the bank to the state of over $28,000, which was a preferred claim under the laws of that state; that its other debts amounted to the sum of more than $100,000, and it had no property to satisfy the same; that the defendant, Mary A. Guy, a resident of the state of Wisconsin, was the owner of three shares of the capital stock of the bank in her own right, and that she owned sixteen shares of the stock of the bank as executrix of the will of her husband and as legatee thereunder.

It was then averred that suit had been commenced in Minnesota in 1894 to enforce the liability of the stockholders of the bank under and by virtue of the laws and Constitution of the state of Minnesota; that such suit had been commenced by the American Savings & Loan Association, which was a creditor of the bank, in behalf of itself and all other creditors who should come in and make themselves parties to the suit and [337] prove *their claims therein, and against all the stockholders of the bank; process was, however, not served on this defendant, but only on those residing within the state; that such proceedings were had in the suit that judgment was duly rendered therein on April 28, 1897, in favor of the complainant, the American Savings & Loan Association, for the amount of the indebtedness of the bank to it, and also in favor of the other creditors of the bank, who had duly intervened, for the various amounts due them from the bank. It was also adjudged that the amount of the debts of said bank aggregated the sum of $106,471.71.

It was then further averred in the complaint that Finney (one of the plaintiffs herein) was appointed receiver in the Minnesota suit for the purpose of collecting and enforcing the respective liabilities of the defendant stockholders, and that an order had been made authorizing and empowering him to proceed against those of the defendant shareholders residing in other jurisdictions in such other jurisdictions, for the purpose of enforcing the liabilities of such shareholders, and with full power and authority to distribute the proceeds of such action among the parties entitled thereto, after final payment in full, out of the proceeds, of the costs and expenses incurred, etc. It was then averred that, pursuant to the instructions of the Minnesota court, Finney, as receiver therein, commenced this action against Mary A. Guy, and joined with him as plaintiffs all the creditors of the bank who had proved their claims in the Minnesota suit, and it was also averred that Mrs. Guy was liable to the creditors of the bank in the sum of $3,800, double the amount of the par value of the three shares owned by her individually and of the sixteen shares formerly owned by her husband, and that she was the only stockholder who was a resident of Wisconsin, and therefore the only defendant in the case, and that the full amount of her double liability, if recovered, would be wholly insufficient to pay the indebtedness of the bank after applying everything that could be collected from all the other stockholders, some of whom were insolvent, some had been compromised with, and from others nothing could be collected.

*The complaint then set forth several sec-[338] tions of the General Statutes of the State of Minnesota of 1878, among them being §§ 5905-5907 and 5911, and it was averred that this action could be maintained by reason of such sections. They are the same as are set forth in Hale v. Allinson, 188 U. S. 56, ante, 380, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 244. It was then averred that decisions in the courts of the state of Minnesota had been rendered relating to the liability of stockholders under those statutes, in corporations organized under the laws of that state, as to the proper method of enforcing such liability. The complaint then referred to some twenty different decisions in the state courts of Minnesota by titles, and gave a reference to the volumes in which they were reported, and it then stated what the law of Minnesota was under those decisions and statutes as to the liability of stockholders and the manner in which that liability could be enforced, and the effect of a judgment recovered in a state court by a creditor in his own behalf and in behalf of all others similarly situated, and it averred that a judgment such as was obtained in the Minnesota suit was conclusive upon stockholders, even though they were not parties thereto, as to all questions of indebtedness of the bank and who were its creditors, and that defendant, though not served with process in that suit, was concluded by the judgment as to her liability as shareholder, except as therein stated. It also averred that, after such a judgment had been obtained, the Minnesota decisions held that under those statutes a suit could be maintained in the courts of another jurisdiction, similar to the one before us, and the complaint ended with a prayer for judgment that the defendant should pay the plaintiff the sum of $3,800, with interest thereon since April 28, 1897, and that A. C. Finney, one of the plaintiffs, be appointed receiver herein, to collect the amount and distribute the same pro rata among the other plaintiffs.

Mr. Frederick W. Reed argued the cause, and, with Mr. Fred G. Coldren, filed a brief for plaintiffs in error:

Such provisions as those of the Minnesota Constitution are not merely directory to the legislature, but themselves declare and fix a liability and are self-executing.

Willis v. Mabon, 48 Minn. 150, sub nom. Willis v. St. Paul Sanitation Co. 16 L. R. A. 281, 50 N. W. 1110; Whitman v. National Bank, 176 U. S. 559, 44 L. ed. 587, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 477.

The liability, however, whether depending on the constitutional provisions as well as statutes, or on statutes alone, is, though statutory in its origin, contractual, and not penal, in its nature.

Pinney v. Nelson, 183 U. S. 144, 46 L. ed. 125, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 52; Whitman v. National Bank, 176 U. S. 559, 44 L. ed. 587, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 477; Bagley v. Tyler, 43 Mo. App. 195; Dennis v. Los Angeles County Super. Ct. 91 Cal. 548, 27 Pac. 1031; Hodgson v. Cheever, 8 Mo. App. 318; Guerney v. Moore, 131 Mo. 650, 32 S. W. 1132; Tinker v. Van Dyke, 1 Flap. 521, Fed. Cas. No. 14,058; Hawthorne v. Calef, 69 U. S. 10, 17 L. ed. 776; Hobart v. Johnson, 19 Blatchf. 359, 8 Fed. 493; Flash v. Conn, 109 U. S. 371, 27 L. ed. 966, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 263; Howarth v. Angle, 162 N. Y. 179, 47 L. R. A. 725, 56 N. E. 489; Bell v. Farwell, 176 Ill. 489, 42 L. R. A. 804, 52 N. E. 346; Western Nat Bank v. Reckless, 96 Fed. 70; Coleman v. White, 14 Wis. 700, 80 Am. Dec. 797; Gianella v. Bigelow, 96 Wis. 185, 71 N. W. 111; Rehbein v. Rahr, 109 Wis. 137, 85 N. W. 315; First Nat. Bank v. Gustin Mineral Consol. Min. Co. 42 Minn. 327, 6 L. R. A. 676, 44 N. W. 198; Heneke v. Twomey, 58 Minn. 550, 60 N. W. 667; Hanson v. Davison, 73 Minn. 454, 76 N. W. 254; Evans v. Nellis, 101 Fed. 920; Deweese v. Smith, 45 C. C. A. 408, 106 Fed. 438; Brown v. Hitehoeck, 36 Ohio St. 667; Judson v. Stewart, 7 Ohio N. P. 160; First Nat. Bank v. Hawkins, 174 U. S. 365, 43 L. ed. 1007, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 739; Western Nat. Bank v. Lawrence, 117 Mich. 669, 76 N. W. 105; Howarth v. Lombard, 175 Mass. 570, 49 L. R. A. 301, 56 N. E. 888; Kirtley v. Holmes, 52 L. R. A. 738, 46 C. C. A. 102, 107 Fed. 189 U. S. U. S., Book 47.

1; Richmond v. Irons, 121 U. S. 27, 30 L. ed. 864, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 788.

As regards its enforcement in foreign jurisdictions, there is no essential difference between this liability and the liability for assessments for unpaid subscriptions for stock.

Howarth v. Angle, 162 N. Y. 179, 47 L. R. A. 725, 56 N. E. 489; Howarth v. Lombard, 175 Mass. 570, 49 L. R. A. 301, 56 N. E. 888; Whitman v. National Bank, 176 U. S. 559, 44 L. ed. 587, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 477; Hancock Nat. Bank v. Farnum, 176 U. S. 640, 44 L. ed. 619, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 506; Holland v. Duluth Iron Min. & Development Co. 65 Minn. 324, 68 N. W. 50; Hanson v. Davison, 73 Minn. 454, 76 N. W. 254.

The right to enforce this liability is not a mere matter of comity, but it is a right under the general principles of jurisprudence to enforce a contract.

Dennick v. Central R. Co. 103 U. S. 11, 26 L. ed. 439; Western Nat. Bank v. Reckless, 96 Fed. 70; Morawetz, Priv. Corp. § 875; Western Nat. Bank v. Lawrence, 117 Mich. 669, 76 N. W. 105; Judson v. Stewart, 7 Ohio N. P. 160; Bell v. Farwell, 176 Ill. 489, 42 L. R. A. 804, 52 N. E. 346; First Nat. Bank v. Gustin Minerva Consol. Min. Co. 42 Minn. 327, 6 L. R. A. 676, 44 N. W. 198.

The construction of the statute by the home court is binding on all other courts.

W. W. Cargill Co. v. Minnesota, 180 U. S. 452, 45 L. ed. 619, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 423; Howarth v. Lombard, 175 Mass. 570, 49 L. R. A. 301, 56 N. E. 888; Hancock Nat. Bank v. Farnum, 176 U. S. 640, 44 L. ed. 619, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 506; James H. Rice Co. v. Libbey, 45 C. C. A. 78, 105 Fed. 825; Hancock Nat. Bank v. Ellis, 166 Mass. 414, 44 N. E. 349; Brunswick Terminal Co. v. National Bank, 48 L. R. A. 625, 40 C. C. A. 22, 99 Fed. 635; Bank of North America v. Rindge, 57 Fed. 279; Rhodes v. United States Nat. Bank, 34 L. R. A. 742, 13 C. C. A. 612, 24 U. S. App. 607, 66 Fed. 512; McViekar v. Jones, 70 Fed. 754; Eau Claire Nat. Bank v. Benson, 106 Wis. 624, 82 N. W. 604.

The proceedings in the home court are binding on stockholders who are not before the court otherwise than by virtue of their membership in the corporation.

Childs v. Cleaves, 95 Me. 498, 50 Atl. 714; Hancock Nat. Bank v. Farnum, 176 U. S. 640, 44 L. ed. 619, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 506; Howarth v. Lombard, 175 Mass. 570, 49 L. R. A. 301, 56 N. E. 888; Sheafe v. Larimer, 79 Fed. 921; Howarth v. Ellwanger, 86 Fed. 54; Hanson v. Davison, 73 Minn. 454, 76 N. W. 254; Holland v. Duluth Iron Min. & Development Co. 65 Minn. 324, 68 N. W. 50; Hinekley v. Kettle River R. Co. 80 Minn. 32, 82 N. W. 1088; Gaw v. Glassboro Novelty Glass Co. 20 Ohio C. C. 416; Deater v. Edmands, 89 Fed. 467; Hawkins v. Glenn, 131 U. S. 319, 33 L. ed. 184, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 739; Hale v. Hardon, 37 C. C. A. 240, 95 Fed. 747.

This does not mean that it is conclusive against any stockholder that he is such, or that he has not discharged his liability, or that he has not offsets against the claim; but he is so far a part of the corporation that it is in other respects an adjudication against him.

Hancock Nat. Bank v. Farnum, 176 U. S. 640, 44 L. ed. 619, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 506; Hanson v. Davison, 73 Minn. 454, 76 N. W. 254.

Where the home court has thus construed the nature of the liability, and determined such to be the effect of the proceedings there, to refuse to give the same effect to such contract and proceedings in the courts of another state is contrary to the Constitution and laws of the United States.

Huntington v. Attrill, 146 U. S. 657, 36 L. ed. 1123, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 224; Hancock Nat. Bank v. Farnum, 176 U. S. 640, 44 L. ed. 619, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 506.

Messrs. W. E. Hale and Frederick W. Reed also filed a brief in support of the petition for certiorari.

Mr. Robert M. Bashford argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error:

The demurrer admits the existence of the decisions and statutes of Minnesota specifically referred to in the complaint, but it does not admit the interpretation placed upon the law of Minnesota by the pleader, or his legal conclusions therefrom.

State ex rel. Veeder v. Collins, 5 Wis. 339; Brown v. Phillips, 71 Wis. 239, 36 N. W. 242; Stedman v. Berlin, 97 Wis. 505, 73 N. W. 57; 6 Enc. Pl. & Pr. 336.

Where a special remedy is provided,—and especially if it contemplates a joint action in favor of all creditors against all stockholders,—it can be enforced only in the courts of the state which creates the liability, and where the corporation is organized to carry on business.

Pollard v. Bailey, 87 U. S. 520, 22 L. ed. 376; May v. Black, 77 Wis. 102, 45 N. W. 949; Fourth Nat. Bank v. Francklyn, 120 U. S. 747, 30 L. ed. 825, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 757; Thomp. Corp. § 3055.

The courts of Minnesota have enforced the statutory liability there created, within their own jurisdiction, but they have not enforced a statutory liability created by the legislature of another state against citizens of their own state, or even the common-law liability of the stockholders of a foreign corporation, resident in that state.

First Nat. Bank v. Gustin Minerva Consol. Min. Co. 42 Minn. 327, 6 L. R. A. 676, 44 N. W. 198; Rule v. Omega Stove & Grate Co. 64 Minn. 326, 67 N. W. 60.

The remedy prescribed by the Minnesota statute is by a single action in which all the creditors shall be joined or represented, against all the stockholders.

Allen v. Walsh, 25 Minn. 543.

The unpaid subscription is an obligation arising from contract, and must be recovered in the right of the corporation.

Gager v. Paul, 111 Wis. 638, 87 N. W. 875.

The statutory liability cannot be enforced by the corporation, or through its right, or by its assignee or receiver. It is an obligation of the stockholders to the creditors, and must be enforced for the benefit of the latter in a proper proceeding instituted for that purpose, to which all the stockholders and creditors must be made parties.

Coleman v. White, 14 Wis. 700, 80 Am. Dec. 797; Gager v. Marsden, 101 Wis. 598, 77 N. W. 922; Booth v. Dear, 96 Wis. 516, 71 N. W. 816; Terry v. Little, 101 U. S. 216, 25 L. ed. 864.

The settled construction of a statute, so far as contract rights thereunder are acquired, is as much a part of the statute as the text itself; and a change of decision is the same in its effect on pre-existing contracts as a repeal or an amendment of a legislative enactment.

Douglass v. Pike County, 101 U. S. 677, 25 L. ed. 968; Rowan v. Runnels, 5 How. 134, 12 L. ed. 85; Gelpcke v. Dubuque, 1 Wall. 175, 17 L. ed. 520; Chicago v. Sheldon, 9 Wall. 50, 19 L. ed. 594; Olcott v. Fond du Lac County, 16 Wall. 678, 21 L. ed. 382; Chicago L. Ins. Co. v. Needles, 113 U. S. 574, 28 L. ed. 1084, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 681; Anderson v. Santa Anna Twp. 116 U. S. 356, 29 L. ed. 633, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 413; Bostwick v. Brinkerhoff, 106 U. S. 3, 27 L. ed. 73, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 15; Johnson v. Keith, 117 U. S. 199, 29 L. ed. 888, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 669; German Sav. Bank v. Franklin County, 128 U. S. 526, 32 L. ed. 519, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 159; Knox County v. Ninth Nat. Bank, 147 U. S. 91, 37 L. ed. 93, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 267; Bacon v. Texas, 163 U. S. 207, 41 L. ed. 132, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1023; Wade v. Travis County, 174 U. S. 499, 43 L. ed. 1060, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 715; Loeb v. Columbia Twp. 179 U. S. 472, 45 L. ed. 280, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 174.

The question here involved is not one of local law, to be settled by the decisions of the Minnesota court; but it is one of general law, to be determined by reference to all the authorities and a consideration of the principles underlying the contract relations between the parties.

Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Baugh, 149 U. S. 368, 37 L. ed. 772, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 914.

Plaintiffs have not the legal capacity to sue.

Hilliker v. Hale, 54 C. C. A. 252, 117 Fed. 220; Booth v. Clark, 17 How. 322, 15 L. ed. 164; Filkins v. Nunnemacher, 81 Wis. 91, 51 N. W. 79.

A suit to reach equitable assets can only be maintained by a creditor who has recovered judgment and whose execution has been returned unsatisfied, under the Wisconsin Code and practice.

North Hudson Mut. Bldg. & L. Asso. v. Childs, 86 Wis. 292, 56 N. W. 870; Weber v. Weber, 90 Wis. 467, 63 N. W. 757; Northwestern Iron Co. v. Central Trust Co. 90 Wis. 570, 63 N. W. 752, 64 N. W. 323.

The same rule has been recognized and enforced by this court.

Case v. Beauregard, 99 U. S. 119, 25 L. ed. 370; National Tube Works Co. v. Bal-lou, 146 U. S. 517, 36 L. ed. 1070, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 165.

Jurisdictional facts must be pleaded.

Northern Trust Co. v. Snyder, 113 Wis. 516, 89 N. W. 460; Eldred v. Leahy, 31 Wis. 546; Canfield v. Smith, 34 Wis. 381; Hawes v. Oakland, 104 U. S. 450, sub nom. Hawes v. Contra Costa Water Co. 26 L. ed. 827; Hanford v. Davies, 163 U. S. 273, 41 L. ed. 157, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1051.

The laws of one state have no operation in other states.

Paul v. Virginia, 8 Wall. 168, 19 L. ed. 357; Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 136 U. S. 114, 34 L. ed. 394, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 178, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 958.

Mr. Justice Peckham, after making the foregoing statement of facts, delivered the opinion of the court:

The demurrer raises the question whether the complaint states facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action. The plaintiffs contend that their cause of action is based upon the decisions and judgments of the courts of the state of Minnesota, and upon the statutes of that state, and that the Wisconsin supreme court, in sustaining the demurrer, has thereby failed to give that full faith and credit to the laws and judgments of the state of Minnesota and its courts which they receive in that state and which they are entitled to under the Constitution and laws of the United States, and that by reason thereof a Federal right has been denied them.

They urge that, under the judgment of the American Sav. & L. Asso. v. Farmers' & M. State Bank, which was recovered in the Minnesota court, and is referred to in the foregoing statement of facts, the defendant is concluded as to her defense to the same extent she would have been had she appeared and contested her liability in the Minnesota courts, and that, as a consequence, the Wisconsin courts are bound to give the same effect to that judgment in their courts that it has in the courts of Minnesota; that if such effect had been awarded that judgment, then this action could have been maintained; and the Wisconsin court, in sustaining the demurrer, denied such effect to the judgment, which was a violation of a right founded upon the Federal Constitution.

It is stated by the supreme court of Wisconsin that that state for many years has had a statute for the enforcement of the liability of stockholders in corporations similar to that which exists in Minnesota, and that it had been frequently decided under such statute that an action of the nature of the one at bar could not be maintained in her courts, and also that it was against the public policy of Wisconsin to permit it; that the remedy under the Wisconsin statute was exclusive, and consisted in a suit in equity at the home of the corporation, in the nature of a partnership accounting, the parties to which would be all the creditors or a creditor in his own behalf and in behalf [340] of all *others similarly situated who would come in and make themselves parties, and the stockholders who could be served with process in the state.

Whether a cause of action is stated in a pleading is generally to be decided with reference to the law of the state where the action is pending. If the state court hold that no cause of action is set forth in the pleading, and that it is against the public policy of the state to permit an action for such a purpose, we should generally hold that there was no Federal question involved in such determination. The plaintiffs, however, urge that there is here an exception to that rule, founded upon the considerations just stated, and that if under the Minnesota law this action could be maintained, the courts of Wisconsin are bound to entertain jurisdiction to the same extent. It is not, however, the case that every decision regarding the proper construction of the statute of another state involves a Federal question. Where the case turns upon the construction, and not the validity, of the statute, a decision of that question is not necessarily of a Federal character. Johnson v. New York L. Ins. Co. 187 U. S. 491, 496, ante, 273, 275, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 194, 196. Without precisely determining just how far questions of this kind can in all cases be regarded as coming under the rule giving full faith and credit to the public acts, records, and judicial proceedings of another state, depending, as such questions must, upon the particular facts of each case, and the manner in which they are presented, we may, nevertheless, examine the contentions of the plaintiffs in error to see how far they are justified in the law.

After quite a full examination of the Minnesota decisions on the question, we have just decided in Hale v. Allinson, 188 U. S. 56, ante, 380, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 244, that a receiver appointed in Minnesota, under these same statutes, could not maintain an action outside of that state to enforce the liability of a stockholder; and it was said that the courts of Minnesota had held the same thing for many years. An examination of the decisions of the Minnesota courts shows that they had held that the remedy provided by the statutes of the state for the enforcement of stockholders' liability was a suit in equity in that state by a creditor in his own behalf and that of all other creditors, against all the stockholders of the *corporation, or so many of them as could [341] be served with process, and that it was exclusive, and no other remedy could be availed of even within the jurisdiction of the courts of Minnesota. That being the law of Minnesota, it would, of course, prevent an action outside the state by a receiver, as well as by any other plaintiff, to enforce the stockholders' liability. Hence, in the Hale-Allinson Case, we held the receiver could not maintain such an action in a foreign jurisdiction and in a Federal court.

The case of Allen v. Walsh, 25 Minn. 543, has been cited as sustaining this rule. Many other cases have been cited as holding the same rule, an exclusive remedy under the statute, and to be pursued only in the courts of the state. Allen v. Walsh does hold (and it has been followed by many others to the same effect) that the only remedy is that created by the statute, and that remedy is an action in equity in the home courts wherein all the creditors and all the stockholders are parties, or as many of the latter as can be served, and in that action all the rights of the different parties can be adjusted. The remedy being exclusive, the statute must be followed, and the result is that no other action to enforce the liability can be availed of in another state. This would call for an affirmance of the judgment but for the claim now urged by counsel for plaintiffs, that the case of Allen v. Walsh has been overruled by subsequent cases in Minnesota, and that the law is correctly set forth in the complaint. He calls attention to the fact that this case has not gone to trial upon an issue of any question of fact, but the questions to be determined have arisen on demurrer to the complaint; that the complaint avers as a fact that by the law of Minnesota such an action as this can be maintained in the courts of a foreign jurisdiction after a judgment has been recovered in an action in the state court, such as is referred to in the complaint, and that the defendant by demurring admits that the law is as stated in the complaint, and therefore the court is bound to give effect to the law of Minnesota such as is set forth in that pleading. This is too broad a claim to be maintained.

[342] If the case had been on trial upon issues of fact, among them *being one as to what the law of Minnesota was, and the statutes as well as the decisions above mentioned had been proved, and a witness learned in the law of Minnesota had testified what such law was, as deduced by him from those statutes and decisions, his testimony would not, even though uncontradicted, conclude the court upon that issue. Although the law of a foreign jurisdiction may be proved as a fact, yet the evidence of a witness stating what the law of the foreign jurisdiction is, founded upon the terms of a statute, and the decisions of the courts thereon as to its meaning and effect, is really a matter of opinion, although proved as a fact, and courts are not concluded thereby from themselves consulting and construing the statutes and decisions which have been themselves proved, or from deducing a result from their own examination of them that may differ from that of a witness upon the same matter. In other words, statutes and decisions having been proved or otherwise properly brought to the attention of the court, it may itself deduce from them an opinion as to what the law of the foreign jurisdiction is, without being conclusively bound by the testimony of a witness who gives his opinion as to the law, which he deduces from those very statutes and decisions.

It was stated by Mr. Justice Brewer, speaking for the court in Eastern Bldg. & L. Asso. v. Williamson, 189 U. S. 122, ante, 735, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 527, a case just decided and where the same question in substance was before us, as follows:

"But it is contended that the construction of the New York statutes as applicable to this contract was shown by the decisions of the courts of that state and the opinion of one learned in its laws; that there was no contradictory testimony, and, therefore, it was the duty of the South Carolina courts to find as a fact that such was the true construction."

This was the contention of the defendant, and then, after referring to the construction of the contract as contended for by the plaintiff, the justice continued:

"It is said that the promise made in the certificate is expressly based upon 'full compliance with the terms, conditions, and by-laws printed on the front and back of this certificate;' *that one of the conditions ex-[343] pressed on the face of the certificate is: 'The shareholder agrees to pay, or cause to be paid, a monthly instalment of $.75 on each share named in this contract, the same to be paid on or before the last Saturday of each month until such share-matures or is withdrawn;' that it contained this further stipulation: 'Payable in the manner and upon the conditions set forth in said terms, conditions, and by-laws hereto attached,' and that these matters thus referred to had the effect of changing the absolute promise to a conditional one. All these were received in evidence, and when so received it became a matter of judicial construction to determine whether they had such effect, and that was a question which, nothing else being shown, was for the consideration of the courts in which the litigation was pending. In like manner, after the decisions of the courts of New York were received in evidence, their meaning and scope became matters for the same consideration. While statutes and decisions of other states are facts to be proved, yet, when proved, their construction and meaning are for the consideration and judgment of the courts in which they have been proved. Nor is the rule changed by the testimony given in the deposition of defendant's counsel; for, as he states, his opinion is based on the statutes, the articles of incorporation, and the decisions admitted in evidence, together with similar decisions of other states under like statutes, articles of incorporation, and by-laws. No witness can conclude a court by his opinion of the construction and meaning of statutes and decisions already in evidence. Laing v. Rigney, 160 U. S. 531, 40 L. ed. 525, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 366. The duty of the court to construe and decide remains the same."

This right and duty of the courts to themselves construe the statutes and decisions are not altered because the law of the foreign state and the various decisions of its courts are alleged to be as set forth in a pleading which is demurred to, instead of being proved, on a trial.

In this case the statutes, together with references to the decisions of the state courts, are given in the complaint, and the pleader, by making an averment in the form of a fact, assumes to give a meaning to them [344] such as he thinks to be correct; but*the duty still remains with the courts to themselves determine from those statutes, and decisions what is in truth the law of the foreign jurisdiction. The courts are not concluded by an averment of what is the law in a foreign jurisdiction, contained in a pleading which is demurred to, any more than they would be by the testimony of a witness to the same effect upon a trial; certainly not when the statute upon which the case rests is set forth and the decisions under it are also referred to as evidence of the law. The demurrer does not admit as a fact that the construction (in the form of an averment of fact) which the pleader may choose to put upon those statutes or decisions is the right conclusion to be drawn from them. Notwithstanding the averments in the complaint, we are brought to an examination of the statutes and decisions referred to, in order to ourselves determine what the law of Minnesota is.

We are unable to see that the case of Allen v. Walsh, 25 Minn. 543, has been overruled upon the material point in this case by Hanson v. Davison, 73 Minn. 454, 76 N. W. 254, so as to call for a different decision than would be made under Allen v. Walsh, and the many similar cases. We have already referred to the Hanson Case in Hale v. Allinson, 188 U. S. 56, ante, 380, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 244, and do not regard it as necessary to continue the discussion here. It is enough to say that it is no authority for the contention that the former cases are overruled further than the issue presented in the case called for. The right to bring into the original case in equity in the state court after judgment had been obtained therein, a stockholder who was not served with process in that suit, but who appeared after judgment and after his property had been attached, was asserted in and decided by the state court, but it did not decide that the remedy in the state court as provided in the statute did not continue to be exclusive, nor did the state court assume to decide that any further action could be maintained in the courts of a foreign jurisdiction to enforce the stockholders' liability. No such issue was involved in the Hanson Case, and the opinion regarding such question is only the opinion of the very able judge who gave it, upon an abstract proposition, as distinguished from an adjudication upon a point actually in issue, and in [345] that case, in *speaking to that point, the judge only said he saw nothing in the statute to prevent such an action in the courts of another state, provided such courts would permit it. We think the law of Minnesota still remains upon this particular matter as stated in the former cases which have not been overruled by Hanson v. Davison. This, in effect, has been held in the Hale-Allinson Case, which we have just decided.

Nor is this case controlled or covered by Whitman v. National Bank, 176 U. S. 559, 44 L. ed. 587, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 477, and Hancock Nat. Bank v. Farnum, 176 U. S. 640, 44 L. ed. 619, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 506. In 189 U. S.

the former case the special provisions of the Kansas statutes were referred to. It was stated to be the law in Kansas that it only required a judgment against the corporation and an unsatisfied execution returned, after which any creditor could sue any shareholder wherever he could be found. There was no suit in equity in the nature of a partnership accounting necessary. The liability of the shareholder, although statutory in origin, was held contractual in its nature, and under the statute the cause of action was transitory and could be maintained in any tribunal having jurisdiction where process could be served upon the individual shareholder, and in such an action the latter could set off debts due him from the company. The Kansas cases, expressing these views, were referred to in the opinion.

In the second case it was again held that under the statute and the decisions of the Kansas courts, after a judgment had been obtained against the corporation and an execution returned unsatisfied, the individual creditor could maintain an action against a single stockholder in any court of competent jurisdiction. Having the right to maintain such action, it was held that when it was commenced in another state and in a proper court thereof, the judgment which was obtained in Kansas must have the same faith and credit given it in the courts of another state that was given it in Kansas. Neither case is applicable to the one before us. The statutes are radically different, and no one creditor can maintain the action under the Minnesota statute, and if all unite, they must sue in the courts of that state.

Whether, aside from the Federal considerations just discussed, *the Wisconsin court [346] should have permitted this action to be maintained, because of the principle of comity between the states, is a question exclusively for the courts of that state to decide. The right to maintain it under the facts of this case is not founded upon any provision of a Federal nature, and we cannot supervise the action of the Wisconsin court in this particular.

The judgment of the Supreme Court of Wisconsin must be affirmed.

Mr. Justice McKenna did not hear the argument and took no part in the decision of this case.

Mr. Justice Brewer dissented.

G. H. THAYER, Administrator, etc., et al.,
Plffs. in Err.,
v.

A. N. SPRATT.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 346-354.)

Public lands — entry under timber act —

NOTE.—On writs of error from United States Supreme Court to state courts—see notes to Hamblin v. Western Land Co. 37 L. ed. U. S. 267; Kipley v. Illinois. 42 L. ed. U. S. 998; and Re Buchanan. 39 L. ed. U. S. 884.

cancellation of entry certificate—conclusiveness on transferee — error to state court — review of evidence.

1. Public land covered by a heavy growth of timber, which constituted its chief value, was subject to entry under the timber act of June 3, 1878 (20 Stat. at L. 89, chap. 151, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1545), although it would have been fit for cultivation when the timber had been removed.
2. The cancellation of a certificate of entry under the timber act of June 3, 1878 (20 Stat. at L. 89, chap. 151, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1545), is not conclusive as against a transferee who had no notice and no opportunity to be heard upon the question of the original validity of such entry, but he is left free to prove the validity of the entry by any means other than the certificate.
3. The evidence upon which the findings of fact in a state court rest cannot be reviewed by the Supreme Court of the United States on writ of error to the state court.

[No. 207.]

Argued March 12, 1903. Decided April 6, 1903.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Washington to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Superior Court for the County of Cowlitz in that State in favor of plaintiff in a suit to quiet title. Affirmed.

See same case below, 25 Wash. 62, 64 Pac. 919.

Statement by Mr. Justice Peckham:

The plaintiffs in error in December, 1898, brought this action in the state court against the defendant for the purpose of quieting their title to certain land described as section 32 in township 9, etc., situated in Cowlitz county, state of Washington. They obtained judgment in their favor for the northwest and southwest quarters of the section, but the court gave judgment in favor of the defendant for the northeast and the southeast quarters of the same section, and directed that the patents for the two quarters of the section, which had been issued on June 25, 1890, to plaintiffs' grantors, should be held by the plaintiffs in trust for the defendant, and that the plaintiffs should execute a proper deed therefor, and, in default of such deed of conveyance, the decree of the court was to stand and be treated in the place of such deed. The plaintiffs appealed from that portion of the judgment just described to the supreme court of the state, where it was affirmed, and they have brought the case here for review.

The northeast and the southeast quarters of the section were entered in the proper land office in Washington under the act of Congress approved June 3, 1878, and entitled "An Act for the Sale of Timber Lands in the States of California, Oregon, Nevada, and in Washington Territory." 20 Stat. at L. 89, chap. 151, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1545. These entries were made on May 26, 1883, and the entrymen, after payment for the land by them to the land office and the receipt of a certificate of such payment, and about six months thereafter, assigned and transferred the certificates to the defendant for a valuable consideration paid to them by him. After such transfers had been made and a record of the deeds of conveyance had also been made in the records of Cowlitz county, which was the proper office, the Land Department informed the register and receiver of the land office at Vancouver, Washington, that action had been suspended upon the entries, based upon the report of the special agent regarding the lands, and the Department directed the register and receiver to give notice to the original entrymen of a time and place when and where they *might be heard, and, in default, that [348] their entry would be canceled. The Department also stated that it appeared from the report of its special agent that the lands had been transferred by warranty deed of March 13, 1884, to the defendant, and it therefore directed that notice should be given him as the transferee; but for some reason this direction was overlooked and no notice was ever given defendant of the pendency of any proceedings towards the cancellation of the certificates or either of them which had been transferred to him.

At the time he purchased the certificates, the defendant resided in Alpena, Michigan, and resided there for thirty years, and the deeds to defendant, which were on record, showed his residence to be in that place.

The notices by mail to the entrymen were not received, the letters to them being returned as "uncalled for," and so it happened that there was no hearing before the Land Department upon the return of the order, and the entry was canceled in the absence of both of the entrymen and the defendant, the transferee.

The action of the Department was taken upon the report of one of its inspectors, which was founded, as stated in the report of such inspector, upon the fact that the land was not of the character provided for in the act, for the reason that, although covered by a heavy growth of valuable timber and chiefly valuable as such at that time, yet, as it would be fit for cultivation when the timber should be removed, it was on that ground held that the land was not subject to entry under the timber act of 1878, supra. This was the sole and only reason upon which the Land Department rested its action in canceling the entries and certificates.

After their cancellation, certain homestead entries were made upon these two quarter sections by Benjamin L. Hennis for the northeast quarter, and by Ellis Walker for the southeast quarter, patents were issued to them, and the plaintiffs deraign title from those patentees.

Upon the trial, evidence was given by the defendant as to the character of his ownership; that he purchased the different quarter sections in good faith from each of the parties who *had entered them, and without [349] any agreement in reference to the purchase before final proof, etc., and that he had never heard of the entrymen before he made the purchase from them through his agent, and paid them the sum of $800 for each quarter section (double the price paid for the land by the entrymen to the government), and that the total cost of the land, including his expenses paid to his agent and to the parties who made the locations, etc., amounted, as the defendant testified, to about $4,400.

The defendant on the trial also gave evidence tending to show that the land in question had the finest quality of timber on it, and that in its then existing condition the land was chiefly valuable for timber and would probably run 200,000 feet to the acre. The land would have to be cleared and then it might be cultivated, but it would all have to be cleared first.

It was stipulated between the parties, on the trial, that certain papers named and on file in the office of the Commissioner of the General Land Office, and certain exhibits from the land office in Vancouver, in the state of Washington, relating to the proceedings in making the entry for the lands in question by the defendant's grantors, might be regarded as in evidence in the case and be considered by the court, and the copies of such papers then presented to the court were admitted to be "correct, full, true, and complete transcripts of all proceedings of the land office at Vancouver, Washington, and of the General Land Office, Department of the Interior, Washington, D. C., touching . . . the timber land entry of Frank Smith, for the northeast quarter of section 32 (etc.), and also the timber land entry for the southeast quarter of section 32," etc. These papers showed that the entrymen for the northeast and the southeast quarters were entitled to enter the lands under the timber act, and that all the necessary facts required by the act and the Land Department officials had been proved by them to entitle them to enter the specific lands.

[350] The finding of the court shows there has never been any dispute as to the actual condition of the land, but the entries were vacated and the certificates canceled because the Land Department held the land was not of the kind to be entered under the timber act of 1878, for the reason that, after the timber should be cleared, the land would be good agricultural land.

Mr. Joseph Simon argued the cause, and, with Mr. John M. Gearin and Messrs. Dolph, Mallory, Simon, & Gearin, filed a brief for plaintiffs in error:

An equity was all that Spratt got or could get by his purchase from Smith and Radcliffe. He could not get the legal title, because that was still in the government. He got only such right as Smith and Radcliffe had, and he bought at his peril.

American Mortg. Co. v. Hopper, 12 C. C. A. 293, 29 U. S. App. 12, 64 Fed. 559; California Redwood Co. v. Little, 79 Fed. 856; 189 U. S.

Oooke v. Blakely, 6 Kan. App. 707, 50 Pac. 981.

That the department had a right to cancel the Smith-Radcliffe certificates cannot be questioned.

Guaranty Sav. Bank v. Bladow, 176 U. S. 457, 44 L. ed. 543, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 425.

The court does not interfere with the title of a patentee when the alleged mistake relates to a matter of fact concerning which those officers may have drawn wrong conclusions from the testimony.

Lee v. Johnson, 116 U. S. 49, 29 L. ed. 570, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 249.

The application to purchase only initiates the proceeding. The statements contained in it may or may not be true. And the department may at any time cause the truth of these statements to be inquired into.

Hawley v. Diller, 178 U. S. 488, 44 L. ed. 1161, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 986.

If notice had been served upon Spratt of the proceedings to cancel these entries, and if he had appeared before the register and receiver, the burden would have been upon him to show the good faith of the entry in each case, and a full compliance with the statute and in the manner provided by the statute.

United States v. Steenerson, 1 C. C. A. 552, 4 U. S. App. 332, 50 Fed. 508; Guaranty Sav. Bank v. Bladow, 6 N. D. 108, 69 N. W. 43; Parsons v. Venzke, 4 N. D. 452, 61 N. W. 1041.

Mr. George C. Stout argued the cause, and, with Messrs. John H. Mitchell and T. H. Ward, filed a brief for defendant in error:

The Land Department having canceled the entries without notice to the transferee Spratt, it would not conclude him, and he would, notwithstanding the decision, have the right to show, by proof other than the canceled certificate, that the entries were valid.

Guaranty Sav. Bank v. Bladow, 176 U. S. 448, 44 L. ed. 540, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 425; Hawley v. Diller, 178 U. S. 488, 44 L. ed. 1161, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 986; American Mortg. Co. v. Hopper, 12 C. C. A. 293, 29 U. S. App. 12, 64 Fed. 559; Guaranty Sav. Bank v. Bladow, 6 N. D. 108, 69 N. W. 41.

It is a settled rule in the Land Department, that if it appears from a special agent's report (as it did in this case), or by other evidence, that the land had been transferred to a third party by the original entrymen, then it becomes the imperative duty of the officers of the government to give such transferee notice of the proceedings relative to the cancelation of such entry.

United States v. Copeland, 5 Land Dec. 170; United States v. Richardson, 5 Land Dec. 253; Windsor v. Sage, 6 Land Dec. 440; United States v. Thomas, 9 Land Dec. 576; Fleming v. Bowe, 13 Land Dec. 78; United States v. Newman, 15 Land Dec. 224.

In order to defeat the holder of the equitable title, on the ground of having purchased on the faith of the record title in good faith, it must be specially pleaded and proved.

2 Pom. Eq. Jur. §§ 784, 785; Story, Eq. Pl. 8th ed. § 805a.

The trial court having made full findings of fact which were approved by the supreme court of the state, such findings are conclusive on a writ of error to such courts from the Supreme Court of the United States.

Jenkins v. Noff, 186 U. S. 230, 46 L. ed. 1140, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 905; E. Cement & Sons v. National Harrow Co. 186 U. S. 70, 46 L. ed. 1058, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 747.

This court can look beyond the Federal question only when that has been decided erroneously, and then only to see whether there are any other matters or issues adjudged by the state court sufficiently broad to maintain the judgment notwithstanding the error in the decision of the Federal question.

McLaughlin v. Fowler, 154 U. S. 663, and 26 L. ed. 176, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1192.

Mr. Justice Peckham, after making the foregoing statement of facts, delivered the opinion of the court:

The decision of the Land Department as to the character of the land in question resulted from an erroneous construction of the timber act of June 3, 1878. There was no dispute as to the actual condition of the land, but the Department held that land so situated could not be entered under the timber act. In this construction the Department made a legal error. It has been held by this court that the act included lands covered with timber, but which might be made fit for cultivation by removing the timber and working the land. United States v. Budd, 144 U. S. 154, 36 L. ed. 384, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 575. Mr. Justice Brewer, in delivering the opinion of the court in the above case, states as follows:

"Lands are not excluded by the scope of the act because in the future, by large expenditures of money and labor, they may be rendered suitable for cultivation. It is enough that at the time of the purchase they are not, in their then condition, fit therefor. The statute does not refer to the probabilities of the future, but to the facts of the present. Many rocky hill-slopes or stony fields in New England have been, by patient years of gathering up and removing the stones, made fair farming land; but surely no one, before the commencement of these labors, would have called them fit for cultivation. We do not mean that the mere existence of timber on land brings it within the scope of the act. The significant word in the statute is 'chiefly.' Trees growing on a tract may be so few in number or so small in size as to be easily cleared off, or not seriously to affect its present and general

[351] fitness for *cultivation. So, on the other hand, where a tract is mainly covered with a dense forest, there may be small openings scattered through it susceptible of cultivation. The chief value of the land must be its timber, and that timber must be so extensive and so dense as to render the tract as a whole, in its present state, substantially unfit for cultivation."

The lands in this case are within that description. The evidence shows that the timber was excellent; as good as any in that section of the country. It was as good as any ever examined by the witness, who had had large experience. In fact, he said there was none better in that part of the country, and the quality of the timber was large to the acre, but the land was not especially valuable for cultivation until it had been cleared.

Even though the decision of the Land Department was erroneous, yet having been made, and the entries and certificates canceled, although without notice to defendant, they could not thereafter be used even as prima facie evidence of the validity of the original entries. It was perfectly easy to have given defendant notice of the proposed cancellation. He resided in Alpena, Michigan, and the deeds showed that fact, and the record shows the Department was aware of their existence through the report of its special inspector. There is no hardship or inconvenience, therefore, in holding that, in a case, at least, where the residence is known, the transferee has the right to notice. If not known, a publication of notice ought at least to be made. It seems this is the practice of the Land Department.

It has been held in this court, in Guaranty Sav. Bank v. Bladow, 176 U. S. 448, 44 L. ed. 540, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 425, and Hawley v. Diller, 178 U. S. 476, 488, 44 L. ed. 1157, 1162, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 986, that a cancellation of a certificate of entry was not conclusive as against a transferee who had no notice and no opportunity to be heard upon the question of the original validity of the entry, but that it left the transferee without the right to use the entry certificate as prima facie evidence of the validity of the entry or of his subsequent claim. The transferee is, however, left free to prove the validity of the entry by any means other than the certificate. Although the assignment or conveyance of the certificates did not transfer the legal title to the *lands de-[352] scribed therein, yet the transferee or grantee thereby became possessed of an equitable interest in the lands which could not be taken from him without some notice. The character of the certificates as a mere means of evidence could be, and was, destroyed; but the transferee was, nevertheless, not thereby deprived of his right to show the validity of the former entry.

In this case we think he has done so. He proved by his own evidence that he was a bona fide purchaser of the property for value paid to the entrymen and that he had no agreement or understanding of any kind with them prior to the time that he purchased the land from them.

We do not refer to the bona fide character of the purchase by defendant from the entrymen for the purpose of thereby showing the defendant to be entitled to the benefit of that character under § 2 of the timber act of 1878. The reason that he is not so entitled is that by the assignment of the certificates he did not become clothed with the strict legal title to the land, but simply with an equity, and the act does not cover such a case. Hawley v. Diller, 178 U. S. 476, 487, 44 L. ed. 1157, 1161, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 986. We refer to the bona fide character of the purchase by defendant, for the purpose only of showing it was without any prior agreement or understanding with the entrymen, and was not in violation of the provisions of the timber act.

The stipulation between counsel, that the papers on file in the Land Department might be regarded as in evidence and considered by the court, permitted the court to regard those papers as properly introduced in evidence and competent to be considered by it in the further consideration of the case. Those papers show a compliance on the part of the entrymen with all the provisions of the timber act, and a valid entry under it in regard to the lands in question. As the entries had not been canceled for any fraud in fact, but only upon an erroneous interpretation of the law by the Department, the evidence of such error being apparent on the trial, the defendant did all he was required to do in order to show the entries valid; and if the plaintiffs wished to show any fraud in fact, to overcome the case made by the defendant, they were called upon to do so; [353] *otherwise, the original proof being sufficient to warrant the issuing of the certificates, that proof would be regarded as sufficient on the trial of this suit.

There is not a word of any proof showing any fraudulent act on the part of the entrymen or of their transferee, the defendant herein, and, on the contrary, there is proof of an absence of any fraud and the bona fide purpose on the part of the entrymen to properly avail themselves of the act of 1878.

But, however this may be, we are precluded by the finding of facts in the state court from looking at the evidence upon which such findings may rest. Upon a writ of error to a state court this court has no right to review its decision upon the ground that the finding was against evidence or the weight of evidence. Egan v. Hart, 165 U. S. 188, 41 L. ed. 680, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 300; Gardner v. Bonestell, 180 U. S. 362, 370, 45 L. ed. 574, 577, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 399; Bement & Sons v. National Harrow Co. 186 U. S. 70, 46 L. ed. 1058, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 747; Jenkins v. Neff, 186 U. S. 230, 235, 46 L. ed. 1140, 1143, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 905.

By the findings in this case it appears that the entrymen at the time of making their entries were entitled to purchase the lands under the act of Congress of 1878, and that they duly made such application, duly verified by the oath of the applicants before the register of the land office, and that in the purchase of the land they fully complied with the laws of the United States and the rules and regulations of the Land Department, and that all the requirements of the timber and stone act in regard to making a legal and valid entry and purchase thereunder were fully complied with 189 U. S.

by the entrymen, and that thereafter the applications were allowed and certificates duly issued as applied for, and the lands included in the entries were at all times chiefly valuable for the timber thereon, and at that time unfit for cultivation. It was also found that the action of the land office in canceling the timber entries was based upon a misconstruction of the act of 1878, and that the department, by reason of such misconstruction, erroneously held that land covered with a heavy growth of valuable timber, if it could be successfully cultivated after the timber was removed, was not subject to entry as timber land under that act, although the timber on the land might be itself the chief element of the value *of the [354] land, and the land could not be cultivated at all in its then condition.

Upon these findings it is apparent that the defendant showed the validity of the entries by his grantors, and that their conveyances to him passed a good equitable title to the lands in question for which he was entitled to a patent from the United States; and that, as such patent was granted to appellants, the defendant was entitled to the relief given him by the judgment.

The judgment of the Supreme Court of the state of Washington is therefore affirmed.

TEXAS & PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,

v.

MICHAEL CARLIN.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 354-363.)

Master and servant—negligence of vice principal—trial—question for jury.

1. The neglect, by the foreman of a railway bridge gang, of his special duty to see that the workmen under him performed their duty to leave a clear track for an approaching train, is the neglect of a duty which he owes, not as a fellow servant with such workmen, but as a vice principal of the railroad company, under Sayles's (Tex.) Civ. Stat. 1897, art. 4560g, providing that railroad employees intrusted with the control or command of other employees, or with the authority to direct any other employee in the performance of his duty, are vice principals of the railway company, and not fellow servants with their coemployees.
2. The question of the negligence of the foreman of a railway bridge gang in failing to discover a spike Maul upon or near the bridge, NOTE.—On vice principalship considered with reference to the superior rank of a negligent servant—see note to Stevens v. Chamberlin (C. C. App. 1st C.) 51 L. R. A. 513.

As to vice principalship as determined with reference to the character of the act which caused the injury—see note to Lafayette Bridge Co. v. Olsen (C. C. App. 7th C.) 54 L. R. A. 33.

As to who are fellow servants—see note to Central R. Co. v. Keegan, 40 L. ed. U. S. 418.

On the statutory liability of employers for the negligence of employees exercising superintendence—see note to Canney v. Walkeine (C. C. App. 1st C.) 58 L. R. A. 33.

immediately prior to the passage of a train, is for the jury in an action to recover damages from the railroad company for personal injuries received by a member of such gang, for which there is no other cause assignable than that the train in passing struck the maul and threw it against the workman, although the foreman testified that he looked for and did not discover any obstruction to the approaching train, where there was nothing to prevent its discovery if it was there and the glance of the foreman was anything more than a casual or formal one.

[No. 222.]

Argued and submitted March 20, 1903. Decided April 6, 1903.

IN ERROR to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Circuit Court for the Northern District of Texas entered upon a verdict of a jury in favor of plaintiff in an action to recover damages from a railway company for personal injuries. Affirmed.

See same case below, 111 Fed. 777.

Statement by Mr. Justice Peckham:

The plaintiff in error brings this case here to review the judgment of the United States circuit court of appeals for the fifth circuit, affirming the judgment in the circuit court for the northern district of Texas, entered [355] *upon the verdict of a jury in favor of defendant in error on the trial of this action brought by him against the railway company to recover damages for personal injuries. On the trial it appeared that Carlin, the plaintiff below, was in the employment of the railway company in September, 1898, as a bridge carpenter. On that day he, with a number of others forming what is termed the bridge gang, of which George Welsh was foreman, was employed in making some repairs on a bridge near the Alcedo water tank, not far from Weatherford, Texas. The bridge was over a creek, and was 60 to 65 feet long. The force got to work on the bridge about ten minutes after 8 o'clock in the morning under Welsh, the foreman. The surface of the bridge was plain; the ties were about 8 inches apart, and there was nothing on top of them except the rails and the guard rails, the rails being of ordinary size, and the guard rails about 10 inches from the rails and parallel with them. The guard rails were 8 inches wide and stood 4 inches above the ties, being let down over the ties about 2 inches, and were of wood. Some time after the men had been working on the bridge a freight train was seen approaching at the rate of from 30 to 40 miles an hour. Within a very few minutes before the train was seen one of the workmen on the bridge had in his hand what is called a spike maul, used for the purpose of driving spike. The maul was of iron with a handle about 3 feet long, the hammer being 6, 8, or perhaps 10 inches in length, and the handle went into the middle of the head, which had a double face. Carver was the man who was using the maul a few minutes before the train came. The maul weighed about 10 pounds. At the time Carver was using the maul, he had it out on the bridge with him. A witness for the defendant stated that he had been using the maul on the south side of the bridge for putting up the staging or scaffolding, and when he finished he handed it to someone on the top of the bridge, who handed it to Carver on the north side of the bridge, to spike on a brace. It was used but ten or fifteen minutes before the passage of the train. Carver stated he did not remember where he had put the maul when he had finished using it, but he said *he was always careful to put it out of the [356] way so there would be no accident. He had nailed the last piece of timber on the bridge and got down on the ground and was about 10 feet from the plaintiff, and had not been there over three or four minutes when the train passed. The witness saw no other spike maul or hammer there that morning than the one which he used, which was the regular spike maul described by the witness, and which he found after the train passed.

The train coming from the west was seen some little distance before it reached the bridge, and the people on the bridge got out of its way, and, as the train passed over the bridge towards the east the plaintiff, who was standing a short distance from the east end of the bridge, was struck by the spike maul on the leg, and was so badly injured that amputation of the leg above the knee was necessary, and was performed. The train on its passage across the bridge struck the spike maul and threw it in the direction that the train was going with such force toward the plaintiff as to effect the injury mentioned, although the train was not seen to strike the maul, nor was the maul seen to strike the plaintiff. All that is known is that the train passed the bridge, and as it passed the maul struck the plaintiff, and the handle was broken close up to the head.

It was customary when workmen were engaged in repairing a bridge for the foreman to see that the bridge was cleared and unobstructed whenever a train was about to pass. It was the duty of the workmen to put their tools out of the way when a train was coming, but it was specially the duty of the foreman to see that the bridge was clear, and "that was his business and that was what he was for." Welsh, the foreman of the bridge gang, testified that he had no recollection of seeing anyone using the spike maul that morning; that he had been around all parts of the bridge, both on top and underneath it, before the train had passed. He says when he saw the train coming he looked up and down the track to see if everything was clear, and did not see anything, and stepped one side when the train was 300 or 400 yards from him. He said he had plenty of time if there had been anything on the bridge to have taken it off; that when a man was using tools and got *through with [357] them he was supposed to take care of them and put them out of the way; that the foreman was liable to be anywhere about the bridge at any time, and could not be depended upon to be at any particular place; but if there were men working on top of the bridge it would be their duty to be on the lookout always, as they must expect a train at any time. He also said that he was foreman, and that as bridge foreman he had employed Carlin and had supervision over him, and had power to employ and discharge him as well as the other bridge men who were working there that morning.

The evidence was not disputed that, although it was the business of each workman to see to it that his tools were not in the way of an approaching train, yet that it was particularly the duty of the foreman to see that the bridge was cleared from all obstacles when a train came.

This is in substance the evidence submitted to the jury upon the question of the negligence of the defendant.

The judge charged that the burden of proof was upon the plaintiff to show that the defendant was negligent, and that the plaintiff was injured thereby; that the defendant was bound to exercise ordinary care to furnish a reasonably safe place within which employees could perform their duties; that the foreman of the bridge gang was, under the evidence, the vice principal of the defendant company, and that the negligence of which the defendant was accused consisted in the failure on the part of the foreman of the bridge gang to use ordinary care to remove, or to see and remove, the spike maul before the arrival of the train at the bridge.

The court also charged that, if the jury believed from the evidence that the spike maul was left on the bridge by a fellow servant of the plaintiff, and that, at the time the train approached, the foreman of the bridge gang was the only person upon the bridge, and that he could, by the exercise of ordinary care have seen the spike maul and removed it from the track and from proximity thereto; and if they believed it was on the track or within proximity thereto; and if the jury believed that it was the duty of the foreman to use such care to see that the track was clear and no obstructions on it, [358] or so near to it as to *be struck by a passing train; and if the jury believed that the foreman did not use that care, and that the spike maul was struck by the train and hurled against the plaintiff and caused the injuries; and if the jury believed it was the negligence of the foreman in failing to see and remove the spike maul; and if his negligence in that respect was the direct and proximate cause of the injuries sustained by the plaintiff,—then the court charged that the plaintiff was entitled to recover; but that, if the injury was caused by the negligence of a fellow servant, and the foreman in charge of the bridge gang was not guilty of negligence which directly and proximately contributed to the injury of the plaintiff, then the verdict should be for the defendant.

The court further charged that the defendant should not be held responsible for the consequences of an act of negligence which could not reasonably be foreseen, and that it was not actionable negligence to fail to do an act when it would not have been anticipated by a man of ordinary care and prudence that such failure to perform the act would result in injury to anyone.

Various requests to charge were made by counsel for the defendant and refused by the court, not necessary to be here specifically mentioned.

The jury, as stated, found a verdict for the plaintiff.

Mr. David D. Duncan argued the cause, and, with Messrs. John F. Dillon and Winslow S. Pierce, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

If Welsh, the foreman, was negligent in performing a duty which was equally the duty of those under him, his negligence in this respect would be the negligence of a fellow servant, and not that of vice principal, for which the railway company would not be responsible.

Quinn v. New Jersey Lighterage Co. 23 Blatchf. 209, 23 Fed. 363; Hoke v. St. Louis, K. & N. R. Co. 11 Mo. App. 574; Olson v. Oregon Coal & Nav. Co. 44 C. C. A. 51, 104 Fed. 574; The Kensington, 91 Fed. 681; The Miami, 35 C. C. A. 281, 93 Fed. 219; Stockmeyer v. Reed, 55 Fed. 259; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Bolton, 99 Tenn. 273, 41 S. W. 442; Buswell, Personal Injuries, 387.

There was no evidence of the negligence of the foreman in failing to discover the maul or hammer upon the bridge, sufficient to warrant the jury in finding a verdict for the plaintiff.

Patton v. Texas & P. R. Co. 179 U. S. 658, 45 L. ed. 361, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 275.

In every case, before the evidence is left to the jury, there is a preliminary question for the judge, not whether there is literally no evidence, but whether there is any upon which a jury can properly proceed to find a verdict for the party producing it, upon whom the onus of proof is imposed.

Schuykill & D. & R. Improv. Co. v. Munson, 14 Wall. 448, 20 L. ed. 867; Pleasants v. Fant, 22 Wall. 116, 22 L. ed. 780.

Mr. F. E. Albright submitted the cause for defendant in error. Messrs. E. C. Orrick and J. C. Terrell, Jr., were with him on the brief:

When a given state of facts is such that reasonable men may fairly differ upon the question as to whether there was negligence or not, the determination of the matter is for the jury. The question of negligence is one of law only when the facts and circumstances are such that all reasonable men must draw the same conclusion from them.

Gardner v. Michigan C. R. Co. 150 U. S. 349, 37 L. ed. 1107, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 140; Grand Trunk R. Co. v. Ives, 144 U. S. 408, 36 L. ed. 485, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 679.

The statutes of the state of Texas defining vice principal and fellow servant make the question of fellow servant depend upon the grade of employment, and not the act done or omitted to be done. This was the rule governing the relation of master and servant, ultimately adopted by the supreme courts of this state prior to the passage of the act.

Nix v. Texas P. R. Co. 82 Tex. 473, 18 S. W. 571; Sweeney v. Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. 84 Tex. 433, 19 S. W. 555.

The master owes to the servant a reasonably safe place in which to perform his work, and to use ordinary care to keep the same in a reasonably safe condition; and if, instead of personally performing these obligations, he engages another to do so, he is liable for the neglect of that other.

Northern P. R. Co. v. Peterson, 162 U. S. 346, 40 L. ed. 994, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 843; Hess v. Rosenthal, 160 Ill. 621, 43 N. E. 743; Harrison v. Detroit, L. & N. R. Co. 79 Mich. 409, 7 L. R. A. 623, 44 N. W. 1034.

The supreme court of the state of Texas having construed this statute, the Supreme Court of the United States will follow this construction.

U. S. Rev. Stat. § 721 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 581); Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Baugh, 149 U. S. 368, 37 L. ed. 772, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 914; Long v. Chicago, R. I. & T. R. Co. 94 Tex. 53, 57 S. W. 802; Fenwick v. Illinois C. R. Co. 40 C. C. A. 369, 100 Fed. 247; Peirce v. Van Dusen, 24 C. C. A. 280, 47 U. S. App. 339, 78 Fed. 693.

If an ordinarily prudent person ought to have foreseen that injury might result to any person by reason of the negligence of the foreman in failing to discover the maul on the track, under the circumstances, the anticipation of any injury would be sufficient to constitute the leaving of the maul there while a train was approaching the probable consequence of the injury done and the proximate cause thereof.

Texas & P. R. Co. v. Short (Tex. Civ. App.) 58 S. W. 57; Chicago, St. L. & N. O. R. Co. v. Doyle, 60 Miss. 977; Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Anderson, 29 C. C. A. 235, 56 U. S. App. 137, 85 Fed. 413; Herriek v. Quigley, 41 C. C. A. 294, 101 Fed. 187; Zopf v. Postal Teleg. Cable Co. 9 C. C. A. 308, 22 U. S. App. 136, 60 Fed. 987; Chicago & A. W. R. Co. v. Prescott, 23 L. R. A. 654, 8 C. C. A. 109, 19 U. S. App. 291, 59 Fed. 237; Jackson v. Galveston, H. & S. A. R. Co. 90 Tex. 372, 38 S. W. 766; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Wood (Tex. Civ. App.) 63 S. W. 164; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Marchand, 24 Tex. Civ. App. 47, 57 S. W. 860.

Mr. Justice Peckham, after making the foregoing statement of facts, delivered the opinion of the court:

Two grounds have been urged upon the court for reversing this judgment and granting a new trial: One was that the negligence of the railway company, if any, was that of a fellow servant, for which it was [359] not liable; and (2) that there was no evidence of the negligence of the foreman, in failing to discover the maul or hammer upon the bridge, sufficient to warrant the jury in finding a verdict for the plaintiff.

The right to maintain this action is founded upon a statute of Texas, the material sections of which read as follows:

"Art. 4560g. All persons engaged in the service of any person, receiver, or corporation controlling or operating a railroad or street railway, the lines of which shall be situated in whole or in part in this state, who are intrusted by such person, receiver, or corporation with the authority of superintendence, control, or command of other servants or employees of such person, receiver, or corporation, or with the authority to direct any other employee in the performance of any duty of such employee, are vice principals of such person, receiver, or corporation, and are not fellow servants with their coemployees.

"Art. 4560h. All persons who are engaged in the common service of such person, receiver, or corporation controlling or operating a railroad or street railway, and who while so employed are in the same grade of employment, and are doing the same character of work or service, and are working together at the same time and place and at the same piece of work and to a common purpose, are fellow servants with each other. Employees who do not come within the provisions of this article shall not be considered fellow servants." Sayles's Civil Stat. (Tex.) 1897.

With reference to this statute, counsel for the defendant requested the court to charge the jury that—

"Although Welsh, the bridge foreman, may have been, in law, the representative of the company, yet, if they find that the act of examining the track, as the train might be approaching, for the purpose of ascertaining whether or not any obstruction was upon or near it, was a duty that may be expected to be performed by any one of the men, irrespective of his grade or rank; that is to say, by the foreman and men alike as occasion and circumstances may require,—then, in any such event, the act or duty of Welsh in this respect was one which existed between fellow servants, and defendant would not be liable for the negligent acts of Welsh in this respect, if any there were."

*This charge was refused, and counsel for [360] defendant excepted.

The court did charge that the foreman of the bridge gang was, under the evidence, the vice principal of the defendant company. This charge was duly excepted to by defendant's counsel.

Defendant contends that if the negligence which caused the accident was the failure of the foreman to see the maul or hammer upon the bridge and to remove it, it was not the failure to perform a duty peculiar to him, the foreman, and specially imposed upon him as such foreman within the meaning of article 4560g, because it was a duty resting equally upon all the members of the bridge gang. The testimony in regard to this question leaves no doubt as to the duty of the foreman, although it also appeared that when a man was using tools and got through with them he was supposed to put them out of the way where a train would not strike them, and it was his business to do so. The evidence showed, in addition, that it was the special business of the foreman to see that the track was unobstructed on the bridge when a train was about to cross, and that, although the men were supposed to see that the track was clear, it was the foreman's business to supervise them and see that the men left a clear track as the train came on. This was his duty as foreman, and not as fellow workman; and the duty of care on the part of the workmen under him to keep the tools off the track when the train came on the bridge in no degree lessened the duty of the foreman to see that the men under him did as they ought, and that a free and unobstructed track was left for the train. In other words, it was the special duty of the foreman, as such, to see that the men performed their duty.

The negligent act of the foreman did not arise in the performance of the duty of a mere servant, although each servant was under an obligation to be careful, but it was the negligent act of the vice principal in the performance of his duty as such. As it was the special duty of the foreman to see that the men performed their duty, his neglect so to do was the neglect of a duty which he owed, not as fellow servant, but as vice principal within the statute above cited.

[361] Upon the second ground, we are of opinion that there was *evidence sufficient to go to the jury upon the question of the negligence of the foreman in failing to discover the maul upon the bridge immediately prior to the passage of the train. The foreman himself swears that he did look along the track just prior to the coming of the train, and that he did not see any obstruction on the track, and did not see the spike maul in question. Whether he looked or not is, under the evidence, one of the material facts in the case. He says that he did, but we are of opinion that other facts proved in the case were of such a character as to make it proper to submit the question to the jury. The foreman's evidence was that of a somewhat interested witness. If the foreman did in fact neglect to perform his duty by looking over the track just prior to the coming of the train for the purpose of seeing that the bridge was clear of obstructions, it might be quite a serious matter for him in his future relations with the company. At any rate, no man is an absolutely disinterested witness where his testimony relates to the question of the performance or nonperformance of a duty which he owed on account of the position which he occupied. It was, therefore, a question for the jury as to what measure of credence should be given to his testimony. Of course, the mere absence of evidence that the foreman did his duty would not be equivalent to evidence, direct or circumstantial, that he did not, and it rested with the plaintiff to show negligence of the foreman for which the defendant would be liable.

But there are certain facts proved in this case which we think rendered it necessary to submit the question of negligence to the jury, notwithstanding the testimony of the foreman. We have here a bridge not more than 60 or 65 feet long,—an open top bridge, the surface of which was plain. The ties for the rails were the usual distance apart, and there was nothing on top of them except the rails themselves. The guard rails were 10 inches from the track and parallel with it, and they stood up about 4 inches above the ties. There was, therefore, nothing to obstruct or prevent the view of the length of the bridge by anyone at either end, and nothing to prevent the discovery of the maul if the glance of the individual were anything more than casual or formal. The maul could not *have been hidden between. [362] the track and the guard rails so as not to be above the track, for if the maul were lower than the track, the train could not have hit it, as it is perfectly clear that anything lower than the surface of the track could not be struck by the train. So it would seem quite obvious that if anyone in the position of the foreman had looked, it would have been possible for him to have discovered this maul if it were there. Was it there? Workmen had been using the maul on the bridge during the morning and a few moments, not more than ten or fifteen minutes, prior to the crossing of the train. The maul was struck by it and hurled with great force, sufficient to break the handle, against the plaintiff, who was standing near the east end of the bridge. The man who was known to have used the maul a few minutes before the arrival of the train says himself that he has no recollection of what he did with it. Now, whether the maul were left exactly on the bridge, or just off the bridge, and so near the track as to be struck by the passing train, it is not necessary to determine, because if it had been left in a position just off the bridge, and yet so near the track as to be struck by the train, the failure of the foreman to see it and have it removed was the same as if it had been on the bridge. The maul being left so that it was struck by the train and hurled against the plaintiff, the failure of the foreman to see it might have been found by the jury to be a negligent failure, and, it being his duty to see that the track was kept clear for the passage of trains, that failure was a neglect which was the proximate cause of the injury. To be sure, it was negligence on the part of the servant who left the tool there in the first place, but after such negligence had occurred the duty of the foreman arose, and he had plenty of time in which to perform it, to overlook the bridge where the track was and see that there was no obstruction for the passing train, and his failure to look, or, looking, to discover the obstruction, thus became the immediate and proximate cause of the injury which followed.

There is no other cause assignable for this injury than the fact that the train did strike the maul, and that fact is proved from the fact that it was thrown in the direction in which the train was going. Counsel for the defendant admits that the evidence *shows [363] that fact, but he avers that it does not appear that the maul was in such a position as to convict the foreman of negligence in not discovering it, and as to that fact counsel insists that the negligence of the foreman is disproved by the uncontradicted testimony.

The facts already stated rendered it necessary, in our judgment, to submit the question to the jury as to the negligence of the foreman, even although he testified that he looked and did not discover any obstacle on the bridge.

These two are the propositions particularly argued before us. We do not see in them any ground for disturbing the verdict of the jury.

We have looked at the other exceptions taken in the course of the trial, and are of opinion that they do not show any error requiring a reversal of the judgment, and it is therefore affirmed.

UNION STEAMBOAT COMPANY, Claimant of the Propeller New York, Petitioner,

v.

ERIE & WESTERN TRANSPORTATION COMPANY et al.†

(Sec S. C. Reporter's ed. 363-370.)

Appeal—construction of mandate — decree in conformity with opinion—statutes—repeal by implication.

1. A mandate from the Supreme Court of the United States, which directs the entry of a decree in conformity with its opinion dividing the damages caused in a collision between vessels held in fault, but leaving undisturbed a judgment obtained by the owners of the cargo against one of such vessels for the full amount of their damages, does not require that such decree provide for the recoupment by the latter vessel of one half of the damages to such cargo from the moiety of damages awarded to the other vessel.
2. The rate of interest on judgments and decrees, fixed in Michigan at 7 per cent by a statute originally enacted in 1838 and carried forward in the various compilations of the statutes of that state, was not changed by a statute enacted in 1891, which, according to its title, was one to regulate the interest of money on account and interest on money judgments, but which actually provided only for the reduction of the rate of "interest of money" to 6 per cent, and which was amended by the act of September 22, 1899, by a further reduction of such rate to 5 per cent.

[No. 97.]

Argued December 1, 2, 1902. Decided March 9, 1903.

ON WRIT of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the

† This case is reported by the Official Reporter under the title of "The Conemaugh."

NOTE.—On repeal of statutes by implication—see notes to State v. Massey (N. C.) 4 L. R. A. 309; First Nat. Bank v. Weidenbeck, 38 C. C. A. 136; and United States v. 356 Caddies of Tobacco, 20 L. ed U. S. 235.

Sixth Circuit to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the District Court for the Eastern District of Michigan entered in pursuance of a mandate from the Supreme Court of the United States. Affirmed.

See same case below, 47 C. C. A. 232, 108 Fed. 102.

Statement by Mr. Justice McKenna:

*The facts of this case are fully set out in [364] previous decisions of this court. 175 U. S. 187, 44 L. ed. 126, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 67; 178 U. S. 317, 44 L. ed. 1084, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 904.

The steamer Conemaugh, owned by respondents, and the propeller New York, owned by the petitioner, collided in the Detroit river, November 11, 1891. The Conemaugh for herself, and as bailee of her cargo, filed a libel against the New York for the sum of $70,000 damages in the district court for the eastern district of Michigan. Subsequently, certain underwriters of the cargo of the Conemaugh filed an intervening petition in the cause. Subsequently, the New York, for damages sustained by her, filed a cross libel against the Conemaugh for $3,000 damages, sustained by the New York in the collision. No answer was filed to this cross libel.

The district court held the New York to have been solely in fault, and passed a decree against her. The circuit court of appeals for the sixth circuit reversed the decree of the district court on the ground that the Conemaugh had been solely in fault, and adjudged that her owners pay the owners of the New York, petitioners here, the damages sustained by the New York. The case was then brought here by certiorari, and both vessels were pronounced to have been in fault. The decrees of the lower courts were reversed and the damages caused by the collision ordered to be divided. The following is the material part of the judgment and mandate:

"On consideration whereof, it is now ordered, adjudged, and decreed by this court that the decree of the said United States circuit court of appeals in the cause be and the same is hereby reversed; the claimant of the Conemaugh and the claimant of the New York each to pay one half of all costs in this cause.

"And that the said Erie & Western Transportation Company recover against the Union Steamboat Company $276.75 for one half of the costs herein expended, and have execution therefor.

"And it is further ordered that this cause be and the same is hereby remanded to the district court of the United States for the eastern district of Michigan, with direction to enter a decree in conformity with the opinion of this court, with interest *from [365] July 3, 1896, until paid, at the same rate per annum that decrees bear in the courts of the state of Michigan."

Upon the return of the case to the district court, that court made its decree in favor of the several intervening underwriters upon the cargo for their respective claims, with interest at 7 per cent from July 3, 1896. The court also decreed that the owners of the cargo and their underwriters, other than the interveners, by reason of the collision, sustained damages in the sum of $19,627.67, "for which the said Erie & Western Transportation Company appears in this suit as trustee only." And it was adjudged and decreed "that said trustee recover from the said Union Steamboat Company and its surety, in trust, for the said owners of and underwriters on cargo, the aforesaid sum of $19,627.67, with interest thereon at the rate of 7 per cent per annum from July 3, 1896, until paid, and that it have execution therefor."

Judgment was also given in favor of the Conemaugh for one half of the damages of that steamer, less one half of the damages of the New York, with interest.

At the hearing in the district court on the return of the mandate the petitioner "submitted a decree to the effect that both vessels were in fault for the collision, and that the damage resulting therefrom be equally divided between the Erie & Western Transportation Company, owner of the Conemaugh, and the Union Steamboat Company, owner of the New York; that such damages amounted in all to the sum of $74,319.49, of which certain intervening underwriters of the cargo were entitled to, and recovered from the steamboat company, $19,841.56; that the transportation company, as trustees for the underwriters and owners of the cargo of the Conemaugh, not intervening, suffered damages in the sum of $19,627.67; that, as owner of the propeller, it had suffered damages in the sum of $30,508.46, aggregating the sum of $50,136.13; that the transportation company recover of the petitioner one half of $50,136.13, less one half the sum of $19,841.56, decreed to be paid to the intervening petitioners, etc.

[366] "The court, however, declined to enter this decree; refused to permit the petitioner to recoup any sum that it might pay to the owners or underwriters of the cargo of the Conemaugh, from any sum that was due from the steamboat company for damages sustained by the Conemaugh, so that such company was compelled to pay of the total damages about 76 per cent instead of 50 per cent." 178 U. S. 317, 318, 44 L. ed. 1084, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 904.

The action of the district court was affirmed by the circuit court of appeals (47 C. C. A. 232, 108 Fed. 102), and the case was then brought here.

Mr. C. E. Kremer argued the cause, and, with Messrs. F. C. Harvey and W. O. Johnson, filed a brief for petitioner:

Any provision of an act, directly or indirectly relating to the subject expressed in the title, and having a natural connection therewith, and not foreign thereto, should be embraced by it.

Ryerson v. Utley, 16 Mich. 278.

Under the Constitution of Michigan the 189 U. S.

title of an act is significant, and usually controlling in determining its scope.

McKellar v. Detroit, 57 Mich. 158, 58 Am. Rep. 357, 23 N. W. 621.

The body of the act must reasonably harmonize with the title.

Booth v. Eddy, 38 Mich. 245; Bates v. Nelson, 49 Mich. 459, 13 N. W. 817; Northwestern Mfg. Co. v. Chambers, 58 Mich. 381, 55 Am. Rep. 693, 25 N. W. 372; McKellar v. Detroit, 57 Mich. 158, 58 Am. Rep. 357, 23 N. W. 621.

Mr. Harvey D. Goulder argued the cause, and, with Messrs. S. H. Holding and F. S. Masten, filed a brief for respondents:

The stereotyped phrase of the mandate, "as according to right and justice and the laws of the United States ought to be had," did not authorize the district court to depart in any respect from the judgment of this court.

Re Washington & G. R. Co. 140 U. S. 91, 35 L. ed. 339, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 673; Gaines v. Rugg, 148 U. S. 228, sub nom. Gaines v. Caldwell, 37 L. ed. 432, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 611.

The district court could not revise or consider in any respect the decision, and was entirely without authority to admit "new matter," had such been proffered, without leave of this court.

Re Potts, 166 U. S. 263, 41 L. ed. 994, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 520.

This was an admiralty cause brought to this court on writ of certiorari, and treated as if on appeal; all questions presented in the case were here decided, and the decree entered in pursuance of the mandate was the decree of this court.

Stewart v. Salamon, 97 U. S. 361, 24 L. ed. 1044; Humphrey v. Baker, 103 U. S. 736, 26 L. ed. 456; Southard v. Russell, 16 How. 547, 14 L. ed. 1052.

There was no power in the district court to allow new pleading, amendments, or rehearing; and silence upon any point involved in the case would have to be taken as a denial of the point.

Re Washington & G. R. Co. 140 U. S. 91, 35 L. ed. 339, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 673; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Anderson, 149 U. S. 237, 37 L. ed. 717, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 843.

An appeal from a decree entered by the court below in accordance with the mandate of the appellate court cannot be maintained.

Aspen Min. & Smelting Co. v. Billings, 150 U. S. 31, 37 L. ed. 986, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 4.

Mr. Wilhelmus Mynderse argued the cause and filed a brief for interveners:

The only proceedings now under review are those taken under the mandate issued out of this court January 22, 1900.

Sibbald v. United States, 12 Pet. 488, 9 L. ed. 1167; The Lady Pike, 96 U. S. 461, sub nom. Pearce v. Germania Ins. Co. 24 L. ed. 672; The Nuestra Señora de Regla, 108 U. S. 101, sub nom. United States v. The Nuestra Señora De Regla, 27 L. ed. 666, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 287; Kreiger v. Shelby R. Co. 125 U. S. 39, 31 L. ed. 675, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 752; Egan v. Hart, 165 U. S. 188, 41 L. ed.

680, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 300; Thompson v. Maxwell Land Grant & R. Co. 168 U. S. 451, 42 L. ed. 539, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 121; Ex parte Union S. B. Co. 178 U. S. 317, 44 L. ed. 1084, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 904.

The repeal of a statute is not to be effected by inference or by implications, but only by express legislation.

Rosencrans v. United States, 165 U. S. 257, 41 L. ed. 708, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 302.

While the title of an act should not be altogether ignored, and may afford a key to unlock the meaning of a very doubtful statute, yet it cannot be used to extend the provisions of an act so as to include within its scope that which, without such aid, would plainly not be included.

Hadden v. Barney, 5 Wall. 107, 18 L. ed. 518; Goodlett v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 122 U. S. 391, 30 L. ed. 1230, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1254; United States v. Palmer, 3 Wheat. 610, 4 L. ed. 471.

Mr. F. H. Canfield filed a brief for underwriters who originally intervened in the district court:

Repeals by implication are not favored; the rule being that there must be a positive repugnancy between the provisions of the new statute and those of the old, in order to work a repeal by implication.

Rosencrans v. United States, 165 U. S. 257, 41 L. ed. 708, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 302; People v. Hanrahan, 75 Mich. 622, 4 L. R. A. 751, 42 N. W. 1124; Rice v. Hosking, 105 Mich. 303, 63 N. W. 311; Brown v. McCormick, 28 Mich. 215; Connors v. Carp River Iron Co. 54 Mich. 168, 19 N. W. 938; Lake Superior Ship Canal, R. & Iron Co. v. Aplin, 79 Mich. 353, 44 N. W. 616; Regents of University v. Auditor General, 109 Mich. 134, 66 N. W. 956; Wood v. United States, 16 Pet. 342, 10 L. ed. 987; Chew Heong v. United States, 112 U. S. 549, 28 L. ed. 773, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255; Frost v. Wenne, 157 U. S. 46, 39 L. ed. 614, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 532.

There is no inconsistency or conflict between a statute which, in terms, provides for interest on judgments or decrees, and one which fixes the rate of interest in matters of contract, and prescribes a penalty for usury. The two may well exist together in perfect harmony.

Henderson's Tobacco, 11 Wall. 652, sub nom. United States v. 356 Caddies of Tobacco, 20 L. ed. 235; United States v. Tynen, 11 Wall. 92, 20 L. ed. 154; South Carolina v. Stoll, 17 Wall. 431, 21 L. ed. 654.

If the act is read without the title, no one would suppose that it was intended to include either judgments or decrees in chancery. The title of an act furnishes but little aid in its construction. It cannot extend its effect or meaning beyond the scope of the text or body of the act itself.

Hadden v. Barney, 5 Wall. 107, 18 L. ed. 518; United States v. Church of the Holy Trinity, 36 Fed. 304; Wilson v. Spaulding, 19 Fed. 304; United States v. Palmer, 3 Wheat. 610, 4 L. ed. 471; Northern P. R. Co. v. Barden, 46 Fed. 592; Goodlett v. 856

Louisville & N. R. Co. 122 U. S. 391, 30 L. ed. 1230, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1254.

The decisions of the supreme court of the state regard § 4865 as being still in force.

Hayden v. Hefferan, 99 Mich. 262, 58 N. W. 59; Flint & P. M. R. Co. v. State Auditors, 102 Mich. 500, 60 N. W. 773.

Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

There is one main and several subsidiary propositions asserted by petitioner. The main proposition is that in all cases of collision, if both vessels are in fault, the damages resulting are to be equally divided between the owners of the vessels.

The subsidiary propositions are that if one of the offending vessels pay more than half the damages to a third or innocent party she may recoup or set off such excess against any claim for damages which the other vessel may have without bringing in the other vessel as a codefendant under admiralty rule 59, or filing other pleadings than an answer to the libel. In such case it is insisted that all the parties are before the court. And further, that it is not necessary upon an appeal to the circuit court of appeals, or to this court, that the pleadings show a demand for recoupment,—the hearing in both courts being a trial de novo.

The main proposition asserted may be conceded. It was the basis of our decision when the case was here on the first certiorari *and determined the judgment rendered. [367] 175 U. S. 187, 44 L. ed. 126, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 67. And if under some circumstances the other propositions could be applied (which is not necessary to decide), they cannot be under the circumstances of this case. The petitioner made no claim for a division of damages upon the original trial of the case. It asserted its own innocence and the entire guilt of the Conemaugh, and submitted that issue for judgment. It sought to escape all liability, not to divide liability, and on the issues hence arising judgments were entered against it, not only for the Conemaugh, but for the cargo owners, some having intervened, others still being represented by the Conemaugh. Petitioners maintained the same attitude in the circuit court of appeals and in this court. After the decision in this court it changed its attitude, and for justification says it had no earlier opportunity to do so. It urges that the decision of the district court was completely against it; the decision of the circuit court completely for it; and that the judgment from which its right of recoupment arose was rendered by this court.

But the controversy as presented by the pleadings was not only between the Conemaugh and the New York, but between the latter and cargo, and this court did not disturb the judgment obtained by the cargo owners against the New York. Explaining our decision we said:

"The only questions decided were as to the respective faults of the two vessels, and the claim of the underwriters upon the Conemaugh's cargo, that they were entitled to a recovery to the full amount of their damages against the New York, notwithstanding the Conemaugh was also in fault for the collision. This claim was sustained, and directions given to enter a decree in conformity to the opinion of this court."

[368] The decree against it, the New York now seeks to shift in part to the owners of the Conemaugh; indeed, not to shift it, but virtually to vacate it and put the claims of the cargo owners into controversy with the Conemaugh. This, we think, should not be done. The cargo owners' judgments were affirmed by this court, as we have seen, and they are none the less entitled to them under the circumstances of this record, although as to some of them they were represented by the Conemaugh. The *New York, having been in fault, was responsible to the cargo, and if, as between her and the Conemaugh, she have a claim for recoupment, the way is open to recover it. We think that the district court rightly construed our mandate.

2. Our mandate directed that a decree be entered "with interest from July 3, 1896, until paid at the same rate per annum that decrees bear in the courts of the state of Michigan." The district court and the circuit court of appeals found the rate to be 7 per cent. This is assigned as error.

The statute which provided for interest on judgments and decrees in Michigan at 7 per cent was enacted in 1838, and has been carried forward with amendments into the various compilations of the statutes, and appears as § 4865, Compiled Laws of Michigan of 1897. It is as follows:

"Interest may be allowed and received upon all judgments at law, for the recovery of any sums of money, and upon all decrees in chancery for the payment of any sums of money, whatever may be the form or cause of action or suit in which such judgment or decree shall be rendered or made; and such interest may be collected on execution, at the rate of 7 per centum per annum: Provided, That on a judgment rendered or any written instrument, having a different rate, the interest shall be computed at the rate specified in such instrument not exceeding 10 per centum."

This section, it is insisted by appellants, was repealed by a statute passed in 1891, which statute was entitled "An Act to Regulate the Interest of Money on Account, Interest on Money Judgments, Verdicts," etc., and provided as follows:

"Sec. 1. The people of the state of Michigan enact: That the interest of money shall be at the rate of $6 upon $100 for a year, and at the same rate for a greater or less sum, and for a longer or shorter time, except that in all cases it shall be lawful for the parties to stipulate in writing for the payment of any rate of interest not exceeding 8 per cent per annum: Provided, That this act shall not apply to existing contracts, whether the same be either due, not due, or part due."
189 U. S. U. S., Book 47.

"*Sec. 4. All acts or parts of acts contra- [369] vening the provisions of this act are hereby repealed."

Subsequently, the rate was reduced to 5 per cent by a statute passed September 22, 1899, which reads as follows:

"Sec. 1. That § 1 of act numbered 156 of Public Acts of 1891, entitled, 'An Act to Regulate the Interest of Money, on Account, Interest on Money Judgments, Verdicts,' etc., the same being compiler's § 1594 of volume 3 of Howell's Annotated Statutes, and § 4897 be, and the same is hereby, amended to read as follows:

"Sec. 1. The people of the state of Michigan enact: That the interest of money shall be at the rate of $5 upon $100 for a year, and at the same rate for a greater or less sum, and for a longer or shorter time, except that in all cases it shall be lawful for the parties to stipulate in writing for the payment of any rate of interest not exceeding 7 per cent per annum: Provided, That this act shall not apply to existing contracts, whether the same be either due, not due, or part due."

According to its title the act is one to regulate the interest of money on account and interest on money judgments. Section 1, however, provides only "that the interest of money shall be at the rate of $5 upon $100 for a year." It is urged, however, that § 1 must take meaning from the title of the act, and that by "interest of money" is meant "interest of money on account" and "interest on money judgments," and having that meaning it repeals § 4865, supra. But money on account and money judgments are distinguished in the title, and it is hard to suppose that the former was intended to include the latter in the body of the act. They are distinguished also in the prior statutes. "Interest of money" was provided for in § 3 of the act of 1838 in substantially the same language as in the acts of 1891 and 1899, and it is certain that it was not intended thereby to include interest on judgments and decrees. The *latter were provided for in § 8 of the [370] act of 1838, which became § 4865, and as such has been given a place in the compiled laws of the state ever since.

If it is anomalous, as urged by counsel and as observed by the circuit court of appeals, for legal interest in the state to be fixed at 5 per cent, and judgments left to bear 7 per cent, we cannot correct the anomaly. Nor can we regard the words "interest of money" to have been suddenly given a meaning in 1891 or 1899 different from that which they had borne for over fifty years in the statutes of the state with the intention to work by implication the repeal of a provision with which for the same length of time they were regarded as consistent.

Decree affirmed.

HARRIET M. ZANE, Petitioner,
v.
COUNTY OF HAMILTON, ILLINOIS.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 370-383.)

Contracts—impairment of obligation—purchase in reliance on the decisions of state courts.

A purchaser of county bonds issued in aid of a railroad, under the supposed authority of the act incorporating the road, which is subsequently held unconstitutional by the state courts because the provisions for the transfer to the railroad company of municipal subscriptions in aid of another railroad were not within its title, has no contract rights protected by the Federal Constitution against impairment because the purchase was made on the faith of prior decisions that municipal subscriptions to railroad stock were so far germane to railroad incorporation as not to require specific mention in the title of an act providing for the incorporation of a railroad.

[No. 115.]

*Argued and submitted December 5, 1902.
Decided April 6, 1903.*

ON WRIT of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Circuit Court for the Northern District of Illinois sustaining a demurrer to a declaration in an action on municipal bonds issued in aid of a railroad company. Affirmed.

See same case below, 43 C. C. A. 416, 104 Fed. 63.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. George A. Sanders argued the cause and filed a brief for petitioner.

Mr. J. M. Hamill submitted the cause for respondent.

Contentions of counsel sufficiently appear in the opinion.

Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an action brought in the United States circuit court for the southern district of Illinois on five coupon bonds which were issued to the St. Louis & Southeastern Railway Company, under a statute of the state of Illinois. The petitioner alleges she is a bona fide purchaser of the bonds. A copy of the bonds is inserted in the margin.† The following is a copy of the coupons attached to the bonds:

NOTE.—As to what laws are void as impairing obligation of contracts—see notes to Franklin County Grammar School v. Bailey (Vt.) 10 L. R. A. 405; Fletcher v. Peck, 3 L. ed. U. S. 162; McCanna & F. Co. v. Citizens' Trust & Surety Co. 24 C. C. A. 20; and Montana Ore-Purchasing Co. v. Boston & M. Consol. Copper & S. Min. Co. 35 C. C. A. 12.

As to change of decision of state court as impairing obligation of contract—see notes to Los Angeles v. Los Angeles City Water Co. 44 L. ed. U. S. 886, and Allen v. Allen (Cal.) 16 L. R. A. 646.

858

*35.00. 35.00 [379]
McLeansboro, Hamilton County, Illinois.
January 1st, 1872.

The County of Hamilton, in the State of Illinois, promises to pay the sum of thirty-five dollars on the first day of January, 1892, lawful money of the United States of America, being six months' interest on bond No. 46 for one thousand dollars, issued on †United States of America.

No. 36. $1,000.00
Bond of Hamilton County.
Interest seven per cent. Payable semiannually.
State of Illinois.

Know all men by these presents, that the county of Hamilton, in the state of Illinois, acknowledges itself indebted and firmly bound to the St. Louis & Southeastern Railway Company, or bearer, in the sum of one thousand dollars, lawful money of the United States of America, which sum said county, for value received, promises to pay the said company, or bearer, in the city and state of New York, twenty years after date, payable at any time before this bond becomes due after five years at the pleasure of said county of Hamilton, with interest thereon from the date hereof at the rate of seven per cent per annum, payable semiannually on the first days of January and July in each year, on the presentation and surrender, at the place in said city of New York where the treasurer of the state of Illinois pays the interest and debt of said state, of the coupons hereto attached as they severally become due.

This bond is one of two hundred of like tenor and amount, of same issue, and it is issued under and by virtue of the authority given by a majority of all the legal voters in said county, by their votes, at an election held in said county, pursuant to law, on the third day of November, A. D. 1868, and also by the authority given by the provisions of an act of the general assembly of the state of Illinois, in force March 10, A. D. 1869, entitled "An Act to Incorporate the St. Louis & Southeastern Railway Company."

This bond is also issued under the provisions of an act of the general assembly of the state of Illinois, in force April 16, A. D. 1869, entitled "An Act to Fund and Provide for the Payment of the Railroad Debts of Counties, Townships, Cities, and Towns."

This bond is issued in part payment of a subscription made by said county under and by virtue of the authority aforesaid, to the capital stock of the St. Louis & Southeastern Railway Company in the sum of two hundred thousand dollars.

In testimony whereof, the said county of Hamilton has executed this bond by the county judge of said county, under the order of the county court of said county, signing his name hereto, in open court, and by the clerk of said court, in obedience to the order thereof, attesting the same and affixing hereto the seal of the said court, in open court.

Done at the courthouse at McLeansboro, in said county, on this, the 23d day of October, Anno Domini 1871.

[SEAL.]

T. B. Steele,
County Judge of Hamilton County, Ill.

189 U. S.

subscription to the St. Louis & Southeastern Railway Company.

This coupon is payable in the city of New York.

J. W. Marshall, Clerk.

[380] *The bonds were a part of an issue of two hundred of like tenor and amount, save as to dates of issue, registration and numbers. There was a general demurrer filed to the declaration, which was sustained, and the case was taken to the circuit court of appeals for the seventh circuit. That court affirmed the judgment of the circuit court. 43 C. C. A. 416, 104 Fed. 63.

The question presented is the validity of the statute of the state under which the bonds were issued. The circuit court of appeals followed the case of People ex rel. Standerfer v. Hamill, 134 Ill. 666, 17 N. E. 799, 29 N. E. 280, and (quoting from the case) held that the statute was invalid "because § 20 of the act mentioned was void, as being in violation of the provision of the Constitution of the state (art. 3, § 23) that 'no private or local law . . . shall embrace more than one subject, and that shall be expressed in the title.'"

It was alleged in the declaration, and the bonds recited, that they were issued under the provisions of an act of the general assembly of the state of Illinois, in force March 10, 1869, entitled "An Act to Incorporate the St. Louis & Southeastern Railway Company," and also, under the provision of an act in force April 16, 1869, entitled "An Act to Fund and Provide for the Payment of Railroad Debts of Counties, Townships, Cities, and Towns."

The act of April 16, 1869, was a mere registration act, and, it is conceded, conferred no authority to issue the bonds. Ample authority, however, it is insisted, was given by the act of March 10, 1869. Secs. 15, 16, and 17 provided for the subscription by counties and cities and incorporated towns to the stock of the company, and the terms of issue and payment of the bonds, and § 20 provides as follows:

"And the said company may lease or purchase, upon such terms as may be agreed upon, any other railroad or part of railroad, either wholly or partially constructed, which may constitute or be adopted as part of their line; and by such lease or purchase they shall acquire, and become vested with, all the rights and franchises pertaining to said road or part of road in the right of way, construction, maintenance, and working thereof. And the county court of Gallatin county is hereby authorized and empowered to subscribe to the capital stock of this company the $100,000 or any part thereof heretofore voted by a majority of the legal voters of said county to the Shawneetown branch of the Illinois Central Railroad Company. And the county court of Hamilton county is hereby authorized and empowered to subscribe to the capital stock of this company the $100,000 or any part thereof voted by a majority of the legal voters of said county to the Mount Vernon Railroad Company.

"And it shall not be necessary to submit the question of making the several subscriptions in this section mentioned to the vote of the legal voters of said respective counties: Provided, That nothing herein shall be so construed as to prevent either of the counties mentioned in this section subscribing any other or larger amounts to the capital stock of this company than the amount mentioned in this section.

"This act shall be deemed a public act and shall be liberally construed for all purposes therein expressed and declared, and shall be in force from and after its passage."

As we have seen, this act was declared by the supreme court of the state in People ex rel. Standerfer v. Hamill, 134 Ill. 666, 17 N. E. 799, 29 N. E. 280, to be in violation of the Constitution of the state, and that the bonds issued under it were void. This decision, plaintiff in error contends, is contrary to prior decisions interpreting the Constitution of the state, and under the faith of which she purchased the bonds; and she insists that a contract hence arose which is protected by the Constitution of the United States. To support the contention a number of decisions are cited, but we do not consider it necessary to review them. The conclusion of plaintiff in error is but a deduction from them, and we need only consider the more direct cases.

In 83 Ill. 436, it was decided that the provisions of the Constitution, that "no private or local *law. . . shall embrace more [382] than one subject, and that shall be expressed in its title," did not require that the subject of the bill should be specifically and exactly expressed in the title, and it was concluded that when the title calls attention to the subject of the bill, although in general terms, it fulfills the requirement of the Constitution. In Ottawa v. People ex rel. Caton, 48 Ill. 233, it was held that the "adjuncts of the subject are not required to be expressed, or the modus operandi."

In Belleville & I. R. Co. v. Gregory (1853) 15 Ill. 20, 58 Am. Dec. 589, and Schuyler County v. People ex rel. Rock Island & A. R. Co. (1860) 25 Ill. 181, it was held that a subscription to the stock of a railroad company by a municipal corporation was so far germane to the incorporation of the railroad as not to require specific mention in the title of an act providing for the incorporation of such road. But whatever may be said of the reasoning of those cases, the contention of plaintiff in error goes beyond it. If an incorporation of a railroad and a subscription to its stock are parts of the same subject, the incorporation of one road and the transfer to it of the stock authorized to be taken in another road are certainly not parts of the same subject, more particularly when the subscription to the stock of the latter depended upon and was based upon the vote of the people of the county. And this the supreme court decided in People ex rel. Standerfer v. Hamill, 134 Ill. 666, 17 N. E. 799, 29 N. E. 280. It was also decided that the act of 1869 was a private and local act. The court said:

[381] 189 U. S.

"It is seen the act of March 10, 1869, to which reference is made as giving the requisite authority to the county to subscribe for the stock and issue the bonds, is 'An Act to Incorporate the St. Louis & Southeastern Railroad Company.' That is all it purports to be by its title. The Constitution of 1848, under which this act was passed, contained a restriction that 'no private or local law which may be passed by the general assembly shall embrace more than one subject, and that shall be expressed in the title.' This is a private or local act, and although the subscribing by counties, etc., to the capital stock of the corporation thereby created [383] is germane to the object *expressed in the title (Belleville & I. R. Co. v. Gregory, 15 Ill. 20, 58 Am. Dec. 589; Virden v. Allan, 107 Ill. 505), the diversion to that corporation of a subscription theretofore authorized by a vote of the people to be made to a different corporation is a wholly different thing. That, it is to be presumed, affects adversely the corporation from which the subscription voted is to be diverted, and is therefore clearly not germane to the title of the act, and § 20 must therefore be held to have been inhibited by the Constitution of 1848, and is for that reason void and of no effect. Lockport v. Gaylord, 61 Ill. 276; Middleport v. Aetna L. Ins. Co. 82 Ill. 562."

It was held in Belleville & I. R. Co. v. Gregory, 15 Ill. 20, 58 Am. Dec. 589, that the provision of the Constitution of that state could not be evaded by declaring a private act to be a public one.

From these views it follows that the bonds of plaintiff in error, having been illegally issued, do not constitute a contract which is protected by the Constitution of the United States.

Judgment affirmed.

DETROIT, FORT WAYNE, & BELLE ISLE RAILWAY, Plff. in Err.,
v.

CHASE S. OSBORN, Commissioner of Railroads.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 383-391.)

Error to state court—Federal question—constitutional law—due process of law—equal protection of laws—validity of order requiring safety appliances at grade crossings.

1. A decision of a state court refusing a petition for a writ of mandamus, in which re-lator claimed and set up a right under the Constitution of the United States, is tantamount to the denial of that right, and is therefore reviewable in the Supreme Court of the United States.

2. Neither due process of law nor the equal protection of the laws is denied a street railway company by an order of the commissioner of railroads made and issued under Mich. Pub. Acts 1893, act No. 171, § 5, requiring such street railway to pay one half of the expense of constructing and maintaining safety appliances at a grade crossing of a steam railroad which was not built until after the street railway had been constructed.
3. An objection that a state statute violates the Federal Constitution because it does not provide for notice to those who may be affected by it is not available to a party who was in fact given notice, and who at the hearing objected to the action proposed to be taken under such statute.

[No. 139.]

Argued January 15, 1903. Decided April 6, 1903.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Michigan to review a judgment which denied a petition for a writ of mandamus to vacate an order of a railroad commissioner requiring a street railway company to pay a portion of the expense of constructing and operating safety appliances at a grade crossing of a steam railroad. Affirmed.

See same case below, 127 Mich. 219, 86 N. W. 842.

Statement by Mr. Justice McKenna:

This case involves the legality of an order of the commissioner of railroads of the state of Michigan, requiring the plaintiff in error and the Union Terminal Association of Detroit, at their own cost and expense, to maintain and operate safety gates and derailling and signaling appliances at Clark avenue, in said city. The order is inserted in the margin.†

*The order was made and issued under act [385] 171 of the Public Acts of the state of 1893, § 5 of which provides as follows:

"The commissioner of railroads shall, as

†State of Michigan, }
Office of the Commissioner of Railroads. }
In Re Application of The Common Council of the City of Detroit for Additional Protection at the Clark Avenue Crossing of the Tracks of the Union Terminal Association, in the City of Detroit, County of Wayne, Michigan.

Application having been received by the commissioner of railroads from the common council of the city of Detroit, Wayne county, Michigan, for additional protection at the Clark avenue crossing of the tracks of the Union Terminal Association in said city of Detroit, Wayne county, Michigan;

And after a personal inspection of the premises aforesaid, and after hearing representations of the city officials of the city of Detroit, as well as the arguments of the representatives

NOTE.—On writs of error from United States Supreme Court to state courts—see notes to Hamblin v. Western Land Co. 37 L. ed. U. S. 860

267; Kipley v. Illinois, 42 L. ed. U. S. 998; and Re Buchanan, 39 L. ed. U. S. 884.

As to the right of a railroad company to com-
189 U. S.

soon as possible after the passage of this act, examine the crossings of the tracks of railroads and street railroads then existing, and order such changes made in the manner of such crossings, or such safeguards for protection against accidents to be provided thereat, as in his judgment ought to be so made or provided; and shall apportion any expense incidental thereto between the companies affected, as he may deem just and reasonable."

The statute and order are attacked as depriving the plaintiff in error of its property without due process of law, because compliance with the order "will involve the expenditure of a large sum of money; first, in the construction of the said safety devices, and, if the same are constructed, in the maintenance and repair thereof."

The plaintiff in error is a street railroad company incorporated under the laws of Michigan, and operates a railroad on certain streets of the city of Detroit, including Clark avenue. It succeeded in ownership and operation a company known as the Fort Street & Elmwood Avenue Railway, which was also a street railway corporation. The latter company was authorized to construct its road on Clark avenue, and under its grant did construct and operate its road thereon. "At the time the track was constructed" (we quote from the opinion of the supreme court of the state) "on Clark avenue there was no railroad, or highway, street, lane, or alley, or crossing of any kind over Clark avenue between Fort street and [386] the river *road. In 1882 or 1883 the Wabash Railroad constructed a single track across Clark avenue and across petitioner's tracks. Up to that time there had been no crossing over Clark avenue, between Fort street and the river road, of any kind,—either that of a railroad or a public highway, a private way, road, street, or alley. In the year 1893, or thereabouts, the union station was opened at the corner of Third and Fort streets, in Detroit; and since that time said station has been used jointly by the Wabash, the Detroit, Lansing, & Northern, the Flint & Pere Marquette, the Detroit & Lima Northern, and the Canadian Pacific railroads as a terminal point, the tracks over Clark avenue at this point having been increased from one to three to accommodate the increased traffic. These tracks are used as approaches to the union station, and incoming and outgoing trains and cars of all the foregoing roads, except the Canadian Pacific Railroad pass over said tracks. There are thirty-eight regular daily passenger trains crossing Clark avenue upon these tracks. Besides this, the Canadian Pacific uses the station as an eastern terminus, connecting with the other roads for purposes of through east and west traffic."

In 1893 the legislature of the state passed the act hereinbefore set out, and under its authority the defendant in error made the order complained of.

The case was submitted upon the petition of relator (plaintiff in error) and the answer of respondent (defendant in error), and the mandamus prayed for denied. 127 Mich. 219, 86 N. W. 842. This writ of error was then sued out.

Mr. John C. Donnelly argued the cause, and, with Mr. Michael Brennan, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

Where a public officer is given authority to determine that certain things should be done in the interests of public safety, and is given the further authority to impose the cost thereof upon certain individuals who are bound by his action, the matter is quasi-judicial in its character; and if the law does of the said railroad company above named in relation thereto, and having decided after due deliberation that the public interests required said additional protection at the said crossing;

Now, therefore, by authority vested in me by law, it is hereby ordered:

That within sixty days from date hereof, you, the said Union Terminal Association Railway Company, cause to be constructed and thereafter operated and maintained safety gates, and derailing and signaling appliances to be operated day and night by a watchman from a tower. Said tower to be constructed at the best point of vision at the said crossing, and so constructed that the said operator may have plain view of movements of all trains or cars on both of the respective lines. Derailers shall be provided and placed in the tracks of the Fort Wayne & Belle Isle Railway, not less than 75 feet from clearance point of crossing, and signals shall be placed on the tracks of the Union Terminal Association at a distance of not less than 600 feet from said crossing. Said derailleurs and signals to be operated by levers in said tower, and such levers to be properly interlocked.

And it is further ordered that cost and expense of the construction, maintenance, and operation of said gates, tower, and derailing and signaling appliance shall be borne by the Union Terminal Association and the Fort Wayne & Belle Isle Railway Company, equally, share and share alike. This appliance to be constructed in accordance with plans to be submitted to and approved by the commissioner of railroads within thirty days from date hereof, and such appliance to be further approved by the commissioner of railroads before being put into use. This order is subject to modification at any time when in the opinion of the commissioner of railroads the public safety will be more effectually secured.

penetration for laying street railway across railroad track at a street crossing—see note to Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. West Chicago Street R. Co. (Ill.) 29 L. R. A. 485.

As to what constitutes due process of law—see Kuntz v. Sumption (Ind.) 2 L. R. A. 655, and note; Re Gannon (R. I.) 5 L. R. A. 359, and note; Ulman v. Baltimore (Md.) 11 L. R. A. 224, and note; and Gilman v. Tucker (N. Y.) 13 L. R. A. 304, and note. And see notes to People v. O'Brien (N. Y.) 2 L. R. A. 255;

189 U. S.

Pearson v. Yewdall, 24 L. ed. U. S. 436; and Wilson v. North Carolina, 42 L. ed. U. S. 865.

On notice and hearing required to constitute due process of law—see notes to Kuntz v. Sumption (Ind.) 2 L. R. A. 657; Chauvin v. Valiton (Mont.) 3 L. R. A. 194; and Ulman v. Baltimore (Md.) 11 L. R. A. 225.

As to constitutional equality of privileges, immunities, and protection—see Louisville Safety Vault & T. Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. (Ky.) 14 L. R. A. 579, and note.

861

not in express terms, or by necessary implication arising from the language of the act itself, grant to the party against whom the judgment is rendered the right to a hearing before condemnation, such a proceeding and judgment amount to a deprivation of property without due process of law, within the meaning of the constitutional provision.

Garvin v. Daussman, 114 Ind. 429, 16 N. E. 826; Kuntz v. Sumption, 117 Ind. 1, 2 L. R. A. 655, 19 N. E. 474; Stuart v. Palmer, 74 N. Y. 183, 30 Am. Rep. 289; Ulman v. Baltimore, 72 Md. 587, 11 L. R. A. 224, 20 Atl. 141, 21 Atl. 709; Baltimore v. Scharf, 54 Md. 499, 39 Am. Rep. 397; Baltimore v. Johns Hopkins Hospital, 56 Md. 1; Speneer v. Merchant, 125 U. S. 345, 31 L. ed. 763, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 921; Whiteford Twp. v. Phinney, 53 Mich. 130; Paulsen v. Portland, 149 U. S. 30, 37 L. ed. 637, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 750; Railroad Tax Cases, 13 Fed. 722, 8 Sawy. 238; Sonoma County Tax Case, 8 Sawy. 312, 13 Fed. 789; Burns v. Multnomah R. Co. 8 Sawy. 543, 15 Fed. 183; Santa Clara County v. Southern P. R. Co. 9 Sawy. 165, 18 Fed. 410; Seifert v. Brooks, 34 Wis. 443; State ex rel. Flint v. Fond du Lac, 42 Wis. 287.

According to a fundamental principle of law, the railroad seeking an intersection must make compensation for all damages and loss that may result therefrom.

8 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 351; Opinion by Mr. Justice Brewer, Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Chicago, 166 U. S. 259, 41 L. ed. 994, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 992; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Bloomington, 76 Ill. 447.

A street railway which has been granted a franchise to occupy a public street acquires a right to use the same in common with other members of the traveling public, and is not an additional burden upon the street, but is merely an adaptation of the highway to a particular means of travel, and does not constitute an additional servitude. A railroad is, on the other hand, an additional servitude; and if it is built across a highway, it must do all things necessary to render the highway, for all its legitimate uses, as safe as it was before the railroad was built across it, or would be if such railroad were not built across it at all.

Chicago & C. Terminal R. Co. v. Whiting, H. & E. C. Street R. Co. 139 Ind. 297, 26 L. R. A. 337, 38 N. E. 604; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. West Chicago Street R. Co. 156 Ill. 255, 29 L. R. A. 485, and note, 40 N. E. 1008; New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. v. Bridgeport Traction Co. 65 Conn. 410, 29 L. R. A. 367, 32 Atl. 953; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Steel, 47 Neb. 741, 66 N. W. 830; Du Bois Tract & Pass. R. Co. v. Buffalo, R. & P. R. Co. 149 Pa. 1, 24 Atl. 179; Detroit City R. Co. v. Mills, 85 Mich. 64, 48 N. W. 1007; Nichols v. Ann Arbor & Y. Street R. Co. 87 Mich. 369, 16 L. R. A. 371, 49 N. W. 538; Mr. Justice Cooley in Grand Rapids & I. R. Co. v. Heisel, 38 Mich. 62, 31 Am. Rep. 306.

Mr. Fred A. Maynard argued the cause, and, with Mr. Horace M. Oren, filed a brief for defendant in error:

This court has no jurisdiction to review the judgment rendered by the supreme court of Michigan in this case.

Harrison v. Morton, 171 U. S. 38-47, 43 L. ed. 63-66, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 742; Eustis v. Bolles, 150 U. S. 361, 37 L. ed. 1111, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 131; Simmerman v. Nebraska, 116 U. S. 54, 29 L. ed. 535, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 333; California Powder Works v. Davis, 151 U. S. 389, 38 L. ed. 206, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 350; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Fitzgerald, 160 U. S. 556, 40 L. ed. 536, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 389; Fowler v. Lamson, 164 U. S. 252, 41 L. ed. 424, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 112; Iowa C. R. Co. v. Iowa, 160 U. S. 389, 40 L. ed. 467, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 344; Long Island Water Supply Co. v. Brooklyn, 166 U. S. 635, 41 L. ed. 1165, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 718; Miller v. Cornwall R. Co. 168 U. S. 131, 42 L. ed. 409, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 34; Chappell Chemical & Fertilizer Co. v. Sulphur Mines Co. 172 U. S. 465, 43 L. ed. 517, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 265; New Orleans Waterworks Co. v. Louisiana Sugar Ref. Co. 125 U. S. 18, 31 L. ed. 607, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 741; Clark v. Pennsylvania, 128 U. S. 395, 32 L. ed. 487, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 2, 113; De Saussure v. Gaillard, 127 U. S. 216, 32 L. ed. 125, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1053; Endowment Benev. Asso. v. Kansas, 120 U. S. 103, 30 L. ed. 593, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 499; Chureh v. Kelscy, 121 U. S. 282, 30 L. ed. 960, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 897; Kennebec & P. R. Co. v. Portland & K. R. Co. 14 Wall. 25, 20 L. ed. 850; Rector v. Ashley, 6 Wall. 142, 18 L. ed. 733; Gibson v. Choutcau, 8 Wall. 314, 19 L. ed. 317; Klinger v. Missouri, 13 Wall. 257, 20 L. ed. 635; Detroit City R. Co. v. Guthard, 114 U. S. 133, 29 L. ed. 118, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 811.

It is the peculiar province and privilege of the state courts to construe their own statutes; and it is no part of the functions of the Supreme Court to review their decisions, except when specially authorized so to do.

Commercial Bank v. Buckingham, 5 How. 317, 12 L. ed. 169; Adams v. Preston, 22 How. 473, 16 L. ed. 273; Congdon v. Goodman, 2 Black, 574, 17 L. ed. 257; Smith v. Adsit, 16 Wall. 185, 21 L. ed. 310; Klinger v. Missouri, 13 Wall. 257, 20 L. ed. 635; Murray v. Gibson, 15 How. 421, 14 L. ed. 755; Nichol v. Levy, 5 Wall. 433, 18 L. ed. 596.

And this is true, although the position of the state court is an unsound one.

De Saussure v. Gaillard, 127 U. S. 216, 32 L. ed. 125, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1053.

This court supervises decisions of state courts only when a Federal question arises, and, of its own motion, will deny its jurisdiction unless it affirmatively appears on the face of the record, although neither party makes the point in argument.

King Iron Bridge & Mfg. Co. v. Otoe County, 120 U. S. 225, 30 L. ed. 623, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 552.

The bare averment of a Federal question is not, in all cases, sufficient. It must not be wholly without foundation.

Millingar v. Hartupce, 6 Wall. 258, 18 L. ed. 829; Hamblin v. Western Land Co. 147 U. S. 532, 37 L. ed. 268, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 353; New Orleans v. New Orleans Waterworks Co. 142 U. S. 79, 35 L. ed. 943, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep.

142; St. Louis G. & Ft. S. R. Co. v. Missouri, 156 U. S. 478, 39 L. ed. 502, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 443; Wilson v. North Carolina, 169 U. S. 586-595, 42 L. ed. 865, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 435; St. Paul, M. & M. R. Co. v. St. Paul & N. P. R. Co. 15 C. C. A. 167, 32 U. S. App. 372, 68 Fed. 11.

There was a waiver of notice by appearance.

2 Lewis, Em. Dom. § 379; East Saginaw & St. C. R. Co. v. Benham, 28 Mich. 459; Dunning v. Township Drain Comr. 44 Mich. 519, 7 N. W. 239; Soller v. Brown Twp. 67 Mich. 422, 34 N. W. 888.

Railroad corporations may be compelled to adopt such appliances and make such additions or changes in their works or property, and take such precautions, as are necessary to the public safety.

New York & N. E. R. Co. v. Bristol, 151 U. S. 566, 38 L. ed. 272, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 437; New York & N. E. R. Co.'s Appeal, 58 Conn. 532, 20 Atl. 670.

The rule of no additional servitude is restricted to the case where the street railroad is within the corporate limits of a city and used solely for carrying passengers.

Taylor v. Bay City Street R. Co. 80 Mich. 77, 45 N. W. 335; Detroit City R. Co. v. Mills, 85 Mich. 634, 48 N. W. 1007; Nichols v. Ann Arbor & Y. Street R. Co. 87 Mich. 361, 16 L. R. A. 371, 49 N. W. 538; Booth, Street Railways, §§ 54, 222, 231; Hannah v. Metropolitan Street R. Co. 81 Mo. App. 78; Southern R. Co. v. Atlanta R. & Power Co. 111 Ga. 679, 51 L. R. A. 125, 36 S. E. 873; La Crosse City R. Co. v. Higbee, 107 Wis. 389, 51 L. R. A. 923.

This order of the railroad commissioner is a simple and just exercise of the police power of the state, delegated to him by the legislature.

Pearsall v. Great Northern R. Co. 161 U. S. 646-665, 40 L. ed. 838-844, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 705; Gladson v. Minnesota, 166 U. S. 427, 430, 41 L. ed. 1064, 1066, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 627; Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Chicago, 140 Ill. 309, 29 N. E. 1109-1111; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Milwaukee, 97 Wis. 418, 72 N. W. 1118; Tiedeman, Pol. Power, §§ 179, 194; Booth, Street Railways, 220-226; Joyce, Electric Law, § 477. See also Elliott, Roads and Streets, 2d ed. § 459.

It is entirely competent for the legislature to require of corporations every reasonable and expedient change in the method of operating their roads and conducting their business, which may be necessary to promote the security, convenience, and comfort of the public; and the expense may be imposed on the corporations owning and operating such roads within the state. Such statutes are not in conflict with any provision of the Federal Constitution.

Grand Rapids v. Bennett, 106 Mich. 528, 64 N. W. 585, and other Michigan cases cited therein; Old Colony R. Corp. v. Plymouth County, 14 Gray, 155; Searle v. Laekawanna & B. R. Co. 33 Pa. 57; Peoria & P. U. R. Co. v. Peoria & F. R. Co. 105 Ill. 110; Chicago & A. R. Co. v. Joliet, L. & A. R. Co. 105 Ill. 388, 44 Am. Rep. 799; Commissioner of Parks v. 189 U. S.

Michigan C. R. Co. 90 Mich. 385, 51 N. W. 447; Commissioner of Parks v. Chicago, D. & C. G. T. Junction R. Co. 91 Mich. 292, 51 N. W. 934; Flint & P. M. R. Co. v. Detroit & B. C. R. Co. 64 Mich. 370, 31 N. W. 281; People v. Detroit, G. H. & M. R. Co. 79 Mich. 474, 7 L. R. A. 717, 44 N. W. 934; New York & N. E. R. Co. v. Bristol, 151 U. S. 556, 38 L. ed. 269, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 437; Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Chicago, 140 Ill. 317, 29 N. E. 1109; Charlotte, C. & A. R. Co. v. Gibbes, 142 U. S. 386, 35 L. ed. 1051, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255; Maine C. R. Co. v. Waterville & F. R. & Light Co. 89 Me. 328, 36 Atl. 453; Fitchburg R. Co. v. Grand Junction R. & Depot Co. 4 Allen, 198; Pittsburg & C. R. Co. v. South-west Pennsylvania R. Co. 77 Pa. 173; State use of School Fund v. Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co. 83 Mo. 144.

The state, in the exercise of its police power, may impose a burden upon a street railway corporation that it cannot upon a private citizen, for the reason that the latter can use the highway without a license from the public authorities, while the corporation that wishes to use the street to make money for itself must obtain such license.

State v. Canal & C. R. Co. 50 La. Ann. 1189, 56 L. R. A. 287, 24 So. 265.

Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

1. A motion is made to dismiss the writ of error on the *ground that the record exhibits no Federal question. The motion is denied. The plaintiff claimed and set up a right under the Constitution of the United States, and the decision of the supreme court of the state was tantamount to the denial of that right. Kaukauna Water Power Co. v. Green Bay & M. Canal Co. 142 U. S. 254, 35 L. ed. 1004, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 173.

2. The argument of plaintiff in error on the merits is that it was the first to occupy Clark avenue; that at that time there was no public highway or street crossing at such avenue; that subsequently the steam railroads laid their tracks, the Wabash Railway Company being the first to do so, but installed no safety devices of any kind, "though it were the junior company;" that the tracks on the other railroads were subsequently constructed and are controlled by the Union Terminal Company. It is hence asserted that the plaintiff in error cannot be made liable for any part of the cost of safety devices, because it is the settled constitutional law of Michigan that its occupation constituted no additional burden upon the highway, but is simply a method of using the highway for the purpose of public travel and "in direct furtherance of the purpose for which the highway was established; that the street railroad company, in contemplation of the law, bears no different relation to the highway than that of any other person using the highway for the moving of vehicles or for any other method of public or private travel, and cannot, as between others using the highway for like purposes, be required alone to bear the expense of installing and maintaining safety devices at steam railroad crossings designed for the protection of all the traveling public."

And, further, it is also a well-established principle of the constitutional law of Michigan, that a junior road seeking to cross another cannot shift any portion of the expense of maintaining safety devices without compensation, though the senior company did not insist upon the installation of the devices or compensation at the time the tracks of the junior company were constructed. In other words, it is asserted that the dangerous condition arose, and yet arises, from the steam railroads, and on them alone can the cost of safety devices be legally imposed.

[388] *3. It is also insisted that the law is unconstitutional because it does not provide for notice.

(1) It was conceded by the supreme court of the state that it was the law of the state that the compensation for the damages caused by crossing the tracks of a railroad by another railroad or by a highway included the cost of making the highway safe. But the court said: "An examination of these cases will show they were all cases where it was sought to obtain a right of way either for a railroad across a highway or for a highway across a railroad, or a crossing for one railroad over the right of way of another; and none of the cases relate to the question involved here, as to who shall bear the expense of additional safeguards ordered upon roads which have crossed each other for a long period of time."

And besides this element of time, the court said that there were other elements of damage which were either too remote or depended upon the relation of the roads to the state. Both elements are important. The conditions which exist to-day could not have been contemplated years ago, or be the measure of the rights and relations of the respective roads. Those rights and relations were necessarily determined at the time the crossings were made. What could not be foreseen could not have been made a ground of action, and if the growth of business and population can give rights to either of the bisecting roads it is not clear how the police power of the state can be limited in its control over either of them. The supreme court of the state recognized this, and fortified its views by Michigan cases.

In Flint & P. M. R. Co. v. Detroit & B. O. R. Co. 64 Mich. 350, 31 N. W. 281, the court in an elaborate opinion expressed the rules of compensation when the right of one road to cross the tracks of another was sought by condemnation proceedings. In that case compensation was claimed, not only for the use of the crossing, but for the cost of maintaining signals or a cross system, cost of a watchman, and cost of stopping trains. These items were rejected. There was some uncertainty in the evidence, and the items for maintaining signals or the crossing system were disallowed on that ground, *but the court pointed out the difference between a "structural change in the property," for which compensation should be given, and those things which may be required by the legislature in the exercise of police regulations, as to which the roads "stand upon an equality before the law, and neither can levy tribute upon the other as a compensation for obedience to its requirements." And such regulations, it was observed, "are as binding upon an existing road as one newly organized." The court cited the case of Massachusetts C. R. Co. v. Boston, C. & F. R. Co. 121 Mass. 124, where Mr. Justice Gray, then chief justice of the supreme judicial court of Massachusetts, expressed the law as follows:

"A railroad corporation across whose road another railroad or highway is laid out has the like right as all individuals or bodies politic and corporate owning lands or easements, to recover damages for the injury occasioned to its title or right in the land occupied by its road, taking into consideration any fences or structures upon the land, or changes in its surface, absolutely required by law, or in fact necessary to be made by the corporation injured, in order to accommodate its own land to the new condition. Com. v. Boston & M. R. Co. 3 Cush. 25, 53; Old Colony & F. River R. Co. v. Plymouth County, 14 Gray, 155; Grand Junction R. Co. v. Middlesex County, 14 Gray, 553. But it is not entitled to damages for the interruption and inconvenience occasioned to its business; nor for the increased liability to damages from accidents; nor for increased expense for ringing the bell; nor for the risk of being ordered by the county commissioners, when in their judgment the safety and convenience of the public may require it, to provide additional safeguards for travelers crossing its railroad. Proprietors of Locks and Canals v. Nashua & L. R. Corp. 10 Cush. 385, 392; Boston & W. R. Corp. v. Old Colony R. Corp. 12 Cush. 605, 611, and 3 Allen, 142, 146; Old Colony & F. River R. Co. v. Plymouth County, 14 Gray, 155."

It is, however, contended that a street railway has a different relation to a street than that which a steam railroad has; that the former "acquires a right to use the same in common with *other members of the traveling public, and is not an additional burden upon the street, but is merely an adaptation of the highway to a particular means of travel, and does not constitute an additional servitude. A railroad is, on the other hand, an additional servitude, and if it is built across a highway it must do all things necessary to render the highway, for all its legitimate uses, as safe as it was before the railroad was built across it, or would be if such railroad were not built across it at all."

It may be that this difference is recognized as to abutting property owners or crossing railroads, but it cannot be recognized as limiting or affecting the power of the state to regulate the management of the roads in view of the danger of their operation to the public. Whether electricity be the motive power, or steam be the motive power, there is enough danger in the operation of either to justify regulation. The record in this case shows that there are thirty-eight daily passenger trains crossing Clark avenue, and that the cars of the plaintiff in error pass every few minutes. It is manifest, as the supreme court of the state observed, that the crossing "is a place of unusual danger, not only to the passengers in steam cars, but also to the passengers in the electric cars," and that the danger is caused by both. In such situation the city is surely not powerless to act, nor before acting must it ascertain the exact quantum of damage caused by each road, and by that standard assign the cost of protecting the public. See Maine C. R. Co. v. Waterville & F. R. & Light Co. 89 Me. 328, 36 Atl. 453.

It is also objected to the order that it deprives plaintiff in error of the equal protection of the laws. The argument to support this contention is an extension of that which claims that the use of the street by the plaintiff in error "is merely an adaptation of the highway to the particular means of travel." And it is deduced that an electric street railway has an equality of rights with ordinary vehicles. That we think there is a difference between ordinary vehicles and cars propelled by electricity, which may be recognized by the state in the exercise of its police power, we have sufficiently indicated.

(2) The objection that the statute does [391] not provide for notice *seems to be made for the first time in this court. It is not mentioned in the majority opinion nor in the dissenting opinion. It is not particularized in the petition for the writ of error nor in the assignment of errors. In the petition for this writ of error it is recited that the plaintiff in error in its application for mandamus claimed that the order of the railroad commissioners was invalid because it deprived plaintiff in error of its property without due process of law and denied it the equal protection of the laws. And also recited that on the "issue framed therein said cause went to a final hearing." The cause was submitted on petition and answer, and the petition alleged "that notice was given by respondent to relator and the Union Terminal Association, and the hearing had, at which relator's representative objected to the making of said order." It is, therefore, not open to the plaintiff in error to complain that the statute does not provide for notice.

Judgment affirmed

UNITED STATES, Plff. in Err.,

v.

MISSION ROCK COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 391-408.)

Waters—control of state over tide lands—right to convey free from easement—naval reservation—construction of President's order.

1. The state of California has the right to convey its title to tide lands contiguous to, and immediately surrounding, certain islands in the bay of San Francisco, free from any easement appurtenant to such islands.

2. The order of the President of January 13, 1899, reserving for naval purposes "Mission Island and the small island southeast thereof" in the bay of San Francisco, cannot be construed as an appropriation for such purposes of the surrounding tide land, which had been reclaimed by a grantee from the state of California, and upon which had been erected extensive warehouses and wharves.

[No. 198.]

Argued March 11, 1903. Decided April 13, 1903.

IN ERROR to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit to review a judgment reversing a judgment of the Circuit Court for the Northern District of California in favor of the United States in an action of ejectment, and remanding the cause, with instructions to enter judgment for the recovery of a portion only of the property sued for. Affirmed.

See same case below, 48 C. C. A. 641, 109 Fed. 763.

Statement by Mr. Justice McKenna:

Ejectment brought in the circuit court of the United States, ninth circuit, northern district of California, by the United States against the California Dry Dock Company. Pending the hearing, the latter company sold and transferred its title to the Mission Rock Company, a corporation, which thereupon entered into possession of the property. By stipulation the Mission Rock Company was substituted as defendant, and an amended and supplemental complaint was filed.

The property sued for was described by metes and bounds, and, it was alleged, constituted a "tract of land, being a square, including the rock known as Mission rock, and containing 14.69 acres, more or less, and being a fractional part of the westerly half of section 11, township 2 south, range 5 west, Mount Diablo base and meridian." Damages and rents and profits were also prayed, in the sum of $355,000.

By consent the case was tried by the court, and its findings, as far as material, are as follows:

"II. At the date of the admission of the state of California* into the Union, the pre-[393] mises sued for consisted of two rocks or islands adjacent to one another and projecting above the plane of ordinary high water in the bay of San Francisco, the larger of which rose to a height of more than 20 and less than 40 feet above such high water. Also of other lands contiguous thereto and surrounding said rocks or islands, which were completely submerged and over which the daily tides continuously flowed and

NOTE.—On the right of owner of upland to access to navigable water—see note to State ex rel. Denny v. Bridges (Wash.) 40 L. R. A. 593.

As to the separation of riparian rights from 189 U. S.

upland—see note to Gratz v. Land & River Improv. Co. (C. C. App. 7th C.) 40 L. R. A. 393.

On title to land under water—see note to Goff v. Cougle (Mich.) 42 L. R. A. 161.

ebbed. The rocks or islands referred to are laid down on the chart in this cause, and marked Exhibit 'A.'

"III. The areas of these rocks or islands above ordinary high-water mark at the time of the admission of the state of California into the Union were as follows: The one on the chart called 'Mission rock' had an area of fourteen one-hundredths (14-100) of an acre; the other had an area of one one-hundredth (1-100) of an acre. These rocks or islands rose abruptly out of the bay of San Francisco. Their sides to the extent that they were covered and uncovered by the flow and ebb of the tide varied from 10 to 25 feet, depending on their steepness. Both rocks were barren, without soil or water, and were of no value for purposes agricultural or mineral. They lay at a distance of about half a mile of the then shore line of that part of the bay upon which the city of San Francisco fronted. Navigable water divided and still divides the lands sued for from the mainland, and surrounded and now surrounds them.

"IV. The lands described in the complaint were not, at the date of the admission of the state of California into the Union, within the boundaries of any valid private or pueblo grant of lands of the Spanish or Mexican governments.

"V. No approved plat of the exterior limits of the city of San Francisco, as provided by the terms of § 5 of the act of July 1, 1864 (13 Stat. 332), has been filed or rendered to the General Land Office of the United States, or of the state of California. The lands sued for in this action are within such exterior limits.

"VI. On the 13th day of January, 1899, the President of the United States, purporting to act in conformity with the act of July 1, 1864, already referred to, issued the following order:

"Executive Mansion, January 13, 1899.

"It is hereby ordered that the Mission island and the small island southeast thereof, designated on the official plat on file in the General Land Office, approved October 12, 1898, as lots 1 and 2 of section 11, township 2 south, range 5 west, Mount Diablo meridian, California, containing, according to the plat, fourteen one-hundredths of an acre and one one-hundredth of an acre, respectively, be, and they are hereby, declared as permanently reserved for naval purposes.

William McKinley.

394] *"VII. On the day of March, 1864, the United States surveyor general for the state of California extended the public survey so as to comprehend and include the rocks or islands and the lands in controversy in the present suit.

"VIII. On April 4, 1870, the governor of the state of California approved an act of the legislature of the state entitled, 'An Act to Provide for the Sale and Conveyance of Certain Submerged Lands in the City and County of San Francisco to Henry B. Tichenor,' which act as printed in the statutes of California for the years 1870, 1871, at page 801, is hereby referred to and made part hereof."

"The lands herein described include the lands sued for in this action.

"On the 11th day of July, 1872, the state of California, in conformity with said act, issued its patent for the said lands to said Henry B. Tichenor, purporting to convey the same to him. Said patent was duly recorded in liber 1 of Records of Patents, page 66.

"After execution of the said patent, the said Tichenor executed and delivered a deed of grant, bargain, and sale, dated May 1, 1878, purporting to convey the said lands to the California Dry Dock Company, which thereafter, on the 6th day of June, 1900, executed and delivered to the Mission Rock Company, the defendant, a like deed to the said lands. The last-named company has not, since said date, conveyed to any person or corporation the said lands.

"IX. The California Dry Dock Company, upon going into possession of said lands so conveyed, undertook the improvement of the same by filling in portions of the submerged lands immediately around and contiguous to said islands or rocks, with many thousands of tons of rock, thus increasing the available area of said lands to about 4 acres, upon which extensive warehouses were built by it, and wharves erected for the accommodation of shipping.

"Since the issuance of the state patent hereinbefore referred to, the patentee thereof up to May 1, 1878, the California Dry Dock Company from said time to the 6th day of June, 1900, and the defendant from said last-named date to the present *time have been in continuous and uninterrupted possession of the said lands, using the same and the improvements thereon for commercial purposes, and claiming to be the absolute owner thereof." [395]

The conclusion of the court was that the United States was entitled to the lands sued for, without damages or rents and profits, and judgment was entered accordingly.

The circuit court of appeals reversed the judgment, and remanded the cause, with instructions "to enter judgment for the plaintiff for the recovery of the possession of the two islands or rocks mentioned in the record, containing, respectively, 14-100 of an acre, and 1-100 of an acre, and designated on the official plat on file in the General Land Office, approved October 12, 1898, as lots 1 and 2 of section 11, township 2 south, range 5 west, Mount Diablo meridian, California; and as respects the remainder of the land sued for, that the plaintiff take nothing." 48 C. C. A. 641, 109 Fed. 763. This writ of error was thereupon sued out.

Solicitor General Richards argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

Upon the acquisition of California from Mexico, the United States became the owner of all the land in California, both the tide lands and the upland.

San Francisco v. LeRoy, 138 U. S. 656, 34 189 U. S.

L. ed. 1096, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 364; Knight v. United Land Asso. 142 U. S. 161, 35 L. ed. 974, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 258.

The tide or submerged lands the United States took in trust for the future state of California.

San Francisco v. LeRoy, 138 U. S. 656, 34 L. ed. 1096, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 364; Knight v. United Land Asso. 142 U. S. 161, 35 L. ed. 974, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 258.

The land, which, under this doctrine, went to the original states when the Revolution took place, and to the subsequent states upon their admission to the Union, is submerged lands,—land under water,—not land above water. The control over the navigable waters included the ownership, in trust for the people, of the soils covered by such water.

Martin v. Waddell, 16 Pet. 367, 10 L. ed. 997; Weber v. State Harbor Comrs. 18 Wall. 57, 21 L. ed. 798; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Illinois, 146 U. S. 387, 36 L. ed. 1018, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 110; Shively v. Bowlby, 152 U. S. 1, 38 L. ed. 331, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 548.

The island or islands known as Mission Rock never had been, nor are they now, tide land, or submerged land, or soil under navigable waters.

Com. v. Shaw, 14 Serg. & R. 9.

Carried to its logical conclusion, the contention that, if there was any land reserved under the act admitting California as a state, it was only "public lands," meaning thereby land "subject to sale or other disposal under general laws," would strip the United States of all its lands except such as were open for pre-emption and sale under general laws.

Leavenworth, L. & G. R. Co. v. United States, 92 U. S. 733, 23 L. ed. 634; Wilcox v. Jackson, ex dem. McConnel, 13 Pet. 498, 10 L. ed. 264; Newhall v. Sanger, 92 U. S. 761, 23 L. ed. 769; Doolan v. Carr, 125 U. S. 618, 31 L. ed. 844, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1228; Mann v. Tacoma Land Co. 153 U. S. 273, 38 L. ed. 714, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 820.

Parts of the public domain may be reserved from pre-emption or sale, and set apart for public uses.

Grisar v. McDowell, 6 Wall. 363, 18 L. ed. 863.

Submerged lands surrounding an island in the Bay of San Francisco, half a mile from shore, and separated from it by navigable waters, could not be conveyed or used except in connection with the island which they surrounded.

Illinois C. R. Co. v. Illinois, 146 U. S. 387, 36 L. ed. 1018, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 110.

The state had no power to convey the lands, to be held distinct from Mission Rock and in opposition to the title of the United States to one of its islands.

Stockham v. Browning, 18 N. J. Eq. 390; E. G. Blakslee Mfg. Co. v. E. G. Blakslee's Sons Iron Works, 129 N. Y. 155, 29 N. E. 2.

The title of the United States to Mission Rock was absolute and unqualified, and the authority of the United States over the surrounding navigable waters and submerged land was supreme; the right of the state in the interests of navigation and commerce being subordinate to that of the United States.

United States v. Bellingham Bay Boom Co. 176 U. S. 211, 44 L. ed. 437, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 343.

Whether the title to the submerged lands of navigable waters is in the state or in the riparian owners, it was acquired subject to the rights which the public have in the navigation of such waters.

Scranton v. Wheeler, 179 U. S. 141, 45 L. ed. 126, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 48.

Whatever right the state held in the tide lands or submerged lands surrounding the island was subordinate and subservient to right of access to the navigable water, which went with the upland.

Dutton v. Strong, 1 Black, 1, 17 L. ed. 339; Weber v. State Harbor Comrs. 18 Wall. 57, 21 L. ed. 798; Yates v. Milwaukee, 10 Wall. 497, 19 L. ed. 984; Lake Superior Land Co. v. Emerson, 38 Minn. 406, 38 N. W. 200; Hanford v. St. Paul & D. R. Co. 43 Minn. 104, 42 N. W. 596.

The improvements made at Mission Rock were of such a character that they necessarily became, when made, a part of the island itself, impossible to be separated, and therefore the property of the owner of the island.

Ledyard v. Ten Eyck, 36 Barb. 102; Nichols v. Lewis, 15 Conn. 137.

Respecting the authority of the President to set aside parcels of land belonging to the United States for particular public uses, see —

Grisar v. McDowell, 6 Wall. 363, 18 L. ed. 863, 17 Ops. Atty. Gen. 160.

The United States as the owner of this island had the right of access to the navigable waters surrounding it.

Shirley v. Bishop, 67 Cal. 543, 8 Pac. 82; Gould, Waters, 3d ed. § 174; 1 Dill. Mun. Corp. 4th ed. 169; Potomac S. B. Co. v. Upper Potomac S. B. Co. 109 U. S. 673, 27 L. ed. 1070, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 445, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 15; Polhemus v. Bateman, 60 N. J. L. 163, 37 Atl. 1015; Sayre v. Newark, 60 N. J. Eq. 361, 48 L. R. A. 722, 45 Atl. 985.

Mr. Charles Page argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Edward J. McCutchen and Samuel Knight, filed a brief for defendant in error:

A state upon admission becomes endowed with all the rights over persons and property which the original states had and have, except so far as any such rights may be specially and expressly reserved by the United States.

Pollard v. Hagen, 3 How. 221, 11 L. ed. 570; Shively v. Bowlby, 152 U. S. 27, 38 L. ed. 341, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 548; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Illinois, 146 U. S. 434, 36 L. ed. 1018, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 110; Ft. Leavenworth R. Co. v. Lowe, 114 U. S. 526, 29 L. ed. 264, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 995.

It has been uniformly held that, upon the admission of a state into the Union, the tide lands or the lands under tide waters vest in the state.

There is no distinction between lands diurnally covered and uncovered by the tides, and lands which are constantly covered by the tides, even when at their lowest stage.

Pollard v. Hagen, 3 How. 230, 11 L. ed. 574; Gilman v. Philadelphia, 3 Wall. 726, 18 L. ed. 100; Martin v. Waddell, 16 Pet. 410, 10 L. ed. 1012; San Francisco v. LeRoy, 138 U. S. 671, 34 L. ed. 1101, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 364; Weber v. State Harbor Comrs. 18 Wall. 65, 21 L. ed. 802; Lowndes v. Huntington, 153 U. S. 1, 38 L. ed. 615, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 758.

The fact that there is no tide land in the Great Lakes does not affect the right of the state. That right is the right to the soil under its navigable waters.

Illinois C. R. Co. v. Illinois, 146 U. S. 436, 36 L. ed. 1037, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 110; Morris v. United States, 174 U. S. 236, 43 L. ed. 960, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 649; Mann v. Tacoma Land Co. 153 U. S. 273, 38 L. ed. 714, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 820; Knight v. United Land Asso. 142 U. S. 183, 35 L. ed. 982, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 258; Hardin v. Jordan, 140 U. S. 381, 35 L. ed. 433, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 808, 838; Packer v. Bird, 137 U. S. 661, 34 L. ed. 819, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 270; St. Clair County v. Livingston, 23 Wall. 64, 23 L. ed. 62; Barney v. Keokuk, 94 U. S. 336, 24 L. ed. 224; Gilman v. Philadelphia, 3 Wall. 726, 18 L. ed. 100; Mumford v. Wardwell, 6 Wall. 436, 18 L. ed. 761; Smith v. Maryland, 18 How. 74, 15 L. ed. 269; Goodtitle v. Kibbe, 9 How. 471, 13 L. ed. 220; Pacific Gas Improv. Co. v. Ellert, 64 Fed. 421. See also Oakland v. Oakland Water Front Co. 118 Cal. 182, 50 Pac. 277.

The right of the state to its navigable waters includes the right to the fish in them and the use of the beds for the planting of oysters, to the exclusion of the citizens of other states.

McCready v. Virginia, 94 U. S. 391, 24 L. ed. 248; Smith v. Maryland, 18 How. 74, 15 L. ed. 269; Huntington v. Lowndes, 40 Fed. 630.

The United States may appropriate tide lands though sold by the state, if the necessities of commerce shall require them; but if they have been improved, they can be taken only upon due compensation made.

Scranton v. Wheeler, 6 C. C. A. 585, 16 U. S. App. 152, 57 Fed. 812; Monongahela Nav. Co. v. United States, 148 U. S. 312, 37 L. ed. 463, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 622.

The state may create an obstruction to navigation when commerce will be thereby aided.

Gilman v. Philadelphia, 3 Wall. 713, 18 L. ed. 96; Assante v. Charleston Bridge Co. 41 Fed. 365; Rhca v. Newport N. & M. Valley R. Co. 50 Fed. 16; Willamette Bridge Co. v. Hatch, 125 U. S. 1, 31 L. ed. 629, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 811.

The state may, in aid of its own commerce, remove obstructions, deepen channels, and improve them generally, if such acts do not impair their navigation, or defeat any system provided by the general government.

Mobile County v. Kimball, 102 U. S. 699, 26 L. ed. 240.

To give to the United States the right to transfer to a citizen the title to the shores and the soils under the navigable waters would be placing in their hands a weapon which might be wielded greatly to the injury of state sovereignty, and deprive the states of the power to exercise a numerous and important class of police powers.

Pollard v. Hagen, 3 How. 230, 11 L. ed. 574.

The reason for conceding the right of the state to the lands under navigable waters applies equally to the rocks that project from such waters.

Shively v. Bowlby, 152 U. S. 1, 49, 38 L. ed. 331, 349, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 548.

The admission of the state on an equal footing with the original states gave to it all property above and below high water, not already given into private ownership, or not reserved by the United States in the act of admission.

Nichols v. Boston, 98 Mass. 42, 93 Am. Dec. 132; Shively v. Bowlby, 152 U. S. 1, 38 L. ed. 336, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 548; People v. Godfrey, 17 Johns. 230, 9 Am. Dec. 203; Ft. Leavenworth R. Co. v. Lowe, 114 U. S. 538, 29 L. ed. 269, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 995.

The words "public lands" do not include lands below high-water mark.

Mann v. Tacoma Land Co. 153 U. S. 273, 38 L. ed. 714, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 820; Leavenworth, L. & G. R. Co. v. United States, 92 U. S. 733, 23 L. ed. 634; Doolan v. Carr, 125 U. S. 618, 31 L. ed. 844, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1228; Newhall v. Sanger, 92 U. S. 761, 23 L. ed. 769; Shively v. Bowlby, 152 U. S. 49, 38 L. ed. 349, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 548; Morris v. United States, 174 U. S. 237, 43 L. ed. 961, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 649; Barney v. Keokuk, 94 U. S. 324, 338, 24 L. ed. 224, 228; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Illinois, 146 U. S. 387, 36 L. ed. 1018, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 110; State v. Pacific Guano Co. 22 S. C. 50; Allegheny City v. Reed, 24 Pa. 39.

Mr. Charles Page also filed a supplemental brief for defendant in error:

At common law the right of the owner of lands fronting on the shore to wharf out does not exist.

Shively v. Bowlby, 152 U. S. 27, 38 L. ed. 341, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 548; Weber v. State Harbor Comrs. 18 Wall. 65, 21 L. ed. 802.

California may sell its submerged lands free of any easement whatever in favor of the riparian proprietor.

Pacific Gas Improv. Co. v. Ellert, 64 Fed. 425.

The alienation of the tide lands by the state may prevent access to the navigable waters of the bay.

Oakland v. Oakland Water Front Co. 118 Cal. 160, 50 Pac. 277.

Mr. Justice McKenna, after stating the case, delivered the opinion of the court:

"It will be observed," as was said by the circuit court of appeals, "that the judgment [of the circuit court] is not limited to the two rocks or islands embraced in the executive order of January 13, 1899, the one covering 14-100 and the other 1-100 of an acre, but awards the government the entire tract of 14.69 acres, including the warehouses and other improvements constructed by the defendant and its predecessors in interest." The circuit court of appeals confined the recovery of the plaintiff to the rocks proper, and awarded the submerged lands to the defendant. The controversy then is, Which party has the title to the latter? The defendant in error is the successor of the rights and title of the California Dry Dock Company, that company being grantee of Henry B. Tichenor, who received the patent for the lands on the 11th of July, 1872, from the state of California, in pursuance of and in conformity with an act of the legislature of the state, entitled, "An Act to Provide for the Sale and Conveyance of Certain Submerged Lands in the City and County of San Francisco to Henry B. Tichenor." Cal. Stat. 1870-71, p. 801.

Had the state the title to convey? The plaintiff in error, in effect, contests this, and asserts, besides, a right to the submerged land as an easement appurtenant to the islands.

The title and dominion which a state acquires to lands under tide waters by virtue of her sovereignty received elaborate consideration, exposition, and illustration in the case of Shively v. Bowlby, 152 U. S. 1-58, 38 L. ed. 331-352, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 548. Prior cases are there collected and quoted, among others, Weber v. State Harbor Comrs. 18 Wall. 65, 21 L. ed. 801. From the latter as follows (and the case concerned tide lands in California): "Although the title to the soil under the tidewaters of the bay was acquired by the United States by cession from Mexico, equally with the title to the upland, they held it only in trust for the future state. Upon the admission of California into the Union upon equal footing with the original states, absolute property in, and dominion and sovereignty over, all soils under the tide waters within her limits passed to the state, with the consequent right to dispose of the title to any part of said soils in such manner as she might deem proper, subject only to the paramount right of navigation over the waters, so far as such navigation might be required by the necessities of commerce with foreign nations or among the several states, the regulation of which was vested in the general government." And Mr. Justice Gray said, delivering the opinion of the court in Shively v. Bowlby: "Each state has dealt with the lands under the tide waters within its borders according to its own views of justice and policy, reserving its own control over such lands, or granting rights therein to individuals or corporations, whether owners of the adjoining upland or not, as it considered for the best interests of the public."

This right is an attribute of the sovereignty of the state, and it follows that in the exercise of the right, as said by Mr. Justice Gray, the state may "dispose of its tide lands free from any easement of the upland proprietor." The facts of the case emphasized its doctrine. Shively was the grantee of the state of Oregon of the tide lands in front of Shively's property. The grant was sustained. The sovereignty of California and the rights and powers dependent upon it are as complete as those of other states. How has California chosen to exercise them? In other words, What is the law of California as to the title and rights of riparian or littoral proprietors in the soil below highwater mark? Upon the answer to these questions the present litigation must be determined. The title papers of the defendant contain an act of the legislature of the state conveying the lands in controversy in private ownership, and the history of the state shows that the act was in accordance with the policy and practice of the state.

[405] owner of *the upland. Bowlby was the

The legislature, commencing at the first session after the admission of the state into the Union, made grants of the tide lands to municipalities under conditions which contemplated their being conveyed to and held in private ownership. Among these was the act of March 26, 1851, known as the "beach and water lot Act." [Cal. Stat. 1851, p. 309, chap. 41.] It was entitled, "An Act to Provide for the Disposition of Certain Property of the State of California." Section 1 provided that "all the lots of land situated within the following boundaries according to the survey of the city of San Francisco and the map or plat of the same now on record in the office of recorder of the county of San Francisco are known and designated in this act as the San Francisco Beach and Water Lots; that is to say, beginning at the point," etc. Then follows a description by streets, which includes a portion of the bay. Section 2 grants the use and occupation of the land for ninety-nine years, and confirms grants of lands sold by authority of the ayuntamiento, or town or city council, or by any alcalde of said town or city; and § 4 makes the boundary line described in the 1st section a permanent water front of the city. These acts came up for consideration, and the character of the title conveyed was defined in Smith v. Morse, 2 Cal. 524; Eldridge v. Cowell, 4 Cal. 87; Chapin v. Bourne, 8 Cal. 294; Hyman v. Read, 13 Cal. 445; Holladay v. Frisbie, 15 Cal. 635; **Wheeler v. Miller*, 16 Cal. [406] 125; San Francisco v. Straut, 84 Cal. 124, 24 Pac. 814.

These cases all expressed under varying facts the validity of the title conveyed by the acts of the legislature. They are reviewed in Pacific Gas Improv. Co. v. Ellert, 64 Fed. 421.

In Taylor v. Underhill, 40 Cal. 473, Mr. Justice Temple said, speaking of lands below high-water mark: "The state can probably sell the land, and authorize the purchaser to extend the water front so as to enable him to build upon this land . . ."

The decisions cover a period of many years, and have become a rule of property and the foundation of many titles. As said by Circuit Judge Ross, delivering the opinion of the circuit court of appeals: "A large and valuable part of the city of San Francisco, extending from the present water front to, in some places, Montgomery street, was at the time of, and subsequent to, the admission of California into the Union a part of the submerged lands of the bay, but has since been filled in by the many hundred grantors under the city and state, who have erected buildings and improvements thereon at costs running into many millions of dollars. All of this was done in aid of commerce, in the upbuilding of a great city upon the bay, and with the encouragement and consent of the general government."

There is nothing inconsistent with these views in Shirley v. Bishop, 67 Cal. 545, 8 Pac. 82; People v. Gold Run Ditch & Min. Co. 66 Cal. 151, 56 Am. Rep. 80, 4 Pac. 1152, or in Heckman v. Swett, 99 Cal. 303, 33 Pac. 1099. In Shirley v. Bishop there was no question of riparian rights. The defendants attempted, under a franchise from the city of Benicia, to erect a wharf within 3 feet of the plaintiff's wharf, and parallel to it for 60 feet in the navigable waters of the straits of Carquinez, and beyond the water front established by an act of the legislature of the state. The building of the wharf was restrained. The other two cases expressed the general doctrine that the title of the state to the lands covered by navigable waters is held in trust for the public. That doctrine is declared in all of the cases. It has a conspicuous illustration in the Lake Front Case [Illinois C. R. Co. v. Illinois], 146 U. S. 463, 36 L. ed. 1046, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 110. The doctrine and its limitations

[407]*are expressed in Heckman v. Swett, 99 Cal. 309, 33 Pac. 1102, and in Shively v. Bowlby. The court said in Heckman v. Swett: "Navigable streams and the shores to ordinary high-water mark are held by the state in trust for the public; but qualified rights therein may be granted, so far as they are not inconsistent with, or are in aid of, the principal use, viz., for the purposes of navigation." In other words, the rights granted must be in aid of commerce; and it is recognized, as we have seen, in judicial decisions, and established by practical examples, that the conveyance by the state of its title to tide lands, to be held in private ownership, free from any easement of the upland proprietor, is in aid of commerce, and therefore in strict performance of the state's trust. See, in addition to the other cases, Oakland v. Oakland Water Front Co. 118 Cal. 160, 50 Pac. 277.

2. A claim was made in the circuit court of appeals by the plaintiff in error under § 5 of the act of Congress of July 1, 1864, entitled, "An Act to Expedite the Settlement of Titles to Lands in the State of California." 13 Stat. at L. 333, chap. 194. By that section the title of the United States to the lands within the corporate limits of the city of San Francisco was relinquished and granted to the city "for the uses and purposes" specified in a certain ordinance of the city called the Van Ness ordinance, which ordinance had been ratified by the legislature of the state. Answering and disposing of the contention of the plaintiff in error, the circuit court of appeals said: "Those uses and purposes . . . had no relation whatever to the rocks or islands here in controversy, which were and are far outside of the pueblo grant of lands claimed by and confirmed to the city." This is not contested here, but it is urged that "the order of President McKinley may be read, not as a reservation under that act, but as an appropriation of Mission island and the small island southeast thereof, with the shores, contiguous submerged land, and navigable water appurtenant thereto, permanently for naval purposes." There are two answers to the contention. The order of the President explicitly designates the islands proper, and, besides, limits the areas appropriated to "14-100 of an acre and 1-100 of an acre respectively." At the time the order *was made the land in controversy had been [408] reclaimed by the California Dry Dock Company, and upon it were "extensive warehouses," which had been built by that company, "and wharves erected for the accommodation of shipping." The property was so valuable that the plaintiff in error regarded itself damaged by its withholding in the sum of $250,000, and the rental thereof was alleged to be $5,000 per annum. It is not conceivable that the President, by his order, intended to appropriate so valuable a property without explicit declaration, or to leave the appropriation to result as "appurtenant" to the rocks.

Judgment affirmed.

CHATTANOOGA NATIONAL BUILDING & LOAN ASSOCIATION, Petitioner,

v.

WILLIAM H. DENSON and Rosa E. Denson.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 408-417.)

Foreign corporations—what constitutes doing business within the state.

The granting of a loan by a Tennessee building and loan association to a citizen of Alabama upon the latter's signed application, solicited by a traveling agent for the association, and the taking as security of a note and mortgage executed within the state by the borrower, constitute, regardless of the form and terms of such instruments, the doing of business in the state, within the meaning of Ala. Const. art. 14, and Ala. Code 1896, §§ 1316, 1318, 1319, requiring foreign corporations doing any business within the state to designate a local agent for service of process, and to have a known place of business within the state.

NOTE.—On recognition or exclusion of foreign corporations—see note to Cone Export & Commission Co. v. Poole (S. C.) 24 L. R. A. 289.

As to exclusion of foreign corporation as an interference with interstate commerce—see note to Kindel v. Beck & P. Lithographing Co. (Colo.) 24 L. R. A. 311.

As to what constitutes dealing or carrying on business—see note to State v. Ray (N. C.) 14 L. R. A. 529.

[No. 206.]

Submitted March 12, 1903. Decided April 27, 1903.

ON WRIT of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit to review a decree which reversed a decree of foreclosure rendered by the Circuit Court for the Southern Division of the Northern District of Alabama, and directed the bill to be dismissed. Affirmed.

See same case below, 46 C. C. A. 634, 107 Fed. 777.

Statement by Mr. Justice McKenna:

Suit to foreclose a mortgage given by the respondents to the petitioner to secure a note for the sum of $5,000, given as evidence of a loan made by petitioner to respondents. The petitioner is a building and loan association, and a corporation of the state of Tennessee; the respondents are citizens of Alabama. [409] *One of the defenses of respondents is that the transactions were illegal because petitioner had not complied with the laws of Alabama in regard to foreign corporations doing business in the state. This is the only defense with which we are concerned. The circuit court rendered a decree foreclosing the mortgage, which was reversed by the circuit court of appeals, and the bill was directed to be dismissed. 46 C. C. A. 634, 107 Fed. 777. The case was then brought here by certiorari.

The Constitution of the state of Alabama provides as follows:

"4. No foreign corporation shall do any business in this state without having at least one known place of business, and an authorized agent or agents therein; and such corporation may be sued in any county where it does business by service of process upon an agent anywhere in this state." Ala. Const. art. 14.

The material parts of the Code of the state, passed in execution of the Constitution, are as follows:

"1316. Foreign corporation must file instrument of writing designating agent and place of business in this state.—Every corporation not organized under the laws of this state shall, before engaging in or transacting any business in this state, file an instrument of writing, under the seal of the corporation and signed officially by the president and secretary thereof, designating at least one known place of business in this state and an authorized agent or agents residing thereat; and when any such corporation shall abandon or change its place of business as designated in such instrument, or shall substitute another agent or agents for the agent or agents designated in such instrument of writing, such corporation shall file a new instrument of writing as herein provided, before transacting any further business in this state." Ala. Code 1896.

189 U. S.

"1318. Unlawful for foreign corporation to transact business in this state before declaration filed; penalty.—It is unlawful for any foreign corporation to engage in or transact any business in this state before filing the written instrument provided for in the two preceding sections; and any such corporation that engages in or transacts any business in this state without complying with the provisions of the two preceding sections *shall, for each offense, forfeit and pay to the state the sum of $1,000." (Ibid.) [410.]

"1319. Unlawful to act as agent of foreign corporation before such declaration is filed; penalty.—It is unlawful for any person to act as agent or transact any business, directly or indirectly, in this state, for or on behalf of any foreign corporation which has not designated a known place of business in this state and an authorized agent or agents residing thereat, as required in this article; and any person so doing shall, for each offense, forfeit and pay to the state the sum of $500." (Ibid.)

There was no point made on the by-laws of the association, and by agreement they were omitted from the record on appeal to the circuit court of appeals, and are also omitted here. And it was also stipulated "that the complainant is a corporation chartered and organized under and in accordance with the public statutes of the state of Tennessee, authorizing the creation of corporations for carrying on the business of building and loan associations; that its principal office and place of business is, and was at the time the loan involved in this case was made, and has ever since continuously been, in the city of Chattanooga, state of Tennessee; and that the loan to defendant, William H. Denson, involved in this case was made in accordance with the power and authority conferred on complainant by its charter, and in the manner prescribed by its by-laws."

The note executed by respondents was as follows:

$5,000.00.

Chattanooga, Tennessee, June 10th, 1895.

On or before nine years from date I promise to pay the Chattanooga National Building and Loan Association, at its home office, Chattanooga, Tennessee, five thousand dollars with interest on the sum of twenty-five hundred dollars, at the rate of six per cent per annum, payable monthly.

It is further understood that this note is made with reference to and under the laws of the state of Tennessee, and if paid before seven years from this date such rebate from the premium included herein will be allowed as the board of directors of said association shall deem equitable.

*The omitted part recited that the note was for money borrowed on fifty shares of stock, and expressed certain conditions of the nonpayment of the note when due, or the nonpayment of premiums or assessments; and also expressed the right of petitioner, in case of such nonpayments, to collect the debt, though not due, and to foreclose the mortgage. The mortgage covered lots in the city of Gadsden, Elowah county, state of Alabama. It repeated the note and its conditions, and contained others. The facts connected with the execution of the note and mortgage are stated by the circuit court of appeals as follows:

871

"The complainant below, the Chattanooga National Building & Loan Association, is, and was at the time the loan to Mr. Denson was made, a corporation under the laws of the state of Tennessee, with its principal office in the city of Chattanooga, in that state. Among its corporate functions was the authorization, and, so far as we are advised, its sole business was, to loan its funds to its stockholders on real estate security. It had no local office or agent in Alabama, but it had a traveling agent whose business it was to solicit subscriptions to its stock, and to obtain applications for loans, and submit the same to the home office of the association at Chattanooga.

"On the 25th of April, 1895, appellant, Denson, who was a resident of Gadsden, Alabama, on the suggestion and at the solicitation of the agent, signed at that place a written application for fifty shares of stock in the association, complainant below, appellee in this court. This application was forwarded by the agent, to whom Mr. Denson delivered it, to the home office, where the stock was issued and returned to the agent, to be by him delivered to Mr. Denson. On the same day on which he applied for his stock, Mr. Denson signed a written application to the association for a loan of $2,500 on the fifty shares of stock he had applied for. He offered a premium of $2,500 for the loan, and proposed to secure the loan and premium, if his application should be granted, by a mortgage on certain real estate in Gadsden, Alabama, which he represented to be of the value, in all, of about $9,000. This application was accompanied [412] by the report of two parties, selected by the association, *fixing the value of the property which Denson proposed to mortgage at $8,000, and the certificate of an attorney, also selected by the association, with reference to the condition of the title. This application was forwarded by the agent to the home office in Chattanooga, where it was submitted, along with other applications, to the board of directors, by whom the application was granted and the loan directed to be made in accordance with the charter and by-laws of the association. Thereupon a note and deed of trust were prepared at the home office and were sent to the agent by whom Mr. Denson's application had been taken and forwarded; and at the same time the check of the association on the Chattanooga National Bank of Chattanooga, Tennessee, in favor of W. H. Denson for the sum of $2,367.50 was sent to one D. P. Goodhue, of Gadsden, with instructions to him to deliver said check to Mr. Denson when he should have executed and delivered the note and deed of trust. Upon the execution of the note and deed of trust by Denson and wife, and the delivery of the same to the agent, all at Gadsden, Alabama, the agent delivered to Denson the check for $2,367.50, directing him to present the same to the First National Bank of Gadsden, which would pay the same. The check was presented to the said bank, and the face thereof paid over to Denson, as the cashier said, 'under an understanding with the said building and loan association and that the Chattanooga National Bank, on which the check was drawn, would pay the same on presentation.'"

And the following testimony of the secretary of the association was quoted:

"At the time the loan to defendant Denson was made, complainant association had been for some time soliciting subscriptions to stock, and receiving applications for loans, in the state of Alabama, and had paid a tax, or license fee, required under the laws of the state of Alabama, for foreign corporations proposing to do business in that state, and complainant's officers supposed and understood that the payment of this fee, or tax, was the only condition with which it was necessary for them to comply in order to be entitled to do business in that state. Subsequently, however, and some months after the loan to defendant *Denson [413] was made, complainant was informed by an attorney in the state of Alabama that the Alabama statutes required foreign corporations doing business in Alabama to designate a local agent, on whom process against the association could be served, and also a local place of business in that state. Thereupon complainant promptly designated such local agent and place of business, and continued up to the 2d of October, 1899, to pay the license tax, or fee, required of non-resident corporations doing business in Alabama, and to keep a local agent and place of business in that state."

Mr. Robert Pritchard submitted the cause for petitioner. Mr. J. B. Sizer was with him on the brief:

The contract for this loan was made in Tennessee.

Wharton, Conf. of L. § 421; Allgeyer v. Louisiana, 165 U. S. 578, 41 L. ed. 832, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 427; Holder v. Aultman M. & Co. 169 U. S. 81, 42 L. ed. 669, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 269; Western v. Genesee Mut. Ins. Co. 12 N. Y. 258; Taylor v. Merchants' F. Ins. Co. 9 How. 390, 13 L. ed. 187; Glover v. Equitable Mortg. Co. 31 C. C. A. 105, 59 U. S. App. 151, 87 Fed. 518; State Mut. F. Ins. Asso. v. Brinkley Stave & Heading Co. 61 Ark. 1, 29 L. R. A. 712, 31 S. W. 157; Garrattson v. North Atchison Bank, 47 Fed. 867; Hyde v. Goodnow, 3 N. Y. 266.

The place of the note itself was the state of Tennessee, and not the state of Alabama.

Wharton, Conf. of L. §§ 398, 399, 507; Andrews v. Pond, 13 Pet. 65, 10 L. ed. 61; Pritchard v. Norton, 106 U. S. 124, 27 L. ed. 104, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 102; Andruss v. People's Bldg. L. & Sav. Asso. 36 C. C. A. 336, 94 Fed. 575; Dugan v. Lewis, 79 Tex. 246, 12 L. R.

A. 93, 14 S. W. 1024; Glover v. Equitable Mortg. Co. 31 C. C. A. 105, 59 U. S. App. 151, 87 Fed. 518; Eastern Bldg. & L. Asso. v. Bedford, 88 Fed. 7; London Assur. Co. v. Companhia de Moagens do Barreiro, 167 U. S. 149, 42 L. ed. 113, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 785; Penn Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Mechanics' Sav. Bank & Trust Co. 38 L. R. A. 33, 19 C. C. A. 286, 37 U. S. App. 692, 72 Fed. 413.

The mortgage is a mere incident to the debt, and its situs is that of the debt it secures, although it may cover property elsewhere.

Lauter v. Jarvis-Conklin Mortg. Trust Co. 29 C. C. A. 473, 54 U. S. App. 49, 85 Fed. 894; Pioneer Sav. & L. Co. v. Cannon, 96 Tenn. 599, 33 L. R. A. 112, 36 S. W. 386; Sullivan v. Sheehan, 89 Fed. 247; Electric Lighting Co. v. Rust, 117 Ala. 680, 23 So. 751; United States Sav. & L. Co. v. Shain, 8 N. D. 136, 77 N. W. 1006.

The taking of the note and mortgage, and the payment of the money, did not constitute a transaction of business in Alabama by the petitioner.

Beard v. Union & American Pub. Co. 71 Ala. 60; Sullivan v. Sullivan Timber Co. 103 Ala. 371, 25 L. R. A. 543, 15 So. 941.

Mr. Oscar W. Underwood submitted the cause for respondents. Mr. William H. Denson was with him on the brief:

To constitute engaging in or transacting any business in this state, within the meaning of the Alabama law, there must be a doing of some of the works, or an exercise of some of the functions, for which the corporation was created.

Beard v. Union & American Pub. Co. 71 Ala. 60; Sullivan v. Sullivan Timber Co. 103 Ala. 371, 25 L. R. A. 543, 15 So. 941; State v. Bristol Sav. Bank, 108 Ala. 3, 18 So. 533; Farrior v. New England Mortg. Secur. Co. 88 Ala. 275, 7 So. 200.

The association was doing business in Alabama.

New York L. Ins. Co. v. Cravens, 178 U. S. 389, 44 L. ed. 1116, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 962; Equitable Life Assur. Soc. v. Clements, 140 U. S. 226, 35 L. ed. 497, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 822; State v. Bristol Sav. Bank, 108 Ala. 6, 18 So. 533; Farrior v. New England Mortg. Secur. Co. 88 Ala. 275, 7 So. 200; Mullens v. American Freehold Land Mortg. Co. 88 Ala. 280, 7 So. 201; Sullivan v. Sheehan, 89 Fed. 349.

The exposition given by the highest tribunals of the state to its own Constitution and statutes constitutes a part of the law, as much as if embodied in it, and is as binding upon the courts of the United States as the text, and is conclusive on such courts.

New York L. Ins. Co. v. Cravens, 178 U. S. 389, 44 L. ed. 1116, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 962; Louisiana v. Pillsbury, 105 U. S. 294, 26 L. ed. 1090; Leffingwell v. Warren, 2 Black, 599, 17 L. ed. 261; Erb v. Morasch, 177 U. S. 584, 44 L. ed. 897, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 819; Sioux City Terminal R. & Warehouse Co. v. Trust Co. of N. A. 173 U. S. 99, 43 L. ed. 628, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 341; Morley v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. 146 U. S. 162, 36 L. ed. 925, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 54; Missouri, K. & T. 189 U. S. U. S., Book 47.

R. Co. v. McCann, 174 U. S. 580, 43 L. ed. 1093, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 755; Provident Inst. for Savings v. Massachusetts, 6 Wall. 611, 18 L. ed. 907; Fairfield v. Gallatin County, 100 U. S. 47, 25 L. ed. 544; Bauscrman v. Blunt, 147 U. S. 647, 37 L. ed. 316, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 466.

No state or nation will enforce any contract in its own courts, wherever it may be made, that is in disregard or violation of the public policy or positive legislation of such state.

Gist v. Western U. Tel. Co. 45 S. C. 344, 23 S. E. 143; Swing v. Munson, 191 Pa. 582, 58 L. R. A. 223, 43 Atl. 342; Seamans v. Temple Co. 105 Mich. 400, 28 L. R. A. 430, 63 N. W. 408; Cowan v. London Assur. Corp. 73 Miss. 321, 19 So. 298; Rose v. Kimberly & C. Co. 89 Wis. 545, 27 L. R. A. 556, 62 N. W. 526.

What was done by the Chattanooga corporation in Alabama was "doing business" in Alabama, and a violation of the laws of Alabama.

Swing v. Munson, 191 Pa. 582, 58 L. R. A. 223, 43 Atl. 342; Henni v. Fidelity Bldg. & L. Asso. 61 Neb. 744, 86 N. W. 475; Seamans v. Temple Co. 105 Mich. 400, 28 L. R. A. 430, 63 N. W. 408; Cowan v. London Assur. Corp. 73 Miss. 321, 19 So. 298.

Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

The question presented by the case is, Did the loan made by petitioner and the taking for security the note and mortgage under the circumstances presented by the record constitute a doing of business in the state, within the meaning of the Constitution and laws of the state?

It was said by the supreme court of Alabama (Beard v. Union & American Pub. Co. 71 Ala. 60), that to constitute a doing of business within the state "there must be a doing of some of the works, or an exercise of some of the functions, for which the corporation was created." It was held, however, that receiving a subscription to a newspaper, or collecting the money therefor, was not doing business in the state "within the principle." In a subsequent case (Dudley v. Collier, 87 Ala. 431, 6 So. 304) the court announced that "a loan or borrowing of money by or from" a foreign corporation is a doing of business within the state, and "is an unlawful act, subjecting both the agents and company to a heavy penalty." The provisions of the statute prescribing penalties were considered, and their effect was declared to be not only to punish offenders against the statute, but to render "their contracts void. Many cases were cited [414] in support of the conclusion as a proper deduction from the imposition of the penalties. And the principle was applied to make illegal a contract with an agent for services rendered in procuring a loan for the use of the corporation.

In Farrior v. New England Mortg. Secur. Co. 88 Ala. 275, 7 So. 200, it was said that the Constitution prohibited the making of a single contract or the doing of a single act of business by a foreign corporation in the exercise of a corporate function, as well as the engaging in or carrying on its business generally. To the same effect are Mullens v. American Freehold Land Mortg. Co. 88 Ala. 280, 7 So. 201; Ginn v. New England Mortg. Secur. Co. 92 Ala. 135, 8 So. 388; Sullivan v. Sullivan Timber Co. 103 Ala. 371, 25 L. R. A. 543, 15 So. 941.

These cases constitute an interpretation of the constitutional and statutory provisions, and clearly hold that any act in the exercise of corporate functions is forbidden to a foreign corporation which has not complied with the Constitution and statute, and that the contracts hence resulting are illegal and cannot be enforced in the courts.

The petitioner is a building and loan association. Its corporate purpose is to lend money to its stockholders. The respondent Denson was one of its stockholders, and, manifestly, regarding the essence of the transactions between them, they constituted a doing of business within the state of Alabama. But it is insisted that on account of the form and terms of the instruments and by operation of law the loans must be regarded as having been made in Tennessee. It is said: "The note and mortgage were drawn in Tennessee, and by their express terms were payable there. The note is dated on its face at Chattanooga, Tennessee, and expressly stipulates that it 'is made with reference to and under the laws of Tennessee.'" And, further, that the petitioner's part of all the transactions was performed in the state of Tennessee, "and only those acts which the borrower was required to do as a condition precedent to the loan of the money to him were performed in Alabama." It is hence deduced that the business done must be regarded as having been done in Tennessee.

[415] *Counsel has discussed at some length the situs of contracts, and by the law of what place their obligation is determined. We think, however, that the discussion is not relevant. It withdraws our consideration from the Constitution and statute of Alabama; and, it is manifest, the contention based upon it, if yielded to, would defeat their purpose. The prohibition is directed to the doing of any business in the state in the exercise of corporate functions; and there can be no doubt that petitioner considered that it was exercising such functions in the state. Its secretary testified that "at the time the loan to defendant Denson was made complainant association had been for some time soliciting subscriptions to stock, and receiving applications for loans, in the state of Alabama, and had paid a tax, or license fee, required under the laws of the state of Alabama for foreign corporations proposing to do business in that state, and complainant's officers supposed and understood that the payment of this fee, or tax, was the only condition with which it was necessary for them to comply in order to be entitled to do business in that state." The application of Denson was presumably solicited as other applications were, and, if what was done in pursuance of it did not constitute doing business in the state, the effect would be, as expressed by the circuit court of appeals, that petitioner "and other foreign associations engaged in the same business of loaning money on real security, may safely flood the state of Alabama with soliciting agents, make all the negotiations for loans, take real-estate securities therefor, and fully transact all other business pertaining to their corporate functions as though incorporated therein, and yet neither be obliged to have a known place of business or any authorized agent within the state, nor pay any license tax or fee, as required of nonresident corporations doing business therein."

The case of Fritts v. Palmer, 132 U. S. 282, 33 L. ed. 317, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 93, does not relieve from the effect of the Alabama decisions and from the necessity of following them. The action was ejectment to recover certain real property in Colorado. The title of one of the parties was derived through the Comstock Mining Company, a Missouri corporation, which, before its purchase of the property, had been engaged "in the prosecution of its mining business in the state, but it had not complied with the Constitution and statutes of the state prescribing the terms upon which foreign corporations might do business in the state. The constitutional provision was substantially like that of Alabama, but the statutes were materially different, and, besides, there had been no decision of the supreme court of Colorado interpreting the statutes. The only penalty expressed in the statutes was the imposition of personal liability upon the officers, agents, and stockholders of the corporation for any and all contracts made within the state during the time the corporation was in default. It was held that the fair implication was that, "in the judgment of the legislature of Colorado, this penalty was ample to effect the objects of the statutes." And it was said that it was not for the judiciary, at the instance of, or for the benefit of, private parties, to forfeit property which had been conveyed to the corporation, and by it to others. Fritts v. Palmer, therefore, was but the interpretation of a particular statute, and there is not a word in it which denies or questions the power of a state to make void the contracts of a foreign corporation which is doing business in the state in violation of its laws.

It is urged by petitioner that it thought it had complied with the law of Alabama, and that it was not an intentional offender against it and therefore should not be "repelled from court." But the latter consequence has been decided to result from non-compliance with the statute, and we cannot grant an exemption from it. The statute makes no distinction between an inadvertent and a conscious violation of its provisions, and a familiar legal maxim precludes a defense based on that distinction. Nor can the payment of the license fee be urged as a justification for omitting to comply with the statute. Such payment was one condition to be performed by a foreign corporation; the designation of a known place of business and an authorized agent was another, and was of so much importance as to be enjoined by the Constitution of the state.

It is contended that this case cannot be distinguished from Bedford v. Eastern Bldg. & L. Asso. 181 U. S. 227, 45 L. ed. 834, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 597, and must be ruled by that case.

[417] *We think there is a marked distinction. In the Bedford Case the contract was legally entered into and was entitled to be enforced. In the case at bar the contract was made in violation of the statute of Alabama, and it cannot, therefore, claim the protection given to the contract in the other case.

Decree affirmed.

Mr. Justice Harlan dissents.

EUGENE C. GORDON, for the use of Mary C. Roper, Plff. in Err.,
v.

ARTHUR E. RANDLE.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 417-420.)

Courts—duty to prolong term to settle bills of exceptions—not exercised unless invoked—commencement of January term—effect of holiday.

1. The supreme court of the District of Columbia is not bound to prolong its term by the adjournment, authorized by rule 2 of that court, for "not longer than thirty-eight days" to enable bills of exceptions to be prepared, where its duty under such rule is not invoked.
2. The October term, 1900, of the circuit court branch of the supreme court of the District of Columbia ended on December 31st, 1900, although the first Tuesday in the following January, on which, by rule 3 of that court, the January term began, fell on a holiday; since the effect was not to postpone the commencement of the January term, but to deprive the court of the power to do any business other than to discharge those who had been required to attend, until the succeeding day, when its general powers and duties could be legally exercised.

[No. 229.]

Argued April 7, 1903. Decided April 27, 1903.

IN ERROR to the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia to review an order denying a petition for mandamus to require an associate justice of the Supreme Court of the District to settle a bill of exceptions. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. S. Herbert Giesy argued the cause, and, with Mr. Holmes Conrad, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The writ of mandamus was the proper remedy to require the judge to settle and sign the bill of exceptions.

Ex parte Chateaugay Ore & Iron Co. 128 189 U. S.

U. S. 557, 32 L. ed. 513, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 150; Crane v. Crane, 5 Pet. 190, 8 L. ed. 92.

The writ should have issued, and the hearing of the questions involved should have been had after a return thereto.

Kentucky v. Denniston, 24 How. 98, 16 L. ed. 726.

"Discretion," when applied to a court of justice, means sound discretion guided by law. It must be governed by rule, not by humor; it must not be arbitrary, vague, and fanciful, but legal and regular.

Rex v. Wilkes, 4 Burr. 2539; Ex parte Mackey, 15 S. C. 328.

The court had no authority to hear the cause and render judgment on a legal holiday, and would not have had authority to do so, even though the express prohibition had been omitted from the statute.

Lampe v. Manning, 38 Wis. 674; Michie v. Michie, 17 Gratt. 109; Butler v. Kelsey, 15 Johns. 177; Pulling v. People, 8 Barb. 384, 24 Am. & Eng. Enc. L. p. 574.

Where power is given to public officers, in the language of the act before us, or in equivalent language,—whenver the public interest or individual rights call for its exercise,—the language used, though permissive in form, is in fact peremptory. What they are empowered to do for a third person the law requires shall be done.

Rock Island County v. United States, 4 Wall. 447, 18 L. ed. 423; Galena v. Amy, 5 Wall. 708, sub nom. Galena v. United States, 18 L. ed. 560; United States v. Breitling, 20 How. 254, 15 L. ed. 900; Coe v. Morgan, 13 Fed. 844.

The word "may" in a statute is sometimes used in a mandatory, and sometimes in a directory and permissive, sense. It has always been construed "must" or "shall" whenever it could be seen that the legislative intent was to impose a duty, and not simply a privilege or discretionary power, and when the public was interested, and the public or third persons had a claim de jure to have the power exercised.

14 Am. & Eng. Enc. L. p. 979.

Mr. J. J. Darlington argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error:

Mandamus does not lie to secure a reversal of a judicial determination, by the court below, of the question when the October Term of the supreme court of the District of Columbia ends, under its rules, when the 1st Tuesday of the following January happens to fall upon a legal holiday.

Ex parte Taylor, 14 How. 12, 14 L. ed. 305; Ex parte Many, 14 How. 24, 14 L. ed. 311.

Authorities to the effect that a power given to public officers, though by language indicating a discretion upon their part, is compulsory, and may be called into exercise by mandamus where necessary to de jure rights of third persons, are not applicable to the exercise of a discretion judicial in its nature.

Rock Island County v. United States, 4 Wall. 447, 18 L. ed. 423.

Verdicts may be received on Sunday.

Reid v. State, 53 Ala. 402, 25 Am. Rep.

627; Henderson v. Reynolds, 84 Ga. 159, 7 L. R. A. 327, 10 S. E. 734; Webber v. Merrill, 34 N. H. 202; Stone v. Bird, 16 Kan. 488; State v. Penley, 107 N. C. 808, 12 S. E. 455; Hiller v. English, 4 Strobb. L. 486.

And the jury may be further instructed, and any orders or motions incidental to receiving the verdict may be made.

Jones v. Johnson, 61 Ind. 257; McCorkle v. State, 14 Ind. 39; People v. Odell, 1 Dak. 197, 46 N. W. 601; State v. Douglass, 69 Ind. 544; Johnston v. People, 31 Ill. 469.

And bail may be taken.

Watts v. Com. 5 Bush, 309; Hammons v. State, 59 Ala. 164, 31 Am. Rep. 13; Weldon v. Colquitt, 62 Ga. 449, 35 Am. Rep. 128.

And even injunctions may issue on that day, in cases of necessity.

Langabier v. Fairbury, P. & N. W. R. Co. 64 Ill. 247, 16 Am. Rep. 550.

In the absence of special circumstances not arising from any fault or omission upon the part of the exceptant, the trial court is without power to settle or sign a bill of exceptions after the end of the term, unless, during the term, it has been continued for the purpose.

Dredge v. Forsyth, 2 Black, 563, 17 L. ed. 253; Re Wight, 134 U. S. 136, sub nom. Wight v. Nicholson, 33 L. ed. 865, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 487; Müller v. Ehlers, 91 U. S. 250, 23 L. ed. 320; Michigan Ins. Bank v. Eldred, 143 U. S. 293, 36 L. ed. 162, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 450; Brown v. Bradley, 6 App. D. C. 207; Coc v. Morgan, 13 Fed. 844; Western Dredging & Improv. Co. v. Heldmaier, 53 C. C. A. 625, 116 Fed. 179.

The rules of court are a law to the court as well as to the suitors, so long as they remain in force, and cannot be dispensed with to meet the supposed hardships of particular cases.

Talty v. District of Columbia, 20 App. D. C. 489; Johnson v. Wright, 2 App. D. C. 220.

Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

The purpose of this writ is to review an order of the court of appeals of the District of Columbia, made March 12, 1901, denying a petition for mandamus to require Andrew C. Bradley, at that time an associate justice of the supreme court of the District of Columbia, to settle a bill of exceptions.

[418] *The plaintiff in error brought suit against defendant in error, in the supreme court of the District of Columbia, on the 20th day of April, 1897, to recover the sum of $5,900, on several causes of action. They need not be described nor the defenses which were interposed to them. It is enough to say that, upon the issues made, a verdict resulted for defendant in error, on the 16th of November, 1900.

On December 14, 1900, a motion for new trial was made by plaintiff and denied by the court, and judgment entered on the verdict. The plaintiff prayed for, and was allowed, an appeal to the court of appeals of the District. The case was tried and judgment entered at October term, 1900, which expired December 31, 1900, unless it had been continued, and this resulted, it is contended, from the following proceedings: On the 7th day of January, 1901, the plaintiff, through his attorney, deposited with the clerk $50 in lieu of a bond on appeal, and moved the court that October term be prolonged by adjournment, in order to prepare a bill of exceptions. The motion was overruled on the ground that October term had ended on the 31st of December, 1900. Notice was given by the attorney for the plaintiff that he would present the "bill of exceptions to the court for settlement before Justice Bradley in the circuit court number 2." The bill was presented in pursuance of the notice, but Justice Bradley declined to settle the bill on the ground that October term had not been prolonged. The petition now under review was then presented to the court of appeals, praying "that the writ of mandamus may issue, requiring Andrew C. Bradley, an associate justice of the supreme court of the District of Columbia, to settle the bill of exceptions in this cause." The petition was dismissed.

The rule of the court in regard to bills of exceptions is as follows:

"Sec. 2. The bill of exceptions must be settled before the close of the term, which may be prolonged by adjournment in order to prepare it, but not longer than thirty-eight days, exclusive of Sundays, save in case of a trial begun during a term, but not concluded until after the expiration of the term, *in [419] which case the trial justice may extend the term in his discretion in order to prepare a bill of exceptions."

The case presents some anomalies. The mandamus was prayed against Justice Bradley for refusing to act officially; but the citation in error was directed to Arthur E. Randle, and he alone is defendant in error here. He was a party in the original cause, but not a party in the proceedings for mandamus. Making him a party here is attempted to be justified by the death of Justice Bradley and the action of the court of appeals in not entertaining the petition for mandamus. The immediate answer would seem to be that mandamus is itself an action, and can only, like other actions, be prosecuted against the parties to it, and that one of two effects resulted from the death of Justice Bradley: either the action abated, or could only be continued against the person who succeeded to his office and duty.

But passing this, we think the main contention of plaintiff in error is untenable. The argument of plaintiff is that the purpose of the rule was to allow thirty-eight days for the settlement of bills of exceptions, and to afford time to do so the rule provided that the term might be prolonged by adjournment, and the duty of prolonging the term was imposed on the court. We do not so interpret the rule. It provided the means for parties to secure the necessary time to present bills of exceptions. The court was not required to anticipate the intention of parties. Its duty under the rule, like its other duties, was to be exercised when invoked.

But it is also insisted that a motion to prolong the term was made in time. The argument to support this is that October term did not end on the 31st of December, 1900, but continued until the 7th of January, 1901, because by rule 3 of the supreme court of the District of Columbia the January terms of the circuit court commence on the 1st Tuesdays in January, and that the 1st Tuesday of January, 1901, fell on the 1st of January, which, being a holiday, and therefore, as it is insisted, a dies non, the term did not commence until the following Tuesday, the 8th of January. We cannot concur in the contention. The term commenced on the 1st of January, and the only effect of the holiday was to deprive the court of the power of doing any business but to discharge those who had been required to attend until the succeeding day, when the general duties and powers of the court could be legally exercised. It follows, therefore, that there was no error in refusing to settle the bill of exceptions, and the petition for mandamus was properly denied.

Order affirmed.

PULLMAN COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,
v.
WIRT ADAMS, State Revenue Agent.

(Sec S. C. Reporter's ed. 420-422.)

Commerce—privilege tax—on sleeping car companies.

The privilege tax imposed by Miss. Code 1892, §§ 3317, 3387, on sleeping and palace car companies carrying passengers from one point to another within the state, cannot be deemed an unconstitutional regulation of commerce because of the declaration in Miss. Const. § 195, that sleeping car companies are common carriers and subject to liability as such, where such provision is regarded by the state courts as imposing no obligation on the company to transport local passengers.

[No. 138.]

Argued and submitted December 19, 1902.
Decided March 2, 1903.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Mississippi to review a judgment affirming a judgment of the trial court in favor of plaintiff in an action to recover privilege taxes from a sleeping car company. Affirmed.

See same case below, 78 Miss. 814, 29 So. 917.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. William Burry argued the cause, and, with Mr. J. S. Runnells, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The operation of the sleeping cars, and the business in which plaintiff in error is engaged in Mississippi, constitute interstate commerce, and therefore the state cannot call such business a privilege, and impose a privilege tax thereon.

Pickard v. Pullman Southern Car Co. 117 U. S. 34, 29 L. ed. 785, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 635; Crutcher v. Kentucky, 141 U. S. 47, 35 L. ed. 649, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 851; Leloup v. Port of Mobile, 127 U. S. 640, 32 L. ed. 311, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 134, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1380.

There is a well-defined difference between a license tax affecting interstate commerce, which is void, and a properly proportioned property tax on property or capital stock engaged in interstate commerce.

Adams Exp. Co. v. Ohio State Auditor, 165 U. S. 220, 41 L. ed. 695, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 305; American Refrigerator Transit Co. v. Hall, 174 U. S. 70, 43 L. ed. 899, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 599; Pullman's Palace Car Co. v. Pennsylvania, 141 U. S. 18, 35 L. ed. 613, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 595, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 876; Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. Adams, 155 U. S. 688, 39 L. ed. 311, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 1, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 268, 360.

If the interstate business and local business are necessarily so mixed as to preclude separation, a tax thereon is invalid.

Ratterman v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 127 U. S. 411, 32 L. ed. 229, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 59, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1127; Leloup v. Port of Mobile, 127 U. S. 640, 32 L. ed. 311, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 134, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1380; State Freight Tax Case, 15 Wall. 277, sub nom. Philadelphia & R. R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 21 L. ed. 162.

Plaintiff in error is obliged to furnish sleeping accommodations to travelers local to Mississippi, as part of its interstate business, and therefore cannot carry on interstate business without subjecting itself to this privilege tax.

Nevin v. Pullman Palace Car Co. 106 Ill. 222, 46 Am. Rep. 688; Elliott, Railroads, § 1617.

The court will examine to see if exacting a full license tax for accommodating a single local passenger on an interstate car is not done to evade the Federal Constitution, and is not really a tax on interstate commerce.

Crutcher v. Kentucky, 144 U. S. 47, 35 L. ed. 649, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 851; United States Exp. Co. v. Allen, 39 Fed. 712; Austin v. Tennessee, 179 U. S. 343, 45 L. ed. 224, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 132; Morgan's L. & T. R. & S. S. Co. v. Louisiana Bd. of Health, 118 U. S. 455, 30 L. ed. 237, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1114.

NOTE.—On state regulation of interstate or foreign commerce—see notes to Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Com. (Va.) 13 L. R. A. 107; McCanna & F. Co. v. Citizens' Trust & Surety Co. 24 C. C. A. 13; Ratterman v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 32 L. ed. U. S. 229; Harmon v. Chicago, 37 L. ed. U. S. 216; Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Backus, 38 L. ed. U. S. 1041; and Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. Adams, 39 L. ed. U. S. 311, 189 U. S.

As to police power as affecting commerce—see notes to People v. Budd (N. Y.) 5 L. R. A. 559; and State ex rel. Corwin v. Indiana & O. Oil, Gas. & Min. Co. (Ind.) 6 L. R. A. 579.

On license taxes as affecting interstate commerce—see notes to Rothermel v. Meyerle (Pa.) 9 L. R. A. 366; and American Fertilizing Co. v. North Carolina Bd. of Agri. (C. C. E. D. N. C.) 11 L. R. A. 179.

Mr. Marcellus Green submitted the cause for defendant in error. Messrs. W. R. Harper and W. H. Potter were with him on the brief:

A state may require a privilege license of a foreign corporation to do a purely local business, even though such corporation may, for the most part, be engaged in an interstate business of like character and kind, where the tax so levied is confined strictly to the local business, either by the express terms of the statute or by the construction of the courts.

Osborne v. Florida, 164 U. S. 650, 41 L. ed. 586, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 214.

The constitutional provision making the plaintiff in error a common carrier does in nowise affect its right to decline to do a local business, if such local business be unprofitable. Its right, like the right of every other common carrier, now and still is to classify the business it will engage in, upon any reasonable basis, and, when thus reasonably classified and limited, to serve all persons alike, within such limitation.

Hale, Bailments, p. 322; Johnson v. Midland R. Co. 4 Exch. 367; Central R. & Bkg. Co. v. Lampley, 76 Ala. 357, 52 Am. Rep. 334; Honeyman v. Oregon & C. R. Co. 13 Or. 352, 57 Am. Rep. 20, 10 Pac. 628; Kimball v. Rutland & B. R. Co. 26 Vt. 247, 62 Am. Dec. 567; Pitloek v. Wells, F. & Co. 109 Mass. 452; Citizens' Bank v. Nantucket S. B. Co. 2 Story, 16, 33, Fed. Cas. No. 2,730; Sewall v. Allen, 6 Wend. 335, 346; Kuter v. Michigan C. R. Co. 1 Biss, 35, Fed. Cas. No. 7,955; Shelden v. Robinson, 7 N. H. 157, 26 Am. Dec. 726; Kemp v. Coughtry, 11 Johns. 107, 109; Emery v. Hersey, 4 Greenl. 407, 16 Am. Dec. 268; Harrington v. M'Shane, 2 Watts, 443, 27 Am. Dec. 321; Merwin v. Butler, 17 Conn. 138; Dwight v. Brewster, 1 Pick. 50, 11 Am. Dec. 133.

A state has authority to require a privilege tax of a foreign corporation doing a local business in such state, even though such tax may indirectly affect its interstate business.

Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. Adams, 71 Miss. 565, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 416, 14 So. 36; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Kentucky, 183 U. S. 518, 46 L. ed. 306, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 95.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an action for taxes, brought by the revenue agent of the state of Mississippi against the Pullman Company. The defendant in due form raised the objection [421] that the tax law *was void as an interference with commerce between the states. Judgment was given for the plaintiff in the local state court, and the judgment was affirmed by the supreme court of the state. 78 Miss. 814, 29 So. 917. The case then was brought here by writ of error.

The tax in question was imposed by the following sections of the Mississippi Code of 1892: "§ 3317. A tax on privileges is levied as follows, to wit: . . . § 3387. Sleeping car companies: On each sleeping and palace car company carrying passengers from one point to another within the state, $100, and 25 cents per mile for each mile of railroad track over which the company runs its cars." We assume that the last words mean what afterwards was expressed by an amendment, "over which the company runs its cars in this state."

The Pullman Company is an Illinois corporation. Its sleeping cars were carried by various railroad companies, and all of them were carried into the state from another state, or out of the state to another state, or both. But such cars in their passage also carried passengers from point to point within the state, and a specific fare was collected by the servants of the Pullman Company. The company attempted by pleas and by an offer of evidence to bring before the court the fact that its receipts from this class of passengers did not equal the expenses chargeable against such receipts. It contended that these facts would show that the business within the state was merely a burden on its commerce between the states, while at the same time, it argued, it was compelled to assume that burden by § 195 of the state Constitution, which declares sleeping car companies to be common carriers and subject to liability as such. The pleas were held bad on demurrer, the evidence was rejected, and the jury was instructed to find for the plaintiff on the facts admitted. These rulings and the refusal of the court to declare the above-mentioned § 3387 unconstitutional are the errors assigned.

If the clause of the state Constitution referred to were held to impose the obligation supposed and to be valid, we assume without discussion that the tax would be invalid. For then it *would seem to be true [422] that the state Constitution and the statute combined would impose a burden on commerce between the states analogous to that which was held bad in Crutcher v. Kentucky, 141 U. S. 47, 35 L. ed. 649, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 851. On the other hand, if the Pullman Company, whether called a common carrier or not, had the right to choose between what points it would carry, and therefore to give up the carriage of passengers from one point to another within the state, the case is governed by Osborne v. Florida, 164 U. S. 650, 41 L. ed. 586, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 214. The company cannot complain of being taxed for the privilege of doing a local business which it is free to renounce. Both parties agree that the tax is a privilege tax.

As the validity of the tax is thus bound up with the effect of the section of the state Constitution, we think that the Pullman Company was entitled to know how it stood under the latter, and that a judgment against it could not be justified by reasoning which leaves that point obscure. We are somewhat embarrassed in dealing with the case, because we are not quite certain whether we rightly interpret the intimations upon the subject in the judgment under review. If the Constitution of Mississippi should be read as imposing an obligation to take local passengers, the question for us might be which, if not both, the clause of the Constitution or the tax act, is invalid. But we assume that the opinion of the supreme court of Mississippi intends to meet the difficulty frankly, and when it says that the argument against the tax drawn from the above interpretation of the Constitution is fallacious, we take it as meaning that no such interpretation will be attempted in the future, and we take it so the more readily that we can see no ground for a different view. If we are right in our understanding the judgment of the supreme court was correct for the reason sufficiently stated above.

Judgment affirmed.

[423]*NATIONAL BANK & LOAN COMPANY OF WATERTOWN, New York, Plff. in Err.,

v.

MOSES PETRIE.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 423-426.)

Contracts—rescission of illegal contract for fraud.

The right to recover money paid to a national bank on a contract sought to be rescinded for fraud is not defeated because the parties were attempting a transaction forbidden by law, since to deny the right to rescind is to rely on the contract, which must be accepted, if at all, with the burden of the fraud.

[No. 166.]

*Argued and submitted February 24, 1903.
Decided March 9, 1903.*

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of New York to review a judgment for plaintiff in a suit to recover money paid to a national bank on a contract alleged to have been void for fraud, which was affirmed by the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court of that State and by the Court of Appeals. Affirmed.

See same case below, in Supreme Court, 46 App. Div. 634, 61 N. Y. Supp. 1145, and in the Court of Appeals, 167 N. Y. 589, 60 N. E. 1119.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Henry Purcell and John Lansing submitted the cause for plaintiff in error:

The buying and selling of bonds such as the one sold to the plaintiff was not within the scope of the bank's corporate powers.

First Nat. Bank v. National Exch. Bank, 92 U. S. 122, 23 L. ed. 679; Logan County Nat. Bank v. Townsend, 139 U. S. 67, 35 L. ed. 107, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 496; California Nat. Bank v. Kennedy, 167 U. S. 362, 42 L. ed. 198, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 831; First Nat. Bank v. Hawkins, 174 U. S. 364, 43 L. ed. 1007, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 739; Central Transp. Co. v. Pullman's Palace Car Co. 139 U. S.

24, 35 L. ed. 55, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 478; McCormick v. Market Nat. Bank, 165 U. S. 538, 41 L. ed. 817, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 433.

As the sale of the bond to the defendant in error was such a transaction as the plaintiff in error, the bank, had no authority to engage in, the bank is not responsible for the misrepresentations of its president at the time of the sale.

Wockler v. First Nat. Bank, 42 Md. 581, 20 Am. Rep. 95; First Nat. Bank v. Hoch, 89 Pa. 324, 33 Am. Rep. 769; 2 Thomp. Nat. Bank Cas. 375.

The defendant in error in dealing with the bank is presumed to have known the powers of the bank and its officers, and that such a transaction as the purchase and sale of bonds was not within those powers.

Western Nat. Bank v. Armstrong, 152 U. S. 346, 38 L. ed. 470, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 572.

As the defendant in error and the plaintiff in error were equally subjects of legal censure in engaging in the transaction of the sale and purchase of the bond, they will be left where they have placed themselves.

First Nat. Bank v. Stewart, 107 U. S. 676, 27 L. ed. 592, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 778.

The presumption of law is that the defendant in error knew that in selling him the bond the bank and its officers were acting beyond the scope of the powers of the bank, and that the transaction was illegal.

Western Nat. Bank v. Armstrong, 152 U. S. 346, 38 L. ed. 470, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 572.

The contract of sale being illegal as ultra vires, and having been fully executed by both parties, neither party can claim anything under it, and they will be left as the court finds them.

Thomas v. West Jersey R. Co. 101 U. S. 71, 25 L. ed. 950; Pearce v. Madison & I. R. Co. 21 How. 441, 16 L. ed. 184.

The United States alone can question the validity of the transaction between the plaintiff and defendant.

Thompson v. St. Nicholas Nat. Bank, 146 U. S. 240, 36 L. ed. 956, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 66.

This court has jurisdiction to entertain this writ of error.

Logan County Nat. Bank v. Townsend, 139 U. S. 67, 35 L. ed. 107, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 496; McCormick v. Market Nat. Bank, 165 U. S. 538, 41 L. ed. 817, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 433.

Mr. Elon R. Brown argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error:

The sale of the bond to the defendant in error having been induced by the false and fraudulent representations of the bank's officer as to its nature and value, he was entitled to recover the damages he had suffered by reason thereof.

Fairchild v. McMahon, 139 N. Y. 290, 34 N. E. 779; Rothschild v. Mack, 115 N. Y. 1, 21 N. E. 726; Daly v. Wise, 132 N. Y. 306, 16 L. R. A. 236, 30 N. E. 837; Hickey v. Morrell, 102 N. Y. 454, 55 Am. Rep. 824, 7 N. E. 321.

Having taken the money of the defendant in error on a contract of sale fraudulently induced by the false representations of its president, the bank cannot shelter itself behind any statutory limitations of the national bank act, to escape answering to the defendant in error for the loss he has suffered.

NOTE.—As to rescission of contract — see notes to Katz v. Bedford (Cal.) 1 L. R. A. 826; McCreery v. Day (N. Y.) 6 L. R. A. 503; and Tarkington v. Purvis (Ind.) 9 L. R. A. 607.
189 U. S.

Logan County Nat. Bank v. Townsend, 139 U. S. 67, 35 L. ed. 107, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 496.

Where the provisions of the national banking act prohibit certain acts by banks or their officers, without imposing any penalty or forfeiture applicable to particular transactions which have been executed, their validity can be questioned only by the United States, and not by private parties.

Thompson v. St. Nicholas Nat. Bank, 146 U. S. 240, 36 L. ed. 956, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 66; Union Nat. Bank v. Matthews, 98 U. S. 621, 25 L. ed. 188; National Bank v. Whitney, 103 U. S. 99, 26 L. ed. 443; First Nat. Bank v. Stewart, 107 U. S. 676, 27 L. ed. 592, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 778.

The decision of the state court having proceeded upon a distinct ground not involving a Federal question, and sufficient of itself to sustain a final judgment without reference to the Federal question involved, the judgment should be affirmed.

Beaupre v. Noyes, 138 U. S. 397, 34 L. ed. 991, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 296; Sceberger v. McCormick, 175 U. S. 274, 44 L. ed. 161, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 128; Eustis v. Bolles, 150 U. S. 361, 37 L. ed. 1111, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 131; Pierce v. Somerset R. Co. 171 U. S. 641, 43 L. ed. 316, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 64; Remington Paper Co. v. Watson, 173 U. S. 443, 43 L. ed. 762, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 456.

This appeal should be dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

Walworth v. Kneeland, 15 How. 348, 14 L. ed. 724; Udell v. Davidson, 7 How. 269, 12 L. ed. 907; Conde v. York, 168 U. S. 642, 42 L. ed. 611, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 234.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an action to recover money paid to the plaintiff in error for certain bonds. One defense set up in the answer was that the bank was a national bank, and that the sale of the bonds was without the authority of the bank, and was illegal and void. Judgment went against the bank, it was affirmed by the appellate division of the supreme court and by the court of appeals, and the case now comes here by writ of error. The ground of the action is that the sale was induced by false representations of the president of the bank. We do not state these particularly, because the findings and rulings of the state court with regard to them are not open. We have to deal with no question except the defense attempted under the United States statute, and, therefore, need not inquire whether they contained a stronger infusion of *fraud than is allowed to vendors in the way of praising their wares.

As we are of opinion that the defendant in error is entitled to keep his judgment, it does not matter so much as otherwise it would whether the result is reached by a dismissal of the writ, on the intimation of Walworth v. Kneeland, 15 How. 348, 353, 880

14 L. ed. 724, 726 (see Conde v. York, 168 U. S. 642, 649, 42 L. ed. 611, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 234), or by an affirmance of the judgment. We shall assume that the defense under the statute was such a claim of immunity as to entitle the plaintiff in error to come here. Logan County Nat. Bank v. Townsend, 139 U. S. 67, 72, 35 L. ed. 107, 110, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 496; McCormick v. Market Bank, 165 U. S. 538, 546, 41 L. ed. 817, 820, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 433. On that assumption, however, we do not perceive how the defense is made out on the record. The complaint, to be sure, alleges that the bank was acting unlawfully in selling the bond, but it does not appear that Petrie knew the fact, and it would be a strong thing to charge him with notice or a duty to make inquiries as to how the bank was conducting its business, or to make the validity of the sale depend upon the fact alone, irrespective of the purchaser's knowledge. See Miners' Ditch Co. v. Zellerbach, 37 Cal. 543, 578, 579, 99 Am. Dec. 300; New York & N. H. R. Co. v. Schuyler, 34 N. Y. 30, 73; Madison & I. R. Co. v. Norwich Sav. Soc. 24 Ind. 457, 462. The sale might have been lawful. It was not necessarily wrong. First Nat. Bank v. National Exch. Bank, 92 U. S. 122, 128, 23 L. ed. 679, 681. However, we need not stop at this preliminary difficulty or another suggested by the answer, on which no point was made. The answer alleges that the sale was without the authority or consent of the bank, and was not within the course of its regular business, which looks a good deal like an attempt to deny that there ever was an effective sale, and yet to keep the price.

The declaration goes upon a rescission of the contract. It contains ambiguous language, but the allegations of tender of the bond and that the tender still is kept good make the ground sufficiently clear. The question then is, leaving on one side the averment just quoted from the answer, and assuming that the parties were attempting a transaction forbidden by the law, whether the nature of the attempt prevents one of them from *withdrawing from the bargain[425] on the ground of preliminary fraud. If the withdrawal were on the ground of repentance alone the law might, or might not, leave the parties where it found them. See Central Transp. Co. v. Pullman's Palace Car Co. 139 U. S. 24, 60, 61, 35 L. ed. 55, 69, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 478; Pullman's Palace Car Co. v. Central Transp. Co. 171 U. S. 138, 150, 43 L. ed. 108, 113, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 808. But a person does not become an outlaw and lose all rights by doing an illegal act. See Connolly v. Union Sewer Pipe Co. 184 U. S. 540, 46 L. ed. 679, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 431. The right not to be led by fraud to change one's situation is anterior to and independent of the contract. The fraud is a tort. Its usual consequence is that, as between the parties, the one who is defrauded has a right, if possible, to be restored to his former position. That right is not taken away because the consequence of its exercise will be the undoing of a forbidden deed.

That is a consequence to which the law can have no objection, and the fraudulent party, who otherwise might have been allowed to disclaim any different obligation from that with which the other had been content, has lost his right to object, because he has brought about the other's consent by wrong. See Pullman's Palace Car Co. v. Central Transp. Co. 171 U. S. 138, 151, 43 L. ed. 108, 114, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 808. It is true that the fraud was perpetrated by an agent, and it is argued that he did not represent the bank for an illegal act. But unless this means that there was no sale, as the answer and a part of the argument seem to suggest,—in which case, of course, Petrie must have his money back,—the answer is that if the bank relies upon the sale it must take it with the burden of the fraud. It must adopt the whole transaction or no part of it. It cannot affirm what is for its advantage and repudiate the rest. Cases where the action is on the illegal contract do not apply. Such was First Nat. Bank v. Hoch, 89 Pa. 324, 33 Am. Rep. 769. Here the attempt is to recover outside of it, treating it as set aside. An action for damages caused by fraudulent representations which induced a contract affirms the contract and relies upon it (Whiteside v. Brawley, 152 Mass. 133, 134, 24 N. E. 1088), and therefore may be subject to the same defenses as an action brought directly upon the contract. Weckler v. First Nat. Bank, 42 Md. 581, 595, 597, 20 Am. Rep. [426] 95, seems to have been *an action of this character in respect of a sale on commission by the bank. We express no opinion as to an action of that kind. See Thompson v. Saint Nicholas Nat. Bank, 146 U. S. 240, 251, 36 L. ed. 956, 961, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 66; First Nat. Bank v. Hawkins, 174 U. S. 364, 43 L. ed. 1007, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 739. But when a right is claimed to repudiate it, the party who denies the right is the one who relies upon the contract, and that party must take it as it was made. The record discloses no error re-examinable here. Judgment affirmed.

Mr. Justice McKenna took no part in the consideration and disposition of this case.

NATIONAL BANK & LOAN COMPANY OF WATERTOWN, New York, Plff. in Err.,

v.

LILIAN TRAVER CARR.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 426.)

Contracts—rescission of illegal contract for fraud.

This case is governed by the decision in National Bank & Loan Co. v. Petrie, ante, 879.

[No. 165.]

189 U. S.

Argued and submitted February 24, 1903.
Decided March 9, 1903.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of New York to review a judgment for plaintiff in a suit to recover money paid to a national bank on a contract alleged to have been void for fraud, which was affirmed by the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court of that State and by the Court of Appeals. Affirmed.

Messrs. Henry Purcell and John Lansing submitted the cause for plaintiff in error.

For their contentions see their briefs as reported in National Bank & Loan Co. v. Petrie, ante, 879.

Mr. Elon R. Brown argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error:

As the purchase of the bonds for the defendant in error from the bank required the exercise of judgment and discretion, the bank's president could not lawfully act as an agent of both the bank and the defendant in error. The defendant in error, being ignorant of his dealings with the bank in her behalf, was entitled to rescind or avoid the contract on discovering that fact, independently of any false representations made by him in effecting the sale to her.

Conkey v. Bond, 36 N. Y. 427; Mayo v. Knowlton, 134 N. Y. 250, 31 N. E. 985; Taussig v. Hart, 58 N. Y. 425; Bruce v. Davenport, 36 Barb. 349; New York Cent. Ins. Co. v. National Protection Ins. Co. 14 N. Y. 85; Murray v. Beard, 102 N. Y. 505, 7 N. E. 553; Empire State Ins. Co. v. American Cent. Ins. Co. 138 N. Y. 446, 34 N. E. 200; Ritt v. Washington Marine & F. Ins. Co. 41 Barb. 353; Utica Ins. Co. v. Toledo Ins. Co. 17 Barb. 134; Knauss v. Gottfried Krueger Brewing Co. 142 N. Y. 70, 36 N. E. 867. See also Carman v. Beach, 63 N. Y. 97; Fellows v. Northrup, 39 N. Y. 117; Pom. Eq. Jur. 902.

The defendant in error may rescind the purchase of the bonds because of the president's misrepresentations as to the value and nature of the bonds, and of the suppression by him of the fact that he was purchasing them from the bank while acting as its manager and president, without proof of the intent of the bank to defraud her.

Hammond v. Pennock, 61 N. Y. 145. Approved in Fairchild v. McMahon, 139 N. Y. 294, 34 N. E. 779; American Sugar Ref. Co. v. Fancher, 145 N. Y. 559, 27 L. R. A. 757, 40 N. E. 206.

The tender of the bonds to the plaintiff in error, and demand for the return of the consideration for them, made upon her discovery that the president had purchased them from the bank, was a disaffirmance of the sale, entitling the defendant in error to recover in this action.

Gould v. Cayuga County Nat. Bank, 86 N. Y. 75, 99 N. Y. 333, 2 N. E. 16; Yeomans v. Bell, 151 N. Y. 230, 45 N. E. 552; Allerton v. Allerton, 50 N. Y. 670; Vail v. Reynolds, 118 N. Y. 297, 23 N. E. 301; Berry v.

American Cent. Ins. Co. 132 N. Y. 49, 30 N. E. 254.

The bank as the undislosed principal is liable on the contract and for the acts of its president. It cannot reap the benefit of a contract made by him or by his wrongful acts, and escape resulting responsibility to those with whom he dealt.

Bennett v. Judson, 21 N. Y. 238; Fairchild v. McMahon, 139 N. Y. 290, 34 N. E. 779; Benjamin, Sales, § 467a.

Having taken the money of the defendant in error on a contract induced by false representations and double dealing, the bank as the undislosed principal cannot shelter itself behind statutory limitations of the national bank act, to escape answering to the defendant in error for the loss she has suffered.

Logan County Nat. Bank v. Townsend, 139 U. S. 67, 35 L. ed. 107, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 496.

That the bank was acting as an undislosed principal, and that the defendant in error had no knowledge that she was dealing with the bank, render inapplicable the doctrine of ultra vires, by which a contract made by a corporation beyond the scope of its corporate powers is unlawful and void.

McCormick v. Market Bank, 165 U. S. 538, 41 L. ed. 817, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 433.

Having no knowledge that she was dealing with the bank, the defendant in error, of course, was not charged with the duty of taking notice of the legal limits of its powers.

Weckler v. First Nat. Bank, 42 Md. 581, 20 Am. Rep. 95.

Where the provisions of the national banking act prohibit certain acts of banks or their officers, without imposing any penalty or forfeiture applicable to particular transactions which have been executed, their validity can be questioned only by the United States, and not by private parties.

Thompson v. St. Nicholas Nat. Bank, 146 U. S. 240, 36 L. ed. 956, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 66; Union Nat. Bank v. Matthews, 98 U. S. 621, 25 L. ed. 188; National Bank v. Whitney, 103 U. S. 99, 26 L. ed. 443; First Nat. Bank v. Stewart, 107 U. S. 676, 27 L. ed. 592, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 778.

The decision of the state court having proceeded upon distinct grounds not involving a Federal question, and sufficient of themselves to sustain a final judgment, without reference to the Federal question involved, the judgment should be affirmed.

Beaupre v. Noyes, 138 U. S. 397, 34 L. ed. 991, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 296; Seeberger v. McCormick, 175 U. S. 274, 44 L. ed. 161, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 128; Eustis v. Bolles, 150 U. S. 361, 37 L. ed. 1111, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 131; Pierce v. Somerset R. Co. 171 U. S. 641, 43 L. ed. 316, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 64; Remington Paper Co. v. Watson, 173 U. S. 443, 43 L. ed. 762, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 456; Jenkins v. Loewenthal, 110 U. S. 222, 28 L. ed. 129, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 638.

The appeal should be dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

Walworth v. Kneeland, 15 How. 348, 14

L. ed. 724; Udell v. Davidson, 7 How. 769, 12 L. ed. 907; Conde v. York, 168 U. S. 642, 42 L. ed. 611, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 234; Murdock v. Memphis, 20 Wall. 590, 22 L. ed. 429.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This case is similar in substance, pleading, and argument to the foregoing, with the additional fact that the president of the bank acted as the confidential adviser of the defendant in error, and did not reveal to her that the bonds belonged to the bank, or that he was on both sides of the transaction and interested against her. As soon as she found out that the bank was the seller, she repudiated the sale.

Judgment affirmed.

JOHN BROWNFIELD, Plff. in Err.,

v.

STATE OF SOUTH CAROLINA.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 426-429.)

Appeal—recital in agreed statement—when taken as true.

A recital in an agreed statement, that defendant offered to introduce testimony of a discrimination against negroes in the selection of grand jurors, which was relied upon as the ground for his motion to quash the indictment, will not be taken as true on error to a state court, where such statement was signed "with relation to case as settled by judge," and he stated therein that he overruled the motion because the statement of facts set out in the grounds for quashing the indictment did not appear from the records or otherwise, and that in the absence of any showing to the contrary he was bound to assume that the jury commissioners had done their duty, and the record discloses no exception to the supposed refusal to hear the proffered evidence, and no contention in that regard on the appeal to the state supreme court.

[No. 172.]

Argued February 25, 1903. Decided March 9, 1903.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of South Carolina to review a judgment which affirmed a conviction of murder. Affirmed.

See same case below, 60 S. C. 509, 39 S. E. 2.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. J. L. Mitchell and W. J. Whipper argued the cause, and, with Mr. E. M. Hewlett, filed a brief for plaintiff in error.

Mr. John S. Wilson argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error.

Mr. W. H. Townsend also argued the cause for defendant in error.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This case comes here by writ of error to the supreme court of South Carolina. The plaintiff in error has been convicted of murder, and the error alleged is that the grand jury was composed wholly of white persons, and that all negroes, although constituting four fifths of the population and of the registered voters of the county, were excluded on account of their race and color. The plaintiff in error is a negro, and he says that in this way he has been denied the equal protection of the laws and of the civil rights guaranteed to him by the Constitution and laws of the United States. Carter v. Texas, 177 U. S. 442, 44 L. ed. 839, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 687. The case was taken to the supreme court of the state by appeal, and the judgment of the trial court was affirmed.

189 U. S.

We have stated the error which is alleged. The trouble with the case is that we are not warranted in assuming that the allegations are true. The record contains an agreed statement called a brief, in which it appears that the defendant made a motion to quash on the grounds stated, and in which it is said that the defendant offered to introduce testimony to support these grounds. But this agreed statement is "signed with relation to case as settled by judge." It appears that the parties agreed that the judge before whom the case was tried should "make a statement as to his rulings upon the motion to quash the indictment, and also as to the motion to challenge the arrays of grand and petit jurors in the case, and also as to requests to charge, and such statement shall be the agreed statement for the purposes of this appeal." The challenge of the array referred to was upon the same grounds as the [428] motion to quash. *In pursuance of this agreement the judge made a statement of the grounds on which he overruled the motion. "Because the statement of facts set out in the grounds for quashing the same did not appear from the records or otherwise. . . . In the absence of any showing to the contrary, I was bound to assume that the jury commissioners had done their duty."

The foregoing language is quite inconsistent with there having been an offer to prove the allegations of the motion, as is the further fact that the record discloses no exception to the supposed refusal to hear evidence offered to that end. If these considerations were not enough, we have, in addition, the absence of any suggestion of a refusal to admit evidence in the reasons for appeal to the supreme court, and the statement of the supreme court that it was not contended at the hearing of the appeal that there was any offer to introduce testimony on the point "other than the offer therein made." The last words refer, we assume, to the concluding words of the motion: "All of which the defendant is ready to verify." Upon the whole record we are compelled to infer that the statement that the defendant offered to introduce evidence was inserted in the so-called brief by his counsel, but was not agreed to except so far as it might be confirmed by the statement of the judge, and that he did not confirm it. We see no ground for the suggestion that this fact was outside the matters submitted to the judge, and therefore must be taken to have been admitted. Evidently, that was not the understanding on the part of the state. It is suggested that the allegations of the motion to quash, not having been controverted and having been supported by the affidavit of the defendant, must be taken to be true. But a motion, although reduced to writing, is not a pleading, and does not require a written answer. It appears from the grounds on which the judge decided it, apart from anything else, that the allegations were controverted, and under such circumstances it was necessary for the defendant to make an attempt to introduce evidence. The formal words of the motion were not enough. Smith v. Mississippi, 162 U. S. 592, 601, 40 L. ed. 1082, 1085, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 900.

189 U.S.

A provisional objection is made to the Constitution of South *Carolina in case it [429] should be held to exclude negroes from the jury. But the ground of the motion was not that negroes were excluded by an invalid constitutional provision, but that they were excluded in the administration of the law, although they were qualified under it to serve. The case involves questions of the gravest character, but we must deal with it according to the record, and the record discloses no wrong.

Judgment affirmed.

Mr. Justice McKenna took no part in the consideration and disposition of this case.

EDWARD H. PARDEE and Arabella D. Huntington, Executrix, and Charles H. Tweed and Isaac E. Gates, Executors of Collis P. Huntington, Deceased, et al.,
Plffs. in Err.,

v.

A. D. ALDRIDGE, A. F. Hardie, and W. G. Mowry, Trustees for J. E. Downs and Associates.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 429-434.)

Trial—conflicting findings of fact—mortgage—of railroad property—what property covered—judgments—conclusiveness against strangers.

1. The findings of the jury upon special issues of fact submitted to them for their determination, where warranted by the evidence, control conflicting findings made under the instructions of the court.
2. Real property only temporarily used for railroad purposes, having been acquired by a railroad company with the intention of subdividing such portions as should not be

NOTE.—On mortgages of railroad property—see note to Thompson v. White Water Valley R. Co. 33 L. ed. U. S. 256.

As to jurisdiction as affected by possession of the subject-matter—see Adams v. Mercantile Trust Co. 15 C. C. A. 6, and note.

On conclusiveness of judgments generally—needed for railroad purposes into lots to be sold to its employees, is not covered by a mortgage of all the property of such company "used for and pertaining to the operation of said railroad."

3. An adjudication in a suit in equity brought by a receiver of mortgaged property against persons claiming the land under an execution sale, that such property was subject to the mortgage, did not so bring the property into the custody of the court as to invalidate a prior sale of the same property on execution to other persons, strangers to the suit.

[No. 137.]

Argued January 19, 20, 1903. Decided March 16, 1903.

IN ERROR to the Court of Civil Appeals for the Fifth Supreme Judicial District of the State of Texas to review a judgment which reversed a judgment of the trial court in favor of defendants in an action of trespass to try title to land. Affirmed.

See same case below, 24 Tex. Civ. App. 254, 60 S. W. 789.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Maxwell Evarts and R. S. Lovett argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiffs in error:

This court has jurisdiction to inquire and determine whether, by the judgment of the court of civil appeals, due effect has been denied to the decrees of the circuit court in the foreclosure proceedings.

Dupasseur v. Rochereau, 21 Wall. 130, 22 L. ed. 588; Embry v. Palmer, 107 U. S. 3, 27 L. ed. 346, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 25; Crescent City L. S. L. & S. H. Co. v. Butchers' Union S. H. & L. S. L. Co. 120 U. S. 141, 30 L. ed. 614, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 472; Central Nat. Bank v. Stevens, 169 U. S. 432, 42 L. ed. 807, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 403.

Where, as in this case, the evidence is without conflict, and the question is whether the judgment of the state court upon such evidence denies due effect to a decree of a court of the United States, the question is obviously one of law, and not of fact, and this court has the right of review.

Martin v. Hunter, 1 Wheat. 304, 4 L. ed. 97; Smith v. Maryland, 6 Cranch, 286, 3 L. ed. 225; Chouteau v. Eckhart, 2 How. 344, 11 L. ed. 293; Cunningham v. Ashley, 14 How. 377, 14 L. ed. 462; Hyde v. Booraem, 16 Pet. 169, 10 L. ed. 925; The Francis Wright, 105 U. S. 381, sub nom. Duncan v. The Francis Wright, 26 L. ed. 1100; Republican River Bridge Co. v. Kansas P. R. Co. 92 U. S. 315, 23 L. ed. 515; Lytle v. Arkansas, 22 How. 193, 16 L. ed. 306; MacKay v. Dillon, 4 How. 421, 11 L. ed. 1038; United States v. Pugh, 99 U. S. 265, 25 L. ed. 322; Sun Mut. Ins. Co. v. Ocean Ins. Co. 107 U. S. 485, 27 L. ed. 337, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep.

582; The Edwin I. Morrison, 153 U. S. 199, sub nom. Bradley Fertilizer Co. v. The Edwin I. Morrison, 38 L. ed. 688, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 823; Dower v. Richards, 151 U. S. 658, 38 L. ed. 305, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 452.

The supreme court of Texas, the jurisdiction of which by express constitutional provision is limited to questions of law, does not hesitate to review judgments of the courts of civil appeals (which are declared by the Constitution to be conclusive upon the facts) in cases where it deems the evidence insufficient to support the judgment; and in some cases it bases its judgment upon facts not embraced in the findings of the court of civil appeals, but which are contained in the statement of facts.

Clarendon Land Invest. Agency Co. v. McClelland Bros. 86 Tex. 179, 22 L. R. A. 105, 23 S. W. 576, 1100; Bauman v. Jaffray, 86 Tex. 617, 26 S. W. 394; Gainesville, H. & W. R. Co. v. Lacy, 86 Tex. 246, 24 S. W. 269; Tackaberry v. City Nat. Bank, 85 Tex. 488, 22 S. W. 151, 299; McLeary v. Dawson, 87 Tex. 524, 29 S. W. 1044; Aetna Ins. Co. v. Holcomb, 89 Tex. 404, 34 S. W. 915; Lee v. International & G. N. R. Co. 89 Tex. 583, 36 S. W. 63; Kilgore v. Northwest Texas Baptist Educational Asso. 90 Tex. 139, 37 S. W. 598; Moore v. Waco Bldg. Asso. 92 Tex. 265, 47 S. W. 716. See also Fellows v. Northrup, 39 N. Y. 117; Whitman v. Winchester Repeating Arms Co. 55 Conn. 247, 10 Atl. 571; Morcy v. Milliken, 86 Me. 464, 30 Atl. 102.

Where property in the custody of one court through a receiver is sold under process of other courts against the defendant, such sales are absolutely void.

Wiswall v. Sampson, 14 How. 52, 14 L. ed. 322; Davis v. Gray, 16 Wall. 203, 21 L. ed. 447; Porter v. Sabin, 149 U. S. 473, 37 L. ed. 815, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1008; Re Tyler, 149 U. S. 181, 37 L. ed. 694, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 785; Eduards v. Norton, 55 Tex. 410, Russell v. Texas & P. R. Co. 68 Tex. 646, 5 S. W. 686; Ellis v. Vernon Ice, Light & Water Co. 86 Tex. 109, 23 S. W. 858; Texas Trunk R. Co. v. Lewis, 81 Tex. 1, 16 S. W. 647.

Upon the same principle, every sale sought to be made of property while in the custody of a court for administration and distribution, and in hostility to the title there held, no matter whether under legal process or voluntarily, and no matter whether the vendor or vendee are parties to the receivership litigation or not, should be declared void.

See Scott v. Crawford, 16 Tex. Civ. App. 477, 41 S. W. 697.

Mr. W. J. Moroney argued the cause and filed a brief for defendants in error:

Findings of fact in a state court, whether by court or jury, are conclusive on this court, regardless of the question of the suffi-

see notes to Sharon v. Terry (C. C. N. D. Cal.) 1 L. R. A. 572; Boilong v. Schuyler Nat. Bank (Neb.) 3 L. R. A. 142; Wiese v. San Francisco Musical Fund Soc. (Cal.) 7 L. R. A. 577; Morrill v. Morrill (Or.) 11 L. R. A. 155; Bank of United States v. Beverly, 11 L. ed. U. S. 76; Johnson Steel Street Rail Co. v. Wharton, 38

L. ed. U. S. 429; and Southern P. R. Co. v. United States, 42 L. ed. U. S. 355.

As to conclusiveness and effect of judgments as between Federal and state courts—see note to Kansas City, Ft. S. & M. R. Co. v. Morgan, 21 C. C. A. 478; and Union & P. Bank v. Memphis, 49 C. C. A. 468.

ciency of the evidence to support the findings.

Bartlett v. Lockwood, 160 U. S. 357, 40 L. ed. 455, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 334; Noble v. Mitchell, 164 U. S. 367, 41 L. ed. 472, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 110; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Haber, 169 U. S. 613, 42 L. ed. 878, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 488; Hedrick v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 167 U. S. 673, 42 L. ed. 320, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 922; Chemical Nat. Bank v. City Bank, 160 U. S. 646, 40 L. ed. 568, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 417; Egan v. Hart, 165 U. S. 188, 41 L. ed. 680, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 300; Israel v. Arthur, 152 U. S. 355, 38 L. ed. 474, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 583; Dower v. Richards, 151 U. S. 658, 38 L. ed. 305, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 457; Jenkins v. Neff, 186 U. S. 230, 46 L. ed. 1140, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 905; Bement v. National Harrow Co. 186 U. S. 70, 46 L. ed. 1058, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 747; U. S. Rev. Stat. § 1011 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 715).

When property in the hands of a receiver is sold under order of court, the sale confirmed and complied with, the deed made to the purchaser, and the receiver directed to deliver the property to the purchaser on demand, and the purchaser, after a reasonable time, fails to demand possession, but voluntarily leaves the property in the receiver's hands, such property ceases to be in custodia legis, and the receiver in fact becomes the private agent of the purchaser.

Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Bath, 17 Tex. Civ. App. 697, 44 S. W. 595; Animarium Co. v. Bright, 82 Fed. 197; Baughman v. Calavera County Super. Ct. 72 Cal. 572, 14 Pac. 369; Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. State, 89 Tex. 294, 34 S. W. 734, and cases cited; The Holladay Case, 29 Fed. 226.

Under the term "appurtenances," as used in a railroad mortgage, only such property passes as is indispensable to the use and enjoyment of the franchises of the company. It does not include property acquired simply because it may prove useful to the company and facilitate the discharge of its business. A distinction is made, in such cases, between what is indispensable to the operation of a railroad, and what would be only convenient.

Humphreys v. McKissock, 140 U. S. 304, 35 L. ed. 473, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 779; State, Camden & A. R. & Transp. Co., Prosecutors, v. Mansfield, 23 N. J. L. 510, 57 Am. Dec. 409; Shirley v. Waco Tap R. Co. 78 Tex. 136, 10 S. W. 543.

The purchaser at a foreclosure sale acquires title to the road as constructed.

2 Perry, Tr. § 759; Walsh v. Barton, 24 Ohio St. 28; Seymour v. Canandaigua & N. F. R. Co. 25 Barb. 284; Elwell v. Grand Street & N. R. Co. 67 Barb. 83; Shamokin Valley R. Co. v. Livermore, 47 Pa. 465, 86 Am. Dec. 552.

Use for a Y of a temporary, and not a permanent, character, would exclude the land from the mortgage, even if it had been definitely located.

Elliott, Railroads, 654, § 498.

189 U. S.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an action of trespass to try title to land, brought by *Aldridge and others, [430] trustees, against Pardee and others, the plaintiffs in error. The only parcels here in controversy are two tracts, known as the Hughes and Slaughter tract and the Mays tract. Both parties claim title under the Texas Trunk Railroad Company. Pardee claims under the foreclosure of a mortgage made by the railroad company and some incidental proceedings. Aldridge claims under a sale outside of the mortgage. The question in the case is whether the mortgage embraced these tracts.

Although it may not be necessary, we will state the title on each side a little more in detail before discussing the questions of law. On March 22, 1880, the Texas Trunk Railroad Company mortgaged its road, "including all appurtenances and appendages of said railroad, and the property of said company now acquired or which may be acquired, in the state of Texas, used for and pertaining to the operation of said railroad." This was to secure bonds. Later in the same year, although the deed was dated earlier, the Hughes and Slaughter tract was conveyed to the railroad. The Mays tract was conveyed the next year. On January 31, 1883, there was a decree of foreclosure on the mortgage in the United States circuit court, and there was a sale on the 1st of the following May. The purchasers organized a new company, under the old charter, but a distinct organization, as permitted by the local law. In 1885 the property of the second company was sold by the sheriff, on execution following a judgment in the state court, and also by the United States marshal, under an order of sale for failure to pay certain sums as provided in the original foreclosure proceedings. The same persons purchased at both sales, and organized a third company, still under the old charter. On August 30, 1888, the third company made a mortgage of the railroad. A bill to foreclose this was filed in the United States court on September 4, 1891, a decree of foreclosure was made in 1895, and Pardee, the plaintiff in error, purchased at the sale, for the benefit of himself and C. P. Huntington. Thus, it will be seen that the title of the plaintiffs in error depends, as we have said, on the question whether the original mortgage embraced the land in suit.

*Before the first foreclosure, but after the [431] execution of the mortgage, suits were begun against the first corporation, and in 1887 a judgment was rendered against it in one of them. On this judgment executions were issued, and the parcels of land in suit were sold to the trustee for Downs and his associates, the defendants in error. The trustee brought a suit to try title against the trustees and surviving directors of the first company and a receiver of the third company, and got judgment on April 7, 1898. The defendant directors and trustees also executed a deed to him, and he afterwards conveyed to the present trustees for Downs. If the first mortgage embraced the land, Downs got no rights, but except for that question and one other to be mentioned, his title is not in controversy here, and we do not go into it in detail. The trial court gave judgment for Pardee and Huntington as to the tracts in question, but the judgment was reversed by the court of civil appeals, and final judgment was entered in that court in favor of the trustees for Downs. A writ of error was refused by the supreme court of the state. The case is brought here by writ of error on the ground that due effect was denied to decrees of the United States court. Dupassey v. Roche-reau, 21 Wall. 130, 22 L. ed. 588. See Sweringen v. St. Louis, 185 U. S. 38, 41, 46 L. ed. 795, 797, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 569. As we are of opinion that the judgment of the court of appeals was right, it is less important than otherwise it would be to discuss the grounds upon which we think that there is jurisdiction, and we shall proceed at once to the merits of the case.

885

If the disputed parcels of land came under the mortgage when they were acquired, they did so as "property used for and pertaining to the operation of said railroad." At the trial evidence was taken on the question whether these parcels were used for or did pertain to such operation. The defendants in error disclaimed to the extent of a right of way 100 feet wide, 50 feet on each side of the center line of the railroad. But there was testimony that the company, when it purchased, intended, after using what was necessary for tracks on the west side, to lay out the rest of the Hughes and Slaughter land in lots and sell them to the [432] employees of the road. So as *to the Mays tract; what was needed was taken for tracks and to get sand, and the rest was to be cut up into lots. Both parcels were returned each year for taxation as "lands and town lots . . . exclusive of right of way and depot grounds," in the inventory of the company. The judge instructed the jury to return findings on two special issues to the following effect: As to the Hughes and Slaughter land, the intention of the company was to put there the main track, part of the sheds, and whatever switches and side tracks should be necessary to the operation of the road, and if they did not occupy all of the land to sell lots on the eastern side to its employees. The land was not cut up, and no lots were sold. The company built its main track on the west side, a Y extending eastwardly across the land to beyond its center, and a small house, used as a ticket office and car shed. This was the only land the road owned in Dallas, where it terminated, and if it had been constructed and operated properly it would have needed as much as 25 acres (the size of the tract) for terminal purposes. As to the Mays tract, the intention was as above stated. The main track was built across it on the east, and a spur track was built to reach the sand. It would be necessary to use sand properly to construct and operate the road.

The foregoing findings were merely the result of rulings on the evidence. But the jury found, on other special issues submitted to them, that all but 100 feet off the west boundary of the Hughes and Slaughter tract was acquired for the above-stated purpose of subdivision and sale, that any use of the rest of the land in connection with the operation of the railroad, except the 100 feet, was only of a temporary character, and that there was no such use of the rest of the land except of so much as was occupied by the Y. There was evidence that the company expected to use another tract for terminal purposes, although it never got the deed. The jury further found that no part of the Hughes and Slaughter tract above what was disclaimed was necessary for the construction, equipment, or operation of the railroad when the first mortgage was foreclosed. Also, they found that all of the Mays tract was acquired for the purpose of subdivision and sale. As there *was evidence warranting these find-[433] ings, and as the findings dealt with pure matters of fact, which it was the province of the jury to determine, so far as there was a conflict between them and those which were made under instructions, those which expressed the free judgment of the jury would prevail. We have no concern with the arguments which are urged here in favor of different conclusions. It is enough that there was some evidence to support the free findings of the jury, and, that being so, those findings establish the facts, as was held by the court of appeals.

On the findings which we have recited, the land in dispute was not property used for and pertaining to the operation of said railroad, and the ruling of the court of appeals was right. Some point is made of the disclaimer, which is said to have been arbitrary in amount, and not based on evidence. But a party may disclaim what he likes, in advance of the evidence, and is not bound to give reasons for his course.

One matter remains to be mentioned. A receiver appointed in the second foreclosure suit brought a bill in equity in the United States court against certain persons who had purchased the land in question on other execution sales. One ground of the bill was that the property was subject to the mortgage, and on July 16, 1895, it was so decreed. It is argued that although the trustees for Downs were not parties to this bill, they in some way were affected by the decree, that the proceeding was in rem, and that the decree brought the property into the custody of the court so as to invalidate the sale. Wiswall v. Sampson, 14 How. 52, 14 L. ed. 322. But a suit in equity is not a proceeding in rem, properly so called. It does not purport to summon or invite, by notice or otherwise, all the world to come in, so far as there are any adverse interests. It is more personal even than the common law, and works out its decrees by orders to the defendants. Of course, the adjudication in such a suit does not conclude strangers. As to the decree bringing the property into the custody of the court in such sense as to invalidate the sales under which Downs claims, the receiver being a receiver of the mortgaged property only, and there being no representative of the equity of redemption [434] of Down's interest *before the court, it is not to be presumed that any act was done inconsistent with outstanding rights as now established, or that the receiver was put in possession of property which was not embraced in the mortgage. The receiver was in possession of the road, and his right to the portion of the land over which the railroad ran is not disputed, but it does not appear that he held the residue under an adverse claim, or at all. Although declaring his right to the residue to be paramount to a third person, the court left all others free to assert their claims. There is nothing to show that the mode in which the trustees for Downs asserted their rights was unlawful or void. Probably nothing was done under the suit in equity beyond the entering of the decree on July 16, 1895. The principal sale took place before that date.

Judgment affirmed.

Mr. Justice White and Mr. Justice Peckham dissented.

KNOXVILLE WATER COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,
v.

MAYOR AND ALDERMEN OF THE CITY OF KNOXVILLE.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 434-438.)

Contracts—impairment of obligation—regulation of water rates—contract exemption.

1. A provision in a contract between a water company and a municipality, that the company shall supply water to private consumers at a specified rate, does not amount to an implied undertaking by the municipality not to disturb such rates, the obligation of which is impaired by an ordinance reducing them, where the company was incorporated under an act which, while conferring upon it power to charge such rates as might be agreed upon with its consumers, expressly recognized the power of the municipality to regulate water rates.
2. The obligation of contracts between a water company and private consumers by which the latter were to pay for the water in accordance with the rates "now or hereafter in force"

NOTE.—As to what laws are void as impairing obligation of contracts—see notes to Franklin County Grammar School v. Bailey (Vt.) 10 L. R. A. 405; Fletcher v. Peck, 3 L. ed. U. S. 162; McCanna & F. Co. v. Citizens' Trust & Surety Co. 24 C. C. A. 20; and Montana Ore-Purchasing Co. v. Boston & M. Consol. Copper & S. Min. Co. 35 C. C. A. 12.

As to contract exemptions from legislative power to fix rates—see note to Detroit v. Detroit Citizens' Street R. Co. 46 L. ed. U. S. 592.

189 U. S.

is not impaired by a municipal ordinance reducing such rates, enacted in the exercise of the power of the municipality to regulate water rates.

[No. 212.]

Argued March 13, 1903. Decided March 23, 1903.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Tennessee to review a judgment of that court enforcing a penalty for charging water rates in excess of those fixed by municipal ordinance. Affirmed.

See same case below, 107 Tenn. 647, 64 S. W. 1075.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Charles T. Cates, Jr., and Heber J. May argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The result of the authorities upon the subject is that, as a general rule, every member of the municipal council is entitled to reasonable notice of special meetings, and no action can be lawfully taken at such meetings unless such notice has been given, or unless the members not notified actually attend and participate in the business of the meeting.

London & N. Y. Land Co. v. Jellico, 103 Tenn. 320, 52 S. W. 995; Dill. Mun. Corp. 4th ed. §§ 256, 263, 264; 1 Beach. Pub. Corp. § 265; Re Turnpike Road, 5 Binn. 481; Paola & F. River R. Co. v. Anderson County, 16 Kan. 302; Rex v. Shrewsbury, Cas. T. Hardw. 151; Ang. & A. Corp. §§ 492-494; 15 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 1st ed. pp. 1035, 1080, 1081; 7 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 679, note 2; 2 Cook, Corp. §§ 594, 596; Lord v. Anoka, 36 Minn. 176, 30 N. W. 550; Beaver Creek Twp. v. Hastings, 52 Mich. 528, 18 N. W. 250; People ex rel. Loew v. Batchelor, 22 N. Y. 128; Harding v. Vandewater, 40 Cal. 77; Stov v. Wyse, 7 Conn. 214, 18 Am. Dec. 99; Medical & Surgical Soc. v. Weatherly, 75 Ala. 248; Wiggin v. First Freewill Baptist Church, 8 Met. 301.

The right to contract, and to agree upon prices for water as an essential element of said right, is not in conflict with the city's claim of "power to regulate," but is property and liberty within the meaning of the Constitution of Tennessee and the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

Third Nat. Bank v. Divine Grocery Co. 97 Tenn. 604, 34 L. R. A. 445, 37 S. W. 390; Stratton Claimants v. Morris Claimants, 89 Tenn. 497, sub nom. Dibrell v. Kanier, 12 L. R. A. 70, 15 S. W. 87; Williams v. Fears, 179 U. S. 274, 45 L. ed. 188, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 128.

By "due process of law," which is synonymous with "the law of the land," is intended "that general law which hears before it condemns, which proceeds upon inquiry and renders judgment only after trial." By it is meant the natural and inherent principles of justice, and it forbids that one man's property or right to property shall be taken for the benefit of another or for the state without compensation, and that no one shall be condemned in his person or property, or be deprived of his liberty, without in proper form being heard in his own defense.

Holden v. Hardy, 169 U. S. 390, 391, 42 L. ed. 790, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 383; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Schmidt, 177 U. S. 230, 44 L. ed. 747, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 620; Brannon, 14th Amendment, 140 et seq.

The legislature of Tennessee could not constitutionally delegate to the city the power to fix prices at which water should be sold to the authorities of the city—itsself a consumer—and to its inhabitants, without some provision for judicial investigation of the reasonableness of the rates sought to be fixed by such authorities.

Cleveland Gaslight & Coke Co. v. Cleveland, 71 Fed. 614; Agua Pura Co. v. Las Vegas (N. M.) 50 L. R. A. 224, 60 Pac. 208.

The exercise by the city of its power to contract for waterworks to supply itself and its inhabitants with water is not an exercise of its governmental or legislative functions, but its business or proprietary powers. The purpose of such a contract is not to govern its inhabitants, but to obtain a benefit for the city itself and its inhabitants.

Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank v. Arkansas City, 34 L. R. A. 518, 22 C. C. A. 171, 40 U. S. App. 257, 76 Fed. 271; 1 Dill. Mun. Corp. § 27; Cincinnati v. Cameron, 33 Ohio St. 336, 367; Safety Insulated Wire & Cable Co. v. Baltimore, 13 C. C. A. 375, 25 U. S. App. 166, 66 Fed. 140; Cunningham v. Cleveland, 39 C. C. A. 211, 98 Fed. 657.

Both the "agreement" of July 1, 1882, and the ordinance-contract of October 20, 1899, contain all the essential elements of a valid contract.

Vicksburg Waterworks Co. v. Vicksburg, 185 U. S. 65–80, 46 L. ed. 808–815, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585.

This court will form an independent judgment as to both the existence of the contract and its proper construction.

Freeport Water Co. v. Freeport, 180 U. S. 610, 611, 45 L. ed. 693, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 493; Board of Liquidation of City Debt v. Louisiana, 179 U. S. 622, 638, 45 L. ed. 347, 353, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 263.

To the extent that the judgment of the supreme court of Tennessee may have been based upon its opinion that the power to regulate rates is a police power, and that, therefore, the city could not be invested with power to bind itself by an irrevocable contract not to regulate rates, it is not in harmony with the repeated adjudications of this court.

Los Angeles v. Los Angeles City Water Co. 177 U. S. 558, 44 L. ed. 886, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 736; Walla Walla v. Walla Walla Water Co. 172 U. S. 10, 43 L. ed. 346, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77; New Orleans Waterworks Co. v. Rivers, 115 U. S. 674, 29 L. ed. 525, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273.

It was not intended that the power to regulate should destroy the power and right to contract, or that it was to be exercised notwithstanding a contract expressly or impliedly renouncing that right.

Walla Walla v. Walla Walla Water Co. 172 U. S. 1, 20, 43 L. ed. 341, 349, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77; Detroit v. Detroit Citizens' Street R. Co. 184 U. S. 368, 46 L. ed. 592, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 410; City R. Co. v. Citizens' Street R. Co. 166 U. S. 557, 41 L. ed. 1114, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 653.

In any event, rates established by the city must be shown to be reasonable.

Freeport Water Co. v. Freeport, 180 U. S. 590, 600, 45 L. ed. 680, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 493.

There is no more reason to permit the municipal government to repudiate its solemn obligation, entered into for value, than there is to permit an individual to do so. Good faith and fair dealing should be exacted of the one equally with the other.

Meyer v. Brown, 65 Cal. 589, 4 Pac. 25, 625, 26 Pac. 281; Los Angeles Water Co. v. Los Angeles, 103 Fed. 711.

Mr. George W. Pickle argued the cause, and, with Mr. J. W. Culton and Messrs. Pickle & Turner, filed a brief for defendant in error:

The state, by direct enactment of its legislature, or by authority delegated by the legislature to counties or municipalities, may regulate public utilities and the rates to be charged by corporations or individuals rendering any service to the public.

Munn v. Illinois, 94 U. S. 133, 24 L. ed. 87; Railroad Commission Cases, 116 U. S. 307, 347–352, 29 L. ed. 636, 650, 651, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 334, 348, 391; Spring Valley Waterworks v. Schottler, 110 U. S. 347, 23 L. ed. 173, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 48; Winchester & L. Turnp. Road Co. v. Crowton 33 L. R. A. 177, and note (98 Ky. 739, 34 S. W. 518); San Diego Water Co. v. San Diego, 62 Am. St. Rep. 261, and note (118 Cal. 556, 38 L. R. A. 460, 50 Pac. 633); Danville v. Danville Water Co. 178 Ill. 299, 53 N. E. 118; Rogers Park Water Co. v. Ferguson, 178 Ill. 571, 53 N. E. 363.

The right of the city to regulate the rates of this company must be treated as if written on the face of its charter, and as a condition of its existence.

People ex rel. Peabody v. Chicago Gas Trust Co. 130 Ill. 268, 8 L. R. A. 497, 22 N. E. 798; Central Transp. Co. v. Pullman's Palace Car Co. 139 U. S. 24, 35 L. ed. 55, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 478.

In order that any contract between the city and the water company, in restraint or limitation of the city's power to regulate water rates shall be valid, such contract must be within the corporate powers of both corporations.

Central Transp. Co. v. Pullman's Palace Car Co. 139 U. S. 24, 35 L. ed. 55, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 478; Thomas v. West Jersey R. Co. 101 U. S. 71, 32 L. ed. 950; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. St. Louis, A. & T. H. R. Co. 118 U. S. 297, 30 L. ed. 88, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1094; Oregon R. & Nav. Co. v. Oregonian R. Co. 130 U. S. 26, 32 L. ed. 842, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 409; Perrine v. Chesapeake & D. Canal Co. 9 How. 184, 13 L. ed. 97; Cass v. Manchester Iron & Steel Co. 9 Fed. 640; Danville v.

Danville Water Co. 178 Ill. 299, 53 N. E. 118.

Municipal powers will not be implied simply because they may be convenient, but they must be indispensable; and any fair or reasonable doubt concerning the existence of any power is resolved against such corporation.

Re Lee Tong, 9 Sawy. 333, 18 Fed. 253; Scott v. Shreveport, 20 Fed. 714; Los Angeles City Water Co. v. Los Angeles, 88 Fed. 720.

The power of the state and of its municipalities to regulate water rates is a governmental function, essential to the protection of the citizens; and the power of the municipality to surrender such function and abandon its citizens to the arbitrary action of the water company must be conferred in clear and explicit terms, or it cannot be held to exist.

Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Kentucky, 183 U. S. 517, 46 L. ed. 306, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 95; Railroad Commission Cases, 116 U. S. 307, 29 L. ed. 636, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 334, 388, 1191; Providence Bank v. Billings, 4 Pet. 514-565, 7 L. ed. 939-957; Freeport Water Co. v. Freeport, 180 U. S. 599, 45 L. ed. 688, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 493.

In the case at bar the authority of the city to contract with the water company is much more limited than the power conferred for that purpose upon the cities and villages of Illinois by the statutes of that state, held insufficient to authorize cities to make an irrevocable contract with a water company, with reference to water rates, for a period of thirty years.

Freeport Water Co. v. Freeport, 180 U. S. 587-618, 45 L. ed. 679-696, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 493; Danville v. Danville Water Co. 180 U. S. 619-624, 45 L. ed. 696-701, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 505.

An ordinance which provided that the water company "shall charge the following annual rate to consumers of water during the existence of this franchise" is a mere regulation of the right to charge rates, and does not amount to a stipulation that no other regulation will be made during the term of the franchise.

Rogers Park Water Co. v. Fergus, 180 U. S. 624-633, 45 L. ed. 702-707, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 490.

In these cases the court construed statutes or ordinances in which there was an express provision on the subject of water rates, or on the subject of contracting or fixing water rates.

See also Winchester & L. Turnp. Road Co. v. Croxton, 23 L. R. A. 177, and note (98 Ky. 739, 34 S. E. 518); Danville v. Danville Water Co. 178 Ill. 299, 53 N. E. 118; Rogers Park Water Co. v. Fergus, 178 Ill. 571, 53 N. E. 363; San Diego Water Co. v. San Diego, 118 Cal. 556, 38 L. R. A. 460, 50 Pac. 633.

The supreme court of the state of Tennessee has construed the provisions of the charter of the city of Knoxville as conferring no authority to make an irrevocable contract with the water company; and while this decision is not conclusive upon this court, it will be given great weight where, as in this case, there must be, to say the least, great doubt as to the existence of the power contended for by the water company.

Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Kentucky, 183 U. S. 503, 46 L. ed. 298, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 95; Williams v. Gaylord, 186 U. S. 157, 46 L. ed. 1102, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 798.

It has been held, in the construction of statutes and ordinances authorizing a city or water company to fix or establish rates, that a single exercise of such a power does not preclude further exercise upon proper occasion.

Osborne v. San Diego Land & Town Co. 178 U. S. 22, 44 L. ed. 962, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 860; Freeport Water Co. v. Freeport, 180 U. S. 587, 45 L. ed. 679, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 493.

The strictest rule of construction in favor of the city and against the water company should be adopted.

Georgia R. & Bkg. Co. v. Smith, 128 U. S. 174, 32 L. ed. 377, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 47; Stone v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 116 U. S. 325, 29 L. ed. 642, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 334, 388, 1191; Citizens' Street R. Co. v. Africa, 100 Tenn. 44, 42 S. W. 485, 878; Clarksville & R. Turnp. Co. v. Montgomery County, 100 Tenn. 421, 58 L. R. A. 155, 45 S. W. 345.

The city did not enter into any contract in derogation or limitation of its right to regulate the prices of the water company. And whatever contract was made was revocable.

Ragan v. Aiken, 9 Lea, 609, 42 Am. Rep. 684; Georgia R. & Bkg. Co. v. Smith, 128 U. S. 174, 32 L. ed. 377, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 47; Osborne v. San Diego Land & Town Co. 178 U. S. 22, 44 L. ed. 962, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 863; Freeport Water Co. v. Freeport, 180 U. S. 587, 45 L. ed. 679, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 493; Danville Water Co. v. Danville, 180 U. S. 619, 45 L. ed. 696, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 505; Laurel Fork & S. H. R. Co. v. West Virginia Transp. Co. 25 W. Va. 324; Ruggles v. People, 91 Ill. 256; Illinois C. R. Co. v. People, 95 Ill. 313; Capital City Gaslight Co. v. Des Moines, 72 Fed. 829.

Whatever power of regulation the state possesses it may delegate to a city.

Atty. Gen. v. Old Colony R. Co. 160 Mass. 67, 22 L. R. A. 112, 35 N. E. 252; Storrs v. Pensacola & A. R. Co. 29 Fla. 623, 11 So. 226.

The power of regulation is a continuing one, and not exhausted by a single exercise.

Providence Bank v. Billings, 4 Pet. 514, 7 L. ed. 939; Freeport Water Co. v. Freeport, 180 U. S. 587, 45 L. ed. 679, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 493; Rogers Park Water Co. v. Fergus, 178 Ill. 571, 53 N. E. 363.

Whatever right, franchise, or power in a corporation depends for its existence upon the granting clause of a charter is lost by its repeal.

Greenwood v. Union Freight R. Co. 105 U. S. 13-24, 26 L. ed. 961-965.

The power to alter or modify is a continuing one, not exhausted by one alteration or exercise.

People ex rel. McConvill v. Hills, 46 Barb. 340; Proprietors of Side-Rooms v. Haskell, 7 Me. 474.

A statute regulating the rates of a railroad company is within the reserved power to alter its charter.

Capital City Gaslight Co. v. Des Moines, 72 Fed. 829; American Coal Co. v. Consolidation Coal Co. 46 Md. 15; Shields v. State, 26 Ohio St. 86, Affirmed in 95 U. S. 319, 24 L. ed. 357; St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Ryan, 56 Ark. 245, 19 S. W. 839.

And the legislature, under the power reserved in a railroad charter at any time hereafter to alter, modify, or repeal this act, has the right to fix the rates of fares which may be charged by such company, without being subject to the charge of impairing the obligation of a contract.

Beardsley v. New York, L. E. & W. R. Co. 15 App. Div. 251, 44 N. Y. Supp. 175.

Where the charter of a railroad company empowers it to exact tolls at its discretion, an act of the legislature restricting the rates that may be taken is an alteration of the charter within the scope of a reservation of power to alter or repeal.

Atty. Gen. v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 35 Wis. 425.

Where a power is reserved to alter a charter, the state may prescribe the manner of the exercise of such a power.

Re Reciprocity Bank, 22 N. Y. 9, Reversing 29 Barb. 369, 17 How. Pr. 323.

A statute empowering city councils to regulate the price to be charged for gas may constitute a valid exercise of the power to alter the charter of a gas company.

State ex rel. Atty. Gen. v. Cincinnati Gaslight & Coke Co. 18 Ohio St. 262.

An act creating a state corporation commission, and giving it the right to regulate railroad rates, is an exercise of the reserve power to amend or repeal the charter of a railroad company giving it the exclusive right to regulate rates or charges.

Matthews v. Corporation Comrs. 97 Fed. 400.

Charter power to demand such sums as a corporation may deem reasonable for carrying freight and passengers, provided they are reasonable, does not preclude the legislature from afterwards fixing the maximum of charges, even though there is no reservation of power to alter or repeal the charter.

Laurel Fork & S. H. R. Co. v. West Virginia Transp. Co. 25 W. Va. 324.

An implied restriction that the corporation, in fixing the rates of toll, shall make them reasonable, is held to exist in a charter giving the power to the corporation to fix its own rates. Therefore the legislature has the same power to say what are reasonable maximum charges as if the charter were silent on that point.

Ruggles v. People, 91 Ill. 256; Illinois C. R. Co. v. People, 95 Ill. 313.

So, a contract right of a gas company by its charter to charge and collect reasonable rates is not impaired by a delegation of authority to the city to fix reasonable prices for gas.

Capital City Gaslight Co. v. Des Moines, 72 Fed. 829.

From these decisions it seems to follow, as a necessary result, that the state had, under its reserve power to repeal or modify this water company's charter, a clear right to regulate its rates in a reasonable manner. The state likewise had the right to delegate this power to a municipality, and to exercise it in that manner. In fact, the usual method of exercising the power of regulation is to delegate it to boards and municipalities.

Yazoo & M. Valley R. Co. v. Adams, 180 U. S. 1, 45 L. ed. 395, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 240; Citizens' Sav. Bank v. Owensboro, 173 U. S. 636, 43 L. ed. 840, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 530.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a complaint for a penalty against the Knoxville Water Company for charging and collecting water rates in excess of the rates fixed by the ordinances of the city of Knoxville. The water company pleaded that the ordinances relied on violated the obligation of contracts between the city and itself, and deprived it of its property and liberty without due process of law, and so was contrary to the Constitution of the United States. The case was tried on appeal before a single judge, who made a special finding of facts, on which the supreme court of the state entered a final judgment for the plaintiff. 107 Tenn. 647, 64 S. W. 1075. The company then brought the constitutional questions here by writ of error.

The water company was incorporated in Tennessee in 1882 to construct waterworks in or near Knoxville, with power to contract with the city and inhabitants for the supply of water, and to "charge such prices for the same as may be agreed upon between said company and said parties." This incorporation was under a general act which provides as follows: "And this [act] is in no way to interfere with or impair the police or general powers of the corporate authorities of such city, town, or village, and such corporate authorities shall have power by ordinance to regulate the price of water supplied by such company." Acts of 1877, chap. 104, § 2. In the same year, 1882, the company made a contract with the city by which it agreed to *con- [436] struct its works and to furnish water, the city gave the company exclusive privileges for thirty years and agreed to make certain payments, etc., and it was mutually agreed, among other things, that, after fifteen years, the city should have the right to purchase the works at a price to be fixed by appraisers if not agreed upon. The contract contained three distinct parts: first, the promises of the company; next, those of the city; and last, the mutual undertakings. In the first part the company undertook as follows: "Said company will supply private consumers with water at a rate not to exceed 5 cents per 100 gallons," subject to an immaterial proviso. These are the words relied on by the company. They are assumed to contain an implied undertaking on the part of the city not to interfere with the company in establishing rates within the contract limits.

After the contract was made the company built its works and furnished water. Later it took over contracts between two other concerns and neighboring towns and consolidated with one of the other concerns, which was a corporation. The towns, on their side, were made a part of Knoxville; and the whole water supply was brought under the original contract. But these facts do not alter or affect the present case, and need not be stated in detail. The company went on furnishing water and charging rates within the contract limit, to the satisfaction of the city, it may be assumed, until within a year or two, when the city passed an ordinance which cuts down the rates which the company had been charging and asserts its right to charge.

The trouble at the bottom of the company's case is that the supposed promise of the city on which it is founded does not exist. If such a promise had been intended, it was far too important to be left to implication. In form the words of this part of the instrument are the words of the company alone. They occur in the part of the contract which sets forth the company's undertakings, not in the part devoted to the promises of the city or in that which contains the still later mutual agreements. See Georgia R. & Bkg. Co. v. Smith, 128 U. S. 174, 32 L. ed. 377, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 47; Ragan v. Aiken, 9 Lea, 609, 42 Am. Rep. [437] 684. They are words *of a company which was notified by the act which called it into being of the power expressly conferred upon the city "by ordinance to regulate the price of water" which the company might supply. People who have accepted, as experience shows that people will accept, a charter subject to such liabilities, cannot complain of them or repudiate them, nor can the company which they have formed. Rockport Water Co. v. Rockport, 161 Mass. 279, 37 N. E. 168. This consideration answers a portion of the company's argument as to its rights under the 14th Amendment, and makes it unnecessary to consider whether the regulation of water rates is properly to be classed as a police power. It also reinforces our interpretation of the instrument upon which the company founds its claim.

We do not mean that under other circumstances words which on their face only express a limit might not embody a contract more extensive than their literal meaning. Detroit v. Detroit Citizens' Street R. Co. 184 U. S. 368, 46 L. ed. 592, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 410. But in that case the rate was fixed by an ordinance which was the language of the city, the ordinance was under a statute which declared that the rates should be established by agreement between the city and the railway company, and neither statute nor ordinance reserved a power to the city to alter rates. In the present case it seems to us impossible to suppose that any power to contract which the city may have had was intended to be exercised in such a way as to displace the municipal power expressly reserved or given by the general law under which the water company was created. It would require stronger words than those used here to raise the question whether, under the statutes in force, the city could do it if it tried. The contracts fixing prices authorized by the statute were contracts between the company and its customers, not, as in the case of the railway company, a single contract between the company and the city, and were subject to the power to regulate them given to the city by the same statute. We assume that the charter of the city authorized it to contract, but it was not so specific as the statute which we have quoted, and added nothing to the power conferred by that law.

With the construction which we give the contract between the company and the city, the argument that the obligation of *that [438] contract is impaired must fall. It is argued here that the reduction of rates is not reasonable, and is or may be taking a first step towards a compulsory purchase of the company's plant at an unfairly low price, by cutting down its value. We may assume with the supreme court of Tennessee that if rates were reduced unreasonably a judicial remedy would be found. We may assume further that an attempt to affect the price of the company's plant in that way, if the city should elect to purchase, would not be allowed to succeed. But no such questions are before us. There is no evidence and no presumption that the ordinance rates were unreasonable, or were fixed with sinister intent. The judgment of the supreme court of Tennessee states that the question was not considered by it, and is expressed to be without prejudice to later litigation concerning the reasonableness of the rates. If the question is open here it is open only in form, and no error is shown.

A part of the argument was directed against the validity of the ordinance because of a failure to notify an alderman who was out of the state, but we see no sufficient ground for undertaking to revise the judgment of the state court on that point.

Some argument was attempted as to the ordinance impairing the obligation of the contracts between the company and its consumers. But such contracts, of course, were made by it subject to whatever power the city possessed to modify rates. The company could not take away that power by making such contracts. New Orleans v. New Orleans Waterworks Co. 142 U. S. 79, 91, 92, 35 L. ed. 943, 947, 948, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 142; Browne v. Turner, 176 Mass. 9, 15, 56 N. E. 969. The contracts recognize the possibility of change, as the agreement is to pay for the water in accordance with the rates "now or hereafter in force." This constitutional objection hardly is open on the pleadings, but we have given the company the benefit of the doubt so far as to consider it. We discover no error in the record, and the judgment of the supreme court of Tennessee must be affirmed.

Judgment affirmed.

Mr. Justice White, Mr. Justice McKenna, and Mr. Justice Day, not having been present at the argument, took no part in the decision of the case.

[439]*SAN DIEGO LAND & TOWN COMPANY,
Appt.,
v.

JAMES A. JASPER, Charles H. Swallow, William Justice, John Griffin, and Howard M. Cherry (Members of and Constituting the Board of Supervisors of the County San Diego, State of California), and M. T. Hall et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 439-447.)

Courts — jurisdiction — default of parties in interest — state regulation of water rates — tests of reasonableness.

1. So long as a board of supervisors defends a suit to have water rates fixed by them declared void for unreasonableness, there is a sufficient party respondent to enable the court to consider the merits of the controversy, notwithstanding the default of those who set in motion the proceedings before the board.
2. The price which a waterworks plant brought on foreclosure is evidence which a board of supervisors when regulating water rates may take into consideration in estimating the value of the plant, on which the water company is entitled to a fair return from its rates.
3. The valuation of a waterworks plant for purposes of taxation may be considered by the courts in determining the reasonableness of water rates as fixed by a board of supervisors,—especially where such valuation was sworn to by officers of the water company.
4. The depreciation in value of a waterworks plant, and in the value of the services rendered to consumers, due to a diminution in the water supply from a long-continued drought from which the surrounding country has suffered since the passage of an ordinance regulating water rates, may be considered in determining the reasonableness of such rates.
5. Irrigation rates established by a board of supervisors are not necessarily unreasonable because they will only yield a full return on the total value of the plant when the water company shall serve the entire area which its system will supply.

[No. 193.]

Argued March 10, 1903. Decided April 6, 1903.

APPPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of California to review a decree which dismissed a bill to have an ordinance of a board of supervisors fixing irrigation rates declared void for unreasonableness. Affirmed.

See same case below, 110 Fed. 702.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. John D. Works argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Bradner W. Lee and Lewis R. Works, filed a brief for appellant:

The proceedings before the board of supervisors were judicial.

Wulzen v. San Francisco, 101 Cal. 15, 24, 35 Pac. 353; Quinchard v. Alameda, 113 Cal. 664, 45 Pac. 856; Jacobs v. San Francisco, 100 Cal. 121, 34 Pac. 630.

And this court has so decided.

Spring Valley Waterworks v. Schottler, 110 U. S. 347, 28 L. ed. 173, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 48.

There should be the same degree of fairness in this as in other judicial proceedings.

Ibid.; San Diego Water Co. v. San Diego, 118 Cal. 556, 38 L. R. A. 460, 50 Pac. 633.

The reasonable value of the use of the water and plant of the company, or the services rendered by it in supplying the water to consumers, should be taken into account in arriving at just rates.

Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 466, 524, 42 L. ed. 819, 841, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; San Diego Land & Town Co. v. National City, 174 U. S. 739, 757, 43 L. ed. 1154, 1161, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 804.

Depreciation should be considered in arriving at just rates.

San Diego Land & Town Co. v. National City, 74 Fed. 79, 174 U. S. 739, 757, 43 L. ed. 1154, 1161, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 804.

Mr. A. Haines argued the cause, and, with Mr. T. L. Lewis, filed a brief for appellees:

The courts will interfere with rates prescribed by public authority only on the ground that they amount to a taking of property without due process of law.

San Diego Land & Town Co. v. National City, 74 Fed. 79, 174 U. S. 739, 754, 760, 43 L. ed. 1154, 1160, 1162, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 804; Cotting v. Kansas City Stock Yards Co. 183 U. S. 79, 90, 91, sub nom. Cotting v. Godard, 46 L. ed. 92, 101, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30.

Evidence relating to value is defective when it does not show the real value of the property actually used and useful for the purposes contemplated by the ordinance, nor show anything respecting the extent or value of the service rendered.

San Diego Land & Town Co. v. National City, 174 U. S. 739, 757, 43 L. ed. 1154, 1161, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 804; Cotting v. Kansas City Stock Yards Co. 183 U. S. 79, 90, sub nom. Cotting v. Godard, 46 L. ed. 92, 101, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30.

When this court speaks of cost of construction as competent evidence bearing on the fair value of the property used and useful for the public, it is careful to limit it in terms to "original" cost.

San Diego Land & Town Co. v. National City, 174 U. S. 739, 756, 43 L. ed. 1154, 1160, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 804, quoting from Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 466, 546, 42 L. ed. 819, 849, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418.

NOTE.—On legislative power to fix tolls, rates, or prices—see note to Winchester & L. Turnp. Road Co. v. Croxton (Ky.) 33 L. R. A. 177.

Even a conclusive finding of the original cost of a quasi-public improvement to the corporation that has been superseded by a reorganized corporation which acquires the property at a foreclosure sale furnishes of itself no means of determining that a rate fixed by public authority is unreasonable.

Dow v. Beidelman, 125 U. S. 680, 31 L. ed. 841, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 56, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1028.

The market value of the bonded debt of the Kansas corporation is a proper test of the value of its assets, including the water system, when sold.

Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 466, 546, 547, 42 L. ed. 819, 849, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; San Diego Land & Town Co. v. National City, 174 U. S. 739, 756, 43 L. ed. 1154, 1160, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 804; Cotting v. Kansas City Stock Yards Co. 183 U. S. 79, 89, sub nom. Cotting v. Godard, 46 L. ed. 92, 101, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30.

The true price paid for this water system at the foreclosure sale, represented by the value of the bonds and claims with which the price was paid, constitutes the most direct, trustworthy, and contemporaneous measure of the true value of the whole property of the Kansas corporation, including the water system here in question.

Dow v. Beidelman, 125 U. S. 680, 690, 691, 31 L. ed. 841, 844, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 56, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1028; St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Gill, 156 U. S. 649, 661, 662, 39 L. ed. 567, 571, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 484; San Diego Land & Town Co. v. National City, 174 U. S. 739, 43 L. ed. 1154, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 804.

The Maine corporation is in all respects perfectly distinct from the Kansas corporation, and stood, when bidding at the foreclosure sale, upon a precisely equal footing with the world of bidders.

Thomp. Corp. § 261.

The corporation must stand on its investment at the sale.

Dow v. Beidelman, 125 U. S. 689, 31 L. ed. 843, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 56, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1028.

As to the distinct character of a consolidated or recognized corporation, see —

Shields v. Ohio, 95 U. S. 319, 323, 24 L. ed. 357, 358; Keokuk & W. R. Co. v. Missouri, 152 U. S. 301, 307-310, 38 L. ed. 450, 454, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 592.

The rights of the public would be ignored if rates for the transportation of persons and property on a railroad were exacted without reference to the fair value of the property used for the public, or the fair value of the services rendered, but in order simply that the corporation might meet operating expenses, pay the interest on its obligations, and declare a dividend to stockholders.

San Diego Land & Town Co. v. National City, 174 U. S. 739, 755, 43 L. ed. 1154, 1160, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 804; Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 466, 546, 547, 42 L. ed. 819, 849, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418.

This court has disapproved the practice of deciding a question affecting rates to the public, with only individuals before it.

St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Gill, 156 U. S. 649, 666, 39 L. ed. 567, 573, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 484.

Where, as here, there is a board of supervisors which "can be made to respond," and does respond, the persons who signed the original petition to the board to fix rates are distinctly unnecessary parties, and their default for want of answer is immaterial.

Chicago & G. T. R. Co. v. Wellman, 143 U. S. 339, 344, 346, 36 L. ed. 176, 179, 180, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 400; Peik v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 94 U. S. 164, 24 L. ed. 97; Stone v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 116 U. S. 307, 29 L. ed. 636, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 334, 388, 1191; Stone v. Illinois C. R. Co. 116 U. S. 347, 29 L. ed. 650, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 348; Stone v. New Orleans & N. E. R. Co. 116 U. S. 353, 29 L. ed. 651, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 349, 391; Georgia R. & Bkg. Co. v. Smith, 128 U. S. 174, 32 L. ed. 377, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 47; Reagan v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 154 U. S. 362, 38 L. ed. 1014, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 560, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1047; Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 466, 42 L. ed. 819, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Tompkins, 176 U. S. 167, 44 L. ed. 417, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 336; San Diego Land & Town Co. v. National City, 174 U. S. 739, 43 L. ed. 1154, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 804, 74 Fed. 79; Cotting v. Kansas City Stock Yards Co. 183 U. S. 79, sub nom. Cotting v. Godard, 46 L. ed. 92, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30; Lanning v. Osborne, 76 Fed. 319.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a bill in equity brought in the circuit court against the board of supervisors of San Diego county and others for the purpose of having certain water rates which have been fixed by the board, declared void. It is alleged that the rates are so low as to amount to a taking of the plaintiff's property without due process of law. The circuit court decided that it did not appear that the rates would have that effect, and dismissed the bill, whereupon the plaintiff appealed to this court.

By a statute of California approved March 12, 1885, the board of supervisors of the counties are to fix the maximum water rates in cases like the present. They are authorized to proceed to a hearing upon a petition of twenty-five inhabitants who are taxpayers, and the rates when fixed are to be binding for not less than one year. Subject to that limitation they may "be re-es-[440] established or abrogated upon a similar petition, or a petition of the water company subjected to the regulation. The rate was fixed in this case upon a petition of twenty-five taxpayers. The present bill made the petitioners parties, as well as the board, and alleged that they were not water takers, but were induced to petition by the consumers, in order that the latter might not admit that any rates other than those originally fixed by the company could be established by anyone. The petitioners, after a demurrer by them to the bill was overruled, failed to answer, and the bill was taken pro confesso as against them. On these facts, before coming to the merits, the appellant contends that this bill should not be dismissed. It says that the only parties in interest have made default, and that the ordinance regulating the rates was procured by a fraud upon the supervisors, with the consequence, we suppose it to be intended, that the ordinance should be set aside on that ground without going further into the case.

The preliminary objections may be disposed of in a few words. The default of the petitioner is relied upon as the ground of expressions in one or two cases here and elsewhere, that the duties of the supervisors are judicial in their nature. Spring Valley Waterworks v. Schottler, 110 U. S. 347, 354, 28 L. ed. 173, 176, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 48; Jacobs v. San Francisco, 100 Cal. 121, 130, 34 Pac. 630. The conclusion drawn is that when the original plaintiffs disappear, the case is at an end. We need not stop to consider to what extent or for what purposes the proceedings before the supervisors properly may be termed judicial. See, further, San Diego Land & Town Co. v. National City, 174 U. S. 739, 750, 43 L. ed. 1154, 1159, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 804; Cambridge v. Railroad Comrs. 153 Mass. 161, 171, 26 N. E. 241. It is obvious that they are not so in such a sense as to do the appellant any good. The petitioners did not complain of injury to any private interest of theirs. They had none. They appeared on behalf of the public only, and asked purely legislative action in the form of a general rule for the future to govern the public at large. San Diego Land & Town Co. v. National City, 43 L. ed. 1154, 1159, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 804; Spring Valley Waterworks v. San Francisco, 82 Cal. 286, 6 L. R. A. 756, 22 Pac. 910, 1046; Smith v. Strother, 68 Cal. 194, 8 Pac. 852; Jauvrin, Petitioner, 174 Mass. 514, 47 L. R. A. 319, 55 N. E. 381. As soon [441] as such a *rule was established, if not as soon as a hearing was begun, the petitioners were merged in the public affected by the rule. The present bill is an independent proceeding to have the ordinance declared void. In such a case the body making the regulation is the usual, proper, and sufficient party respondent, and the default of those who set the original proceedings in motion is immaterial, so long as it defends the case.

The charge that there was a fraud practised on the board hardly deserves mention, except for the undue warmth with which it has been pressed. There are no allegations in the bill sufficient to open the question. The board is here adhering to and defending its action, professing still to be satisfied. There is no indication of fraud or attempt at fraud. The course adopted was adopted for reasons which appear on the face of the bill, the situation was made plain at the hearing before the supervisors, and we see no evidence that the parties did more than exercise their legal rights.

Coming now to the merits, the first thing to be noticed is that the ordinance complained of took effect in November, 1897, and that after a year from that date the appellant was free to apply for a modification of the rates. It did not do so. There is no allegation or suggestion that the board is corrupt, or that it purposes and intends, without regard to evidence, to adhere to unjust rates so as to destroy or impair the value of the appellant's works. Under such circumstances the question arises whether this is much more than a moot case, in view of the principles adverted to in Tennessee v. Condon, 189 U. S. 64, ante, 709, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 579, or at least whether the appellant should not be required to exhaust its other remedies before coming into court. In any event, the limited effect of the ordinance must be taken into account when we are called on to declare it "such a flagrant attack upon the rights of property under the guise of regulations as to compel the court to say that the rates prescribed will necessarily have the effect to deny just compensation for private property taken for the public use." San Diego Land & Town Co. v. National City, 174 U. S. 739, 754, 43 L. ed. 1154, 1160, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 804, 810. In a case like this we do not feel bound to re-examine and weigh all the evidence, although we have done so, or to proceed according to our *independent opinion as to [442] what were proper rates. It is enough if we cannot say that it was impossible for a fair-minded board to come to the result which was reached.

The scheme of the California statute is as follows: The board is to estimate the value of the property actually used and useful in furnishing the water, and the annual reasonable expenses, including the cost of repairs, management, and operating the works. The cost of permanent improvements is not to be included under this last head, but "when accomplished shall be included in the present cost and cash value of such work." Then the board is to adjust the rates so that the net receipts and profits of the water company shall be not less than 6 nor more than 18 per cent upon the said value of the used and useful property. The board in this case estimated the value of the plant to be $350,000, and the returns at the rates fixed to be $34,442, or 6 per cent on the value and the expenses necessary to maintain and operate the plant, which were found to be $13,442.

The main object of attack is the valuation of the plant. It no longer is open to dispute that under the Constitution "what the company is entitled to demand, in order that it may have just compensation, is a fair return upon the reasonable value of the property at the time it is being used for the public." San Diego Land & Town Co. v. National City, 174 U. S. 739, 757, 43 L. ed. 1154, 1161, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 804, 811. That is decided, and is decided as against the contention that you are to take the actual cost of the plant, annual depreciation, etc., and to allow a fair profit on that footing over and above expenses. We see no reason to doubt that the California statute means the same thing. Yet the only evidence in favor of a higher value in the present case is the original cost of the work, seemingly inflated by improper charges to that account and by injudicious expenditures (being the cost to another company which sold out on foreclosure to the appellant), coupled with a recurrence to testimony as to the rapid depreciation of the pipes. In this way the appellant makes the value over a million dollars. No doubt, cost may be considered, and will have more or less importance according to circumstances. In the present [443] *case it is evident, for reasons, some of which will appear in a moment, that it has very little importance indeed.

The property of the company and its predecessor consisted, not only of the waterworks, but of a large amount of land. On the evidence the waterworks may be estimated at about a quarter of the total value. The earlier company was unable to raise the money it needed. Its bonds for $500,000, secured by mortgage, were not worth more than 95, and an attempt to raise a further loan on mortgage failed. The whole amount that the market and interested stockholders were willing to lend on all the security it could offer was $650,500. The company was put into the hands of a receiver, who issued some certificates, which, we infer, were made a paramount lien. Then, by arrangement with the stockholders who were willing to go on, the mortgage was foreclosed and all the property was sold to those stockholders for the nominal sum of $889,163.33, which was equal to the amount of outstanding certificates and bonds, and was paid by turning them in. This was in 1897, a few months before the passage of the ordinance complained of. The purchasers organized the present corporation, and the above-mentioned sum is the cost of the land and waterworks to it. The appellant protests that this is not a fair value for the property of the company. We doubt whether it is not a liberal allowance. The officers of the two companies at the time thought that they got more than they could have got in any other way. But at all events, it is decided that the price is evidence, we might say more important evidence than the original cost. Dow v. Beidelman, 125 U. S. 680, 31 L. ed. 841, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 56, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1028. If the supervisors were convinced by it we certainly could not say, as matter of law, that they were wrong. Of course, as we indicated the other day in Knoxville Water Co. v. Knoxville, 189 U. S. 434, ante, 887, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 531, if an attempt had been made to cut down values by the reduction of rates, the courts would know how to meet it. But there is nothing of that sort in this case.

The valuation of property for the purposes of taxation may not be technical evidence in a court of law, yet it may be considered in coming to a decision whether the action of the supervisors was unfair,—especially if, as was testified, it was sworn *to [444] by the officers of the company. The total valuation for 1897 was somewhat less than 189 U. S.

the price got at the sale, and that of the plant was $155,000.

Another circumstance was adverted to by the circuit court, which we may mention. Whether the facts were stated with perfect accuracy, or the reasoning from them was absolutely correct, we need not stop to consider. The only question for us is whether it came to a right result. In reaching its conclusion the circuit court mentioned the drought from which that part of the country has suffered since the passage of this ordinance. At about that time the supply began to fall off. In December of the following year the reservoir was empty. The appellant asks us to take judicial notice that the rainfall has not been sufficient for the past five years to fill the storage reservoir of any large water company supplying water for irrigation in Southern California, but contends that the fact is immaterial to the point before us.

Of course it is hard to answer the proposition that value expressed in money depends on what people think at the time. That determines what they will give for the thing, and, whether they think rightly or wrongly, if they or some of them will give a certain price for it, that is its value then. Nevertheless, it has been held, under some circumstances, even in ordinary suits, that when events have corrected the prophecy of the public the facts may be shown and a more correct valuation adopted. Twycross v. Grant, L. R. 2 C. P. Div. 469, 544; Peck v. Derry, L. R. 37 Ch. Div. 541, 591 (not reversed on this point by L. R. 14 App. Cas. 337); Whiting v. Price, 172 Mass. 240, 51 N. E. 1084. See National Bank of Commerce v. New Bedford, 175 Mass. 257, 262, 56 N. E. 288. We think that upon the question before us subsequent events may be considered. The facts mentioned would tend to depreciate the market value of the plant, and very much depreciate the value of the services rendered to consumers during the year when the ordinance necessarily was in force. This consideration is the only answer that needs to be made to elaborate calculations by the appellant of the worth of the services to consumers, beyond adding that it does not appear that *the supervisors [445] did not give them what little weight they deserve upon the issues which the supervisors had to decide.

It is said that, if the drought is considered, the way in which it was met by digging wells and pumping also ought to be taken into account. That, however, was the private affair of the company. It was a voluntary act for which additional charges were made, and has little or no bearing on the issue,—less even than the drought, to which we do not attribute much. It seems however, that, soon after the first year, consumers, in order to get pumped water, contracted to pay ordinance rates and an extra charge, by a voluntary arrangement with the company; and, for all we know, that voluntary arrangement may be going on to this day, and may be one reason why the company has not applied to have the rates revised.

If the price paid by the present company for all the property was the fair value, the evidence available,—such as the proportion between the valuations of the different parts by the company, the proportion between the assessment and taxation of the different parts, and the testimony of an expert,—indicates that the supervisors were liberal in valuing the plant at $350,000. Indeed, the proportion adopted is not a principal point of complaint.

A subordinate complaint is made, however, that the rates will not yield a net income of 6 per cent, even upon the valuation adopted. The counsel for the appellees contends, on the other hand, that that valuation was a good deal too high, that too much was allowed under the head of expenses, that the supervisors should have taken into account income from domestic rates, and finally sets up a claim that goes to the bottom of the whole assessment. By an amendment of the California statute, approved March 2, 1897, the act is not to invalidate or to interfere with contract easements for the flow and use of water. It is contended that the owners of water rights described in Osborne v. San Diego Land & Town Co. 178 U. S. 22, 44 L. ed. 961, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 860, which it is said now have been decided to be valid (Fresno Canal & Irrig. Co. v. Park, 129 Cal. 437, 62 Pac. 87; San Diego Flume Co. v. Souther, 32 C. C. A. 548, 61 U. S. App. 134, 90 Fed. 164, 44 C. C. A. 143, 104 Fed. 706, 112 Fed. 228), are entitled to [446] water upon merely paying their share of the expenses, and that all the water takers have water rights. We shall say nothing on these points.

We will say a word about the opposite contention of the appellant, that there should have been allowance for depreciation over and above the allowance for repairs. From a constitutional point of view we see no sufficient evidence that the allowance for 6 per cent on the value set by the supervisors, in addition to what was allowed for repairs, is confiscatory. On the other hand, if the claim is made under the statute, although that would be no ground for bringing the case to this court, it has been decided by the supreme court of California that the statute warrants no such claim. Redlands, L. & C. Domestic Water Co. v. Redlands, 121 Cal. 312, 313, 53 Pac. 791. We go no further into detail. We do not sit as a general appellate board of revision for all rates and taxes in the United States. We stop with considering whether it clearly appears that the Constitution of the United States has been infringed, together with such collateral questions as may be incidental to our jurisdiction over that one. From this point of view there is only one other matter to be mentioned.

The supervisors, in determining the rates, assumed that the amount of water available for outside irrigation, apart from the amount used and paid for by National City, was enough for a little over 6,000 acres, and on that point there is no serious dispute. Then they fixed the rate as if the company supplied this 6,000 acres, although such was not the fact. Of course, the amount actually received for the water actually furnished was correspondingly less than the receipts as estimated by the supervisors upon their assumption. If there were no force in any of the arguments for the appellees which we have passed by, the result of this mode of estimate might be that the appellant did not get 6 per cent on the total value of its plant. But here, again, we have to distinguish between Constitution and statute. If a plant is built, as probably this was, for a larger area than it finds itself able to supply, or, apart from that, if it does not, as yet, have the customers contemplated, neither justice nor the Constitution requires that, say, two thirds of the contemplated *number should [447] pay a full return. The only ground for such a claim is the statute taken strictly according to its letter.

But when a case is brought here on a constitutional ground which wholly fails, we certainly shall not be astute to support it upon another which we could not consider apart from the failing foundation, and which has nothing to commend it but the letter of the law. The statute of California no doubt was contemplating the ease of waterworks fully occupied within the area which they intended to supply. It hardly can have meant that a system constructed for 6,000 acres should have a full return upon its value from 500, if those were all that it supplied. At all events, we will not be the first to say so. If necessary to avoid that result, we should assume that only a proportionate part of the system was actually used and useful within the meaning of the statute. Upon the whole case we are unable to say that the circuit court should have declared the rates confiscatory. They are the rates which were fixed by the original company at the start, with prophecies, which the purchasers who believed them think amounted to a contract, that they never would be higher. If the original company embarked upon a great speculation which has not turned out as expected, more modest valuations are a result to which it must make up its mind.

Decree affirmed.

SOUTHERN PACIFIC RAILROAD COMPANY et al., Appts.,
v.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 447-452.)

Railroad land grants—excepted lands—forefeiture—indemnity lands.

1. Land within the 20-mile limit of the grant to the Texas Pacific Railroad Company by the act of March 3, 1871, chap. 122, § 9 (16

NOTE.—As to land grants to railroads—see note to Kansas P. R. Co. v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 28 L. ed. U. S. 794.

Stat. at L. 573), was excepted from the grant, by § 23 of that act, to the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, by the proviso therein that such section "shall in no way affect or impair the rights, present or prospective, of the Atlantic & Pacific Railroad Company or any other railroad company."

2. Indemnity selections cannot be made by the Southern Pacific Railroad Company from lands within the indemnity limits of the grant to it by the act of March 3, 1871, chap. 122, § 23 (16 Stat. at L. 573), which are also within the forfeited place limits of the grant to the Texas Pacific Railroad Company by § 9 of the same act.

[No. 190.]

Argued March 9, 10, 1903. Decided April 6, 1903.

A PPEAL from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the Circuit Court for the Northern District of California in favor of the United States in a suit to quiet title. Affirmed.

See same case below, 48 C. C. A. 712, 109 Fed. 913.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Maxwell Evarts and L. E. Payson argued the cause and filed a brief for appellants:

While a congressional land grant to a railroad company is a grant in presenti, until acceptance by the company and the filing of a map of definite location of line fixing the route of the road beyond the power of the company to change it without express authority from Congress, the so-called grant is, in the language of the decisions, only a "float," and does not vest the company with any right or interest in any tract of land.

Van Wyck v. Knevals, 106 U. S. 360, 365, 27 L. ed. 201, 203, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 336.

The act which fixes the time of the definite location is the act of filing the map in the office of the Commissioner of the General Land Office.

Kansas P. R. Co. v. Dunmeyer, 113 U. S. 629, 28 L. ed. 1122, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 566.

No application can be made here of the law of contemporaneous grants, to the effect that lands common to the place limits of the two grants must be shared equally between the grantees, because such rule of law presupposes that both companies have vested rights in the common land, acquired by each having filed a map of definite location.

Sioux City & St. P. R. Co. v. United States, 159 U. S. 349-364, 40 L. ed. 177-182, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 17.

While the grant is only a "float" till definite location, upon such location the fiction of "relation" is brought in, and the right to the land relates back to the date of the grant.

Sioux City & St. P. R. Co. v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 117 U. S. 406, 408, 29 L. ed. 928, 929, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 790.

If the Texas Pacific Company located and constructed its line of road, and the Southern Pacific Company abandoned its contemplated road, and its lands were forfeited, clearly the Texas Pacific would receive all the land within its place limits. Conversely, the Southern Pacific Company is now entitled to all, unless defeated by the proviso to § 23 of the act of 1866.

United States v. Oregon & C. R. Co. 176 U. S. 28, 44 L. ed. 358, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 261; United States v. Southern P. R. Co. 146 U. S. 570, 36 L. ed. 1091, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 152; Southern P. R. Co. v. United States, 183 U. S. 519, 46 L. ed. 307, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 154.

As to railroad lands, no right, present or prospective, can possibly arise without location of line. When that shall have been done, there is a present right as to place lands, and a prospective right as to indemnity lands; but, until then, no rights of any kind exist as to specific lands.

United States v. Colton Marble & Lime Co. 146 U. S. 615, 36 L. ed. 1104, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 163.

A withdrawal by the Department on the general route map gives no right, claim, or interest in and to the lands covered by it. It simply protects the lands from the prohibited disposition to the public by pre-emption, private entry, or sale.

Menotti v. Dillon, 167 U. S. 720, 42 L. ed. 339, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 945; Kansas P. R. Co. v. Dunmeyer, 113 U. S. 636, 28 L. ed. 1124, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 566; United States v. Southern P. R. Co. 146 U. S. 570, 36 L. ed. 1091, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 152; United States v. Oregon & C. R. Co. 176 U. S. 28, 44 L. ed. 358, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 261.

A railroad is entitled to select indemnity lands from any lands within its indemnity limits, which at the time of selection are public lands.

Ryan v. Central P. R. Co. 99 U. S. 382, 25 L. ed. 305; Re Alabama & C. R. Co. 20 Land Dec. 408; Re Southern P. R. Co. 26 Land Dec. 452.

The status of lands within indemnity limits at the time of selection determines entirely the right of the railroad thereto.

Allers v. Northern P. R. Co. 9 Land Dec. 452; Northern P. R. Co. v. Halvorson, 10 Land Dec. 15; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Beal, 10 Land Dec. 504; Northern P. R. Co. v. Moling, 11 Land Dec. 138; Hensley v. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. 12 Land Dec. 19; Northern P. R. Co. v. Bass, 13 Land Dec. 201; Hastings & D. R. Co. v. St. Paul, M. & M. R. Co. 13 Land Dec. 535; St. Paul, M. & M. R. Co. v. Munz, 17 Land Dec. 288; South & North Ala. R. Co. v. Hall, 22 Land Dec. 273; Southern P. R. Co. v. McKinley, 22 Land Dec. 493.

Mr. Joseph H. Call argued the cause and filed a brief for appellee:

The grants to the Texas Pacific and to the Southern Pacific railroads being by the same act, if the respective rights of each had not been fixed and their priorities determined by the act, each company would have been entitled to an undivided moiety. Their rights and equities in that case would have been equal.

Chacago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Sioux City & St. P. R. Co. 117 U. S. 406, 29 L. ed. 928, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 790; Southern P. R. Co. v. United States, 183 U. S. 519, 46 L. ed. 307, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 154.

It is well settled in the construction of grants of public lands and franchises, that where any doubt or ambiguity exists it should be resolved in favor of the public and the state, and construed most strongly against the grantee.

Leavenworth, L. & G. R. Co. v. United States, 92 U. S. 733, 740, 23 L. ed. 634, 637; Slidell v. Grandjean, 111 U. S. 412, 437, 438, 28 L. ed. 321, 329, 330, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 475; Coosaw Min. Co. v. South Carolina, 144 U. S. 550, 562, 36 L. ed. 537, 542, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 689; Atlantic & P. R. Co. v. Mingus, 165 U. S. 413, 429, 41 L. ed. 770, 777, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 348.

It was not the intention of Congress to grant to the Southern Pacific Railroad Company any of the lands falling within the 20-mile limits of the Texas Pacific Railroad, as withdrawn by the Interior Department upon the map of general route in 1871.

Re Texas P. R. Co. 4 Land Dec. 215.

This construction of the act of 1871 by the Interior Department, so long acted upon, and under which rights of a very large number of persons have attached, will not be disturbed unless clearly erroneous.

United States v. Philbrick, 120 U. S. 52, 59, 30 L. ed. 559, 561, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 413; Hastings & D. R. Co. v. Whitney, 132 U. S. 357, 366, 33 L. ed. 363, 367, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 112; United States v. Alabama G. S. R. Co. 142 U. S. 615, 621, 35 L. ed. 1134, 1136, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 306; Hewitt v. Schultz, 180 U. S. 139, 149, 151, 156, 45 L. ed. 463, 469, 470, 472, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 309; Southern P. R. Co. v. United States, 183 U. S. 519, 525, 527, 528, 46 L. ed. 307, 311, 312, 313, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 154; Southern P. R. Co. v. Bell, 183 U. S. 675, 684, 46 L. ed. 383, 388, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 232.

Whatever may be the rule with respect to conflicts between other land grants, a provision was specially inserted in the Southern Pacific grant in order to determine the priorities in case of conflict.

United States v. Colton Marble & Lime Co. 146 U. S. 615, 619, 36 L. ed. 1104, 1106, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 163.

Not only did the Texas Pacific Railroad acquire a prospective right to the lands by filing its map of general route, but it acquired something more than that; it secured, while but an imperfect and inchoate right, still a right to the lands which could be asserted against third parties.

Northern P. R. Co. v. Sanders, 166 U. S. 620, 634, 635, 636, 41 L. ed. 1139, 1144, 1145, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 671.

Where Congress had shown an intention to do so, the mere filing of a general route map did not prevent Congress from disposing of the lands embraced thereby, by a later act granting lands to another road.

United States v. Oregon & C. R. Co. 176 U. S. 28, 44 L. ed. 358, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 261.

If the Southern Pacific Railroad Company cannot take these lands as granted lands, it should not be permitted to take them as indemnity, because they are excluded from the Southern Pacific grant by reason of the intention of Congress that they should not be taken at all.

Southern P. R. Co. v. United States, 168 U. S. 1, 66, 42 L. ed. 355, 381, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 18; Smead v. Southern P. R. Co. 29 Land Dec. 135; Germain v. Luke, 26 Land Dec. 597; Re Southern P. R. Co. 6 Land Dec. 816; Moore v. Kellogg, 17 Land Dec. 391, 392; Southern P. R. Co. v. Moore, 11 Land Dec. 534; Re Southern P. R. Co. 15 Land Dec. 460; Clark v. Herington, 186 U. S. 206, 46 L. ed. 1128, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 872.

In the present case, Congress has declared that those lands to which the Texas Pacific Railroad had a present or prospective right shall not be taken by the Southern Pacific.

Effect must be given to the intention of Congress.

Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Kansas P. R. Co. 97 U. S. 491, 497, 24 L. ed. 1095, 1097; United States v. Southern P. R. Co. 146 U. S. 570, 609, 36 L. ed. 1091, 1102, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 152.

Forfeitures are for the benefit of the United States, and not for the benefit of another company.

United States v. Southern P. R. Co. 146 U. S. 570, 613, 36 L. ed. 1091, 1104, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 152, 168 U. S. 1, 42 L. ed. 355, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 18.

The withdrawal of lands on general route maps is for the purpose of preserving the grant for the company to be aided.

Buttz v. Northern P. R. Co. 119 U. S. 55, 72, 30 L. ed. 330, 337, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 100; St. Paul & P. R. Co. v. Northern P. R. Co. 139 U. S. 1, 17, 18, 35 L. ed. 77, 83, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 389; Northern P. R. Co. v. Musser-Sauntry Land, Logging & Mfg. Co. 168 U. S. 604, 607, 42 L. ed. 596, 598, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 205.

Lands reserved by executive orders are not operated upon by a subsequent grant in aid of a railroad or other public improvement.

Wolecott v. Des Moines Nav. & R. Co. 5 Wall. 681, 18 L. ed. 689; Wolsey v. Chapman, 101 U. S. 755, 25 L. ed. 915; United States v. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. 141 U. S. 374, 35 L. ed. 771, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 13; Hamblin v. Western Land Co. 147 U. S. 531, 536, 37 L. ed. 267, 271, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 353; Wisconsin C. R. Co. v. Forsythe, 159 U. S. 46, 54, 40 L. ed. 71, 74, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1020; Northern P. R. Co. v. Musser-Sauntry Land, Logging & Mfg. Co. 168 U. S. 604, 42 L. ed. 596, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 205.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a bill to quiet title, brought by the United States against the plaintiff in error. It comes here by appeal from a decree of the United States circuit court of appeals (48 C. C. A. 712, 109 Fed. 913), affirming a decree of the circuit court (94 Fed. 427), in favor of the United States.

The United States claims under forfeiture of a grant made to the Texas Pacific Railroad Company in its charter, and the Southern Pacific Railroad Company under words in the same charter which are construed to make an incidental grant to it. The principal land in controversy is land within the place limits of the Southern Pacific under the said grant, and within the 20-mile limit of the Texas Pacific, being land situated where the road of the former company and the contemplated track of the Texas Pacific met at Yuma on the Colorado river in the southeastern corner of California. The United States contends that this land was excepted from the Southern Pacific grant.

The charter is the act of March 3, 1871, chap. 122 (16 Stat. at L. 573). By § 9 it grants to the Texas Pacific by words in the present tense "ten alternate sections of land per mile on each side of said railroad in California, where the same shall not have been sold, reserved, or otherwise disposed of by the United States," etc. By § 12, "said company, within two years after the passage of this act, shall designate the general route of its said road, as near as may be, and shall file a map of the same in the Department of the Interior; and when the map is so filed, the Secretary of the Interior, immediately thereafter, shall cause the lands within 40 miles on each side of said designated *route within the territories, and 20 miles within the state of California, to be withdrawn from pre-emption, private entry, and sale." The Texas Pacific filed its map of general route in August, 1871, and in October, 1871, the Secretary of the Interior withdrew the odd sections according to the statute, including the land in question.

By § 23 of this same charter, for the purpose of connecting the Texas Pacific Railroad with San Francisco, the Southern Pacific was authorized to construct a line to the Texas Pacific road at or near the Colorado river, "with the same rights, grants, and privileges, and subject to the same limitations," etc., as in the act of July 27, 1866, "Provided, however, that this section shall in no way affect or impair the rights, present or prospective, of the Atlantic & Pacific Railroad Company, or any other railroad company." It was decided in United States v. Colton Marble & Lime Co. 146 U. S. 615, 36 L. ed. 1104, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 163, that this proviso excluded the indemnity lands of the Atlantic & Pacific road, and that the Southern Pacific took nothing in them, even after a forfeiture of the Atlantic & Pacific grant. But it is said that the Atlantic & Pacific had filed a definite location, and it is contended on several grounds that there is not a similar exception in this case.

In the first place, it is denied that the Texas Pacific is included under the words last quoted: "or any other railroad company." But we think it too plain for extended argument that it is included by those words. It was called into being, and was an "other railroad" at the moment when the proviso took effect. In fact, it was the only other railroad, so far as has been suggested to us, to which the words could apply. It received a grant for its main line, while that to the Southern Pacific was for a branch. By the contemplated junction of the latter with the former there would arise a conflict for which it was proper to provide, and natural to provide as the statute did.

Next, it is said that the Texas Pacific had no prospective rights at the moment when the act was passed, and that is said to be the moment when her priorities were fixed. We cannot take the words of the proviso so narrowly. The Atlantic & *Pacific had not fixed its definite location when the act was passed, and yet in the decision which we have cited its indemnity lands were held excepted from the Southern Pacific grant. See United States v. Southern P. R. Co. 146 U. S. 570, 573, 36 L. ed. 1091, 1093, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 152; Southern P. R. Co. v. United States, 183 U. S. 519, 522, 46 L. ed. 307, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 154. As to the phrase "prospective rights," no doubt it is inartificial. The adjective changes the very nature of the substantive. A prospective right is not yet a right. It is only an expectation having a certain intensity of reasonableness. But it is plain, for instance, that when the lands were withdrawn along the general route of the Texas Pacific under § 12, that road had a prospective right to the whole of its place lands which the Southern Pacific could not affect by anything which it might do later. The statute is not governed by the ordinary rule as to contemporaneous grants. The Southern Pacific was not intended or allowed to interfere with what the Texas Pacific might take.

The strength of the appellant's case is in a somewhat attenuated line of reasoning. The Texas Pacific act refers to the act of July 27, 1866, for the rights conferred on the Southern Pacific. 14 Stat. at L. 292, chap. 278. The last-mentioned statute is an act incorporating the Atlantic & Pacific Railroad Company. By § 18 the Southern Pacific is authorized to connect with the Atlantic & Pacific, and is to have similar grants of land with that company. By § 6 there is a provision for the withdrawal of lands along the general route of the Atlantic & Pacific somewhat like that which has been mentioned as contained in § 12 of the Texas Pacific charter. It may be argued that it is implied by § 18 of the Atlantic & Pacific charter that there is to be a similar withdrawal of the land there granted to the Southern Pacific, and that this implied provision is carried over by a further implication to the grant to the Southern Pacific in § 23 of the Texas Pacific charter. The Southern Pacific filed the location of its general route in April, 1871, before the filing by the Texas Pacific, and, as the grant to the Texas Pacific by § 9 was only of lands not sold, reserved, or otherwise disposed of by the United States, it may be said that the Southern Pacific has got a preference, much as the Texas Pacific *would have got one had the Southern Pacific done nothing before the Texas Pacific filed the location of its general route.

It must be admitted that if this argument is correct in its premises it puts a good deal of a strain on the proviso in favor of the prospective rights of the Texas Pacific. For at the time when the Southern Pacific filed the location of its general route the prospective rights of the Texas Pacific were not determined otherwise than by its incorporation and the indications and promises in its charter. Nevertheless, we are of opinion that the argument cannot prevail. It is only by a stretch that the provision for withdrawal of lands along the general route of the Atlantic & Pacific could be extended to the grant to the Southern Pacific in the Texas Pacific charter, and if it be so extended it is such a remote and probably unconsidered consequence of a reference to a reference that it cannot be allowed to outweigh the plain intent of the proviso in § 23, reinforced by the express arrangement for withdrawal in favor of the Texas Pacific in § 9. Assuming that proviso to refer to the Texas Pacific, it indicates a plain intent to except from the grant to the Southern Pacific the land that in the natural course of events would be covered by the location of the former road. The conflict of interests naturally would be limited to the point of connection at Yuma. There might be no other. As to that land, the plain object of the proviso was to avoid a race of diligence by giving priority to the main line of the chartered road over the connecting branch. Our decision is in accord with the settled construction and practice in the Department of the Interior following a ruling of the late Mr. Justice Lamar when Secretary of the Interior. Texas P. R. Co. and Southern P. R. Co. 4 Land Dec. 215.

The Texas Pacific grant was declared forfeited by the act of February 28, 1885, chap. 265 (23 Stat. at L. 337), and this forfeiture inured to the benefit of the United States. United States v. Southern P. R. Co. 146 U. S. 570, 36 L. ed. 1091, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 152. It is argued further, however, that if the Southern Pacific did not get the lands in question under its primary grant, it may take a part of them as indemnity lands. It is said that the company has a right to take them for that purpose if the status of the lands at the time of selection permits it. Ryan v. Central P. R. Co. 99 U. S. 382, 25 L. ed. 305. That contention seems to be disposed of by Southern P. R. Co. v. United States, 168 U. S. 1, 47, 66, 42 L. ed. 355, 376, 382, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 18, and the practice of the Land Department for many years has been inconsistent with it. Southern P. R. Co. v. Moore, 11 Land Dec. 534; Moore v. Kellogg, 17 Land Dec. 391; Smead v. Southern P. R. Co. 29 Land Dec. 135. When it is decided that the company got no title to the land within its 20-mile limit, it would be contrary to the intimations of the cases to allow it to take the adjoining strip outside under a claim of indemnity. See Bardon v. Northern P. R. Co. 145 U. S. 535, 545, 36 L. ed. 806, 811, 12

Sup. Ct. Rep. 856; Clark v. Herington, 186 U. S. 206, 46 L. ed. 1128, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 872. It is not clear that the language of the statute does not forbid it. The indemnity to the Atlantic & Pacific, by § 3 of its charter adopted for the Southern Pacific by § 18, is to be other lands "in alternate sections, and designated by odd numbers, not more than 10 miles beyond the limits of said alternate sections, and not including the reserved numbers." It might be argued that the last-quoted words dispose of the matter. Without going into further reasons for our decision, we are of opinion that the decree appealed from was right. We deal only with the questions argued in this court.

Decree affirmed.

Mr. Justice Brewer and Mr. Justice Day took no part in the decision of this case.

*UNITED STATES, Appt.,

[453]

v.

THE SPANISH SMACK PAQUETE HABANA, Galban et al., Claimants. (No. 578)

UNITED STATES, Appt.,

v.

THE LOLA, Gonzales, Claimant. (No. 579)

UNITED STATES, Appt.,

v.

THE PODER DE DIOS, Pengochea et al., Claimants. (No. 580)

UNITED STATES, Appt.,

v.

THE ANTONIO Y PACO, Lopez et al., Claimants. (No. 581)

UNITED STATES, Appt.,

v.

THE ENGRACIA, Gonzales et al., Claimants. (No. 582)

UNITED STATES, Appt.,

v.

THE SEVERITA, Trocha et al., Claimants. (No. 583)

UNITED STATES, Appt.,

v.

THE ANTONIO SUAREZ, Vilar, Serra, & Co., Claimants. (No. 584)

UNITED STATES, Appt.,

v.

THE FERNANDITO, Trocha et al., Claimants. (No. 585)

NOTE.—As to damages, in cases of capture, on restitution—see note to United States v. The Nuestra Señora De Regla, 27 L. ed. U. S. 662.

UNITED STATES, Appt.,
v.
THE ORIENTE, Carillo, Claimant. (No. 586)

UNITED STATES, Appt.,
v.

THE ESPANA, Deus et al., Claimants.
(No. 587)

UNITED STATES, Appt.,
v.

THE CUATRO DE SETTEMBRE, Bunuel,
Claimant. (No. 588)

UNITED STATES, Appt.,
v.

THE SANTIAGO APOSTOL, De La Torre,
Claimant. (No. 589)†

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 453-468.)

Prize—damages for unlawful capture—liability of captors—of United States—sufficiency of exceptions to commissioner's report.

1. Naval captors of vessels as prize of war, the proceeds of which the prize courts have decreed should be restored to the claimants, with damages and costs, cannot be held liable therefor, where the libels were filed by the United States in its own behalf, praying a forfeiture to it, and alleging a capture pursuant to instructions from the President.
2. A prize court may enter a decree against the United States for the damages sustained by the claimants of vessels captured by its Navy as prize of war, the proceeds of which have, in the prize proceedings, been ordered restored to such claimants, with damages and costs, where the libels were filed by the United States in its own behalf, praying a forfeiture to it, and alleging a capture pursuant to instructions from the President.
3. An exception to the findings of a commissioner as to the damages to be awarded the claimants of vessels unlawfully captured as prize of war, on the ground that they were not warranted by the evidence, is sufficient to open the question as to whether or not such damages were excessive, where all the evidence is attached to the commissioner's report.

[Nos. 578, 579, 580, 581, 582, 583, 584, 585, 586, 587, 588, 589.]

Argued March 19, 1903. Decided April 6, 1903.

APPPEALS from the District Court of the United States for the Southern District of Florida to review decrees against the United States for the damages sustained by the claimants of vessels unlawfully captured as prize of war. Reversed, and remanded for further proceedings.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Solicitor General Hoyt argued the cause and filed a brief for appellant:

The principles governing damages for ordinary marine torts, when the punitive feature does not appear, follow the general rules of allowance of damages for injuries to property. The underlying idea is that the person injured shall be made whole,—that he shall be put in the same position that he was in before, receiving interest also, to bring his avails up to the date of judgment or payment.

The Baltimore, 8 Wall. 377, 19 L. ed. 463; Williamson v. Barrett, 13 How. 101, 14 L. ed. 68; Sturgis v. Clough, 1 Wall. 269, 17 L. ed. 580; The Potomac, 105 U. S. 630, 26 L. ed. 1194; The Umbria, 166 U. S. 404, 41 L. ed. 1053, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 610; The Apollon, 9 Wheat. 362, 6 L. ed. 111; The Three Friends, 166 U. S. 1, sub nom. United States v. The Three Friends, 41 L. ed. 897, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 495; The Conqueror, 166 U. S. 110, 41 L. ed. 937, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 510.

Damages for seizures without probable cause ought to be equal to the real injury sustained; and, unless there have been personal indignities, the damages ought to go no farther.

The Lively, 1 Gall. 315, Fed. Cas. No. 8,403; Murray v. The Charming Betsy, 2 Cranch, 64, 2 L. ed. 208; Maley v. Shattuck, 3 Cranch, 458, 2 L. ed. 498; The Lucy, 3 C. Rob. 208; The Narcissus, 4 C. Rob. 20.

Cases like those cited and like the present ones are to be carefully distinguished from those where there was a gross marine trespass which involved outrages and the principles of punishment properly applicable thereto, not possible to be invoked in the present cases, under the order of this court.

The Amiable Nancy, 3 Wheat. 546, 4 L. ed. 456; Del Col v. Arnold, 3 Dall. 333, 1 L. ed. 624; The Anna Maria, 2 Wheat. 327, 4 L. ed. 252; The St. Juan Baptista, 5 C. Rob. 33.

The government is not liable for torts or for tortious or unauthorized acts of its agents, and, in general, cannot be sued except as it may have expressly rendered itself liable to suit.

Robertson v. Sichel, 127 U. S. 507, 32 L. ed. 203, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1286; Gibbons v. United States, 8 Wall. 269, 19 L. ed. 453; Whiteside v. United States, 93 U. S. 247, 23 L. ed. 882; Hart v. United States, 95 U. S. 316, 24 L. ed. 479; Moffat v. United States, 112 U. S. 24, 28 L. ed. 623, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 10.

The United States is not liable for costs, and a judgment against it for costs will be reversed.

United States v. Barker, 2 Wheat. 395, 4 L. ed. 271; The Antelope, 12 Wheat. 546, 6 L. ed. 723; United States v. McLemore, 4 How. 286, 11 L. ed. 977; United States v. Boyd, 5 How. 29, 12 L. ed. 36; Reeside v. Walker, 11 How. 272, 13 L. ed. 693; Stanley v. Schualby, 162 U. S. 255, 40 L. ed. 960, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 754.

A money judgment can be rendered against the United States by the court of claims only.

Case v. Terrell, 11 Wall. 199, 20 L. ed. 134; The Siren, 7 Wall. 152, 19 L. ed. 129; The Davis, 10 Wall. 15, sub nom. United States v. Douglas, 19 L. ed. 875.

† These cases are reported by the Official Reporter under the title "The Paquete Habana." 189 U. S.

The payment of damages allowed should be imposed upon the captors individually.

Story, Prize Courts, p. 42; The Eleanor, 2 Wheat. 346, 4 L. ed. 257; Maley v. Shattuck, 3 Cranch, 458, 2 L. ed. 498; Little v. Barreme, 2 Cranch, 170, 2 L. ed. 243; The Mentor, 1 C. Rob. 179; The Freya, 5 C. Rob. 75; The St. Juan Baptista, 5 C. Rob. 33; Die Fire Damer, 5 C. Rob. 357; The William, 6 C. Rob. 316; Der Mohr, 3 C. Rob. 129, 4 C. Rob. 315; The Actcon, 2 Dodson Adm. 48; The Nemesis, Edw. Adm. 50; The Elize, Spinks Prize Cas. 88; The Ostsee, 2 Spinks Eccl. & Adm. 174; The Leucade, 2 Spinks Eccl. & Adm. 228; The Fortuna, Spinks Prize Cas. 307.

Mr. J. Parker Kirlin argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Convers & Kirlin, filed a brief for appellees:

The claimants are entitled to fair indemnity for the losses sustained by the seizure.

The Nuestra Señora De Regla, 17 Wall. 29, sub nom. United States v. The Nuestra Señora De Regla, 21 L. ed. 596.

The owners of the vessels being Cubans, and the vessels having been seized in Cuban waters when about to enter Cuban ports, the damages are naturally to be measured with reference to the value of the vessels and property in Cuba, rather than in the United States.

Bates v. Clark, 95 U. S. 204, 24 L. ed. 471.

The damages to be awarded should be equivalent to the injury sustained.

The Lively, 1 Gall. 315, Fed. Cas. No. 8,403; Hetzel v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 169 U. S. 26, 42 L. ed. 648, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255.

The findings of the commissioner are entitled to great weight.

The Elton, 31 C. C. A. 496, 42 U. S. App. 666, 83 Fed. 519; Tilghman v. Proctor, 125 U. S. 136, 31 L. ed. 664, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 894; The Grace Girdler, 7 Wall. 196, sub nom. Lockwood v. The Grace Girdler, 19 L. ed. 113; The Mangrove Prize Money, 188 U. S. 720, sub nom. United States v. The Mangrove, ante, 664, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 343.

When both courts below have concurred in the decisions of questions of fact, parties ought not to expect this court to reverse such a decree by raising a doubt founded on the number or credibility of witnesses.

The Richmond, 103 U. S. 540, sub nom. The Sabine v. The Richmond, 26 L. ed. 313.

The exceptions that the commissioner had no evidence to justify his report: that the commissioner reported more than the evidence warranted: and that the evidence showed the vessel to be of less value than the report made it,—are not entitled to any consideration on appeal from the final decree.

The Commander-in-Chief, 1 Wall. 43, sub nom. La Tourette v. Burton, 17 L. ed. 609.

The value which is to be made good to the claimants is the value at the time and place of the capture.

Bates v. Clark, 95 U. S. 204, 24 L. ed. 471.

Without any exception or assignment of error on the subject, no question relating to interest appears to be before the court.

The Commander-in-Chief, 1 Wall. 43, sub nom. La Tourette v. Burton, 17 L. ed. 609.

Interest has always been allowed in cases of this class, not only against private captors, but against the United States.

The Apollon, 9 Wheat. 362, 6 L. ed. 111; Murray v. The Charming Betsy, 2 Cranch, 64, 2 L. ed. 208; The Anna Maria, 2 Wheat. 327, 4 L. ed. 252; The Amiable Nancy, 3 Wheat. 546, 4 L. ed. 456; The Nuestra Señora De Regla, 108 U. S. 92, sub nom. United States v. The Nuestra Señora De Regla, 27 L. ed. 662, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 287; The Labuan, Blatchf. Prize Cas. 165, Fed. Cas. No. 7,964; The Glen, Blatchf. Prize Cas. 375, Fed. Cas. No. 5,479; The Sybil, Blatchf. Prize Cas. 615, Fed. Cas. No. 13,706.

The rate allowed was the legal rate prevailing in the district in which the decrees were entered, and is in accordance with the practice sanctioned by this court.

Texas & P. R. Co. v. Anderson, 149 U. S. 237, 37 L. ed. 717, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 843.

Any matter that was determined on the previous appeal must be taken as final and conclusive throughout the subsequent stages of the litigation.

The Nuestra Señora De Regla, 108 U. S. 92, sub nom. United States v. The Nuestra Señora De Regla, 27 L. ed. 662, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 287; Clark v. Keith, 106 U. S. 464, 27 L. ed. 302, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 568; Wayne County v. Kennicott, 94 U. S. 499, 24 L. ed. 260; The Lady Pike, 96 U. S. 461, sub nom. Pearce v. Germania Ins. Co. 24 L. ed. 672.

No application was made by the United States to amend the judgment or mandate of the court so as to provide, if it had been competent to do so, that the judgment should be against the captors as well as the United States, or against the captors alone. In the absence of such an amendment it would seem that the district court was without power or authority to enter any decree except a decree against the libellant of record.

Re Potts, 166 U. S. 263, 41 L. ed. 994, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 992.

It is the settled practice in prize cases, where restitution is ordered with damages, to assess and award the damages in the original cause against the libellants therein. This was done without question in cases that arose prior to 1861.

Murray v. The Charming Betsy, 2 Cranch, 64, 2 L. ed. 208; The Amiable Nancy, 3 Wheat. 546, 4 L. ed. 456; The Apollon, 9 Wheat. 362, 6 L. ed. 111.

The practice since 1861 has been to award the damages against the United States alone, or, in cases where the captors have intervened before condemnation and asked to be made colibellants, against the United States and the naval captors jointly.

The Labuan, Blatchf. Prize Cas. 165, Fed. Cas. No. 7,964; The Glen, Blatchf. Prize Cas. 375, Fed. Cas. No. 5,479; The Sybil, Blatchf. Prize Cas. 615, Fed. Cas. No. 13,706; The Nuestra Señora De Regla, 108 U. S. 92, sub nom. United States v. The Nuestra Señora De Regla, 27 L. ed. 662, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 287; The Teresita, 5 Wall. 180, sub nom. United States v. The Teresita, 18 L. ed. 627.

If the government had taken the vessels and applied them to its own use, instead of procuring them to be condemned and sold, without legal right, there could be no question that it would be bound to return the boats or their value.

United States v. Russell, 13 Wall. 623, 20 L. ed. 474; Clark v. United States, 95 U. S. 539, 24 L. ed. 518.

The court in previous decisions has recognized the liability of the government to the extent of the value of the property involved, where it has voluntarily submitted itself to the jurisdiction of the court as a plaintiff against such property.

The Siren, 7 Wall. 152, 19 L. ed. 129; Carr v. United States, 98 U. S. 436, 25 L. ed. 210; Case v. Terrell, 11 Wall. 199, 20 L. ed. 134; United States v. Lee, 106 U. S. 196, 27 L. ed. 171, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 240; Clark v. Barnard, 108 U. S. 436, 27 L. ed. 780, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 878; Cunningham v. Macon & B. R. Co. 109 U. S. 446, 27 L. ed. 992, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 292, 609; The Nuestra Señora De Regla, 17 Wall. 29, sub nom. United States v. The Nuestra Señora De Regla, 21 L. ed. 596, 108 U. S. 92, 27 L. ed. 662, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 287.

The English courts also recognize the principle that a sovereign, otherwise exempt from suit, may subject itself to judgment in a cross suit, if it invokes the jurisdiction of the court as a plaintiff.

The Newbattle, L. R. 10 Prob. Div. 33; Hullett v. King of Spain, 2 Bligh N. S. 31.

Under the prize acts, the ratification of the captures by the government, which founded libels thereon, may well be taken, as relieving the naval captors from liability, even if they had been before the court as parties.

Lamar v. Browne, 92 U. S. 187, 23 L. ed. 650.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

[464] These are cases of fishing smacks, which were libeled as "prize of war." The proceedings in all the cases are similar and the evidence, to a large extent, the same. It was decided by this court in two of the cases, The Paquete Habana, 175 U. S. 677, 44 L. ed. 320, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 290, that smacks of this sort, engaged, as these were, in coast fishing for the daily market, were not liable to capture, and decrees were ordered that the proceeds of the vessels and cargoes be restored to the claimants, with damages and costs. On motion of the United States it was ordered that the decrees be modified so as to direct that the damages should be compensatory only, and not punitive. Decrees were entered in each of the above-named cases by the district court in pursuance of this mandate, and agreements between the United States, the captors, and claimants were filed, that the damages should be charged against the United States or the captors, or apportioned "as to justice may appertain and as the legal responsibility therefor may appear;" saving the right to review the decrees as to amount and as to where the ultimate responsibility rested. The papers do not disclose such an agreement in the Cuatro de Settembre, but, as the records, so far as similar to the first two cases, were not printed, we assume that the omission was only in the index, and that it was understood that this case should stand like the rest. The cases were referred to a commissioner to report the amount of damages. He reported his findings and the evidence. The United States excepted to the findings as excessive. The district court entered decrees against the United States for the amounts, and the United States appealed on the grounds that the decrees should have gone against the captors, and not against the government, and that the damages were excessive and the exceptions to the commissioner's report should have been sustained.

189 U. S.

We do not see how it is possible that a decree should be entered against the captors. There was no formal intervention by them, and, whether a decree can be made against the United States or not, it has so far adopted the acts of capture that it would be hard to say that under the circumstances of these cases it has not made those acts its own. It is not disputed that the United States might have ordered the vessels to be released. It did not do so. The libels were filed by the United States on its own behalf, [465] praying a forfeiture to the United States. The statutes in force seemed to contemplate that form of procedure (Rev. Stat. § 4618 [U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3128]), and such has been the practice under them. The libels alleged a capture pursuant to instructions from the President. The captures were by superior force, so that there was no question that the United States was interested in the proceeds. Rev. Stat. § 4630 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3132). The modification of the decrees in regard to damages, on motion by the United States, imported a recognition of the interest of the United States in that matter, and its submission to the entry of decrees against it. The agreements to which we have referred had a similar import, although they indicated an awakening to a determination to argue the form of the decree. In the case of Little v. Barreme, 2 Cranch, 170, 2 L. ed. 243, conversely to this, the United States was not a party and the captor was. All that was decided bearing upon the present point was that instructions from the President did not exonerate the captor from liability to a neutral vessel. As to even that the Chief Justice hesitated. But we are not aware that it is disputed that when the act of a public officer is authorized or has been adopted by the sovereign power, whatever the immunities of the sovereign, the agent thereafter cannot be pursued. Lamar v. Browne, 92 U. S. 188, 199, 23 L. ed. 651, 655; and as to ratification, Buron v. Denman, 2 Exch. 167, 187, 189; Secretary of State v. Kamachee Boye Sahaba, 13 Moore P. C. C. 22, 86. See Dempsey v. Chambers, 154 Mass. 330, 332, 13 L. R. A. 219, 28 N. E. 279. The principle and authority of Buron v. Denman was recognized and followed by the court of claims in Wiggins v. United States, 3 Ct. Cl. 412, 423.

If we are right so far, we think that, under the circumstances of this case, a decree properly may be entered against the United States. The former decree of this court remains in force and requires a final decree for damages. Re Potts, 166 U. S. 263, 265, 41 L. ed. 994, 995, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 520; M'Cormick v. Sullivan, 10 Wheat. 192, 200, 6 L. ed. 300, 302. The decree must run against the United States if a decree is to be made. In The Nuestra Señora de Regla, 108 U. S. 92, 102, sub nom. United States v. The Nuestra Señora de Regla, 27 L. ed. 662, 666, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 287, the court was of opinion that the United States had submitted to the jurisdiction of the court so far as to warrant the ascertainment of damages according to the rules applicable to private persons in *like cases. It seems to us that the facts here are not less strong. Decrees in cases which disclose no special circumstances have been recognized by subsequent statutes providing for their payment. The Glen, Blatchf. Prize Cas. 375, Fed. Cas. No. 5,479; Act of February 13, 1864, 13 Stat. at L. 575, chap. 10; The Labuan, Blatchf. Prize Cas. 165, Fed. Cas. No. 7,964; Act of July 7, 1870, 16 Stat. at L. 649, chap. 220; The Sybil, Blatchf. Prize Cas. 615, Fed. Cas. No. 13,706; Act of July 8, 1870, 16 Stat. at L. 650, chap. 231; The Flying Scud, 6 Wall. 263, sub nom. The Flying Scud v. United States, 18 L. ed. 755; Act of July 7, 1870, 16 Stat. at L. 649, chap. 219. See also 16 Stat. at L. 650, 651, chaps. 232, 234.

We pass, then, to the other ground of the appeal. With regard to this it is objected that the exceptions to the master's report are not sufficient to open the question; referring to the Commander-in-Chief, 1 Wall. 43, 50, sub nom. La Tourette v. Burton, 17 L. ed. 609, 611. But the objection being the general one that the evidence did not warrant the finding, and all the evidence being attached to the report, nothing more is needed.

On the amount of the damages, we are of opinion that further proceedings must be had. We do not forget the weight that is given to the findings of a master or commissioner upon matters of fact. But this weight is largely, although not wholly, due to the opportunity, which we do not share, of seeing the witnesses. So far as the commissioner disregarded the testimony of the witnesses whom he saw, we should hesitate to overrule his conclusion, although it seems too absolute on the grounds set forth. But the result reached is based on documentary evidence which is before us, and as to which we have equal opportunities for forming a judgment. It appears to us plain that this evidence was given undue weight. The source from which it comes and the high valuations require that it should be taken with considerable reserve. The commissioner had a right, which he seems to have thought that he did not possess, to chancer the estimates. He adopted the owners' prices without qualification. The certificate of the harbor-master of Havana is dated November 23, 1898. It does not purport to be a copy of any earlier record. It is true that he makes his valuation as of March 1, 1898, but he does not say, either in the certificate or in his testimony, that he made that valuation at that or any other date before November 23. We shall not go over the *other evidence in detail. Some, at least,[467] of the vessels were old; the Paquete Habana, for instance, at least eighteen or twenty years. One-half interest was bought in 1892 for $2,400. She is valued in 1898 by owners, harbor-master, and commissioner at $4,500. The Lola was purchased "at a cheap price," according to the owner, in 1887. The valuation of some of the other smacks is above the price said to have been paid for them in earlier years.

In the case of the Espana it appears that she was about fourteen years old, and cost, when built, $10,000. She is valued by the owners and harbor-master, agreeing as usual, at $9,000. The commissioner adopts this valuation. Yet it appears that the vessel was resold to the owners for $2,500. Whether this price was a fair value or not, and the owners would not give more, the result of the sale was that they had their boat back again. It is apparent, therefore, that their actual loss was only what they had to pay to get it, the loss from detention of the boat, and any wear and tear and changes that it had undergone in the meantime. In a case of the present kind, it would be going beyond the requirements of justice into the realm of very doubtful technicalities to disregard the fact that the vessel got back because it was due to a subsequent transaction with a stranger. There is some evidence that the same thing happened in some or all of the other cases. See The Lively, 1 Gall. 315, 321, Fed. Cas. No. 8,403.

The fish are allowed for at the highest price in Havana during the blockade, which is too high a rate, and interest was charged at 8 per cent, there being no reason apparent for charging more than 6, if interest was allowed. See Lincoln v. Claflin, 7 Wall. 132, 139, 19 L. ed. 106, 109; The Amalia, 34 L. J. Adm. N. S. 21; Straker v. Hartland, 2 Hem. & M. 570; Frazer v. Bigelow Carpet Co. 141 Mass. 126, 4 N. E. 620. These are details, but they show what is manifest throughout, that the owners' demands have been accepted without discrimination, on evidence which does not justify the result.

We think that we have said enough to show that a revision of the findings is necessary. It seems to us better that this revision should take place in the district court rather than *be attempted by us. Whether further evidence shall be taken we leave to the parties and to that court.

Decrees reversed, and cases remanded for further proceedings in accordance with this opinion.

TEXAS & PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY,
Plff. in Err.,
v.
ABE BEHYMER.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 468-471.)

Master and servant—assumption of risk—standard of care—instructions.

1. The risk of injury from a sudden bump or jerk in the management of a freight train is not, as a matter of law, assumed by a brakeman standing, in obedience to orders, upon the icy roof of a car in such train.
2. Whether a freight train was handled with ordinary care, and not whether it was handled in the usual and ordinary way, is the test by which to determine the liability of a railroad company for injuries received by a brakeman because of a sudden bump or jerk while he was standing, in obedience to orders, on the icy roof of a car in such train.
3. An instruction that it was the duty of an injured employee to submit to all treatment that a reasonably prudent person would have submitted to, in order to improve his condition, and that his employer was liable for no damages which might have been prevented by reasonable care, is not objectionable as authorizing the inference that as a prudent man the employee might have postponed recovery from his injury to recovery of damages.

[No. 224.]

Argued March 20, April 6, 1903. Decided April 20, 1903.

IN ERROR to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Circuit Court for the Eastern District of Texas in favor of plaintiff in an action for personal injuries, brought by an employee against a railroad company. Affirmed.

See same case below, 50 C. C. A. 106, 112 Fed. 35.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. David D. Duncan argued the cause, and, with Messrs. John F. Dillon and Winslow S. Pierce, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

Behymer was hurt solely by exposure to an assumed risk.

Central R. & Bkg. Co. v. Sims, 80 Ga. 749, 7 S. E. 176; Rutledge v. Missouri P. R. Co. 110 Mo. 312, 19 S. W. 38; Davis v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 152 Pa. 314, 25 Atl. 498; Galveston, H. & S. A. R. Co. v. Lempe, 59 Tex. 19; Fisher v. Southern P. R. Co. 89 Cal. 399, 26 Pac. 894; International & G. N. R. Co. v. Turner, 3 Tex. Civ. App. 487, 23 S. W. 146; Galveston, H. & S. A. R. Co. v. Arispe, 81 Tex. 517, 17 S. W. 47.

The charge should not have confined the jury to a consideration of what ordinarily prudent persons would or would not have done.

Fisher v. Southern P. R. Co. 89 Cal. 399, 26 Pac. 894; Davis v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 152 Pa. 314, 25 Atl. 498; Rutledge v. Missouri P. R. Co. 110 Mo. 312, 19 S. W. 38; Central R. & Bkg. Co. v. Sims, 80 Ga. 749, 7 S. E. 176; Galveston, H. & S. A. R. Co. v. Arispe, 81 Tex. 517, 17 S. W. 47.

Mr. Cone Johnson argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error:

It was the duty of the master, knowing the peril of its servant, to use reasonable care to avoid injuring him.

Missouri P. R. Co. v. Watts, 63 Tex. 552.

The duty of the master to the servant is a varying one, to be measured by the circumstances of the case, the danger to the employee, and the consequences to follow from a failure to exercise care.

Wabash R. Co. v. McDaniels, 107 U. S. 454, 27 L. ed. 605, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 932; Hough v. Texas & P. R. Co. 100 U. S. 213, 25 L. ed. 612; Wabash R. Co. v. McDaniels, 107 U. S. 454, 27 L. ed. 605, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 932; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Archibald, 170 U. S. 671, 42 L. ed. 1191, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 777; Pantzar v. Tilly Foster Iron Min. Co. 99 N. Y. 368, 2 N. E. 24; Hosie v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 75 Iowa, 683, 37 N. W. 963; Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Rowan, 104 Ind. 94, 3 N. E. 627; Little Rock & Ft. S. R. Co. v. Voss (Ark.) 18 S. W. 172; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Watts, 63 Tex. 552; Moran v. Harris, 63 Iowa, 390, 19 N. W. 278; Pauck v. St. Louis Dressed-Beef Provision Co. 159 Mo. 467, 61 S. W. 806; Lalor v. Chicago, B. & I. R. Co. 52 Ill. 401, 4 Am. Rep. 616; Chicago Drop Forge & Foundry Co. v. Van Dam, 149 Ill. 337, 36 N. E. 1024; Jones v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. 49 Mich. 573, 14 N. W. 551; Colorado Electric Co. v. Lubbers, 11 Colo. 505, 19 Pac. 479; 1 Bailey, Personal Injuries Relating to Master & Servant, §§ 463, 467, 471, 473, 537, 578a; Buswell, Personal Injuries, §§ 207, 211.

The court having fully instructed the jury that it was Behymer's duty to use reasonable care to have his injuries healed and to submit to reasonable surgical operation, the law of the case was fully given, and as favorably to plaintiff in error as could be demanded.

Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. McMannewitz, 70 Tex. 76, 8 S. W. 66; Cooper v. Dallas, 83 Tex. 242, 18 S. W. 565.

The servant does not assume the risk arising from the negligence of the master, and no custom on the part of the master could justify his negligence.

Hosie v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 75 Iowa, 683, 37 N. W. 963. See also Baltimore & O. & C. R. Co. v. Rowan, 104 Ind. 94, 3 N. E. 627; Moran v. Harris, 63 Iowa, 390, 19 N. W. 278; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Ross, 112 U. S. 377, 28 L. ed. 787, 5 Sup. Ct.

NOTE.—On a servant's assumption of risk—see Pidcock v. Union P. R. Co. (Utah) 1 L. R. A. 131, and note; Foley v. Pettee Mach. Works (Mass.) 4 L. R. A. 51, and note; Hunter v. New York, O. & W. R. Co. (N. Y.) 6 L. R. A. 246, and note; Georgia P. R. Co. v. Dooly (Ga.) 189 U. S. U. S., Book 47.

12 L. R. A. 342, and note. And see notes to Kehler v. Schwenk (Pa.) 13 L. R. A. 374; Howard v. Delaware & H. Canal Co. (C. C. D. Vt.) 6 L. R. A. 75; Southern P. Co. v. Seley, 38 L. ed. U. S. 391; and Chesapeake & O. R. Co. v. Hennessey, 38 C. C. A. 314.

Rep. 184; Northern P. R. Co. v. Teeter, 11 C. C. A. 332, 27 U. S. App. 316, 63 Fed. 527; Canadian P. R. Co. v. Johnston, 25 L. R. A. 470, 9 C. C. A. 587, 26 U. S. App. 85, 61 Fed. 738; Northern P. R. Co. v. Charless, 2 C. C. A. 380, 7 U. S. App. 359, 51 Fed. 562; Union P. R. Co. v. O'Brien, 1 C. C. A. 354, 4 U. S. App. 221, 49 Fed. 538; Cheatham v. Red River Line, 56 Fed. 249; Southern P. R. Co. v. Lafferty, 6 C. C. A. 474, 15 U. S. App. 193, 57 Fed. 536; Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Brown, 6 C. C. A. 142, 18 U. S. App. 10, 56 Fed. 807; Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Stahley, 11 C. C. A. 88, 27 U. S. App. 157, 62 Fed. 363; Southerland v. Northern P. R. Co. 43 Fed. 646; Texas C. R. Co. v. Frazier (Tex. Civ. App.) 34 S. W. 664; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Eberheart, 91 Tex. 324, 43 S. W. 510; International & G. N. R. Co. v. Doyle, 49 Tex. 190; Brown v. Sullivan, 71 Tex. 476, 10 S. W. 288; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Sulliphant, 70 Tex. 624, 8 S. W. 673; Southern P. R. Co. v. Aylward, 79 Tex. 675, 15 S. W. 697.

The opinion of the court was delivered by Mr. Justice Holmes:

This is an action for personal injuries, brought by an employee against a railroad company. It was tried in the circuit court, where the plaintiff had a verdict. It then was taken to the circuit court of appeals on [469] a writ of error and bill of exceptions* by the company, and now is brought here on a further writ of error, the company being a United States corporation. A good deal of the argument for the railroad is devoted to disputing the testimony of the plaintiff below and arguing that the verdict was excessive, but of course we have nothing to do with that. New York, L. E. & W. R. Co. v. Winter, 143 U. S. 60, 75, 36 L. ed. 71, 80, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 356; Lincoln v. Power, 151 U. S. 436, 38 L. ed. 224, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 387. We must assume the most favorable statement of the plaintiff's case to be true, unless some particular request for instructions makes it necessary to deal with conflicting evidence. That statement may be made in a few words.

Behymer had been in the employ of the company as a brakeman about three months. On February 7, 1899, at Big Sandy, in Texas, he was ordered by the conductor of a local freight train to get up on some cars standing on a siding and let off the brakes, so that the engine might move them to the main track and add them to the train. The tops of the cars were covered with ice, as all concerned knew. He obeyed orders; the engine picked up the cars, moved to the main track, and stopped suddenly. The cars ran forward to the extent of the slack and back again, as they were moving up hill. The jerk upset Behymer's balance, the bottom of his trousers caught in a projecting nail in the running board, and he was thrown between the cars. It is true that the jury might have drawn a different conclusion from his evidence, or have disbelieved it in essential points, but they also were at liberty to find, as they must be taken to have found, that the foregoing statement is true. The car belonged to another road, but was in the charge of the defendant company, and, according to the statement of the counsel for the plaintiff in error, had been inspected before the accident, although we should have doubted whether the testimony meant to go so far. Behymer based his claim upon negligence in stopping the cars so suddenly with knowledge of his position and the slippery condition of the roof of the car, and upon the projection of the nail, which increased the danger and contributed to his fall. It should be added that, by a statute of Texas, if there was negligence, the fact that it was the *negligence of a fellow servant was not [470] a defense. Tex. Gen. Laws 1897, Special Session, chap. 6, § 1; 2 Sayles's Tex. Civil Stat. 1897, art. 4560f.

The fundamental error alleged in the exceptions to the charge is that the court declined to rule that the chance of such an accident as happened was one of the risks that the plaintiff assumed, or that the question whether the defendant was liable for it depended on whether the freight train was handled in the usual and ordinary way. Instead of that, the court left it to the jury to say whether the train was handled with ordinary care; that is, the care that a person of ordinary prudence would use under the same circumstances. This exception needs no discussion. The charge embodied one of the commonplaces of the law. What usually is done may be evidence of what ought to be done, but what ought to be done is fixed by a standard of reasonable prudence, whether it usually is complied with or not. Wabash R. Co. v. McDaniels, 107 U. S. 454, 27 L. ed. 605, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 932. No doubt a certain amount of bumping and jerking is to be expected on freight trains, and, under ordinary circumstances, cannot be complained of. Yet, it can be avoided, if necessary, and when the particular and known condition of the train makes a sudden bump, obviously dangerous to those known to be on top of the cars, we are not prepared to say that a jury would not be warranted in finding that an easy stop is a duty. If it was negligent to stop as the train did stop, the risk of it was not assumed by the plaintiff. Texas & P. R. Co. v. Archibald, 170 U. S. 665, 672, 42 L. ed. 1188, 1191, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 777.

However, the plaintiff did not rely on the management of the train alone. The projecting nail was another element in his case. The jury were instructed with regard to that, that the railroad company was not liable unless there was a nail there improperly projecting, and a reasonable inspection would have discovered and remedied the defect. The car was in the custody of the company. There is no suggestion that the company had not had an opportunity to inspect, and the contrary was assumed by a request for instructions on the part of the company. Indeed, as we have said, its counsel interprets the evidence as meaning that the car had been inspected before *the acci- [471] dent. It is not pressed that there was error on this point. See Mackin v. Boston & A. R. Co. 135 Mass. 201, 46 Am. Rep. 456; Glynn v. Central R. Co. 175 Mass. 510, 512, 56 N. E. 698. The jury were instructed properly on the subject of assumption of risks and contributory negligence, and we think it unnecessary to deal more specifically with this part of the case.

It was argued that Behymer had aggravated the injury by refusing proper surgical treatment. With regard to this the jury were instructed in substance, but at more length, that it was his duty to submit to all treatment that a reasonably prudent person would have submitted to, in order to improve his condition, and that no damages could be allowed which might have been prevented by reasonable care. It is suggested that, as a prudent man, he might have postponed recovery from his injury to recovery of damages. The instructions plainly excluded such a view. The argument hardly is serious. We have examined all the minute criticisms on the rulings and refusals to rule, and discover no error. We deem it unnecessary to answer them in greater detail.

Judgment affirmed.

UNITED STATES, Appt.,

v.

JOHN C. SWEET.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 471-474.)

Army — travel pay to discharged officer — effect of departmental construction of statute.

The settled practice of the War Department to deny an officer discharged at his own request the travel pay and commutation of subsistence from the place of discharge to the place of enrollment, allowable by U. S. Rev. Stat. § 1289 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 915), as amended by the act of February 27, 1877, chap. 69 (19 Stat. at L. 243, 244), "when an officer is discharged from the service except by way of punishment for an offense," is not so clearly erroneous as to justify the courts in construing such provision as including a discharge on resignation.

[No. 236.]

Argued and submitted April 15, 1903. Decided April 27, 1903.

A PPEAL from the Court of Claims to review a judgment awarding travel pay and commutation of subsistence to an officer in the Volunteer Army of the United States honorably discharged on his resignation. Reversed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

NOTE. — On construction of statutes — see notes to Riggs v. Palmer (N. Y.) 5 L. R. A. 340; United States v. Saunders, 22 L. ed. U. S. 736; Maillard v. Lawrence, 14 L. ed. U. S. 925; and Blake v. National City Bank, 23 L. ed. U. S. 119.

189 U. S.

Assistant Attorney General Pradt and Mr. Franklin W. Collins submitted the cause for appellant.

Mr. George A. King argued the cause, and, with Mr. William B. King, filed a brief for appellee.

For contentions of counsel, see their brief as reported in United States v. Barnett, post, 908.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This case comes here by appeal from a judgment of the court of claims in favor of the petitioner, Sweet. The petitioner was a second lieutenant of volunteers in the United States Army, tendered his resignation, and was honorably discharged on October 15, 1898. He was mustered into the service at St. Paul, Minnesota, his residence being Minneapolis. The place of his discharge was Camp Meade, Pennsylvania. He was not furnished transportation or subsistence, but returned to his residence at his own expense, and later brought this petition to recover travel pay and commutation of subsistence under Rev. Stat. § 1289 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 915), as amended by the act of February 27, 1877, chap. 69 (19 Stat. at L. 243, 244). That section allows the items demanded "when an officer is discharged from the service, except by way of punishment for an offense." The question whether the statute extends to cases like the present has been before this court twice, but has not been decided authoritatively. In one case the court was equally divided (United States v. Price, No. 60, December Term, 1870; S. C., 4 Ct. Cl. 164); in the other, the decision went off upon another point (United States v. Thornton, 160 U. S. 654, 40 L. ed. 570, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 415; S. C., 27 Ct. Cl. 342).

It is admitted that the settled practice of the War Department and of the Treasury has been to deny the allowances claimed when an officer or soldier is discharged at his own request, for his own pleasure or convenience. Whitmeyer, 3 Decisions of the Comptroller of the Treasury, 397, 398; Weber, Id. 640; 5 Id. 113, 117; Id. 939, 941; Bridges, Second Comptroller's Letter *Book, vol. 18, p. 184; Weevil, Id. vol. 26, p. [473] 296. The weight of a contemporaneous and long-continued construction of a statute by those charged with its execution is well recognized in cases open to reasonable doubt. United States v. Johnston, 124 U. S. 236, 253, 31 L. ed. 389, 396, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 446; United States v. Finnell, 185 U. S. 236, 244, 46 L. ed. 890, 893, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 633. But it is said that in this case the language of the statute admits of no doubt. It is argued that the words "except by way of punishment for an offense" exclude the implication of other exceptions to the rule. Some force was attributed also to the amendment to the Revised Statutes, which substituted for "honorably discharged from the service" the present words "discharged from the service, except by way of punishment for an offense." The change, however, is merely a recurrence to the language of the earlier statutes under which the practice of the War Department grew up, so that no particular weight can be given to that.

The words "discharged from the service, except by way of punishment for an offense" are found in the acts of March 3, 1799 (1 Stat. at L. 755, chap. 48, § 25); March 16, 1802 (2 Stat. at L. 137, chap. 9, § 24); January 11, 1812 (2 Stat. at L. 674, chap. 14, § 22, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 915); and January 29, 1813 (2 Stat. at L. 796, chap. 16, § 15, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 915). See, further, the acts of April 12, 1808 (2 Stat. at L. 483, chap. 43, § 5, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 874); March 3, 1815 (3 Stat. at L. 225, chap. 79, § 4); July 22, 1861 (12 Stat. at L. 269, chap. 9, § 5); July 29, 1861 (12 Stat. at L. 280, chap. 24, § 4); June 20, 1864 (13 Stat. at L. 145, chap. 145, § 8, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 915); March 16, 1896 (29 Stat. at L. 63, chap. 59, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 917); June 7, 1900 (31 Stat. at L. 708, chap. 860, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 917; February 8, 1901, (31 Stat. at L. 762, chap. 342, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 918). The phrase, "honorably discharged," seems first to have appeared in the Revised Statutes, and to have been amended back to the ancient form in three years. Except for that short intervening time, the allowance of travel pay and commutation of subsistence has gone on under the early words and the practical construction of them to which we have referred.

It follows that the only question is whether the meaning of the long-used phrase is too clear for almost equally long-established practice to control. It seems to us not to be so. It is quite true that in the military service the word "discharge" is the word applied to an order ending the [474]service of an officer at *his own request. But in other connections it conveys the notion of a movement beginning with the superior, and more or less adverse to the object; as, for instance, when we speak of discharging a servant. Usually it is a slightly discrediting verb. If it is taken in its ordinary meaning here, the exception in case of a discharge by way of punishment raises no difficulty, because a discharge on resignation is not within the meaning of the principal clause. The course of the departments has amounted to no more than interpreting the word in this exact sense.

Enlisted men are given similar allowances by § 1290 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 916) and the earlier statutes cited. By the act of June 7, 1900, chap. 860 (31 Stat. at L. 708, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 917), when the Secretary of War, in the exercise of his discretion, has directed the discharge "of any enlisted men . . . and the orders . . . stated that such enlisted men were entitled to travel pay," such order is to be sufficient authority for payment of the allowances under § 1290 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 916). This recognizes that it is usual to state in the order whether the soldier is entitled to travel pay or not, and seems to accept existing practices as they are. It has no effect upon the cases before us further than as another slight indication of the understanding in the service. But, taking everything into account, we are not prepared to overturn the long-established understanding of the departments charged with the execution of the law.

Judgment reversed.

UNITED STATES, Appt.,

v.

PETER W. BARNETT.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 474.)

Army — travel pay to discharged soldier.

An enlisted man in the Volunteer Army of the United States, who has been discharged on his own application, is not entitled to recover the travel pay and commutation of subsistence from the place of his discharge to the place of his enrollment, which are allowable by U. S. Rev. Stat. § 1290 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 916), when discharged from the service except by way of punishment for an offense.

[No. 235.]

Argued and submitted April 15, 1903. Decided April 27, 1903.

APPEAL from the Court of Claims to review a judgment allowing travel pay and commutation of subsistence to an enlisted man in the Volunteer Army of the United States, discharged on his own application. Reversed.

Solicitor General Pradt and Mr. Franklin W. Collins submitted the cause for appellant:

It has been uniformly held by the War Department and by the accounting officers of the government, for a period of at least seventy years, that where an officer's or soldier's convenience is consulted, by resignation or otherwise, on his leaving the service he forfeits his traveling allowances.

5 Compt. Dec. 941; 5 Compt. Dec. 117; 3 Compt. Dec. 397, at p. 640.

Contemporaneous construction of a statute by those charged with its execution, where that construction has for many years controlled the conduct of public affairs, is entitled to great weight; and the court will not disregard or overturn the same, except for cogent reasons, and said construction is shown to be clearly erroneous.

Rogers v. Goodwin, 2 Mass. 476; Midway Co. v. Eaton, 183 U. S. 609, 46 L. ed. 353, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 261; United States v. Finnell, 185 U. S. 236, 46 L. ed. 890, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 633.

A construction under such circumstances becomes established law.

Hahn v. United States, 107 U. S. 402, 27 L. ed. 527, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 494; United States v. Pugh, 99 U. S. 265, 25 L. ed. 322; Edwards v. Darby, 12 Wheat. 210, 6 L. ed. 604; United States v. Alexander, 12 Wall.

189 U. S.

177, 20 L. ed. 381; Peabody v. Stark, 16 Wall. 240, 21 L. ed. 311; Smythe v. Fiske, 23 Wall. 374, 23 L. ed. 47; United States v. Moore, 95 U. S. 760, 24 L. ed. 588.

The contemporaneous construction and immemorial usage of the pay and other departments, in connection with the construction and administration of the statute in question, has continued for nearly three quarters of a century without interruption or disturbance by the courts.

Price v. United States, 4 Ct. Cl. 164; Thornton v. United States, 27 Ct. Cl. 342.

Mr. George A. King argued the cause, and, with Mr. William B. King, filed a brief for appellee:

The right of an officer who left the service on his own application was regarded as stronger than that of an officer discharged at the instance of the government.

Sherburne v. United States, 16 Ct. Cl. 491.

A soldier discharged for general unworthiness is to receive his travel allowances.

Kingsley v. United States, 24 Ct. Cl. 219, 138 U. S. 87, 33 L. ed. 896, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 286.

Long-continued contemporaneous construction can control only where the language of the statute is so doubtful or obscure as to be open to construction, and that construction has been acquiesced in without question. Both of these elements are wanting in the present case.

Fairbank v. United States, 181 U. S. 283, 45 L. ed. 862, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 648.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is the case of an enlisted man who makes a claim similar to the above, under Rev. Stat. § 1290 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 916), as amended. He was discharged on his own application, and the order of discharge stated that he was not entitled to travel pay. The foregoing reasoning also governs this case.

Judgment reversed.

[475] *JACKSON W. GILES, Appt.,

v.

E. JEFF HARRIS, William A. Gunter, Jr., and Charles B. Teasley, Board of Registrars of Montgomery County, Alabama.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 475-504.)

Jurisdiction of circuit court—amount in dispute—objection not raised below—direct appeal from circuit court—extent of review not affected by certificate—equity—compelling registration under unlawful acts—inadequacy of relief—civil rights.

1. The absence of averments, in a bill in a cir-

NOTE.—As to jurisdiction of United States circuit court as dependent upon amount—see Auer v. Lombard, 19 C. C. A. 72, and note; Myers v. Murray, N. & Co. (C. C. S. D. Iowa) 11 L. R. A. 216, and note. And see notes to Roberts v. Lewis, 36 L. ed. U. S. 579; and Tennent-Stribling Shoe Co. v. Roper, 36 C. C. A. 455.

On direct review in the United States Su-
189 U. S.

cult court of the United States, showing that the jurisdictional amount was in dispute, is not available on an appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States, which raises the question of the jurisdiction of the lower court on another ground, where no objection to the omission of such allegations was made in that court.

2. The jurisdiction of the Supreme Court of the United States to consider the whole case on a direct appeal from a circuit court taken under the act of March 3, 1891, chap. 517, § 5 (26 Stat. at L. 827, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 549), in a case in which a state constitution is claimed to violate the Constitution of the United States, cannot be narrowed to a review of the question of the jurisdiction of the circuit court as a court of the United States, by a certificate of the circuit judge which raises that single question.

3. The scope of the equitable jurisdiction of the Federal courts was not extended beyond what was an appropriate subject-matter for equitable relief according to existing standards, by the provision of U. S. Rev. Stat. § 1979 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1262), that every person who, under color of state legislation, subjects, or causes to be subjected, any citizen of the United States to the deprivation of any rights, privileges, or immunities secured by the Federal Constitution and laws shall be liable to the party injured "in an action at law, suit in equity, or other appropriate proceeding for redress."

4. Equity will not compel a county board of registrars to enroll a negro on the voting lists as a duly qualified voter, under the registration provisions of Ala. Const. art. 8, where the main object of the bill is to have these registration provisions, upon which the right to register is founded, declared void as a fraud upon the Federal Constitution because of discrimination against negroes, since, if that is the character of these provisions, the court will not require officials to proceed to act under them.

5. The inadequacy of the relief which can be afforded by its decree will preclude a court of equity from compelling a county board of registrars to enroll a negro upon the voting lists, where the refusal to register him is alleged to be a part of a general scheme by the white population of the state, and the state itself, to disfranchise a large part, if not all, of the negroes within the state.

[No. 493.]

Submitted February 24, 1903. Decided April 27, 1903.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Middle District of Alabama to review a decree which dismissed, for want of jurisdiction, a bill in equity to compel the board of registrars of Montgomery county to enroll a negro upon the voting lists. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

promè Court of circuit and district court judgments—see note to Gwin v. United States, 46 L. ed. U. S. 741.

On equitable jurisdiction in protection of civil rights—see note to State ex rel. Cochran v. Winters (Kan.) 10 L. R. A. 616.

That equity will not aid an immoral or illegal act—see note to Riggs v. Palmer, 5 L. R. A. 344.

Mr. Wilford H. Smith submitted the cause for appellant:

Courts of equity have jurisdiction to grant relief against the threatened deprivation of rights guaranteed under the 14th and 15th amendments.

Holt v. Indiana Mfg. Co. 176 U. S. 68, 44 L. ed. 374, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 272.

This is not a suit brought to enforce a political right, but a civil right guaranteed by the Constitution of the United States. Nor is it sought in this action to control the exercise of any political functions of the state of Alabama, since no state has the right, nor have its officers the right, to deprive any person of the equal protection of the law or of his right to vote, on account of his race and color or previous condition of servitude.

United States v. Reese, 92 U. S. 214, 23 L. ed. 563; Green v. Mills, 30 L. R. A. 90, 16 C. C. A. 516, 25 U. S. App. 383, 69 Fed. 852; United States v. Cruikshank, 92 U. S. 542, 23 L. ed. 588.

Equity alone has the power to anticipate and prevent a threatened injury, where damages would be insufficient or the wrong irreparable.

Re Lennon, 166 U. S. 548, 41 L. ed. 1110, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 658; Vicksburg Waterworks Co. v. Vicksburg, 185 U. S. 65, 46 L. ed. 808, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585.

The question of the constitutionality of a state Constitution was the principal matter presented to the circuit court for decision, and the bill of complaint being dismissed on demurrer, an appeal from that ruling brings the whole case before this court for decision, notwithstanding the certification of the question of jurisdiction by the circuit court.

McLish v. Roff, 141 U. S. 661, 35 L. ed. 893, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 118; Horner v. United States, 143 U. S. 578, 36 L. ed. 269, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 522; Holder v. Aultman, M. & Co. 169 U. S. 81, 42 L. ed. 669, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 269; Scott v. Donald, 165 U. S. 58, 41 L. ed. 632, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 265; Penn Mut L. Ins. Co. v. Austin, 168 U. S. 685, 42 L. ed. 626, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 223; Whitten v. Tomlinson, 160 U. S. 231, 40 L. ed. 406, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 297.

Mr. W. A. Gunter submitted the cause for appellees:

The right to be admitted to registration as an elector, which is sought to be enforced in this case, is purely political, and therefore beyond the jurisdiction of a court of equity.

Green v. Mills, 30 L. R. A. 90, 16 C. C. A. 516, 25 U. S. App. 383, 69 Fed. 852; Fletcher v. Tuttle, 151 Ill. 41, 25 L. R. A. 143, 37 N. E. 683.

The appeal should be dismissed because it is impossible for the appellate court, if it should decide the case in favor of the plaintiff, to grant him any effectual relief.

Mills v. Green, 159 U. S. 651, 40 L. ed. 293, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 132.

behalf of more than five thousand negroes, citizens of the county of Montgomery, Alabama, similarly situated and circumstanced as himself," against the board of registrars of that county. The prayer of the bill is in substance that the defendants may be required to enroll upon the voting lists the name of the plaintiff and of all other qualified members of his race who applied for registration before August 1, 1902, and were refused, and that certain sections of the Constitution of Alabama, viz., §§ 180, 181, 183, 184, 185, 186, 187, and 188 of article 8, may be declared contrary to the 14th and 15th Amendments of the Constitution of the United States, and void.

The allegations of the bill may be summed up as follows: The plaintiff is subject to none of the disqualifications set forth in the Constitution of Alabama and is entitled to vote,—entitled, as the bill plainly means, under the Constitution as it is. He applied in March, 1902, for registration as a voter, and was refused arbitrarily on the ground of his color, together with large numbers of other duly qualified negroes, while all white men were registered. The same thing was done all over the state. Under § 187 of article 8 of the Alabama Constitution, persons registered before January 1, 1903, remain electors for life unless they become disqualified by certain crimes, etc., while after that date severer tests come into play which would exclude, perhaps, a large part of the black race. Therefore by the refusal the plaintiff and the other negroes excluded were deprived, not only of their vote at an election which has taken place since the bill was filed, but of the permanent advantage incident to registration before 1903. The white men generally are registered for good under the easy test, and the black men are likely to be kept out in the future as in the past. This refusal to register the blacks was part of a general scheme to disfranchise them, to which the defendants and the state itself, according to the bill, were parties. The defendants accepted their office for the purpose of carrying out the scheme. The *part taken by the state, that is, by the [483] white population which framed the Constitution, consisted in shaping that instrument so as to give opportunity and effect to the wholesale fraud which has been practised.

The bill sets forth the material sections of the state Constitution, the general plan of which, leaving out details, is as follows: By § 178 of article 8, to entitle a person to vote he must have resided in the state at least two years, in the county one year, and in the precinct or ward three months, immediately preceding the election, have paid his poll taxes, and have been duly registered as an elector. By § 182 idiots, insane persons, and those convicted of certain crimes are disqualified. Subject to the foregoing, by § 180, before 1903 the following male citizens of the state, who are citizens of the United States, were entitled to register, viz.: First. All who had served honorably in the enumerated wars of the United States, including those on either side in the "war

[482] *Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a bill in equity brought by a colored man, on behalf of himself "and on between the states." Second. All lawful descendants of persons who served honorably in the enumerated wars or in the war of the Revolution. Third. "All persons who are of good character and who understand the duties and obligations of citizenship under a republican form of government." As we have said, according to the allegations of the bill, this part of the Constitution, as practically administered and as intended to be administered, let in all whites and kept out a large part, if not all, of the blacks, and those who were let in retained their right to vote after 1903, when tests which might be too severe for many of the whites as well as the blacks went into effect. By § 181, after January 1, 1903, only the following persons are entitled to register: First. Those who can read and write any article of the Constitution of the United States in the English language, and who either are physically unable to work or have been regularly engaged in some lawful business for the greater part of the last twelve months, and those who are unable to read and write solely because physically disabled. Second. Owners or husbands of owners of 40 acres of land in the state, upon which they reside, and owners or husbands of owners of real or personal estate in the state assessed for taxation at $300 *or more, if the taxes have been paid, unless under contest. By § 183 only persons qualified as electors can take part in any method of party action. By § 184 persons not registered are disqualified from voting. By § 185 an elector whose vote is challenged shall be required to swear that the matter of the challenge is untrue before his vote shall be received. By § 186 the legislature is to provide for registration after January 1, 1903, the qualifications and oath of the registrars are prescribed, the duties of registrars before that date are laid down, and an appeal is given to the county court and supreme court if registration is denied. There are further executive details in § 187, together with the above-mentioned continuance of the effect of registration before January 1, 1903. By § 188, after the last mentioned date, applicants for registration may be examined under oath as to where they have lived for the last five years, the names by which they have been known, and the names of their employers. This, in brief, is the system which the plaintiff asks to have declared void.

Perhaps it should be added to the foregoing statement that the bill was filed in September, 1902, and alleged the plaintiff's desire to vote at an election coming off in November. This election has gone by, so that it is impossible to give specific relief with regard to that. But we are not prepared to dismiss the bill or the appeal on that ground, because to be enabled to cast a vote in that election is not, as in Mills v. Green, 159 U. S. 651, 657, 40 L. ed. 293, 295, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 132, the whole object of the bill. It is not even the principal object of the relief sought by the plaintiff. The principal object of that is to obtain the permanent advantages of registration as of a date before 1903.

The certificate of the circuit judge raises the single question of the jurisdiction of the court. The plaintiff contends that this jurisdiction is given expressly by Rev. Stat. § 629, cl. 16 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 506), coupled with Rev. Stat. § 1979 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1262), which provides that every person who, under color of a state "statute, ordinance, regulation, custom, or usage," "subjects, or causes to be subjected, any citizen of the United States or other person within the jurisdiction thereof to the deprivation of any rights, privileges, *or immunities secured by the [485] Constitution and laws, shall be liable to the party injured in an action at law, suit in equity, or other proper proceeding for redress."

We assume, as was assumed in Holt v. Indiana Mfg. Co. 176 U. S. 68, 72, 44 L. ed. 374, 376, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 272, that § 1979 has not been repealed, and that jurisdiction to enforce its provisions has not been taken away by any later act. But it is suggested that the circuit court was right in its ruling that it had no jurisdiction as a court of the United States, because the bill did not aver threatened damage to an amount exceeding $2,000. It is true that by the act of August 13, 1888, chap. 866, § 1 (25 Stat. at L. 433, 434), the circuit courts are given cognizance of suits of a civil nature, at common law or in equity, arising under the Constitution or laws of the United States, in which the matter in dispute exceeds the sum or value of $2,000. We have recognized, too, that the deprivation of a man's political and social rights properly may be alleged to involve damage to that amount, capable of estimation in money. Wiley v. Sinkler, 179 U. S. 58, 45 L. ed. 84, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 17; Swafford v. Templeton, 185 U. S. 487, 46 L. ed. 1005, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 783. But, assuming that the allegation should have been made in a case like this, the objection to its omission was not raised in the circuit court, and, as it could have been remedied by amendment, we think it unavailing. The certificate was made alio intuitu. There is no pecuniary limit on appeals to this court under § 5 of the act of 1891, chap. 517; 26 Stat. at L. 826, 828 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 549); The Paquete Habana, 175 U. S. 677, 683, 44 L. ed. 320, 322, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 290; and we do not feel called upon to send the case back to the circuit court in order that it might permit the amendment. In Mills v. Green, 159 U. S. 651, 40 L. ed. 293, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 132, 30 L. R. A. 90, 16 C. C. A. 516, 25 U. S. App. 383, 69 Fed. 852, no notice was taken of the absence of an allegation of value in a case like this.

We assume further, for the purposes of decision, that § 1979 extends to a deprivation of rights under color of a state constitution, although it might be argued with some force that the enumeration of "statute, ordinance, regulation, custom, or usage" purposely is confined to inferior sources of law. On these assumptions we are not prepared to say that an action at law could not be maintained on the facts alleged in the bill. Therefore, we are not prepared to say that the decree should be affirmed *on the ground that the subject-matter is wholly beyond the jurisdiction of the circuit court. Smith v. McKay, 161 U. S. 355, 358, 359, 40 L. ed. 731, 732, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 490.

Although the certificate relates only to the jurisdiction of that court as a court of the United States, yet, as the ground of the bill is that the Constitution of Alabama is in contravention of the Constitution of the United States, the appeal opens the whole case under the act of 1891, chap. 517, § 5 (26 Stat. at L. 827, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 549). The plaintiff had the right to appeal directly to this court. The certificate was unnecessary to found the jurisdiction of this court, and could not narrow it. As the case properly is here, we proceed to consider the substance of the complaint.

It seems to us impossible to grant the equitable relief which is asked. It will be observed, in the first place, that the language of § 1979 does not extend the sphere of equitable jurisdiction in respect of what shall be held an appropriate subject-matter for that kind of relief. The words are, "shall be liable to the party injured in an action at law, suit in equity, or other proper proceeding for redress." They allow a suit in equity only when that is the proper proceeding for redress, and they refer to existing standards to determine what is a proper proceeding. The traditional limits of proceedings in equity have not embraced a remedy for political wrongs. Green v. Mills, 30 L. R. A. 90, 16 C. C. A. 516, 25 U. S. App. 383, 69 Fed. 852. But we cannot forget that we are dealing with a new and extraordinary situation, and we are unwilling to stop short of the final considerations which seem to us to dispose of the case.

The difficulties which we cannot overcome are two, and the first is this: The plaintiff alleges that the whole registration scheme of the Alabama Constitution is a fraud upon the Constitution of the United States, and asks us to declare it void. But, of course, he could not maintain a bill for a mere declaration in the air. He does not try to do so, but asks to be registered as a party qualified under the void instrument. If, then, we accept the conclusion which it is the chief purpose of the bill to maintain, how can we make the court a party to the unlawful scheme by accepting it and adding another voter to its fraudulent lists? If a white man came here on the same general [487] *allegations, admitting his sympathy with the plan, but alleging some special prejudice that had kept him off the list, we hardly should think it necessary to meet him with a reasoned answer. But the relief cannot be varied because we think that in the future the particular plaintiff is likely to try to overthrow the scheme. If we accept the plaintiff's allegations for the purposes of his case, he cannot complain. We must accept or reject them. It is impossible simply to shut our eyes, put the plaintiff on the lists, be they honest or fraudulent, and leave the determination of the fundamental question for the future. If we have an opinion that the bill is right on its face, or if we are undecided, we are not at liberty to assume it to be wrong for the purposes of decision. It seems to us that unless we are prepared to say that it is wrong, that all its principal allegations are immaterial, and that the registration plan of the Alabama Constitution is valid, we cannot order the plaintiff's name to be registered. It is not an answer to say that if all the blacks who are qualified according to the letter of the instrument were registered, the fraud would be cured. In the first place, there is no probability that any way now is open by which more than a few could be registered; but, if all could be, the difficulty would not be overcome. If the sections of the Constitution concerning registration were illegal in their inception, it would be a new doctrine in constitutional law that the original invalidity could be cured by an administration which defeated their intent. We express no opinion as to the alleged fact of their unconstitutionality beyond saying that we are not willing to assume that they are valid, in the face of the allegations and main object of the bill, for the purpose of granting the relief which it was necessary to pray in order that that object should be secured.

The other difficulty is of a different sort, and strikingly reinforces the argument that equity cannot undertake now, any more than it has in the past, to enforce political rights, and also the suggestion that state constitutions were not left unmentioned in § 1979 by accident. In determining whether a court of equity can take jurisdiction, one of the first questions is what it can do to enforce any order that it may make. This is alleged *to be the conspiracy of a state, al-[488] though the state is not and could not be made a party to the bill. Hans v. Louisiana, 134 U. S. 1, 33 L. ed. 842, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 504. The circuit court has no constitutional power to control its action by any direct means. And if we leave the state out of consideration, the court has as little practical power to deal with the people of the state in a body. The bill imports that the great mass of the white population intends to keep the blacks from voting. To meet such an intent something more than ordering the plaintiff's name to be inscribed upon the lists of 1902 will be needed. If the conspiracy and the intent exist, a name on a piece of paper will not defeat them. Unless we are prepared to supervise the voting in that state by officers of the court, it seems to us that all that the plaintiff could get from equity would be an empty form. Apart from damages to the individual, relief from a great political wrong, if done, as alleged, by the people of a state and the state itself, must be given by them or by the legislative and political department of the government of the United States.

Decree affirmed.

Mr. Justice Brewer dissenting:

I am unable to concur in either the opinion or judgment in this case. The single question is whether the circuit court of the United States had jurisdiction. Accepting the statement of facts in the opinion of the majority as sufficiently full, it appears that the plaintiff was entitled to a place on the permanent registry and was denied it by the defendants, the board of registrars in the county in which he lived. No one was allowed to vote who was not registered. He desired to vote at the coming election for representative in Congress. He was deprived of that right by the action of the defendants. Has the circuit court jurisdiction to redress such wrong? It is conceded that, because of the permanence of the registry, the appeal cannot be dismissed under Mills v. Green, 159 U. S. 651, 40 L. ed. 293, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 132, for, if registered on the permanent registry, the plaintiff can vote at all future elections.

[489] Whether the plaintiff's remedy was at law or in equity cannot *be considered on this appeal. It was so decided in Smith v. McKay, 161 U. S. 355, 40 L. ed. 731, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 490, the authority of which is not in terms denied in the opinion of the majority, although, by the decision, it is practically disregarded. The certificate of the trial judge stated that "the only question considered and decided by the court in dismissing the bill of complaint was whether, upon the bill and demurrer thereto, a case is presented of which this court has jurisdiction under the Constitution or laws of the United States."

The act of Congress authorizing appeals directly from the circuit courts to this court (26 Stat. at L. 827, chap. 517, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 549) provides that:

"In any case in which the jurisdiction of the court is in issue; in such cases the question of jurisdiction alone shall be certified to the Supreme Court from the court below for decision."

In Smith v. McKay we said (p. 358, L. ed. p. 732, Sup. Ct. Rep. 492):

"When the requisite citizenship of the parties appears, and the subject-matter is such that the circuit court is competent to deal with it, the jurisdiction of that court attaches, and whether the court should sustain the complainant's prayer for equitable relief, or should dismiss the bill with leave to bring an action at law, either would be a valid exercise of jurisdiction. If any error were committed in the exercise of such jurisdiction, it could only be remedied by an appeal to the circuit court of appeals."

See also Tucker v. McKay, 164 U. S. 701, 41 L. ed. 1180, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1001; Murphy v. Colorado Paving Co. 166 U. S. 719, 41 L. ed. 1188, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 997; Shepard v. Adams, 168 U. S. 618, 622, 42 L. ed. 602, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 214; Building & Loan Assn. v. Price, 169 U. S. 45, 42 L. ed. 655, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 251, in which we said:

"The complainant appealed to this court, which appeal was allowed and granted solely upon the question of the jurisdiction of the circuit court, and that question alone has been certified. Whether the bill shows facts sufficient to invoke the consideration of a court of equity is not such a question of jurisdiction as is referred to in the judiciary act of March 3, 1891, chap. 517, and we have therefore no concern with that question." Blythe Co. v. Blythe, 172 U. S. 644, 43 L. ed. 1183, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 873; Blythe v. Hinckley, 173 U. S. 501, 506, 43 L. ed. 783, 185, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 497, 499, from which I quote: "Appeals or writs of error may be taken directly from the circuit courts to this court in *cases in which the jurisdiction of [490] those courts is in issue, that is, their jurisdiction as Federal courts, the question alone of jurisdiction being certified to this court. The circuit court held that the remedy was at law, and not in equity. That conclusion was not a decision that the circuit court had no jurisdiction as a court of the United States."
189 U. S.

A still more significant case is Huntington v. Laidley, 176 U. S. 668, 44 L. ed. 630, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 526. In that case proceedings had been had in the courts of the state resulting in a final determination of the controversy. Subsequently this action was commenced in the Federal court, and the final decision of the state courts was pleaded as res judicata. The circuit court dismissed the suit for want of jurisdiction, and certified the question to this court. I thought it was sacrificing substance to form to reverse the judgment of dismissal when it was apparent that the controversy had been settled by the decisions in the state court, and, therefore, could not rightfully be relitigated in the Federal court. But this court held that the only question to be considered was that of jurisdiction, saying (p. 679, L. ed. p. 635, Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 530):

"Under the circumstances of this case, the question whether the proceedings in any or all of the suits, at law or in equity, in the state court, afforded a defense—either by way of res judicata, or because of any control acquired by the state court over the subject-matter—to this bill in the circuit court of the United States, was not a question affecting the jurisdiction of that court, but was a question affecting the merits of the cause, and, as such, to be tried and determined by that court in the exercise of its jurisdiction. The circuit court of the United States cannot, by treating a question of merits as a question of jurisdiction, enable this court, upon a direct appeal on the question of jurisdiction only, to decide the question of merits, except in so far as it bears upon the question whether the court below had or had not jurisdiction of the case. In any aspect of the case, the decree of the circuit court of the United States, dismissing the suit for want of jurisdiction, must be reversed, and the cause remanded to that court for further proceedings therein."

Although the statute and these decisions thus expressly limit the range of inquiry on a certificate of jurisdiction to the question *of jurisdiction, it is held that because there [491] is a constitutional question shown in the pleadings, the certificate may be ignored and the entire case presented to this court for consideration. In other words, although the plaintiff, by his method of appeal, following the provisions of the statute, limited the inquiry to the matter of jurisdiction, this court will ignore such limit and treat the case as coming here on a general appeal, which he did not take. This conclusion seems to me to practically destroy the statute and overrule the prior decisions, for the jurisdiction of Federal courts primarily rests on the Constitution of the United States, and the extent of their jurisdiction is determined by its provisions. Hence, every case coming up on a certificate of jurisdiction may be held to present a constitutional question, and be open for full inquiry in respect to all matters involved.

Neither can I assent to the proposition that the case presented by the plaintiff's bill is not strictly a legal one and entitling a party to a judicial hearing and decision. He alleges that he is a citizen of Alabama, entitled to vote; that he desired to vote at an election for representative in Congress; that without registration he could not vote, and that registration was wrongfully denied him by the defendants. That many others were similarly treated does not destroy his rights or deprive him of relief in the courts. That such relief will be given has been again and again affirmed in both national and state courts.

That the United States circuit court has jurisdiction of an action like this seems to me to result inevitably from prior decisions of this court. Without stopping to notice in detail the cases of Ex parte Siebold, 100 U. S. 371, 25 L. ed. 717; Ex parte Yarbrough, 110 U. S. 651, 28 L. ed. 274, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 152, and Re Coy, 127 U. S. 731, 32 L. ed. 274, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1263, in which the general jurisdiction of Federal courts over matters involved in the election of national officers is affirmed, I refer to two recent cases which bear directly upon the present question: Wiley v. Sinkler, 179 U. S. 58, 45 L. ed. 81, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 17, was an action brought in the circuit court of the United States by the plaintiff to recover damages of an election board for wilfully rejecting his vote for a member of the House of Representatives. We held that the court had jurisdiction, and said (p. 64, L. ed. p. 88, Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 20):

[492] "This action is brought against election officers to recover damages for their rejection of the plaintiff's vote for a member of the House of Representatives of the United States. The complaint, by alleging that the plaintiff was at the time, under the Constitution and laws of the state of South Carolina and the Constitution and laws of the United States, a duly qualified elector of the state, shows that the action is brought under the Constitution and laws of the United States. The damages are laid at the sum of $2,500. What amount of damages the plaintiff shall recover in such an action is peculiarly appropriate for the determination of a jury, and no opinion of the court upon that subject can justify it in holding that the amount in controversy was insufficient to support the jurisdiction of the circuit court. Barry v. Edmunds, 116 U. S. 550, 29 L. ed. 729, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 501; Scott v. Donald, 165 U. S. 58, 89, 41 L. ed. 632, 638, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 265; Vance v. W. A. Vandercook Co. 170 U. S. 468, 472, 42 L. ed. 1111, 1113, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 645; North American Transp. & Trading Co. v. Morrison, 178 U. S. 262, 267, 44 L. ed. 1061, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 869. The circuit court, therefore, clearly had jurisdiction of this action, and we are brought to the consideration of the other objections presented by the demurrer to the complaint."

Again, in Swafford v. Templeton, 185 U. S. 487, 46 L. ed. 1005, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 783, which, like the former case, was one brought in the circuit court of the United States to recover damages for the alleged wrongful refusal by the defendants, as election officers, to permit the plaintiff to vote at a national election for a member of the House of Representatives, it was held that the court had jurisdiction. Here, too, we said, after referring to Wiley v. Sinkler (p. 492, L. ed. p. 1007, Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 785):

"It is manifest from the context of the opinion in the case just referred to that the conclusion that the cause was one arising under the Constitution of the United States was predicated on the conception that the action sought the vindication or protection of the right to vote for a member of Congress,—a right, as declared in Ex parte Yarbrough, 110 U. S. 655, 664, 28 L. ed. 275, 278, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 152, 'fundamentally based upon the Constitution of the United States, which created the office of member of Congress, and declared that it should be elective, and pointed out the means of ascertaining who should be electors.' That is to say, the ruling was that the case was equally one arising under the Constitution or laws of the United States, whether the illegal act complained of arose from a charged viola- [493] tion of some specific provision of the Constitution or laws of the United States, or from the violation of a state law which affected the exercise of the right to vote for a member of Congress, since the Constitution of the United States had adopted, as the qualifications of electors for members of Congress, those prescribed by the state for electors of the most numerous branch of the legislature of the state. It results from what has just been said that the court erred in dismissing the action for want of jurisdiction, since the right which it was claimed had been unlawfully invaded was one in the very nature of things arising under the Constitution and laws of the United States, and that this inhered in the very substance of the claim. It is obvious from an inspection of the certificate that the court, in dismissing for want of jurisdiction, was controlled by what it deemed to be the want of merit in the averments which were made in the complaint as to the violation of the Federal right. But, as the very nature of the con-troverſy was Federal, and, therefore, jurisdiction exiſted, whiſt the opinion of the court as to the want of merit in the cauſe of action might have furniſhed ground for diſmiſſing for that reaſon, it afforded no ſufficient ground for deciding that the action was not one ariſing under the Conſtitution and laws of the United States."

It ſeems to me nothing need be added to theſe deciſions, and, unleſs they are to be conſidered as overruled, they are deciſive of this caſe.

Mr. Juſtice Brown alſo diſſents.

Mr. Juſtice Harlan, diſſenting:

By the final judgment in the circuit court the bill in this caſe was diſmiſſed for want of jurisdiction to entertain it and for want of equity; and from that judgment the plaintiffs prayed, and were allowed, an appeal.

Subſequentlly an order was made by the circuit court, certifying that the only queſtion conſidered and decided was whether, upon the bill and demurrer, a caſe was preſented of *which it had jurisdiction under the Conſtitution and laws of the United States.

Although the caſe involves queſtions of conſiderable importance, it was ſubmitted here without oral argument.

Could the circuit court take cognizance of this cauſe conſiſtently with the act of Congreſs regulating its jurisdiction? This is naturally the fundamental, if not the only, queſtion in the caſe. An answer to the queſtion requires a reference to ſeveral acts of Congreſs, including the judiciary act of Auguſt 13th, 1888, correcting that of March 3d, 1887 [24 Stat. at L. 552, chap. 373, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 514], 25 Stat. at L. 433, chap. 866.

Section 629 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 503) enumerates in ſubdiviſions the caſes of which the circuit courts of the United States may take original cognizance.

In ſubd. 1 of that ſection, the circuit courts are given original cognizance "of all ſuits of a civil nature at common law or in equity, where the matter in diſpute, excluſive of coſts, exceeds the ſum or value of $500, and an alien is a party, or the ſuit is brought and a citizen of another ſtate;" and in ſubd. 2, "of all ſuits in equity, where the matter in diſpute excluſive of coſts, exceeds the ſum or value of five hundred dollars, and the United States are petitioners." Rev. Stat. § 629, ſubdiviſ. 1 and 2 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 503).

By the 16th ſubdiviſion of that ſection it is declared that the circuit courts ſhall have original cognizance "of all ſuits authorized by law to be brought by any perſon to redreſs the deprivation, under color of any law, ſtatute, ordinance, regulation, cuſtom, or uſage of any ſtate, of any right, privilege, or immunity ſecured by the Conſtitution of the United States or of any right ſecured by any law providing for equal rights of citizens of the United States, or of all perſons within the jurisdiction of the United States." The matter in diſpute in ſuch ſuits was not expreſſly required by the Revised Statutes to have any money value.

By § 1979 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1262), title 24, Civil Rights, it is provided that "every perſon who, under color of any ſtatute, ordinance, regulation, cuſtom, or uſage of any ſtate or territory, ſubjects, or cauſes to be ſubjected, any citizen *of the United States or other [495] perſon within the jurisdiction thereof to the deprivation of any rights, privileges, or immunities ſecured by the Conſtitution and laws, ſhall be liable to the party injured in an action at law, ſuit in equity, or other proper proceeding for redreſs." It has been ſaid that this ſection as well as ſubd. 16 of § 629 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 506) was based upon the 1ſt ſection of the act of April 20th, 1871, chap. 22 (17 Stat. at L. 13), entitled "An Act to Enforce the Proviſions of the Fourteenth Amendment to the Conſtitution of the United States, and for Other Purpoſes." Holt v. Indiana Mfg. Co. 176 U. S. 68, 70, 44 L. ed. 374, 375, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 272.

Next came the act of March 3d, 1875, which provided that "the circuit courts of the United States ſhall have original cognizance, concurrent with the courts of the ſeveral ſtates, of all ſuits of a civil nature at common law or in equity, where the matter in diſpute exceeds, excluſive of coſts, the ſum or value of five hundred dollars, and ariſing under the Conſtitution or laws of the United States, or treaties made, or which ſhall be made, under their authority, or in which the United States are plaintiffs or petitioners, or in which there ſhall be a controverſy between citizens of different ſtates or a controverſy between citizens of the ſame ſtate claiming lands under grants of different ſtates, or a controverſy between citizens of a ſtate and foreign ſtates, citizens, or ſubjects; and ſhall have excluſive cognizance of all crimes and offenses cognizable under the authority of the United States, except as otherwiſe provided by law, and concurrent jurisdiction with the diſtrict courts of the crimes and offenses cognizable therein." 18 Stat. at L. 470, chap. 137 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 508). That act expreſſly repealed previous ſtatutes in conflict with its provisions.

Then came the act of 1888, correcting that of 1887, and which provides "That the circuit courts of the United States ſhall have original cognizance concurrent with the courts of the ſeveral ſtates, of all ſuits of a civil nature, at common law or in equity, where the matter in diſpute exceeds, excluſive of interest and coſts, the ſum or value of two thouſand dollars, and ariſing under the Conſtitution or laws of the United States, or treaties made, or which ſhall be made, under their authority, *or in which [496] controverſy the United States are plaintiffs or petitioners, or in which there ſhall be a controverſy between citizens of different ſtates, in which the matter in diſpute exceeds, excluſive of interest and coſts, the ſum or value aforesaid, or a controversy between citizens of the same state claiming lands under grants of different states, or a controversy between citizens of a state and foreign states, citizens, or subjects, in which the matter in dispute exceeds, exclusive of interest and costs, the sum or value aforesaid." By that act the conflicting provisions of previous acts were repealed, except in certain particulars, among which were the provisions relating to "any jurisdiction or right mentioned . . . in title 24 of the Revised Statutes," Civil Rights, under which title § 1979 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1262) is found.

It is clear that, under the act of 1888, a circuit court could not take original cognizance of a suit simply because it was one arising under the Constitution or laws of the United States. The value of the matter in dispute in such a case must exceed $2,000, exclusive of interest and costs.

The bill makes no allegation whatever as to the value of the matter in dispute, although this court, speaking by the Chief Justice, in Holt v. Indiana Mfg. Co. 176 U. S. 68, 70, 44 L. ed. 374, 375, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 272, after referring to the 1st section of the judiciary act of 1888, said: "This" [the question of the value in dispute in cases arising under the Constitution or laws of the United States] "was carefully considered in United States v. Sayward, 160 U. S. 493, 40 L. ed. 508, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 371, and it was held that the sum or value named was jurisdictional, and that the circuit court could not, under the statute, take original cognizance of a case arising under the Constitution or laws of the United States unless the sum or value of the matter in dispute, exclusive of costs and interest, exceeded $2,000. That decision was reaffirmed in Fishback v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 161 U. S. 96, 99, 40 L. ed. 630, 631, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 506." It was added—contrary to the intimation given in the opinion in the present case—that "the conclusion reached is not affected by the fact that the operation of the act of March 3d, 1891, was to do away with any pecuniary limitation on appeals directly from the circuit courts to this court. The [497] Paquete Habana, 175 U. S. 677, 44 L. ed. 320, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 290." Of course, it was not meant by that language that the jurisdiction of the circuit courts, so far as the value of the matter in dispute is concerned, was changed as to the cases embraced by the 5th section of the act of 1891. The act of 1891 left the original jurisdiction of the circuit courts as established by the act of 1888.

1. It cannot be disputed that the present suit is one arising under the Constitution and laws of the United States, and it is clear that the value of the matter in dispute is made by the statute an essential element in the jurisdiction of the circuit court in such a case. But it has been suggested that this suit is also embraced by subd. 16 of § 629 and § 1979 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 506 and 1262)—which provisions this court assumed, in Holt v. Indiana Mfg. Co. and now assumes, was not repealed by any subsequent statute, and therefore that the value of the matter in dispute is of no consequence. But this suggestion overlooks the declaration of the court in that case to the effect that, although the above provisions must be assumed to be still (1899) in force, they refer "to civil rights only." 176 U. S. 72, 44 L. ed. 377, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 272. In this view, subd. 16 of § 629 and § 1979 of the Revised Statutes have no bearing upon the present case, if the rights for the protection of which the present suit was brought are political rights, and not civil rights within the meaning of the statutes relating to civil rights. Consequently, the saving clause in the act of 1888 in respect of any jurisdiction or right mentioned in title 24 of the Revised Statutes, Civil Rights, becomes immaterial in the present case. Whether this be so or not, the court refrains from declaring that the plaintiff could proceed under subd. 16 of § 629 or § 1979 of the Revised Statutes, without regard to the value of the matter in dispute. If this court thinks that this suit could be maintained under subd. 16 of § 629 or under § 1979, or under both, without regard to the value of the matter in dispute, I submit that it should have been so adjudged.

2. Referring to the suggestion that the act of 1888 gives the circuit court jurisdiction in all suits at law or equity, in which the matter in dispute is the sum or value of $2,000 and arising under the Constitution or laws of the United States, and conceding *that this court in Wiley v. Sinkler, [498] 179 U. S. 58, 45 L. ed. 84, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 17, and Swafford v. Templeton, 185 U. S. 487, 46 L. ed. 1005, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 783, recognized that the deprivation of a man's political rights (those cases had reference to the elective franchise) may properly be alleged to have the required value in money, the court says: "Assuming that the allegation [of value] should have been made in a case like this, the objection to its omission was not raised in the circuit court, and, as it could have been remedied by amendment, we think it unavailing. The certificate was made alio intuitu. There is no pecuniary limit on appeals to this court under § 5 of the act of 1891, chap. 517 (26 Stat. at L. 826, 828, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 549); (The Paquete Habana, 175 U. S. 677, 683, 44 L. ed. 320, 322, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 290), and we do not feel called upon to send the case back to the circuit court in order that it might permit the amendment."

It seems to me that this question as to the value of the matter in dispute was sufficiently raised in the circuit court; for the demurrer to the bill was, in part, on the ground that the facts stated did not make a case "within the jurisdiction of the court." But, passing that view, I come to a more serious matter. In cases of which a circuit court may take original cognizance, the value of the matter in dispute—which is mentioned in the statute in advance of any reference to the nature of the subject of the action—is as essential to jurisdiction as is the nature of the subject of such dispute. And yet the court says that an objection that the record from the circuit court does not show an allegation as to value is unavailing here, even if such allegation ought to have been made. That is a new, and I take leave to say, a startling, doctrine. Must not this court, upon its own motion, decline to pass upon—indeed, has this court, strictly speaking, jurisdiction to consider and determine—the merits of a case coming from the circuit court, unless it affirmatively appears from the record that the case is one of which that court could take cognizance? Is not a suit presumably without the jurisdiction of a circuit court, unless the record shows it to be one of which that court may take cognizance? Is it of any consequence that the parties did not raise the question of jurisdiction in the circuit court? If the record [499] shows nothing more than that the case arises under the Constitution and laws of the United States, and if it does not affirmatively appear, in some appropriate way, that the value of the matter in dispute is up to the required amount, has this court jurisdiction to consider and determine the merits of the case?

Let us look at some of the adjudged cases upon the general subject of the jurisdiction of the Federal courts, and see what the duty of this court is when its own jurisdiction does not affirmatively appear from the record, or when it does not appear that the circuit court had jurisdiction.

In Sizer v. Many, 16 How. 103, 14 L. ed. 863, which was an action for the infringement of letters patent: "The sum taxed being less than $2,000, no writ of error will lie under the act of 1789. This act gives no jurisdiction to this court over the judgment of a circuit court, when the judgment is for less than that sum. . . . The writ of error must therefore be dismissed for want of jurisdiction." In Brown v. Shannon, 20 How. 55, 58, 15 L. ed. 826, 828, which was an action to enforce the specific execution of a contract in relation to the use of a patent right: "The sum mentioned in the bill . . . being less than $2,000, whatever errors may be apparent in the proceedings and decree of the court below, we have yet no power under the act of Congress to revise and correct them, and the appeal must be dismissed." In Richmond v. Milwaukee, 21 How. 80, 82, 16 L. ed. 72, which was an action to prohibit the conveyance of certain lots: "There is nothing in the allegations of the parties or in the evidence to show that the value of the lots in question exceeded $2,000, nor anything from which it can be inferred. The appeal must therefore be dismissed for want of jurisdiction in this court." In Pratt v. Fitzhugh, 1 Black. 271, 273, 17 L. ed. 206, 207, which was a cause in admiralty: "Without the fact of value being shown on the record, or by evidence alunde, the court has no jurisdiction." In Walker v. United States, 4 Wall. 163, 164, 18 L. ed. 319, which was an action on a judgment for money: "This court has no appellate jurisdiction, except such as is defined by Congress. The act of Congress limits this jurisdiction to cases where the matter in dispute exceeds $2,000. We can no more take jurisdiction where the matter does not exceed [that sum] than we can where it is less *than that sum. The amount in contro-[500] versy in the case before us, ascertained in conformity with the settled principles of the court, does not exceed $2,000. We have, therefore, no jurisdiction of the writ of error, and it must be dismissed." In The Grace Girdler, 6 Wall. 441, sub nom. Lockwood v. The Grace Girdler, 18 L. ed. 790, which was an appeal in admiralty: "While it is true that the greater part of the loss fell upon Lockwood, as owner of the Ariel and her belongings, there is nothing in the record which shows that the damage sustained exceeded $2,000. And this is essential to jurisdiction." In Ayers v. Watson, 113 U. S. 595, 598, 28 L. ed. 1093, 1094, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 641, 642, which was an action of trespass to try title to land: "Diverse state citizenship of the parties, or some other jurisdictional fact prescribed by the second section, is absolutely essential, and cannot be waived, and the want of it will be error at any stage of the cause, even though assigned by the party at whose instance it was committed."

These cases relate to the jurisdiction of this court under statutes prescribing a certain amount as essential, upon writ of error or appeal, for the review of judgments rendered in the circuit court.

Looking now at cases in which the want of jurisdiction in the circuit court has been held to preclude this court from going into the merits of the case adjudged, we find in King Bridge Co. v. Otoe County, 120 U. S. 226, 30 L. ed. 624, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 552, which was an action upon county warrants, this language: "It does not appear that the circuit court had jurisdiction of the action. Unless the contrary appears affirmatively from the record, the presumption, upon writ of error or appeal, is that the court below was without jurisdiction." In Metcalf v. Watertown, 128 U. S. 587, 32 L. ed. 543, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 173, which was an action upon a judgment, and in which case the question was whether an action upon a certain judgment was barred by limitation, this court said: "We are not, however, at liberty to express any opinion upon the question of limitation, if the court whose judgment has been brought here for review does not appear, from the record, to have had jurisdiction of the case. And whether that court had or had not jurisdiction is a question which we must examine and determine, even if the parties forbear to make it, or consent that the case be *considered upon its merits." In Chapman v. Barney, 129 U. S. 677, 681, 32 L. ed. 800, 801, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 426, 427, which was an action for trover: "We are confronted with the question of jurisdiction, which although not raised by either party in the court below or in this court, is presented by the record, and, under repeated decisions of this court, must be considered." In Parker v. Ormsby, 141 U. S. 83, 35 L. ed. 655, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 912; "Did the court below have jurisdiction of this case? If jurisdiction did not affirmatively appear upon the record, it was error to have rendered a decree, whether the question of jurisdiction was raised or not in the court below. In the exercise of its power, this court, of its own motion, must deny the jurisdiction of the courts of the United States in all cases coming before it, upon writ of error or appeal, where such jurisdiction does not affirmatively appear in the record on which it is called to act." In Mattingly v. Northwestern Virginia R. Co. 158 U. S. 57, 39 L. ed. 895, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 727, which was an action to set aside certain conveyances and to foreclose a mortgage: "Although it does not appear that the question of jurisdiction was raised in the court below by any plea or motion, yet, as the record failed to affirmatively show jurisdiction, this court must take notice of the defect."

According to the adjudged cases, the first inquiry which this court should make as to any case before it from an inferior Federal court is as to its own jurisdiction. If jurisdiction does not appear from the record, then the writ of error or appeal should be dismissed. If it is found to have jurisdiction for any purpose, then its next duty is to inquire as to the jurisdiction of the court below. When the latter court does not appear upon the record to have jurisdiction, then the duty of this court is to reverse the judgment and remand the case to be dismissed for want of jurisdiction. I say "appear upon the record to have jurisdiction," because, as we have seen, the presumption is that a cause is without the jurisdiction of a Federal court, unless the contrary affirmatively appears. Turner v. Bank of North America, 4 Dall. 8, 1 L. ed. 718; Brown v. Keene, 8 Pet. 115, 8 L. ed. 886; Ex parte Smith, 94 U. S. 455, 24 L. ed. 165; Robertson v. Cease, 97 U. S. 646, 24 L. ed. 1057. In Brown v. Keene, Chief Justice Marshall said: "The decisions of this court require that the averment of jurisdiction shall be positive; that the declaration shall state expressly the fact on which jurisdiction *depends. It is not sufficient that jurisdiction may be inferred argumentatively from its averments."

To these cases I will add that of Mansfield, C. & L. M. R. Co. v. Swan, 111 U. S. 379, 382, 28 L. ed. 462, 463, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 510, 511, in which this court said: "It is true that the plaintiffs below, against whose objection the error was committed, do not complain of being prejudiced by it; and it seems to be an anomaly and a hardship that the party at whose instance it was committed should be permitted to derive an advantage from it; but the rule springing from the nature and limits of the judicial power of the United States is inflexible and without exception, which requires this court, of its own motion, to deny its own jurisdiction, and, in the exercise of its appellate power, that of all other courts of the United States, in all cases where such jurisdiction does not affirmatively appear in the record on which, in the exercise of that power, it is called to act. On every writ of error or appeal, the first and fundamental question is that of jurisdiction, first of this court, and then of the court from which the record comes. This question the court is bound to ask and answer for itself, even when not otherwise suggested, and without respect to the relation of the parties to it."

In the above case of Holt v. Indiana Mfg. Co. which involved a question of the jurisdiction of the circuit court, this court said: "In this, as in all cases, if it appears that the circuit court had no jurisdiction, it is the duty of this court to so declare, and enter judgment accordingly."

These principles have been expressly affirmed by this court in many other cases. And yet, according to the opinion in this case, if objection is not made in the circuit court to its jurisdiction, it will be unavailing to raise that question in this court, and we may proceed to determine the merits of the case. Such a doctrine, I repeat, is a new departure. The court, in effect, says, that although it may know that the record fails to show a case within the original cognizance of the circuit court, it may close its eyes to that fact, and review the case on its merits. In view of the adjudged cases, I cannot agree that the failure of parties to raise a question of jurisdiction will relieve this court of its duty to raise it upon its own motion. The contrary *view cannot be [503] justified. This court may not assume jurisdiction to do that which it has no authority to do.

It will be appropriate to observe that the circuit court in effect propounds the question whether it had jurisdiction of this case upon the record before it. That question necessarily involves the inquiry whether subd. 16 of § 629 and § 1979 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 506 and 1262) were repealed by later acts. But that point is left undecided, the court only assuming that those statutory provisions are still in force, but does not say whether the suit could be maintained under those sections or under either of them without allegation or proof as to the value of the matter in dispute. Nor does the court distinctly adjudge whether the case is embraced by the act of 1887-88; but simply assuming that the allegation of value should have been made in the bill, it proceeds to consider the case upon its merits. The question of the jurisdiction of the circuit court under the acts of Congress, the one certified, is thus left in the air, and the case is examined and disposed of upon its merits just as if jurisdiction of the circuit court appeared upon the record. There is no claim that the essential fact of value appears anywhere in the record, either in the bill or otherwise. Consequently, as already said, this court is without power to consider the merits.

The court says that the plaintiff had the right to appeal directly to this court under § 5 of the act of 1891, and that the certificate was unnecessary to found the jurisdiction of this court and could not narrow it. But it does not follow that this court can review the merits of the case, if the circuit court does not appear to have had jurisdiction to determine the rights of the parties.

My views may be summed up as follows:

1. This case is embraced by that clause of the act of 1887-88 which provides that the circuit court shall have original cognizance "of all suits of a civil nature, where the matter in dispute exceeds, exclusive of interest and costs, the sum or value of $2,000, and arising under the Constitution or laws of the United States." 2. That the sum or value of the matter in dispute in such cases is jurisdictional under the statute. 3. That, as it did not appear from the record, [504] in any way, that the matter *in dispute exceeded in value the jurisdictional amount, the circuit court could not take cognizance of the case or dispose of it upon its merits.
189 U. S.

4. That least of all does this court have jurisdiction to determine the merits of this case. 5. That when a case comes here upon a certificate as to the jurisdiction of a circuit court, this court may not forbear to decide that question, and determine the merits of the case upon a record which does not show jurisdiction in the circuit court.

As these are my views as to the jurisdiction of this court, upon this record, I will not formulate and discuss my views upon the merits of this case. But to avoid misapprehension, I may add that my conviction is that upon the facts alleged in the bill (if the record showed a sufficient value of the matter in dispute), the plaintiff is entitled to relief in respect of his right to be registered as a voter. I agree with Mr. Justice Brewer that it is competent for the courts to give relief in such cases as this.

MEMORANDA

OF

CASES DISPOSED OF WITHOUT OPINIONS.

[505] *FRED. T. HEGEMAN et al., etc., Plaintiffs in Error, v. JOHN H. SPRINGER, as Receiver, etc. [No. 169.]

In Error to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

Mr. Edward Jacobs for plaintiffs in error.

Mr. Chauncey S. Truax for defendant in error.

March 2, 1903. Judgment affirmed with costs, on the authority of Bleistein v. Donaldson Lithographing Co. 188 U. S. 239, ante, 460, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 298; Robinson v. Belt, 187 U. S. 41, ante, 65, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 19, and the case remanded to the circuit court of the United States for the southern district of New York.

GEORGE NESTER et al., Plaintiffs in Error, v. FRANK E. CHURCH. [No. 179.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Michigan.

Mr. Timothy E. Tarsney for plaintiffs in error.

Mr. Frank E. Robson for defendant in error.

March 2, 1903. Dismissed for the want of jurisdiction, on the authority of Castillo v. McConnico, 168 U. S. 674, 42 L. ed. 622, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 229.

PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF ILLINOIS ON THE RELATION OF GEORGE F. RAYBURN et al., Plaintiffs in Error, v. HUGH A. BINNS et al. [No. 208.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Illinois.

Mr. Edward D. Blinn for plaintiffs in error.

No counsel for defendants in error.

March 16, 1903. Dismissed for the want of jurisdiction on the authority of Castillo v. McConnico, 168 U. S. 674, 42 L. ed. 622, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 229; Butler v. Gage, 138 U. S. 52, 34 L. ed. 869, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 235; Erie R. Co. v. Purdy, 185 U. S. 148, 46 L. ed. 847, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 605. See case below, People ex rel. Glenn v. Binns, 192 Ill. 68, 61 N. E. 376.

189 U. S. U. S., Book 47.

AMADA C. DE BACA et al., Administrators, etc., Appellants, v. UNITED STATES et al. [No. 402.]

Appeal from the Court of Claims.

Mr. H. C. Burnett for appellants.

Messrs. Attorney General, Assistant Attorney General Thompson, and Lincoln B. Smith for appellees.

March 2, 1903. Error being confessed by the appellees, judgment reversed, and cause remanded with directions to proceed therein according to law.

BANK OF COMMERCE, Plaintiff in Error, v. CHARLES S. WILTSIE, Prosecuting Attorney. [No. 196.]

In Error to the Supreme *Court of the [506] State of Indiana.

Mr. Augustin Boice for plaintiff in error.

Messrs. Wm. L. Taylor, Merrill Moores, and C. C. Hadley for defendant in error.

March 16, 1903. Dismissed for the want of jurisdiction on the authority of Erie R. Co. v. Purdy, 185 U. S. 148, 46 L. ed. 847, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 605; Mallett v. North Carolina, 181 U. S. 592, 45 L. ed. 1017, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 730; Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. McGrew, 188 U. S. 291, ante, 480, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 375; and cases cited. See case below, Re Bank of Commerce, 153 Ind. 460-474, sub nom. Bank of Commerce v. Wiltzie, 47 L. R. A. 489, 53 N. E. 950, 55 N. E. 224.

HUNTER H. MOSS, JR., Prosecuting Attorney, etc., et al., Appellants, v. ELLIS GLENN. [No. 197.]

Appeal from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of West Virginia.

Messrs. Wm. N. Miller and Hunter H. Moss, Jr. for appellants.

Mr. C. C. Cole for appellee.

March 16, 1903. Final order reversed with costs, and cause remanded with directions to quash the writ of habeas corpus and dismiss the petition. Baker v. Grice, 169 U. S. 284, 42 L. ed. 748, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 323; Markuson v. Boucher, 175 U. S. 184, 44 L. ed. 124, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 76; Minnesota v. Brundage, 180 U. S. 499, 45 L. ed. 639, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 455; Dreyer v. Illinois, 187 U. S. 71, ante, 79, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 28.

LILLIE WINSTON, Plaintiff in Error, v. WALKER WINSTON. [No. 227.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of New York.

Mr. Eugene Sweeney for plaintiff in error.

Mr. Daniel E. Lynch for defendant in error.

[507] April 13, 1903. *Judgment affirmed with costs, on the authority of Bell v. Bell, 181 U. S. 175, 45 L. ed. 864, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 551; Streitwolf v. Streitwolf, 181 U. S. 179, 45 L. ed. 807, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 553; Andrews v. Andrews, 188 U. S. 14, ante, 366, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 237.

ALMOND A. WHITE, Plaintiff in Error, v. SIDNEY L. WRIGHT et al. [No. 535.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Minnesota.

Mr. Orville Rinehart for plaintiff in error.

Messrs. Jed L. Washburn and Leon E. Lum for defendants in error.

April 13, 1903. Dismissed for the want of jurisdiction, on the authority of Haseltine v. Central Nat. Bank, 183 U. S. 130, 46 L. ed. 117, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 49; Union Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Kirchoff, 160 U. S. 374, 40 L. ed. 461, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 318; Meagher v. Minnesota Thresher Mfg. Co. 145 U. S. 611, 36 L. ed. 835, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 876.

FREDERICK A. D. SCHULTE et al., Plaintiffs in Error, v. AUGUST HEMAN. [No. 242.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Missouri.

Mr. Wm. B. Thompson for plaintiffs in error.

Messrs. Hickman P. Rodgers and George E. Tralles for defendant in error.

April 20, 1903. Judgment affirmed with costs, on the authority of Shumate v. Heman, 181 U. S. 402, 45 L. ed. 922, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 645; French v. Barber Asphalt Paving Co. 181 U. S. 324, 45 L. ed. 879, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 625; Chadwick v. Kelley, 187 U. S. 540, ante, 293, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 175; Fallbrook Irrig. Dist. v. Bradley, 164 U. S. 112, 41 L. ed. 369, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 56. See Heman v. Schulte, 166 Mo. 409, 66 S. W. 163.

MARY J. LYON et al., Plaintiffs in Error, v. MARGARET GOMBRET et al. [No. 357.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Nebraska.

Messrs. Lionel C. Burr and Charles L. Burr for plaintiffs in error.

Mr. J. H. Broady for defendants in error.

April 20, 1903. Writ of error dismissed for the want of jurisdiction, on the authority of Eustis v. Bolles, 150 U. S. 361, 37 L. ed. 1111, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 131; Pierce v. Somerset R. Co. 171 U. S. 648, 43 L. ed. 319, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 64; Gillis v. Stinchfield, 159 U. S. 658, 40 L. ed. 295, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 131; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Fitzgerald, 160 U. S. 556, 40 L. ed. 536, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 389. See case below, Lyon v. Gombert, 63 Neb. 630, 88 N. W. 774.

UNITED STATES ex rel. HENRY D. PHILLIPS, Plaintiff in Error, v. EUGENE F. WARE, Commissioner of Pensions. [Nos. 249, 250.] UNITED STATES ex rel. HENRY D. PHILLIPS, Plaintiff in Error, v. ETHAN ALLEN HITCHCOCK, Secretary of the Interior, et al. [Nos. 251, 322.]

In Error to the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia.

Mr. Henry D. Phillips, propria persona.

Messrs. Attorney General, A. C. Campbell, and F. L. Campbell for defendants in error.

April 20, 1903. Writs of error dismissed *for the want of jurisdiction. Act of March 3, 1901, 31 Stat. at L. 1189, chap. 854, § 233; Act of February 9, 1893, 27 Stat. at L. 434, chap. 74, § 8, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 573; Act of March 3, 1885, 23 Stat. at L. 443, chap. 355, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 572; Baltimore & P. R. Co. v. Hopkins, 130 U. S. 210, 32 L. ed. 908, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 503; United States v. Lynch, 137 U. S. 280, 34 L. ed. 700, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 114; Cameron v. United States, 146 U. S. 533, 36 L. ed. 1077, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 184; South Carolina v. Seymour, 153 U. S. 353, sub nom. United States ex rel. South Carolina v. Seymour, 38 L. ed. 742, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 871.

SECOND NATIONAL BANK OF RICHMOND, KENTUCKY, Plaintiff in Error, v. C. N. FITZPATRICK et al. [No. 237.]

In Error to the Court of Appeals of the State of Kentucky.

Messrs. J. A. Sullivan and John T. Shelby for plaintiff in error.

No counsel for defendants in error.

April 27, 1903. Writ of error dismissed for the want of jurisdiction, on the authority of Haseltine v. Central Nat. Bank, 183 U. S. 130, 46 L. ed. 117, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 49.

NEW YORK, NEW HAVEN, & HARTFORD RAILROAD COMPANY, Plaintiff in Error, v. PATRICK McKEON. [No. 611.]

In Error to the Court of Common Pleas of Fairfield County, Connecticut.

Mr. Arthur M. Marsh for plaintiff in error.

Messrs. Robert E. DeForest and Stiles Judson, Jr., for defendant in error.

April 27, 1903. Judgment affirmed with *costs and interest, on the authority of [509] Wheeler v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. 178 U. S. 321, 44 L. ed. 1085, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 949; New York & N. E. R. Co. v. Bristol, 151 U. S. 556, 38 L. ed. 269, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 437; Arrowsmith v. Harmoning, 118 U. S. 194, 30 L. ed. 243, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1023; Little Rock & Ft. S. R. Co. v. Worthen, 120 U. S. 97-102, 30 L. ed. 588-590, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 469; Davidson v. New Orleans, 96 U. S. 97, 105, 24 L. ed. 616, 620. See case below, McKeon v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. 75 Conn. 343, 53 Atl. 656.

JOSEPH H. CHING, Petitioner, v. UNITED STATES. [No. 512.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit.

Mr. Adrian Posey for petitioner.

Messrs. Attorney General and Solicitor General Richards for respondent.

March 2, 1903. Denied.

EUFULA COTTON OIL COMPANY et al., Petitioners, v. STILLWELL & BIERCE AND SMITH-VAILE COMPANY. [No. 573.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit.

Mr. Wm. Edgar Simonds for petitioners.

Mr. E. E. Wood for respondent.

March 2, 1903. Denied.

PHILIP S. WITHERSPOON, Petitioner, v. FREDERICK P. OLCOTT. [No. 577.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

Mr. W. O. Davis for petitioner.

No counsel for respondent.

March 2, 1903. Denied.

WALTER N. DIMMICK, Petitioner, v. UNITED STATES. [No. 592.]

[510] *Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit.

Mr. George D. Collins for petitioner.

Messrs. Attorney General and Solicitor General Richards for respondent.

March 2, 1903. Denied.

WILLIAM E. FERGUSON et al., etc., Petitioners, v. ENOCH HELLIESEN et al. [No. 599.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

Messrs. James J. Macklin and LaRoy S. Gore for petitioners.

Mr. Wilhelmus Mynderse for respondents.

March 2, 1903. Denied.

WILLIAM J. HUME, Petitioner, v. UNITED STATES. [No. 608.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

Messrs. J. D. Rouse, Wm. Grant, and H. M. Jordan for petitioner.

Messrs. Attorney General and Solicitor General Richards for respondent.

March 2, 1903. Denied.

STEAMSHIP EAGLE POINT, ETC., Petitioner, v. LIVERPOOL, BRAZIL, & RIVER PLATE STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY, Limited. [No. 613.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit.

Mr. Wilhelmus Mynderse for petitioner.

Messrs. Harrington Putnam and Charles C. Burlingham for respondent.

March 2, 1903. Denied.

189 U. S.

PAUL CAPDEVIELLE, Mayor, etc., et al., Petitioners, v. UNITED STATES ex rel. D. M. KILPATRICK et al. [No. 617.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

Mr. Frank B. Thomas for petitioners.

Messrs. J. D. Rouse, Wm. Grant and H. M. Jordan for respondents.

March 2, 1903. Denied.

*BOARD OF COMMISSIONERS OF WILKES COUNTY et al., Petitioners, v. W. N. COLER & Co. [No. 247.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit.

Mr. A. C. Avery for petitioners.

Messrs. John F. Dillon, Charles Price, Harry Hubbard, and John M. Dillon for respondents.

March 9, 1903. Granted.

DAVID R. JULIAN, Sheriff, etc., et al., Petitioners, v. CENTRAL TRUST COMPANY et al. [No. 457.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit.

Messrs. A. C. Avery, Lee S. Overman, and C. A. Mountjoy for petitioners.

Mr. Charles Price for respondents.

March 9, 1903. Granted.

ALPHONSE EMSHEIMER, Petitioner, v. CITY OF NEW ORLEANS. [No. 612.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

Messrs. J. E. Rouse, Wm. Grant and H. M. Jordan for petitioner.

No counsel for respondent.

March 9, 1903. Denied.

ARTHUR JOHN BUSTON, Petitioner, v. PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD COMPANY. [No. 625.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit.

Messrs. Richard C. Dale, Geo. W. Pepper, and Samuel Dickson for petitioner.

Messrs. John G. Johnson and F. P. Prichard for respondent.

March 9, 1903. Denied.

CREED & CRIPPLE CREEK MINING & MILLING COMPANY, Petitioner, v. UTAH TUNNEL MINING & TRANSPORTATION COMPANY. [No. 609.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit.

Messrs. Charles S. Thomas, Wm. H. Bryant, and H. H. Lee for petitioner.

Mr. Charles J. Hughes, Jr., for respondent.

March 16, 1903. Granted.

923

[512]**CHARLES B. KIMBELL et al., Petitioners, v. CHICAGO HYDRAULIC PRESS BRICK COMPANY et al.* [No. 623.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit.

Mr. Edmund H. Smalley for petitioners.
Messrs. Edward Cunningham, Jr., and Edward C. Eliot for respondents.

March 16, 1903. Denied.

HENRY C. PAYNE, Postmaster General,
Plaintiff in Error and Petitioner, v. UNITED STATES ex rel. NATIONAL RAILWAY PUBLICATION COMPANY. [No. 628.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia.

Mr. Solicitor General Richards for petitioner.

No appearance for respondent.

March 16, 1903. Granted.

HENRY C. PAYNE, Postmaster General,
Plaintiff in Error and Petitioner, v. UNITED STATES ex rel. RAILWAY LIST COMPANY. [No. 629.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia.

Mr. Solicitor General Richards for petitioner.

No appearance for respondent.

March 16, 1903. Granted.

WILLIAM A. WRIGHT, Comptroller General,
Petitioner, v. LOUISVILLE & NASHVILLE RAILROAD COMPANY et al. [No. 636.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

Messrs. Boykin Wright and John C. Hart for petitioner.

Mr. Alex. C. King for respondents.

March 23, 1903. Granted.

MEXICAN NATIONAL RAILROAD COMPANY,
Petitioner, v. NIEL JACKSON. [No. 638.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

Messrs. Thomas W. Dodd and J. W. Bailey for petitioner.

No counsel for respondent.

March 23, 1903. Denied.

[513]**ROBERT H. DOWNMAN et al., Petitioners, v. GERMAN INSURANCE COMPANY OF FREEPORT, ILLINOIS.* [No. 619.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

Mr. H. N. Atkinson for petitioners.

No counsel for respondent.

April 6, 1903. Denied.

UNITED STATES, Petitioner, v. ALFRED R. MULLINS. [No. 630.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit.

Messrs. Attorney General and Solicitor General Richards for petitioner.

Mr. Alexander Pope Humphrey for respondent.

April 6, 1903. Denied.

WELKER GIVEN, Petitioner, v. TIMES-REPUBLICAN PRINTING COMPANY et al. [No. 633.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit.

Mr. A. A. Lipscomb for petitioner.

Messrs. A. B. Cummins, Wm. W. Dudley, and L. T. Michener for respondents.

April 6, 1903. Denied.

JOHN R. CLARKE, Petitioner, v. TOWN OF NORTHAMPTON. [No. 631.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

Messrs. Fayette B. Tiffany, Henry J. Cookinham, and John M. Thurston for petitioner.

Messrs. Fred Linus Carroll and Andrew J. Nellis for respondent.

April 20, 1903. Denied.

RALPH MOORE, ETC., Petitioner, v. SOUTHERN RAILWAY COMPANY. [No. 663.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit.

Mr. Henry H. Ingersoll for petitioner.

Messrs. W. A. Henderson and Leon Jourmon for respondent.

April 20, 1903. Denied.

H. BAUENDAHL & Co., *Petitioners, v. JACOB S. *BERNHEIMER & BRO.* [No. 652.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

Mr. Adolph G. Wolf for petitioners.

Mr. Max J. Kohler for respondents.

April 27, 1903. Denied.

S. WARREN LAMSON et al., Petitioners, v. CHARLES F. HUTCHINGS, Executor, etc. [No. 669.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit.

Mr. Wm. H. Barnum for petitioners.

No counsel for respondent.

April 27, 1903. Denied.

STEAMSHIP ELY, ETC., Petitioner, v. WILLIAM B. BOWRING et al. [No. 672.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

Messrs. J. Parker Kirlin and Charles R. Hickox for petitioner.

Mr. Wilhelmus Mynderse for respondents.

April 27, 1903. Denied.

CHARLES DOHERTY, Plaintiff in Error, v. STATE OF VERMONT. [No. 233.]
In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Vermont.

Mr. Tracy L. Jeffords for plaintiff in error.

Mr. O. A. Prouty for defendant in error.

March 2, 1903. Dismissed, on authority of counsel for plaintiff in error.

CONTRACTING & BUILDING COMPANY OF KENTUCKY, Petitioner, v. CONTINENTAL TRUST COMPANY. [No. 184.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit.

Messrs. Thomas Emery and John Ford for petitioner.

No counsel for respondent.

March 4, 1903. Dismissed for the want of prosecution.

[515]*ROBERT H. BILLINGSLEA, Petitioner, v. KANSAS CITY SOUTHERN RAILWAY COMPANY et al. [No. 606.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

Messrs. Presley K. Ewing and Henry F. Ring for petitioner.

Messrs. Gardiner Lathrop, Thos. R. Morrow, and S. W. Moore for respondents.

March 9, 1903. Dismissed, per stipulation.

JEREMIAH F. MCCARTHY et al., Plaintiffs in Error and Appellants, v. JAMES F. MCCARTHY. [No. 388.]

In Error to and Appeal from the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia.

Mr. Chapin Brown for plaintiffs in error and appellants.

Messrs. C. C. Cole and Vincent A. Sheehy for defendant in error and appellee.

March 11, 1903. Dismissed, each party to pay its own costs in this court, per stipulation of counsel.

JOSHUA M. SEARS, Plaintiff in Error, v. BOARD OF STREET COMMISSIONERS OF THE CITY OF BOSTON. [No. 283.]

In Error to the Supreme Judicial Court of the State of Massachusetts.

Messrs. Edward W. Hutchins and Henry Wheeler for plaintiff in error.

Mr. Thomas M. Babson for defendant in error.

April 6, 1903. Dismissed with costs, per stipulation.

SCHOONER GIBARA HABANA, ETC., Appellant, v. UNITED STATES. [No. 239.]

Appeal from the District Court of the United States for the Southern District of Florida.

Messrs. H. A. Herbert and Benjamin Micou for appellant.

Mr. Attorney General for appellee.

April 8, 1903. Dismissed, pursuant to the 10th Rule.

189 U. S.

SCHOONER EXPRESSO, ETC., Appellant, v. UNITED STATES. [No. 240.]

Appeal from the District Court of the United States for the Southern District of Florida.

*Messrs. H. A. Herbert and *Benjamin Micou* for appellant. [516]

Mr. Attorney General for appellee.

April 8, 1903. Dismissed, pursuant to the 10th Rule.

JOHN LAWRENCE et al., Trustees, etc., Plaintiffs in Error, v. BOARD OF STREET COMMISSIONERS OF THE CITY OF BOSTON. [No. 274.]

In Error to the Supreme Judicial Court of the State of Massachusetts.

Mr. J. H. Benton, Jr., for plaintiffs in error.

Mr. Thomas M. Babson for defendant in error.

April 13, 1903. Dismissed with costs, per stipulation.

JOHN LAWRENCE O'BRIEN, Appellant, v. JOHN H. SHINE, United States Marshal, etc. [No. 531.]

Appeal from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of California.

Mr. John M. Thurston for appellant.

Messrs. Attorney General, Solicitor General Richards, and Morgan H. Beach for appellee.

April 17, 1903. Dismissed with costs, on motion of Mr. John M. Thurston for the appellant.

V. VAN BUREN, Plaintiff in Error, v. MARGARET U. MCKINLEY. [No. 260.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Idaho.

Mr. James H. Hawley for plaintiff in error.

Mr. Edgar Wilson for defendant in error.

April 17, 1903. Dismissed with costs, pursuant to the 10th Rule.

JAMES P. WITHEROW, Appellant, v. CARNEGIE STEEL COMPANY, Limited. [No. 270.]

Appeal from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York.

Mr. Hector M. Hitchings for appellant.

Mr. John R. Bennett for appellee.

April 23, 1903. Dismissed with costs, pursuant to the 10th Rule.

CLEVELAND, CINCINNATI, CHICAGO & ST. LOUIS *RAILWAY COMPANY, Plaintiff in Error, v. VILLAGE OF CLYDE, OHIO. [No. 262.] [517]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Ohio.

Mr. John T. Dye for plaintiff in error.

Messrs. Homer Metzgar and S. S. Richards for defendant in error.

April 24, 1903. Dismissed with costs, on authority of counsel for the plaintiff in error.

EMERSON CHAMBERLIN, Appellant, v. PEORIA, DECATUR, & EVANSVILLE RAILWAY COMPANY et al. [No. 284.]

Appeal from the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Indiana.

Mr. Edward B. Whitney for appellant.

Mr. J. M. Dickinson for appellees.

April 27, 1903. Dismissed, per stipulation.

VIRGINIA-CAROLINA CHEMICAL COMPANY, Petitioner, v. HOME INSURANCE COMPANY OF NEW YORK et al. [No. 281.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit.

Mr. Henry A. M. Smith for petitioner.

Messrs. Augustin T. Smythe and Alex. C. King for respondents.

April 27, 1903. Dismissed for the want of prosecution.

189 U. S.

CASES

ARGUED AND DECIDED

IN THE

S U P R E M E C O U R T

OF THE

UNITED STATES

AT

OCTOBER TERM, 1902.

---

Vol. 190.

REFERENCE TABLE
 OF SUCH CASES
 DECIDED IN U. S. SUPREME COURT,
 OCTOBER TERM, 1902,
 AND REPORTED HEREIN,
 VOLUME 190,
 AS ALSO APPEAR IN OFFICIAL REPORTER'S EDITION.

Off. Rep. 190 U. S.	Title.	Here in.	Off. Rep. 190 U. S.	Title.	Here in.
1-2	{ Watts, Re	933	116	Boekfinger v. Foster	975
	{ Sachs, Re		116-118	" "	976
2-5	"	934	118-121	" "	977
5-8	"	935	121-124	" "	978
8-10	"	936	124-126	" "	979
10-13	"	937	127	James v. Bowman	979
13-16	"	938	127-128	" "	980
26-28	"	941	135-137	" "	981
28-30	"	942	137-139	" "	982
30-33	"	943	139-142	" "	983
33-36	"	944	142	" "	984
36	"	945	143-144	Swan & F. Co. v. United States	984
36	O'Neal v. United States	945	144-147	" "	986
36-38	"	946	147	" "	987
38	Tubman v. Baltimore & O. R. Co.	946	147	Mutual Reserve F. L. Asso. v. Phelps	987
39-40	"	947	148	" "	988
40-42	Wright v. Henkel	948	148-149	" "	989
42-44	"	949	149-150	" "	990
44-47	"	950	150	" "	991
47-49	"	951	156-158	" "	994
57-59	"	954	158-160	" "	995
59-61	"	955	160	Atlantic & P. Teleg. Co. v. Philadelphia	995
61-63	"	956		" "	996
64	Tennessee v. Virginia	956	161	" "	998
64-67	"	957	161	" "	999
67-70	"	958	161-163	" "	1000
70-73	"	959	163-165	" "	1001
73-75	"	960	165-168	" "	1002
75-78	"	961	168-169	" "	1002
78-81	"	962	169-170	Patterson v. Bark Eudora	1003
81-84	"	963	170-172	" "	1005
84-87	"	964	172-173	" "	1006
87-88	"	965	173-176	" "	1007
89	Montgomery v. Portland	965	176-179	" "	1008
89-91	"	968	179	" "	1008
91-93,	"		179-181	Johanson v. Washington	1009
103-104	"	969	181	" "	1010
104-107	"	970	181-183	" "	1011
107	Wilkes County v. Coler ("Wilkes County Com'rs v. W. N. Coler & Co.")	971	184-186	" "	1012
			186	" "
107-110	"	972	186-187	Oregon & C. R. Co. v. United States	1012
110-113	"	973	187-189	" "	1013
113-115	"	974	189-192	" "	1014
115-116	"	975	192-195	" "	1015
190 U. S.					929

REFERENCE TABLE.

Off. Rep. 190 U. S.	Title.	Here in.	Off. Rep. 190 U. S.	Title.	Here in.
195-197	Oregon & C. R. Co. v. United States	1016	320-323	United States ex rel. Riverside Oil Co. v. Hitchcock	1076
197	Hawaii v. Mankichi	1016	323	" " "	1077
198	" "	1017	323-326	" " "	1078
209	" "	1019	326	Southern R. Co. v. Allison	1078
209-212	" "	1020	326-328	" "	1079
212-214	" "	1021	328-330	" "	1080
214-217	" "	1022	330-332	" "	1081
217-220	" "	1023	332-335	" "	1082
220-222	" "	1024	335-337	" "	1083
223-225	" "	1025	337-339	" "	1084
225-227	" "	1026	340	Dunbar v. Dunbar	1084
227-230	" "	1027	340-342	" "	1085
230-233	" "	1028	342-344	" "	1086
233-235	" "	1029	344-346	" "	1090
235-238	" "	1030	346-349	" "	1091
238-241	" "	1031	349-352	" "	1092
241-243	" "	1032	352-353	" "	1093
243-246	" "	1033	353-354	Buchanan v. Patterson	1093
246-249	" "	1034	354-357	" "	1094
249	" "	1035	357-360	" "	1095
249-250	Snyder v. Bettman	1035	360-362	" "	1096
250-252	" "	1036	362-365	" "	1097
252-254	" "	1037	365-367	" "	1098
254-257	" "	1038	367	" "	1099
257-259	" "	1039	368-370	Blackfeather v. United States	1099
259-260	" "	1040	370-372	" "	1100
260-261	Miffin v. R. H. White Co.	1040	372-375	" "	1101
261	" "	1041	375-377	" "	1102
261-264	" "	1042	377-379	" "	1103
264	" "	1043	379	United States v. Michigan	1103
265-266	Miffin v. Dutton	1043	379-382	" "	1104
266	" "	1044	382-384	" "	1105
267	Northern P. R. Co. v. Townsend	1044	384-387	" "	1106
267-269	" "	1045	387-390	" "	1107
270-271	" "	1046	390-392	" "	1108
271-273	" "	1047	392-399	" "	1109
273	Interstate Commerce Commission v. Louisville & N. R. Co.	1047	399-402	" "	1110
274-276	" "	1048	402-405	" "	1111
276-277	" "	1049	405-406	" "	1112
278-279	" "	1050	406	Conley v. Mathieson Alkali Works	1113
279-281	" "	1054		" "	1113
281-284	" "	1055	406-408	" "	1114
284-286	" "	1056	408-411	" "	1115
286-287	" "	1057	411-412	" "	1116
287-288	Texas & P. R. Co. v. Watson	1057	412-413	Western Union Teleg. Co. v. Missouri ex rel. Gottlieb	1116
288	" "	1058		" "	1117
289-291	" "	1059	413-416	" "	1118
291-293	" "	1060	416	" "	1119
293	" "	1061	420-421	" "	1120
294-296	Lockwood v. Exchange Bank	1061	421-423	" "	1121
296-297	" "	1062	423-426	" "	1121
297-299	" "	1063	426-427	" "	1122
299-301	" "	1064	428	Geer v. Mathieson Alkali Works	1122
301	Cosmos Exploration Co. v. Great Eagle Oil Co.	1064	428-430	" "	1123
302-304	" "	1065	430-432	" "	1124
304-307	" "	1066	432-434	" "	1125
307	" "	1067	434-437	" "	1126
308-309	" "	1070	437	Stanly County v. Coler	1126
309-311	" "	1071		("Stanly County Comrs. v. W. N. Coler & Co.")	1126
311-314	" "	1072		" "	1127
314-315	" "	1073	438	" "	1128
316	Pacific Land & Imp. Co. v. Elwood Oil Co.	1073	439-441	" "	1130
316	" "	1074	441-442	" "	1131
316-318	United States ex rel. Riverside Oil Co. v. Hitchcock	1074	442-444	" "	1132
318-320	" "	1074	444-447	" "	1133
930		1075	447-449	" "	1134
			449-451	" "	1134

REFERENCE TABLE.

Off. Rep. 190 U. S.	Title.	Here in.	Off. Rep. 190 U. S.	Title.	Here in.
452	Kean v. Calumet Canal & Imp. Co.	1134	525-527	Colombia v. Cauca Co. ("Republic of Colombia v. Cauca Co.")	1162
458	"	1136	527-529	"	1163
458-461	"	1137	529-532	"	1164
461-463	"	1138	532	"	1165
463-466	"	1139	533	Randolph v. Scruggs ("Randolph & Randolph v. Scruggs")	1165
466-469	"	1140	533-536	"	1169
469-471	"	1141	536-538	"	1170
471-474	"	1142	538-540	"	1171
474-476	"	1143	540	Globe Refining Co. v. Landa Cotton Oil Co.	1171
476-479	"	1144	540-542	"	1172
479-481	"	1145	542-545	"	1173
482-484	"	1146	545-547	"	1174
484-486	"	1147	547	"	1175
486-489	"	1148	548	Queenan v. Oklahoma	1175
489-491	"	1149	548-549	"	1177
491-494	"	1150	549-552	"	1178
494-496	"	1151	552	Hutchinson v. Otis ("Hutchinson v. Otis, Wilcox & Co.")	1179
496-499	"	1152	553-555	"	1181
499-501	"	1153	555-556	"	1182
501-504	"	1154	557-561	Memorandum Cases	1183-1185
504-506	"	1155
506-607	"	1156
508	Hardin v. Shedd	1156
518-519	"	1157
519-522	"	1158
522-524	"	1159
524	Colombia v. Cauca Co. ("Republic of Colombia v. Cauca Co.")	1159

THE DECISIONS
OF THE
Supreme Court of the United States

AT

OCTOBER TERM, 1902.

[1] **Re WILLIAM WATTS, Petitioner.*

Re DAVID SACHS, Petitioner.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 1-36)

Contempt — of bankruptcy court — advice of counsel inducing judicial action of state court.

Advice of attorneys to a state court, pursuant to which that court compelled the surrender by a receiver in bankruptcy of property which had, without the consent of the state court, been voluntarily turned over to him by a receiver appointed by such court, cannot be deemed to constitute contempt of the bankruptcy court, where there is no evidence that their advice was given otherwise than in good faith and in the discharge of their duty as counsel.

[Nos. 15, 16, Original.]

Argued April 20, 1903. Decided May 18, 1903.

ON HABEAS CORPUS and Certiorari to review a sentence of contempt imposed by the United States District Court for the District of Indiana upon attorneys for advice given by them to a state court, which induced that court to compel the surrender of property in the hands of a receiver in bankruptcy appointed by the District Court. Petitioners discharged.

Statement by Mr. Chief Justice Fuller:

M. Zier & Company, a corporation located at New Albany, Indiana, engaged in the boiler manufacturing business, was *hopelessly insolvent on and prior to December 30, 1902, and some thousands of dollars had been drawn from its treasury by the manager of its affairs for the purpose of making certain payments, of which $3,100 had been paid to Ryerson & Son, a corporation of Chicago, Illinois, and a large creditor of the Zier company, previously to December 30, and $9,600 was on that day placed by M. Zier, the manager of the company, in the hands of his attorney to be paid over to Zier's sister-in-law, who was a stockholder and creditor of the Zier corporation. It was arranged by Zier's attorney with the Chicago corporation on December 29 that the latter should apply for the appointment of a receiver of the Zier corporation, and that the New Albany Trust Company should be appointed receiver, and this resulted in a complaint filed by the Ryerson corporation, represented by W. W. Watts, a member of the bar of Kentucky, in the circuit court of Floyd county, Indiana, charging that the Zier company was insolvent and was dissipating its property and assets, and praying for the appointment of a receiver, "and that the court shall make such orders as shall be necessary and proper for the preservation of said property, for the continuance of said business for the purpose of completing unfinished contracts," etc., to which defendant voluntarily appeared and consented to the appointment of the New Albany Trust Company as receiver. The appointment was accordingly made, and the trust company immediately qualified and proceeded to administer the estate and wind up its affairs.

On January 16, the trust company, as receiver, filed its report and petition, giving an inventory and appraisal of the assets of Zier & Co., the receipts and expenditures of the receiver to that date, the particulars in respect of outstanding contracts; raising the question as to the further operation of the plant, and advising an order for a meeting of the creditors to consider that subject; requiring creditors to prove their claims,

NOTE.—On the liability of attorneys for contempt—see note to Anderson v. Comptois, 48 C. C. A. 7.

190 U. S.

and enjoining them from the prosecution of suits except by intervention. A list of the creditors was attached, which included the Inland Steel Company, John C. Thurston, and the Dey Time Register Company.

[3] The court entered an order directing such meeting to be *held January 24, and notice by mail to be given, which was done, and the meeting was held on that day, a large number of creditors being represented, including the Inland Steel Company. An order was thereupon entered for payment of rent, the completion of unfinished contracts, for the continuance of the operation of the plant to a specified extent, for the issue of certificates of indebtedness to a small amount, but that no new contracts should be made. It was further ordered that creditors be notified by mail and by publication to file their claims on or before May 11, and "that all creditors and other persons be and they are hereby enjoined and restrained from prosecuting any claim or suit against this estate except by intervention in this cause or by first obtaining leave of this court."

February 6, 1903, the Inland Steel Company, John C. Thurston, and John Dey, doing business as Dey Time Register Company, creditors of the Zier corporation to the amounts of $935, $15, and $100, respectively, filed their petition in bankruptcy in the United States district court for the district of Indiana against that corporation to have it declared a bankrupt. The petition alleged that the company was hopelessly insolvent and had committed, within four months next preceding the filing of the petition, acts of bankruptcy, which were specified. It was further alleged that it was necessary, for the preservation of the estate of Zier & Company and for the benefit of its creditors alike, that a receiver in bankruptcy be appointed at once to take charge of the affairs of said company. On February 11 a further petition was filed by the Inland Steel Company, and, on the same day, a supplemental petition, in which the appointment by the circuit court of Floyd county of a receiver and his being put in charge of the insolvent's property, were set up as additional acts of bankruptcy.

The district court thereupon appointed Frederick D. Connor as receiver, and directed that he should take into his possession the plant of Zier & Company and all its other property, and further ordered that the New Albany Trust Company should deliver up to the receiver all the property of Zier & Company and refrain from in any way in-[4] terfering with him. The receiver *immediately qualified by giving bond as required by the court.

February 13, 1903, and before the receiver of the district court had made demand for the property, on learning of Mr. Connor's appointment as receiver, Mr. Watts, after consulting with the local attorneys of Zier & Company, communicated with the district judge and requested that the Federal receiver should not proceed until he, Mr. Watts, could procure an order from the Floyd circuit court permitting him to do so, and could come to Indianapolis, and present to the district judge reasons why the receiver should not have been appointed by that court, and why his order to that effect should be vacated. The district judge immediately caused the court's receiver and the attorneys interested in the case to be notified to take no further steps until a hearing could be had on the questions suggested by Mr. Watts, on February 16, at Indianapolis. No further action was taken by the receiver of the district court, but he presented to the Floyd circuit court a petition setting forth his appointment and qualification, together with a certified copy of the order appointing him, on the morning of Saturday, February 14, and asked the delivery to him of the property and effects of Zier & Company and the discharge of the trust company as receiver. The Floyd circuit court entered an order reciting that Connor, as receiver, came by his attorney, "and by leave and order of the court, and upon his own motion, makes himself a party to this proceeding, and thereupon by leave of the court files his verified petition showing his appointment as receiver of said M. Zier & Co. by order of the United States district court for the district of Indiana," and praying for the surrender of the property; "and the matter of said petition is now continued until the next term of this court." Saturday, February 14, was the last day of the term, and the next term of the court commenced on the 9th day of March.

On the same day, February 14, the trust company, by Watts, its attorney, filed its petition, framed by him, which alleged that the trust company was carrying out as receiver the terms of the order of January 24: that that order had *been entered without [5] objection from the Inland Steel Company, John C. Thurston, or the Dey Register Company, or any creditor; that the three last-mentioned creditors had filed a petition in involuntary bankruptcy against M. Zier & Company, February 6, 1903; that supplemental petitions were filed February 11, 1903, but that the petitions, although setting up the receivership in the state court, had not shown to the United States district court the participation of the Inland Steel Company in the proceedings of January 24, its appearance, and the restraining order and injunction; that thereupon the order had been obtained in the bankruptcy proceedings appointing Connor receiver, and directing him to take charge of the estate of M. Zier & Company in bankruptcy, and directing the receiver of the state court to deliver up the property. The petition further averred that the creditors whose appearance was noted in the state court on January 24 had claims aggregating $53,279.51; that creditors with claims aggregating $11,622.49 had filed claims with the state court receiver, making a total of $64,902 in amount, so filed or appearing, out of a total liability of $76,463.36; that the total number of creditors was seventy-six; that thirty-seven appeared to the action, and twenty-five, including the Dey Time Register Company, had filed their claims with the state court receiver, making a total of sixty-two creditors who had appeared or filed their claims.

That, with a view to the due observance of the comity existing between the state and the Federal courts, and of avoiding a clash of jurisdiction, petitioner had communicated through its attorneys with the United States district judge and requested the non-enforcement of his order until after the matters in question had been presented to the state court, with the request that that court direct it and its attorneys to lay said matters before the judge of the district court, whereupon the district judge requested counsel to notify the attorneys of the creditors petitioning in bankruptcy that the matter would be heard on Monday, February 16, in Indianapolis, and that in the meantime the order appointing Connor was not to be enforced.

[6] The petition further alleged that the court was about to adjourn *over to the first day of its next term, March 9; that the order of January 24 directed petitioner as receiver to go on and complete various contracts; that it had entered upon the work; that the operation of the plant was for the beneficial purposes of the estate; and that the stoppage of the plant would involve loss to the creditors and many complicated questions of damage; that it would work great hardship to leave the estate with the court adjourned and without instructions as to what to do; and that the petitioner was this court's officer, and must be ordered and directed by this court, only, with respect to the property in its hands.

Petitioner averred that the injunction and restraining order of the state court had been knowingly violated by the Inland Steel Company and the Dey Time Register Company; that these two creditors and all other creditors were estopped from prosecuting the petition in bankruptcy, and from seeking to take from petitioner the assets in its hands as receiver; and that all the creditors were enjoined from prosecuting any attempt to take from the receiver any of the assets in its hands except by leave. And, further, that the record in the district court of the United States for the district of Indiana did not disclose all the facts regarding the matters herein; that that court had no information as to the restraining orders, and estopels, by entry of appearance, participation, and otherwise. That the assets of the Zier company were in custodia legis; that the parties had submitted themselves to this forum; that the court came into lawful custody of the property, and the orders and proceedings were entered and had before the institution of the bankruptcy proceedings, and the attempt to oust this court and receiver therefrom. Petitioner, therefore, asserted its belief that the district court, under the peculiar circumstances of the case, would coincide with the state court, if it should deem wise to enter orders specifically restraining the Inland Steel Company, John L. Thurston, and the Dey Time Register Company and their attorneys, Connor, and the United States marshal from further prosecuting any matters in relation to the estate or of the taking of the assets in any manner, except by intervention in this action.

*Petitioner prayed for instructions; that [7] it should present the facts to the district court of the United States, either by limited or general appearance in the bankruptcy proceedings, and ask such relief, if any, as this court might direct; and that an injunction be granted.

An order was then entered, prepared by Mr. Watts, embodying matters set up in the petition, granting an injunction, ordering the operation of the plant to continue, and directing the receiver, through its attorneys, to proceed to Indianapolis and there, by a limited appearance, to lay before the district court the facts with regard to the matters herein, and to suggest to that court the orders of this court, and its belief that with full information of the facts the order of that court would at most have been a direction for application to be made to this court for the delivery of the assets to the receiver or trustee of the district court. It was further ordered that the Inland Steel Company John L. Thurston, and the Dey Time Register Company show cause why they should not be punished for contempt in disobeying the orders of this court by taking action without obtaining leave.

On Monday, February 16, Mr. Watts, with the vice president of the New Albany Trust Company, receiver, appeared in the district court at Indianapolis, and the proceedings in the state court, including the petition and order of February 14, were laid before that court, and hearing was had that day and on February 17. At the conclusion of the argument the district judge announced his ruling that the court in bankruptcy had supreme and exclusive jurisdiction in the matter; and asked Mr. Watts and the representative of the trust company if it were not better to avoid the clash of jurisdiction by voluntarily turning the property over to the Federal receiver, indicating at the same time that otherwise it would be his duty to exert the power of the court in vindication of its jurisdiction. Mr. Watts and his colleague thereupon announced that the property would be turned over to the Federal receiver. Mr. Watts at the same time stated to the court that he would do all in his power to see that the proceedings in the state court of February 14 were *stricken out, and that [8] he would endeavor to have the state court make an order directing the surrender of the property.

The district court, on February 17, made the following order:

"This cause coming on now to be heard upon the petition of Frederick D. Connor, filed herein on the 16th day of February, A. D. 1903, for the instruction of the court concerning the property and assets of said M. Zier & Company, which are now in the possession of the New Albany Trust Company, as receiver of the Floyd circuit court, in a suit therein pending against said M. Zier & Company, because of their insolvency; and the petitioning creditors in this cause and said Connor, receiver as aforesaid, being now present and represented by George H. Hester and William Wilhartz, their solicitors, and said New Albany Trust Company, receiver as aforesaid, being now present and represented by Henry E. Jewett, its vice president, and by William W. Watts, its solicitor, and after argument by counsel, the said New Albany Trust Company, as receiver of the Floyd circuit court, by its said vice president, having voluntarily offered and agreed, by and with the consent and approval of said William W. Watts, its solicitor, in open court, to surrender full and immediate possession and control of the property and assets of said M. Zier & Company, in its possession or under its control, as receiver of the Floyd circuit court, to said Connor, as receiver of this court, upon the presentation by him to said New Albany Trust Company of a certified copy of the order for his appointment as such receiver heretofore made by this court. It is now hereby ordered by the court that said Connor, receiver as aforesaid, forthwith present a certified copy of the order for his appointment as such receiver to the said New Albany Trust Company, and immediately thereupon take full possession and control of the property and assets of said M. Zier & Company that are now in the possession or under the control of said New Albany Trust Company, as receiver of the Floyd circuit court."

[9] On February 19 the trust company by its vice president filed a report in the Floyd circuit court, in which it stated that, in pursuance of the order of the court, it had appeared before the *district judge in Indianapolis on Monday, February 16, and, upon the hearing in that court, the receiver had stated that it was ready and willing to deliver to the receiver appointed by the Federal court all the property and assets of Zier & Company in its hands; that it had not yet been able to make up its accounts as receiver, but was preparing the same to submit to the court, and was willing to turn over all the property to the Federal receiver; and prayed leave from the court to do so. The company further asked that, upon the presentation and approval of its accounts as receiver, its resignation be accepted, and that it be fully and finally discharged.

On the same day Connor demanded of the trust company the property of Zier & Company in its possession, to which that company at once replied that it had that morning filed before the judge of the Floyd circuit court, in chambers, a report, a copy of which was attached; that the judge had stated orally that he wished the property held until the accounts of the trust company as receiver were rendered and passed on; that the company thought this might be done the next day, and desired, if Connor was willing, to defer action until then, because it would "relieve us of embarrassment in the premises. On the other hand, if you insist on immediate surrender of the property to you, we are bound to say that we believe that to carry out in good faith the understanding with the honorable judge of the United States court of Indianapolis and our vice president, H. E. Jewett, we ought to surrender the property to you at once." Connor declined to grant further time, and the trust company turned over to him the plant of Zier & Company, which constituted all the property of that company except certain books and cash. Connor immediately took possession of the property and put watchmen in charge to hold the same for him.

On February 20 the United States Tube Company presented to the Floyd circuit court, "in vacation, at chambers," a petition signed and verified by D. A. Sachs, in which it was set forth that the trust company, as receiver, had wrongfully turned over and surrendered the possession of the boiler plant of Zier & Company to Connor, the receiver in bankruptcy, and was *threat-[10] ening to turn over to Connor all the other assets of Zier & Company in its hands. Petitioner therefore prayed that the trust company be cited to appear before the court, in chambers, on the afternoon of that day, and show cause why it should not be punished for contempt; and that if the court found that the trust company had violated its orders as represented that it be removed from its office as such receiver and a successor be appointed; and that the trust company be required to account immediately and turn over to its successor the property of Zier & Company. On this petition the judge of the Floyd circuit court on the same day entered an order removing the trust company from the receivership, and directing it to account for the assets of Zier & Company. The order further provided for the appointment of Charles D. Kelso as receiver, and directed him, on qualification, to demand of the trust company and Connor the immediate possession of the property of Zier & Company which came into the hands of the trust company as receiver, and, should Connor fail or refuse to surrender the possession of the assets, that he at once report to the judge for further instructions.

Kelso, having qualified, on the same day reported to the judge at chambers that he had demanded of the trust company the possession of the assets of Zier & Company, and that the trust company had refused to surrender the possession for the reason that it had turned over the possession of the plant to Connor, and that as to the other assets it intended to account forthwith to the judge of the Floyd circuit court; and that he then demanded the property of Connor, who refused to surrender the same. The state court then entered an order that a writ be issued, directed to the sheriff of the county, requiring him immediately to seize and deliver to Kelso all the property which Connor had in his possession, and forthwith to make a return to the court.

February 21, Connor filed a petition in the district court, in which, after setting forth the facts as to the delivery of the possession of the plant of Zier & Company to him February 19, he stated that he retained possession of the same until February 20, when possession was demanded of him by Kelso, [11] as *receiver appointed by the Floyd circuit court, which demand he refused; that he was served with a certified copy of the order of the Floyd circuit court, and with a writ issued by that court February 20, to the sheriff, requiring him forthwith to take possession of the plant and the assets; and that the sheriff forcibly took possession thereof, and delivered the same over to Kelso, who was then in possession.

The petition of Connor further stated:

"That this petitioner believes the above-stated proceedings were procured to be had by William W. Watts, Esq., of Louisville, Kentucky, who during the continuation of the New Albany Trust Company, as receiver of M. Zier & Company, represented said trust company as such; that said Charles D. Kelso is now represented by one D. A. Sachs, Esq., of Louisville, Kentucky, an attorney-at-law, and that the petitioner believes that said Sachs also assisted in procuring the orders of the said Floyd circuit court above set out, and the petitioner further says that he verily believes the forcible removal of said property from his possession and control as receiver appointed by this court as aforesaid was brought about by the joint action and efforts of said Charles D. Kelso, as receiver, and Charles D. Kelso, individually, and William W. Watts, as attorney for said New Albany Trust Company, and D. A. Sachs, attorney for said Charles D. Kelso, receiver."

The petitioner further prayed that Kelso, as receiver and individually, the sheriff, the deputy sheriff, and the custodian of the plant, and William W. Watts, as attorney for the trust company, and D. A. Sachs, as attorney for Kelso, be required and directed to redeliver the property to petitioner, and be cited to appear and show cause why they should not be punished for contempt.

On this petition the district court, February 21, made an order requiring the parties therein named to appear before it at Indianapolis on February 25 to show cause why they should not redeliver the property, and restraining them from in any way interfering therewith; and further ordering that the parties show cause why they should not be punished for contempt. On the same day, [12] the United States district attorney *for the district of Indiana filed informations in the district court against Kelso, Watts, Sachs, and others, for contempt of the district court in disobeying and disregarding its orders. Watts and Sachs filed separate answers and pleas to the rule to show cause and to the information against them, which were traversed by the United States district attorney.

William W. Watts, by way of response to the rule, and plea to the information, pleaded that he was not guilty of the alleged contempts stated in the rule and information, or either of them. He denied that he had committed or advised any act of contempt of the orders of the district court, or that he had in any way, directly or indirectly, or by aiding or advising, forcibly, or in any other way, taken from the receiver in the bankruptcy proceedings the property of Zier & Company, or any part of it, or in any way, by aiding, abetting, or advising, had withheld the custody of said property or any part of it. But he said that the orders of the district court directing its receiver to take the property of Zier & Company into its custody were void because of want of jurisdiction, and that the possession of the property by Connor, receiver, was wrongfully and unlawfully obtained, and the retaking under the orders and writ of the Floyd circuit court was a lawful and proper taking.

He then set up the various proceedings hereinbefore enumerated, and the part he took therein; adding: "All this was done solely for the purpose of preventing any possible conflict between the two jurisdictions, and it was believed by this defendant and respondent, and by the said New Albany Trust Company, and by the judge of the Floyd circuit court, that upon such presentation the United States district court would rescind its said order appointing said Frederick D. Connor, as receiver, and directing him to take possession of said property of M. Zier & Company." Under this authorization he and the trust company appeared at Indianapolis on Monday, February 16, and exhibited to the district court the order of the Floyd circuit court authorizing them to appear, and made a full statement of the situation in the state court, after which an extended argument, the district judge refused in any way to reconsider, modify, or set aside his order, and demanded of *the rep-[13] resentative of the trust company whether or not it would turn over the property, and of defendant and respondent whether or not he, as counsel for the trust company, would advise it to turn the property over, to Connor, as receiver. "Under these circumstances, and not otherwise, and believing that the said demand of said judge of the said United States district court was peremptory, this defendant and respondent, as counsel for the said New Albany Trust Company, stated that he would advise the said New Albany Trust Company to turn over the said property to the said Frederick D. Connor, receiver." On February 17, defendant and the vice president of the trust company left Indianapolis, and defendant supposed that it was not necessary for any order respecting the hearing in the district court February 16 and 17 to be entered, and that no order would be entered. But an order was entered, a fact which he learned several days thereafter.

Defendant, further answering, alleged that on February 19 defendant and the trust company, receiver, appeared before the judge of the Floyd circuit court, in chambers, and defendant, as attorney for the trust company, then filed before the judge of that court a written petition and motion, setting forth what had passed at Indianapolis, in view of which he moved to strike out and expunge from the files the petition and order of February 14, 1903. This was particularly desired, because the district judge seemed to regard the petition and order as offensive. That defendant was in every way in good faith endeavoring to carry out the understanding at Indianapolis, and advised, and at no time gave any contrary advice, the trust company to turn over to Connor, receiver, all the property of the Zier company. The response and plea further averred that Watts was much embarrassed by the condition of affairs, and felt that the judge of the Floyd circuit court might misconstrue his actions in the premises, and, before going to New Albany on February 19, 1903, requested his friend, D. A. Sachs, a lawyer residing in Louisville, Kentucky, to accompany him for the purpose of explaining his action to the judge of the Floyd circuit court, and this Sachs accordingly did. But the judge of that court was not satisfied, and entered a [14] rule on *Watts to show cause "why he should not be punished for contempt."

On the same day the trust company filed its separate petition, praying for leave to turn over the property, and for its discharge in the premises on the approval of its accounts. But the judge cited it also to show cause.

The pleading further set forth the communication of the trust company to Connor, receiver, and the delivery of the property to him; and that on February 20 defendant appeared before the judge of the Floyd circuit court in obedience to his request. On that day an order was entered removing the trust company as receiver, and appointing Charles D. Kelso as receiver in its stead, and authorizing him to demand of Connor the property of Zier & Company. Before that order was entered the trust company had, in fact, under the advice of Watts, turned over the property to Connor, and the response and plea asserted that defendant did not advise, aid, connive at, or abet the entry of said order, and had nothing whatsoever to do with it.

The response and plea further set forth the report of Kelso, and the entry of an order directing the issue of a summary writ to the sheriff of Floyd county, and stated: "This defendant and respondent did not procure the entry of said order, or connive at its entry, or advise its entry, and did not know of its entry until after it had been entered. He had no connection whatever with it."

Defendant and respondent reiterated that all of his acts and doings and advice after his appearance at Indianapolis were with the single purpose of having the trust company turn over all the property and effects to the receiver of the district court, and that he did nothing and said nothing and advised nothing which would in any way delay the execution of that purpose; that he did nothing and said nothing with reference to the removal of the trust company or the removal of Kelso, and in no way did he advise anything looking to the retaking of said property from the hands of said Connor, receiver, and with all these matters he had nothing to do. Transcripts of the records were attached as exhibits.

*By his separate response and plea D. A. [15] Sachs denied the commission of any act, or the advising or consenting to the commission of any act, in disobedience of any order of the court in the bankruptcy case, or that he had aided, abetted, or advised the taking from the receiver the property of Zier & Company, or in any way disobeyed or disregarded, or aided or abetted the disregarding of, the orders or decrees of the district court, or been guilty of any contempt in the case. He said that he first heard of the proceedings on February 18 from Mr. Watts, and appeared before the state judge and attempted to explain the matter simply as his friend. He at no time advised disobedience or disregard of the orders of the district court or the taking of the property from Connor, but, on the contrary, advised against that course; and "that all he did in this matter was without fee or any consideration whatever except through friendship to said Watts." He then believed, and is still of the opinion, that the receiver of the Floyd circuit court had the rightful possession of the property, and that the district court did not have the right or authority to interfere therewith in the summary way pursued herein. The response then set forth the various proceedings in both courts, and respondent asserted that on Monday, February 23, 1903, he learned for the first time of the making of the order in the district court dated February 17. He denied that he had anything to do with the proceedings other than the action he took with a view of extricating Mr. Watts from the complications, and "with a view of avoiding any action that might be justly construed as a violation of the orders of either court." He denied knowledge of a petition or order for the property to be seized, and had nothing whatever to do in any way with the procuring of execution of such an order, or with the forcible taking of the property or any part thereof from the receiver.

The responses and pleas having been traversed, evidence, documentary and oral, was adduced at considerable length, and on March 14, 1903, the district court found Watts and Sachs each guilty of contempt as charged in the information and rules, and sentenced each of them to confinement in the jail of Marion county for sixty days and to pay costs.

*In the meantime the property had been [16] restored to Connor, receiver, the $9,600 had been paid over to him, and Zier & Company had been adjudicated bankrupt.

Petitions by Watts and Sachs for writs of habeas corpus and of certiorari, setting forth the foregoing matters and things, were thereupon presented to this court, leave given to file them, and the writs thereupon issued, and it was directed that each of the petitioners be admitted to bail on his personal recognizance in the sum of $500, to be entered into before the judge of the United States court for the district of Indiana.

Mr. David W. Fairleigh argued the cause, and, with Mr. Bernard Flexner, filed a brief for petitioner Watts:

When a person is imprisoned by a United States court for refusing to comply with an order of that court, and such order is beyond the jurisdiction or power of the court to make, the order itself is void, and the order punishing for contempt is likewise void, and this court will, on writ of habeas corpus, discharge the person so imprisoned.

Ex parte Lange, 18 Wall. 163, 21 L. ed. 872; Ex parte Rowland, 194 U. S. 604, 26 L. ed. 861; Ex parte Fisk, 113 U. S. 713, 28 L. ed. 1117, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 724; Re Ayers, 123 U. S. 443, 31 L. ed. 216, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 164; Re Lane, 135 U. S. 443, 34 L. ed. 219, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 760; Re Tyler, 149 U. S. 164, 37 L. ed. 689, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 785; Re Bonner, 151 U. S. 242, 38 L. ed. 149, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 323; Re McKenzie, 180 U. S. 536, 45 L. ed. 657, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 468.

An order of a United States district court sitting in bankruptcy, commanding its receiver to peremptorily take from the possession of a receiver of a state court property in his hands as such at the time the bankruptcy proceedings were begun, is void.

Peck v. Jenness, 7 How. 612, 12 L. ed. 841; Taylor v. Carryl, 20 How. 583, 15 L. ed. 1028; Marshall v. Knox, 16 Wall. 551, 21 L. ed. 481; Doe v. Childress, 21 Wall. 643, 22 L. ed. 549; Covell v. Heyman, 111 U. S. 182, 28 L. ed. 393, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 355; Shields v. Coleman, 157 U. S. 168, 39 L. ed. 660, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 570; Johnson v. Bishop, Woolw. 324, Fed. Cas. No. 7,373; Metcalf v. Barker, 187 U. S. 165, ante, 122, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 69; Pickens v. Roy, 187 U. S. 177, ante, 128, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 78; Louisville Trust Co. v. Comingor, 184 U. S. 18, 46 L. ed. 413, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 293; Bardes v. First Nat. Bank, 178 U. S. 524, 44 L. ed. 1175, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1000.

A receiver appointed by a court has no authority to surrender the possession of the property in his hands without authority from the court which appointed him; and the person who so acquires the possession of the property from him is in wrongful possession; and the court may issue an appropriate writ to restore the possession of the property to a custodian of the court.

Davis v. Gray, 16 Wall. 217, 21 L. ed. 452; Shields v. Coleman, 157 U. S. 168, 39 L. ed. 660, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 570; White v. Schloerb, 178 U. S. 542, 44 L. ed. 1183, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1007; Metcalf v. Barker, 187 U. S. 165, ante, 122, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 78.

Mr. W. H. H. Miller argued the cause, and, with Mr. W. M. Smith, filed a brief for petitioner Sachs:

The Floyd circuit court was in the lawful, actual possession of the property in controversy when the bankruptcy proceeding commenced.

First Nat. Bank v. United States Encaustic Tile Co. 105 Ind. 227, 4 N. E. 846; Pressley v. Lamb, 105 Ind. 171, 4 N. E. 682.

This proceeding in state court is not subject to collateral attack.

Phelps v. Mutual Reserve Fund Life Asso. 190 U. S.

50 C. C. A. 339, 112 Fed. 453; Weiss v. Guerinneau, 109 Ind. 438, 9 N. E. 399; Hollinger v. Reeme, 138 Ind. 363, 24 L. R. A. 46, 36 N. E. 1114.

The suit in the state court was not under an "insolvency law."

Mayer v. Hellman, 91 U. S. 496, 23 L. ed. 377; Carling v. Seymour Lumber Co. 51 C. C. A. 1, 113 Fed. 483.

It is idle to say that the filing of the bill and procurement of the appointment of a receiver was a fraud on the state court because preferences had been given; since, in the absence of bankruptcy proceedings, the preferences were lawful.

Sanford Fork & Tool Co. v. Howe, B. & Co. 157 U. S. 312, 39 L. ed. 713, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 621; McCormick v. Smith, 127 Ind. 230, 26 N. E. 825.

The rules of comity between the state court and the United States district court sitting in bankruptcy apply in all their breadth and force.

Peck v. Jenness, 7 How. 612, 12 L. ed. 841; Eyster v. Gaff, 91 U. S. 521, 23 L. ed. 403; Metcalf v. Barker, 187 U. S. 165, ante, 122, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 67; Carling v. Seymour Lumber Co. 51 C. C. A. 1, 113 Fed. 483.

If the possession of the state court is actual, the fact—if it be a fact—that the jurisdiction of the bankruptcy court is exclusive, does not warrant the latter court in taking the possession from the state court by summary proceedings.

Moran v. Sturges, 154 U. S. 256, 38 L. ed. 981, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1019; The Oliver Jordan, 2 Curt. 414, Fed. Cas. No. 10,503; Taylor v. Carryl, 20 How. 583, 15 L. ed. 1028; The E. L. Cain, 45 Fed. 367; The James Roy, 59 Fed. 784; Carling v. Seymour Lumber Co. 51 C. C. A. 1, 113 Fed. 483.

And the fact that the suit in the state court was not based on a valid lien is immaterial. The power of the bankruptcy court is as plenary when there are liens as when there are not.

Johnson v. Bishop, Woolw. 324, Fed. Cas. No. 7,373; Bradley v. Frost, 3 Dill. 457, Fed. Cas. No. 1,780; Re Price, 92 Fed. 987; Re Lengert Wagon Co. 110 Fed. 927; Re Lesser, 100 Fed. 433; Re Wells, 114 Fed. 222; Re Ward, 104 Fed. 985; Smith v. Belford, 45 C. C. A. 526, 106 Fed. 658; Louisville Trust Co. v. Comingor, 184 U. S. 18, 46 L. ed. 413, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 293.

For discussion of rule of comity, see—

Covell v. Heyman, 111 U. S. 176, 28 L. ed. 390, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 355.

The act of 1898 (as well as of 1867) provides for intervention by a representative of the bankruptcy court in a suit in a state court. This being done, the bankruptcy court was bound to await the decision of the state court in the ordinary way.

Peck v. Jenness, 7 How. 612, 12 L. ed. 841; Johnson v. Bishop, Woolw. 324, Fed. Cas. No. 7,373; Doe v. Childress, 21 Wall. 643, 22 L. ed. 549; Scott v. Kelly, 22 Wall. 57, 22 L. ed. 729; Mays v. Fritton, 20 Wall. 414, 22 L. ed. 389; Davis v. Friedlander, 104 U. S. 570, 26 L. ed. 818; Winchester v. Heiskell, 119 U. S. 450, 30 L. ed. 462, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 281; Adams v. Crittenden, 133 U. S. 296, sub nom. Adams v. Connor, 33 L. ed. 623, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 304; Ludeling v. Chaffe, 143 U. S. 301, 36 L. ed. 313, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 439.

The bankruptcy court never got lawful possession of the property.

Shields v. Coleman, 157 U. S. 168, 39 L. ed. 660, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 570; White v. Schloerb, 178 U. S. 542, 44 L. ed. 1183, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1007; Metcalf v. Barker, 187 U. S. 165, ante, 122, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 78; The E. L. Cain, 45 Fed. 367; The James Roy, 59 Fed. 784; Moran v. Sturges, 154 U. S. 256, 38 L. ed. 981, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1019.

The amendment to the bankrupt act of February 5, 1903, making a receivership an act of bankruptcy, is not retroactive so as to apply to this case.

Chew Heong v. United States, 112 U. S. 536, 28 L. ed. 770, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255; Endlich, Interpretation of Statutes, 276; McEwen v. Den, 24 How. 245, 16 L. ed. 673.

If the amendment is not retroactive, this receivership was not an act of bankruptcy.

Re Wilmington Hosiery Co. 120 Fed. 180.

Solicitor General Hoyt argued the cause and filed a brief for respondents:

District courts of the United States have jurisdiction in cases of this kind.

Re Merchants' Ins. Co. 3 Biss. 162, Fed. Cas. No. 9,441; Re Lady Bryan Min. Co. 6 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 252, Fed. Cas. No. 7,980; Watson v. Citizens' Sav. Bank, 2 Hughes, 200, Fed. Cas. No. 17,279; Re Gutwillig, 90 Fed. 475; Re Bruss-Ritter Co. 90 Fed. 651; Re Rouse, H. & Co. 33 C. C. A. 356, 63 U. S. App. 570, 91 Fed. 96; Lea v. George M. West Co. 91 Fed. 237; Re Smith, 92 Fed. 135; Re John A. Etheridge Furniture Co. 92 Fed. 329; Re Richard, 94 Fed. 633; Re Lengert Wagon Co. 110 Fed. 927; Re Storck Lumber Co. 114 Fed. 360; Parmenter Mfg. Co. v. Hamilton, 172 Mass. 178, 51 N. E. 529; Harbaugh v. Costello, 184 Ill. 110, 56 N. E. 363.

Although the property referred to in this case was not summarily taken from the receiver of the state court, but was voluntarily surrendered, the authority of the district court to take summary action in a proper case can hardly be questioned.

Re Lengert Wagon Co. 110 Fed. 927; Clarke v. Larremore, 188 U. S. 486, ante, 555, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 363; Bryan v. Bernheimer, 181 U. S. 189, 45 L. ed. 815, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 557; Mueller v. Nugent, 184 U. S. 1, 46 L. ed. 405, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 269.

Acts similar to those committed by petitioners have been held to constitute contempt in the following cases:

Re Vogel, 2 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 427; Fed. Cas. No. 16,983; Re Ulrich, 6 Ben. 483, Fed. Cas. No. 14,328; Re Litchfield, 13 Fed. 866; Ex parte Davis, 112 Fed. 139; Royal Trust Co. v. Washburn, B. & I. River R. Co. 113 Fed. 531; Anderson v. Comptois, 48 C. C. A. 1, 109 Fed. 971.

The government of the United States may, by means of physical force exercised through its official agents, execute on every foot of American soil the powers and functions that belong to it.

Ex parte Siebold, 100 U. S. 395, 25 L. ed. 726.

Mr. George H. Hester by special leave argued the cause, and, with Mr. William Wilhartz, filed a brief for interested parties:

All state laws for the administration of insolvents' estates, and all actions and proceedings thereunder, are suspended by the enactment of the general bankruptcy law.

Re Smith, 92 Fed. 135; Tua v. Carriere, 117 U. S. 201, 29 L. ed. 855, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 565; Re Bruss-Ritter Co. 90 Fed. 651; Lea v. George M. West Co. 91 Fed. 237; Re Rouse, H. & Co. 33 C. C. A. 356, 63 U. S. App. 570, 91 Fed. 96; Lothrop v. Highland Foundry Co. 128 Mass. 120; Parmenter Mfg. Co. v. Hamilton, 172 Mass. 178, 51 N. E. 529; Harbaugh v. Costello, 184 Ill. 110, 56 N. E. 363; Re Gutwillig, 90 Fed. 475.

The jurisdiction of the Federal courts over the administration of insolvent estates is exclusive and supreme.

Re Merchants' Ins. Co. 3 Biss. 162, Fed. Cas. No. 9,441; Re Smith, 92 Fed. 135; Harbaugh v. Costello, 184 Ill. 110, 56 N. E. 363; Watson v. Citizens' Sav. Bank, 2 Hughes, 200, Fed. Cas. No. 17,279.

The jurisdiction of the bankruptcy court being supreme, it may properly, by summary process, obtain possession of property in the hands of an assignee or other officer of a state court.

Re John A. Etheridge Furniture Co. 92 Fed. 329; White v. Schloerb, 178 U. S. 542, 44 L. ed. 1183, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1007; Bryan v. Bernheimer, 181 U. S. 188, 45 L. ed. 814, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 557; Mueller v. Nugent, 184 U. S. 1, 46 L. ed. 405, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 269; Re Tunc, 115 Fed. 906; Re Green Pond R. Co. 13 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 118, Fed. Cas. No. 5,786; Re Safe Deposit & Sav. Inst. 7 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 392, Fed. Cas. No. 12,211; Re Washington Marine Ins. Co. 2 Ben. 292, Fed. Cas. No. 17,246; Re Merchants' Ins. Co. 3 Biss. 162, Fed. Cas. No. 9,441; Re National L. Ins. Co. 6 Biss. 35, Fed. Cas. No. 10,046; Re Whipple, 6 Biss. 516, Fed. Cas. No. 17,512; Re Smith, 92 Fed. 135; Clarke v. Larremore, 188 U. S. 486, ante, 555, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 363.

Summary proceedings are also authorized to take property from the hands of a receiver of a state court.

Re Merchants' Ins. Co. 3 Biss. 162, Fed. Cas. No. 9,441; Re Lengert Wagon Co. 110 Fed. 927; Re Storck Lumber Co. 114 Fed. 360; Re Bruss-Ritter Co. 90 Fed. 651; Platt v. Archer, 9 Blatchf. 559, Fed. Cas. No. 11,213.

The proceeding in the state court for the appointment of a receiver of M. Zier & Co. was, in substance, a voluntary assignment or bankruptcy proceeding. Every asset of the insolvent was placed by it in the hands of the receiver selected by it. The purpose was the distribution of these assets among all its creditors.

Re John A. Etheridge Furniture Co. 92 Fed. 329; Re Storck Lumber Co. 114 Fed. 360.

If a receiver is appointed by a Federal court, and actually takes possession of the property, possession will not be yielded to a receiver subsequently appointed by a state court, although the suit in the state court was commenced before that in the Federal court.

East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. v. Atlanta & F. R. Co. 15 L. R. A. 109, 49 Fed. 608; Central Trust Co. v. Chattanooga, R. & C. R. Co. 62 Fed. 950.

Where a state court has no jurisdiction over property, and loses the actual possession thereof to the Federal court, there remains no possession by the state court, either actual or constructive.

The Willamette Valley, 62 Fed. 293, 13 C. C. A. 635, 29 U. S. App. 447, 66 Fed. 565; Moran v. Sturges, 154 U. S. 256, 38 L. ed. 981, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1019.

Where there is neither actual nor constructive possession, there can be no obstacle to proceeding summarily; and an action thus taken cannot be invalidated by relation.

Moran v. Sturges, 154 U. S. 256, 38 L. ed. 981, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1019.

The bankruptcy court having been given voluntary and peaceable possession, the question of comity between the courts is not involved, except as it applies to the action of the state court in retaking the property. It is a question of the supremacy of the Constitution and laws of the United States.

Re Tune, 115 Fed. 906; East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. v. Atlanta & F. R. Co. 15 L. R. A. 109, 49 Fed. 608; Central Trust Co. v. Chattanooga, R. & C. R. Co. 62 Fed. 950.

Where property is in the custody of the bankruptcy court, no other court, and no person acting under any process from any other court, can, without the permission of the bankruptcy court, interfere with it; and to so interfere is a contempt of the bankruptcy court.

Re Vogel, 7 Blatchf. 18, Fed. Cas. No. 16,982; Moran v. Sturges, 154 U. S. 256, 38 L. ed. 981, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1019; Freeman v. Howe, 24 How. 450, 16 L. ed. 749.

Mr. Chief Justice Fuller delivered the opinion of the court:

In this matter writs of certiorari as well as of habeas corpus were issued, and the record returned to us includes the evidence below, which was duly preserved by bill of exceptions. The district court held that a flagrant contempt of the court in bankruptcy was committed on the 20th of February by the taking the property of Zier & Company out of the possession of its receiver, in whose hands, in the view of the court, it had been voluntarily placed; and that defendants Watts and Sachs were so connected with that transaction as to subject them to like condemnation.

The New Albany Trust Company was appointed receiver of the property of Zier & Company under § 1245 of the Revised Statutes of Indiana providing that this might be done, "when a corporation has been dissolved, or is insolvent, or is in imminent danger of insolvency, or has forfeited its corporate rights;" and it was directed to complete unfinished contracts, but to make no new ones. The winding up of the business was contemplated and entered upon. Whether the transfers of $3,100 and $9,600 could have been overhauled in that suit we need not inquire, as they were undoubtedly acts of bankruptcy, and as such justified the *ap-[27] plication to the bankruptcy court. And the operation of the bankruptcy laws of the United States cannot be defeated by insolvent commercial corporations applying to be wound up under state statutes. The bankruptcy law is paramount, and the jurisdiction of the Federal courts in bankruptcy, when properly invoked, in the administration of the affairs of insolvent persons and corporations, is essentially exclusive. Necessarily, when like proceedings in the state courts are determined by the commencement of proceedings in bankruptcy, care has to be taken to avoid collision in respect of property in possession of the state courts. Such cases are not cases of adverse possession, or of possession in enforcement of pre-existing liens, or in aid of the bankruptcy proceedings. The general rule as between courts of concurrent jurisdiction is that property already in possession of the receiver of one court cannot rightfully be taken from him without the court's consent, by the receiver of another court appointed in a subsequent suit; but that rule can have only a qualified application where winding-up proceedings are superseded by those in bankruptcy as to which the jurisdiction is not concurrent. Still it obtains as a rule of comity, and accordingly the receiver of the district court brought his appointment to the knowledge of the Floyd circuit court and requested the delivery of the assets.

We think there can be no reasonable doubt that the judge of the Floyd circuit court and Messrs. Watts and Sachs entertained the conviction in good faith that the custody of the state court could not be lawfully interfered with by the bankruptcy court by summary proceedings. Their view was that the jurisdiction of the state court having attached, that court was, in all circumstances, entitled to exercise it until voluntarily surrendered. But if the state court had taken into consideration that Zier & Company had committed acts of bankruptcy in the matter of preferential transfers; that the amendatory bankruptcy act of February 5, 1903, provided that acts of bankruptcy would exist if a person "being insolvent, applied for a receiver or trustee for his property, or because of insolvency a receiver or trustee has been put in charge of his property under the laws of a state, of a territory, or of the *United States;" and that the in-[28] tent of the bankruptcy law is to place the administration of affairs of insolvents exclusively under the jurisdiction of the bankruptcy courts, it appears to us that, instead of continuing the application of the Federal receiver for three weeks, the court should have directed the surrender of the property to him at once, or at least after the report of its own receiver on its return from Indianapolis.

The state court, however, did not approve of the assurance given by its receiver at Indianapolis, and refused to allow the surrender of possession, so that the delivery to Connor by the trust company, presently made, was unauthorized by the court, whose receiver and officer the trust company was.

We are not now dealing with the right of the district court to take possession in invitum, but with the voluntary delivery of property by the officer of a court, without the court's consent, and, therefore, unlawful. We say, "voluntary," for we decline to entertain the suggestion that the district court intimidated the trust company and Watts, or that members of the bar can be intimidated in the discharge of their duty.

It is true that the state court had authorized the trust company and Mr. Watts to appear at Indianapolis and explain the situation, but in doing so it was attempted to limit the operation of the order to a special appearance in the bankruptcy court, while by the order continuing the Federal receiver's application it was attempted to make him a party to the proceedings in the state court and bound by them. Obviously the state court did not wish its receiver to be bound by going before the district court, and did wish the receiver of the district court to be bound by his appearance in the state court.

On the other hand, the district court made an order on February 17, which recited the presence of the trust company and of Watts, the voluntary offer of the trust company, with the approval of Watts, in open court, to surrender possession, and then directed Connor to present a certified copy of the order of February 11 to the trust company, and thereupon to take possession. Mr. Watts had no notice or knowledge of this order until February 23, and Sachs first saw it on that day, though he was informed of its existence February 22.

[29] *The situation February 19 was this: The trust company and Watts were under rules to show cause for disregard of the orders of the state court. One had done, and the other had advised the doing, that which the state court had not consented to, and it was after it had signified its disapproval that the district court receiver obtained possession without such consent. The state court thereupon concluded that it was entitled to restore the status quo, and accordingly it entered the orders of February 20, under which Connor was dispossessed.

This was a reassertion of the jurisdiction which the state court insisted it was entitled to exercise, that it had not voluntarily parted with, or been lawfully deprived of.

The petitioners were sentenced to imprisonment for contempt because of their alleged participation in this action of the state court.

It is the action of the state court that was complained of, and the essence of the alleged contempt was that, assuming that action was taken pursuant to the advice of these attorneys, they were liable to condemnation for giving such advice. In the ordinary case of advice to clients, if an attorney acts in good faith and in the honest belief that his advice is well founded and in the just interests of his client, he cannot be held liable for error in judgment. The preservation of the independence of the bar is too vital to the due administration of justice to allow of the application of any other general rule.

But here we do not have the ordinary case of advice to clients, but the case of judicial action alleged to have been induced by the advice complained of. The theory of the condemnation is that of conspiracy between the state court and the attorneys to obstruct the administration of justice and to bring the authority of the United States court into contempt.

We are of opinion that such charges ought never to be indulged in, and that the ultimate consequences of attacks of such a character by the courts of one government on the courts of another are too serious to allow them to be made.

The state court was a court of original general jurisdiction. On the face of its record its jurisdiction had been properly invoked, and been properly exercised, and was not open to collateral *attack. Assuming[30] that the proceedings in bankruptcy superseded further proceedings in the state court, and that nothing remained for the latter but to direct the surrender of the assets and the winding up of the accounts, the district court was of opinion that it might by summary proceedings take the assets out of the possession of the state court. But Connor's possession was not acquired in that way. The contention is that the property was given up voluntarily by the state court receiver, and not in obedience to any order entered on summary proceedings to which that receiver was a party. And the difficulty is that the receiver had no power to make the surrender when it was made. It was the representative of the state court. The property in its hands was property in custodia legis, and it had only such authority as was given to it by the court, and could not exceed the limits prescribed by the court. Without doubt the receiver agreed to give up the property in its hands to the receiver of the court in bankruptcy on the supposition that the state court would assent to its doing so. But the state court took a different view, and therefore the possession of Connor was from its standpoint a wrongful possession.

In order to the adequate enforcement of the provisions of the bankruptcy law, it is necessary that the powers of courts in bankruptcy should be, as they are, most comprehensive.

Section 720 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 581) provides: "The writ of injunction shall not be granted by any court of the United States to stay proceedings in any court of a state, except in cases where such injunction may be authorized by any law relating to proceedings in bankruptcy."

By § 2 of the bankruptcy act of 1898 (30 Stat. at L. 545, chap. 541, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3421) the bankruptcy courts are empowered to "(3) appoint receivers or the marshals, upon application of parties in interest, in case the courts shall find it absolutely necessary, for the preservation of estates, to take charge of the property of bankrupts after the filing of the petition and until it is dismissed or the trustee is qualified;" . . . "(13) enforce obedience by bankrupts, officers, and other persons to all lawful orders, by fine or imprisonment or fine and imprisonment;" . . . "(15) [31] make such orders, *issue such process, and enter such judgments in addition to those specifically provided for as may be necessary for the enforcement of the provisions of this act."

The twelfth general order in bankruptcy provides: "3. Applications . . . for an injunction to stay proceedings of a court or officer of the United States or of a state shall be heard and decided by the judge."

But no writ of injunction as such was granted in this case. The order of February 11, for the appointment of a receiver, provided that the trust company should deliver up the property to the Federal receiver, and should refrain from interfering with his possession and control of the same. That order was entered on the application of the Inland Steel Company, which had appeared in the state court at the creditors' meeting of January 24, and had interposed no objection to the order then entered for the completion of pending contracts and the running of the plant for that purpose. It was one of the contentions in support of the jurisdiction of the state court that the Inland Steel Company was thereby estopped from resorting to the bankruptcy court and obtaining the appointment of a receiver there. In Simonsen v. Sinsheimer, 37 C. C. A. 337, 95 Fed. 948, it was held by the circuit court of appeals for the sixth circuit, in a careful opinion by Taft, J., that a creditor might be estopped from filing a petition in involuntary bankruptcy, in the circumstances therein detailed, and Re Curtis, 91 Fed. 737, and 36 C. C. A. 430, 94 Fed. 630, in which a different conclusion was reached, was distinguished. We express no opinion on the matter, but it should be noted, in passing, as one of the elements of controversy entering into the views of counsel in the state court.

The completion of contracts by the state receiver and the procuring of materials therefor had been authorized at the creditors' meeting, in which the petitioning creditor participated, and the work had been entered upon, and it is possible that a state of facts might have existed which would involve the application of the doctrine of estoppel to some extent.

We do not understand it to be contended that the passage of the bankruptcy act in [32] itself suspended the statute of Indiana *in relation to the appointment of receivers, but only that when the proceedings for such appointment took the form, as they did here, of winding up the affairs of the insolvent corporation, the proceedings in bankruptcy displaced those in the state court and terminated the jurisdiction of the latter. But the acceptance of that view does not necessarily involve the concession that these attorneys were guilty of contempt of the district court because of the action of the state court.

They could not be found guilty because they believed and declared their belief that the state court had jurisdiction, and that the district court had not. Granting that they were mistaken, it does not follow that their mistaken conviction constituted contempt. In point of fact the state court agreed with them, and would certainly not have entered orders of whose validity it entertained any reasonable doubt.

The distinction between the exclusive jurisdiction of the court in bankruptcy, proceeding, as it were in rem, to determine the status of a debtor and his assets, and the jurisdiction over property subjected to particular liens, and the like, exercised by courts of concurrent jurisdiction, was probably thought by them not to apply in the circumstances existing here, and advice based on that opinion could not in itself constitute contempt.

What evidence is there that these attorneys, or either of them, gave any advice or took any action in bad faith, not in the honest discharge of their duty as counsel, but with the deliberate intent to have the Federal court set at defiance and its orders treated with contempt?

When Mr. Watts returned from Indianapolis he had been disabused of his conviction that the district court would modify its order of February 11, when fully informed of the actual situation of the suit in the state court, and the participation in the proceedings therein of the creditor on whose application that order had been granted, and he appears to have earnestly sought to bring about delivery over of the property, the discharge of the trust company, and the withdrawal from the record of the petition and order of February 14.

But he realized, when about to appear before the state court, *that his promise to endeavor to bring about the surrender of the property had been made under the pressure of expediency, and not by reason of change of judgment, and that he had placed himself in the embarrassing position of acting without leave and in disregard of the limitations of the order he had himself framed and procured to be entered. This led him to request Mr. Sachs to accompany him as his friend to New Albany, and assist in representing his situation in as favorable a light as possible to the state court. It is not disputed that Mr. Sachs visited New Albany solely in obedience to the dictates of friendship, and that he had no connection whatsoever with the litigation.

The result was, however, and it might well have been anticipated, that it appeared to the state court that its jurisdiction had been treated cavalierly by the attorney who had represented the original complainant, who had insisted that the court retained jurisdiction, and who could not deny that he was of the same opinion still. It was then, and on the 20th, that Mr. Sachs, without the assent or connivance of Mr. Watts, unless suspicion be allowed to supply the want of proof, signed and verified a certain statement by the United States Tube Company, which represented that the trust company had "wrongfully, unlawfully, and without leave of this court" turned over the possession to Connor, and prayed for its removal, and the appointment of a successor. This statement is recited in the order of that date entered by the judge of the state court, disallowing the application of the trust company to resign because of its action "without leave or permission," and stating that "the judge of this court, upon his own motion and because of the open contempt of said receiver for the orders, judgment, and process of this court, does now order and direct that said receiver be and it is hereby removed from its trust." The trust company was ordered to account immediately for all the assets, and Kelso was appointed as receiver in succession by the judge "upon his own motion," and directed to demand possession of the property, and in case of refusal to report to the judge for further action in the premises. This was followed by the qualification of the new receiver, the demand [34] *on Connor, the report of his refusal, the issue of the writ to the sheriff, and its execution.

Mr. Sachs testified that on the 19th the judge of the circuit court insisted on retaining the property and in declining to approve of the promise Mr. Watts had made; that when it was known that the property had been delivered the judge still declined to discharge Mr. Watts; that on the forenoon of the 20th the judge announced that he had made up his mind to remove the trust company and appoint another receiver; that he, Sachs, expressed the opinion that if the judge did that the better procedure would be for the new receiver to interplead in the district court, setting up all the facts from the beginning and obtaining a determination in that court; that the judge asked Kelso to bring the facts in respect of the delivery of the plant to the official knowledge of the court, when he would remove the trust company and appoint Kelso. That in the afternoon Kelso desired him to sign the statement bringing the facts to the court's notice, which he, Kelso, objected to doing, because he was to be appointed receiver, and Sachs signed it supposing the course to be followed would be an application to the district court in the nature of an interpleader; that he did not know what became of the paper, and did not know, until after the commencement of the pending proceedings, what order had been entered upon it; that he did not know that any proceedings were contemplated or in course of preparation or prepared with the view of retaking the property; and did not advise or assist in any such, or believe any such would be undertaken.

In seeking to extricate Mr. Watts from his anomalous position, Sachs found himself involved, by the attitude of the state court, in similar embarrassment, for the state court adhered to its views as to jurisdiction, and insisted that it had never voluntarily yielded the position it occupied, which afforded the basis for testing the question. It does not seem to have occurred to Sachs that the mere effort to get an issue which could be transmitted to the district court for determination subject to petition for review or such other appellate remedy as the bankruptcy act provided, could be regarded as *con- [35] tempt of that court, and want of intention to commit contempt is entitled to great weight in such circumstances.

There is some conflict of evidence as to Sachs's participation by way of suggestion in the preparation of papers on the 20th, or knowledge of the preparation of the final order and writ, but, without attempting to review the evidence and pass upon its weight, we find nothing in this conflict to justify the conclusion of an intention to condemn.

State courts are entitled to the assistance of the gentlemen of the bar in the maintenance of their dignity and jurisdiction, and the fearless discharge of their duty by the latter should not be shaken by liability to punishment for mere errors of judgment in rendering such assistance.

The presumption on the verified response and plea of Sachs, which was sustained by his testimony, was that he had not been in any way a party to the dispossession of Connor, and had not advised it or expected it; that he not only had not intended any contempt, but had committed none. And as the record of the state court showed that the orders were entered by the judge of that court "upon his own motion," that presumption could not be overthrown without collaterally impeaching the record, and that we think was inadmissible.

It has been already assumed that the bankruptcy proceedings operated to suspend the further administration of the insolvent's estate in the state court, but it remained for the state court to transfer the assets, settle the accounts of its receiver and close its connection with the matter. Errors, if any, committed in so doing could be rectified in due course and in the designated way.

We cannot but express our regret at the unfortunate collision between the two courts, and the belief that the considerate observance of the rule of comity is adequate to avert such occurrences.

We are of opinion that there was no legal evidence to sustain these convictions for contempt, and the order in each case must be,— Petitioner discharged.

*Mr. Justice Harlan, concurring: [36]

I concur in that part of the opinion of the court which shows that there was no evidence whatever upon which to base a judgment for contempt against Watts and Sachs, or either of them. That view of the evidence is sufficient to dispose of the case without reference to any other question arising on the record. My concurrence in the judgment discharging the petitioners is solely on the ground just stated.

W. C. O'NEAL, Plff. in Err.,
v.

UNITED STATES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 36-38.)

Error to district court—when jurisdiction in issue.

A judgment of the district court of the United States imposing imprisonment for contempt cannot be reviewed in the Supreme Court of the United States on writ of error to that court, on the theory that the case is one "in which the jurisdiction of the court is in issue" within the meaning of the act of March 3, 1891, § 5 (26 Stat. at L. 826, chap. 517, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 549), where jurisdiction over the person and subject-matter was not challenged, and the question asserted in the certificate of the lower court was whether it had jurisdiction to try and punish the defendant for contempt upon the facts and for the causes stated.

[No. 534.]

Submitted May 4, 1903. Decided June 1, 1903.

IN ERROR to the District Court of the United States for the Northern District of Florida to review a judgment of imprisonment in contempt proceedings for an assault on a trustee in bankruptcy. Dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. W. A. Blount submitted the cause for plaintiff in error:

There is no connection between the exercise of its ordinary appellate jurisdiction by this court and its jurisdiction to review special cases under acts of Congress so permitting.

Nishimura Ekin v. United States, 142 U. S. 651, 35 L. ed. 1146, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 336; Re Lennon, 150 U. S. 393, 37 L. ed. 1121, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 123; Twitchell v. Pennsylvania, 7 Wall. 321, 19 L. ed. 223; Tinsley v. Anderson, 171 U. S. 105, 32 L. ed. 96, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 805; Dakota Bldg. & L. Asso. v. Price, 169 U. S. 45, 42 L. ed. 655, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 251; Vance v. W. A. Vandercook Co. 170 U. S. 468, 42 L. ed. 1111, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 645; Powers v. Chesapeake & O. R. Co. 169 U. S. 92, 42 L. ed. 673, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 264; Blackburn v. Portland Gold Min. Co. 175 U. S. 574, 44 L. ed. 278, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 222.

A contempt proceeding is a cause.

Lamonte v. Ward, 36 Wis. 558; Erwin v. United States, 37 Fed. 479; Goodrich v. United States, 42 Fed. 392; Taylor v. United States, 45 Fed. 531; McCullough v. Large, 20 Fed. 309.

Proceedings, analogous in that they are not ordinary suits nor cases at law or equity, are held to be cases.

Ex parte Milligan, 4 Wall. 2, 18 L. ed. 281; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Brimson, 154 U. S. 447, 38 L. ed. 1047, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 545, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1125; Oliver v. Martin, 36 Ark. 139; Kendall v. United States, 12 Pet. 524, 9 L. ed. 1181; Re Oregon Bulletin Printing & Pub. Co. 3 Sawy. 529; Fong Yue Ting v. United States, 149 U. S. 728, 37 L. ed. 918, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1016; Holmes v. Jennison, 14 Pet. 540, 10 L. ed. 579; Weston v. Charleston, 2 Pet. 449, 7 L. ed. 481; Kohl v. United States, 91 U. S. 367, 23 L. ed. 449.

These decided cases are in line with judicial definitions of a case or suit.

Blyew v. United States, 13 Wall. 581, 20 L. ed. 638; Weston v. Charleston, 2 Pet. 464, 7 L. ed. 486; Smith v. Adams, 130 U. S. 173, 32 L. ed. 897, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 566; Osborn v. Bank of United States, 9 Wheat. 738, 6 L. ed. 204; Kundolf v. Thalheimer, 12 N. Y. 596; Fong Yue Ting v. United States, 149 U. S. 728, 37 L. ed. 918, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1016; Home Ins. Co. v. North Western Packing Co. 32 Iowa, 236, 7 Am. Rep. 183.

The words "case" and "cause" are constantly used as synonymous in statutes and judicial decisions, each meaning a proceeding in a court, a suit, "or action."

Blyew v. United States, 13 Wall. 581, 20 L. ed. 638; Kendall v. United States, 12 Pet. 645, 9 L. ed. 1229.

The words of the act of Congress, being as explicit as language can furnish, must comprehend every case not completely excepted from them.

Young v. Bank of Alexandria, 4 Cranch, 384, 2 L. ed. 655; Carter v. Cutting, 8 Cranch, 251, 3 L. ed. 553; Ormsby v. Webb, 134 U. S. 47, 33 L. ed. 805, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 478.

The statute creates no new jurisdiction in this court, but merely changes the form of resort here, for questions of jurisdiction in the court below in contempt cases have always been reviewable here by habeas corpus and are reviewable by certiorari.

Re Chetwood, 165 U. S. 462, 41 L. ed. 788, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 385.

Mr. Benjamin C. Tunison submitted the cause for defendant in error:

At common law contempt proceedings could not be reviewed by writ of error.

Chambers's Case, Cro. Car. 168; Crosby's Case, 3 Wils. 188.

The Federal courts lay down the rule broadly and stringently, that neither appeal nor writ of error lies from adjudications in contempt.

Ex parte Kearney, 7 Wheat. 38, 5 L. ed. 391; New Orleans v. New York Mail S. S. Co. 20 Wall. 387, 22 L. ed. 354; Ex parte Lange, 18 Wall. 163, 21 L. ed. 872; Hayes v. Fischer, 102 U. S. 121, 26 L. ed. 95; Ex parte Rowland, 104 U. S. 604, 26 L. ed. 861; Ex parte Fisk, 113 U. S. 713, 28 L. ed. 1117, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 724; Re Tyler, 149 U. S. 164, NOTE.—On direct review of district and circuit court judgments in the Supreme Court of the United States—see note to Gwin v. United States, 46 L. ed. U. S. 741.

37 L. ed. 689, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 785; Re Debs, 158 U. S. 573, 39 L. ed. 1094, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 900; Re Chetwood, 165 U. S. 462, 41 L. ed. 788, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 385; Re McKenzie, 180 U. S. 536, 45 L. ed. 657, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 468; Tinsley v. Anderson, 171 U. S. 103, 43 L. ed. 96, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 805.

The authority to decide a case at all, and not the decision rendered therein, is what creates the jurisdiction, and when there is jurisdiction of the person and subject-matter, the decision of all other questions arising in the case is but an exercise of that jurisdiction—matters of regularity only, and not of jurisdiction.

New Lamp Chimney Co. v. Ansonia Brass & Copper Co. 91 U. S. 660, 23 L. ed. 338.

The statute confers upon this court appellate jurisdiction when the jurisdiction, and not when the exercise of jurisdiction, is in issue. Where the court below has authority to hear and determine, as in the case at bar, its jurisdiction would not be in issue within the meaning of this statute.

Smith v. McKay, 161 U. S. 355, 40 L. ed. 731, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 490; The Resolute, 168 U. S. 437, 42 L. ed. 533, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 112; Dakota Bldg. & L. Asso. v. Price, 169 U. S. 45, 42 L. ed. 655, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 251; Shepard v. Adams, 168 U. S. 618, 42 L. ed. 602, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 214; Powers v. Chesapeake & O. R. Co. 169 U. S. 92, 42 L. ed. 673, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 264; World's Columbian Exposition v. United States, 6 C. C. A. 58, 18 U. S. App. 42, 56 Fed. 666.

Mr. Chief Justice Fuller delivered the opinion of the court:

[37] This was a proceeding in the district court of the United States for the southern district of Florida, commenced by the *filing of an affidavit of Greenhut, a trustee in bankruptcy, charging W. C. O'Neal with contempt of court in committing an assault upon him.

A rule to show cause was entered and served on O'Neal, to which he filed a demurrer, assigning as grounds that the affidavit did not show that respondent had committed any offense of which the court had jurisdiction, or had done any act punishable by the court as a contempt thereof, or had committed any act of contempt against the court.

The demurrer was overruled and O'Neal answered. Hearing was had on the rule and answer, and evidence introduced on both sides, and the court found respondent guilty of the acts and things set forth in the affidavit, and that they constituted a contempt of court, and thereupon sentenced O'Neal to imprisonment in the county jail at Pensacola, Florida, for the term of sixty days.

The district court certified the question of its jurisdiction for decision, and a writ of error directly from this court was allowed on the assumption that the case came within the first of the six classes of cases enumerated in § 5 of the judiciary act of March 3, 1891. That class embraces cases "in which the jurisdiction of the court is in issue," that is, where the power of the circuit and district courts of the United States to hear and determine is denied. Smith v. McKay, 161 U. S. 355, 40 L. ed. 731, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 490; Vance v. W. A. Vandercook Co. 170 U. S. 468, 472, 42 L. ed. 1111, 1112, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 645; Mexican C. R. Co. v. Eckman, 187 U. S. 432, ante, 246, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 212.

But the question here is asserted in the certificate to be whether the district court had "jurisdiction to try and punish the said defendant for contempt thereof, upon the facts and for the causes stated in said rule and affidavit."

Jurisdiction over the person and jurisdiction over the subject-matter of contempts were not challenged. The charge was the commission of an assault on an officer of the court, for the purpose of preventing the discharge of his duties as such officer, and the contention was that on the facts no case of contempt was made out.

In other words, the contention was addressed to the merits *of the case, and not to [38] the jurisdiction of the court. An erroneous conclusion in that regard can only be reviewed on appeal or error, or in such appropriate way as may be provided. Louisville Trust Co. v. Comingor, 184 U. S. 18, 26, 46 L. ed. 413, 416, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 293; Ex parte Gordon, 104 U. S. 515, 26 L. ed. 814.

And while proceedings in contempt may be said to be sui generis, the present judgment is in effect a judgment in a criminal case, over which this court has no jurisdiction on error. Section 5, act of March 3, 1891 (26 Stat. at L. 826, chap. 517, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 549), as amended by the act of January 20, 1897 (29 Stat. at L. 492, chap. 68, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 556); Re Chetwood, 165 U. S. 443, 462, 41 L. ed. 782, 788, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 385; Tinsley v. Anderson, 171 U. S. 101, 105, 43 L. ed. 91, 96, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 805; Cary Mfg. Co. v. Acme Flexible Clasp Co. 187 U. S. 427, 428, ante, 244, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 211.

Writ of error dismissed.

WILLIAM K. TUBMAN, Plff. in Err.,
v.

BALTIMORE & OHIO RAILROAD COMPANY, Baltimore & Potomac Railroad Company, Pennsylvania Railroad Company, Washington, Ohio, & Western Railroad Company, Chesapeake & Ohio Railway Company, Norfolk & Western Railroad Company, and Virginia Midland Railway Company.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 38-40.)

Judgments — motion to vacate — when too late — appeal — error in declining jurisdiction — when not ground for reversal.

1. A judgment dismissing a case for want of prosecution cannot be set aside on application made after the close of the term at which it is entered, where no showing of fraud or surprise is made.
2. Error, if any, committed by a court in de-declining jurisdiction of an appeal from an order overruling a motion to vacate a judgment dismissing the case for want of prosecution does not require reversal or modification in the Supreme Court of the United States, where, if the court had entertained jurisdiction, it must have affirmed the order appealed from.

[No. 574.]

Submitted May 18, 1903. Decided June 1, 1903.

IN ERROR to the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia to review a judgment which dismissed an appeal from an order of the Supreme Court of that District denying a motion to set aside a judgment dismissing the case for want of prosecution. Affirmed.

See same case below, 20 App. D. C. 541.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. W. A. Meloy submitted the cause for plaintiff in error. Mr. Henry D. Martin was with him on the brief:

The summary motion was a substitute for the writ of error coram vobis, or coram nobis, to correct error of fact.

Pickett v. Legerwood, 7 Pet. 147, 8 L. ed. 639; Sibbald v. United States, 12 Pet. 492, 9 L. ed. 1169; Bronson v. Schulten, 104 U. S. 410, 26 L. ed. 797; Phillips v. Negley, 117 U. S. 678, 29 L. ed. 1116, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 901; Hickman v. Ft. Scott, 141 U. S. 415, 35 L. ed. 775, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 9; District of Columbia v. Humphries, 12 App. D. C. 128; Queen v. O'Connell, 7 Ir. Law Rep. 261; State v. Calhoun, 50 Kan. 523, 18 L. R. A. 838, 32 Pac. 38.

A court has power to reinstate a cause after the term when dismissed by mistake.

The Palmyra, 12 Wheat. 10, 6 L. ed. 534; quoted in Sibbald v. United States, 12 Pet. 492, 9 L. ed. 1169, and in Phillips v. Negley, 117 U. S. 674, 29 L. ed. 1015, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 901; Ex parte Crenshaw, 15 Pet. 119, 10 L. ed. 682.

In case of fraud the supreme court will reverse its decision after the expiration of the term.

United States v. Gomez, 23 How. 326, 16 L. ed. 552, 1 Wall. 690, 17 L. ed. 677.

The Chief Justice overruled the motion. His decision on the facts was error of law, determined the cause, was final, and appealable.

Michigan Ins. Co. v. Whittemore, 12 Mich. 311; Wood v. Colwell, 34 Pa. 92; Holford v. Alexander, 12 Ala. 280, 46 Am. Dec. 253; Merrick v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 33 Md. 487; Queen v. O'Connell, 7 Ir. Law Rep. 261; State v. Calhoun, 50 Kan. 523, 18 L. R. A. 838, 32 Pac. 38.

Messrs. Frederic D. McKenney and George E. Hamilton submitted the cause for defendants in error:

The order of August 6, 1901, is not an appealable order.

Babbington v. Washington Brewery Co. 13 App. D. C. 527; Harman v. Lawler, 32 Tex. 590; Mulhall v. Keenan, 18 Wall. 342, 21 L. ed. 808; Fishburn v. Chicago, M. & St. 190 U. S.

P. R. Co. 137 U. S. 60, 34 L. ed. 585, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 8.

*THE CHIEF JUSTICE: The declaration in [39] this action was filed March 26, 1895, and several demurrers were interposed thereto the following June. August 6, 1901, the case was dismissed for want of prosecution. After the term at which that judgment was entered had expired, and on May 19, 1902, plaintiff made a motion to set it aside, and the motion was denied. From the order denying the motion, plaintiff took an appeal to the court of appeals of the District of Columbia, which was dismissed, and this writ of error then allowed. The case comes before us on a motion to dismiss or affirm. The appeal to the court of appeals was dismissed on the ground that the order overruling the motion to vacate the judgment of dismissal was not the subject of appeal, and we think there was color for the motion here to dismiss the writ of error. But in the view we take, we must decline to sustain that motion, and will dispose of the case on the motion to affirm.

In its opinion the court of appeals said, among other things, that the "motion to vacate was not made until after the lapse of more than two terms of the court in which the original judgment was entered. It is not shown that there was any fraud or surprise in procuring the judgment of dismissal of the action by the court." The court of appeals and the supreme court of the District obviously agreed in this finding, and a careful examination of the record affords no basis for questioning the conclusion, if it were permissible for us to do so. The general rule is that a final judgment cannot be set aside on application made after the close of the term at which it was entered, by the court which rendered it, because the case has passed beyond the control of the court. Bronson v. Schulten, 104 U. S. 410, 415, 26 L. ed. 797, 799; Phillips v. Negley, 117 U. S. 665, 29 L. ed. 1013, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 901.

In the latter case, jurisdiction was taken on error to review a final order setting aside a judgment on motion made at a subsequent term. And in Hume v. Bowic, 148 U. S. 245, 37 L. ed. 438, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 582, Phillips v. Negley was considered, and the distinction between a judgment ordering a new trial when the court has jurisdiction to make such an order, and a judgment where such jurisdiction does not exist, was pointed out. See Macfarland v. Brown, 187 U. S. 239, 243, ante, 159, 161, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 105.

*In the present case, the motion to set aside [40] was denied, not granted, and, as it was made after the lapse of the term, and came within no exception, the general rule was applicable. If, then, the court of appeals had entertained jurisdiction, the result would have been an affirmance; and even if the court erred in declining jurisdiction, the difference between dismissing the appeal and affirming the order does not, in the circumstances, require reversal or modification.

Judgment affirmed.

WHITAKER WRIGHT, Appt.,

v.

WILLIAM HENKEL, United States Marshal for the Southern District of New York, et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 40-63.)

Foreign extradition—what acts are made criminal by the laws of both countries—bail—when refusal not error—effect on appeal of pendency of second complaint.

1. Absolute identity of statutes in Great Britain and the United States defining the offense of fraud by a corporate director is not necessary to make such offense "criminal by the laws of both countries," within the meaning of the provisions of the treaty with Great Britain of 1889, art. 1 (26 Stat. at L. 1508), defining extraditable crimes; it is sufficient if the essential character of the transaction is the same and is made criminal by both statutes.
2. A fugitive from the justice of Great Britain, charged with the commission of fraudulent acts as a corporate director, which are made criminal by the laws of that country and by the laws of the state of the United States in which the fugitive is found, is extraditable under the treaty with Great Britain of 1889, art. 1, including, among other extraditable crimes, fraud by a corporate director "made criminal by the laws of both countries."
3. The denial of an application for bail in foreign extradition proceedings, supported by the affidavit of petitioner's physician that he was suffering from bronchitis and a severe chill which might develop into pneumonia, and that the confinement tended greatly to injure his health and to result in serious impairment, is not reversible error, although the refusal was put upon the ground of the want of power.
4. The dismissal of an appeal from an order of a United States circuit court dismissing writs of habeas corpus to inquire into a detention under a warrant of arrest issued in extradition proceedings is not required because of the pendency, as appears on the argument of such appeal, of proceedings on a second complaint by the demanding government, which reiterates the original charge with some amplification, and charges an additional offense.

[No. 661.]

Argued April 28, 29, 1903. Decided June 1, 1903.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York to review an order dismissing writs of habeas corpus to inquire into a detention under a warrant of arrest issued in extradition proceedings. Affirmed.

See same case below, 123 Fed. 463.

Statement by Mr. Chief Justice Fuller:

Whitaker Wright applied to the circuit court of the United States for the southern district of New York for writs of habeas corpus and certiorari on March 20, 1903, by a petition which alleged:

(1.) That he was a citizen of the United States, restrained of his liberty by the marshal of the United States for the southern district of New York, by virtue of a warrant dated March 16, 1903, issued by Thomas Alexander, "United States commissioner *for [41] the southern district of New York, and commissioner duly authorized by the district court of the United States for the southern district of New York, and also commissioner appointed under the laws of the United States concerning the extradition of fugitives from the justice of a foreign government under a treaty or convention between this and any foreign government," which warrant was couched in these terms:

"Whereas, complaint has been made on oath under the treaty between the United States and Her Majesty, the late Queen of Great Britain and Ireland, concluded and signed at Washington, on the 9th day of August, 1842, and of the supplementary treaty between the same high contracting parties, signed July 12, 1889, before me, Thomas Alexander, one of the commissioners appointed by the district court of the United States for the southern district of New York, and also commissioner especially appointed to execute the acts of Congress, entitled 'An Act for Giving Effect to Certain Treaty Stipulations Between This and Foreign Governments for the Apprehension and Delivering up of Certain Offenders,' approved August 12, 1848 [9 Stat. at L. 302, chap. 167, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 359], and of the several acts amendatory thereof, that one Whitaker Wright did heretofore, during the month of October, in the year 1899, and in the month of December, 1900, in the city of London, in that part of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland called England, and within the jurisdiction of his said Britannic Majesty, commit the crime of fraud as a director of a company, to wit, did heretofore, in the month of October, in the year 1899, and in the month of December, 1900, at the city of London aforesaid, then being a director of a certain body corporate, to wit, the London & Globe Finance Corporation, unlawfully make, circulate, and publish certain reports and statements of accounts of the said corporation, which were false; the said Whitaker Wright then well knowing the said reports and statements to be false, with intent thereby to deceive and defraud the shareholders or members of the said corporation; that the said Whitaker Wright is a fugitive from justice of the Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, and is now within the territory of the United States; that the crime of which the said Whitaker *Wright has so as aforesaid been guilty is [42] an offense within the treaty between the United States and Great Britain."

(2.) That the warrant was issued on a complaint by His Britannic Majesty's consul general at the port of New York, as follows:

"First. That one Whitaker Wright did heretofore and in the month of December, 1900, in the city of London, in that part of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and

190 U. S.

NOTE.—As to foreign extradition—see notes to Kentucky v. Dennison, 16 L. ed. U. S. 717, and State v. Jackson (D. C. E. D. Tenn.) 1 L. R. A. 370.

Ireland called England, and within the jurisdiction of his said Britannic Majesty, commit the crime of fraud as a director of a company, to wit, did heretofore and in the month of October, in the year 1899, and in the month of December, 1900, at the city of London, aforesaid, then being a director of a certain body corporate, to wit, the London & Globe Finance Corporation, unlawfully make, circulate, and publish certain reports and statements of accounts of the said corporation, which were false; the said Whitaker Wright, then well knowing the said reports and statements to be false, with intent thereby to deceive and defraud the shareholders or members of the said corporation.

"Second. That the said Whitaker Wright is a fugitive from the justice of the Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, and is now within the territory of the United States.

"Third. That the crime of which the said Whitaker Wright has so as aforesaid been guilty is an offense within the treaty between the United States and Great Britain.

"Fourth. That deponent's information and belief are based upon messages received by cable from his Majesty's Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, one of the said messages stating that a warrant had been issued in England for the apprehension of the said Whitaker Wright for the offense herein charged and directing deponent to apply for a provisional warrant, under the treaty for extradition, between the United States and Great Britain.

"That deponent has, since the apprehension of the said Whitaker Wright yesterday, cabled to His Majesty's said foreign secretary for fuller details as to said crime, and an answer is directly expected, but that the [43] said Whitaker Wright may be *detained, pending the arrival of such information, deponent asks for a provisional warrant herein."

(3.) "That the aforesaid complaint states no facts which create jurisdiction for the issuance of the aforesaid warrant, and for the detention of your petitioner; that it does not state any facts which show that your petitioner has been guilty of any offense within the provisions of any extradition treaty between the United States of America and the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland."

(4.) That he had duly objected to the continuance of any proceedings under the complaint and warrant, on the ground that the commissioner had no jurisdiction; but his objections had been overruled, and the commissioner had adjourned the proceedings until March 30, 1903.

(5.) That on March 18, 1903, he presented to the commissioner an application to be admitted to bail pending the proceeding, and, in support of the application, filed with the commissioner the affidavit of his attending physician, which was to the effect that petitioner was suffering from bronchitis and a severe chill, which might develop into pneumonia, and that the confinement tended greatly to injure his health and to result in serious impairment; but that the commissioner denied the application on the ground that no power existed for admitting petitioner to bail; (6) that the cause of imprisonment was the charge and the refusal to admit to bail.
190 U. S.

(7.) That the imprisonment and detention were illegal, and the warrant void, the complaint stating no jurisdictional facts to warrant imprisonment and detention. That the denial of the right to give bail constitutes a violation of the 8th Amendment of the Constitution, and § 1015 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 718), and of the common law of the United States, and constitutes a deprivation of liberty without due process of law.

The writs prayed for were granted, and, after hearing, dismissed and the application to be admitted to bail denied, March 30, the opinion being filed March 25, and copy of final order served March 28. 123 Fed. 463. The case was then brought to this court by appeal.

*At the argument it was made to appear [44] that, on March 31, His Majesty's consul general at New York made a new complaint, which reiterated the original charge, with some amplification, and added that Wright "did also, at the times and places aforesaid, then being a director and manager of said company or corporation aforesaid, with intent to defraud, alter and falsify books, papers, and writings belonging to the said company or corporation, and made and concurred in the making of false entries, and omitted and concurred in omitting material particulars in books of account and other documents belonging to the said company or corporation; and did also, at the times and places aforesaid, then being a director of the said company or corporation as aforesaid, alter and falsify books, papers, and writings, and made and was privy to the making of false and fraudulent entries in the books of account and other documents belonging to the said company or corporation, with intent to defraud and deceive shareholders and creditors of said company or corporation, and other persons."

It was further stated: "That deponent's information and belief are based upon a certified copy of a warrant, issued by one of his Majesty's justices of the peace for the city of London, for the apprehension of the said Whitaker Wright, for the offense herein first enumerated, and a certified copy of the information and complaint of the senior official receiver in companies liquidation (acting under the order of the high court of justice) and the depositions of Arthur Russell and John Flower, in support thereof, upon the application for a summons against the said Whitaker Wright, and the depositions of George Jarman and Harry Gerald Abrahams, on which information and complaint and depositions the said warrant was granted for the apprehension of the said Whitaker Wright," etc. Copies of these papers accompanied the complaint, and reference was made to cable messages from the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs.

On this complaint a warrant was issued and the accused arraigned before the commissioner, and it was thereupon stated that the demanding government would abandon all further proceedings under the complaint [45] of March 16, and consented* to the discharge of the prisoner from the arrest thereon. The commissioner held that, as the proceedings under the previous warrant had been carried into the circuit court, he was without power to discharge the prisoner under that warrant. Subsequently, the order of the circuit court dismissing the writs of habeas corpus and certiorari, and remanding the prisoner, was brought to the commissioner's attention, but counsel for the prisoner stated that papers were being prepared for the purpose of removing the case to the Supreme Court. The commissioner ruled that, pending such proceedings, he must decline to dismiss the complaint and discharge the prisoner.

Article 10 of the treaty of 1842 (8 Stat. at L. 572, 576), reads as follows:

"It is agreed that the United States and Her Britannic Majesty shall, upon mutual requisitions by them, or their ministers, officers, or authorities, respectively made, deliver up to justice all persons who, being charged with the crime of murder, or assault with intent to commit murder, or piracy, or arson, or robbery, or forgery, or the utterance of forged paper, committed within the jurisdiction of either, shall seek an asylum, or shall be found, within the territories of the other: Provided, That this shall only be done upon such evidence of criminality as, according to the laws of the place where the fugitive or person so charged shall be found, would justify his apprehension and commitment for trial, if the crime or offense had there been committed; and the respective judges and other magistrates of the two governments shall have power, jurisdiction, and authority, upon complaint made under oath, to issue a warrant for the apprehension of the fugitive or person so charged, that he may be brought before such judges or other magistrates, respectively, to the end that the evidence of criminality may be heard and considered; and if, on such hearing, the evidence be deemed sufficient to sustain the charge, it shall be the duty of the examining judge or magistrate to certify the same to the proper executive authority, that a warrant may issue for the surrender of such fugitive. The expense of such apprehension and delivery shall be borne and defrayed by the party who makes the requisition, and receives the fugitive."

[46] *Article 1 of the treaty of 1889 (26 Stat. at L. 1508), is:

"The provisions of the said 10th article are hereby made applicable to the following additional crimes:

"1. Manslaughter, when voluntary.

"2. Counterfeiting or altering money; uttering or bringing into circulation counterfeit or altered money.

"3. Embezzlement; larceny; receiving any money, valuable security, or other property, knowing the same to have been embezzled, stolen, or fraudulently obtained.

"4. Fraud by a bailee, banker, agent, factor, trustee, or director or member or officer of any company, made criminal by the laws of both countries.

"5. Perjury, or subornation of perjury.

"6. Rape; abduction; child-stealing; kidnapping.

"7. Burglary; house-breaking or shop-breaking.

"8. Piracy by the law of nations.

"9. Revolt, or conspiracy to revolt by two or more persons on board a ship on the high seas, against the authority of the master; wrongfully sinking or destroying a vessel at sea, or attempting to do so; assaults on board a ship on the high seas, with intent to do grievous bodily harm.

"10. Crimes and offenses against the laws of both countries for the suppression of slavery and slave trading.

"Extradition is also to take place for participation in any of the crimes mentioned in this convention or in the aforesaid tenth article, provided such participation be punishable by the laws of both countries."

Sections 83 and 84 of chapter 96, 24 and 25 Victoria, are as follows:

83. "Whosoever, being a director, manager, public officer, or member of any body corporate or public company, shall, with intent to defraud, destroy, alter, mutilate, or falsify any book, paper, writing, or valuable security belonging to the body corporate or public company, or make or concur in the making of any false entry, or omit or concur in omitting any material particular in any book of account or other document, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, being convicted thereof, shall be *liable, at [47] the discretion of the court, to any of the punishments which the court may award as hereinbefore last mentioned.

84. "Whosoever, being a director, manager, or public officer of any body corporate or public company, shall make, circulate, or publish, or concur in making, circulating, or publishing, any written statement or account which he shall know to be false in any material particular, with intent to deceive or defraud any member, shareholder, or creditor of such body corporate or public company, or with intent to induce any person to become a shareholder or partner therein, or to entrust or advance any property to such body corporate or public company, or to enter into any security for the benefit thereof, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, being convicted thereof, shall be liable, at the discretion of the court, to any of the punishments which the court may award as hereinbefore last mentioned."

Section 75 provided for a liability, on conviction of the misdemeanor therein mentioned, "at the discretion of the court, to be kept in penal servitude for any term not exceeding seven years and not less than three years, or to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding two years, with or without hard labor, and with or without solitary confinement."

Section 166 of the companies' act of 1862 (25 and 26 Vict. chap. 89), provides:

"If any director, officer, or contributory of any company wound up under this act destroys, mutilates, alters, or falsifies any books, papers, writings, or securities, or makes or is privy to the making of any false or fraudulent entry in any register, book of account, or other document belonging to the company, with intent to defraud or deceive any person, every person so offending shall be deemed to be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon being convicted, shall be liable to imprisonment for any term not exceeding two years, with or without hard labor."

Section 514 and subdivision 3 of § 611 of the New York Penal Code read as follows:

"Sec. 514. Other cases of forgery in the third degree.—A person who either (1) being an officer or in the employment of a corporation, association, partnership, or individuals, falsifies, or unlawfully and corruptly alters, erases, obliterates, or destroys [48]*any accounts, books of accounts, records, or other writing, belonging to or appertaining to the business of the corporation, association, partnership, or individuals; . . . is guilty of forgery in the third degree."

"Sec. 611. Misconduct of officers and employees of corporations.—A director, officer, agent, or employee of any corporation or joint stock association who: . . . (3) knowingly concurs in making or publishing any written report, exhibit, or statement of its affairs or pecuniary condition, containing any material statement which is false; . . . is guilty of a misdemeanor."

Section 525 provides: "Forgery in the third degree is punishable by imprisonment for not more than five years."

By § 15 it is provided:

"A person convicted of a crime declared to be a misdemeanor, for which no other punishment is specially prescribed by this Code, or by any other statutory provision in force at the time of the conviction and sentence, is punishable by imprisonment in a penitentiary, or county jail, for not more than one year, or by a fine of not more than five hundred dollars, or by both."

By the extradition act of Great Britain of 1870 (33 and 34 Vict. chap. 52), it is provided that: "A fugitive criminal shall not be surrendered until the expiration of fifteen days from the date of his being committed to prison to await his surrender." The accused is, on committal, to be informed of this, and "that he has a right to apply for a writ of habeas corpus." If he is not surrendered and conveyed out of the United Kingdom "within two months after such committal, or, if a writ of habeas corpus is issued, after the decision of the court upon the return to the writ, it shall be lawful for any judge of one of Her Majesty's superior courts at Westminster," on notice, to order him to be discharged, unless sufficient cause is shown to the contrary.

The first schedule contained a list of 190 U. S.

crimes, which includes: "Fraud by a bailee, banker, agent, factor, trustee, or director, or member, or public officer of any company, made criminal by any act for the time being in force."

*By § 5273 of the Revised Statutes, Title [49] 66, Extradition (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3596), it is provided that whenever any person committed under the title or any treaty "to remain until delivered up in pursuance of a requisition," is not so delivered up and conveyed out of the United States within two calendar months after such commitment, he may be discharged by any judge of the United States or of any state, on notice, unless sufficient cause is shown to the contrary.

Section 5270 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3591), is as follows:

"Whenever there is a treaty or convention for extradition between the government of the United States and any foreign government, any justice of the Supreme Court, circuit judge, district judge, commissioner authorized so to do by any of the courts of the United States, or judge of a court of record of general jurisdiction of any state, may, upon complaint made under oath, charging any person found within the limits of any state, district, or territory, with having committed within the jurisdiction of any such foreign government any of the crimes provided for by such treaty or convention, issue his warrant for the apprehension of the person so charged, that he may be brought before such justice, judge, or commissioner, to the end that the evidence of criminality may be heard and considered. If, on such hearing, he deems the evidence sufficient to sustain the charge under the provisions of the proper treaty or convention, he shall certify the same, together with a copy of all the testimony taken before him, to the Secretary of State, that a warrant may issue upon the requisition of the proper authorities of such foreign government, for the surrender of such person, according to the stipulations of the treaty or convention: and he shall issue his warrant for the commitment of the person so charged to the proper jail, there to remain until such surrender shall be made."

Messrs. Samuel Untermyer and Louis Marshall argued the cause and filed a brief for appellant:

Extradition should be declined in the absence of a conventional or legislative provision.

1 Moore, Extradition & Rendition, 21; United States v. Rauscher, 119 U. S. 407, 30 L. ed. 425, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 234; Terlinden v. Ames, 184 U. S. 270, 46 L. ed. 534, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 484.

The language of this treaty cannot be enlarged by interpretation so as to include crimes which do not come within the limitation which the signatories of the treaty have expressly created.

Tucker v. Alexandroff, 183 U. S. 436, 46 L. ed. 270, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 195; Doe ex dem. Clark v. Braden, 16 How. 657, 14 L. ed. 1099.

The subject of extradition is one of international cognizance, beyond the purview of state sovereignty; one over which the states composing the American Union have no more jurisdiction than have Ireland, Scotland, or Wales.

People ex rel. Barlow v. Curtis, 50 N. Y. 321, 10 Am. Rep. 483; United States v. Rauscher, 119 U. S. 414, 30 L. ed. 427, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 234.

The word "country" has received judicial interpretation from our courts.

Stairs v. Peaslee, 18 How. 521, 15 L. ed. 474; United States v. The Recorder, 1 Blatchf. 218, Fed. Cas. No. 16,129.

The crime charged is not one which is made criminal by the laws of the United States of America and the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, and does not, therefore, come within the terms of the extradition treaties between those governments.

Re Windsor, 6 Best. & S. 522; Re John C. Eno, 10 Quebec L. R. 194; Re Tully, 22 Blatchf. 213, 20 Fed. 812.

It is the policy of our government to admit to bail any person arrested in any kind of proceeding, except for contempt and prosecutions for capital offenses.

United States v. Hamilton, 3 Dall. 17, 1 L. ed. 490; Ex parte Virginia, 100 U. S. 343, 25 L. ed. 678; Hudson v. Parker, 156 U. S. 277, 39 L. ed. 424, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 450; Benson v. McMahon, 127 U. S. 457, 32 L. ed. 234, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1240; United States v. Volz, 14 Blatchf. 15, Fed. Cas. No. 16,627; United States v. Rundlett, 2 Curt. C. C. 41, Fed. Cas. No. 16,208; United States v. Dana, 68 Fed. 886.

In cases which have arisen under the Chinese exclusion act, the proceedings under which are analogous to those in extradition, the right to give bail has been recognized.

Re Ah Kee, 21 Fed. 701; Re Chow Goo Pooi, 9 Sawy. 606, 25 Fed. 77.

The power of a United States commissioner to admit a prisoner to bail is fully discussed by Judge Cox in a note prepared by him, to the case of United States v. Hom Hing, 48 Fed. 638.

In State v. Hufford, 23 Iowa, 579, it has been held in a similar proceeding that the right to give bail exists.

The decisions in England and Canada sustain the right to bail in extradition cases.

Queen v. Spilsbury [1898] 2 Q. B. 615; Ex parte Foster, Quebec Consol. Dig. title Extradition.

The power to bail must be incident to the power to hear and determine.

People v. Goodwin, 1 Wheeler Crim. Cas. 434; People v. McLeod, 1 Hill, 377, 37 Am. Dec. 328; People v. Van Horne, 8 Barb. 158; State Treasurer v. Rolfe, 15 Vt. 9; State v. Edney, 20 N. C. (4 Dev. & B. L.) 378; Re v. Rudd, Cowp. 331; Re v. Marks, 3 East, 157; Re v. Baltimore, 4 Burr. 2179; 4 Bl. Com. 299; 2 Hale P. C. 129; 4 Co. Inst. 71; Harvey of Comb's Case, 10 Mod. 334; Re v. Judd, 2 T. R. 255; Linford v. Fitzroy, 13 Jur. 303; Ex parte Tayloe, 5 Cow. 39; United States v. Evans, 2 Flipp. 605, 2 Fed.

152; Queen v. Spilsbury [1898] 2 Q. B. 615; Church, Habeas Corpus, 2d ed. §§ 390, 395; 1 Bishop, Crim. Proc. §§ 251, 1406, 1407.

Such powers as are ordinarily denominated inherent are possessed even by courts of statutory creation.

Ex parte Robinson, 19 Wall. 505, 22 L. ed. 205; United States v. Hudson, 7 Cranch, 32, 3 L. ed. 259; Anderson v. Dunn, 6 Wheat. 204, 5 L. ed. 242; Ex parte Terry, 128 U. S. 302, 32 L. ed. 408, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77; Cartwright's Case, 114 Mass. 230; Re Neagle, 5 L. R. A. 78, 14 Sawy. 232, 39 Fed. 856; Freeman v. Howe, 24 How. 450, 16 L. ed. 749; Krippendorf v. Hyde, 110 U. S. 276, 28 L. ed. 145, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 27; Gumbel v. Pitkin, 124 U. S. 131, 31 L. ed. 374, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 379; Labette County v. United States, 112 U. S. 217, 28 L. ed. 698, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 108; Re Henderson, 157 N. Y. 423, 52 N. E. 183.

The comparatively unimportant penal offense under N. Y. Penal Code, sub. 3, § 611, is not "fraud of a director" within the meaning of the treaty, and is not extraditable. Proof of fraud in support of a charge under that section would be surplusage.

In case of a statutory crime an indictment which follows the language of the statute is sufficient.

United States v. Gooding, 12 Wheat. 460, 6 L. ed. 693; Com. v. Hobbs, 140 Mass. 443, 5 N. E. 158; Trout v. State, 111 Ind. 499, 12 N. E. 1005; Baysinger v. People, 115 Ill. 419, 5 N. E. 375.

Where the offense is malum prohibitum and the statute embraces no words providing that the fraudulent intent or other criminal intent constitutes a part of the definition of the offense, it is neither necessary to allege nor to prove the existence of such intent.

Com. v. Farren, 9 Allen, 489; Com. v. Nichols, 10 Allen, 199; Com. v. Boynton, 2 Allen, 160; Com. v. Goodman, 97 Mass. 117; Com. v. Wentworth, 118 Mass. 441.

In cases of this character fraudulent intent is not a necessary ingredient of the crime.

People v. Cipperly, 101 N. Y. 634, 4 N. E. 107; People v. Kibler, 106 N. Y. 321, 12 N. E. 795; Haggerty v. St. Louis Ice Mfg. & Storage Co. 143 Mo. 238, 40 L. R. A. 151, 44 S. W. 1114; Halsted v. State, 41 N. J. L. 552, 32 Am. Rep. 247.

It is not within the province of the judiciary to enlarge the treaty.

Terlinden v. Ames, 184 U. S. 289, 46 L. ed. 545, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 484.

The law allows sureties to retake a prisoner who has been admitted to bail, should he escape into another state.

Taylor v. Taintor, 16 Wall. 371, 21 L. ed. 290; Re Von Der Ahe, 85 Fed. 959; Cosgrove v. Winney, 174 U. S. 64, 43 L. ed. 897, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 598.

In Chinese deportation cases it has been usual to allow bail pending an appeal to this court.

Li Sing v. United States, 180 U. S. 486, 45 L. ed. 634, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 449; United States v. Gue Lim, 176 U. S. 459, 44 L. ed.

544, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 415; United States v. Wong Kim Ark, 169 U. S. 649, 42 L. ed. 890, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 456; United States v. Lee Yen Tai, 185 U. S. 213, 46 L. ed. 878, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 629.

The expression of a willingness on the part of the demanding government to withdraw the warrant of March 16, was in the nature of a motion to enter a nolle prosequi.

It is well settled that unless such a motion is allowed by the court or tribunal to which it is addressed, it has no efficacy whatever.

United States v. Schumann, 7 Sawy. 439, Fed. Cas. No. 16,235; United States v. Ebbs, 4 Hughes, 473, 10 Fed. 369; People v. McLeod, 1 Hill, 465, 37 Am. Dec. 328; State ex rel. Bier v. Klock, 48 La. Ann. 140, 18 So. 942; Statham v. State, 41 Ga. 511; Ex parte Donaldson, 44 Mo. 149; State v. Roe, 12 Vt. 93.

The fact that the demanding government is now willing to consent to a discharge of the appellant from custody under the warrant of March 16, 1903, should not, under the circumstances, deprive him of his right to have the important questions of law which affect his liberty determined on this appeal.

Chicago & A. R. Co. v. Union Rolling Mill Co. 109 U. S. 702, 27 L. ed. 1081, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594; Stevens v. The Railroads, 4 Fed. 97; Booth v. Leicester, 1 Keen, 247; Cooper v. Lewis, 2 Phill. Ch. 177; Electrical Accumulator Co. v. Brush Electric Co. 44 Fed. 602; Hat-Sweet Mfg. Co. v. Waring, 46 Fed. 87; Western Union Teleg. Co. v. American Bell Teleph. Co. 50 Fed. 662; Detroit v. Detroit City R. Co. 55 Fed. 569; Hershberger v. Blewett, 55 Fed. 170; Lewis v. Cooper, 16 L. J. Ch. N. S. 265; Folger v. The Robert G. Shaw, 2 Woodb. & M. 537, Fed. Cas. No. 4,899; Beery v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 65 Mo. 533; Browning v. Chrisman, 30 Mo. 353; Lane v. Morton, 81 N. C. 38; Mechanics' Bank v. Fisher, 1 Rawle, 341.

The offense charged must at all events be a crime against the laws of the state where the accused is apprehended.

Re Frank, 107 Fed. 272.

The New York Penal Code does not define a crime which can be described as "the fraud of a director" or any equivalent crime.

The offense which it creates contains no element of fraud. The English statute makes "fraud" the sine qua non.

It does not require "the intent to deceive and defraud" (Gardner v. People, 62 N. Y. 299). The English crime depends upon the "fraudulent intent."

It does not require scienter of the falsity of the report on the part of the accused. The English statute makes it essential. The word "knowingly," as used in the New York statute, has reference only to concurrence in the making or publishing of the report, and not to knowledge of the falsity of its statements. The English statute uses the phrase "which he shall know to be false."

It creates an offense of a venial nature, and punishes carelessness and inconsiderateness amounting to official misconduct, but not to fraud.

190 U. S.

Mr. Charles Fox argued the cause and filed a brief for appellees:

No examination having been commenced prior to the proceedings on habeas corpus now here for review, this court will confine its inquiry to the question of jurisdiction of the commissioner.

Terlinden v. Ames, 184 U. S. 270, 46 L. ed. 534, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 484.

A complaint in an extradition case need not be as precise, technical, and formal as an indictment. It is sufficient if it appears that a treaty offense is meant to be charged.

Rice v. Ames, 180 U. S. 371, 45 L. ed. 577, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 406; Re Roth, 15 Fed. 507; Re Farez, 7 Blatchf. 48, Fed. Cas. No. 4,644; Ex parte Sternaman, 77 Fed. 595; Re Henrich, 5 Blatchf. 414, Fed. Cas. No. 6,369.

All that is required is to set forth clearly the substance of the offense charged, so that the court can see that one or more particular crimes enumerated in the treaty are alleged to have been committed.

Re Adutt, 55 Fed. 376; Re Grin, 112 Fed. 790.

The complaint could be made upon information and belief.

Re Farez, 7 Blatchf. 343, Fed. Cas. No. 4,645; Ex parte Lane, 6 Fed. 34.

The laws of New York, after having established the laws of England, are to govern this proceeding.

Re Farez, 7 Blatchf. 357, Fed. Cas. No. 4,645; Re Wadge, 15 Fed. 865; Re Charleston, 34 Fed. 533.

A treaty is to be interpreted liberally and in such manner as to carry out its manifest purpose.

Tucker v. Alexandroff, 183 U. S. 424, 46 L. ed. 264, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 195; Grin v. Shine, 187 U. S. 181, ante, 130, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 98.

A crime need not bear the same name to bring it within the treaty, if it was criminal by the laws of both countries.

Re Arton [1896] 1 Q. B. 509; Re Bellencontre, 17 Cox C. C. 253; Ex parte Piot, 15 Cox C. C. 208.

There are no common-law crimes of the United States.

Benson v. McMahon, 127 U. S. 457, 32 L. ed. 234, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1240; Moore, Extradition & Rendition, § 430.

The plaintiff has no right of asylum in this country.

Ker v. Illinois, 119 U. S. 436, 30 L. ed. 421, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 225; Grin v. Shine, 187 U. S. 181, ante, 130, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 98.

The object of a writ of habeas corpus is to ascertain whether the prisoner applying for it can be legally detained in custody, and if sufficient ground for his detention is shown he is not to be discharged for defects in the original arrest or commitment.

Nishimura Ekiu v. United States, 142 U. S. 651, 35 L. ed. 1146, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 336; Iasigi v. Van De Carr, 166 U. S. 392, 41 L. ed. 1046, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 595.

The appellant is not entitled to bail, under any rule of law of the United States.

Re Carrier, 57 Fed. 578.

A state is considered a country, with reference to certain conditions.

Dacey, Domicil, p. 31.

Solicitor General Hoyt argued the cause, and, with Mr. Milton D. Purdy, filed a brief for the United States:

The rule that the evidence must be such as to justify commitment for trial at the place where the fugitive is found, if the offense had there been committed, applies not only to the admissibility and the amount of evidence required for that purpose in the particular place, but also to the definition of the offense.

Moore, Extradition & Rendition, § 344.

No rule more explicit or certain than that contained in the treaty itself can, indeed, be prescribed. Cases as they occur necessarily depend upon the laws of the several states in which the fugitive may be arrested or found.

Extradition under Treaty with France, 4 Ops. Atty. Gen. 330.

What evidence is necessary to authorize an arrest and commitment depends upon the laws of the state or place where the criminal may be found.

Moore, Extradition & Rendition, § 344; Muller's Case, 5 Phila. 289, Fed. Cas. No. 9,913; Re Farez, 7 Blatchf. 345, Fed. Cas. No. 4,645; Grin v. Shine, 187 U. S. 181, ante, 130, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 98.

Mr. Chief Justice Fuller delivered the opinion of the court:

The writ of habeas corpus cannot perform the office of a writ of error, but the court issuing the writ may inquire into the jurisdiction of the committing magistrate in extradition proceedings (Ornelas v. Ruiz, 161 U. S. 502, 40 L. ed. 787, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 689; Terlinden v. Ames, 184 U. S. 270, 46 L. ed. 534, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 484); and it was on the ground of want of jurisdiction that the writ was applied for in this instance before the commissioner had entered upon the examination; as also on the ground that petitioner should have been admitted to bail.

The contention is that the complaint and warrant did not charge an extraditable offense within the meaning of the extradition treaties between the United States and the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, because the offense was not criminal at common law, or by acts of Congress, or by the preponderance of the statutes of the states.

Treaties must receive a fair interpretation, according to the intention of the contracting parties, and so as to carry out their manifest purpose. The ordinary technicalities of criminal proceedings are applicable to proceedings in extradition only to a limited extent. Grin v. Shine, 187 U. S. 181, ante, 130, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 98; Tucker v. Alexandroff, 183 U. S. 424, 46 L. ed. 264, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 195.

[58] *The general principle of international law is that in all cases of extradition the act done on account of which extradition is demanded must be considered a crime by both parties, and, as to the offense charged in this case, the treaty of 1889 embodies that principle in terms. The offense must be "made criminal by the laws of both countries."

We think it cannot be reasonably open to question that the offense under the British statute is also a crime under the 3rd paragraph of § 611 of the Penal Code of New York, brought forward from § 603 of the Code of 1882. Fraud by a bailee, banker, agent, factor, trustee, or director, or member or officer of any company, is made the basis of surrender by the treaty. The British statute punishes the making, circulating, or publishing, with intent to deceive or defraud, of false statements or accounts of a body corporate or public company, known to be false, by a director, manager, or public officer thereof. The New York statute provides that if an officer or director of a corporation knowingly concurs in making or publishing any written report, exhibit, or statement of its affairs or pecuniary condition, containing any material statement which is false, he is guilty of a misdemeanor. The two statutes are substantially analogous. The making of such a false statement knowingly, under the New York act, carries with it the inference of fraudulent intent; but, even if this were not so, criminality under the British act would certainly be such under that of New York. Absolute identity is not required. The essential character of the transaction is the same, and made criminal by both statutes.

It may be remarked that the statutes of several other states agree with that of New York on this subject; and that §§ 73 and 74 of the act of Congress to define and punish crimes in the district of Alaska, 30 Stat. at L. 1253, chap. 429, and § 5209 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3497), in respect of the officers of national banks, are largely to the same effect as the English statute.

As the state of New York was the place where the accused was found and, in legal effect, the asylum to which he had fled, is the language of the treaty, "made criminal by the laws of *both countries," to be interpreted as limiting its scope to acts of Congress, and eliminating the operation of the laws of the states? That view would largely defeat the object of our extradition treaties by ignoring the fact that, for nearly all crimes and misdemeanors, the laws of the states, and not the enactments of Congress, must be looked to for the definition of the offense. There are no common-law crimes of the United States; and, indeed, in most of the states the criminal law has been recast in statutes, the common law being resorted to in aid of definition. Benson v. McMahon, 127 U. S. 457, 32 L. ed. 234, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1240.

In July, 1844, Attorney General Nelson advised the Secretary of State, then Mr. Calhoun, that "cases, as they occur, necessarily depend upon the laws of the several states in which the fugitive may be arrested or found;" and in December of that year, Mr.

Callhoun wrote to the French minister: "What evidence is necessary to authorize an arrest and commitment depends upon the laws of the state or place where the criminal may be found." Moore, Extradition, § 344; United States v. Warr, 3 N. Y. Legal Obs. 346, Fed. Cas. No. 16,644.

So, Mr. Secretary Fish, in November, 1873, in replying to certain specified questions of the minister of the Netherlands, among other things, said: "That, in every treaty of extradition, the United States insists that it can be required to surrender a fugitive criminal only upon such evidence of criminality as, according to the laws of the place where he shall be found, would justify his apprehension and commitment for trial if the crime had there been committed;" and "that the criminal code of the United States applies only to offenses defined by the general government, or committed within its exclusive jurisdiction, or upon the high seas, or some navigable water, and that each state establishes and regulates its own criminal procedure, as well with respect to the definition of crimes as to the mode of procedure against criminals, and the manner and extent of punishment." Moore, Extradition, § 337*n*.

In Muller's Case, 5 Phila. 289, 292, the definition of the offense in the state where the fugitive was found was applied by the district court for the eastern district of Pennsylvania, and Judge Cadwalader said:

[60] * "In the series of treaties which have been mentioned, certain offenses, including forgery, are named with reference to their definitions in the system of general jurisprudence. But the treaties require the specific application of the definitions to be conformable, in particular cases, to the jurisprudence and legislation of the respective places where the parties may be arrested; and likewise require the application of local rules of decision as to the sufficiency of the evidence. The act in question—though generically forgery wherever criminal—might be specifically criminal in one place, but not in another. I thought that the question depended upon the law of Pennsylvania under the statute of 1860, and that the case on the part of the Saxon government had, therefore, been made out.

"There is no jurisprudence or common law of the government of the United States. . . . No legislation of their government, independently of the jurisprudence and legislation of the several states, can have been expected by those who made the treaties ever to give specific definitions of certain crimes mentioned in them. No such legislation as to forgery of private writings, which is the offense here charged, can have been expected. As to this crime, and others, local definitions and rules might be not less different in Ohio and in Pennsylvania than in Scotland and in England, or might be more different. In framing the treaty of 1842 with Great Britain, these local differences must have been mutually considered by the governments of the two contracting nations."
190 U. S.

And this language is strikingly applicable to the supplemental treaty of 1889, framed, as it was, by Mr. Secretary Blaine, and that accomplished lawyer and publicist, then Sir Julian Pauncefoot, who was thoroughly familiar with the dual system of this government. Where there was reason to doubt whether the generic term embraced a particular variety, specific language was used. As, for instance, as to the slave trade; though criminal, yet, apparently because there had been peculiar local aspects, the crime was required to be "against the laws of both countries;" and so as to fraud and breach of trust, which had been brought within the grasp of criminal law in comparatively recent times. But it is enough if the particular variety was *criminal in [61] both jurisdictions, and the laws of both countries included the laws of their component parts.

In Grin v. Shine we applied the definition of embezzlement given by the laws of California; but there the petitioner himself appealed to that definition, and the case, though in many respects of value here, did not rule the precise point before us.

But we rule it now, and concur with Judge Lacombe, that when, by the law of Great Britain, and by the law of the state in which the fugitive is found, the fraudulent acts charged to have been committed are made criminal, the case comes fairly within the treaty, which otherwise would manifestly be inadequate to accomplish its purposes. And we cannot doubt that, if the United States were seeking to have a person indicted for this same offense under the laws of New York extradited from Great Britain, the tribunals of Great Britain would not decline to find the offense charged to be within the treaty because the law violated was a statute of one of the states, and not an act of Congress.

It is true that in the case of Windsor (1865), 6 Best & S. 522, a contrary view was expressed; but it should be observed that the charge was forgery, and it was held that the facts did not constitute forgery in England, and that the statute of New York defining the offense of forgery in the third degree could not properly be regarded as extending the force of the treaty to offenses not embraced within the definition of forgery at the time when the treaty was executed. So far as the conclusion is expressed by the eminent judges who united in that decision, that the treaty did not comprise offenses made such only by the legislation of particular states of the United States, it does not receive our assent.

The result is that we hold that the commissioner had jurisdiction, and that brings us to consider whether the commissioner or the circuit court erred in denying the application to be let to bail.

By § 1015 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 718), it is provided: "Bail shall be admitted upon all arrests in criminal cases where the offense is not punishable by death; and in such cases it may be taken by any of the persons authorized [62] by the preceding section "to arrest and imprison offenders." But this must be read with § 1014, the preceding section, and that is confined to crimes or offenses against the United States. Rice v. Ames, 180 U. S. 377, 45 L. ed. 582, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 406. These sections were originally contained in one section. Judiciary Act of 1789, 1 Stat. at L. 97, chap. 20, § 33.

Not only is there no statute providing for admission to bail in cases of foreign extradition, but § 5270 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3591), is inconsistent with its allowance after commitment, for it is there provided that, if he finds the evidence sufficient, the commissioner or judge "shall issue his warrant for the commitment of the person so charged to the proper jail, there to remain until such surrender shall be made."

And § 5273 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3596), provides that, when a person is committed "to remain until delivered up in pursuance of a requisition," and is not delivered up within two months, he may be discharged, if sufficient cause to the contrary is not shown.

The demanding government, when it has done all that the treaty and the law require it to do, is entitled to the delivery of the accused on the issue of the proper warrant, and the other government is under obligation to make the surrender; an obligation which it might be impossible to fulfil if release on bail were permitted. The enforcement of the bond, if forfeited, would hardly meet the international demand; and the regaining of the custody of the accused obviously would be surrounded with serious embarrassment. And the same reasons which induced the language used in the statute would seem generally applicable to release pending examination.

The subject was considered by the district court of Colorado in the case of Carrier, 57 Fed. 578, and Hallett, J., held that the matter of admitting to bail was not a question of practice; that it was dependent on statute; that although the statute of the United States in respect of procedure in extradition did not forbid bail in such cases, that was not enough, as the authority must be expressed; and that as there was no provision for bail in the act, bail could not be allowed.

And Judge Lacombe in the present case stated that applications to admit to bail in [63] such cases had, on several occasions, been made to the circuit court, and that they had been uniformly denied.

In Queen v. Spilsbury [1898] 2 Q. B. 615, it was held that the Queen's Bench had, "independently of statute, by the common law, jurisdiction to admit to bail," but that was a case arising under the Fugitive Offenders Act [44 and 45 Vict. chap. 69], and the distinction existing ordinarily between rendition between different parts of Her Majesty's dominions, and cases arising under the Extradition Acts, was pointed out. The court, while ruling that the power to admit to bail existed, held that, as matter of judicial discretion, it ought not to be exercised in that case.

We are unwilling to hold that the circuit courts possess no power in respect of admitting to bail other than as specifically vested by statute, or that, while bail should not ordinarily be granted in cases of foreign extradition, those courts may not in any case, and whatever the special circumstances, extend that relief. Nor are we called upon to do so, as we are clearly of opinion, on this record, that no error was committed in refusing to admit to bail, and that, although the refusal was put on the ground of want of power, the final order ought not to be disturbed.

The affirmance of the final order leaves it open to the demanding government to withdraw the proceeding first initiated, and proceed on the subsequent application, the pendency of which, as called to our attention, we do not think required us to dismiss this appeal.

Order affirmed.

*STATE OF TENNESSEE, Complainant, [64]
v.

STATE OF VIRGINIA.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 64-88.)

Boundary between Tennessee and Virginia.

The boundary line between the states of Tennessee and Virginia is established as described and delineated in the report of commissioners appointed to retrace and remark such line, with the modification necessitated by the compact with reference thereto expressed in Tenn. act January 28, 1901, and Va. act February 9, 1901, and assented to by Congress by joint resolution of March 3, 1901 (31 Stat. at L. 1465).

[No. 6, Original.]

Submitted May 18, 1903. Decided June 1, 1903.

ON MOTION to confirm the report of commissioners appointed to retrace and remark the boundary line between the states of Tennessee and Virginia. Report confirmed and boundary line established.

Mr. Charles T. Cates, Jr., for complainant.

Mr. W. A. Anderson for defendant.

Mr. Chief Justice Fuller announced the decree of the court:

This cause came on to be heard on May 18, 1903, on the proceedings heretofore had herein, and upon the report of William C. Hodgkins, James B. Baylor, and Andrew H. Buchanan, commissioners appointed by the decretal order herein of April 30, 1900, to ascertain, retrace, remark, and re-establish the real, certain, and true boundary line between the states of Tennessee and Virginia, as actually run and located from White Top mountain to Cumberland gap, under [65] proceedings had between *the two states in 1801-1803, and as adjudged and decreed by this court in its decree of April 3, 1893, in a certain original case in equity, wherein the state of Virginia was complainant and the state of Tennessee was defendant; which report is annexed hereto and made part hereof.

190 U. S.

And it appearing to the court that said report was filed in this court on the 5th day of January, 1903, and that the same is unexcepted to by either party in any respect; therefore, upon the motion of the state of Tennessee by her attorney general, and of the state of Virginia by her attorney general, it is ordered that said report be, and the same is hereby, in all things confirmed.

It is thereupon ordered, adjudged, and decreed that the real, certain, and true boundary line between the states of Tennessee and Virginia, as actually run and located under the compact and proceedings had between the two states in 1801-1803, and as adjudged by this court on the 3d day of April, 1893, in said original cause in equity, wherein the state of Virginia was complainant and the state of Tennessee was defendant as aforesaid, was, at the institution of this suit, and now is, except as hereinafter shown, as described and delineated in said report filed herein on January 5, 1903, as aforesaid.

And it further appearing to the court, and it being so admitted by both parties, that since the institution of this suit and the decretal order of April 30, 1900, as aforesaid, a compact was entered into by the states of Tennessee and Virginia, expressed in the concurrent laws of said states, namely, the act of the general assembly of Tennessee, approved January 28, 1901, entitled "An Act to Cede to the State of Virginia a Certain Narrow Strip of Territory Belonging to the State of Tennessee, Lying Between the Northern Boundary Line of the City of Bristol, in the County of Sullivan, and the Southern Boundary Line of the City of Bristol, in the County of Washington, State of Virginia, Being the Northern Half of Main Street, of the said Two Cities," and the reciprocal act of the general assembly of Virginia, approved February 9, 1901, entitled "An Act to Accept the Cession by the State of Tennessee to the State of Virginia, of a Certain Narrow Strip of Territory Claimed as Belonging to *the State of Tennessee, and Described as Lying Between the Northern Boundary Line of the City of Bristol, in the County of Sullivan, State of Tennessee, and the Southern Boundary Line of the City of Bristol, in the County of Washington, State of Virginia, Being the Northern Half of the Main Street of the Said Two Cities." [66]

And it further appearing that said compact received the consent of the Congress of the United States by joint resolution approved March 3, 1901, as follows:

190 U. S. U. S., Book 47.

"Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That a recent compact or agreement having been made by and between the states of Tennessee and Virginia, whereby the state of Tennessee, by an act of its legislature approved January twenty-eighth, nineteen hundred and one, ceded to the state of Virginia certain territory, specifically described in said act, and being the northern half of the main street between the cities of Bristol, Virginia, and Bristol, Tennessee, and the state of Virginia, by act of its general assembly, approved February ninth, nineteen hundred and one, having accepted said cession of the state of Tennessee, the consent of Congress is hereby given to said contract or agreement between said states, fixing the boundary line between said states as shown by said acts referred to, and the same is hereby ratified." [31 Stat. at L. 1465.]

And said commissioners, in their said report, having ascertained and recommended the straight line from the end of the "diamond-marked" or compact line of 1801-1803 to the corner of the states of North Carolina and Tennessee as the true boundary line between the states of Virginia and Tennessee between those two points, the court, approving said recommendation and finding of said commissioners, doth adopt the same.

And the court, being of opinion that it is proper to recognize the line so established by said last-mentioned compact of 1901 as the real, certain, and true interstate boundary line within and between said two cities, and to definitely determine and fix in this cause what is the real, true, and certain boundary line between said states throughout the entire length thereof, *from the corner of the [67] states of North Carolina and Tennessee, on Pond mountain, to the corner of Virginia and Kentucky, at Cumberland gap, doth therefore adjudge, order, and decree that the entire real, certain, and true boundary line between the states of Tennessee and Virginia is the line described and delineated in said report filed herein on January 5, 1903, modified as to so much of said line as lies between the two cities of Bristol, by the aforesaid compact of 1901 between the two states, and as so described, delineated, and modified said boundary line from the said North Carolina corner to the eastern end of the compact line of 1801-1803, known as the "diamond-marked" line, and thence to Cumberland gap, is hereby determined, fixed, and established.

It is further ordered, adjudged, and decreed that the compensation and expenses of the commissioners, and the expenditures attendant upon the discharge of their duties, be, and they are hereby, allowed at the several sums set forth in their report, as hereinbefore confirmed, and that said charges and expenses, together with all the costs of this suit to be taxed, be equally divided between the parties hereto.

It is further ordered that the clerk of this court do, at the proper charges of the parties to this cause, deliver fifty printed copies of this decree, including said report, to the attorney general of each of said states.

The report of the commissioners, filed January 5, 1903, is as follows:

To the Honorable the Chief Justice and Associate Justices of the Supreme Court of the United States:

Your commissioners, appointed by the decree of this honorable court, dated April 30, 1900, to ascertain, retrace, remark, and re-establish the boundary line established between the states of Virginia and Tennessee, by the compact of 1803, which was actually run and located under proceedings had by the two states in 1801-1803, and was then marked with five chops in the shape of a diamond, and which ran from White Top mountain to Cumberland gap, respectfully represent that they have completed the duties assigned to them by the said *decree of April 30, 1900, that they have retraced and remarked the said boundary line as originally run and marked with five chops in the shape of a diamond in the year 1802, and that, for the better securing of the same, they have placed upon the said line, besides other durable marks, monuments of cut limestone, four and a half feet long and seven inches square on top, with V's cut on their north faces and T's on their south faces, set three and a half feet in the ground, conveniently located as hereinafter more fully described, so that the citizens of each state and others, by reasonable diligence, may readily find the true location of said boundary; all of which is more particularly set forth in the detailed report of their operations, which your commissioners herewith beg to submit, together with two maps explanatory of the same, a list of the several permanent monuments and other durable marks, and a complete bill of costs and charges. And your commissioners further pray that this honorable court accept and confirm this report; that the line as marked on the ground by said commissioners in the years 1901 and 1902 be declared to be the real, certain, and true boundary between the states of Tennessee and Virginia; that your commissioners be allowed their expenses and reasonable charges for their own services in these premises, as shown on the bill of costs which forms a part of this report; and finally, that your commissioners be discharged from further proceedings in these premises.

William C. Hodgkins, [seal]
Commissioner.

James B. Baylor, [seal]
Commissioner.

Andrew H. Buchanan, [seal]
Commissioner.

Detailed report of the operations of the commission appointed by the Supreme Court of the United States (April 30, 1900) to retrace and remark the boundary line between the states of Tennessee and Virginia.

At the date of the above decree, and for several months thereafter, the state of Virginia had no funds available for the proceedings *ordered by the court, and none could be had until there could be a session of the state legislature to make the needed appropriation. It was therefore necessary for your commissioners to seek an extension of the time within which they might make their report, and, upon the motion of the attorney general of Virginia, an extension was granted until the next term of court.

At a session of the general assembly of Virginia, held in the winter of 1900-1901, the sum of $5,000 was appropriated for the purpose of paying Virginia's share of the expenses of this boundary survey.

The Tennessee legislature had previously made a like appropriation.

Your commissioners therefore made preparations for beginning the execution of their duties under your decree of April 30, 1900, as early in the season of 1901 as the weather conditions should permit.

The commission held its first meeting at Washington, D. C., on May 16, 1901, and organized by choosing William C. Hodgkins, of the state of Massachusetts, as chairman; James B. Baylor, of the state of Virginia, as secretary, and Andrew H. Buchanan, of the state of Tennessee, as treasurer.

At this meeting there was a full discussion of the problem presented and of the method of work which might be most suitable under all the conditions. Arrangements were also made for procuring the necessary camp outfit and supplies.

Through the courtesy of the superintendent of the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey, your commissioners were able to procure from that bureau, without charge, not only the outfit of tents and camp furniture required for the shelter and comfort of the party, but also the valuable instruments needed for the survey.

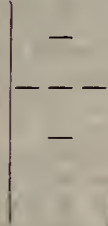

This relieved the states of Tennessee and Virginia of a considerable expense which would otherwise have been unavoidable. The two states were spared another heavy item of expense by the fact that each of your commissioners is a civil engineer and entirely familiar with work of this nature. It was therefore unnecessary to follow the usual course of employing *engineers or surveyors to carry out the field-work under the direction of the commissioners. Instead of that, your commissioners themselves conducted all the field-work, hiring only such rodmen, axmen, etc., as were necessary from time to time. By such methods, and by exercising rigid economy in all of their expenditures, your commissioners have been able to complete the entire work, including the setting of cut-stone monuments, and also including the amount charged for their own remuneration, for the sum of $9,475.99, which is but little more than the amount charged to the state of Virginia alone by the joint commission of 1858-1859.

It having been decided at the first meeting of the commission that the most convenient place for beginning field operations would be the city of Bristol, which is located directly upon the boundary line, the commission adjourned to that place.

Field-work was begun on May 22, 1901, with the examination of a portion of the line east of Bristol, where a number of trees were found which bore the marks of the surveys of 1802 and 1858-'59. As there has been considerable controversy and conflicting testimony in regard to the nature of these old marks, it may be well to show, by diagrams and photographs, the actual arrangement and appearance of those of both years, as well as of the somewhat different mark which was used for the present remarking by your commissioners.

1802.	1859.	1902.

While the marks made in 1858-'59 are still numerous in forested areas and are generally easily distinguishable, those made in 1802 are becoming scarce and sometimes are barely discernible when found.

[71] *This is shown in the accompanying photograph of a large white-oak tree, upon which the marks of 1858-'59 can readily be traced, while only three of those made in 1802 can be distinguished, and those with difficulty. The marks of 1802 were apparently made with a small and light hatchet and on many trees which have a thick and rough bark the hatchet does not seem to have reached the wood, and in such cases the gradual exfoliation of the bark has often nearly or entirely obliterated the mark. Where the wood was wounded, a small burr has formed which can nearly always be recognized, but cuts which did not completely penetrate the bark have sometimes disappeared.

The marks left by the survey of 1858-'59 were found of very great value as guides to the older "diamond" marks of 1802. Both marks were often found on the same tree, and it was a rare occurrence to find the diamond mark without the mark of 1859, either above or below it. In fact, it was very soon noticed that the mere fact of finding the mark of 1858-'59 either above or below the normal position on a tree was an almost certain indication that a diamond mark had been found there at the date of the later marking, even though, through the action of time and the elements, all vestiges of it may now have disappeared. Since the date of the last survey, very many marked trees have been destroyed through various agencies, especially since the more rapid development of this section in recent years has caused a greater demand for lumber, and, in some places, the trees bearing the old marks are so far apart, and the marks themselves are so faint, that great trouble and delay would often have been experienced in the search for these old marks had it not been for the aid afforded by the marks of 1858-'59, which always proved reliable guides by which to find the older marks.

In this connection it may not be inappropriate for your commissioners to state that they everywhere found that the joint commission of 1859 did its work in a careful and conscientious manner, and that they believe its line, as marked on the growing timber, is identical with that marked by the joint commission *of 1802, and that full credence [72] should be given to statements of fact in the report of that survey.

From a point about a mile and a quarter east of Bristol, the line was traced without difficulty, other than that due to the broken nature of the country traversed, as far as the beginning of what is commonly known as the Denton valley offset.

At this point occurs the greatest and most remarkable irregularity in the whole course of this line, there being a deflection from the direct course of  $66^{\circ} 10'$  for a distance of 8715.6 feet. The portion of the boundary east of the offset is further north than that west of the offset, so that the deflection is to the south in going westward from the eastern end of the line, the direction in which it was originally run out, or to the north in working eastward from Bristol, as was done in the present survey, for reasons of convenience. In either case, the deflection is to the left hand; but it is not the same in each case, as the two portions of the line east and west of the offset are not exactly parallel to each other. This difference of direction amounts to  $1^{\circ} 30'$ , as shown on the map of the line accompanying this report.

Owing to the long controversy over this offset, and the persistent assertions of certain parties that marked timber would be found on the eastern prolongation of the portion of the line extending from Bristol to Denton's valley, if the same were run out, your commissioners felt obliged, in order to settle the question for all time, to run out this line and make a careful search for marked timber along its course. This was accordingly done, and a careful examination of the timber on each side of the transit line was made as the work progressed; but with only negative results.

Although several weeks were spent in running this line across the series of very rough and heavily timbered mountains lying between Denton's valley and Pond mountain, near the corner of North Carolina, and although every story brought to the commissioners by people interested in the result was carefully examined, your commissioners were utterly unable to find, or to have pointed out to them, one authentic mark of the line of 1802, either on this line or anywhere in its vicinity.

*On the other hand, the "offset line" and [73] the portion of the line running eastward from the offset to the vicinity of the White Top mountain were found well marked; both the 1802 and the 1858-'59 marks were found at frequent intervals.

In order to be assured that these marks were authentic, blocks were cut from several of these trees, at different points on said offset line, and the ages of the marks were determined by counting the rings of the annual growth. These tests showed that the marks were of the supposed age. The ages of the most important marks were verified by the United States Bureau of Forestry. As was found, in 1858-'59 the marking of the timber ceased (or began) on a comparatively low eminence, known as Burnt hill, which, from the neighboring heights of White Top or of Pond mountain, seems to be in the bottom of a hollow.

The apparent discrepancy between this situation and the language of the report of the joint commission of 1802, which reads—"Beginning on the summit of the mountain generally known as the White Top mountain," etc., has led some to suppose that the line should be extended further east, to the summit of the so-called "divide" or watershed between the tributaries of the Holston and New rivers.

There seems, however, nothing to support this theory except the somewhat hazy idea that the eastern end or point of beginning of this line ought to be on a summit.

As a matter of fact, the actual end of the line on Burnt hill is on quite as much of a summit as if it had been on the "divide," which in this place is so low and flat as to be scarcely perceptible as an elevation of any importance. It certainly could never be supposed to be the summit of White Top mountain, which towers far above it, its huge, dome-like bulk filling the northeastern horizon.

No marked trees of 1802 or of 1858-'59 could be found east of Burnt hill, though the line was produced through heavy timber of original growth to the "divide," and careful search was made for them. The same condition was found in 1859, as reported by the commission of that year. A point which that commission seems to have overlooked is the important fact that the eastern end of [74] the marked line at Burnt hill is almost *exactly in line between the corner of North Carolina, on Pond mountain, and the summit of White Top mountain. What more likely than that the commissioners of 1802, who agreed to lay out a line equally distant from the older lines, known as Walker's and Henderson's and beginning on the summit of the mountain generally known as the White Top mountain, should begin at the point where the Walker line reached the northwestern corner of North Carolina, and where, accordingly, the jurisdiction of Tennessee should begin, and run thence in the direction of the most important peak to the northward and eastward until they reached the desired middle point between the lines of Walker and Henderson, and from that point started on their westerly course. It is hard to understand why they should have omitted to mark this part of their line; but this small bit of boundary, extending from the northeast corner of Tennessee to the northwest corner of North Carolina, seems to have been somewhat overlooked in more recent proceedings. Your commissioners respectfully recommend that the straight line between these two points be declared to be the boundary, believing, as they do, in the absence of any marks to the contrary, that this was the original and true line. All of this section is composed of very rugged and densely wooded mountains, with but a scanty population.

The progress of the work in this mountainous and almost inaccessible region was delayed not only by the nature of the country and by the fact that, in this very worst part of the whole line, it was necessary to run out these two independent lines, doubling the labor to be expended, but also by the unfortunately rainy weather which was experienced. The frequent and heavy rains often stopped field-work, washed the few roads so badly that they became almost impassable, and raised the streams so high that sometimes, for days at a time, it was impossible to ford them.

It was not until September 21 that your commissioners were able to close work in the White Top region and return to Bristol, to start westward from that place toward Cumberland gap.

For the remainder of the season, however, both the weather and the nature of the country were much more favorable for *field [75] operations and excellent progress was made, though it was impossible to entirely complete the work before the approach of winter.

So far as the portion of the boundary passing through the central part of the city of Bristol is concerned, the labors of your commissioners were forestalled by a special act of the general assembly of the state of Tennessee, approved January 28, 1901, ceding to the state of Virginia the northern half of the main street of the two cities. The general assembly of Virginia accepted the cession by an act approved February 9, 1901, and the action of the two legislatures was subsequently ratified by the Congress and approved by the President of the United States, March 31, 1901. This cession covers, however, but a small part of the boundary, extending only from the northwest corner of the old town of Bristol on the west to the western boundary of the Bristol cemetery on the east. As it is important to guard against the possible renewal of this long-standing controversy, and as the town is already extending beyond the above limits, it was deemed proper to mark the old diamond line by monuments, just as if there had been no legal change in the boundary for this short distance. But your commissioners regret to report that they have been unable to reach a unanimous conclusion in regard to the true location of the said diamond line within and near the above limits.

Commissioners Hodgkins and Buchanan, after careful study of all the evidence of record, and after diligent examination of the ground, are of the opinion that the said diamond line of 1802-1803 runs from monument No. 25, near the first marked tree east of Bristol, in a straight line, to monument No. 26, on the western boundary of the Bristol cemetery and on the north line of Main or State street; thence along the northern line of said Main or State street to "a planted stone in the edge of a field formerly owned by Z. L. Burson, being the northwest corner of the corporate territory of the old town of Bristol," referred to in the act of [76] session supra; and thence in a straight line to monument No. 28, in the fork of the main road and near the first marked trees west of Bristol.

Commissioner Baylor, on the other hand, after equally careful consideration of all the evidence of record, and diligent examination of the ground, is of the opinion that the said diamond line of 1802-1803 runs from monument No. 25, near the first marked tree east of Bristol, in a straight line to monument No. 27, situated just outside of the wall of the Bristol cemetery and on the middle line of Main or State street as it runs west from this point; and thence in a straight line along the middle of Main or State street to monument No. 28, near the center of the fork of the main road, and near the first marked trees of 1858-'59, west of Bristol.

The said line, running through the center of Main or State street, is just 30 feet south of monument No. 26 on the north property line of Main or State street, outside the western wall of Bristol cemetery.

Westward from Bristol, the boundary was retraced without difficulty by the marked trees, just as in the previous work to the eastward.

Only one marked deviation from the general course of the line was encountered during the remainder of the season. This was on the property formerly known as the Hickman place, in the vicinity of the village of Bloomingdale, Tennessee.

Here the line was found to have a deflection of  $8^{\circ} 30'$  to the right, or north, for the distance of 316.18 feet. From the western end of this offset, the line resumed its general westerly course, and so continued until the end of the work of that year. As the season advanced, it became evident that, even under the most favorable conditions, it would be impossible to complete the survey without working far into the winter, which, on many accounts, was undesirable.

The attorneys general of the two states therefore joined in a request for a further extension of time within which your commissioners might file their report, and this honorable court thereupon extended that time until the opening of the October term, 1902.

The field operations for the season of 1901 [77] were closed at the end of October, at which time the survey had been extended to the Clinch river, 43 miles east of Cumberland gap, the total length of boundary retraced being 70 miles, besides 16 miles of trail line run on the extension of the "straight line" from Denton's valley to Pond mountain.

Before the opening of field-work for the 190 U. S.

season 1902, a complaint reached your commissioners from a citizen of Johnson county, Tennessee, supposed to be reliable, to the effect that interested parties were interfering with the marks placed on the line the previous year, and that, in some cases at least, the monuments had not been properly placed by the persons employed for that purpose.

Although these statements seem scarcely credible, in view of the general interest taken in the work by the inhabitants, your commissioners, thought it best to investigate the matter, and to satisfy themselves by personal inspection that the monuments had remained undisturbed in their proper places.

This was accordingly done at the outset of the season's work and it was ascertained that the stories of falsification of the marking were without any foundation of fact, that all of the monuments between the northeast corner of Tennessee and Bristol had been properly set, and that none of them had been disturbed.

These preliminary operations occupied the time from June 23 to July 4, on which day your commissioners returned to Bristol. After placing some additional monuments on the old line in and near Bristol, they proceeded to Gate City, Virginia, where the camp outfit had been stored at the close of work in the preceding autumn, and at once went into camp at Robinett, Tennessee, west of the North fork of Clinch river.

The survey of the boundary line was resumed at the point where it had been suspended the year before, at the crossing of Clinch river, near Church's ford.

From this point to Cumberland gap the line crosses a succession of mountains and valleys, with comparatively little level or cleared land. Little difficulty was experienced in tracing the line in this part of its course, the marked trees being generally found at frequent intervals. The line preserved its general course as before, except [78] that two deflections to the northward were found which were similar to that found the year before near Bloomingdale.

The first of these occurred on the mountain called Wallen's ridge, where the line made a deflection of  $19^{\circ}$  to the north before reaching the summit, and kept that course for a distance of 4643.7 feet before resuming its usual direction. There were numerous trees with both the 1802 and 1859 marks on this deflected line.

The final deflection of  $4^{\circ} 10'$  to the north for a distance of 6503.3 feet began at the "old furnace road" near Station creek, less than 3 miles from the west end of the line on Cumberland mountain. From the western end of this offset the line runs straight to the terminus.

There has been considerable controversy and litigation over these last 3 miles of the boundary, and a number of witnesses have testified in the case of Virginia against Tennessee, Supreme Court, United States, October term, 1891, that there were none of the marks of the previous surveys remaining between Station creek and the summit of Cumberland mountain, owing to the destruction of the timber in that area during the military operations of the Civil War.

Your commissioners were able to find, however, three trees well marked with the mark of the 1859 survey, and at least one of these bore evidence in the position of this mark that an old diamond mark was formerly visible above it.

These marked trees were found on the east and west part of the line west of the offset, and are in excellent alignment, and settled, beyond the possibility of doubt, the location of this part of the boundary, and hence the short remaining distance to the summit of Cumberland mountain. This line passes near and a little south of the old mill several times referred to in the case above cited, and thence across the Union Railroad station, leaving most of the town of Cumberland Gap in Tennessee. The summit of Cumberland mountain was reached on Saturday, August 23d, 1902, and on the following Monday the field-work of the survey was completed and the camp outfit was packed and shipped to Washington. Your commissioners then [79]*separated, Professor Buchanan returned to his home at Lebanon, Tennessee, to work up his field-notes; and Mr. Hodgkins to Washington to attend to business of the commission and to draft a report of its operation; while Mr. Baylor remained on the ground until September 13, superintending the placing of monuments along the part of the line surveyed in 1902.

In conclusion, your commissioners state that they have found the duties imposed upon them by your instructions often arduous and exacting, and that the survey just completed proved far more laborious, and was attended by greater hardships, than any of them had anticipated; but that they have nevertheless given the same careful attention to every part of it, and that they believe it to be correct throughout.

List of Monuments of Cut Limestone and Other Durable Marks, as Hereinafter More Fully Described.

(1)—At northeast corner of Tennessee, at Burnt hill.

(2)—On summit of Flat Spring ridge.

(3)—On Valley creek road, on John Toliver place.

(4)—On road from Laurel river to White Top mountain, near an old mill.

(5)—On road up Laurel river, near a double ford.

On summit of Iron mountain, near the north end of the rocky bluff, a cairn of rocks was erected.

(6)—At eastern foot Holston mountain, a short distance from Beaver Dam creek, and the Virginia and Carolina Railway.

Coast and Geodetic Survey triangulation station "Damascus" on summit of Holston mountain, a stone marked +

US

CS

(7)—On Rockhouse branch road in the valley, on Mary Nealy place.

(8)—On road from Barron Railway station to New Shady road, cut-stone monument of 1858-'59.

(9)—In woods, north of New Shady road, where the line changes its course to south 23° 50' west (mag.) a marked deflection from the general course of the line.

*(10)—On the New Shady road, where[80] this deflected line crosses it.

(11)—In woods, on Little mountain, west of Cox creek, where this bearing of south 23° 50' west (mag.) ends, and the line resumes its general course to the westward.

(12)—On road just north of cross-road leading to Thomas Denton place.

(13)—On road on hill on C. D. Short place.

(14)—On road on east bank of the south fork Holston river, cut-stone monument of 1858-'59.

(15)—On hill in George Garrett's cow lot, west and north of south fork Holston river.

(16)—On road to King's mill, near John Buckley house.

(17)—On road to King's mill, via Thomas place.

(18)—On summit of open hill east of Painter place, concrete monument.

(19)—On road running east of Painter house.

(20)—On road running west of Painter house, cut-stone monument of 1858-'59.

(21)—On road through woods west of Painter property.

(22)—On summit of first high ridge east of Paperville road.

(23)—On Paperville road, at Jones place.

(24)—On road west of Carmack house.

(25)—On Booher place, near first marked tree (of 1858-'59), east of Bristol.

(26)—On north property line of the main street of Bristol, outside the western wall of the cemetery. Commissioner Baylor does not consider this a part of the true line.

(27)—Outside the street wall of the Bristol cemetery, at the point where the average center line of Main street intersects said wall. Commissioners Hodgkins and Buchanan do not consider this a point on the boundary.

A stone post in the edge of a field, formerly owned by Z. L. Burson, at the northwest corner of the old corporate territory of the old town of Bristol. Commissioner Baylor does not consider this a point on the boundary.

(28)—In the fork of the main road, west of the town of Bristol.

*(29)—On road to Bristol, east of Worley[81] place.

(30)—On road to Bristol, west of Worley place.

Coast and Geodetic Survey triangulation station "Dunn" on summit of ridge, on old

US

Dunn place, stone marked +

CS

(31)—On Dishner valley road.

(32)—On road to Bristol, east of Gum spring.

(33)—On road to Bristol, near Tallman house.

(34)—On road in valley, west of old abandoned railway bed.

(35)—On Scott road.

(36)—On road west of Akard place.

(37)—On road near Jackson place.

(38)—On Boozey creek road.

(39)—On road to Hilton ford, cut-stone monument 1858-'59.

(40)—On Timbertree road.

(41)—Between two roads just east of Gate City road.

(42)—In woods, west of Gate City road, where there is a deflection of  $8^{\circ} 30'$  to the right, or north, from the general course of the line, on old Hickman place.

(43)—In woods northeast of Bloomingdale, where this  $8^{\circ} 30'$  deflection from the general course of the line ends, in going westward, and line resumes its general course.

(44)—On road to Bloomingdale.

(45)—On Wall gap road.

(46)—On road up ravine

(47)—On Carter valley road.

(48)—On Gate City and Kingsport road, cut-stone monument of 1858-'59.

Coast and Geodetic Survey triangulation station "Cloud" on bluff of North Holston river, stone marked +

U S

C S

(49)—On east bank of North Holston river.

(50)—On road on west bank of North Holston river.

(51)—At cross-roads on Stanley valley road, cut-stone monument of 1858-'59.

(52)—On Stanley valley road, on hill at turn in road.

[82] * (53)—On Cameron postoffice road.

(54)—On Stanley valley road, south of barn of N. J. Bussell, cut-stone monument of 1858-'59.

(55)—On Stanley valley road, cut-stone monument of 1858-'59.

(56)—On road which runs across Oposum ridge.

(57)—On Moore's gap road.

(58)—On Caney valley road.

(59)—On Little Poor valley road, south of Mary Field house.

(60)—On Poor valley road, cut-stone monument of 1858-'59.

On summit of Clinch mountain, cairn of rocks erected, a few feet south of the Coast and Geodetic Survey triangulation station

U S

"Wildcat," which station marked with +

C S

cut in sandstone rock.

(61)—On Clinch valley road.

(62)—On road on east bank of Clinch river, above Church's ford.

(63)—On road at Jane Bagley's house.

On summit of open hill east of Fisher valley road, line crosses solid rock. Small hole drilled in it, with T cut south of hole, and V north of it.

(64)—On Fisher valley road.

On summit of high ridge, east of Robinett line, crosses solid rock. Small hole drilled in it, with V cut on north side of hole, and T on south of it.

190 U. S.

(65)—On road at Robinett.

On side of ridge at east edge of woods line crosses rock. Small hole drilled in it, with V cut on north side of hole and T on south of it.

On summit of Newman's ridge, line crosses rock similarly marked.

(66)—On Rogersville and Jonesville road.

(67)—On Little creek road.

(68)—On Sneedville and Black Water Salt Works road.

(69)—On Black Water valley road near J. Mullen's house. Coast and Geodetic Survey triangulation station "Powell," on*sum-[83] mit of Powell mountain, large sandstone rock marked +

U S

C S

(70)—On Mulberry gap and Wallen creek road, near large poplar.

(71)—Near junction of Mulberry gap and Jonesville roads.

(72)—On east face of Wallen ridge, on edge of trail over ridge, where there is a deflection to the right, or north, of  $19^{\circ}$  from the general course of the line.

On summit of Wallen ridge line crosses large sandstone rock. Small hole cut in it with V. cut north of hole and T. south of it.

(73)—On west face of Wallen ridge, in open field, on the boundary fence of Mollie Thompson and J. W. Moore, where this deflection of  $19^{\circ}$  from the general course of the line ends, in going westward, and line resumes its general course.

(74)—On road east of Powell river, and north of Welch or Baldwin ford.

On rock bluff west of Powell river, a small hole was cut with V north of this hole and T south of it.

(75)—On Powell river and Sneedville road, on hill west of Powell river, rough stone monument with V cut on north face and T on south face.

(76)—On Powell river and Sneedville road.

(77)—On Martin creek road.

(78)—On Low hollow road.

(79)—On Four Mile creek road.

(80)—On Bayles' mill road.

(81)—On Ball's mill road.

Coast and Geodetic Survey triangulation station "Minter" on summit of hill, near gate and fence corner.

(83)—On road south of Jacob Estep's house.

(84)—On East Machine branch road.

(85)—On West Machine branch road.

(86)—On Dicktown road.

(87)—On Mud Hollow hole road, near large limestone spring.

(88)—On Hoskins' valley road, near large limestone spring.

*(89)—On George Souther's sawmill road. [84]

(90)—On Louisville and Nashville Railway, near Brook's crossing.

(91)—On old iron-works road, where there is a deflection of 4° 10' to the right, or north, from the general course of the line.

(92)—On Station creek road.

(93)—On east side of Poor valley ridge, where this deflection of 4° 10' from the general course of the line ends, in going westward, and line resumes its general course.

(94)—On Cumberland gap and Virginia road, east of Cumberland gap.

(95)—On small hill just east of road connecting Cumberland gap with Old Virginia and Cumberland gap road, in the edge of the old town park.

(96)—On side of open hill facing south, about 2½ squares east of the Tazewell and Kentucky road, at Cumberland gap.

(97)—On west side of Tazewell and Kentucky road, and just east of woolen factory at Cumberland gap.

(98)—At foot of Cumberland mountain, west of the Union Railway station, and in line with the south edge of the south chimney of said Union Railway station.

(99)—On summit of Cumberland mountain. The monument of cut limestone has "V" and "T" cut on its adjacent vertical faces, and "Corner" cut on its top. Its base is set in cement and broken rock, with one diagonal running east and west. The summit of the sandstone ledge was blasted in order to set this monument.

In addition to the cut-stone monuments and other durable marks, your commissioners marked with six chops, thus:— the trees on and within 10 feet of this line on each side.

[85] *Your commissioners unanimously agree in recommending that the rights of individuals having claims or titles to lands on either side of said boundary line, as ascertained, remarked, and re-established by your commissioners, shall not in consequence thereof in anywise be prejudiced or affected, where said individuals have paid their taxes, in good faith, in the wrong state.

William C. Hodgkins, [seal.]
Commissioner.

James B. Baylor, [seal.]
Commissioner.

Andrew H. Buchanan, [seal.]
Commissioner.

October 13, 1902.

Report of the Treasurer of the Tennessee and Virginia Boundary Commission.

To the Honorable the Chief Justice and Associate Justices of the Supreme Court of the United States:

The treasurer of the commission appointed by the decree of this honorable court, dated April 30, 1900, to re-establish the boundary between the states of Virginia and Tennessee, herewith submits the abstracts of the monthly expenditures of the entire work,— ten in number,—beginning May, 1901, and ending September, 1902, as follows:

No. 1. May, 1901 .....	$ 384.05
No. 2. June, 1901 .....	1083.75
No. 3. July, 1901 .....	1070.18
No. 4. August, 1901 .....	1197.76
No. 5. September, 1901 .....	1263.11
No. 6. October, 1901 .....	1565.63
No. 7. June, 1902 .....	262.13
No. 8. July, 1902 .....	1045.45
No. 9. August, 1902 .....	1245.34
No. 10. September, 1902 .....	358.59

$9475.99

Amount chargeable to each state .. 4738.00

General Summary.

*Remuneration of Commissioners, [86]
at $10 per day .....	$5730.00
Transportation to and from field ..	274.04
Transportation in field (about) ..	1085.58
Stone monuments .....	678.90
Labor, freight, etc. ....	1707.47

Total .....

$9475.99

Cash received from Virginia .....

4737.99

Cash received from Tennessee ....

4738.00

Total .....

$9475.99

The above is respectfully submitted.

A. H. Buchanan,

Treasurer of the Boundary Commission.

J. C. W. United States Department of Agriculture, Bureau of Forestry, Washington, D. C.

Office of the Forester.

August 20, 1901.

This beech block came from the "offset" near its western end and just east of the "Shady road."

J. B. Baylor,
Commissioner.

Mr. J. B. Baylor, Tenn.-Va. Boundary Commission.

Abingdon, Virginia.

Dear Sir:—

Your letter of August 17, and also the beech block are at hand. In the absence of Mr. Sudworth, with whom your previous correspondence has been, I am glad to give you my opinion as to the questions stated in your letter.

Owing to the very slow growth of the tree from which this block was cut, in early life, it is not possible to count the annual rings, even with the aid of a strong magnifier, with absolute certainty of accuracy. The results I have obtained show that its age in 1802 was 96 years, and that its diameter, not including *bark, was about 6 inches, or about 6½ inches, including the bark. There are five wounds shown in this block. Two of these occurred, in my judgment, forty-three years ago, or in the year 1858. The three older wounds I believe were made ninety-nine years ago, or in 1802. [87]

This beech block will be carefully stored away in this bureau.

Very truly,

(Signed) Overton W. Price,
Acting Forester.

190 U. S.

J. C. W. United States Department of Agriculture, Bureau of Forestry, Washington, D. C.

Division of Forest Investigation.

November 11, 1901.

This hemlock block came from near the eastern end of the "off-set line,"—a short distance from where the marked trees end.

J. B. Baylor,
Commissioner.

Mr. J. B. Baylor, Tenn.-Va. Boundary Commission,

Bloomington, Sullivan County, Tenn.

Dear Sir:—

The hemlock blocks sent to this office some time ago have remained unexamined so long on account of my absence from the office. I regret to have thus delayed the answer so long.

I have just examined the specimens, and find that the deeper scar in the larger of the two specimens was made in the year 1802. Ninety-nine annual rings were formed since the scar was made. This year's growth is still in a formative stage.

The somewhat superficial scar in the smaller specimen was made in 1858, 42 annual rings having been laid on since the mark was made. The last season's growth is not complete.

As requested in your letter of Sept. 8, these blocks will be retained subject to further advices from you.

Very truly yours,
(Signed) Geo. B. Sudworth, Chief.

[8C] *Property List Purchased for Field Outfit in the Boundary Survey.

3 saddles, bridles, and blankets	....	$27.50
1 cooking stove and repairs	.....	7.00
1 heating stove	.....	2.25
8 joints of stovepipe	.....	1.35
1 crowbar	.....	.65
1 shovel	.....	.85
1 grindstone	.....	.90
6 axes	.....	3.90
2 files	.....	.20
4 lamps	....	1.00
1 saw (large)	.....	1.35
1 trowel	.....	.50
2 pairs of tree-climbers	.....	3.50
1 cot	.....	2.50
1 office table	.....	2.50
1 dining table	.....	1.00
Total	.....	$56.95

Of the above, at the close of the field-work, the following were sold:

2 saddles	.....	$3.00
2 stoves	.....	2.50
2 tables	.....	2.00
3 lamps	.....	.50
1 grindstone	.....	.50
1 saw	.....	.75
2 axes	.....	.65
1 cot	.....	.50
1 shovel	.....	.60
Total	.....	$11.00

For the remainder, not worn out, purchased
190 U. S.

ers could not be found without the delay of a commissioner in the field, at a greater expense than they were worth. The proceeds of the sales made—$11.00—have been returned, one half to each state.

A. H. Buchanan, Treasurer.

*MARY PHELPS MONTGOMERY, Executrix of the Last Will and Testament of James B. Montgomery, Deceased, Plff. in Err.,

v.

CITY OF PORTLAND and the Port of Portland.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 89-107.)

Navigable waters—state authority over—establishment of harbor lines.

The extension of wharves beyond harbor lines established by local law, in navigable waters of the United States wholly within the limits of a state, cannot be justified by the relocation of such harbor lines by the Secretary of War acting under the authority of the river and harbor act of September 19, 1890, § 12 (25 Stat. at L. 400, 425, chap. 860), which forbids the construction or extension of any such structures beyond the harbor lines established under his direction, except under such regulations as he may prescribe, since Congress has not, by such act, indicated any purpose wholly to ignore the original power of the states to regulate the use of navigable waters entirely within their respective limits.

[No. 47.]

Argued April 9, 1903. Decided May 18, 1903.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Oregon to review a judgment which reversed a judgment of the Circuit Court of Multnomah County dismissing a bill in a suit to prevent the extension of wharves beyond the established harbor lines, and granted the relief sought. Affirmed.

See same case below, 38 Or. 215, 62 Pac. 755.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. John H. Mitchell argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

As to those subjects of commerce which are local or limited in their nature or sphere of operation, such as the erection of bridges, the establishment of harbor lines in harbors, etc., the city may prescribe regulations, until Congress assumes control of them, but as to such as are national in their character, and require uniformity of regulation, the power of Congress is exclusive, and until Congress acts such commerce is entitled to be free from state regulations, exactions, and burdens.

NOTE.—As to the establishment of dock or harbor lines—see note to Grand Rapids v. Powers (Mich.) 14 L. R. A. 498.

On the power of states over navigable rivers—see notes to Swanson v. Mississippi & R. River Boom Co. (Minn.) 7 L. R. A. 673; Eisenbach v. Hatfield (Wash.) 12 L. R. A. 632; Mills v. United States (C. C. S. D. Ga.) 12 L. R. A. 673.

Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, 6 L. ed. 23; Brown v. Maryland, 12 Wheat. 419, 6 L. ed. 678; Pennsylvania v. Wheeling & B. Bridge Co. 18 How. 421, 15 L. ed. 435; Gilman v. Philadelphia, 3 Wall. 713, 18 L. ed. 96; Cannon v. New Orleans, 20 Wall. 577, 22 L. ed. 417; Wisconsin v. Duluth, 96 U. S. 388, 24 L. ed. 672; Turner v. Maryland, 107 U. S. 38, 27 L. ed. 370, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 44; South Carolina v. Georgia, 93 U. S. 4, 23 L. ed. 782; Parkersburg & O. River Transp. Co. v. Parkersburg, 107 U. S. 691, 27 L. ed. 584, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 732; Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 114 U. S. 196, 29 L. ed. 158, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 382, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 826; Brown v. Houston, 114 U. S. 624, 29 L. ed. 258, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1091; Morgan's L. & T. R. S. Co. v. Louisiana Bd. of Health, 118 U. S. 455, 30 L. ed. 237, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1114; United States v. Duluth, 1 Dill. 469, Fed. Cas. No. 15,001; Ouahita & M. River Packet Co. v. Aiken, 121 U. S. 444, 30 L. ed. 976, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 379, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 907; Gould, Waters. § 138, p. 254; Lawton v. Steele, 152 U. S. 137, 38 L. ed. 388, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 499; Covington & C. Bridge Co. v. Kentucky, 154 U. S. 204, 38 L. ed. 962, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 649, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1087.

Whenever Congress acts, then the power of the state is at an end, and if any conflict exists between the harbor lines established by the national and state governments respectively, those of the state must give way to those established by the general government.

Congress has jurisdiction, in the exercise of its power to regulate commerce, over the navigable waters of a river lying wholly within the limits of a single state.

Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, 6 L. ed. 23; Feazie v. Moor, 14 How. 568, 14 L. ed. 545; Willson v. Black Bird Creek Marsh Co. 2 Pet. 251, 7 L. ed. 414; Albany Bridge Case, 2 Wall. 403, sub nom. Coleman v. Hudson River Bridge Co. 17 L. ed. 876; Gilman v. Philadelphia, 3 Wall. 713, 18 L. ed. 96; The Passaic Bridges, 3 Wall. 782, sub nom. Milnor v. New Jersey R. & Transp. Co. 16 L. ed. 799; Pound v. Turek, 95 U. S. 459, 24 L. ed. 525; Brown v. Houston, 114 U. S. 622, 29 L. ed. 257, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1091; Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 114 U. S. 196, 29 L. ed. 158, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 382, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 826.

The action of Congress in enacting §§ 7, 12, of the river and harbor act of September 19, 1890 (26 Stat. at L. pp. 454, 455), conferring certain powers on the Secretary of War, is not a delegation of legislative powers, and said sections are constitutional.

Wayman v. Southard, 10 Wheat. 1-43, 6 L. ed. 253, 262; Cooley, Const. Lim. 137; Sutherland, Stat. Constr. § 68; United States v. Eliason, 16 Pet. 291, 10 L. ed. 968; Gratiot v. United States, 4 How. 80, 11 L. ed. 884; Smith v. Whitney, 116 U. S. 167, 29 L. ed. 601, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 570; Tilley v. Savannah, F. & W. R. Co. 4 Woods, 427, 5 Fed. 641; Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Dey, 1 L. R. A. 744, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 325, 35 Fed. 866; Re Griner, 16 Wis. 427; United States v. Ormsbee, 74 Fed. 209; Marshall Field & Co. v. Clark, 143 U. S. 649-693, 36 L. ed. 294-310, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 495; Locke's Appeal, 72 Pa. 491, 13 Am. Rep. 716; South Carolina v. Georgia, 93 U. S. 13, 23 L. ed. 785; Miller v. New York, 109 U. S. 385, 27 L. ed. 971, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 228; United States v. Moline, 82 Fed. 596; United States v. North Bloomfield Gravel Min. Co. 81 Fed. 253; State ex rel. Railroad & Warehouse Commission v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 38 Minn. 281, 37 N. W. 782; State ex rel. Board of Transportation v. Fremont, E. & M. Valley R. Co. 22 Neb. 313, 35 N. W. 118; Stone v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 116 U. S. 307, 29 L. ed. 636, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 334, 388, 1191; United States v. Romard, 89 Fed. 157; Fallbrook Irrig. Dist. v. Bradley, 164 U. S. 112, 41 L. ed. 369, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 56; State v. Gerhardt, 145 Ind. 439, 33 L. R. A. 313, 44 N. E. 469; Illinois ex rel. Hunt v. Illinois C. R. Co. 34 C. C. A. 138, 91 Fed. 955.

The power given to the Secretary of War by § 12 of the act of September 19, 1890, supra, to establish harbor lines, implies necessarily the power to modify, change, or create anew.

United States v. Eliason, 16 Pet. 291, 10 L. ed. 968; United States v. Romard, 89 Fed. 157.

The riparian owner in Oregon, in the absence of restrictive legislation, has the right by the common law to connect his shore line by means of wharves, piers, or docks constructed over the shoal or shallow waters immediately bordering upon his land, with the waters which are navigable in fact. This he has the right to do not only in his own interest as a riparian proprietor, but as well also in the interest of the public, and of national and interstate commerce.

St. Paul & P. R. Co. v. Schurmeir, 7 Wall. 272, 19 L. ed. 74; Yates v. Milwaukee, 10 Wall. 497, 19 L. ed. 984; Weber v. State Harbor Comrs. 18 Wall. 57, 21 L. ed. 798; Dutton v. Strong, 1 Black, 23, 17 L. ed. 29.

The question as to what constitutes a public nuisance must be determined by general and fixed laws, and it is not to be tolerated that the local municipal authorities of a state can declare any particular business or structure a nuisance in a summary mode and enforce its decree at its own pleasure. Whether a bridge or a pier is a public nuisance or not, whether the same is an obstruction to navigation and commerce or not, is a question of fact, and no simple declaration of a municipality can determine the question.

Dutton v. Strong, 1 Black, 32, 17 L. ed. 29; Yates v. Milwaukee, 10 Wall. 504, 19 L. ed. 986; Angell, Tide Waters, 196; West Hartford v. Hartford Water Comrs. 68 Conn. 323, 36 Atl. 786; Milne v. Davidson, 5 Mart. N. S. 409, 16 Am. Dec. 195; Cooley, Const. Lim. 6th ed. 741, note; Everett v. Council Bluffs, 46 Iowa, 67; Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Joliet, 79 Ill. 44; Butchers' Union S. H. & L. S. L. Co. v. Crescent City L. S. L. & S. H. Co. 111 U. S. 746, 28 L. ed. 585, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 652; Smith v. Minto, 30 Or. 353, 48 Pac. 166; 2 Dill. Mun. Corp. 4th

ed. § 800; Grossman v. Oakland, 30 Or. 478, 36 L. R. A. 593, 41 Pac. 5.

The provision of the city charter conferring power on the city of Portland, "to regulate the building of wharves and the driving of piles in the Willamette river within the limits of the city, and to establish a line beyond which wharves shall not be built nor piles be driven," does not authorize it to declare by a special ordinance that a private wharf is an obstruction to navigation and a public nuisance, if in point of fact it is not such obstruction or a public nuisance.

Yates v. Milwaukee, 10 Wall. 498, 19 L. ed. 984; Smith v. Minto, 30 Or. 353, 48 Pac. 166; Grossman v. Oakland, 30 Or. 478, 36 L. R. A. 593, 41 Pac. 5.

The location of the line by the city of Portland, and by the port of Portland, in front of respondent's property, in water averaging less than 1 foot in depth, and from bare ground at low water to not exceeding 2 feet in depth at any point, was an unreasonable exercise of municipal power.

Yates v. Milwaukee, 10 Wall. 498, 19 L. ed. 984; Smith v. Minto, 30 Or. 353, 48 Pac. 166; Grossman v. Oakland, 30 Or. 478, 36 L. R. A. 593, 41 Pac. 5.

The municipality must prove by evidence, other than the mere declaration of the city itself, that the structure does interfere with navigation or the improvement of the river or commerce, and that it is a public nuisance.

Yates v. Milwaukee, 10 Wall. 498, 19 L. ed. 984; Angell, Tide Waters, 196.

The authorities of a town will not be permitted to locate an imaginary deep-water line away from the navigable part of a river or bay and without making the water navigable up to that line, so as to deprive the riparian owners of the advantages of wharves, under a provision of law conferring upon such town the right to regulate the line of deep water to which wharves may be built.

Wool v. Edenton, 117 N. C. 1, 23 S. E. 40.

Whenever a police power is so exercised by a state as to come within the domain of Federal authority, as defined by the Constitution, the latter must prevail.

Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1-210, 6 L. ed. 23-73; Henderson v. Wickham, 92 U. S. 259-272, 23 L. ed. 543; New Orleans Gaslight Co. v. Louisiana Light & H. P. & Mfg. Co. 115 U. S. 650-661, 29 L. ed. 516-521, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 252; Morgan's L. & T. R. & S. S. Co. v. Louisiana Bd. of Health, 118 U. S. 464, 30 L. ed. 237, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1114.

The police power does not extend to depriving any person of the lawful use of property without due process of law, and without just compensation.

Re Jacobs, 98 N. Y. 110, 50 Am. Rep. 636; Re Cheesebrough, 78 N. Y. 232; Rockwell v. Nearing, 35 N. Y. 302.

Wharves, levees, and landing places are essential to commerce by water, no less than a navigable channel and a clear river.

Parkersburg & O. River Transp. Co. v. Parkersburg, 107 U. S. 707, 27 L. ed. 590, 2 190 U. S.

Sup. Ct. Rep. 732; Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 114 U. S. 205, 29 L. ed. 162, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 382, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 826.

Mr. C. E. S. Wood argued the cause, and, with Mr. George H. Williams, filed a brief for defendants in error:

Sec. 12 of the act of Congress of September 19, 1890 (26 Stat. at L. 455, chap. 907), is unconstitutional.

United States v. Keokuk & H. Bridge Co. 45 Fed. 178; United States v. Rider, 50 Fed. 406; Mobile County v. Kimball, 102 U. S. 699, 702, 26 L. ed. 240, 241; Gilman v. Philadelphia, 3 Wall. 725, 18 L. ed. 99; Willamette Iron Bridge Co. v. Hatch, 125 U. S. 1, 31 L. ed. 629, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 811; Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 114 U. S. 196, 29 L. ed. 158, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 382, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 826; United States v. Bailey, 1 McLean, 240, Fed. Cas. No. 14,495; The Mining Debris Case, 9 Sawy. 497, 18 Fed. 753.

The Secretary of War had no right to change or relocate established harbor lines.

The pleadings and evidence show affirmatively that the Secretary of War had no jurisdiction to change the established harbor lines of Portland.

Cooley, Const. Lim. § 406; New Jersey R. & Transp. Co. v. Suydam, 17 N. J. L. 30.

Montgomery had no right to drive piles or extend his wharf beyond the wharf lines established by the city of Portland.

Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Ohio, 165 U. S. 365, 41 L. ed. 747, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 357.

To regulate the driving of piles or the building of wharves within the harbor of Portland is within the police powers of the city.

Dubuque v. Stout, 32 Iowa, 84, 7 Am. Rep. 171; The W. H. Beamen, 45 Fed. 129; Cushing v. The John Frazer, 21 How. 187, sub nom. The Jas. Gray v. The John Fraser, 16 L. ed. 108; Hart v. Albany, 9 Wend. 571, 24 Am. Dec. 165; Vanderbilt v. Adams, 7 Cow. 349; New York City v. Miln, 11 Pet. 132, 138, 9 L. ed. 659, 662; License Cases, 5 How. 574, 12 L. ed. 287; Cooley v. Philadelphia Port Wardens, 12 How. 319, 13 L. ed. 1094; Crandall v. Nevada, 6 Wall. 42, 18 L. ed. 747; Munn v. Illinois, 94 U. S. 113, 24 L. ed. 77; Thorpe v. Rutland & B. R. Co. 27 Vt. 149, 62 Am. Dec. 625; Boston & M. R. Co. v. York County Comrs. 79 Me. 386, 10 Atl. 113.

Said § 12 did not exclude the jurisdiction of the state inside the harbor lines fixed by the Secretary in 1898.

Veazie v. Moor, 14 How. 574, 14 L. ed. 547.

Montgomery's right to build a wharf was subject to the provisions of §§ 4227, 4228 of the Oregon Code.

Gould, Waters, § 179; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Illinois, 146 U. S. 387, 36 L. ed. 1018, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 110; Com. v. Alger, 61 Mass. 53.

The decision of the port of Portland is binding upon the plaintiff in error.

28 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 1046; 2 Dill. Mun. Corp. §§ 832, 836.

The port of Portland has the right to regulate the driving of piles or the building of wharves inside of the harbor lines fixed by the Secretary in 1898.

People v. Williams, 64 Cal. 499, 2 Pac. 393.

Mr. Thomas D. Rambaut also argued the cause for defendants in error.

Mr. Justice Harlan delivered the opinion of the court:

This writ of error brings up for review the final decree in a suit instituted in one of the courts of Oregon by the city of Portland and port of Portland against James B. Montgomery, who died during the progress of the cause, and was succeeded as defendant by his executrix, the present plaintiff in error.

The principal question in the case is whether, under the circumstances to be presently stated, Montgomery, as owner of land situated within the limits of Portland on the Willamette river, had the right to extend his wharves into the river beyond certain harbor lines established in 1892.

The city of Portland was authorized by its charter to regulate the building of wharves within its limits, and to establish a line beyond which wharves should not be built nor piles driven. That provision was in force on and after February 19th, 1891.

By an act of the Oregon legislature of February 18th, 1891, the inhabitants of the port of Portland were created a corporation "to so improve the Willamette river at the cities of Portland, East Portland, and Albina, and the Willamette and Columbia rivers between said cities and the sea, as that there shall be made and permanently main-[90]tained in said Willamette river *at said cities, and in the said Willamette and Columbia rivers between said cities and the sea, a ship channel of good and sufficient width, and having a depth at all points at mean low water, both at said cities and between said cities and the sea, of not less than 25 feet." And, so far as was necessary to carry out that object, the corporation was given full control of those rivers at those cities and between them and the sea, to the full extent that the state could grant the same, and was authorized to remove such obstructions from them and erect such works in them as were found necessary or convenient in creating and maintaining the required channel. The power so conferred was to be exercised by a board of commissioners. Such a board had been appointed and organized prior to the institution of this suit.

A copy of the act incorporating the port of Portland was sent to the Secretary of War, "who approved the same," and the work done by that port in improving the Willamette and Columbia rivers was conducted in conjunction with the United States engineers in charge of those rivers, and who acted under instructions from the Secretary of War. The engineers annually reported to the Secretary the nature and amount of such work.

By the river and harbor act of July 13th, 1892, amending the 7th section of the river and harbor act of September 19th, 1890, it was provided:

968

"§ 7. That it shall not be lawful to build any wharf, pier, dolphin, boom, dam, weir, breakwater, bulkhead, jetty, or structure of any kind outside established harbor lines, or in any navigable waters of the United States where no harbor lines are or may be established, without the permission of the Secretary of War, in any port, roadstead, haven, harbor, navigable river, or other waters of the United States, in such manner as shall obstruct or impair navigation, commerce, or anchorage of said waters; and it shall not be lawful hereafter to commence the construction of any bridge, bridge draw, bridge piers and abutments, causeway, or other works over or in any port, road, roadstead, haven, harbor, navigable river, or navigable waters of the United States, under any act of the legislative assembly *of any state, until the location[91] and plan of such bridge or other works have been submitted to and approved by the Secretary of War; or to excavate or fill, or in any manner to alter or modify the course, location, condition, or capacity of [any port, roadstead, haven, harbor, harbor of refuge, or inclosure within the limits of any breakwater, or of] the channel of said navigable water of the United States, unless approved and authorized by the Secretary of War: Provided, That this section shall not apply to any bridge, bridge draw, bridge piers and abutments the construction of which has been heretofore duly authorized by law, or be so construed as to authorize the construction of any bridge, draw bridge, bridge piers and abutments or other works under an act of the legislature of any state, over or in any stream, port, roadstead, haven or harbor, or other navigable water not wholly within the limits of such state." 26 Stat. at L. 454, chap. 907; 27 Stat. at L. 88, 110, chap. 158.

"§ 12. That section 12† of the river and harbor act of August 11, 1888, be amended and re-enacted so as to read as follows:

"Where it is made manifest to the Secretary of War that the establishment of harbor lines is essential to the preservation and protection of harbors, he may, and is hereby authorized, to cause such lines to be established, beyond which no piers, wharves, bulkheads, or other works shall be extended or deposits made, except under such regulations as may be prescribed from time to time by him; and any person who shall wilfully violate the provisions of this section, or any rule or regulation made by the Secretary of War in pursuance of this section, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, on conviction thereof, shall be punished by a fine not exceeding $1,000, or imprisonment not exceeding one year, at the discretion of the †"Sec. 12. Where it is made manifest to the Secretary of War that the establishment of harbor lines is essential to the preservation and protection of harbors, he may, and is hereby, authorized to cause such lines to be established, beyond which no piers or wharves shall be extended or deposits made except under such regulations as may be prescribed from time to time by him." 25 Stat. at L. 400, 425, chap. 860.

190 U. S.

court, for each offense." 26 Stat. at L. 426, 455, chap. 907.

[92] *On the 9th day of August, 1892, the Secretary of War, proceeding—so the finding of facts states—under § 12 of the act of 1890, caused certain harbor lines to be established in the Willamette river within the limits of Portland. And by an ordinance adopted December 12th, 1892, the common council of the city adopted as its wharf lines the harbor lines so established.

On or about May 21st, 1898, Montgomery applied to the Secretary of War to have the above harbor lines relocated or located farther out in front of certain water lots belonging to him, his complaint being that, as established in 1892, those lines were too far inland. By order of the Secretary a public hearing was had on this application. A number of the leading business men of Portland attended and made protests against the proposed relocation. An account of this meeting, with all the papers relating to it, was sent to the chief of engineers, who made a report to the Secretary of War favorable to Montgomery's application. A map accompanied that report showing the proposed new line. Under date of September 23d, 1898, Mr. Meiklejohn, Acting Secretary of War, approved Montgomery's application, and assented to the proposed change or relocation of the harbor line.

Having been notified by the local United States engineer that the War Department had approved the new line, Montgomery began the construction of a wharf by the driving of piles partly outside of the line of 1892 and in front of his lots, but wholly inside of the relocated line as indicated on the above map. He did not drive any piles or place any obstruction in the river outside of the relocated line.

On or about November 2d, 1898, the board of commissioners of the port took official action about the new line and Montgomery's construction of wharves beyond the line of 1892. They declared of record that the extension of wharves into the river outside of the line of 1892 would greatly damage the port and its shipping interests, and they ordered Montgomery and those acting under him to cease the construction of any wharf beyond that line and at once to remove any piling or other obstruction that he may have placed in the river in front of his property and *beyond such wharf line. Subsequently, on November 23d, 1898, the port commissioners took further action, and declared that the wharf proposed by said Montgomery would interfere with the navigation of the river by creating shoal places in its now navigable waters, and obstruct the work of making and maintaining a channel in the river 25 feet in depth, as provided for in the act incorporating the port of Portland.

Of this action by the local authorities Montgomery and those in his employment were notified in writing.

The suit was brought to prevent the continuance of the work upon which Montgomery entered. The defendant resisted the relief asked, and insisted that the action of the 190 U. S.

Secretary of War gave him complete authority to proceed despite any objections urged by the city and port of Portland. The defense was sustained by a decree of the court of original jurisdiction, and the bill was dismissed. But that decree was reversed by the supreme court of Oregon, its conclusions of law being: That the wharf lines established on the 12th day of December, 1892, were then, and ever since have been, the legal and authorized wharf lines of the port of Portland; and that the respondent had no right to drive piles or extend any wharf beyond the wharf lines so established. The respondent, her attorneys, agents, servants, and employees were, by final order, enjoined from driving piles or putting any structure in the river outside of the wharf lines so established, and commanded to remove all piles driven or structures of any description erected therein, beyond said wharf lines. Portland v. Montgomery, 38 Or. 215, 62 Pac. 755.

This case cannot be distinguished in principle from Cummings v. Chicago, 188 U. S. 410, ante, 525, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 472, decided at the present term. In that case it appeared that the Secretary of War, proceeding *under the act of September 19th, 1890, [104] and other legislation of Congress, had given his assent to the rebuilding of a certain dock in Calumet river, within the limits of Chicago; which river, being one of the navigable waters of the United States, had been surveyed by the direction of the government, and for its improvement Congress had made appropriations from time to time. When that action was commenced there was in force an ordinance of the city of Chicago, enacted under the authority of the state, forbidding the construction of any pier, dock, or other structure in navigable waters within the limits of that city without first obtaining a permit from its department of public works. And the question was whether, under the acts of Congress, including that of 1890, the above ordinance was of any avail as against the permit of the Secretary.

The contention of the plaintiff was that Congress, by its appropriations for the improvement of Calumet river, had taken such complete possession of that stream as to deprive the local authorities of all power in respect of the building or maintenance of structures in that river. In determining that question the court took into consideration various enactments, including the 10th section of the river and harbor act of March 3d, 1899, chap. 425 (passed after the present suit was brought), as follows: "That the creation of any obstruction not affirmatively authorized by Congress, to the navigable capacity of any of the waters of the United States, is hereby prohibited; and it shall not be lawful to build or commence the building of any wharf, pier, dolphin, boom, weir, breakwater, bulkhead, jetty, or other structures in any port, roadstead, haven, harbor, canal, navigable river, or other water of the United States, outside established harbor lines, or where no harbor lines have been established, except on plans recommended by the chief of engineers and authorized by the Secretary of War; and it shall not be lawful to excavate or fill, or in any manner to alter or modify the course, location, condition, or capacity of, any port, roadstead, haven, harbor, canal, lake, harbor or refuge, or inclosure within the limits of any breakwater, or of the channel of any navigable water of the United States, unless the work has been recommended by the *chief of engineers and authorized by the Secretary of War prior to beginning the same." 30 Stat. at L. 1121, 1151, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3541.

In that case we recognized the doctrine as long established that the authority of a state over navigable waters entirely within its limits was plenary, subject only to such action as Congress may take in execution of its power under the Constitution to regulate commerce among the several states. After referring to Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Ohio (1897) 165 U. S. 365, 366, 368, 41 L. ed. 747, 748, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 357, we said that if Congress had intended by its legislation, prior to that decision, "to assert the power to take under national control, for every purpose, and to the fullest possible extent, the erection of structures in the navigable waters of the United States that were wholly within the limits of the respective states, and to supersede entirely the authority which the states, in the absence of any action by Congress, have in such matters, such a radical departure from the previous policy of the government would have been manifested by clear and explicit language. In the absence of such language it should not be assumed that any such departure was intended. We do not overlook the long-settled principle that the power of Congress to regulate commerce among the states 'is complete in itself, may be exercised to its utmost extent, and acknowledges no limitations other than are prescribed in the Constitution.' Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, 196, 6 L. ed. 23, 70; Brown v. Maryland, 12 Wheat. 419, 446, 6 L. ed. 678, 688; Brown v. Houston, 114 U. S. 630, 29 L. ed. 260, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1091. But we will not at this time make any declaration of opinion as to the full scope of this power, or as to the extent to which Congress may go in the matter of the erection, or authorizing the erection, of docks and like structures in navigable waters that are entirely within the territorial limits of the several states. Whether Congress may, against or without the expressed will of a state, give affirmative authority to private parties to erect structures in such waters, it is not necessary in this case to decide. It is only necessary to say that the act of 1899 does not manifest the purpose of Congress to go to that extent under the power to regulate foreign and interstate commerce and thereby to supersede the original authority of the states. The effect of that act, reason-or joint assent of both the national government and the state government. The Secretary of War, acting under the authority conferred by Congress, may assent to the erection by private parties of such a structure. Without such assent the structure cannot be erected by them. But under existing legislation they must, before proceeding under such an authority, obtain also the assent of the state acting by its constituted agencies."

[106]ably interpreted, is to make the erection *of a structure in a navigable river, within the limits of a state, depend upon the concurrent

There is nothing in the present case to distinguish it from the Cummings Case. While § 12 of the act of 1890 forbade the construction or extension of piers, wharves, bulkheads, or other works, beyond the harbor lines established under the direction of the Secretary of War, in navigable waters of the United States, "except under such regulations as may be prescribed from time to time by him," it does not follow that Congress intended in such matters to disregard altogether the wishes of the local authorities. Its general legislation so far means nothing more than that the regulations established by the Secretary in respect of waters, the navigation and commerce upon which may be regulated by Congress, shall not be disregarded even by the states. Congress has not, however, indicated its purpose to wholly ignore the original power of the states to regulate the use of navigable waters entirely within their respective limits. Upon the authority, then, of Cummings v. Chicago, and the cases therein cited — to which we may add Willamette Iron Bridge Co. v. Hatch, 125 U. S. 1, 31 L. ed. 629, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 811 — we hold that, under existing enactments, the right of private persons to erect structures in a navigable water of the United States that is entirely within the limits of a state cannot be said to be complete and absolute without the concurrent or joint assent of both the general and state governments. Of course, the right of the government to erect public structures in a navigable water of the United States rests upon different grounds.

In this view it is unnecessary to consider the general question discussed at the bar whether Congress has or not, by some of its enactments relating to structures in navigable waters, committed to the Secretary of War the determination of matters *that are [107] legislative in their nature, and which, under the Constitution, could only be determined, in the first instance, by Congress. It is sufficient now to say that the legislation upon which the defendant relies to justify the construction of the works in question does not, when reasonably interpreted, indicate any purpose upon the part of Congress to assume such complete and absolute control of the navigable waters of the United States as will make of no avail the action of the states in respect of the erection by private parties of structures in waters wholly within their respective limits.

The judgment of the Supreme Court of Oregon is affirmed.

BOARD OF COMMISSIONERS OF WILKES COUNTY and John H. Johnson,
Sheriff and Ex Officio Treasurer of Wilkes County, Petitioners,

v.

W. N. COLER & COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 107-116.)

Railway aid—authority of county to subscribe to capital stock.

Any county near or through which a railroad running via Salem and Winston, North Carolina, in the direction of some point in the northwestern boundary line of that state, might pass, was authorized to take, and pay for in county bonds, capital stock of the Northwestern North Carolina Railroad Company, by the North Carolina Ordinance of March 8, 1868, incorporating such company for the purpose of constructing a line via Salem and Winston "to some point in the northwestern boundary line of the state, to be hereafter determined," and providing that counties subscribing stock to such company should do so in the same manner and subject to the same restrictions as were prescribed by N. C. Laws 1852, chap. 136, which empowered any county near or through which the railroad incorporated by that act should pass to subscribe for its stock, payable in county bonds.

[No. 247.]

Argued April 17, 20, 1903. Decided May 18, 1903.

ON WRIT OF CERTIORARI to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Circuit Court for the Western District of North Carolina establishing the validity of certain county bonds issued in aid of railway construction. Affirmed.

See same case below, 51 C. C. A. 399, 113 Fed. 725.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. A. C. Avery argued the cause and filed a brief for petitioners:

The settled line of decisions of the supreme court of North Carolina prior to October 1, 1889, when the Wilkes county bonds were issued, is in accord with the ruling in Buncombe County v. Payne, 123 N. C. 432, 31 S. E. 711, that a general act purporting to authorize "any and all counties to issue bonds would be invalid because of failure to provide for levying a special tax."

Galloway v. Jenkins, 63 N. C. 151; Herring v. Dixon, 122 N. C. 420, 29 S. E. 368; State ex rel. Tate v. Haywood County, 122 N. C. 812, 30 S. E. 352.

Construing its own laws, the supreme court of the state has differentiated the case of Wilkes county and the power of Wilkes county from that of Forsyth county. Under the established rule, the Federal court must lean towards that construction and assume that it is correct, until it satisfactorily appears that its conclusions are not well founded.

Claiborne County v. Brooks, 111 U. S. 400, 28 L. ed. 470, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 489; Burgess v. Seligman, 107 U. S. 20, 27 L. ed. 359, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 10.

In doubtful cases of construction, the Supreme Court has been influenced, as have other appellate courts, by the fact that the legislature of a state placed a given construction upon a statute of said state.

Jarrott v. Moberly, 103 U. S. 580, 26 L. ed. 492; Opinion of the Judges, 114 N. C. 925.

The reference to the charter of the Atlantic & North Carolina Railroad Company operated to confer power to subscribe only on the counties specifically mentioned in the charter, Forsyth and Surry. Wilkes was not mentioned, and was not therefore made the donee of such power.

Wilkes County v. Call, 123 N. C. 316, 44 L. R. A. 252, 31 S. E. 481.

Under a settled line of decisions of the supreme court of North Carolina the word "near" is held to be too indefinite as a descriptive term to fix and determine location of a boundary line. It follows inevitably that the word cannot fix the location of a county or class of counties referred to in a statute.

Cansler v. Fite, 50 N. C. (5 Jones L.) 424; Mizell v. Simmons, 79 N. C. 182.

Mr. John F. Dillon argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Harry Hubbard, John M. Dillon, and Charles Price, filed a brief for respondents:

The ordinance enacted by the Constitutional Convention of the State of North Carolina, March 9, 1868, entitled "An Ordinance to Incorporate the Northwestern North Carolina Railroad Company," gave per se, clear and complete authority to issue the bonds in question.

Hill v. Forsythe County, 67 N. C. 367; Belo v. Forsythe County, 76 N. C. 489.

The county of Wilkes, having assented to the location of the road, and having voted bonds in aid of the company whose road was thus to be constructed, and was actually constructed, could not for one moment be heard in this court or any other to allege that the definite location of the road was not authorized.

Tulare Irrig. Dist. v. Shepard, 185 U. S. 1, 46 L. ed. 773, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 531.

If there was, in fact, legislative or legal authority for the issue of bonds, it is immaterial that the bonds recite another legislative act which did not give such authority.

Wilkes County v. Coler, 180 U. S. 506, 45 L. ed. 642, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 458; Anderson County v. Beal, 113 U. S. 227, 28 L. ed. 966, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 433; Dill. Mun. Corp. 4th ed. § 523; Knox County v. Ninth Nat. Bank, 147 U. S. 91, 37 L. ed. 93, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 267; Cairo v. Zane, 149 U. S. 122, 37 L. ed. 673, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 803; Evansville v. Dennett, 161 U. S. 434, 40 L. ed. 760, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 613.

NOTE.—On the validity of bonds in aid of railroads—see note to Sutliff v. Lake County Comrs. 37 L. ed. U. S. 145; Cantillon v. Dubuque & N. W. R. Co. (Iowa) 5 L. R. A. 726.

Mr. Justice Harlan delivered the opinion of the court:

[108] This is an action against Wilkes county, North Carolina, *upon certain bonds, each reciting that it was issued in payment of the subscription by that county to the capital stock of the Northwestern North Carolina Railroad Company, "by authority of an act of the general assembly of North Carolina, ratified the 20th day of February A. D. 1879, entitled 'An Act to Amend the Charter of the Northwestern North Carolina Railroad for the Construction of a Second Division from the Towns of Winston and Salem, in Forsyth County, up the Yadkin Valley, by Wilkesboro, to Patterson's Factory, Caldwell County,' and authorized by a vote of a majority of the qualified voters of Wilkes county, by an election regularly held for that purpose on the 6th day of November A. D. 1888, and by an order of the board of commissioners of Wilkes county made on the 1st day of April A. D. 1889."

Coler & Co., holders of some of the bonds, obtained a judgment against the county in the circuit court. The case was then carried to the circuit court of appeals, which certified certain questions to this court under the judiciary act of March 3d, 1891, chap. 517 (26 Stat. at L. 826, U. S. Comp. Stat. p. 547). Those questions were answered, and, the answers having been certified to the court below, the case was finally tried, resulting in the affirmance of the judgment against the county. Wilkes County v. Coler, 180 U. S. 506, 45 L. ed. 642, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 458, 51 C. C. A. 399, 113 Fed. 725. It is now here on writ of certiorari sued out by Wilkes county.

The facts out of which this litigation arose are fully set forth in the former opinion. It is necessary to restate some of them as well as to recall the points heretofore decided.

It appears that the principal question in the case, when formerly here, was as to the effect of the recitals in the bonds.

The plaintiffs contended that, being bona fide holders, they were entitled to assume that there had been a compliance with all the provisions of the act of February 20th, 1879, upon the authority of which the bonds purported to have been issued.

The defendant contended that, as the journals of the respective houses of the legislature did not show that the yeas and nays were entered on the second and third readings of the bill subsequently published as the act of February 20th, 1879, that act was void under § 14 of article 2 of the State Constitution, *providing that "no law shall be passed . . . to impose any tax upon the people of the state, or to allow the counties, cities, or towns to do so, unless the bill for the purpose shall have been read three several times in each house of the general assembly, and passed three several readings, which readings shall have been on three different days, and agreed to by each house respectively, and unless the yeas and nays on the second and third readings of the bill shall have been entered on the journal."

This contention of the county was supported by several decisions of the supreme court of North Carolina, that are referred to in our former opinion; and one of the questions propounded to this court was whether the circuit court should accept those decisions as controlling in respect of the alleged invalidity of the act of 1879. That question was answered in the affirmative, this court being of opinion that, as matter of propriety and right, the decision of the state court on the question as to what is a law of the state was binding upon the courts of the United States. 180 U. S. 506, 526, 45 L. ed. 642, 653, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 458.

That answer, of course, eliminated from the case the act of 1879 as giving authority to issue the bonds in suit; and it, therefore, became necessary to inquire whether such authority could be found elsewhere in the legislation of the state,—this court being of opinion that the invalidity of the act of 1879, as conferring power to issue the bonds, did not estop holders of bonds from showing that there was in fact ample authority to issue them.

It was insisted that sufficient authority was to be found in the ordinance of March 8th, 1868, passed by the convention that assembled at Raleigh, North Carolina, on January 14th, 1868, for the purpose of framing a constitution for that state.

By that ordinance, which took effect from its passage, it was provided: "That for the purpose of constructing a railroad of one or more tracks, from some point on the North Carolina Railroad, between the town of Greensboro, in Guilford county, and the town of Lexington, in Davidson county, running by way of Salem and Winston, in Forsyth county, to some point in the northwestern boundary line of the state, to *be hereafter[110] determined, a company is hereby incorporated under the name and style of the Northwestern North Carolina Railroad Company, with a capital stock of two millions of dollars, which shall have a corporate existence as a body politic for the space of ninety-nine years. . . . § 1. . . . That the capital stock of said company may be created by subscriptions on the part of individuals, corporations, and counties, in shares of $100. § 2. . . . That, after the organization of said company and the election of the president and other necessary officers, the officers so elected shall proceed, under the advice of the directors, to locate the eastern terminus of the Northwestern North Carolina Railroad, and shall proceed to construct said road, with one or more tracks, as speedily as practicable, in sections of 5 miles each, to the towns of Winston and Salem in Forsyth county, which portion of said railroad, when completed, shall constitute its first division: Provided, That if the distance from the nearest section to the towns of Winston and Salem be less than 5 miles, the same shall be considered a section. § 5. . . . That the stockholders of said company may pay the stock subscribed by them either in money, labor, or material for constructing said road, as the board of directors may determine, and that all counties or towns subscribing stock to said company shall do so in the same manner and under the same rules, regulations, and restrictions as are set forth and prescribed in the act incorporating the North Carolina & Atlantic Railroad Company [Atlantic & North Carolina Railroad Company], for the government of such towns and counties as are now allowed to subscribe to the capital stock of said company. § 12. . . . That the company shall have power to construct branches of said road, one of which shall run from the towns of Winston and Salem by way of Mount Airy, in Surry county, to the line of the state of Virginia." § 13.

[111] The act incorporating the Atlantic & North Carolina Railroad Company, referred to in the ordinance of 1868, was passed in 1852. N. C. Laws 1852, pp. 484, 490. By § 33 of that act it was made "lawful for any incorporated town or county near or through which said railroad may pass to *subscribe for such an amount of stock in said company as they shall be authorized to do by the inhabitants of said town or the citizens of said county, in manner and form as hereinafter provided." By § 35 it was provided "that if, upon the return of such constable, . . . it shall appear that a majority of the qualified voters of such town, and by the return of the sheriff that a majority of the qualified voters of such county, voting upon the question are in favor of the subscription, the corporate authorities of such town, and the justices of such county, shall appoint an agent to make the subscription in behalf of such town and county, to be paid for in the bonds of such town and county and on such time as shall be agreed on by said town officers and the justices of such county." N. C. Laws 1852, chap. 136.

After referring to certain decisions of the supreme court of North Carolina, relating to the ordinance of 1868,—particularly Hill v. Forsythe County, 67 N. C. 367, and Belo v. Forsythe County, 76 N. C. 489,—we said: "It results that when the bonds here in question were issued in 1889, it was the law of North Carolina that the ordinance of 1868, constituting the charter of the Northwestern North Carolina Railroad Company, was not superseded by the Constitution of 1868, but was in force and therefore gave power to counties embraced by its provisions to take stock in that company and pay for it in county bonds just as Forsyth county had done." 180 U. S. 529, 45 L. ed. 654, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 467.

Another principle announced in our former opinion was that the rights of the parties were to be determined by the law of the state as it was declared by the state court to be at the time the bonds were issued in the name of the county and put upon the market.

As indicating some of the points left undecided, we make this extract from our opinion:

"We have referred fully to the Hill and Belo Cases because of the earnest contention of learned counsel that under the law of 190 U. S. U. S., Book 47.

North Carolina, as declared in those cases before the bonds in question were made, the ordinance of 1868, without the aid of subsequent legislation, gave full power to Wilkes county to issue such bonds. This view suggests various questions as to the *scope and effect of that ordinance. Assuming, as we must, that the Belo and Hill Cases held that the ordinance of 1868 remained in force after the adoption of the Constitution, did the general power given by that ordinance to the Northwestern Railroad Company to construct a railroad from its eastern terminus, 'running by way of Salem and Winston, in Forsyth county, to some point in the northwestern boundary line of the state, to be hereafter determined,' invest Wilkes county with authority to subscribe to the stock of the company and to issue bonds in payment of such subscription? Was Wilkes county in the same category with Forsyth county? Was the route of the road northwest of Salem and Winston to some point in the northwestern boundary line of the state to be determined by the legislature or by the company? If by the legislature, was that route ever determined otherwise than by the act of 1879, which has been adjudged never to have become a law of the state? Did Wilkes county have authority, under the ordinance of 1868 alone, to aid, by a subscription of stock and bonds, the construction of the second division of the road referred to in the act of 1879, extending from the towns of Winston and Salem, up the valley of the Yadkin by way of Jonesville and Wilkesboro, in the county of Wilkes, to Patterson's Factory, in the county of Caldwell? These are matters about which we do not feel disposed to express an opinion under the very general and indefinite questions certified from the circuit court of appeals. Nor do we deem it proper to express any opinion as to the scope and the effect upon the rights of the parties of §§ 1996, 1997, 1998, and 1999 of the Code of North Carolina. The certified questions do not directly or explicitly relate to any question arising under those sections of the Code; and it is not appropriate that this court should, under the questions certified, consider and determine the entire merits of the case." 180 U. S. 532, 45 L. ed. 655, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 468.

That the qualified voters of Wilkes county gave their sanction to a subscription to the capital stock of the Northwestern North Carolina Railroad Company; that the bonds in suit are part of those issued in payment of such subscription; that stock was issued to the county to the full amount subscribed; that *the road desired by the people of the county was constructed and is in operation; that for many years the county paid interest upon the bonds; and that the plaintiff purchased the bonds in suit for value and in good faith; these propositions are not disputed. However strongly these facts appeal to every one's sense of right and justice, they do not estop the county from raising the question of its power to have made the subscription and issued the bonds in question.

We repeat what was said in the former opinion,—indeed, what had been held in many previous decisions,—that, if there was an absolute want of power to issue the bonds in question, every purchaser of them was charged, in law, with notice of that fact, and could not look to the county in whose name they were issued. Such power could not be created by mere recitals in the bonds.

Did the county of Wilkes have power to issue these bonds? The plaintiff insists that the county had double legislative authority for issuing them;—first, under the ordinance of 1868 incorporating the Northwestern North Carolina Railroad Company; second, under the above sections of the Code of North Carolina of 1883.

We have seen that at the time the bonds were issued the ordinance of 1868 was in force and gave power to counties embraced by its provisions to take stock in the Northwestern North Carolina Railroad Company and pay for it in county bonds. This was held, in our former opinion, to be taken as the law of North Carolina, because so declared by the supreme court of that state when the bonds were issued, and therefore as the law by which the rights of the parties were to be determined. So that the vital inquiry, on this part of the case, is whether the road in question was embraced by the provisions of the ordinance of 1868, and therefore one that could be aided under that ordinance by county subscriptions and bonds. If so, Wilkes county was plainly in the same category as Forsyth county, and its bonds (issued in payment of the subscription made by it) must be sustained as valid upon the same grounds as the supreme court of North Carolina approved in reference to the bonds issued by Forsyth county.

Turning now to the ordinance of 1868, we [114] find that the Northwestern *North Carolina Railroad Company was incorporated to construct a railroad of one or more tracks “from some point on the North Carolina Railroad between the towns of Greensboro and Lexington, running by way of Salem and Winston in Forsyth county to some point in the northwestern boundary line of the state, to be hereafter determined.” No question arises in the present case as to the route adopted for the road that was constructed from its beginning point or eastern terminus to Salem and Winston, two towns near each other. It was mandatory under the ordinance that the road should run by the way of Salem and Winston. The road that Wilkes county desired to be built was from Salem and Winston to Wilkesboro. That was the road in aid of the construction of which its bonds were issued. If a road from Salem and Winston to Wilkesboro was substantially in the direction of “the northwestern boundary line of the state,” then it would be one authorized by the ordinance of 1868. The ordinance did not fix the particular point in the northwestern boundary at which the northwestern terminus of the road should be established. It was some point, on that boundary, to be thereafter determined. Unless the legislature interfered and itself fixed the northwestern terminus of the road, the railroad company had the power to establish it at its convenience or as the necessities of the situation required, taking care that whatever route was adopted the road as constructed from time to time was to be, substantially, in the direction of some point in what was reasonably to be deemed the northwestern boundary line of the state. Undoubtedly those interested in the enterprise, as well as the convention, contemplated that the road would be built mainly by money derived from municipal subscriptions and bonds. The railroad company was, therefore, left free to adopt a general route that would take the road “near or through” such counties as would aid the enterprise—no condition as to route being imposed except that the road should be in the direction of some point on the northwestern boundary line of the state. The authority of counties, by subscription of stock and bonds, to aid in the construction of a part of the road, did not depend upon the northwestern terminus being first established. If a county *had au-[115]thority, under any circumstances, to subscribe stock and issue bonds, that authority could be exercised with reference to that part of the road in which, by reason of its location, it was immediately concerned. We are of opinion that the part of the Northwestern North Carolina Railroad which is here in question was, in a substantial sense, in the direction of some point in the northwestern boundary line of the state,—due regard being had to the physical nature of the country through which it was to pass. The contention to the contrary cannot be sustained.

Looking further into the ordinance of 1868, we find that it contemplated and authorized subscriptions by counties. It provided that all counties and towns subscribing stock to said company should do so in the same manner and under the same rules, regulations, and restrictions as were set forth and prescribed in the charter of the Atlantic & North Carolina Railroad Company for the government of such towns and cities as were then allowed to subscribe to the capital stock of that company. Reading those provisions of the charter of the Atlantic & North Carolina Railroad Company into the ordinance of 1868, it is, we think, clear that any county near or through which the Northwestern North Carolina Railroad might pass (in the direction of some point in the northwestern boundary line of the state) could subscribe stock to be paid for by its bonds, provided, always, that the subscription was first approved by a majority of the qualified electors of the county voting upon the question of subscription. All these conditions were met in the case of Wilkes county. The qualified voters sustained the proposition to subscribe, and there is no substantial ground upon which to rest the contention that the county was without power, under the ordinance of 1868, to make the subscription in question and to issue its bonds in payment therefor.

Other questions relating to the ordinance of 1868 were discussed by counsel, but in the view we take as to its scope and meaning those questions need not be noticed in this opinion.

The appellees further insist that ample authority to issue the bonds in suit is also found in §§ 1996, 1997, 1998, 1999, and 2000 of the Civil Code of North Carolina.

[116] *We do not deem it necessary to determine the scope of those sections, for, as we have seen, Wilkes county, independently of those sections, had authority under the ordinance of 1868 to make the subscription and issue the bonds here in question. And this conclusion rests upon the law of North Carolina as declared by the supreme court of the state to have been at the time Wilkes county made its subscription and issued its bonds. This is sufficient to dispose of the case.

The judgment is affirmed.

HENRY H. BOCKFINGER, Appt.,

v.

JOHN W. FOSTER, W. S. Robertson and A. C. Schnell, Trustees of Town Site Board No. 6, Oklahoma Territory.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 116-126.)

Public lands—Oklahoma town sites—action does not lie to divest trustees of title.

One claiming under the homestead laws of the United States cannot maintain a suit against Oklahoma town site trustees to divest them of the title held by them, under the act of May 14, 1890 (26 Stat. at L. 109, chap. 207, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1463), in trust for town site occupants, since, until conveyed to an occupant as provided in such act, the title remains, in every essential sense, in the United States.

[No. 175.]

Argued February 26, 1903. Decided June 1, 1903.

APPEAL from the Supreme Court of the Territory of Oklahoma to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the District Court of Logan County sustaining a demurrer to and dismissing a complaint in an action to divest town site trustees of the title held by them under the Oklahoma town site act. Affirmed.

See same case below, 10 Okla. 488, 62 Pac. 799.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. James R. Keaton argued the cause, and, with Messrs. John W. Shartel, Frank Wells, John H. Cotteral and C. G. Hornor, filed a brief for appellant:

The legal title of the United States to the land in controversy passed to the town site trustees by the issuance of the patent.

Paine v. Foster, 9 Okla. 286, 60 Pac. 24; United States v. Schurz, 102 U. S. 402, 26 L. ed. 173; Wilcox v. Jackson ex dem. M'Connel, 13 Pet. 498, 10 L. ed. 264; Re Embelen, 161 U. S. 52, 40 L. ed. 613, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 487.

There is no provision in the patent or in 190 U. S.

the act under which it was issued for such land, or any portion thereof, to revert to the government in any event, and if such patent were procured by fraud or issued by mistake the only way the government or anyone else could avoid the same would be by an action in a court of equity.

Van Wyck v. Knevals, 106 U. S. 360, 27 L. ed. 201, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 336; Germania Iron Co. v. United States, 165 U. S. 379, 41 L. ed. 754, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 337.

The mere fact that this patent was made to trustees of an express trust has no tendency to defeat the passing of complete title, as, in order for a patentor to retain any interest in the title or estate conveyed, even though such conveyance is to trustees for certain specific uses, there must be a provision in the patent for the reversion of the estate to him in the event of the failure of the uses or purposes for which the grant was made.

Stuart v. Easton, 170 U. S. 384, 42 L. ed. 1078, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 650. See also Bryan v. Forsyth, 19 How. 334, 15 L. ed. 674; Meehan v. Forsyth, 24 How. 175, 16 L. ed. 739; Cowell v. Colorado Springs Co. 100 U. S. 55, 25 L. ed. 547; Re Embelen, 161 U. S. 52, 40 L. ed. 613, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 487.

If the title to the land in controversy passed from the United States by the issuance of the patent, it matters not that said title vested in trustees who were agents of the government, as these agents could be sued by one who had a prior right to and equity in the land the same as if they held the legal title thereto in any other capacity.

United States v. Lee, 106 U. S. 196, 27 L. ed. 171, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 240.

The fact that this court took jurisdiction of the subject-matter in the case of Payne v. Robertson, 169 U. S. 323, 42 L. ed. 764, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 337, and decided the same on its merits subsequent to the decision of McDaid v. Oklahoma, 150 U. S. 209, 37 L. ed. 1055, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 59, is conclusive of both questions upon which this case was decided in the court below, as that case was brought against the same town site trustees, and the identical questions upon which the case at bar was decided by the supreme court of Oklahoma were raised and urged therein.

Mr. James R. Keaton filed a separate reply brief for appellant:

The mere declaration of the uses to which the granted premises are to be applied does not ordinarily import a condition.

Long v. Moore, 19 Tex. Civ. App. 363, 48 S. W. 43; Olcott v. Gabert, 86 Tex. 123, 23 S. W. 985; Farnham v. Thompson, 34 Minn. 331, 57 Am. Rep. 59, 26 N. W. 9; Ryan v. Porter, 61 Tex. 106.

If it be conceded that the legal title to the land in controversy had passed from the government itself when this action was brought, then it matters not in what set of officers or agents such title vested, as they could properly be sued by one having prior and paramount equities in the land.

United States v. Lee, 106 U. S. 196, 27 L. ed. 171, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 240.

If appellant is entitled to any relief whatever, it is that prayed for in his bill.

James v. Germania Iron Co. 46 C. C. A. 476, 107 Fed. 597; Steele v. Spencer, 1 Pet. 558, 7 L. ed. 261.

Mr. Marsden C. Burch argued the cause and filed a brief for appellees:

The town site trustees are in law and in fact officers of the United States, holding the property involved in the issue for and in behalf of the United States.

McDaid v. Williams, 150 U. S. 209, 37 L. ed. 1055, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 59.

Only when public lands are disposed of in such a manner as finally to divest the United States of its title so that such lands become the subject of a private right is it proper for a court of equity to assume jurisdiction in the premises and correct any wrong of a legal character which has occurred under the government's administration, redress any wrongs of private parties, and dispose of the property according to the very right of the matter involved.

Johnson v. Towsley, 13 Wall. 72, 20 L. ed. 485.

Mr. Horace Speed also argued the cause for appellees.

Mr. Justice Harlan delivered the opinion of the court:

This case involves the construction of the act of Congress passed May 14th, 1890, entitled "An Act to Provide for Town Site Entries of Land in What is Known as 'Oklahoma,' and for Other Purposes." 26 Stat. at L. 109, chap. 207 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1463).

As the purpose and scope of the act can be ascertained only by examining all of its provisions, it is here given in full:

[117] "§ 1. That so much of the public lands situate in the territory of Oklahoma, now open to settlement, as may be necessary to embrace all the legal subdivisions covered by actual occupancy for purposes of trade and business, not exceeding twelve hundred and eighty acres in each case, may be entered as town sites, for the several use and benefit of the occupants thereof, by three trustees, to be appointed by the Secretary of the Interior for that purpose, such entry to be made under the provisions of section twenty-three hundred and eighty-seven of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1457), as near as may be; and when such entry shall have been made, the Secretary of the Interior shall provide regulations for the proper execution of the trust, by such trustees, including the survey of the land into streets, alleys, squares, blocks, and lots when necessary, or the approval of such survey as may already have been made by the inhabitants thereof, the assessment upon the lots of such sum as may be necessary to pay for the lands embraced in such town site, costs of survey, conveyance of lots, and other necessary expenses, including compensation of trustees: Provided, That the Secretary of the Interior may, when practicable, cause more than one town site to be entered and the trust thereby created executed in the manner herein provided by a single board of trustees, but not more than seven boards of trustees in all shall be appointed for said territory, and no more than two members of any of said boards shall be appointed from one political party.

"§ 2. That in the execution of such trust, and for the purpose of the conveyance of title by said trustees, any certificate or other paper evidence of claim duly issued by the authority recognized for such purpose by the people residing upon any town site the subject of entry hereunder, shall be taken as evidence of the occupancy by the holder thereof of the lot or lots therein described, except that, where there is an adverse claim to said property, such certificate shall only be prima facie evidence of the claim of occupancy of the holder: Provided, That nothing in this act contained shall be so construed as to make valid any claim now invalid of those who entered upon and occupied said lands in violation of the laws of the United States *or the proclamation of [118] the President thereunder: Provided further, That the certificates hereinbefore mentioned shall not be taken as evidence in favor of any person claiming lots who entered upon said lots in violation of law or the proclamation of the President thereunder.

"§ 3. That lots of land occupied by any religious organization, incorporated or otherwise, conforming to the approved survey within the limits of such town site, shall be conveyed to or in trust for the same.

"§ 4. That all lots not disposed of as hereinbefore provided for shall be sold, under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, for the benefit of the municipal government of any such town, or the same or any part thereof may be reserved for public use as sites for public buildings, or for the purpose of parks, if, in the judgment of the Secretary, such reservation would be for the public interest, and the Secretary shall execute proper conveyances to carry out the provisions of this section.

"§ 5. That the provisions of sections four, five, six, and seven of an act of the legislature of the state [of] Kansas, entitled 'An Act Relating to Town Sites,' approved March second, eighteen hundred and sixty-eight, shall, so far as applicable, govern the trustees in the performance of their duties hereunder.

"§ 6. That all entries of town sites now pending, on application hereafter made under this act, shall have preference, at the local land office, of the ordinary business of the office, and shall be determined as speedily as possible; and if an appeal shall be taken from the decision of the local office in any such case to the Commissioner of the General Land Office, the same shall be made special, and disposed of by him as expeditiously as the duties of his office will permit; and so if an appeal should be taken to the Secretary of the Interior. And all applications heretofore filed in the proper land office shall have the same force and effect as if made under the provisions of this act; and upon the application of the trustees herein provided for, such entries shall be prosecuted to final issue in the names of such trustees, without other formality; and when final entry is made, the title of the United States to the land covered by such entry shall be conveyed to said trustees for the uses and purposes herein provided.

[119] *"§ 7. That the trustees appointed under this act shall have the power to administer oaths, to hear and determine all controversies arising in the execution of this act, shall keep a record of their proceedings, which shall, with all papers filed with them and all evidence of their official acts, except conveyances, be filed in the General Land Office, and become part of the records of the same, and all conveyances executed by them shall be acknowledged before an officer duly authorized for that purpose. They shall be allowed such compensation as the Secretary of the Interior may prescribe, not exceeding ten dollars per day while actually employed, and such traveling and other necessary expenses as the Secretary may authorize, and the Secretary of the Interior shall also provide them with necessary clerical force, by detail or otherwise.

"§ 8. That the sum of ten thousand dollars or so much thereof as may be necessary is hereby appropriated to carry into effect the provisions of this act, except that no portion of said sum shall be used in making payment for land entered hereunder, and the disbursements therefrom shall be refunded to the Treasury from the sums which may be realized from the assessments made to defray the expense of carrying out the provisions of this act." 26 Stat. at L. 110, chap. 207 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1464).

The complaint shows that the appellees are the trustees of town site board number six, duly constituted and appointed by the Secretary of the Interior, and assigned to the town site of West Guthrie, Oklahoma territory, and had acquired the legal title to the western half of section eight, of township sixteen, north of range two, in Logan county, in that territory.

Bockfinger, claiming to have become entitled, under the homestead laws of the United States, to the southwest quarter of that land,—which was embraced within the town site boundary,—brought this suit in a territorial district court against the appellees as town site trustees. The relief sought was a decree that the trustees hold the title in trust for his use and benefit, and be compelled to convey to him.

The defendants demurred to the complaint upon several grounds, among others, upon the ground that the court had no jurisdiction of the subject of the action nor of the [120] defendants *in their capacity as town site trustees. The demurrer was sustained, and the plaintiff electing to stand on his complaint, the suit was dismissed. Upon appeal to the supreme court of the territory, the decree of the district court was affirmed.

The decisive question in the case is whether the plaintiff's claim to the land can be made the subject of a suit against the town site trustees as such. Upon a careful scrutiny of the provisions of the act of 1890, we are of opinion that this question must be answered in the negative. The plaintiff asked a decree declaring that the title acquired by the trustees under the act of Congress for the use of town site occupants be held in trust for and conveyed to him. But no such relief could have been granted if the title acquired by the trustees was held by them in trust for the purposes of the act of Congress, and if, in every substantial sense, so far as real ownership is concerned, the land still belonged to the United States.

That the title was so held by the town site trustees is, we think, clear. They did not hold an indefeasible title as of private right, with power to dispose of the land at will, but only as trustees for such occupants as should be ascertained, in the mode prescribed by the act of Congress, to be entitled to particular lots within the town site boundary. The trust was not, in any sense, of a permanent character. Its creation by Congress was only a step towards the ultimate transmission of the title of the United States to occupants under the town site act. The United States retained its hold on the land until the title by proper conveyances should pass absolutely from it or *from its officers [121] or agents, the town site trustees, to such occupants. When an occupant thus acquired title, anyone who claimed that he was entitled to the land could litigate the matter with the occupant in some court of competent jurisdiction; for, as between the United States and the occupant, the former had then parted with its title.

It is suggested that, under this view, many years might elapse before the person to whom, as occupant, the land was awarded, could be sued by the person claiming a superior right to that acquired by the town site trustees for the use and benefit of occupants. This is true, but it cannot alter the fact that, under the act of Congress, the title remained, in every essential sense, in the United States, until conveyed to the occupant. The United States, as the primary owner of the land, could prescribe the terms upon which it could be disposed of to occupants. A suit against the town site trustees to compel them, without regard to the act of Congress, to convey to one who was not an occupant within the meaning of that act, was a suit to compel them to convey land which really belonged to the United States. Such a suit, it is plain, might defeat the execution of the act of Congress.

The general principle was fully stated in Johnson v. Towsley, 13 Wall. 72, 20 L. ed. 485, in which this court, after observing that it had firmly refused to interfere with the Land Department in its administration of the public lands, so long as the title was in the United States, said: "On the other hand, it has constantly asserted the right of the proper courts to inquire, after the title had passed from the government, and the question became one of private right, whether, according to the established rules of equity and the acts of Congress concerning the public lands, the party holding that title should hold absolutely as his own or as trustee for another."

This was the ground upon which the court proceeded in McDaid v. Oklahoma, 150 U. S. 209, 37 L. ed. 1055, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 59, in which case the question was as to the right of town site trustees to withhold a deed pending an appeal to the Commissioner of the General Land Office. In that case it became necessary to declare the scope and meaning of the act of 1890.

[122] "After referring to a decision of the Land Department, under the act of 1890, to the effect that "the issue of the patent to town site trustees under the act was not a disposition of the government title, but a conveyance in trust, to be held under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior," the court in that case, speaking by Chief Justice Fuller, said: "This proposition is denied, and it is insisted that the authority of the Secretary relates solely to public lands the title to which is still in the United States, and that, by the issue of the patent to town site trustees, the title passes, and all control over the lands embraced therein is lost. Hence, that in this case the title of the United States passed by the patent to the trustees, and that they held it thereafter in trust for the occupants, free from the control of the Land Department. Reference is made to Moore v. Robbins, 96 U. S. 530, 24 L. ed. 848, and like cases, to the point that when a patent has been awarded, issued, delivered, and accepted, all right to control the title or to decide on the right to the title has passed from the executive department of the government. But those cases refer to the legal title directly and finally conferred, and the principle invoked can only be applicable on the assumption that, by the town site conveyance, title was granted to the Oklahoma trustees for the purpose of divesting the government of all authority and control over the final disposition of the property, and not for the purpose of putting title in the trustees as agents of the government for the execution of the trust devolving upon them as such. Whether this assumption is justified or not must depend upon the terms and true construction of the act of May 14th, 1890."

The court then examined the several sections of the act of 1890, and proceeded: "In the light of these provisions we perceive no reason for doubting that the trustees appointed by the Secretary under the act, and whose compensation and expenses were fixed by him, were agents of the government for the purpose of carrying out the trust thereby created, to the extent and as specified, and this included the ascertainment of the beneficiaries in the first instance, and the transfer of the title to them. While, on the final entry, the title of the United States was to be conveyed to the trustees, such [123] conveyance was "explicitly declared as made 'for the uses and purposes in the act provided,' and among these uses and purposes was the determination of controversies between contesting claimants by the trustees, who were to administer oaths, pass on evidence, and keep a record of their proceedings, to be deposited in the Land Department. They unquestionably acted in that regard as the representatives of the government, and their decisions were properly subject to that appeal to the Commissioner and the Secretary, for which the Secretary's regulations provided. As matter of convenience, the trustees were the instrumentality for the transmission of title in respect of lands disposed of to actual holders, while the Secretary, notwithstanding the patent, was the medium as to surplus lands, which he could not be if the legal title had definitively passed to the trustees by the patent for the whole site. The result is the same if the 4th section be construed as directing the Secretary to cause the trustees to execute the conveyance therein referred to. The trust upon which the title was held was to be discharged in accordance with the regulations, and was necessarily subject to the supervisory power of the Department of the Interior. Section 2387 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1457) confirms this view, for the town sites there referred to were to be entered by the corporate authorities of the town, if incorporated, or, if not, by the judge of the county court for the county in which the town was located, and the trust as to the disposal of the lots and proceeds of the sales thereof was to be executed in accordance with such regulations as might be prescribed by the legislative authority of the state or territory in which the town might be situated; while, under this special act in reference to Oklahoma, the entry was to be made by trustees appointed by the Secretary, and the trust conducted under such regulations as might be established by him. In the one case, the government parted with its connection with the land when the patent issued to the local authority; in the other, the government retains its connection by having the entry made by its own agents, and the trust executed in the manner it directs. By the scheme of this act, the title is held in trust for the occupying claimants, it is true, but also in trust *sub modo for the government until the [124] rightful claimants and the undisposed of or surplus lands are ascertained."

It is suggested that the question in the McDaid Case was not the same as the one now under consideration. That is true, but the decision in that case required the court to determine the meaning of the act of Congress of 1890; consequently, what was said in the McDaid Case as to the scope of the act is pertinent here.

Several cases were cited in argument as sustaining such a construction of the act of Congress as would authorize a suit like this. We allude to Re Emblen, 161 U. S. 52, 56, 40 L. ed. 613, 616, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 487, 488; Germania Iron Co. v. United States, 165 U. S. 379, 41 L. ed. 754, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 337; and Payne v. Robertson, 169 U. S. 323, 42 L. ed. 764, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 337.

In Emblen's Case it appeared that pending a contest before the Secretary of the Interior between Emblen and Weed as to whom a patent should be issued for a tract of land in Colorado, Congress passed an act [28 Stat. at L. 599, chap. 15] confirming Weed's entry, and directing that a patent issue to him, which was done. Then Emblen sought by mandamus to compel the Secretary to rehear the case, and to decide the issue between him and Weed, independently of the act of Congress, which was alleged to be unconstitutional. This court, speaking by Mr. Justice Gray, said: "Such being the state of the case, it is quite clear that (even if the act of Congress was unconstitutional, which we do not intimate) the writ of mandamus prayed for should not be granted. The determination of the contest between the claimants of conflicting rights of pre-emption, as well as the issue of a patent to either, was within the general jurisdiction and authority of the Land Department, and cannot be controlled or restrained by mandamus or injunction. After the patent has once been issued, the original contest is no longer within the jurisdiction of the Land Department. The patent conveys the legal title to the patentees; and cannot be revoked or set aside, except upon judicial proceedings instituted in behalf of the United States. The only remedy of Emblen is by bill in equity to charge Weed with a trust in his favor. All this is clearly settled by previous decisions of this court, including some of those on which the petitioner most relies"—citing Johnson v. Towsley, 13 Wall. 72, 20

[125] L. ed. 485; **Moore v. Robbins*, 96 U. S. 530, 24 L. ed. 848; Marquez v. Frisbie, 101 U. S. 473, 25 L. ed. 800; St. Louis Smelting & Ref. Co. v. Kemp, 104 U. S. 636, 26 L. ed. 875; Steel v. St. Louis Smelting & Ref. Co. 106 U. S. 447, 27 L. ed. 226, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 389; Monroe Cattle Co. v. Becker, 147 U. S. 47, 37 L. ed. 72, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 217; Turner v. Sawyer, 150 U. S. 578, 586, 37 L. ed. 1189, 1191, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 192. So far from militating against the doctrine of the McDaid Case the above observations sustain the views there expressed. The patent referred to in the Emblen Case was a formal, regular patent, designed to pass the title of the United States, and to invest the patentee with all the rights of the United States in the land.

In Germania Iron Co. v. United States, 165 U. S. 379, 383, 41 L. ed. 754, 756, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 337, the question was whether the court could by decree, in a writ brought by the United States, cancel a patent that had been issued by inadvertence and mistake, and thereby restore the jurisdiction of the Land Department to determine such disputed questions of fact as involved the title to the land patented. That suit was maintained and the patent was canceled. It is clear that the decision has no bearing on the question now before us.

In Payne v. Robertson the question as to the right to maintain a suit directly against the town site trustees for the purpose of divesting them of the title to the land in dispute does not appear to have been raised by the parties; it certainly was not decided by the court. The sole question, the court took care to say, was whether, by reason of his entry into the territory, and his presence there, under the circumstances stated, the plaintiff, who was a deputy marshal of the United States, was disqualified from making a homestead entry immediately upon the lands being opened for settlement. The court held against the plaintiff on that point, and that being conclusive of the case, the judgment of this court was placed entirely upon that ground. It was not necessary to go farther and decide the question here presented.

Nor is there anything in Wilcox v. Jackson ex dem. McConnell, 13 Pet. 498, 10 L. ed. 264, and United States v. Schurz, 102 U. S. 402, 26 L. ed. 173, at all in conflict with the decisions in the above cases. Both the Wilcox and Schurz Cases recognize the principle that after the title to public lands *has [126] passed from the United States, that is, after the Land Department has performed the last act in the series necessary to pass the title of the government, the courts will, as between parties asserting conflicting rights in such lands, determine, by appropriate judicial proceedings, which of the parties has the better right. But those cases equally recognize the principle that the courts will not interfere with the Land Department in its control and disposal of the public lands, under the legislation of Congress, so long as the title in any essential sense remains in the United States.

Without further reference to authorities, we adjudge that, until the title to lands within any town site boundary has been finally disposed of as provided in the act of 1890, no suit can be maintained against the town site trustees to divest them of the title held by them in trust for occupants under that act; although a town site occupant, after receiving title under the act, may be sued by anyone claiming to have acquired, under the homestead laws, a right to the lands prior and superior to that held by the town site trustees for the use and benefit of town site occupants.

The decree of the Supreme Court of Oklahoma is affirmed.

Mr. Justice White dissented.

Mr. Justice McKenna did not hear the argument of this case nor participate in the decision.

*A. D. JAMES, United States Marshal for [127] the Western District of Kentucky, and The United States, Appts.,

v.

HENRY BOWMAN.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 127-142.)

Constitutional law—power of Congress under 15th Amendment—validity of statute against wrongful individual acts—bribery of negro voters—statutory construction—limiting operation to sustain validity.

1. The provision which is made by U. S. Rev.

NOTE.—On bribery of voters—see note to 979

Stat. § 5507 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3712), for the punishment of individuals who, by means of bribery, prevent persons to whom the right of suffrage is guaranteed by U. S. Const. 15th Amend. from exercising that right, cannot be sustained as an exercise of the power granted to Congress by such Amendment, to prevent the denial of such right by state action.

2. The operation of U. S. Rev. Stat. § 5507 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3712), which was manifestly enacted to punish the bribery at all elections, state and Federal, of persons guaranteed the right to vote by U. S. Const. 15th Amend., cannot be limited by judicial construction, for the purpose of sustaining its constitutionality, to the bribery of voters at elections for Federal officers.

[No. 213.]

Argued March 16, 1903. Decided May 4, 1903.

APPEAL from the District Court of the United States for the Western District of Kentucky to review a judgment granting a writ of habeas corpus to a person indicted for bribing negro voters to refrain from voting, in violation of U. S. Rev. Stat. § 5507. Affirmed.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brewer:

In December, 1900, an indictment was found by the United States district court for the district of Kentucky against the appellee, Henry Bowman, and one Harry Weaver, based upon § 5507 of the Revised Statutes of the United States (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3712). The indictment charged, in substance, that certain "men of African descent, colored men, negroes, and not white men," being citizens of Kentucky and of the United States, were, by means of bribery, unlawfully and feloniously intimidated and prevented from exercising their lawful right of voting at a certain election held in the fifth congressional district of Kentucky on the 8th day of November, 1898, for the election of a representative in the Fifty-sixth Congress of the United States.

[128] *No allegation is made that the bribery was because of the race, color, or previous condition of servitude of the men bribed. The appellee, Henry Bowman, having been arrested and held in default of bail, sued out a writ of habeas corpus on the ground of the unconstitutionality of § 5507. The district judge granted the writ, following reluctantly the decision of the circuit court of appeals for the sixth circuit, in Lackey v. United States, 53 L. R. A. 660, 46 C. C. A. 189, 107 Fed. 114. From that judgment the government has taken this appeal.

Section 5507 is as follows:

"Sec. 5507. Every person who prevents, hinders, controls, or intimidates another from exercising, or in exercising the right of suffrage, to whom that right is guaranteed by the Fifteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, by means of bribery or threats of depriving such person of employment or occupation, or of ejecting such person from a rented house, lands, or other property, or by threats of refusing to renew leases or contracts for labor, or by threats of violence to himself or family, shall be punished as provided in the preceding section."

The 15th Amendment provides:

"Sec. 1. The right of citizens of the United States to vote shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any state on account of race, color, or previous condition of servitude.

"Sec. 2. The Congress shall have power to enforce this article by appropriate legislation."

Solicitor General Hoyt argued the cause, and, with Mr. W. R. Harr, filed a brief for appellants:

The power of Congress over Federal elections is not derived primarily or entirely from the 15th Amendment, which is said to be the exclusive source of its authority to interfere at state elections, but comes from other provisions of the Constitution.

Ex parte Yarbrough, 110 U. S. 651, 28 L. ed. 274, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 152.

The extent of the authority possessed by Congress over its own elections has been conclusively determined by the decisions of this court.

Ex parte Siebold, 100 U. S. 371, 25 L. ed. 717; Ex parte Clarke, 100 U. S. 399, 25 L. ed. 715; Ex parte Yarbrough, 110 U. S. 651, 28 L. ed. 274, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 152.

The principles announced in Ex parte Yarbrough, 110 U. S. 651, 28 L. ed. 274, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 152, are decisive of the questions presented by this record.

Citizens of the United States, without regard to race, color, or previous condition of servitude, who are otherwise qualified to vote, are the persons, and the only persons, to whom the right of suffrage is guaranteed by the 15th Amendment, and consequently the persons referred to in U. S. Rev. Stat. § 5507 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3712).

Slaughter House Cases, 16 Wall. 37, 71, 72, 21 L. ed. 402, 407; United States v. Reese, 92 U. S. 214, 23 L. ed. 563.

The propriety of referring to the act from which a section of the Revised Statutes is taken, for the purpose of ascertaining its meaning, where any ambiguity exists, has been often affirmed by this court.

Ex parte Crow Dog, 109 U. S. 556, sub nom. Ex parte Kang-Gi-Shun-Ca, 27 L. ed. 1030, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 396; United States v. Le Bris, 121 U. S. 278, 30 L. ed. 946, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 894; United States v. Hirsch, 100 U. S. 33, 25 L. ed. 539; United States v.

State ex rel. Clements v. Humphreys (Tex.) 5 L. R. A. 217.

On the construction and effect of the 15th Amendment to the Federal Constitution—see note to United States v. Reese, 23 L. ed. U. S. 563.

On construction of statutes—see notes to Riggs v. Palmer (N. Y.) 5 L. R. A. 340; United States v. Saunders, 22 L. ed. U. S. 736; Mallard v. Lawrence, 14 L. ed. U. S. 925, and Blake v. National City Bank, 23 L. ed. U. S. 119.

Bowen, 100 U. S. 508, 513, 25 L. ed. 631, 632.

The title of an act may be considered in determining the intention of the legislature.

Church of Holy Trinity v. United States, 143 U. S. 457, 462, 36 L. ed. 226, 229, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 511; Coosaw Min. Co. v. South Carolina, 144 U. S. 550, 563, 36 L. ed. 537, 542, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 689.

The fact that the section in which an ambiguity is found is penal in its nature, and therefore to be construed strictly, does not preclude resort to the original act for the purpose of discovering the legislative intention.

United States v. Lacher, 134 U. S. 624, 626, 33 L. ed. 1080, 1082, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 625.

The necessary effect of the 15th Amendment in prohibiting discrimination against citizens of the United States in the matter of voting because of their race, color, or previous condition is to secure or guarantee that right to all such citizens, of whatever color, white as well as black, who are otherwise qualified under the state law to exercise it.

Ex parte Yarbrough, 110 U. S. 665, 28 L. ed. 279, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 152.

Mr. Swagar Sherley argued the cause, and, with Mr. W. B. Dixon, filed a brief for appellee:

The 15th Amendment is the only source of power that Congress has as to state elections; and both as to state and Federal elections the power it confers upon Congress for the punishment of offenses against the suffrage is limited to offenses against citizens because of race prejudice, etc., and when committed by the United States or a state, or some officer or agent of the United States or a state.

United States v. Reese, 92 U. S. 214, 23 L. ed. 563; United States v. Cruikshank, 1 Woods, 308, Fed. Cas. No. 14,897; United States v. Cruikshank, 92 U. S. 555, 23 L. ed. 592.

U. S. Rev. Stat. § 5507 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3712), upon which the indictment is founded, is based by its terms upon the 15th Amendment, but is not appropriate legislation thereunder.

Lackey v. United States, 53 L. R. A. 660, 46 C. C. A. 189, 107 Fed. 114.

It is not within the province of the courts to so limit a statute by judicial construction as to make it operate only as to that which Congress may rightfully prohibit and punish.

United States v. Reese, 92 U. S. 214, 23 L. ed. 563; Trade-mark Cases, 100 U. S. 82, sub nom. United States v. Steffens, 25 L. ed. 550; United States v. Harris, 106 U. S. 629, 27 L. ed. 290, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 601.

Mr. Justice Brewer delivered the opinion of the court:

The single question presented for our consideration is whether § 5507 can be upheld [136] as a valid enactment, for, if *not, the indictment must also fall, and the defendant was rightfully discharged. On its face the section purports to be an exercise of the power granted to Congress by the 15th Amendment, for it declares a punishment upon anyone who, by means of bribery, prevents another to whom the right of suffrage is guaranteed by such amendment from exercising that right. But that amendment relates solely to action "by the United States or by any state," and does not contemplate wrongful individual acts. It is in this respect similar to the following clauses in the 14th Amendment:

190 U. S.

"No state shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States; nor shall any state deprive any person of life, liberty, or property without due process of law; nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws."

Each of these clauses has been often held to relate to action by a state, and not by individuals. As said in Virginia v. Rives, 100 U. S. 313, 318, sub nom. Ex parte Virginia, 25 L. ed. 667, 669:

"The provisions of the 14th Amendment of the Constitution we have quoted all have reference to state action exclusively, and not to any action of private individuals."

Again, in Ex parte Virginia, 100 U. S. 339, 346, 25 L. ed. 676, 679:

"They have reference to actions of the political body denominated a state, by whatever instruments or in whatever modes that action may be taken. A state acts by its legislative, its executive, or its judicial authorities. It can act in no other way. The constitutional provision, therefore, must mean that no agency of the state, or of the officers or agents by whom its powers are exerted, shall deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws."

Again, in United States v. Cruikshank, 92 U. S. 542, 554, 23 L. ed. 588, 592:

"The 14th Amendment prohibits a state from denying to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws; but this provision does not, any more than the one which precedes it, and which we have just considered, add anything to the rights which one citizen has under the Constitution against another. The equality of the rights of citizens is a principle of republicanism. Every republican government *is [137] in duty bound to protect all its citizens in the enjoyment of this principle, if within its power. That duty was originally assumed by the states; and it still remains there. The only obligation resting upon the United States is to see that the states do not deny the right. This the amendment guarantees, but no more. The power of the national government is limited to the enforcement of this guaranty."

In Civil Rights Cases, 109 U. S. 3, 13, 27 L. ed. 835, 840, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 18, 22:

"And so in the present case, until some state law has been passed, or some state action through its officers or agents has been taken, adverse to the rights of citizens sought to be protected by the 14th Amendment, no legislation of the United States under said amendment, nor any proceeding under such legislation, can be called into activity; for the prohibitions of the amendment are against state laws and acts done under state authority. Of course, legislation may, and should, be provided in advance to meet the exigency when it arises; but it should be adapted to the mischief and wrong which the amendment was intended to provide against; and that is, state laws, or state action of some kind, adverse to the rights of the citizen secured by the amendment. Such legislation cannot properly cover the whole domain of rights appertaining to life, liberty, and property, defining them and providing for their vindication. That would be to establish a code of municipal law regulative of all private rights between man and man in society. It would be to make Congress take the place of the state legislatures, and to supersede them. It is absurd to affirm that, because the rights of life, liberty, and property (which include all civil rights that men have) are by the amendment sought to be protected against invasion on the part of the state without due process of law, Congress may therefore provide due process of law for their vindication in every case; and that, because the denial by a state to any persons of the equal protection of the laws is prohibited by the amendment, therefore Congress may establish laws for their equal protection. In fine, the legislation which Congress is authorized to adopt in this behalf is not general legislation upon the rights of the citizen, but corrective legislation; that is, such as may be [138] necessary*and proper for counteracting such laws as the states may adopt or enforce, and which, by the amendment, they are prohibited from making or enforcing, or such acts and proceedings as the states may commit or take, and which, by the amendment, they are prohibited from committing or taking."

981

United States v. Harris, 106 U. S. 629, 639, 27 L. ed. 290, 294, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 601, 609:

"The language of the amendment does not leave this subject in doubt. When the state has been guilty of no violation of its provisions; when it has not made or enforced any law abridging the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States; when no one of its departments has deprived any person of life, liberty, or property without due process of law, or denied to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws; when, on the contrary, the laws of the state, as enacted by its legislative, and construed by its judicial, and administered by its executive, departments, recognize and protect the rights of all persons,—the amendment imposes no duty, and confers no power, upon Congress."

See also Slaughter-House Cases, 16 Wall. 36, 21 L. ed. 394; Scott v. McNeal, 154 U. S. 34, 45, 38 L. ed. 896, 901, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1108; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Chicago, 166 U. S. 226, 233, 41 L. ed. 979, 983, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581.

But we are not left alone to this reasoning from analogy. The 15th Amendment itself has been considered by this court, and the same limitations placed upon its provisions. In United States v. Reese, 92 U. S. 214, 217, 23 L. ed. 563, 564, we said:

"The 15th Amendment does not confer the right of suffrage upon anyone. It prevents the states, or the United States, however, from giving preference, in this particular, to one citizen of the United States over another on account of race, color, or previous condition of servitude. Before its adoption this could be done. It was as much within the power of a state to exclude citizens of the United States from voting on account of race, etc., as it was on account of age, property, or education. Now it is not. If citizens of one race having certain qualifications are permitted by law to vote, those of another having the same qualifications must be. Previous to this amendment, there was no constitutional guaranty against this discrimination; now there is. It follows that the *amendment has invested [139] the citizens of the United States with a new constitutional right which is within the protecting power of Congress. That right is exemption from discrimination in the exercise of the elective franchise on account of race, color, or previous condition of servitude. This, under the express provisions of the 2d section of the Amendment, Congress may enforce by 'appropriate legislation.'"

In passing it may be noticed that this indictment charges no wrong done by the state of Kentucky, or by anyone acting under its authority. The matter complained of was purely an individual act of the defendant. Nor is it charged that the bribery was on account of race, color, or previous condition of servitude. True, the parties who were bribed were alleged to be "men of African descent, colored men, negroes, and not white men," and again, that they were "persons to whom the right of suffrage and the right to vote was then and there guaranteed by the 15th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States." But this merely describes the parties wronged as within the classes named in the amendment. They were not bribed because they were colored men, but because they were voters. No discrimination on account of race, color, or previous condition of servitude is charged.

These authorities show that a statute which purports to punish purely individual action cannot be sustained as an appropriate exercise of the power conferred by the 15th Amendment upon Congress to prevent action by the state through some one or more of its official representatives, and that an indictment which charges no discrimination on account of race, color, or previous condition of servitude is likewise destitute of support by such amendment.

But the contention most earnestly pressed is that Congress has ample power in respect to elections of representatives in Congress; that the election which was held, and at which this bribery took place, was such an election; and that therefore under such general power this statute and this indictment can be sustained. The difficulty with this.

contention is that Congress has not by this section acted in the exercise of such power. It is not legislation in respect to elections [140] of Federal *officers, but is leveled at all elections, state or Federal, and it does not purport to punish bribery of any voter, but simply of those named in the 15th Amendment. On its face it is clearly an attempt to exercise power supposed to be conferred by the 15th Amendment in respect to all elections, and not in pursuance of the general control by Congress over particular elections. To change this statute, enacted to punish bribery of persons named in the 15th Amendment at all elections, to a statute punishing bribery of any voter at certain elections would be in effect judicial legislation. It would be wresting the statute from the purpose with which it was enacted and making it serve another purpose. Doubtless even a criminal statute may be good in part and bad in part, providing the two can be clearly separated, and it is apparent that the legislative body would have enacted the one without the other, but there are no two parts to this statute. If the contention be sustained, it is simply a transformation of the statute in its single purpose and scope. This question has been by this court in two cases carefully considered and fully determined. In United States v. Reese, 92 U. S. 214, 23 L. ed. 563, there was an indictment, one count of which was based upon the 3d and another upon the 4th section of the act of May 31, 1870 (16 Stat. at L. 140, chap. 114, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 506) the 5th section of which act is substantially repeated in § 5507, Rev. Stat. (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3712). It is true that, as stated, § 4 contains "no words of limitation or reference, even, that can be construed as manifesting any intention to confine its provisions to the terms of the 15th Amendment. That section has for its object the punishment of all persons who by force, bribery, etc., hinder, delay, etc., any person from qualifying or voting." And it is also true that the government expressly waived the consideration of all claims not arising out of the enforcement of the 15th Amendment to the Constitution. Nevertheless the decision is directly in point. We said (p. 221, L. ed. p. 565):

"We are, therefore, directly called upon to decide whether a penal statute enacted by Congress, with its limited powers, which is in general language broad enough to cover wrongful acts without as well as within the constitutional jurisdiction, can be limited by judicial construction so as to make it [141] operate *only on that which Congress may rightfully prohibit and punish. For this purpose, we must take these sections of the statute as they are. We are not able to reject a part which is unconstitutional, and retain the remainder, because it is not possible to separate that which is unconstitutional, if there be any such, from that which is not. The proposed effect is not to be attained by striking out or disregarding 190 U. S.

words that are in the section, but by inserting those that are not now there. Each of the sections must stand as a whole or fall altogether. The language is plain. There is no room for construction, unless it be as to the effect of the Constitution. The question, then, to be determined is, whether we can introduce words of limitation into a penal statute so as to make it specific, when, as expressed, it is general only.

"It would certainly be dangerous if the legislature could set a net large enough to catch all possible offenders, and leave it to the courts to step inside and say who could be rightfully detained and who should be set at large. This would, to some extent, substitute the judicial for the legislative department of the government. . . . To limit this statute in the manner now asked for would be to make a new law, not to enforce an old one. This is no part of our duty."

Again, in the Trade-Mark Cases, 100 U. S. 82, sub nom. United States v. Steffens, 25 L. ed. 550, the validity of an indictment under the 4th and 5th sections of the act of Congress to punish the counterfeiting of trademarks (19 Stat. at L. 141, chap. 274) was considered. The congressional enactments at that time attempted to authorize trademarks generally, and the statute referred to was equally general. It was held that under the Constitution Congress did not have control over the subject of trademarks generally, and, referring to the contention that to a limited extent it had, we said (p. 98, L. ed. p. 553):

"It has been suggested that if Congress has power to regulate trademarks used in commerce with foreign nations and among the several states, these statutes shall be held valid in that class of cases, if no further. . . . While it may be true that when one part of a statute is valid and constitutional, and another part is unconstitutional and void, the court may enforce the valid part where they are distinctly separable, so that each can stand alone, it is not within the judicial province to give to the *words used by Congress a narrower meaning [142] than they are manifestly intended to bear in order that crimes may be punished which are not described in language that brings them within the constitutional power of that body. This precise point was decided in United States v. Reese, 92 U. S. 214, 23 L. ed. 563. In that case Congress had passed a statute punishing election officers who should refuse to any person lawfully entitled to do so the right to cast his vote at an election. This court was of the opinion that, as regarded the section of the statute then under consideration, Congress could only punish such denial when it was on account of race, color, or previous condition of servitude. It was urged, however, that the general description of the offense included the more limited one, and that the section was valid where such was in fact the cause of denial. But the court said" (and then follows the quotation we have already made from that case).

We deem it unnecessary to add anything to the views expressed in these opinions. We are fully sensible of the great wrong which results from bribery at elections, and do not question the power of Congress to punish such offenses when committed in respect to the election of Federal officials. At the same time it is all-important that a criminal statute should define clearly the offense which it purports to punish, and that when so defined it should be within the limits of the power of the legislative body enacting it. Congress has no power to punish bribery at all elections. The limits of its power are in respect to elections in which the nation is directly interested, or in which some mandate of the national Constitution is disobeyed; and courts are not at liberty to take a criminal statute, broad and comprehensive in its terms and in these terms beyond the power of Congress, and change it to fit some particular transaction which Congress might have legislated for if it had seen fit.

The judgment of the District Court is affirmed.

Mr. Justice McKenna took no part in the decision of this case.

Mr. Justice Harlan and Mr. Justice Brown dissented.

[143] *SWAN & FINCH COMPANY, Appt.,
v.

UNITED STATES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 143-147.)

Duties—drawback on exportation—goods consumed on voyage.

The drawback provided for by the act of Congress of August 27, 1894, § 22 (28 Stat. at L. 551, chap. 349), re-enacted as the act of July 24, 1897, § 30 (30 Stat. at L. 211, chap. 11, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1991), "on the exportation" of articles manufactured from imported materials on which duties had been paid, will not be allowed on goods placed on board a vessel bound for a foreign port, to be used and consumed on board the vessel during its voyage, and in fact so used and consumed.

[No. 258.]

Argued April 22, 23, 1903. Decided May 18, 1903.

APPEAL from the Court of Claims to review a judgment denying the right to a drawback of duties on goods manufactured from imported materials, used and consumed by a vessel bound to a foreign port. Affirmed.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brewer:

Section 22 of the act of August 27, 1894 (28 Stat. at L. 551, chap. 349), re-enacted as § 30 of the act of July 24, 1897 (30 Stat. at L. 211, chap. 11, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1991), is as follows:

"Sec. 22. That where imported materials on which duties have been paid are used in the manufacture of articles manufactured or produced in the United States, there shall be allowed on the exportation of such articles a drawback equal in amount to the duties paid on the materials used, less one per centum of such duties: Provided, That when the articles exported are made in part from domestic materials the imported materials, or the parts of the articles made from such materials, shall so appear in the completed articles that the quantity or measure thereof may be ascertained: And provided further, That the drawback on any article allowed under existing law shall be continued at the rate herein provided. That the imported materials used in the manufacture or production of articles entitled to drawback of customs duties when exported shall, in all cases where drawback of duties paid on such materials is claimed, be identified, the quantity of such materials used and the amount of duties paid thereon shall be ascertained, the facts of the manufacture or production of such articles in *the United [144] States and their exportation therefrom shall be determined, and the drawback due thereon shall be paid to the manufacturer, producer, or exporter, to the agent of either, or to the person to whom such manufacturer, producer, exporter, or agent shall in writing order such drawback paid, under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury shall prescribe."

During the years 1895, 1896, 1897, the appellant, a corporation engaged in business as importer, manufacturer, and exporter of oils at New York city and elsewhere in the United States, having used in the manufacture of certain kinds of lubricating oils imported rape seed oil on which duties had been paid, placed on board of vessels bound for foreign ports, lubricating oils so manufactured, and claimed a drawback of the duties paid on the imported rape seed oil used therein. The Treasury Department allowed and paid the drawback on such manufactured oils as were shipped to foreign countries and there re-landed, but refused to pay any on such as were placed on board for use and consumed in use on the vessels. The appellant brought this suit in the court of claims to recover the drawbacks on the last-named oils. That court decided against it (37 Ct. Cl. 101), and from such decision this appeal was taken.

Mr. William B. King argued the cause, and, with Mr. George A. King, filed a brief for appellant:

The word "exportation" has two meanings: (1) Its primary, general, or essential meaning—to carry or send out of a place, and (2) Its secondary, specific, or especial meaning—to send out from one country to another.

Murray's Philological Dict. title "Export;" Webster's Dict. title "Export;" Century 190 U. S.

Diet. title "Export;" Standard Diet. title "Export;" Anderson's Diet. title "Export;" Black's Diet. title "Export."

Which meaning is to be preferred in this statute is to be decided by finding which is more in accord with the purpose of the statute.

Black, Constr. & Interpretation of Laws, p. 56.

The purpose of the drawback law is to place the American manufacturer in a position equal to that of his foreign competitor in those markets where the protective tariff laws of the United States can give no advantage to the American.

Campbell v. United States, 107 U. S. 407, 27 L. ed. 592, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 759; Tide Water Oil Co. v. United States, 171 U. S. 210, 216, 43 L. ed. 139, 140, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 837; Schlitz Brewing Co. v. United States, 35 Ct. Cl. 110.

Whenever the question has been clearly presented for judicial decision, it has been uniformly held that exportation was complete upon leaving the port, and that relanding in a foreign country is not an essential of exportation.

Sampson v. Peaslee, 20 How. 571, 15 L. ed. 1022; Irvine v. Redfield, 23 How. 170, 16 L. ed. 418; Greely v. Thompson, 10 How. 225, 13 L. ed. 397; Forman v. Peaslee, Fed. Cas. No. 4,941; Muller v. Baldwin, 43 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 164.

The essential to importation is entrance, just as the essential to exportation is exit.

Marriott v. Brune, 9 How. 619, 13 L. ed. 282; Lawder v. Stone, 187 U. S. 281, ante, 178, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 79; American Sugar Ref. Co. v. United States, 181 U. S. 610, 45 L. ed. 1024, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 830.

Several cases in this court have laid down the principle that in the Constitution the word "export" is used in relation to foreign commerce, and not interstate or domestic commerce.

Brown v. Maryland, 12 Wheat. 419, 6 L. ed. 678; Woodruff v. Parham, 8 Wall. 123, 19 L. ed. 382; Brown v. Houston, 114 U. S. 622, 29 L. ed. 257, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1091; Dooley v. United States, 183 U. S. 151, 46 L. ed. 129, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 62.

In an English case where the question arose whether "exportation" in a statute included domestic trade, it was defined in its broader meaning of carrying out of port.

Stockton & D. R. Co. v. Barrett, 11 Clark & F. 600.

Where goods leave the United States only temporarily, the owner intending to reland them in this country, there is no exportation, because the intent is absent. The courts hold the purpose of permanent absence essential to the exportation.

United States v. The Forrester, Newberry, Adm. 81, Fed. Cas. No. 15,132; Kidd v. Flagler, 54 Fed. 367; Kennedy v. United States, 37 C. C. A. 25, 95 Fed. 127.

Assistant Attorney General Pradt argued the cause and filed a brief for appellee:

It is to be assumed that the words and phrases are used in their technical meaning, if they have acquired one.

190 U. S.

Endlich, Interpretation of Statutes, § 2; Ex parte Hall, 1 Pick. 261; Brocket v. Ohio & P. R. Co. 14 Pa. 243, 53 Am. Dec. 534; State v. Smith, 5 Humph. 396.

This rule has found especial application by this court in the interpretation of statutes relating to the revenue laws.

American Net & Twine Co. v. Worthington, 141 U. S. 471, 35 L. ed. 822, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 55; Two Hundred Chests of Tea, 9 Wheat. 430, 438, 6 L. ed. 128, 129; Maddock v. Magone, 152 U. S. 368, 38 L. ed. 482, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 588; De Jonge v. Magone, 159 U. S. 569, 40 L. ed. 263, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 119.

The word "exportation" has a well-known restricted technical meaning.

Anderson, title "Export;" Black, title "Export;" Bouvier, title "Exportation;" English (1899), title "Exportation;" Jacobs-Tomlins, title "Exportation;" Rapalje & Lawrence, title "Exportation;" Wharton, title "Exportation;" Century, title "Export;" Standard, title "Exportation;" Webster, title "Export."

The words "imports," "exports," and "exportation" have frequently received judicial definition, and in every case in which the words were employed in their commercial sense they have been held to apply to foreign commerce,—to goods shipped from one country to another in foreign trade, and in no such instance were the words given their general meaning.

Brown v. Maryland, 12 Wheat. 419, 6 L. ed. 678; Woodruff v. Parham, 8 Wall. 123, 131, 19 L. ed. 382, 384; De Lima v. Bidwell, 182 U. S. 176, 45 L. ed. 1048, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 743; Kidd v. Flagler, 54 Fed. 367, Reversed in 24 C. C. A. 123, 45 U. S. App. 461, 78 Fed. 341; United States v. The Forrester, Newberry, Adm. 81, Fed. Cas. No. 15,132.

The essential element of an importation or an exportation, in its constitutional sense, is the intent to reland the goods in some foreign port.

The Mary, 1 Gall. 206, Fed. Cas. No. 9,183; McLean v. Hager, 31 Fed. 604; Forman v. Peaslee, Fed. Cas. No. 4,941; Clarke v. Clarke, 3 Woods, 408, Fed. Cas. No. 2,846.

The meaning of the word as employed in the Constitution must be given to it in the statutes of the United States.

Kentucky Railroad Tax Cases, 115 U. S. 334, sub nom. Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. v. Kentucky, 29 L. ed. 418, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 57.

This court has construed the purpose of the drawback provision to be not only the encouragement of manufactures in this country, but the enlargement of our trade with foreign countries.

Tide Water Oil Co. v. United States, 171 U. S. 216, 43 L. ed. 141, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 837.

If there can be any ambiguity found in the statute, the doubt should be solved in favor of the government, since the claimant is claiming the benefit of a special privilege,—exemption from the burden of a general statute.

Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. v. Missouri River Packet Co. 125 U. S. 271, 31 L. ed. 736, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 874.

No mere omission, no mere failure to provide for contingencies which it may seem wise to have specifically provided for, justify any judicial addition to the language of the statute.

United States v. Goldenberg, 168 U. S. 103, 42 L. ed. 398, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 3.

Mr. Justice Brewer delivered the opinion of the court:

The statute allows the drawback "on the exportation," and the question is whether goods placed on board a vessel bound for a foreign port, to be used and consumed on board the vessel during its voyage, and in fact so used and consumed, are exported.

The careful opinion of the court of claims, which, in general, we approve and to which we refer, relieves us from the necessity of an extended discussion. Whatever primary [145] meaning *be indicated by its derivation, the word "export," as used in the Constitution and laws of the United States, generally means the transportation of goods from this to a foreign country. "As the legal notion of emigration is a going abroad with an intention of not returning, so that of exportation is a severance of goods from the mass of things belonging to this country with an intention of uniting them to the mass of things belonging to some foreign country or other." 17 Ops. Atty. Gen. 583.

True, the context may sometimes give to the word a narrower meaning, and in the execution of the administrative affairs of government it may have been applied to cases in which there was not in the full sense of the term an exportation, yet these are exceptions and do not destroy its general signification. It cannot mean simply a carrying out of the country, for no one would speak of goods shipped by water from San Francisco to San Diego as "exported," although in the voyage they are carried out of the country. Nor would the mere fact that there was no purpose of return justify the use of the word "export." Coal placed on a steamer in San Francisco to be consumed in propelling that steamer to San Diego would never be so designated. Another country or state as the intended destination of the goods is essential to the idea of exportation.

Counsel for appellant, after quoting from several dictionaries, say:

"These definitions show that the word has two meanings:

"(1) Its primary, general or essential meaning,—to carry or send out of a place; and

"(2) Its secondary, specific or especial meaning,—to send out from one country to another.

"Of all goods sent out of this country but a small proportion fails to reach a foreign country; the amount consumed or lost at sea is minute in comparison. In ordinary use, therefore, the foreign destination is implied. We claim that, however usual, it is not essential, and that here the original and primary definition of the word should be applied to goods carried out of the country on vessels in the foreign trade, although they never reach a foreign country."

To this we are unable to yield our assent:

*First. The fact that the words "export" [146] and "exportation" are, as we have indicated, generally used in the sense of transportation from this to a foreign country, makes against the contention that it is here used in a different sense.

Second. The purpose with which the drawback statute was enacted is against it. In Campbell v. United States, 107 U. S. 407, 413, 27 L. ed. 592, 595, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 759, 765, we said:

"The purpose of the drawback provision is to make duty free, imports which are manufactured here and then returned whence they came or to some other foreign country.—articles which are not sold or consumed in the United States."

So, also, in Tide Water Oil Co. v. United States, 171 U. S. 210, 216, 43 L. ed. 139, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 837, 839:

"The object of the section was evidently, not only to build up an export trade, but to encourage manufactures in this country, where such manufactures are intended for exportation, by granting a rebate of duties upon the raw or prepared materials imported, and thus enabling the manufacturer to compete in foreign markets with the same articles manufactured in other countries."

Third. The uniform construction placed by the department charged with the execution of the statute has been against it.

Fourth. Being a governmental grant of a privilege or benefit it is to be construed in favor of the government and against the party claiming the grant. Where the burden is placed upon a citizen, if there be a doubt as to the extent of the burden it is resolved in favor of the citizen, but where a privilege is granted any doubt is resolved in favor of the government. In Hartranft v. Wiegmann, 121 U. S. 609, 616, 30 L. ed. 1012, 1015, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1240, 1244, the one rule was thus stated:

"We are of opinion that the decision of the circuit court was correct. But, if the question were one of doubt, the doubt would be resolved in favor of the importer 'as duties are never imposed on the citizen upon vague or doubtful interpretations.' Powers v. Barney, 5 Blatchf. 202, Fed. Cas. No. 11,361; United States v. Isham, 17 Wall. 496, 504, 21 L. ed. 728, 730; Gurr v. Scudds, 11 Exch. 190, 191; Adams v. Bancroft, 3 Sumn. 384, Fed. Cas. No. 44." See also American Net & Twine Co. v. Worthington, 141 U. S. 468, 474, 35 L. ed. 821, 824, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 55.

*On the other hand, in Hannibal & St. J. [147] R. Co. v. Missouri River Packet Co. 125 U. S. 260, 271, 31 L. ed. 731, 735, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 874, 880, we said, citing several authorities:

"But if there be any doubt as to the proper construction of this statute (and we think there is none), then that construction must be adopted which is most advantageous to the interests of the government. The statute, being a grant of a privilege, must be construed most strongly in favor of the grantor."

For these reasons we think the judgment of the Court of Claims was correct, and it is affirmed.

Mr. Justice Brown and Mr. Justice Peckham dissented.

MUTUAL RESERVE FUND LIFE ASSOCIATION, Appt.,
v.

JAMES S. PHELPS and Fidelity Trust & Safety Vault Company.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 147-160.)

Service of process on foreign corporation—service on state officer after cancelation of license—Federal courts—enjoining proceedings in state courts.

1. The cancelation, by the insurance commissioner of Kentucky, of the license to do business in that state, granted to an insurance

NOTE.—As to service of process on foreign corporations—see notes to Foster v. Charles Betcher Lumber Co. (S. D.) 23 L. R. A. 490; Eldred v. American Palace-Car Co. 45 C. C. A. 3.

That a foreign corporation must be engaged in business within the state in order to validate service of process upon it—see note to Piuney v. Providence Loan & Invest. Co. (Wis.) 50 L. R. A. 591.

As to conflict of jurisdiction between Federal and state courts—see Louisville Trust Co. v. Cincinnati, 22 C. C. A. 356, and note. And see note to J. I. Case Plow Works v. Finks, 26 C. C. A. 50.

On injunction against suit in foreign jurisdiction—see note to Thorndike v. Thorndike (Ill.) 21 L. R. A. 71.

As to enjoining proceedings in Federal courts—see notes to Clapp v. Otoo County, 45 C. C. A. 591; Central Trust Co. v. Grantham, 27 C. C. A. 575, and Garner v. Second Nat. Bank, 16 C. C. A. 90.

Service on state officer as service on foreign corporation.

Service on an insurance commissioner, as prescribed by statute, is sufficient as against a foreign insurance company that has appointed him agent for that purpose. Osborne v. Shawmut Ins. Co. 51 Vt. 278.

Valid service of summons on a misdemeanor indictment against a foreign insurance company may be made under Ky. Stat. § 631, requiring consent to service of process on the insurance commissioner "in any action," and Crim. Code, § 147, providing that process upon indictments shall be served as in civil actions. Aetna Ins. Co. v. Com. 106 Ky. 864, 45 L. R. A. 355, 51 S. W. 624.

Statutes prescribing this method for service of process on foreign insurance companies do not preclude service in the manner prescribed for foreign corporations generally. Howard v. Prudential Ins. Co. 1 App. Div. 135, 37 N. Y. Supp. 832; Silver v. Western Assur. Co. 3 App. Div. 572, 38 N. Y. Supp. 335; Green v. Equitable Mut. Life & Endowment Assn. 105 Iowa, 190 U. S.

company which had consented, pursuant to Ky. Stat. 1899, § 631, that service of process upon such commissioner in any action brought in the state should be a valid service upon the company, does not render such service insufficient to bring that company into a court of the state as a party defendant to a suit brought by a citizen of such state upon a cause of action which arose out of transactions between the parties while the insurance company was carrying on business in Kentucky under the license.

2. A Federal court is without jurisdiction to enjoin proceedings in a state court sought to be removed to the Federal court, where such proceedings are not removable because regarded by the state court merely as supplementary in character and as a mere continuation of an action already passed into judgment, and in aid of the execution of such judgment.

[No. 263.]

Argued April 24, 27, 1903. Decided May 18, 1903.

APPEAL from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit to review a decree which reversed a decree of the Circuit Court for the District of Ken-628, 75 N. W. 635; Mutual Reserve Fund Life Assn. v. Cleveland Woolen Mills, 27 C. C. A. 212, 54 U. S. App. 290, 82 Fed. 508; Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Spratley, 99 Tenu. 322, 44 L. R. A. 442, 42 S. W. 145, Affirmed in 172 U. S. 602, 43 L. ed. 569, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 308.

The provision of Va. Code, chap. 53, for the service of process on the auditor of public accounts during any vacancy in the agency to accept service for a foreign insurance company, does not apply to such companies as are conducted on the assessment plan, but as to such companies the method of service is pointed out by Va. act of May 18, 1887, which makes no provision for service during the existence of any such vacancy. Millan v. Mutual Reserve Fund Life Assn. 103 Fed. 764.

There is some conflict as to whether a foreign corporation doing business within the state without complying with a statute requiring, as a condition precedent, the designation of a state official to accept service of process, is bound by service on such official.

Service under such circumstances has been held to be at least prima facie sufficient. Knapp, S. & Co. v. National Mut. F. Ins. Co. 30 Fed. 607.

And the company has been held estopped by such a course to deny the validity of such service. Ehrman v. Teutonia Ins. Co. 1 McCrary, 123, 1 Fed. 471; Masons' Fraternal Acci. Assn. v. Riley, 60 Ark. 578, 31 S. W. 148; Sparks v. National Masonic Acci. Assn. 73 Fed. 277; Sparks v. National Masonic Acci. Assn. 100 Iowa, 458, 69 N. W. 678; Modern Woodmen v. Noyes, 158 Ind. 503, 64 N. E. 21.

To the same effect is Old Wayne Mut. Life Assn. v. Flynn (Ind. App.) 66 N. E. 57, where the court said that a foreign insurance company cannot go into the state of Pennsylvania and do business therein and evade the provisions of a statute of that state requiring the filing of a stipulation authorizing service of process on an insurance commissioner or some designated agent, by failing to comply with the law.

So where defendant admits in the pleadings that it was a foreign corporation engaged in the tucky enjoining further proceedings in a state court, and remanded the cause, with directions to dismiss the bill. Affirmed.

See same case below, 50 C. C. A. 339, 112 Fed. 453.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brewer:

Section 631, Kentucky Statutes 1899 (Laws 1893, chap. 171, § 94), reads as follows:

[148] *"Sec. 631. Before authority is granted to any foreign insurance company to do business in this state, it must file with the commissioner a resolution adopted by its board of directors consenting that service of process upon any agent of such company in this state, or upon the commissioner of insurance of this state, in any action brought or pending in this state, shall be a valid service upon said company; and if process is served business of fire insurance within the state, it is conclusively presumed against it that before so doing it duly assented as required by Kan. Gen. Stat. 1889, chap. 50a, § 41, that in actions brought against it jurisdiction might be obtained by service upon the superintendent of insurance in the manner prescribed by that statute which authorized it to do business in the state upon compliance with its terms. German Ins. Co. v. Hall, 1 Kan. App. 43, 41 Pac. 69.

But the Rhode Island supreme court has held that jurisdiction of a foreign insurance company, doing business in the state without complying with the provisions of a statute which requires it, before doing business, to appoint the insurance commissioner to accept service of process, cannot be acquired by service on such commissioner, where the facts appear from plaintiff's own showing that the defendant has not appeared to plead to the jurisdiction, and is not shown to have received notice either actual or constructive. Lubrano v. Imperial Council, O. of U. F. 20 R. I. 27, 38 L. R. A. 546, 37 Atl. 345. The court distinguished Ehrman v. Teutonia Ins. Co. 1 McCrary, 123, 1 Fed. 471, and Sparks v. National Masonic Accl. Asso. 73 Fed. 277, supra, pointing out that in those cases the defendant appeared and pleaded to the jurisdiction, and that the return on the writ showed a valid service prima facie, and said that no presumption that the defendant had discharged its statutory duty by appointing the person therein designated as its agent to accept service could be said to arise in the face of a record which showed as a matter of fact that the defendant had not complied with the statute.

In Rothrock v. Dwelling-House Ins. Co. 161 Mass. 423, 23 L. R. A. 863, 37 N. E. 206, which was an action to enforce a judgment recovered in the courts of another state against a foreign insurance company, the court refused to follow Ehrman v. Teutonia Ins. Co. 1 McCrary, 123, 1 Fed. 471, supra. The court pointed out that in that case the defendant had notice of the suit and appeared and sought to set up a want of jurisdiction, but said that this difference might not be very material, and added: "It seems to us that the question before us is not whether the defendant would be estopped from setting up its failure to comply with the law to relieve itself from liability under its contract, but whether the plaintiff presents a case which comes within the terms of the statute on which the jurisdiction of the court must be founded. Unless the statute applies to a case like this the service was improperly made, and it is as if upon the commissioner it shall be his duty to at once send it by mail, addressed to the company at its principal office; and if any company shall, without the consent of the other party to any suit or proceeding brought by or against it in any court of this state, remove said suit or proceeding to any Federal court, or shall institute any suit or proceeding against any citizen of this state in any Federal court, it shall be the duty of the commissioner to forthwith revoke all authority to such company and its agents to do business in this state, and to publish such revocation in some newspaper of general circulation published in the state."

On May 10, 1893, the appellant, the Mutual Reserve Fund Life Association, hereinafter called the association, acting under said section, by resolution of its board of directors, consented that the insurance company there had been no service. In our opinion unless the stipulation is filed a foreign insurance company has no right to do business in the state, and if it violates the law in that respect no service can be made upon the auditor and no jurisdiction can be obtained there on which to found a judgment against it. The remedy provided is by a punishment of the corporation and of such others as have disregarded the requirements of the statute."

The provision of Me. Rev. Stat. tit. 4, chap. 49, § 63, authorizing service of process against a foreign insurance company to be made on the insurance commissioner "in case no agent of such company can be found" does not apply to companies which have never done business or had an agent or officer or attorney in the state. Hazeltine v. Mississippi Valley F. Ins. Co. 55 Fed. 743.

And where the company had withdrawn from the state of Maine before service, the New York supreme court refused to enforce a default judgment in personam rendered by a court of the former state on service of process upon the commissioner of insurance. People v. Commercial Alliance L. Ins. Co. 7 App. Div. 297, 40 N. Y. Supp. 269. It was insisted in this case that, as the summons bore date before that of the company's withdrawal from the state, the service was valid because an action is deemed to be begun on the day the writ or summons is dated; but the court said that so far as foreign insurance corporations are concerned jurisdiction is acquired by the service of a writ or summons, and that where, on the date of such service the company was not doing business within the state, the Maine court had no jurisdiction over it to render a judgment enforceable outside of the state.

So the right to serve process on any of the former agents of a foreign insurance company or upon the auditor of public accounts under Va. Code, chap. 53, was terminated by the withdrawal of the company from the state. Millan v. Mutual Reserve Fund Life Asso. 103 Fed. 764.

But a foreign insurance company which has consented, pursuant to Ky. act of April 5, 1893, § 94, to service of process upon the commissioner of insurance does not, by ceasing to do business in the state, preclude service on that official in an action on the contract of insurance previously made in the state. Home Ben. Soc. v. Muehl, 22 Ky. L. Rep. 1378, 59 S. W. 520; Germania Ins. Co. v. Ashby, 23 Ky. L. Rep. 1564, 65 S. W. 611; MUTUAL RESERVE FUND LIFE ASSO. v. PHIELPS.

Earlier cases in the lower Federal courts missioner of Kentucky should be authorized to receive service of process in any action brought or pending in Kentucky, and also that like valid service of process might be made upon every agent then or thereafter acting for it in Kentucky.

On October 10, 1899, the insurance commissioner canceled the license which had theretofore been issued to the association, and gave it notice that from and after that date all authority granted by his department to it, and all licenses issued to the agents of the association to do business in the state of Kentucky, were revoked. And from and after that date the association had no agent or agents in the state of Kentucky and did no new business whatever in the state, but at one time, for the convenience of the holders of certificates residing in Jefferson county, permitted them to remit dues and assessments through the Western Bank, located in the city of Louisville.

*On February 28, 1900, James S. Phelps [149] commenced an action in the circuit court of Jefferson county, Kentucky, against the association, alleging that on July 8, 1885, he had made application for membership in it, and that on July 16, 1885, his application had been approved and certificate of policy of insurance issued to him. Breaches of the agreement on the part of the defendant were alleged, and a judgment asked for $1,994.20. A summons was issued and served on the insurance commissioner, and an alias summons was also issued and served upon Ben Frese, as the managing agent and chief officer and agent of the association in Jefferson county. The defendant appeared specially and moved to quash the service on each summons. The motion was heard on which held that the authority of the insurance commissioner to accept service conferred by resolution of a foreign insurance company adopted pursuant to Ky. Stat. § 631, ceased when the company's license to do business in the state was revoked, and it had in consequence ceased to do such business and had withdrawn its agents from the state (Friedman v. Empire L. Ins. Co. 101 Fed. 535; Swann v. Mutual Reserve Fund Life Asso. 100 Fed. 922), being squarely in conflict with MUTUAL RESERVE FUND LIFE ASSO. v. PHELPS, must be regarded as overruled by it.

In some states the statutes provide that stipulations to accept service of process on the state official shall be irrevocable so long as any liability of the stipulating foreign insurance company to any resident of the state continues.

Where the statute so provides, service on such official is not invalid because the company had ceased doing business in the state and had revoked its agencies, provided the policy sued on was issued while the company was doing business in the state. Collier v. Mutual Reserve Fund Life Asso. 119 Fed. 617.

Nor in such case is the revocation of the license permitting a foreign insurance company to do business in the state, coupled with the subsequent attempted revocation by the company of its stipulation authorizing service of process on the insurance commissioner, effectual to preclude such service in an action founded upon the liability growing out of a policy issued while the stipulation was in force. Magoffin v. Mutual Reserve Fund Life Asso. 87 Minn. 260, 91 N. W. 1115.

Nor can the company by ceasing to do business within the state revoke, as to an outstanding liability, its power of attorney appointing the insurance commissioner to accept service, where the statute provides that "the authority thereof shall continue in force irrevocable so long as any liability of the company remains outstanding in this commonwealth." Biggs v. Mutual Reserve Fund Life Asso. 128 N. C. 5, 37 S. E. 955; Moore v. Mutual Reserve Fund Life Asso. 129 N. C. 31, 39 S. E. 637.

Where the statute so provides, service so made will confer jurisdiction of suits by a non-resident against the corporation, although it has ceased to do business in the state, so long as suits against the corporation by citizens of the state are pending in the state courts or until it has been decided at the time of bringing such suit that it had no existing liabilities within the state. Youmans v. Minnesota Title Ins. & T. Co. 67 Fed. 282.

A foreign insurance company which had complied with a Tennessee statute requiring it to deposit with the secretary of state a power of attorney to accept service of process to be irrevocable so long as the company transacted business in the state or left outstanding or unsatisfied policies, although it might subsequently retire from the state or be excluded by its laws, may be so served where it retired from the state before that act was repealed by Tenn. Acts 1895, chap. 160, requiring the state treasurer or insurance commissioner to be the officer appointed to accept service, and consequently failed to make an appointment under that act. D'Arcy v. Mutual L. Ins. Co. 108 Tenn. 567, 69 S. W. 768.

But service upon the superintendent of insurance of a summons to a foreign insurance company does not give the state courts jurisdiction of an action on a policy fully executed in another state, although the company had at one time been authorized to do business in the state and had filed with the superintendent the written consent to such service required as a condition of doing business in the state by Kan. Gen. Stat. 1897, chap. 74, § 104, where long prior to the issuance of the policy its license to do business in the state had been revoked, since which time it had not maintained any agency or transacted any business therein. Mutual Reserve Fund Life Asso. v. Boyer (Kan.) 50 L. R. A. 538, 61 Pac. 387.

A foreign insurance company which transacted no business in the state between the time when the statute went into effect, requiring such companies as a condition precedent to doing any business in the state to consent to service of process on the state auditor, and the time of filing such consent, is not bound by a service of a notice of garnishment on such officer during that period. Greaves v. Posner, 111 Iowa. 651, 82 N. W. 1022.

For other cases on the question of the validity of service as the basis of a judgment in personam against a foreign corporation which is not doing business within the state, see note to Finney v. Providence Loan & Invest. Co. (Wis.) 50 L. R. A. 591.

Insurance effected by correspondence through the mails, by a foreign corporation having no place of business or agent in the state, is held not to constitute "doing business" in the state, within the meaning of a statute authorizing service upon the insurance commissioner for a foreign insurance company. Romaine v. Union Ins. Co. 55 Fed. 751.

But an insurance company whose agents solicit in another state applications for insurance, and forward them to the home office, which affidavits, and overruled. The defendant taking no further action, judgment was rendered on May 19, 1900, in favor of the plaintiff and against it for $1,994 with interest.

On August 4, 1900, the plaintiff filed an amended and supplemental petition, in which he alleged the filing of the original petition, the judgment, the issue of execution, a return of nulla bona; that the defendant had a large number of policy holders in the state who at stated times and regular intervals became indebted to it for premiums and assessments upon its policies of insurance, and prayed for a general attachment, or in lieu thereof the appointment of a receiver to take charge of the business and property of the defendant in Kentucky, and that all revenues and income accruing to it from policy holders and other debtors be ordered paid to the receiver. Upon the filing of this amended and supplemental petition the court appointed the Fidelity Trust & Safety Vault Company, the other appellee, hereinafter called the company, a receiver of all the property of the defendant in Kentucky, directed it to receive and collect all moneys and debts now owing or hereafter to accrue to the said defendant, and ordered all debtors of the association to pay to the receiver all premiums and assessments which might become due or owing to it; such receivership to continue until the judgment of the plaintiff and all costs and expenses had been paid, and then to terminate. The company qualified as such receiver, and gave notice to the policy holders of the defendant.

*On August 22, 1900, the association ap-[150]plied by petition and bond for a removal of the case to the circuit court of the United States for the district of Kentucky, which application was denied. It does not appear that any copy of the record was filed in the Federal court. But it commenced this suit in that court against Phelps (the judgment creditor) and the company, to enjoin them from further proceeding under the order made by the state court. The court issued an injunction, as prayed for. 103 Fed. 515. On February 2, 1901, the defendants moved to dissolve the injunction, which motion was overruled and an appeal taken to the United mails certificates to the applicants and collects the dues by mail and local collectors, is within the provisions of a statute of such state requiring any foreign insurance company desiring to transact any business by agents in such state to authorize the superintendent of the insurance department to accept service of process. Sparks v. National Masonic Acci. Asso. 73 Fed. 277.

The plaintiffs in an action against a foreign insurance company are not deprived of the benefit of the provision authorizing service of process upon the auditor of state because they happen to be the agents of the corporation. Rehm v. German Ins. & Sav. Inst. 125 Ind. 135, 25 N. E. 173.

But an appointment of the superintendent of insurance as attorney for a foreign corporation for the purpose of service of process, sent with an application for permission to do business in the state to insurance agents and brokers, who has proposed to procure the admission of the corporation into the state, is ineffectual, at least for the purpose of an action by such agents for services and expenditures, where the superintendent has refused to admit the company to the state, and the application has been withdrawn. Richardson v. Western Home Ins. Co. 29 N. Y. S. R. 820, 8 N. Y. Supp. 873.

The individual name of the superintendent of insurance need not be stated in a certificate appointing him as the agent of a foreign insurance company for service of process. Lafflin v. Travelers' Ins. Co. 121 N. Y. 713, 24 N. E. 934.

Service on the deputy of the secretary of state is held in Lonkey v. Keyes Silver Min. Co. 21 Nev. 312, 17 L. R. A. 351, 31 Pac. 57, to be insufficient, under a statute authorizing service on the secretary of state as agent of the corporation.

And service of process on the deputy insurance commissioner at the office of commissioner is not service on the latter, within the meaning of a statute authorizing service of process for foreign insurance companies upon the insurance commissioner. Old Wayne Mut. Life Asso. v. Flynn (Ind. App.) 66 N. E. 57.

But in South Pub. Co. v. Fire Asso. of Philadelphia, 67 Ill. 41, 21 N. Y. Supp. 675, the clerk of the superintendent of insurance, who was specially designated by him for the purpose, was held his representative to receive service for a foreign insurance company, where the superintendent had been appointed to receive and accept service, and himself gave a written admission of service.

To the same effect is Quinn v. Royal Ins. Co. 81 Hun. 207, 30 N. Y. Supp. 714, where the absence of the superintendent of insurance from the city of Albany, New York, when the summons to a foreign insurance company was received by the sheriff for service was held not to estop the insurance company from claiming the benefit of a provision of the policy in suit, limiting the time for the commencement of actions thereon, because the law requires the superintendent of insurance to appoint a deputy upon whom, in his absence, the powers and duties of the office should devolve, and the service of summons in such case upon the deputy would have been good.

But conceding by way of argument that service on the chief deputy of the Pennsylvania insurance commissioner would confer jurisdiction over a foreign insurance company which had authorized the commissioner to accept service, by virtue of the statutory authority conferred on the chief deputy to act during the absence or inability of the insurance commissioner and perform such duties as are attached to that office, such service is insufficient where the return fails to show that the person served was the chief deputy, and that the commissioner was not present and able to receive service himself. Reynolds v. Supreme Conclave I. O. of H. 9 Pa. Dist. R. 622.

Service of summons by mail on the superintendent of insurance, of which he makes a written admission, was held insufficient by the circuit court of the United States in Farmer v. National Life Asso. 50 Fed. 829, 28 Abb. N. C. 421, under N. Y. Laws 1884, chap. 346, § 1, authorizing service on him in a suit against a foreign insurance company which has appointed him its attorney on whom process "may be served" with the same effect as if the company or association existed in this state.

This was in a case removed from a state court. But on the same state of facts and apparently in the identical case (though how it came back into the state court does not appear) it was subsequently held by the general term States circuit court of appeals for the sixth circuit. By that court the decision of the circuit court was reversed February 4, 1902 (50 C. C. A. 339, 112 Fed. 453), and the case remanded with directions to dismiss the bill of complaint. From such decree the association appealed to this court.

Messrs. William D. Guthrie and Edmund F. Trabue argued the cause, and, with Messrs. George Burnham, Jr., and Sewell T. Tyng, filed a brief for appellant:

A circuit court of the United States has jurisdiction to enjoin the execution or enforcement of a judgment of a state court which is wholly void for want of jurisdiction.

Northern P. R. Co. v. Kurtzman, 82 Fed. 241; Terre Haute & I. R. Co. v. Peoria & P. U. R. Co. 82 Fed. 943.

Proceedings in a state court never deprive a party of liberty or property without due process of law, the mere entry of a judgment or order touches neither. It is the attempt at enforcement which presents the question of constitutional right and calls for protection. If, then, the order be void upon its face, ordinarily a defense thereto is ample at law; but if valid upon its face, as in the case at bar, equity will relieve.

York v. Texas, 137 U. S. 15, 20, 34 L. ed. 604, 605, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 9; Pennoyer v. Neff, 95 U. S. 714, 732, 24 L. ed. 565, 572.

The Federal courts will not restrain the institution of suits in a state court under unconstitutional statutes, as in Fitts v. McGhee, 172 U. S. 516, 529, 43 L. ed. 535, 541, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 269, or in any way interfere with proceedings therein; but as soon as those proceedings ripen into an alleged judgment, which judgment is void, the steps of individuals seeking to enforce it may be enjoined within the principle of Osborn v. Bank of United States, 9 Wheat. 738, 6 L. ed. 204. and Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 466, 42 L. ed. 819, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418.

However, anxious and solicitous the Federal courts may be to avoid conflicts of jurisdiction, they cannot deny suitors due protection of their constitutional rights.

Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Wabash R. Co. 119 Fed. 678.

of the supreme court in New York that written admission of service by the superintendent of insurance in New York, who has been appointed an attorney to receive service for the foreign insurance company, constitutes a sufficient service, although the summons was sent him by mail. Farmer v. National Life Asso. 67 Hun, 119, 21 N. Y. Supp. 1056.

The delivery of a summons to the sheriff for service on the superintendent of insurance, though within the time specified in the policy for bringing actions thereon, is not sufficient to confer jurisdiction of a foreign insurance company when not served within that time, as the case is not governed by the provision of N. Y. Code Civ. Proc. § 399, declaring that an attempt to commence an action is equivalent to the commencement thereof within the meaning of the provisions of that act limiting the time for commencing an action when the summons is delivered to the sheriff with the intent that it should be actually served. Quinn v. Royal Ins. Co. 81 Hun, 207, 30 N. Y. Supp. 714.

The refusal of the insurance commissioner to receive process against a foreign insurance company, which he has power to receive, will not prevent such attempted service from being effectual. Knapp, S. & Co. Co. v. National Mut. F. Ins. Co. 30 Fed. 607.

The forwarding of a copy of summons by the superintendent of insurance to the secretary of the foreign insurance company, and of another copy to the general agent of the company if resident in the state, though required by Kan. Gen. Stat. 1889, chap. 50a, § 41, is not essential to jurisdiction, at least where the company in fact received notice of the commencement of the action in due time to prepare its defense. German Ins. Co. v. Hall, 1 Kan. App. 43, 41 Pac. 69.

The jurisdictional requirement of Nev. Stat. 1889, p. 47, that the foreign corporation had no agent in the state, upon whom service of summons might be made, does not sufficiently appear from the record so as to sustain service upon the secretary of state where such record only shows that the company had no agent within the county of the sheriff making the return, and that any attempt on his part to show that there were no agents in any of the other counties of the state would be in excess of his power under the statute authorizing his return. Brooks v. Nevada Nickel Syndicate, 24 Nev. 311, 53 Pac. 597.

Although a summons in an action in the city court of New York cannot ordinarily be served outside of the city, an implied exception is made in respect to service on a foreign insurance company by the statute authorizing service upon the superintendent of insurance, and he may be served at his office in Albany. People ex rel. Firemen's Ins. Co. v. New York City Ct. Justices, 33 N. Y. S. R. 147, 11 N. Y. Supp. 773.

But service of a summons directed to a foreign insurance company upon the state auditor in one county, requiring the defendant to appear and answer in a circuit court of another county, conferred no jurisdiction on that court, where the state statutes, after making special provision for certain actions, direct that "every other action" may be brought in any county in which the defendant or one of several defendants resides or is summoned. Masons' Fraternal Acci. Asso. v. Riley, 60 Ark. 578, 31 S. W. 148.

Under Mo. Laws 1885, p. 184, authorizing service of process for a foreign insurance company on the state superintendent of insurance, a justice of the peace in one county could not acquire jurisdiction of such corporation by service of summons on the superintendent of insurance in another county. United States Mut. Acci. Ins. Co. v. Relsinger, 43 Mo. App. 571.

This statute having been amended by Mo. Rev. Stat. 1889, § 5912, so as to authorize service on the superintendent of insurance of process issued from any court of record, justice of the peace, or other inferior court, it was held in Fink v. Lancashire Ins. Co. 60 Mo. App. 673, that the Louisiana court of common pleas acquired jurisdiction of a suit against a foreign insurance company by service on the superintendent of the insurance department in the city of St. Louis, Missouri.

Summons served on the superintendent of insurance in Kansas in a suit against a foreign insurance company must be directed to the superintendent, but otherwise is the same in form as a summons in other cases. Westchester F. Ins. Co. v. Coverdale, 48 Kan. 446, 29 Pac. 682; German Ins. Co. v. Hall, 1 Kan. App. 43, 41 Pac. 69.

The cases presenting the closest analogy to the present question are those brought in the Federal courts for relief by way of injunction against judgments of state courts obtained by fraud, and to restrain proceedings thereon.

Marshall v. Holmes, 141 U. S. 589, 599, 35 L. ed. 870, 874, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 62.

Another class of analogous cases is where suit is brought in equity to obtain relief against judgments based upon the unauthorized appearance of attorneys.

French v. Hay, 22 Wall. 238, 248, 22 L. ed. 801, 857; Robb v. Vos, 155 U. S. 13, 38, 39 L. ed. 52, 61, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 4.

The case of an injunction against acts done by authority of proceedings in a state court after jurisdiction has been transferred by a valid removal to a circuit court of the United States, is a fair illustration of appellant's position.

French v. Hay, 22 Wall. 238, 248, 22 L. ed. 854, 857; Dietzsch v. Huidekoper, 103 U. S. 494, 497, sub nom. Kern v. Huidekoper, 26 L. ed. 497, 498; Wagner v. Drake, 31 Fed. 849.

A state court may disregard the process of a Federal court which was void because issued and executed on Sunday.

Gumbel v. Pitkin, 124 U. S. 131, 146, 31 L. ed. 374, 379, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 379.

Where the case shows an admitted abuse of process, this may be enjoined, though the validity of the judgment upon which it is based be not attacked.

Julian v. Central Trust Co. 53 C. C. A. 438, 115 Fed. 956.

Other cases, in which interference by injunction or otherwise have been held improper, are not inconsistent with the position that there can be no interference with jurisdiction where jurisdiction is shown not to exist.

Shields v. Coleman, 157 U. S. 168, 182, 39 L. ed. 660, 665, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 570; Central Nat. Bank v. Stevens, 169 U. S. 432, 42 L. ed. 807, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 403; Simpson v. Ward, 80 Fed. 561.

In order to determine the invalidity of and give relief against a state-court order alleged to be void for want of jurisdiction, it is not necessary to exercise an appellate or revisory jurisdiction over that court.

Johnson v. Waters, 111 U. S. 640, 667, 28 L. ed. 547, 556, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 619; Marshall v. Holmes, 141 U. S. 589, 599, 35 L. ed. 870, 874, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 62.

The fact, if it be a fact, that relief could have been obtained in some state court, does not in the slightest degree affect the right to obtain the same relief in the circuit court of the United States, where the requisite jurisdictional facts are present, as in the case at bar.

Arrowsmith v. Gleason, 129 U. S. 86, 98, 32 L. ed. 630, 634, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 237.

It appears, however, that the courts in Kentucky are prohibited by statute (Civ. Code, § 285) from enjoining the execution of a judgment of another court of the state, though the judgment be concededly void.

Jacobson v. Wernert, 19 Ky. L. Rep. 662, 41 S. W. 281.

So that in a case like the one at bar, where an injunction is necessary to prevent irreparable injury, no relief could be had except in a Federal court.

That the courts of the United States are not bound by such a statute limiting the powers of the state courts cannot be doubted.

Barrow v. Hunton, 99 U. S. 80, 82, 83, 85, 25 L. ed. 407, 408, 409; Marshall v. Holmes, 141 U. S. 590, 598, 35 L. ed. 871, 873, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 62.

There is no valid pending proceeding in the state court, and, therefore, there is properly no jurisdiction to be interfered with.

Wagner v. Drake, 31 Fed. 849.

The state court's determination in favor of its own jurisdiction is not conclusive in the circuit court.

Rose v. Himely, 4 Cranch, 241, 268, 2 L. ed. 608, 617; Elliott v. Peirsol, 1 Pet. 328, 340, 7 L. ed. 164, 170; Harris v. Hardeman, 14 How. 334, 341, 14 L. ed. 444, 447; Starbuck v. Murray, 5 Wend. 148, 21 Am. Dec. 172; Thompson v. Whitman, 18 Wall. 457, 468, 21 L. ed. 897, 901; Cooper v. Newell, 173 U. S. 555, 565, 43 L. ed. 808, 811, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 506; Robb v. Vos, 155 U. S. 13, 38, 39 L. ed. 52, 61, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 4; French v. Hay, 22 Wall. 238, 243, 252, 22 L. ed. 854, 857; Gordon v. Longest, 16 Pet. 97, 104, 10 L. ed. 900, 902; Home L. Ins. Co. v. Dunn, 19 Wall. 214, 224, 22 L. ed. 68, 69; Removal Cases, 100 U. S. 457, 475, 25 L. ed. 593, 600; New Orleans, M. & T. R. Co. v. Mississippi, 102 U. S. 135, 26 L. ed. 96; Kern v. Huidekoper, 103 U. S. 485, 492, 26 L. ed. 354, 357, 103 U. S. 494, 497, 26 L. ed. 497, 498.

The mere fact that the state court, in a case decided after the appointment, has held that the agency continued, does not affect the right or duty of the Federal court to determine whether the corporation was or was not actually served within the jurisdiction. Otherwise, the state courts could in such cases determine conclusively their own jurisdiction under the pretense of construing a statute.

Swann v. Mutual Reserve Fund Life Asso. 100 Fed. 922; Friedman v. Empire L. Ins. Co. 101 Fed. 535; Mutual Reserve Fund Life Asso. v. Boyer, 62 Kan. 31, 50 L. R. A. 538, 61 Pac. 387; St. Clair v. Cox, 106 U. S. 350, 353, 27 L. ed. 222, 223, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 354.

The inquiry whether a state court acquires jurisdiction of the person of the defendant is essentially a Federal question, upon which the decision of a state court is clearly not conclusive (Pennoyer v. Neff, 95 U. S. 714, 733, 24 L. ed. 565, 572; Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Spratley, 172 U. S. 602, 609, 43 L. ed. 569, 571, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 308), any more than it would be in the case of the construction of a contract created by statute.

An appointment of a state officer by a foreign corporation as agent for service of process, pursuant to a statute requiring it as a condition to entering the state, does not continue in effect after withdrawal or exclusion of the corporation from the state.

Forrest v. Pittsburgh Bridge Co. 53 C. C. A. 577, 116 Fed. 357; Mutual Reserve Fund Life Asso. v. Boyer, 62 Kan. 31, 50 L. R. A. 538, 61 Pac. 387; Millan v. Mutual Reserve Fund Life Asso. 103 Fed. 764; Swann v. Mutual Reserve Fund Life Asso. 100 Fed. 922; Friedman v. Empire L. Ins. Co. 101 Fed. 535; People v. Commercial Alliance L. Ins. Co. 7 App. Div. 297, 40 N. Y. Supp. 269.

The Federal court may judge for itself upon the sufficiency to meet the constitutional requirement of due process.

McCord Lumber Co. v. Doyle, 38 C. C. A. 34, 97 Fed. 22; Moredock v. Kirby, 118 Fed. 180; Cady v. Associated Colonies, 119 Fed. 420; St. Clair v. Cox, 106 U. S. 350, 355, 27 L. ed. 222, 223, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 354; Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Spratley, 172 U. S. 602, 617, 43 L. ed. 569, 574, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 308; Williamson v. Berry, 8 How. 495, 540, 12 L. ed. 1170.

The "amended and supplemental petition" in which the receiver was appointed was essentially a suit of a civil nature in equity.

Barrow v. Hunton, 99 U. S. 80, 85, 25 L. ed. 407, 408; Bondurant v. Watson, 103 U. S. 281, 286, 26 L. ed. 447, 448; Marshall v. Holmes, 141 U. S. 589, 598, 35 L. ed. 870, 873, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 62.

As such, it was removable under the judiciary act of 1875 as amended by the act of August 13, 1888. It is no longer open to question that such a creditor's bill on a judgment of a state court may be filed in a United States circuit court.

Mississippi Mills v. Cohn, 150 U. S. 202, 207, 37 L. ed. 1052, 1054, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 75.

The fact that at the time the bill of complaint in the present suit was filed—one day after the filing of the petition for removal—the removal record had not yet been filed in the United States circuit court was immaterial.

Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Koontz, 104 U. S. 5, 13, 26 L. ed. 643, 645; National S. S. Co. v. Tugman, 106 U. S. 118, 122, 27 L. ed. 87, 89, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 58.

If the case was removable, there should be no reasonable doubt of the power of the circuit court to enjoin the defendant Phelps and the receiver from further proceeding in the state court, within the cases of French v. Hay, 22 Wall. 238, 248, 22 L. ed. 854, 857 and Dietzsch v. Huidekoper, 103 U. S. 494, 497, sub nom. Kern v. Huidekoper, 26 L. ed. 497, 498.

Mr. Benjamin F. Washer argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Frederick Forcht, William H. Field, and Norton L. Goldsmith, filed a brief for appellees:

A foreign insurance company which has been doing business within a state through its agents does not cease to do business therein when it withdraws its agents and ceases to obtain or ask for new risks or obtain new policies, while, at the same time, its old policies continue in force.

Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Spratley, 172 U. S. 602, 43 L. ed. 569, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 308.

A life insurance company which is merely collecting premiums and paying losses on old policies is still "doing business" within the meaning of the statute regulating foreign corporations, and within the meaning of tax laws.

Kerr, Ins. § 26.

The Kentucky court of appeals, considering the statute of its own state, holds a foreign insurance company to be in court when served with summons as the appellant here was served by process executed on the commissioner.

Home Ben. Soc. v. Muehl, 22 Ky. L. Rep. 1264, 60 S. W. 371; Germania Ins. Co. v. Ashby, 23 Ky. L. Rep. 1564, 65 S. W. 611.

These decisions of the Kentucky court of appeals are controlling upon all other courts, both state and Federal.

Commercial Bank v. Buckingham, 5 How. 317, 12 L. ed. 169; Lawler v. Walker, 14 How. 149, 14 L. ed. 364; Central Land Co. v. Laidley, 159 U. S. 103, 40 L. ed. 91, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 80.

The decision of the state court, relative to the agencies of both the commissioner and Frese, and the authority of these parties to receive service of process for the defendant, was not open to review or reversal by the United States circuit court. All questions raised and determined in the state court were, as to the Federal court, res judicata.

Moch v. Virginia F. & M. Ins. Co. 4 Hughes, 61, 10 Fed. 696.

The proceedings subsequent to the rendition of the judgment were not removable.

Dere v. Strother, 10 Fed. 406.

No case was shown permitting a removal.

Cook v. Whitney, 3 Woods, 715, Fed. Cas. No. 3,166; Claplin v. McDermott, 20 Blatchf. 522, 12 Fed. 375; Cortes Co. v. Thannhauser, 20 Blatchf. 59, 9 Fed. 226; Desty, Fed. Proc. 9th ed. p. 448.

The petition for removal, if considered as contemplating the entire cause, certainly came too late. The original petition was filed on February 28, 1900, the defendant summoned March 1, 1900, the motion to remove made on August 22, 1900. Under the Kentucky practice the defendant has twenty days, after service of summons, to answer.

Fidelity Trust & Safety Vault Co. v. Newport News & M. Valley Co. 70 Fed. 403.

The circuit court of the United States had no jurisdiction to enjoin proceedings in a state court.

Diggs v. Wolcott, 4 Cranch, 179, 2 L. ed. 587; Taylor v. Carryl, 20 How. 583, 15 L. ed. 1028; Peck v. Jenness, 7 How. 612, 12 L. ed. 841; Covell v. Heyman, 111 U. S. 179, 28 L. ed. 391, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 355; Senior v. Pierce, 31 Fed. 628; Kohn v. Ryan, 31 Fed. 638; Rothschild v. Hasbrouck, 65 Fed. 284; Re Hall & S. Co. 73 Fed. 530; Leathe v. Thomas, 38 C. C. A. 75, 97 Fed. 136; Mills v. Provident Life & Trust Co. 40 C. C. A. 394, 100 Fed. 344; Southern Bank & T. Co. v. Folsom, 21 C. C. A. 568, 43 U. S. App. 713, 75 Fed. 929; American Asso. v. Hurst, 7 C. C. A. 598, 16 U. S. App. 325, 59 Fed. 5; Hutchinson v. Green, 2 McCrary, 471, 6 Fed. 838; Rensselaer & S. R. Co. v. Bennington & R. R. Co. 18 Fed. 617; Yick Wo v. Crowley, 26 Fed. 207; Rhodes & J. Mfg. Co. v. New Hampshire, 70 Fed. 721; Dillon v. Kansas City Suburban Bell R. Co. 43 Fed. 111; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Scott, 4 Woods, 386, 13 Fed. 793; Tarble's Case, 13 Wall. 401, sub nom. United States v. Tarble, 20 L. ed. 598; Gates v. Bucki, 4 C. C. A. 116, 12 U. S. App. 69, 53 Fed. 964.

Mr. Benjamin F. Washer also filed a supplemental brief for appellees:

The process of garnishment after judgment is clearly a mode of execution. Its purpose is to obtain satisfaction of the judgment out of the debtor's effects which are in a third person's hands.

Dere v. Strother, 10 Fed. 406.

Every court is left to decide for itself in what way and by what procedure its judgments and decrees are to be enforced; subject, of course, to review by its own appellate tribunals.

Riggs v. Johnson County, 6 Wall. 198, 18 L. ed. 777; Central Nat. Bank v. Stevens, 169 U. S. 432, 42 L. ed. 807, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 403.

On the right of courts of coequal, concurrent jurisdiction to impede and obstruct the proceedings of each other, see Gumbel v. Pitkin, 124 U. S. 156, 31 L. ed. 382, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 379.

In Evans v. Gorman, 115 Fed. 403, a United States circuit court decided that under § 720 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 581), and the comity between courts of concurrent jurisdiction, it had no power to enjoin proceedings in a state court notwithstanding the positive allegations of the bill that the state court was without jurisdiction and acting fraudulently.

Mr. Justice Brewer delivered the opinion of the court:

Many questions were elaborately discussed by counsel both orally and in brief, but we are of the opinion that the decisions of two or three will dispose of the case. First, the service of summons on the insurance commissioner was sufficient to bring [157] the association into the state court as party defendant. It was stipulated between the parties that the outstanding policies existing between the association and citizens of Kentucky were continued in force after the action of the insurance commissioner on October 10, 1899, and that on said policies the association had collected and was collecting dues, premiums, and assessments. It was, therefore, doing business within the state. Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Spratley, 172 U. S. 602, 43 L. ed. 569, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 308. The plaintiff was a citizen of Kentucky, and the cause of action arose out of transactions had between the plaintiff and defendant while the latter was carrying on business in the state of Kentucky under license from the state. Under those circumstances the authority of the insurance commissioner to receive summons in behalf of the association was sufficient. Such was the ruling of the court of appeals of Kentucky. Home Ben. Soc. v. Muehl, 22 Ky. L. Rep. 1378, 59 S. W. 520. In that case the society while doing business in the state issued the policy sued on, but in April, 1894, before the action was brought, ceased to do business and withdrew all of its agents. Service on the commissioner was held good. The court, in its opinion, after referring to the statute of 1870 and the change made by § 631, under which this service was made, said (p. 1379, S. W. p. 521):

"It is sufficient to say that the agency created by the act of 1893 is, in its terms, broader than that created by the act of 1870. The words of the later statute express no limitation. Whatever limitation shall be applied to it must be by implication. And when we consider the purpose of the act it becomes clear that it would be frustrated by the construction contended for. There is no need of the right to serve process upon the insurance commissioner so long as the company has agents in the state, and we think the purpose of the section was to provide a means of obtaining service of process upon foreign companies which no longer had agents in the state upon whom process might be served in suits upon contracts made in this state, whatever may be held as to suits upon contracts entered into elsewhere." See also Germania Ins. Co. v. Ashby, 23 Ky. L. Rep. 1564, 65 S. W. 611.

*Such decision of the highest court of Ken- [158] tucky, construing one of its own statutes, if not controlling upon this court, is very persuasive, and it certainly is controlling unless it be held to be merely an interpretation of a contract created by the statute. As an original question, and independently of any expression on the part of the court of appeals, we are of the opinion that such is the true construction. This and other kindred statutes enacted in various states indicate the purpose of the state that foreign corporations engaging in business within its limits shall submit to controversies growing out of that business to its courts, and not compel a citizen having such a controversy to seek the state in which the corporation has its home for the purpose of enforcing his claims. Many of those statutes simply provided that the foreign corporation should name some person or persons upon whom service of process could be made. The insufficiency of such provision is evident, for the death or removal of the agent from the state leaves the corporation without any person upon whom process can be served. In order to remedy this defect some states, Kentucky among the number, have passed statutes, like the one before us, providing that the corporation shall consent that service may be made upon a permanent official of the state, so that the death, removal, or change of officer will not put the corporation beyond the reach of the process of the courts. It would obviously thwart this purpose if this association, having made, as the testimony shows it had made, a multitude of contracts with citizens of Kentucky, should be enabled, by simply withdrawing the authority it had given to the insurance commissioner, to compel all these parties to seek the courts of New York for the enforcement of their claims. It is true in this case the association did not voluntarily withdraw from the state, but was in effect by the state prevented from engaging in any new business. Why this was done is not shown. It must be presumed to have been for some good and sufficient reason, and it would be a harsh construction of the statute that, because the state had been constrained to compel the association to desist from engaging in any further business, it also deprived its citizens who had dealt with the association of *the right to obtain relief in its courts. We conclude therefore, that the service of summons on the insurance commissioner was sufficient to bring the association into the state court, and, there being nothing else to impeach the judgment, it must be considered as valid.

Again, the proceeding for the appointment of a receiver was not a new and independent suit. It was not in the strictest sense of the term a creditor's bill. It did not purport to be for the benefit of all creditors, but simply a proceeding to enable the plaintiff in the judgment to obtain satisfaction thereof, satisfaction by execution at law having been shown to be impossible by the return of nulla bona. It is what is known as a supplementary proceeding. It is a proceeding known to the jurisprudence of many states, and one whose validity in those states has been recognized by this court. Williams v. Hill, 19 How. 246, 15 L. ed. 570; Atlantic & P. R. Co. v. Hopkins, 94 U. S. 11, 24 L. ed. 48; Ex parte Boyd, 105 U. S. 647, 26 L. ed. 1200; Canal & C. Streets R. Co. v. Hart, 114 U. S. 654, 29 L. ed. 226, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1127. It is recognized in some cases in Kentucky. Well v. Deposit Bank, 18 Ky. L. Rep. 156, 35 S. W. 625; Caldwell v. Deposit Bank, 22 Ky. L. Rep. 684, 58 S. W. 589. This proceeding was treated by the state court as one merely supplemental in its character. It was initiated by the filing of an amended and supplementary petition. It was a mere continuation of the action already passed into judgment, and in aid of the execution of such judgment. As such it was not subject to removal to the Federal court, the time therefor prescribed by the statute having passed. 24 Stat. at L. 554, chap. 373, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 514; Martin v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 151 U. S. 673-684, sub nom. Gerling v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 38 L. ed. 311, 315, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 533. Being a mere continuation of the action at law, and not removable to the Federal court, the latter had no jurisdiction to enjoin the proceedings under it. It is contended that such a supplementary proceeding is not warranted by the laws of Kentucky; that there is no statute of that state justifying it. But it has been sanctioned by the judgment of the court in which the proceeding was had, and cannot be treated by the Federal courts as unauthorized. Laing v. Rigney, 160 U. S. 531, 40 L. ed. 525, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 366. See also Leadville Coal Co. v. McCreery, 141 U. S. 475, 478, 35 L. ed. 824, 826, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 28. If not warranted by the law of the state relief must be sought by review

190 U. S.

*in the appellate court of the state, and not [160] by collateral attack in the Federal court.

For these reasons we think the decision of the Court of Appeals of the Sixth Circuit was right, and it is affirmed.

ATLANTIC & PACIFIC TELEGRAPH COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,

v.

CITY OF PHILADELPHIA.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 160-169.)

Interstate commerce — validity of license tax on telegraph poles and wires — reasonableness — when a question for the jury.

1. A telegraph company, though engaged in interstate commerce, may be compelled by a municipality to pay a reasonable license fee for the enforcement of local government supervision of its poles and wires.
2. The reasonableness of a municipal license charge of $1 per telegraph pole and $2.50 for each mile of overhead telegraph wires within the city limits must be submitted to the jury, where there is testimony that the actual cost of maintenance, repairs, and supervision by the telegraph company was less than one half the sum thus charged by the city for supervision alone, and that an additional charge of $1 per mile for underground wires had been removed as an inducement to the removal of all overhead wires.

[No. 163.]

Argued February 24, 1903. Decided June 1, 1903.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania to review a judgment for plaintiff in an action by the city of Philadelphia to recover license charges imposed by it upon a telegraph company. Reversed and remanded for a new trial.

See same case below on motion by defendant to enter judgment with the re-

NOTE.—On state regulation of interstate or foreign commerce—see notes to Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Com. (Va.) 13 L. R. A. 107; McCanna & F. Co. v. Citizens' Trust & Surety Co. 24 C. C. A. 13; Ratterman v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 32 L. ed. U. S. 229; Harmon v. Chicago, 37 L. ed. U. S. 216; Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Backus, 38 L. ed. U. S. 1041; and Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. Adams, 39 L. ed. U. S. 311.

On license taxes as affecting interstate commerce—see notes to Rothermel v. Meyerle (Pa.) 9 L. R. A. 366; American Fertilizing Co. v. North Carolina Bd. of Agrl. (C. C. E. D. N. C.) 11 L. R. A. 179.

As to limit of amount of license fees—see note to State ex rel. Toi v. French (Mont.) 30 L. R. A. 415.

On the power of states to control or impose burdens upon interstate telegraph and telephone companies—see note to Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. Baltimore (Md.) 24 L. R. A. 161.

For cases collated on the question as to the validity of charges on telegraph and telephone poles and wires—see note to Western U. Teleg. Co. v. New Hope, ante, 240.

duction specified in the reserved point. 109 Fed. 55.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brewer:

This action was commenced in the common pleas court of Philadelphia on December 31, 1891, to recover the sum of $3,715 as license fees alleged to be due the city for the six preceding years. The case was removed by the defendant to the circuit court of the United States for the eastern district of Pennsylvania. A trial was had before the court and a jury, which resulted in a verdict and judgment for the plaintiff for a part of the sum claimed, which judgment was thereafter reversed by the circuit court of appeals. A second trial was had in April, 1901, before the court and a jury, which resulted in a verdict and judgment for the full amount claimed, with interest. From such judgment the case was brought to this court directly on writ of error, on the ground that it involved the construction and application of the Constitution of the United States; that the action was brought to recover from the telegraph company certain license charges imposed by the city which the company claimed the city had no right or power to impose, for the reason that it was a regulation of commerce between the states.

Messrs. John F. Dillon and H. B. Gill argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Silas W. Pettit, George H. Fearons, Rush Taggart, Henry D. Estabrook, and Messrs. Brown & Wells, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The pretended power of the city of Philadelphia to impose the tax in question is derived solely from its possession of the "powers, rights, privileges, and immunities incident to a municipal corporation and necessary for the proper government of the same," and from no other source whatsoever. But this does not confer power to enact the ordinances in question.

Cooley, Taxn. 597.

Under the law of Pennsylvania the property of the telegraph company necessary to the exercise of its franchises is not taxable by the municipality.

Lchigh Coal & Nav. Co. v. Northampton County, 8 Watts & S. 334; Railroad Co. v. Berks County, 6 Pa. 70; Schuylkill Nav. Co. v. Berks County, 11 Pa. 202; New York & E. R. Co. v. Sabin, 26 Pa. 242; West Chester Gas Co. v. Chester County, 30 Pa. 232; Ridgway Light & Heat Co. v. Elk County, 191 Pa. 465, 43 Atl. 323.

The commonwealth owns the franchise of every highway, and no municipal corporation has any power over them except in so far as it is delegated to it by the state.

O'Connor v. Pittsburgh, 18 Pa. 187; Stormfeltz v. Munor Turnp. Co. 13 Pa. 555; Millvale v. Evergreen R. Co. 131 Pa. 1, 7 L. R. A. 369, 18 Atl. 993; Com. v. Erie & N. E. R. Co. 27 Pa. 339, 67 Am. Dec. 471; Philadelphia & T. R. Co.'s Case, 6 Whart. 25, 36 Am. Dec. 202; Northern Liberties v. Northern Liberties Gas Co. 12 Pa. 318; Mereer v. Pittsburgh, Ft. W. & C. R. Co. 36 Pa. 99; Danville, H. & W. R. Co. v. Com. 73 Pa. 29; 996

Pittsburgh's Appeal, 115 Pa. 4, 7 Atl. 778; Williamsport Pass R. Co. v. Williamsport, 120 Pa. 1, 13 Atl. 496; Homestead Street R. Co. v. Pittsburg & H. Electric Street R. Co. 166 Pa. 162, 27 L. R. A. 383, 30 Atl. 950, 955; 2 Dill. Mun. Corp. 3d ed. § 657.

The charge cannot be imposed in this case for the purpose of providing an insurance or guarantee fund to insure the municipality from damages for which it may be held liable by reason of the construction and maintenance of telegraph poles and wires.

Smith v. St. Louis & S. W. R. Co. 181 U. S. 248, 45 L. ed. 847, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 803; Philadelphia v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 728, 40 Fed. 616.

No right exists to impose a larger charge than will reimburse to the municipality the expense of regulation.

Cooley, Const. Lim. 6th ed. 242; Cooley, Taxn. 2d ed. pp 597, 598; Dill. Mun. Corp. 3d ed. § 768; The Laundry License Case, 22 Fed. 701; State, Benson, Prosecutor, v. Hoboken, 33 N. J. L. 280; State, North Hudson County R. Co., Prosecutors, v. Hoboken, 41 N. J. L. 71; Saginaw v. Swift Electric Light Co. 113 Mich. 660, 72 N. W. 6.

Under the guise of the power to regulate, a city cannot exercise the power to tax.

New York v. Second Ave. R. Co. 32 N. Y. 261; Cincinnati v. Bryson, 15 Ohio, 625, 45 Am. Dec. 593; Mays v. Cincinnati, 1 Ohio St. 268; Dunham v. Rochester, 5 Cow. 462; Jackson v. Newman, 59 Miss. 385, 42 Am. Rep. 367; Dill. Mun. Corp. § 764; Cooley, Taxn. 2d ed. 573, 597; Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 213, 6 L. ed. 74.

The tax imposed by the city in this case exceeds the limits prescribed by the authorities.

Philadelphia v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 82 Fed. 797; Philadelphia v. Atlantic & P. Teleg. Co. 42 C. C. A. 325, 102 Fed. 254; St. Louis v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 148 U. S. 92, 37 L. ed. 380, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 485.

The plaintiff in error is engaged in interstate commerce, and the business it transacts is in itself commerce, and by virtue of the act of Congress of July 24, 1866, and its acceptance thereof, said telegraph company is entitled to all the privileges and immunities, and is subject to all the restrictions, which flow from the power given to Congress by the Constitution to regulate commerce, and the legislation in that behalf enacted by Congress.

Pensacola Teleg. Co. v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 96 U. S. 1, 24 L. ed. 708; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Texas, 105 U. S. 460, 26 L. ed. 1067; Leloup v. Port of Mobile, 127 U. S. 640, 32 L. ed. 311, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1380.

The plaintiff in error as an interstate commerce company, whose business is commerce itself, and in the nature of the postal service has the right to invoke the protection of the Constitution of the United States against this attempt to burden and regulate interstate commerce.

State Tax on Railway Gross Receipts, 15 Wall. 299, sub nom. Philadelphia & R. R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 21 L. ed. 169; Philadelphia & S. Mail S. S. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 122 190 U. S.

U. S. 326, 30 L. ed. 1200, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1118.

Interstate commerce cannot be taxed at all by the state, and the fact that the tax is imposed by a law or an ordinance purporting to be an enforcement of the police power, or a privilege tax, can make no difference in the application of the rule.

Robbins v. Shelby County Taxing Dist. 120 U. S. 489, 30 L. ed. 694, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 45, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 592; Asher v. Texas, 128 U. S. 129, 32 L. ed. 368, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 241, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1; Stoutenburgh v. Hennick, 129 U. S. 141, 32 L. ed. 637, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 256; McCall v. California, 136 U. S. 104, 34 L. ed. 391, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 181, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 881; Brennan v. Titusville, 153 U. S. 289, 38 L. ed. 719, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 658, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 829; Crutcher v. Kentucky, 141 U. S. 47, 35 L. ed. 649, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 851; Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. v. Husen, 95 U. S. 465, 24 L. ed. 527; Minnesota v. Barber, 136 U. S. 313, 34 L. ed. 455, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 185, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 862; Brimmer v. Rebman, 138 U. S. 78, 34 L. ed. 862, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 485, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 213; Cotting v. Kansas City Stock Yards Co. 183 U. S. 79, sub nom. Cotting v. Godard, 46 L. ed. 92, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30; St. Louis Consol. Coal Co. v. Illinois, 185 U. S. 203, 46 L. ed. 872, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 616; New Orleans Gaslight Co. v. Louisiana Light & H. P. & Mfg. Co. 115 U. S. 650, 29 L. ed. 516, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 252.

Even where the regulation imposed was in relation to the selling of intoxicating liquors, which is peculiarly a matter of police cognizance, this court has held that the power must be so exercised as not to operate as a burden on or regulation of interstate commerce.

Leisy v. Hardin, 135 U. S. 100, 34 L. ed. 128, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 36, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 681; Lyng v. Michigan, 135 U. S. 161, 34 L. ed. 150, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 143, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 725.

A license tax, irrespective of whether the amount is much or little, where levied upon the occupation itself, or upon the means of carrying on the business, is, where the business carried on is interstate commerce, a direct burden upon interstate commerce.

Brown v. Maryland, 12 Wheat. 419, 6 L. ed. 678; Welton v. Missouri, 91 U. S. 275, 23 L. ed. 347; Brennan v. Titusville, 153 U. S. 304, 38 L. ed. 724, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 658, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 829; Henderson v. Wickham, 92 U. S. 259, 23 L. ed. 543.

In the Mississippi case the tax was only $1 per mile of wire, which was "in lieu of other state, county, and municipal taxes" (Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. Adams, 155 U. S. 688, 39 L. ed. 311, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 1, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 268, 360), and it would seem that a charge which amounts to nearly four times that much, and levied as a charge for inspection alone, is manifestly exorbitant and practically a tax, and therefore a regulation of interstate commerce, for the transaction of which these poles and wires are necessary appliances.

190 U. S.

The property of a telegraph company is liable to taxation by a state on the same basis as all other property is so liable, a tax which the plaintiff in error has always paid to the state of Pennsylvania.

Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Atty. Gen. 125 U. S. 530, 31 L. ed. 790, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 961.

And even where the tax is imposed in form as a privilege tax, but is "in lieu of other state, county, and municipal taxes," and the amount of the tax is made dependent in fact upon the value of the property of the taxpayer situated within the jurisdiction of the state imposing the same, it will, nevertheless, and notwithstanding its form, be held valid and sustained by this court.

Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. Adams, 155 U. S. 688, 39 L. ed. 311, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 1, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 268, 360.

And so a state may impose a specific tax on each telegraph message which the company sends over its line wholly within the state imposing such tax, but not upon messages sent by officers of the United States on public business, and not upon messages sent or received to or from points without the state. The power to tax such messages is confined to messages sent from one place to another exclusively within the jurisdiction of the state imposing the tax.

Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Texas, 105 U. S. 460, 26 L. ed. 1067.

And so a state may tax the gross receipts of a telegraph company derived from business transacted exclusively within the state.

Ratterman v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 127 U. S. 411, 32 L. ed. 229, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 59, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1127; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Alabama State Bd. of Assessment, 132 U. S. 472, sub nom. Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Seay, 33 L. ed. 409, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 726, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 161.

Again, it has been held that a license tax imposed by a municipality duly authorized thereto by the state upon, inter alia, "telegraph companies or its agencies, each, for business done exclusively within the city of Charleston, and not including any business done to or from points without the state, and not including any business done for the government of the United States, its officers, or agents, $500,"—was valid.

Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. Charleston, 153 U. S. 692, 38 L. ed. 871, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 637, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1094.

But the reasoning of these cases is wholly inconsistent with the right of a state, or of a municipality under the law of a state, to require a telegraph company to take out a license for the transaction of its business, or to impose upon it a tax for such license.

See Leloup v. Port of Mobile, 127 U. S. 640, 32 L. ed. 311, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 134, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1380.

Mr. John L. Kinsey argued the cause, and, with Mr. James Alcorn, filed a brief for defendant in error:

It is lawful for a state to impose taxes upon property owned and used within it by a corporation of another state, even when such corporation is engaged in interstate commerce, and the exaction of a license tax is a valid exercise of power by municipal corporations, in order to cover expenses to which they may be put in the enforcement of their police rules and regulations.

Philadelphia v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 32 C. C. A. 246, 60 U. S. App. 398, 89 Fed. 454; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Atty. Gen. 125 U. S. 530, 31 L. ed. 790, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 961; License Tax Cases, 5 Wall. 462, 18 L. ed. 497; Wiggins Ferry Co. v. East St. Louis, 107 U. S. 365, 27 L. ed. 419, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 257; Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. Charleston, 153 U. S. 692, 38 L. ed. 871, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 637, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1094; Philadelphia v. Atlantic & P. Teleg. Co. 42 C. C. A. 325, 102 Fed. 258.

There is a presumption in favor of the validity of the action of the legislative body, and the evidence to justify a court in holding otherwise must be clear and convincing.

Philadelphia v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 32 C. C. A. 246, 60 U. S. App. 398, 89 Fed. 460.

The amount of the license charges rests with the city councils in the first instance, and it is only where such discretion has been manifestly abused that the courts are justified in interfering.

Allentown v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 148 Pa. 119, 23 Atl. 1070.

With practically the same evidence before them as was submitted by the plaintiff in error upon the trial of this case, the United States court of appeals determined that the ordinances imposing the charges now claimed by the city of Philadelphia against the Atlantic & Pacific Telegraph Company were valid.

Philadelphia v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 32 C. C. A. 246, 60 U. S. App. 398, 89 Fed. 454; Philadelphia v. Atlantic & P. Teleg. Co. 42 C. C. A. 325, 102 Fed. 258.

The highest court of the state of Pennsylvania has considered these ordinances, and whether the charges imposed are reasonable or not, and has determined those charges to be reasonable, and the ordinances valid.

Taylor v. Postal Teleg. Cable Co. 202 Pa. 583, 52 Atl. 128; Chester City v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 154 Pa. 466, 25 Atl. 1134; Allentown v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 148 Pa. 117, 23 Atl. 1070; Philadelphia v. American U. Teleg. Co. 167 Pa. 406, 31 Atl. 628; Chester v. Philadelphia, R. & P. Teleg. Co. 148 Pa. 120, 23 Atl. 1070.

The supreme court of the state of New York in Philadelphia v. Postal Teleg. Cable Co. 67 Hun, 21, 21 N. Y. Supp. 556, considered the same ordinances as imposed the charges in this case, and held them to be valid, and the charges reasonable.

Whether a license fee is exacted under the power to regulate or the power to tax, is a matter of indifference, if the power to do either exists.

Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. Charleston, 153 U. S. 692, 38 L. ed. 871, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 637, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1094.

The defendant in error does not admit the position of the plaintiff in error, that a tax could not be levied upon a telegraph company because it is engaged in interstate business.

998

Ibid.; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Atty. Gen. 125 U. S. 530, 31 L. ed. 790, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 790; Wiggins Ferry Co. v. East St. Louis, 107 U. S. 365, 27 L. ed. 419, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 257.

So far as concerns the right of the plaintiff in error to occupy the public streets and highways of the defendant in error, without being subject to the regulations of the municipal authorities, the defendant in error disputes that position.

Philadelphia v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 2 W. N. C. 455; St. Louis v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 148 U. S. 92, 37 L. ed. 380, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 485.

The defendant in error, a municipal corporation, has the right in the exercise of its police power to impose upon the plaintiff in error license fees for the poles and wires erected on and run along the public highways.

22 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, New ed. p. 918; Philadelphia v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 32 C. C. A. 246, 60 U. S. App. 398, 89 Fed. 454; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Philadelphia (Pa.) 11 Cent. Rep. 192, 12 Atl. 144; Allentown v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 148 Pa. 117, 23 Atl. 1070; Chester v. Philadelphia, R. & P. Teleg. Co. 148 Pa. 120, 23 Atl. 1070; Chester City v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 154 Pa. 466, 25 Atl. 1134; Philadelphia v. American U. Teleg. Co. 167 Pa. 406, 31 Atl. 628; North Braddock v. Central Dist. & Printing Teleg. Co. 11 Pa. Super. Ct. 24; New Hope v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 16 Pa. Super. Ct. 306; Taylor v. Postal Teleg. & Cable Co. 16 Pa. Super. Ct. 344. Affirmed in 202 Pa. 583, 52 Atl. 128.

The license fees charged by the ordinances of 1881 and 1883 by the defendant in error on the plaintiff in error were imposed as police regulations.

Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Philadelphia (Pa.) 11 Cent. Rep. 192, 12 Atl. 144; Philadelphia v. American U. Teleg. Co. 167 Pa. 406, 31 Atl. 628; Allentown v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 148 Pa. 117, 23 Atl. 1070; Chester v. Philadelphia, R. & P. Teleg. Co. 148 Pa. 120, 23 Atl. 1070; Chester City v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 154 Pa. 464, 25 Atl. 1134; Taylor v. Postal Teleg. Cable Co. 202 Pa. 583, 52 Atl. 128.

A license fee under police regulations is distinct from a tax.

22 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, New ed. p. 917.

Where the power to license is not evidently abused and made a pretext for doing what is a violation of constitutional right, the courts ought not to interfere with municipal discretion.

Van Baalen v. People, 40 Mich. 258.

The reasonableness of the charges was a question to be determined by the court, and not by the jury.

Philadelphia v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 32 C. C. A. 246, 60 U. S. App. 398, 89 Fed. 454; Com. v. Worcester, 3 Pick. 462; 1 Dill. Mun. Corp. 4th ed. p. 404; Clason v. Milwaukee, 30 Wis. 316; New Hope v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 16 Pa. Super. Ct. 306.

Mr. Justice Brewer delivered the opinion of the court:

The question presented is as to the valid-

190 U. S.

[162]ity of the charges imposed by the ordinances of the city of Philadelphia upon the *defendant (plaintiff in error), a corporation engaged in interstate commerce. Few questions are more important or have been more embarrassing than those arising from the efforts of a state or its municipalities to increase their revenues by exactions from corporations engaged in carrying on interstate commerce. There have been many cases, in whose decision some propositions have been adjudicated so often as to be no longer open to discussion.

First. As said by Mr. Justice Bradley, speaking for the court, in Robbins v. Shelby County Taxing Dist. 120 U. S. 489, 492, 30 L. ed. 694, 696, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 45, 46, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 592, 593:

"The Constitution of the United States having given to Congress the power to regulate commerce, not only with foreign nations, but among the several states, that power is necessarily exclusive whenever the subjects of it are national in their character, or admit only of one uniform system, or plan of regulation."

In addition to the many cases referred to by him, the following subsequent decisions may also be cited: Fargo v. Michigan, 121 U. S. 230, 246, sub nom. Fargo v. Stevens, 30 L. ed. 888, 894, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 51, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 857; Philadelphia & S. Mail S. S. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 122 U. S. 326, 336, 346, 30 L. ed. 1200, 1201, 1205, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 308, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1118; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Pendleton, 122 U. S. 347, 357, 30 L. ed. 1187, 1189, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 306, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1126; Bowman v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 125 U. S. 465, 497, 31 L. ed. 700, 711, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 823, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 689, 1062; Leloup v. Port of Mobile, 127 U. S. 640, 648, 32 L. ed. 311, 314, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 134, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1380; Asher v. Texas, 128 U. S. 129, 131, 32 L. ed. 368, 369, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 241, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1; Stoutenburgh v. Hennick, 129 U. S. 141, 148, 32 L. ed. 637, 639, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 256; Leisy v. Hardin, 135 U. S. 100, 110, 34 L. ed. 128, 132, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 36, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 681; Lyng v. Michigan, 135 U. S. 161, 34 L. ed. 150, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 143, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 725; McCall v. California, 136 U. S. 104, 109, 34 L. ed. 391, 392, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 181, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 881; Re Rahrer, 140 U. S. 545, 555, sub nom. Wilkerson v. Rahrer, 35 L. ed. 572, 574, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 865; Crutcher v. Kentucky, 141 U. S. 47, 58, 35 L. ed. 649, 652, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 851; Brennan v. Titusville, 153 U. S. 289, 304, 38 L. ed. 719, 723, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 658, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 829; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Brimson, 154 U. S. 447, 471, 38 L. ed. 1047, 1055, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 545, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1125; United States v. E. C. Knight Co. 156 U. S. 1, 21, 39 L. ed. 325, 332, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 249; Schollenberger v. Pennsylvania, 171 U. S. 1, 43 L. ed. 49, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 757; Addyston Pipe & Steel Co. v. United States, 175 U. S. 211, 44 L. ed. 136, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 96; Stockard v. Morgan, 185 U. S. 27, 46 L. ed. 785, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 576.

190 U. S.

Second. No state can compel a party, individual, or corporation to pay for the privilege of engaging in interstate commerce. Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 114 U. S. 196, 211, 29 L. ed. 158, 164, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 382, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 826; Pickard v. Pullman Southern Car Co. 117 U. S. 34, 29 L. ed. 785, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 635; Robbins v. Shelby County Taxing Dist. 120 U. S. 489, 30 L. ed. 694, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 45, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 592; Fargo v. Michigan, 121 U. S. 230, 245, sub nom. Fargo v. Stevens, 30 L. ed. 888, 894, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 51, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 857; Philadelphia & S. Mail S. S. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 122 U. S. 326, 336, 30 L. ed. 1200, 1201, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 308, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1118; **Leloup v. [163] Port of Mobile*, 127 U. S. 640, 645, 32 L. ed. 311, 313, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 134, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1380; Asher v. Texas, 128 U. S. 129, 32 L. ed. 368, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 241, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1; Lyng v. Michigan, 135 U. S. 161, 166, 34 L. ed. 150, 153, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 143, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 725; McCall v. California, 136 U. S. 104, 113, 34 L. ed. 391, 394, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 881; Crutcher v. Kentucky, 141 U. S. 47, 58, 35 L. ed. 649, 652, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 851; Adams Exp. Co. v. Ohio State Auditor, 165 U. S. 194, 220, 41 L. ed. 683, 695, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 305.

Third. This immunity does not prevent a state from imposing ordinary property taxes upon property having a situs within its territory, and employed in interstate commerce. State Tax on Railway Gross Receipts, 15 Wall. 284, 293, sub nom. Philadelphia & R. R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 21 L. ed. 164, 167; Delaware Railroad Tax, 18 Wall. 206, 232, sub nom. Minot v. Philadelphia, W. & B. R. Co. 21 L. ed. 888, 896; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Texas, 105 U. S. 460, 464, 26 L. ed. 1067, 1068; Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 114 U. S. 196, 211, 29 L. ed. 158, 164, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 382, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 826; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Atty. Gen. 125 U. S. 530, 31 L. ed. 790, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 961; Marye v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 127 U. S. 117, 123, 32 L. ed. 94, 96, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1037; Leloup v. Port of Mobile, 127 U. S. 640, 649, 32 L. ed. 311, 314, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 134, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1380; Pullman Palace Car Co. v. Pennsylvania, 141 U. S. 18, 35 L. ed. 613, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 595, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 876; Atty. Gen. v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 141 U. S. 40, 35 L. ed. 6, 28, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 889; Pittsburgh, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Backus, 154 U. S. 421, 38 L. ed. 1031, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1114; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Taggart, 163 U. S. 1, 41 L. ed. 49, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1054; Adams Exp. Co. v. Ohio State Auditor, 165 U. S. 194, 220, 41 L. ed. 683, 695, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 305.

Fourth. The franchise of a corporation, although that franchise is the business of interstate commerce, is, as a part of its property, subject to state taxation, providing, at least, the franchise is not derived from the United States. Delaware Railroad Tax, 18 Wall. 206, 232, sub nom. Minot v. Philadelphia, W. & B. R. Co. 21 L. ed. 888, 896; Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. Adams, 155 U. S. 688, 696, 39 L. ed. 311, 316, 5 Inters.

Com. Rep. 1, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 268, 360; New York, L. E. & W. R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 158 U. S. 431, 437, 39 L. ed. 1043, 1045, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 896; Central P. R. Co. v. California, 162 U. S. 91, 40 L. ed. 903, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 766; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Taggart, 163 U. S. 1, 18, 41 L. ed. 49, 55, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1054; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Missouri ex rel. Gottlieb, 190 U. S. 412, post, 1116, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 730.

Fifth. No corporation, even though engaged in interstate commerce, can appropriate to its own use property, public or private, without liability to charge therefor. Western Union Packet Co. v. St. Louis, 100 U. S. 423, 25 L. ed. 688; Cincinnati, P. B. S. & P. Packet Co. v. Catlettsburg, 105 U. S. 559, 26 L. ed. 1169; Parkersburg & O. River Transp. Co. v. Parkersburg, 107 U. S. 691, 27 L. ed. 584, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 732; Huse v. Glover, 119 U. S. 543, 30 L. ed. 487, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 313; Ouachita & M. River Packet Co. v. Aiken, 121 U. S. 444, 30 L. ed. 976, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 379, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 907; St. Louis v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 148 U. S. 92, 37 L. ed. 380, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 485, 149 U. S. 465, 37 L. ed. 810, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 990; Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. Baltimore, 156 U. S. 210, 39 L. ed. 399, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 356; Richmond v. Southern Belt Teleph. & Teleg. Co. 174 U. S. 761, 771, 43 L. ed. 1162, 1167, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 778.

[164] *The tax sought to be collected in this case was not a tax upon the property or franchises of the company, nor in the nature of rental for occupying certain portions of the street. Neither was it a charge for the privilege of engaging in the business of interstate commerce, but it was one for the enforcement of local governmental supervision, such as was presented in Western U. Teleg. Co. v. New Hope, 187 U. S. 419, ante, 240, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 204, where we said (p. 427, ante, p. 244, Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 205):

"This license fee was not a tax on the property of the company, or on its transmission of messages, or on its receipts from such transmission, or on its occupation or business, but was a charge in the enforcement of local governmental supervision, and, as such, not in itself obnoxious to the clause of the Constitution relied on."

Following that decision, we hold that the city of Philadelphia had power to pass such an ordinance as this, requiring the company to pay a reasonable license fee for the enforcement of local governmental supervision. In other words, if a corporation, although engaged in the business of interstate commerce, so carries on its business as to justify, at the hands of any municipality, a police supervision of the property and instrumentalities used therein, the municipality is not bound to furnish such supervision for nothing, and may, in addition to ordinary property taxation, subject the corporation to a charge for the expense of the supervision.

But it does not follow from this that a municipality is not subject to any restraint in the amount of the charge which it so exacts. True, it is often said that a license tax is, in its nature, arbitrary; that it is not necessarily graduated by the value of the property invested in the business licensed, or its profitableness. But such observations are pertinent only in case the license is resorted to for the purposes of revenue. When it is authorized only in support of police supervision, the expense of such supervision determines the amount of the charge; and, if it were possible to prove in advance the exact cost, that would be the limit of the tax. In the nature of things, that, however, is ordinarily impossible; and so the municipality is at liberty to make the charge large enough to cover any reasonable anticipated *expenses. It is authorized to fix such charge [165] in advance, and need not wait until the end of the period for which the license is granted. It may not act arbitrarily or unreasonably, but the risk may rightfully be cast upon the licensee, and the charge cannot be avoided because it subsequently appears that it was somewhat in excess of the actual expense of the supervision, nor can the licensee then recover the difference between the amount of the license and such cost.

Now, the license in question is, as stated, confessedly not for the purpose of raising revenue. Indeed, if it were, as it appears by the affidavit of defense that the company had paid all taxes charged upon its property as property, it might be obnoxious to a complaint of double taxation. It is not like the tax in Postal Tel. g. Cable Co. v. Adams, 155 U. S. 688, 39 L. ed. 311, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 1, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 268, 360, which, although called a privilege tax, was in fact a property tax, and the only property tax upon the company, in respect to which we said (p. 696, L. ed. p. 315, Inters. Com. Rep. p. 13, Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 270):

"Doubtless no state could add to the taxation of property, according to the rule of ordinary property taxation, the burden of a license or other tax on the privilege of using, constructing, or operating an instrumentality of interstate or international commerce, or for the carrying on of such commerce; but the value of property results from the use to which it is put, and varies with the profitableness of that use; and by whatever name the exaction may be called, if it amounts to no more than the ordinary tax upon property, or a just equivalent therefor, ascertained by reference thereto, it is not open to attack as inconsistent with the Constitution."

We pass, therefore, to consider the question of the reasonableness of this license charge. Prima facie, it was reasonable. Western U. Teleg. Co. v. New Hope, 187 U. S. 419, ante, 240, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 204. It devolved upon the company to show that it was not. The case, as we have seen, was tried before the court and a jury. Upon the testimony, the court instructed the jury to find for the plaintiff the full amount claimed. In support of this action, it is contended that the question of reasonableness was one to be determined by the court, and [166]not by the jury, and, further, *that there was no testimony from which either a court or jury could find that the charge was unreasonable.

It may be conceded that, generally speaking, whether an ordinance be reasonable is a question for the court. As said by Judge Dillon, in his work on Municipal Corporations (4th ed. vol. 1, § 327): "Whether an ordinance be reasonable and consistent with the law or not is a question for the court, and not the jury, and evidence to the latter on this subject is inadmissible." While that may be correct as a general statement of the law, and especially in cases in which the question of reasonableness turns on the character of the regulations prescribed, yet, when it turns on the amount of a license charge, it may rightly be left for the determination of a jury. There are many matters which enter into the consideration of such a question, not infrequently matters which are disputed and in respect to which there is contradictory testimony. As said by Mr. Justice Shiras, when presiding in the court of appeals in the third circuit, in a similar case (Philadelphia v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 32 C. C. A. 246, 253, 60 U. S. App. 398, 413, 89 Fed. 454, 461):

"When it is said, in some of the cases, that such a question is for the determination of the court, it is not meant that the question may not properly be submitted to a jury. What is meant by such observations is that courts are not precluded from considering the reasonableness of the legislative act prescribing the terms and amount of the charges. . . . Regarding, then, the issue to be tried as one of fact, we think it is one which, from its nature, is eminently fit for the determination of a jury. The expenses attending direct regulations and oversight are not only to be considered, but also the incidental cost to which the municipality is subjected in providing for and maintaining a proper system of supervision. We cannot undertake to specify all the particulars which should be brought into view where the reasonableness of a municipal ordinance is challenged in a court; but we think that the rule laid down in Cooley, Const. Lim. (ed. 1886) p. 242, may be safely adopted: 'A municipal corporation may impose, under the police power, such a charge for the license as will cover the necessary expenses *of issuing it, and the additional labor of officers and other expenses thereby incurred.'"

[167]necessary expenses *of issuing it, and the additional labor of officers and other expenses thereby incurred."

It is urged by the city that, inasmuch as the license fees here charged are the same as those charged by the borough of New Hope, the validity of which was sustained in Western U. Teleg. Co. v. New Hope, 187 U. S. 419, ante, 240, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 204, it necessarily follows that the charges here imposed are reasonable. But this is a mistake. What is reasonable in one municipality may be oppressive and unreasonable in another. "In determining this question the court will have to regard all the circumstances of the particular city or corporation, the objects sought to be attained, and the necessity which exists for the ordinance. Regulations proper for a large and prosperous city might be absurd or oppressive in a small and sparsely populated town, or in the country." 1 Dill. Mun. Corp. 4th ed. § 327.

190 U. S.

The reasonableness of this license charge being tried before a jury, the parties were entitled to a finding of the jury upon that question of fact, unless the testimony was such as to compel a decision one way or the other, in which case the court might be justified in directing a verdict. After a careful review of the evidence, we are constrained to believe that it was not such as to exclude any other conclusion than that directed by the court. We do not hold that it was not sufficient to sustain a finding by the jury to that effect, but simply that there were matters presented from which a jury might rightfully conclude that the ordinance and license charges were unreasonable. Without noticing all the evidence, we content ourselves with these matters. On January 6, 1881, an ordinance was passed by the city councils imposing a license fee of \$1 for each and every telegraph pole erected or maintained in the city. Another ordinance, of date March 30, 1883, regulating underground conduits, wires, and cables, and providing for license charges for underground and overhead wires, imposed an annual license charge of \$2.50 per mile of wire for overhead telegraph wires, and \$1 per mile for underground wires. Upon these ordinances the claim was made against the company. On August 5, 1886, a further ordinance was passed, removing all charges upon underground \*wires. The chief of the electrical[168] bureau of the city, without objection, testified that the removal of all charges on underground wires in 1886 was "as an inducement to have the wires placed underground, and the only requirement was that whoever did it should supply the city or furnish the city with one duct or chamber for the use of the city. There was no other charge connected with it. It was to remove all license charges, to have them place their wires underground." There was evidence of the expenses of the electrical bureau for the years in question, and that such electrical bureau supervised all electrical work upon the streets, but there was no testimony definitely disclosing how much of the labor of that bureau was in respect to telegraph wires and poles, and how much in respect to electric light wires and poles, although there was evidence of the general manner in which the electrical bureau conducted its work of supervision and the matters which came within the scope of its attention. On the other hand, the company showed the extent of its own supervision and the cost of repair, maintenance, and supervision, which, for the years from 1885 to 1891, inclusive, amounted to only \$1.60  $\frac{1}{2}$  per mile. There was also proof of the number of electric light lamps, poles, and miles of wire within the city, and other kindred facts.

Now, the comparison of all this evidence, the determination of its weight and effect, and whether the charge made by the city for supervision was reasonable or not, should have been left to the jury. As there was testimony that the actual cost of maintenance, repair, and supervision by the company was, during the years in question, less than one half that charged by the city for supervision alone, and as it appeared that at first the license fee per mile of overhead wire was $2.50, and of underground wire $1, and that within three years thereafter all charges in respect to underground wire were taken away, and, as the head of the electrical department declared, so taken away for the purpose of inducing the removal of overhead wires and placing them all underground, a jury might have found that the ordinance was unreasonable. It might have come to the conclusion that the charge was [169] not made simply to meet the expenses of supervision, but rather to make a charge so burdensome as to compel the company to remove its wires from poles and put them in conduits. We do not say that a city has not, by virtue of its police powers, authority directly to compel the removal of wires from poles to conduits, but it may be questionable whether a city can seek the same results by an excessive and unreasonable charge upon overhead wires. We think, therefore, the court erred in withdrawing the case from the jury.

1001

Before concluding, we repeat that we are not intending to express any opinion as to the effect of the testimony as a whole, or to intimate what the verdict of a jury ought to be, nor do we mean to imply that there must be satisfactory evidence of the actual cost of supervision. All we mean to decide is that there was sufficient testimony to go to the jury, and obtain its judgment whether the ordinance passed by the city, and the charges imposed thereby, were, considering all the circumstances of the case, reasonable or oppressive.

The judgment is reversed, and the case remanded, with instructions to set aside the verdict and grant a new trial.

Mr. Justice White, Mr. Justice Peckham, and Mr. Justice McKenna concurred in the judgment.

B. M. PATTERSON, Edward Jansen, Sven Freeman, et al., Appts.,
v.

BARK EUDORA, whereof Alfred E. Dickson is Master.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 169-170.)

Shipping—statute forbidding advance pay to seamen—liberty to contract—application of statute to foreign vessels.

1. Seamen shipping in an American port on a NOTE.—On the constitutionality of statutes restricting contracts and business—see note to State v. Loomis (Mo.) 21 L. R. A. 789.

On the power of Congress to regulate commerce—see notes to State ex rel. Corwin v. Indiana & O. Oil, Gas & Min. Co. (Ind.) 6 L. R. A. 579; Bullard v. Northern P. R. Co. (Mont.) 11 L. R. A. 246; Re Wilson (D. C.) 12 L. R. A.

1002

foreign vessel engaged in foreign commerce are within the protection of the act of December 21, 1898 (30 Stat. at L. 755, 763, chap. 28, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 3071, 3080), § 24, making it a misdemeanor to pay any seaman wages in advance, and providing that advance payment shall not absolve the vessel or its master or owner from full payment of wages actually earned, which provisions are expressly declared applicable "as well to foreign vessels as to vessels of the United States," although such act is entitled "An Act to Amend the Laws Relating to American Seamen."

2. The liberty of contract guaranteed by U. S. Const. 14th Amend. is not invaded by the provisions of the act of December 21, 1898, § 24, making it a misdemeanor to pay any seaman wages in advance, and declaring that such payment shall not absolve the vessel or its master or owner from full payment of wages actually earned.
3. The restriction on contracts of seamen engaged in interstate or foreign commerce, which is made by the provisions of the act of December 21, 1898, § 24, making it a misdemeanor to pay any seaman wages in advance, and declaring that such payment shall not absolve the vessel or its master or owner from full payment of wages actually earned, is a valid exercise of the power of Congress to regulate commerce.
4. Congress was not without power to provide by the act of December 21, 1898, § 24, that the provisions of that section, making it a misdemeanor to pay any seaman wages in advance, and declaring that such payment shall not absolve the vessel or its master or owner from full payment of wages actually earned, should extend to seamen shipping in an American port on a foreign vessel engaged in interstate commerce.

[No. 278.]

Argued May 1, 1903. Decided June 1, 1903.

ON A CERTIFICATE from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit presenting the question whether the provisions of the statute prohibiting advance payment of wages to seamen were applicable to seamen shipping in a port of the United States on a foreign vessel, and whether, if so applicable, the statute was valid. Answered in the affirmative.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brewer:

On December 21, 1898 (30 Stat. at L. 755, 763, chap. 28, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 3071, 3080), Congress passed an act entitled "An Act to Amend the Laws Relating to American Seamen, for the Protection of Such Seamen, and to Promote Commerce." The material portion thereof is found in § 24, which amends § 10 of chapter 121 of the Laws of 1884, so as to read:

"Sec. 10. (a) That it shall be, and is hereby, made unlawful in any case to pay any seaman wages in advance of the time when he has actually earned the same, or to pay such advance wages to any other person. Any person paying such advance wages shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction, shall be punished by a fine not less than four times the amount of the wages so advanced, and may also be imprisoned for a period not exceeding six months, at the discretion of the court. The payment of such advance wages shall in no case, excepting as herein provided, absolve the vessel or the master or owner thereof from full payment of wages after the same shall have been actually earned, and shall be no defense to a libel, suit, or action for the recovery of such wages. If any person [171] shall demand or receive, either directly *or indirectly, from any seaman or other person seeking employment as seaman, or from any person on his behalf, any remuneration whatever for providing him with employment, he shall, for every such offense, be liable to a penalty of not more than one hundred dollars."

624; Gibbons v. Ogden, 6 L. ed. U. S. 23; Brown v. Maryland, 6 L. ed. U. S. 678; Gloucester Ferry Co. v. Pennsylvania, 29 L. ed. U. S. 158; Ratterman v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 32 L. ed. U. S. 229; Harmon v. Chicago, 37 L. ed. U. S. 216, and Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Backus, 38 L. ed. U. S. 1041.

"(f) That this section shall apply as well to foreign vessels as to vessels of the United States; and any master, owner, consignee, or agent of any foreign vessel who has violated its provisions shall be liable to the same penalty that the master, owner, or agent of a vessel of the United States would be for a similar violation; provided that treaties in force between the United States and foreign nations do not conflict."

The appellants were seamen on board the British bark Eudora, and filed this libel for wages in the district court of the United States for the eastern district of Pennsylvania. By an agreed statement of facts it appears that on January 22, 1900, they shipped on board such bark to serve as seamen for and during a voyage from Portland, Maine, to Rio and other points, not to exceed twelve months, the final port of discharge to be in the United States or Canada, with pay at the rate of one shilling for forty-five days and twenty dollars per month thereafter. At the time of shipment twenty dollars was paid on account of each of them, and with their consent, to the shipping agent through whom they were employed. On the completion of the voyage, they, having performed their duties as seamen, demanded wages for the full term of service, ignoring the payment made, at their instance, to the shipping agent. The advanced payment and contract of shipment were not contrary to, or prohibited by, the laws of Great Britain. It was contended, however, that they were prohibited by the act of Congress, above quoted, and that such act was applicable. The district court entered a decree dismissing the libel. 110 Fed. 430. On appeal to the circuit court of appeals for the third circuit, that court certified the following questions to this court:

"First. Is the act of Congress of December 21, 1898, properly applicable to the contract in this case?

"Second. Under the agreed statement of [172] facts above set forth, upon a libel filed by 190 U. S.

said seamen, after the completion of the voyage, against the British vessel, to recover wages which were not due to them under the terms of their contract or under the law of Great Britain, were the libellants entitled to a decree against the vessel?"

Mr. Joseph Hill Brinton argued the cause and filed a brief for appellants:

Under the earlier acts there was no question as to their applicability to the shipment of all seamen on American soil.

The State of Maine, 22 Fed. 734.

The title can only be resorted to as a means of construction where an ambiguity exists in the language of the act or where a usual construction would lead to absurdity.

Endlich, Interpretation of Statutes, § 58; United States v. Fisher, 2 Cranch, 358, 2 L. ed. 304.

The act applies to British subjects shipping upon a British vessel in an American port.

The Kestor, 110 Fed. 432; The Troop, 117 Fed. 557.

The "law of the flag" has no application where the interests extend beyond the internal or municipal affairs of the vessel.

The Olga, 32 Fed. 329; The Brantford City, 29 Fed. 373.

That the "law of the flag" would apply where a foreign crew is shipped in a foreign land on a foreign vessel has rarely been questioned.

Covert v. The Wexford, 3 Fed. 577; The Adolph, 7 Fed. 501; The Angela Maria, 35 Fed. 430.

But the question has frequently arisen as to the treatment of seamen on foreign vessels who have shipped in American ports, where treaties confer exclusive jurisdiction on the consuls. In those cases our courts have invariably refused to entertain jurisdiction where the ends of justice fail to require it. The moment, however, the conduct of the officers of the vessel amounts to a discharge of such seamen, or the cruelty is of such a character as to demand interference, such treaties have been to that extent suspended.

The Burchard, 42 Fed. 608; The Welhaven, 55 Fed. 80; The Marie, 49 Fed. 286; The Belgenland, 114 U. S. 355, 29 L. ed. 152, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 865; The Salomoni, 29 Fed. 534; Bolden v. Jensen, 70 Fed. 505.

A vessel while in a foreign port is subject to local laws in matters pertaining to contracts there effected.

The Napoleon, Olcott, 208, Fed. Cas. No. 10,015; Patch v. Marshall, 1 Curt. C. C. 452, Fed. Cas. No. 10,793; Wharton, International Law, § 33; The Troop, 117 Fed. 557.

No court has ever doubted the legislative power to protect the shipment and discharge of seamen within its territory.

Ex parte D'Oliviera, 1 Gall. 474, Fed. Cas. No. 3,967; United States v. Kellum, 19 Blatchf. 372, 7 Fed. 843; United States v. McArdle, 2 Sawy. 367, Fed. Cas. No. 15,653; United States v. Anderson, 10 Blatchf. 226, Fed. Cas. No. 14,447; Leary v. Lloyd, 3 El. & El. 178; Kay, Shipmaster & Seamen, § 769; Grant v. United States, 7 C. C. A. 436.

15 U. S. App. 243, 58 Fed. 694; The Kestor, 110 Fed. 557; The Brantford City, 29 Fed. 394; The Troop, 117 Fed. 557.

Mr. Horace L. Cheyney argued the cause, and, with Mr. John F. Lewis, filed a brief for appellee:

A seaman who ships upon a vessel becomes a seaman of the nationality of that vessel.

Re Ross, 140 U. S. 453, 35 L. ed. 581, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 897.

Congress or this country alone has not power to change the laws of nations.

The Scotia, 14 Wall. 170, sub nom. Sears v. The Scotia, 20 L. ed. 822.

The contract of shipment entered into in this case by the seamen of "The Eudora" was to be performed exclusively upon British territory, and therefore its validity is to be determined by the British law.

London Assur. Co. v. Companhia de Moagens do Barreiro, 167 U. S. 149, 42 L. ed. 113, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 785; Coghlan v. South Carolina, 142 U. S. 101, 35 L. ed. 951, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 150; Hall v. Cordell, 142 U. S. 116, 35 L. ed. 956, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 154; Andrews v. Pond, 13 Pet. 65, 10 L. ed. 61; Milner v. Tiffany, 1 Wall. 310, 17 L. ed. 543; Pritchard v. Norton, 106 U. S. 124, 27 L. ed. 104, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 102; Liverpool & G. W. Steam Co. v. Phenix Ins. Co. 129 U. S. 397, 32 L. ed. 788, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 469.

The sovereignty of this country is coextensive with its territory only, and Congress possesses no power of legislation upon British territory.

Hall, International Law, 4th ed. § 10.

The word "commerce" has a double significance, including traffic, that is, the buying and selling or interchange of commodities and commercial intercourse or the carriage of those commodities.

Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, 6 L. ed. 23; Lottery Case, 188 U. S. 321, sub nom. Champion v. Ames, ante, 492, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 321.

The term has been held to include not only the carriage of merchantable commodities, but also the carriage of passengers (Smith v. Turner, 7 How. 283, 12 L. ed. 702), bills of lading, because they represent the goods carried (Woodruff v. Parham, 8 Wall. 123, 19 L. ed. 382), and the transmission of ideas, wishes, orders and intelligence by telegraph (Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Pendleton, 122 U. S. 347, 30 L. ed. 1187, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1126). It has also been held to include navigation (Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, 6 L. ed. 23).

But as the term has been used in the decided cases it is almost equivalent to commercial intercourse or to the carriage and transportation of goods.

Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, 6 L. ed. 23.

Under the power to regulate interstate commerce the Federal government has the power to improve navigable streams and to remove natural obstructions to navigation or commerce (Mobile County v. Kimball, 102 U. S. 691, 26 L. ed. 239), or an obstruction to interstate carriage by a mob (Re Debs, 158 U. S. 564, 39 L. ed. 1092, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 900).

The authority to regulate interstate commerce gives Congress the power to regulate the instrumentalities thereof.

Hooper v. California, 155 U. S. 648, 39 L. ed. 297, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 207.

The decisions have not clearly defined what constitute these instrumentalities or the scope of the regulation thereof, but it must be assumed that Congress has the right to regulate the navigation of a ship in a broader sense than that term was used in Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, 6 L. ed. 23.

But such regulation of the ship as an instrumentality of commerce must be limited to its business as a ship engaged in the carriage of goods or passengers, and not to those incidental contracts which ship owners may enter into for the purpose of carrying on their business as carriers.

The contract in this case is similar to one of insurance, which this court held not to be commerce, but a contract merely in aid of commerce.

Paul v. Virginia, 8 Wall. 168, 19 L. ed. 357; Hooper v. California, 155 U. S. 648, 39 L. ed. 297, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 207.

A vessel is a detached, floating portion of the territory of the country whose flag it flies.

The Scotia, 14 Wall. 170, sub nom. Sears v. The Scotia, 20 L. ed. 822; Re Ross, 140 U. S. 453, 35 L. ed. 581, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 897; Wilson v. McNamee, 102 U. S. 572, 26 L. ed. 234; The Lamington, 87 Fed. 752; 1 Kent, Com. 26; Wheaton, International Law, Dana's ed. 106; 3 Wharton, International Law, 228; 1 Vattel, Law of Nations, chap. 19, § 216; Bluntschli, International Law, § 319; Seagrove v. Parks [1891] 1 Q. B. 551; Wildenhus's Case, 120 U. S. 1, sub nom. Mali v. Keeper of Common Jail, 30 L. ed. 565, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 385; United States v. Rodgers, 150 U. S. 249, 37 L. ed. 1071, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 109.

An American vessel, registered or enrolled in accordance with the laws of the United States, being thus a detached portion of the national territory, and not a part of the territory of any particular state, Congress, over such vessels, has the same police power as the various states have over the territory within their limits.

United States v. DeWitt, 9 Wall. 41, 19 L. ed. 593.

Bearing in mind this distinction between the power of Congress over American and foreign vessels, it is obvious that Congress may have greater legislative power over the former than the latter; and the validity of a provision governing American vessels, therefore, is not the true test of the validity of legislation attempting to control contracts entered into by seamen with foreign vessels while lying at our ports.

The prohibition contained in the act of 1898 against the payment of wages to a seaman in advance is a violation of the liberty to contract guaranteed by the Constitution.

Allgeyer v. Louisiana, 165 U. S. 579, 41 L. ed. 832, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 427.

While it is true that it is largely in the discretion of the legislatures of the several states or of Congress to decide when public policy requires the prohibition of certain contracts, yet, on the other hand, the mere fact that the enactment purports to be for the regulation of commerce, the protection of public safety, public health, or public morals is not conclusive upon the courts.

Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 661, 31 L. ed. 210, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273; Lawton v. Steele, 152 U. S. 133, 38 L. ed. 385, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 499; Booth v. Illinois, 184 U. S. 425, 46 L. ed. 623, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 425; Otis v. Parker, 187 U. S. 606, ante, 323, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 168; Lottery Case, 188 U. S. 321, sub nom. Champion v. Ames, ante, 492, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 321.

Only general principles can be declared, and no fixed or invariable rule can be applied to such cases. It is a question for the determination of the court in each case whether the statute is in violation of the fundamental rights guaranteed by the Constitution.

Holden v. Hardy, 169 U. S. 366, 42 L. ed. 780, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 383; Knoxville Iron Co. v. Harbison, 183 U. S. 13, 46 L. ed. 55, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1; Addyston Pipe & Steel Co. v. United States, 175 U. S. 211, 44 L. ed. 136, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 96; Booth v. Illinois, 184 U. S. 425, 46 L. ed. 623, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 425; Otis v. Parker, 187 U. S. 606, ante, 323, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 168.

Courts have declined to take jurisdiction over claims of foreign seamen, where there would be no hardship in compelling them to go to courts of the country of the vessel.

The Walter A. Wallet, 66 Fed. 1011; The Belgenland, 114 U. S. 355, 29 L. ed. 152, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 860; The Catherine, 1 Pet. Adm. 104; The Forsoket, 1 Pet. Adm. 197.

Not only does this rule apply to wages cases, but to all questions governing the rights and duties of seamen upon foreign vessels.

The Sirius, 47 Fed. 825; The Amalia, 3 Fed. 652; The Kanbria, 100 Fed. 118.

The British law has been applied to cases of personal injuries upon British vessels while on the high seas or in British waters.

The Egyptian Monarch, 36 Fed. 773; The Lamington, 87 Fed. 752.

Assistant Attorney General Beek filed a brief for the United States.

Mr. Justice Brewer delivered the opinion of the court:

Applying the ordinary rules of construction, it does not seem to us doubtful that the act of Congress, if within its power, is applicable in this case. The act makes it unlawful to pay any seaman wages in advance, makes such payment a misdemeanor, and in terms provides that such payment shall not absolve the vessel or its master or owner for full payment of wages after the same shall have been actually earned. And further, it declares that the section making these provisions shall apply as well to foreign vessels as to vessels of the United States, provided that treaties in force between the United States and foreign nations do not conflict. It is true that the title of the act of 1898 is "An Act to Amend the Laws Relating to American Seamen," but it has been held that the title is no part of a statute, and cannot be used to set at naught its obvious meaning. The extent to which it can be used is thus stated by Chief Justice Marshall in United States v. Fisher, 2 Cranch, 358, 386, 2 L. ed. 304, 313:

"Neither party contends that the title of an act can control plain words in the body of the statute; and neither denies that, taken with other parts, it may assist in removing ambiguities. Where the intent is plain, nothing is left to construction. *Where the mind labors to discover the de-[173] sign of the legislature, it seizes everything from which aid can be derived; and, in such case, the title claims a degree of notice and will have its due share of consideration."

See also Yazoo & M. Valley R. Co. v. Thomas, 132 U. S. 174, 188, 33 L. ed. 302, 307, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 68; United States v. Oregon & C. R. Co. 164 U. S. 526, 541, 41 L. ed. 541, 545, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 165; Price v. Forrest, 173 U. S. 410, 427, 43 L. ed. 749, 755, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 434; Endlich, Interpretation of Statutes, §§ 58, 59. When, as here, the statute declares, in plain words, its intent in reference to a prepayment of seamen's wages, and follows that declaration with a further statement that the rule thus announced shall apply to foreign vessels as well as to vessels of the United States, it would do violence to language to say that it was not applicable to a foreign vessel.

But the main contention is that the statute is beyond the power of Congress to enact, especially as applicable to foreign vessels. It is urged that it invades the liberty of contract which is guaranteed by the 14th Amendment to the Federal Constitution, and reference is made to Allgeyer v. Louisiana, 165 U. S. 578, 589, 41 L. ed. 832, 835, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 427, 431, in which we said:

"The liberty mentioned in that amendment means not only the right of the citizen to be free from the mere physical restraint of his person, as by incarceration, but the term is deemed to embrace the right of the citizen to be free in the enjoyment of all his faculties; to be free to use them in all lawful ways; to live and work where he will; to earn his livelihood by any lawful calling; to pursue any livelihood or avocation, and for that purpose, to enter into all contracts which may be proper, necessary, and essential to his carrying out to a successful conclusion the purposes above mentioned."

Further, that even if the contract be one subject to restraint under the police power, that power is vested in the states, and not in the general government, and any restraint, if exercised at all, can only be exercised by the state in which the contract is entered into; that the only jurisdiction possessed by Congress in respect to such matters is by virtue of its power to regulate commerce, interstate and foreign; that the regulation of commerce does not carry [174] with it the power of controlling contracts *of employment by those engaged in such service, any more than it includes the power to regulate contracts for service on interstate railroads, or for the manufacture of goods which may be intended for interstate or foreign commerce; and, finally, that the validity of a contract is to be determined by the law of the place of performance, and not by that of the place of the contract; that the contract in this case was one entered into in the United States, to be performed on board a British vessel, which is undoubtedly British territory, and therefore its validity is to be determined by British law, and that, as conceded in the question, sustains its validity.

We are unable to yield our assent to this contention. That there is, generally speaking, a liberty of contract which is protected by the 14th Amendment, may be conceded; yet such liberty does not extend to all contracts. As said in Frisbie v. United States, 157 U. S. 160, 165, 39 L. ed. 657, 659, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 586, 588:

"While it may be conceded that, generally speaking, among the inalienable rights of the citizen is that of the liberty of contract, yet such liberty is not absolute and universal. It is within the undoubted power of government to restrain some individuals from all contracts, as well as all individuals from some contracts. It may deny to all the right to contract for the purchase or sale of lottery tickets; to the minor the right to assume any obligations, except for the necessities of existence; to the common carrier the power to make any contract releasing himself from negligence, and, indeed, may restrain all engaged in any employment from any contract in the course of that employment which is against public policy. The possession of this power by government in no manner conflicts with the proposition that, generally speaking, every citizen has a right freely to contract for the price of his labor, services, or property."

And that the contract of a sailor for his services is subject to some restrictions was settled in Robertson v. Baldwin, 165 U. S. 275, 41 L. ed. 715, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 326, in which §§ 4598 and 4599, Rev. Stat. (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 3115, 3116), in so far as they require seamen to carry out the contracts contained in their shipping articles, were held not to be in conflict with the 13th Amendment, and in which a deprivation of personal *liberty not warranted in respect to other employees was sustained as to sailors. We quote the following from the opinion (p. 282, L. ed. p. 718, Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 329):

"From the earliest historical period, the contract of the sailor has been treated as an exceptional one, and involving, to a certain extent, the surrender of his personal liberty during the life of the contract. Indeed, the business of navigation could scarcely be carried on without some guaranty, beyond the ordinary civil remedies upon contract, that the sailor will not desert the ship at a critical moment, or leave her at some place where seamen are impossible to be obtained—as Molloy forcibly expresses it—"to rot in her neglected brine." Such desertion might involve a long delay of the vessel while the master is seeking another crew, an abandonment of the voyage, and, in some cases, the safety of the ship itself. Hence, the laws of nearly all maritime nations have made provision for securing the personal attendance of the crew on board, and for their criminal punishment for desertion or absence without leave during the life of the shipping articles."

If the necessities of the public justify the enforcement of a sailor's contract by exceptional means, justice requires that the rights of the sailor be in like manner protected. The story of the wrongs done to sailors in the larger ports, not merely of this nation, but of the world, is an oft-told tale, and many have been the efforts to protect them against such wrongs. One of the most common means of doing these wrongs is the advancement of wages. Bad men lure them into haunts of vice, advance a little money to continue their dissipation, and, having thus acquired a partial control, and by liquor dulled their faculties, place them on board the vessel just ready to sail and most ready to return the advances. When once on shipboard, and the ship at sea, the sailor is powerless and no relief is availing. It was in order to stop this evil, to protect the sailor, and not to restrict him of his liberty, that this statute was passed. And, while in some cases it may operate harshly, no one can doubt that the best interests of seamen as a class are preserved by such legislation.

Neither do we think there is in it any trespass on the rights *of the states. No question [176] is before us as to the applicability of the statute to contracts of sailors for services wholly within the state. We need not determine whether one who contracts to serve on a steamboat between New York and Albany, or between any two places within the limits of a state, can avail himself of the privileges of this legislation, for the services contracted for in this case were to be performed beyond the limits of any single state, and in an ocean voyage. Contracts with sailors for their services are, as we have seen, exceptional in their character, and may be subjected to special restrictions for the purpose of securing the full and safe carrying on of commerce on the water. Being so subject, whenever the contract is for employment in commerce, not wholly within the state, legislation enforcing such restrictions comes within the domain of Congress, which is charged with the duty of protecting foreign and interstate commerce.

Finally, while it has often been stated that the law of the place of performance determines the validity of a contract (London Assur. Co. v. Companhia de Moagens do Barreiro, 167 U. S. 149, 160, 42 L. ed. 113, 120, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 785), yet that doctrine does not control this case. It may be remarked, in passing, that it does not appear that the contract of shipment or the advance payment were made on board the vessel. On the contrary, the stipulated fact is that the "seamen were engaged in the presence of the British vice consul at the port of New York." The wrongful acts were, therefore, done on the territory and within the jurisdiction of the United States. It is undoubtedly true that, for some purposes, a foreign ship is to be treated as foreign territory. As said by Mr. Justice Blackburn, in Queen v. Anderson, L. R. 1 C. C. 161, "A ship which bears a nation's flag is to be treated as a part of the territory of that nation. A ship is a kind of floating island." Yet when a foreign merchant vessel comes into our ports, like a foreign citizen coming into our territory, it subjects itself to the jurisdiction of this country. In The Exchange v. M'Faddon, 7 Cranch, 116, 136, 146, 3 L. ed. 287, 293, 297, this court held that a public armed vessel in the service of a sovereign at peace with the United States is not within the ordinary jurisdiction of our tribunals while within a port of the [177] United States. In the opinion, by Chief Justice Marshall, it was said that "the jurisdiction of the nation within its own territory is necessarily exclusive and absolute. It is susceptible of no limitation not imposed by itself. Any restriction upon it deriving validity from an external source would imply a diminution of its sovereignty to the extent of the restriction, and an investment of that sovereignty to the same extent in that power which could impose such restriction. All exceptions, therefore, to the full and complete power of a nation within its own territories must be traced up to the consent of the nation itself. They can flow from no other legitimate source. This consent may be either express or implied. In the latter case, it is less determinate, exposed more to the uncertainties of construction: but, if understood, not less obligatory." And, again, after holding it "to be a principle of public law that national ships of war, entering the port of a friendly power, open for their reception, are to be considered as exempted, by the consent of that power, from its jurisdiction," he added: "Without doubt, the sovereign of the place is capable of destroying this implication. He may claim and exercise jurisdiction, either by employing force, or by subjecting such vessels to the ordinary tribunals."

Again, in Wildenhus's Case, 120 U. S. 1, sub nom. Mali v. Hudson County Common Jail Keeper, 30 L. ed. 565, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 385, in which the jurisdiction of a state court over one charged with murder, committed on board a foreign merchant vessel in a harbor of the state, was sustained, it was said by Mr. Chief Justice Waite (pp. 11, 12, L. ed. p. 567, Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 387):

"It is part of the law of civilized nations that when a merchant vessel of one country enters the ports of another for the purposes of trade, it subjects itself to the law of the place to which it goes, unless, by treaty or otherwise, the two countries have come to some different understanding or agreement.

From experience, however, it was found long ago that it would be beneficial to commerce if the local government would abstain from interfering with the internal discipline of the ship, and the general regulation of the rights and duties of the officers and crew towards the vessel or among themselves. And so, by comity, it came to be generally understood among civilized nations *that all matters of discipline and all [178] things done on board which affected only the vessel or those belonging to her, and did not involve the peace or dignity of the country, or the tranquillity of the port, should be left by the local government to be dealt with by the authorities of the nation to which the vessel belonged, as the laws of that nation or the interests of its commerce should require. But if crimes are committed on board of a character to disturb the peace and tranquillity of the country to which the vessel has been brought, the offenders have never, by comity or usage, been entitled to any exemption from the operation of the local laws for their punishment, if the local tribunals see fit to assert their authority."

It follows from these decisions that it is within the power of Congress to prescribe the penal provisions of § 10, and no one within the jurisdiction of the United States can escape liability for a violation of those provisions on the plea that he is a foreign citizen or an officer of a foreign merchant vessel. It also follows that it is a duty of the courts of the United States to give full force and effect to such provisions. It is not pretended that this government can control the action of foreign tribunals. In any case presented to them, they will be guided by their own views of the law and its scope and effect; but the courts of the United States are bound to accept this legislation, and enforce it whenever its provisions are violated. The implied consent of this government to leave jurisdiction over the internal affairs of foreign merchant vessels in our harbors to the nations to which those vessels belong may be withdrawn. Indeed, the implied consent to permit them to enter our harbors may be withdrawn, and if this implied consent may be wholly withdrawn, it may be extended upon such terms and conditions as the government sees fit to impose. And this legislation, as plainly as words can make it, imposes these conditions upon the shipment of sailors in our harbors, and declares that they are applicable to foreign, as well as to domestic, vessels. Congress has thus prescribed conditions which attend the entrance of foreign vessels into our ports, and those conditions the courts are not at liberty to dispense with. The interests of our own shipping require this. It is well said by *counsel for the government [179] in the brief which he was given leave to file:

"Moreover, as 90 per cent of all commerce in our ports is conducted in foreign vessels, it must be obvious that their exemption from these shipping laws will go far to embarrass domestic vessels in obtaining their quota of seamen. To the average sailor it is a consideration while in port to have his wages in part prepaid; and if, in a large port like New York, 90 per cent of the vessels are permitted to prepay such seamen as ship upon them, and the other 10 per cent, being American vessels, cannot thus prepay, it will be exceedingly difficult for American vessels to obtain crews. This practical consideration, presumably, appealed to Congress and fully justified the provision herein contained."

We are of the opinion that it is within the power of Congress to protect all sailors shipping in our ports on vessels engaged in foreign or interstate commerce, whether they belong to citizens of this country or of a foreign nation; and that our courts are bound to enforce those provisions in respect to foreign, equally with domestic, vessels.

The questions, therefore, certified by the Court of Appeals, will each be answered in the affirmative.

Mr. Justice Harlan concurred in the judgment.

ANTON JOHANSON, Plff. in Err.,

v.

STATE OF WASHINGTON.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 179-186.)

Public lands—selections in lieu of school sections—effect of approval by Secretary of Interior.

1. The approval by the Secretary of the Interior of a selection of public land in lieu of school sections, made by one claiming to be the agent of a territory, is, if nothing more, a withdrawal from private entry of the selected land, which continues until the approval of the selection is set aside.
2. The provisions for selection of public land in lieu of school sections, which are made by the act of February 26, 1859 (11 Stat. at L. 385, chap. 58, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1381), are, as to cases not provided for by the special provisions of the act of March 2, 1853 (10 Stat. at L. 179, chap. 90, § 20, Rev. Stat. § 1947), for such selection by the territory of Washington, as applicable to that territory as to any other territory.
3. The Secretary of the Treasury was not designated as the officer to make selections of public lands in lieu of school sections by the provision of the act of February 26, 1859, requiring such selections to be made "in accordance with the principles of adjustment and the provisions" of the act of Congress of May 20, 1826 (4 Stat. at L. 179, chap. 83), which act provided for selection by that officer; but such provision must, in view of the creation of the Interior Department by the act of March 3, 1849 (9 Stat. at L. 395, chap. 108), and the transfer, to the Secretary thereof, of the supervising powers of the Secretary of the Treasury in respect to public lands, be construed simply as describing the general mode of procedure.
4. The approval, by the Secretary of the Interior, of a selection of public lands in lieu of school sections, by a person authorized to represent the territory of Washington, being that of the officer charged with the supervision of the landed interests of the United States, should, unless some direction of Congress manifestly has been violated, be held to be conclusive on the transfer of title.

5. Past, as well as future, approval by the Secretary of the Interior of selections of public land in lieu of school sections, was covered by the provision of the act of December 18, 1902 (32 Stat. at L. 756, chap. 5), confirming title of the state of Washington to lands so selected, "when the same shall have been approved by the Secretary of the Interior."

[No. 282.]

Argued May 1, 1903. Decided June 1, 1903.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Washington to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Superior Court of King County in favor of plaintiff in an action of ejectment. Affirmed.
See same case below, 26 Wash. 668, 67 Pac. 401.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brewer:

This was an action of ejectment brought in the superior court of King county, Washington. The case was tried by the court without a jury. An agreed statement of facts was submitted, upon which the court found the following facts and conclusions of law:

"1. That the north half of the southwest quarter and the northwest quarter of the southeast quarter of section 3, township 25 north, range 4 east, is of the value of $20,000, and was selected by Phillip H. Lewis, as agent for King county, Washington territory, by filing a list of this and other lands, designated as list No. 2 of indemnity school selection, at the land office at Olympia, Washington territory, May 24, 1870, under an act of Congress approved March 2, 1853, and an act of Congress approved February 26, 1859, which said selection was approved by Secretary C. Delano, January 27, 1872.

"2. March 13, 1893, Anton Johanson made application to enter the land aforesaid under the homestead laws, and at that time made a settlement thereon; he has ever since lived on said land; his application was rejected by the local land office, and subsequently appealed to the Commissioner of the General Land Office, and finally to the Secretary of the Interior, who, *on December 18, 1895, de-[181]cided adversely to Anton Johanson.

"From the foregoing facts the court finds as conclusions of law:

"1. That the plaintiff was, on the 13th day of March, 1893, seised in fee and possessed and entitled to the possession of said north half of the southwest quarter and the northwest quarter of the southeast quarter, section 3, township 25 north, range 4 east.

"2. That on the said 13th day of March, 1893, defendant unlawfully entered said premises and ejected the plaintiff therefrom, and unlawfully retains possession thereof."

The judgment of the superior court having been affirmed by the supreme court of the state (26 Wash. 668, 67 Pac. 401), the case was brought here on error.

Mr. C. W. Corliss argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Henry W. Lung, John F. Main, and O. C. McGilvra, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

There can be no reservation of public lands except by some treaty, law, or authorized act of the executive department.

Wolsey v. Chapman, 101 U. S. 755, 25 L. ed. 915; United States v. Fitzgerald, 15 Pet. 407, 10 L. ed. 785.

Repeals of statutes by implication are not favored.

Chew Heong v. United States, 112 U. S. 536, 28 L. ed. 770, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255; South Carolina v. Stoll, 17 Wall. 425, 21 L. ed. 650; Ex parte Crow Dog, 109 U. S. 556, sub nom. Ex parte Kang-Gi-Shun-Ca, 27 L. ed. 1030, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 396; Fitzgerald v. Champneys, 30 L. J. Ch. N. S. 782, 2 Johns. & H. 31.

The land in controversy was, together with other lands, reserved by the United States for the express purpose of granting the lands for common-school purposes.

Barkley v. United States, 3 Wash. Terr. 522, 19 Pac. 36.

This reserved right in the government must give it control over these lands as absolute as that of any owner could be.

Ibid.

At no time has Congress understood the mere reservation of the lands for school purposes to be equivalent to a conveyance of the same to the people of the territory.

United States v. Elliot, 12 Utah, 119, 41 Pac. 720.

The policy of the Federal government in favor of settlers has been liberal. It recognizes their superior equity to become the purchasers of a limited extent of land comprehending their improvements over that of any other person.

Clements v. Warner, 24 How. 394, 16 L. ed. 695.

The party who takes the initiatory step in such cases, if followed up to patent, is deemed to have acquired the better right as against others to the premises.

Shepley v. Cowan, 91 U. S. 330, 23 L. ed. 424.

The state right of selection could not be made to the prejudice of the rights of others.

Aureochea v. Bangs, 114 U. S. 381, 29 L. ed. 170, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 892.

Mr. C. W. Corliss filed a separate brief for plaintiff in error:

A defective selection cannot be cured by a relinquishment, and amended so as to defeat the rights of claims initiated prior to amendment.

Barclay v. California, 6 Land Dec. 699.

Mr. W. B. Stratton argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error:

To review the decision of the state court upon a question of fact is not within the jurisdiction of this court.

Dower v. Richards, 151 U. S. 658, 38 L. ed. 305, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 452; Bartlett v. 190 U. S.

Lockwood, 160 U. S. 357, 40 L. ed. 455, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 334; Egan v. Hart, 165 U. S. 188, 41 L. ed. 680, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 300; Hedrick v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 167 U. S. 673, 42 L. ed. 320, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 922.

A writ of error brings up matters of law only.

Dower v. Richards, 151 U. S. 658, 38 L. ed. 305, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 452.

The selection made by Lewis as agent for King county, Washington territory was approved by the Secretary of Interior, January 27, 1872. Such approval operated as a selection by the proper executive department of the Federal government under the act of February 26, 1859.

Todd v. Washington, 24 Land Dec. 106; Re Bailey, 5 Land Dec. 216.

The authority of the agent cannot here be drawn in question.

Keane v. Brygger, 3 Wash. 348, 28 Pac. 653; Sharpstein v. Washington, 13 Land Dec. 378; Moore v. Robbins, 96 U. S. 535, 24 L. ed. 848.

Not only did the Secretary of the Interior in 1872 approve the selection made by King county through its agent, Lewis, as shown by the stipulation, but in the year 1895 the Secretary of the Interior also approved the same selection. This approval of 1895 related back to the time of the selection.

Keane v. Brygger, 3 Wash. 348, 28 Pac. 653.

The construction given to statutes by those charged with the duty of executing them should not be overruled without cogent reasons.

Ibid.

If a statute is ambiguous, contemporaneous and uniform executive construction is regarded as decisive.

Brown v. United States, 113 U. S. 568, 28 L. ed. 1079, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 648; Edwards v. Darby, 12 Wheat. 210, 6 L. ed. 604; United States v. State Bank, 6 Pet. 29, 8 L. ed. 308; MeSorley v. Hill, 2 Wash. 638, 27 Pac. 552.

A reservation is in itself an appropriation for a trust purpose.

Vincennes University v. Indiana, 14 How. 273, 14 L. ed. 418; Wileox v. Jackson ex dem. M'Connel, 13 Pet. 498, 10 L. ed. 264.

The reservation and selection under the acts of 1853 and 1859 have the same force and effect as a grant.

Re Bailey, 5 Land Dec. 216.

The reservation made by the selection of the land in controversy while the territorial government existed continues until the selection is canceled.

Re Wheeler, 11 Land Dec. 381; Re Smith, 11 Land Dec. 382.

The state of Washington may have recognized its right to lieu lands under the terms of § 10 of the enabling act, but it has never done anything in recognition of the contention of the plaintiff in error, that lands selected under the acts of 1853 and 1859 do not belong absolutely to the state in perpetual trust for the common schools.

Re Barclay, 4 Land Dec. 390.

The reserved lands being held by the territory in perpetual trust for the common schools, could Congress pass any law that would affect the trust?

Minnesota v. Bachelder, 1 Wall. 109, 17 L. ed. 551.

Whenever a tract of land shall have been once legally appropriated to any purpose, from that moment the land thus appropriated becomes severed from the mass of public lands; and no subsequent law, or proclamation, or sale would be construed to embrace it, or to operate upon it, although no reservation were made of it.

Wilcox v. Jackson ex dem. McConnell, 13 Pet. 513, 10 L. ed. 271.

The selections made by the county commissioners and approved by Secretary Delano in the year 1872, under the acts of 1853 and 1859, operated at least as a reservation of the land in question.

This reservation has never been destroyed, nor has the land ever become a part of the public domain subject to entry by settlers.

Ibid.; Leavenworth & G. R. Co. v. United States, 92 U. S. 745, 23 L. ed. 639.

The enabling act should be construed with the acts of 1853 and 1859, and if this is done then lieu selections might be made on account of deficiencies arising from natural causes.

Sharpstein v. Washington, 13 Land Dec. 378; Re Bailey, 5 Land Dec. 216; Re Smith, 11 Land Dec. 382.

Mr. Justice Brewer delivered the opinion of the court:

Under the statutes of Washington, an action in form similar to the old action of ejectment may be maintained in favor of one who has a superior title, whether legal or equitable. Ballinger's Anno. Codes & Statutes, §§ 5500, 5508. No patent is shown to have been issued by the general government, and the question, therefore, is whether the state obtained an equitable title by virtue of the selection and approval disclosed in the findings of fact.

The first contention of plaintiff in error is that no authority is shown for Phillip H. Lewis to act as agent for King county or the territory of Washington in making the selection. We pass the assertion that, in the brief of counsel for plaintiff in error in the state court, the right of Lewis to act for the county *was conceded. It is enough that Lewis, assuming to act as agent, made the selection, and that his selection was approved by the Secretary of the Interior; for the state, the successor of the territory, by commencing this action, and claiming the benefit of his act as agent, ratified and confirmed what he did as agent. Besides, whether he had authority to so act is not a Federal question, but one whose decision by the state court is final.

Coming now to the Federal question, the approval by the Secretary of Interior of a selection made by one claiming to be the agent of a territory or state of land in lieu of school sections 16 and 36 is, if nothing more, in effect a withdrawal from private entry of the selected land, and such withdrawal continues until the approval of the selection is itself set aside. Whether such selection, so approved, shall afterwards ripen into a full legal title or not, is immaterial so far as the question of withdrawal is concerned. In the case at bar, at the time of the selection and approval, there was no settlement, no private right, nothing to interfere between the United States and the territory of Washington, or prevent a selection of this tract in lieu of an ordinary school section. When, therefore, the Secretary of the Interior approved the selection, it at least operated to withdraw the land from private entry. A claim in behalf of the territory had been presented, and that claim had been approved by the proper officer of the United States. While the land remained subject to such claim and approval, no individual could come in and question its validity. Johanson's attempt to make a homestead was wrongful, and gave him no rights whatever in the land.

But, further, the title of the state is good. For the material parts of the statutes bearing upon this question, see note at foot of this page.†

*Now we remark that, from the legislation [183] of Congress, nothing is clearer than that the policy of the government has been a generous one in respect to grants for school purposes. Cooper v. Roberts, 18 How. 173, 15 L. ed. 338; Minnesota v. Hitchcock, 185 U. S. 373, 46 L. ed. 954, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 650, †Act March 2, 1853, establishing the territory of Washington (10 Stat. at L. 179, chap. 90, § 20, § 1947, Rev. Stat.):

"Sections numbered sixteen and thirty-six in each township in said territory shall be, and the same are hereby, reserved for the purpose of being applied to common schools in said territory. And in all cases where said sections sixteen and thirty-six, or either or any of them, shall be occupied by actual settlers prior to survey thereof, the county commissioners of the counties in which said sections so occupied as aforesaid are situated, be, and they are hereby, authorized to locate other lands, to an equal amount in sections or fractional sections, as the case may be, within their respective counties, in lieu of said sections so occupied."

Act of February 26, 1859 (11 Stat. at L. 385, chap. 58, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1381):

"Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That where settlements, with a view to pre-emption, have been made before the survey of the lands in the fields, which shall be found to have been made on sections sixteen or thirty-six, said sections shall be subject to the pre-emption claim of such settler; and if they, or either of them, shall have been or shall be reserved or pledged for the use of schools or colleges in the state or territory in which the lands lie, other lands of like quantity are hereby appropriated in lieu of such as may be patented by pre-emptors; and other lands are also hereby appropriated to compensate deficiencies for school purposes, where said sections sixteen or thirty-six are fractional in quantity, or where one or both are wanting by reason of the township being fractional, or from any natural cause whatever: Provided, That the lands by this section appropriated shall be selected and appropriated in accordance with the principles of adjustment and the provisions of the

[184]*and cases cited in the opinion. And, as was said by Mr. Justice Field in Winona & St. P. R. Co. v. Barney, 113 U. S. 618, 625, 28 L. ed. 1109, 1111, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 606, 609, acts making grants "are to receive such a construction as will carry out the intent of Congress, however difficult it might be to give full effect to the language used if the grants were by instruments of private conveyance. To ascertain that intent, we must look to the condition of the country when the acts were passed, as well as to the purpose declared on their face, and read all parts of them together."

Tested by this rule, it is obvious that Congress intended that Washington should receive full sections 16 and 36, or, in case of a failure by reason of prior settlement or from natural causes, the equivalent of such sections, and designated the Secretary *of the Interior as the officer to approve any selections made by the territory. The act of 1859 is as applicable to Washington as to any other territory, notwithstanding that there was a special statute passed in 1853 in respect to it. While ordinarily a special law is not repealed by a subsequent general statute, unless the intent so to do is obvious, yet there is no rule which prevents the latter from applying to cases not provided for by the former. It is true the act of 1859 refers to the act of 1826 in reference to selections, and the act of 1826 designated the Secretary of the Treasury as the officer to select. At that time the Land Department was under the supervision of the Secretary of the Treasury. But by the act of March 3, 1849 (9 Stat. at L. 395, chap. 108), the Interior Department was created, and the supervising powers of the Secretary of the Treasury in respect to public lands were transferred to the Secretary of the Interior. The act of 1859 is to be taken, not as specially designating the Secretary of the Treasury as the officer to make the selections, but simply as describing the general mode of procedure in respect thereto. This is obvious from its language, which is that the selection and appropriation shall be "in accordance with the principles of adjustment and the provisions of the act of Congress, May 20, 1826."

Further, it must be remembered that the general supervision of the affairs of the Land Department is now vested in the Secretary of the Interior, and that, unless Congress clearly designates some other officer to act in respect to such matters, it will be assumed that he is the officer to represent the government. Catholic Bishop v. Gibbon, 158 U. S. 155, 39 L. ed. 931, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 779. If some one authorized to represent the territory of Washington made a selection, and it was approved by the Secretary of the Interior, such action, being that of the officer charged with the supervision of the landed interests of the United States, should, unless some direction of Congress has manifestly been violated, be held to be conclusive upon the transfer of title.

But still further, it appearing that some question had been mooted as to the intent of Congress in respect to these matters, the confirmatory statute of 1902 was enacted, and that obviously removes all doubt. It confirms the title to selected lands, "when [186] the same shall have been approved by the act of Congress of May twentieth, eighteen hundred and twenty-six, entitled 'An Act to appropriate Lands for the Support of Schools in Certain Townships and Fractional Townships Not Before Provided For.'"

Section 2 of the act of Congress approved May 20, 1826 (4 Stat. at L. 179, chap. 83):

"Sec. 2. And be it further enacted, That the aforesaid tracts of land shall be selected by the Secretary of the Treasury, out of any unappropriated public lands within the land district where the township for which any tract is selected may be situated; and when so selected, shall be held by the same tenure, and upon the same terms, for the support of schools in such township, as section number sixteen is, or may be held, in the state where such township shall be situated."

Section 10 of the act of February 22, 1889, for the admission of Washington and other territories into the Union (25 Stat. at L. 679, chap. 180):

"That upon the admission of each of said states into the Union, sections numbered sixteen and thirty-six in every township of said proposed states, and, where such sections or any parts thereof have been sold or otherwise disposed of by or under the authority of any act of Congress, other lands equivalent thereto, in legal subdivisions of not less than one quarter section, and as contiguous as may be to the section in lieu of which the same is taken, are hereby granted to said states for the support of common schools, such indemnity lands to be selected within said states in such manner as the legislature may provide, with the approval of the Secretary of the Interior."

(32 Stat. at L. 756, chap. 5. Dec. 18, 1902.)

"Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That in all cases where sections sixteen and thirty-six, or either or any of them, or any portion thereof, have been occupied by actual settlers prior to survey thereof, and the county commissioners of the counties in which said sections so occupied as aforesaid are situated, have, under said act of Congress of March second, eighteen hundred and fifty-three, located or selected other lands in sections or fractional sections, as the case may be, within their respective counties, in lieu of said section so occupied as aforesaid, the lands so located or selected, when the same shall have been approved by the Secretary of the Interior, shall be deemed and taken to have been granted to said state by said act of February twenty-second, eighteen hundred and eighty-nine, and the title of said state thereto is hereby confirmed.

"Sec. 2. That where any lands appropriated by Congress to said territory to compensate deficiencies for school purposes, where sections sixteen or thirty-six were fractional in quantity, or where one or both were wanting by reason of the township being fractional, or from any natural cause whatever, or where sections sixteen or thirty-six were patented by pre-emptors, have been selected and appropriated as provided in said act of Congress of February twenty-sixth, eighteen hundred and fifty-nine, the land so selected and appropriated, when the same shall have been approved by the Secretary of the Interior, shall be deemed and taken to have been granted to said state of Washington by the said act of February twenty-second, eighteen hundred and eighty-nine, and the title thereto confirmed."

Secretary of the Interior." This does not refer alone to future action by the Secretary, but ratifies that which he has already done. He has approved this selection, and the act of 1902 places the title of the state beyond controversy.

For these reasons we think the judgment of the Supreme Court of Washington is right, and it is affirmed.

OREGON & CALIFORNIA RAILROAD COMPANY, Appt.,
v.
UNITED STATES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 186-197.)

Public lands—claims under Oregon donation act—right to perfect after abandonment—selection of abandoned lands by railroad company as lieu lands.

1. No right to perfect claims, under the Oregon donation act of September 27, 1850 (9 Stat. at L. 496, chap. 76), to lands which have been abandoned before completing the requisite residence thereon, was given by the provisions of the act of July 26, 1894 (28 Stat. at L. 122, chap. 163, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1522), according to the donees the right "to make and file final proofs and fully establish their rights to donations,"—especially in view of the 2d section, which authorizes the Commissioner of the Land Office to cancel a claim proved to be invalid or abandoned, and the 3d section, which expressly saves adverse claims arising under any law other than the donation act.
2. Lands on which a settlement was made under the Oregon donation act of September 27, 1850 (9 Stat. at L. 496, chap. 76), and the act of February 14, 1853 (10 Stat. at L. 158, chap. 69), amendatory thereof, but which were abandoned, without compliance with the conditions as to residence or proof, fifteen years before their selection as lieu lands under the grant of July 25, 1866 (14 Stat. at L. 239, chap. 242), to the Oregon Central Railroad Company, were not "reserved" from sale, within the meaning of that act, so as to prevent the grant from attaching to such lands, although the donation notification had not been formally canceled.

[No. 188.]

Argued March 4, 1903. Decided May 4, 1903.

APPREAL from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the Circuit Court for the District of Oregon for the cancelation of a patent issued by the United States to a railroad company for lands selected by it as within the indemnity limits of a congressional grant. Reversed and remanded to the Circuit Court, with directions to dismiss the bill.

See same case below, 48 C. C. A. 520, 109 Fed. 514.

NOTE.—As to land grants to railroads—see note to Kansas P. R. Co. v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 28 L. ed. U. S. 794.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brown:

This was a bill in equity filed by the United States, in the circuit court for the district of Oregon, to compel a reconveyance *by the railroad company, as the successor[187] and assignee of the Oregon Central Railroad Company, of certain lands within the indemnity limits of the land grant to such company of July 25, 1866 (14 Stat. at L. 239, chap. 242), for which land one John W. Hines, on November 22, 1853, seventeen years before the definite location of the line of the road, had filed a donation notification under the Oregon donation act of September 27, 1850 (9 Stat. at L. 496, chap. 76), and the act of February 14, 1853 (10 Stat. at L. 158, chap. 69), amendatory thereto. These lands the President of the United States, on July 12, 1871, patented to the railroad company by an alleged mistake and without the knowledge of the adverse claim of Hines. By reason of this prior donation the patent was averred to be void, and its cancelation was prayed under the act of March 3, 1887 (24 Stat. at L. 556, chap. 376, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1595), authorizing the Attorney General to institute necessary proceedings to cancel patents erroneously issued to railroad companies.

The defendant in its plea averred an approval of its map of definite location January 29, 1870, a selection of the lands prior to July 12, 1871, and the further fact that Hines abandoned the land without having paid for it, or residing thereon four years; nor was he residing thereon at the time the defendant selected the same.

The circuit court decreed the cancelation of the patent, and the court of appeals affirmed the decree.

Mr. Maxwell Evarts argued the cause and filed a brief for appellant:

The status of indemnity lands at the time of selection by the railroad is what determines its right thereto.

Ryan v. Central P. R. Co. 99 U. S. 388, 25 L. ed. 305.

Whatever interest in the land (if any) Hines acquired by the filing of his donation notification at once reverted to the government upon his abandonment of the land.

Hall v. Russell, 101 U. S. 503, 25 L. ed. 829; Vance v. Burbank, 101 U. S. 514, 25 L. ed. 929; Maynard v. Hill, 125 U. S. 190, 31 L. ed. 654, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 723.

If the patent to the land in dispute was canceled and the land restored to the public domain, the railroad company would be free to again select it and demand from the United States a new patent therefor. This is a sufficient ground for dismissing the bill.

United States v. Central P. R. Co. 26 Fed. 479; Germania Iron Co. v. United States, 165 U. S. 379, 41 L. ed. 754, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 337; United States v. San Jacinto Tin Co. 125 U. S. 273, 31 L. ed. 747, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 850.

Mr. Charles W. Russell argued the cause and filed a brief for appellee:

The practice of the Land Department has been to treat land subject to a valid donation notification as other than public lands. A new entry was not allowed without a contest, and such claims were held to be excepted from grants of public land to railroad companies, though not mentioned in excepting clauses.

Oregon & C. R. Co. v. Kuebel, 22 Land Dec. 308; Dyer v. Oregon & C. R. Co. 23 Land Dec. 569.

The words "public lands" are habitually used in our legislation to describe such as are subject to sale or other disposal under general laws.

Newhall v. Sanger, 92 U. S. 763, 23 L. ed. 769; Bardon v. Northern P. R. Co. 145 U. S. 538, 36 L. ed. 806, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 856.

Admitting that the conditions on which the donation was made had to be, and had not been complied with prior to 1870,—that Hines had gone away from the land and was not then residing on it,—in spite of all this, the land was not free public land.

See Lee v. Summers, 2 Or. 266; Blakesly v. Caywood, 4 Or. 279; Chapman v. School Dist. No. 1, Deady, 108 Fed. Cas. No. 2,607.

Mr. Justice Brown delivered the opinion of the court:

This case is similar to two recent cases bearing the same title, in the first one of which (189 U. S. 103, ante, 726, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 615) a patent of certain lands within the indemnity limits of the same road, dated February 20, 1893, was canceled in favor of certain entrymen under the homestead laws of the United States, who had settled upon these lands at sundry dates from 1869 to [188]*1890, and before the defendant company had selected the lands in question as indemnity lands, or had received a patent. The court found that, "when the company's lists were approved, neither the Commissioner nor the Secretary had any knowledge of the adverse claims of the above settlers to the lands upon which they respectively resided;" and held that the Land Department had no authority, simply upon the definite location of the road, to withdraw from the operation of the pre-emption and homestead laws lands within its indemnity limits, and that such order did not prevent an occupancy by homestead settlers within such limits up to the time of the approval of the selection made by the railroad company of lieu lands, and that, as it appeared the lands were actually occupied by homestead settlers at the time they were selected by the railroad company, such lands were not open to selection, although such selection was prior to the application of the settlers for entry under the homestead laws. It appeared in the case that the settlers had moved with due diligence to perfect and protect the right acquired by their occupancy of the lands, but were unable to obtain formal entry of the same, because the lands had not been surveyed. "At the time the settler went upon the land in good faith to make it his home and to perfect his title under the homestead laws there was nothing of record that stood in the way of his right to occupy the lands and to remain thereon until he could perfect his title by formal entry under the homestead laws."
190 U. S.

The second case was like unto the first, except that there had been a long delay by the Land Department in having the land surveyed. It was held that the Land Department had acted "with all convenient speed" within the meaning of the act of 1870 (16 Stat. at L. 94, chap. 69, § 2), making the land grant. 189 U. S. 116, ante, 732, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 620.

In both of these cases, however, the lands were in actual occupation of settlers under the homestead laws at the time selection was made by the railroad company and the patents issued.

In this case the settlement was made under the Oregon donation act (9 Stat. at L. 496, chap. 76), the 4th section of which enacts that "there shall be and hereby is, granted to every white *settler or occupant[189] of the public lands, . . . who shall have resided upon and cultivated the same for four consecutive years, and shall otherwise conform to the provisions of this act, the quantity of one-half section, or 320 acres of land," etc.; and by the 1st section of the amendatory act of 1853 (10 Stat. at L. 158, chap. 69), it was provided that settlers under the former act, in lieu of the term of continued occupation after settlement, as provided by said act, shall be permitted, after occupation for two years of the land so claimed, to pay into the hands of the surveyor or general of said territory at the rate of $1.25 per acre of the land so claimed. The plea alleges that Hines abandoned the land without having paid for it under the act of 1853, or residing on it for four years under the original act; and the case turns upon the question whether, by the mere filing of the donation notification in 1853, and the subsequent abandonment of the lands, they fall within the category of those which had been "granted, sold, reserved, occupied by homestead settlers, pre-empted or otherwise disposed of," within the meaning of the act of July 25, 1866, granting lands for the construction of this road. Clearly the lands do not fall literally within either of the above designations, and, unless a claim existing of record to the lands—which claim had in fact been abandoned for fifteen years—operates to prevent the selection of such lands by the railroad company, such company takes a good title to them.

That a railway grant does not attach to lands which at the time of the definite location of the land have been sold, pre-empted, reserved, or otherwise disposed of by the United States for any purpose, has been so often decided by this court as to be no longer open to question. Leavenworth, L. & G. R. Co. v. United States, 92 U. S. 733, 23 L. ed. 634; Newhall v. Sanger, 92 U. S. 761, 23 L. ed. 769; Doolan v. Carr, 125 U. S. 618, 31 L. ed. 844, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1228; United States v. McLaughlin, 127 U. S. 428, 32 L. ed. 213, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1177; Cameron v. United States, 148 U. S. 301, 37 L. ed. 459, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 595; Carr v. Quigley, 149 U. S. 652, 37 L. ed. 885, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep.

961. These cases, however, merely apply the language of the statutes to variant circumstances. Neither of them turns upon the effect of a claim which has been canceled or abandoned before or after the attachment of the railroad grant, either by the definite location of the line or by *the selection of the lands as lieu lands within the indemnity limits.

That question was first considered in Kansas P. R. Co. v. Dunmeyer, 113 U. S. 639, 28 L. ed. 1125, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 566, which involved the title to part of an odd-numbered section within the place limits of the Union Pacific Railroad Company's grants of 1862, 1864, and 1866. The facts were that one Miller made a homestead entry upon this section July 20, 1856, which was valid if the land was then public land. The line of definite location was filed September 21, 1866, so that the entry of Miller brought the land within the exception in the grant as land to which the homestead claim attached at the time the line of the road was definitely fixed. It was argued by the company that, although the homestead entry had attached to the land, and Miller had entered upon it within the time prescribed by law, erected a house upon it, and brought his family to live upon it, and made the tract his home until the spring of 1870, yet that he afterwards abandoned his homestead claim, bought the land from the railroad company, and paid for it, and sold the land to Dunmeyer, who had obtained a conveyance from the company. From this it was argued that the exception no longer operated, and the land had reverted to the company. But it was held that, as Miller's claim was an existing one of public record when the railroad map was filed, it was excepted from the land grant, notwithstanding the subsequent abandonment. The case is readily distinguishable from the one under consideration in the fact that Miller had not only entered upon the land, but was in actual possession of it at the time of the definite location of the road, and that he did not abandon his entry until nearly four years after the line of definite location was filed.

A case not dissimilar is that of Bardon v. Northern P. R. Co. 145 U. S. 535, 36 L. ed. 806, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 856. That case arose from a land grant to the Northern Pacific Company of July 2, 1864 (13 Stat. at L. 365, chap. 217), under which act the company proceeded to designate the general route of its road, and afterwards to have its line definitely fixed. The date when the line was definitely fixed is not stated in the report, and is not treated as material, but it appears that on September 12, 1855, one [191] Robinson settled upon the land, filed *his declaration under the pre-emption laws, but died without filing proof or paying the government for the land. On August 5, 1865, this pre-emption claim was canceled for alleged failure to furnish proof of continuous residence prior to July 30, 1857. It was held that, as it appeared the premises had been taken up on the pre-emption claim of Robinson before the railroad grant took effect, and that the cancelation had not then been made, nor for more than a year afterwards, such cancelation of the pre-emption entry did not restore it to the public domain so as to bring it under the operation of previous legislation which applied to land then public.

In the consideration of the present case, we are not embarrassed by either of these adjudications, since in one case the lands were not only actually occupied by the homestead claimant at the time the railroad grant took effect, but in both cases the proof of such occupation was of record in the proper office, and the lands were abandoned in one case, and the certificate canceled in the other after that date, while in this case the land was abandoned fifteen years before the lands were selected by the company, and nothing remained to indicate that the land was reserved, except the donation notification in the office of the surveyor general.

Two other cases are more directly in point. In Hastings & D. R. Co. v. Whitney, 132 U. S. 357, 33 L. ed. 363, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 112, the grant was made to the railroad July 4, 1866, and the line definitely located March 7, 1867. In May, 1865, one Turner applied, through his attorney, to enter the land in question as a homestead. The affidavit did not state that Turner's family, or any member thereof, was residing on the land, or that there was any improvement thereon, and, as a matter of fact, no member of his family was residing, or ever did reside, on said land, and no improvement was made thereon by anyone. The entry was allowed and stood upon the records of the Land Office uncanceled until September 30, 1872, when the entry was canceled. The land was subsequently, in 1877, entered by Whitney as a homestead and a patent delivered. It was held that the homestead entry of Turner excepted it from the operation of the land grant, notwithstanding the entry was invalid on its face. "So long as it *remains[192] a subsisting entry of record, whose legality has been passed upon by the land authorities, and their action remains unreversed, it is such an appropriation of the tract as segregates it from the public domain, and, therefore, precludes it from subsequent grants."

In Whitney v. Taylor, 158 U. S. 85, 39 L. ed. 906, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 796, one Jones, in May, 1854, settled upon a quarter section of public land in California, and as soon as the land was surveyed (in 1857) declared his intention to claim it as a pre-emption right, paid the fees required by law, and caused notice of the same to be filed in the proper government record. He occupied the tract until 1859, when he left for England and never returned. The land was found to be within the place limits of the grant to the Central Pacific Railroad Company of 1862. This company filed its map of definite location in 1864, and demanded the section in question. In 1885 the pre-emption entry of Jones was canceled. It was held that, the tract being subject to the claim of Jones at the time when the grant to the railroad company took effect, it was excepted from the operation of that grant, and that after the cancelation of that entry it became part of the public domain, and that such cancelation did not inure to the benefit of the railroad company.

The latest case upon the subject, however, is that of Northern P. R. Co. v. De Lacey, 174 U. S. 622, 43 L. ed. 1111, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 791. In that case the railroad company had filed its map of definite location March 26, 1884. On April 9, 1869, one John Flett filed a declaratory statement of his intention to purchase the land under the pre-emption laws. In the fall of the same year, Flett left the land and did not thereafter reside on the same, although it appears that, in September, 1870, he went to the local land office and told the officers that he had come to prove his claim. He was told that he had lost it, as it had become railroad land. He acquiesced in this statement. In 1887, eighteen years after his original entry, Flett submitted proof in support of his pre-emption claim, founded upon his declaratory statement. A hearing was had in the presence of all the parties, which finally resulted in a decision of the Secretary of the Interior, September 28, 1891, awarding the [193] land in controversy *to the railroad company. Flett's declaratory statement was not formally canceled upon the records until December 23, 1891. A suit brought in the circuit court by the railroad company resulted in its favor, but the decree was reversed by the court of appeals, and the case brought here for review.

It was contended that at the time, March 26, 1884, when the map of definite location was filed, the declaratory statement of Flett, filed in the local land office in 1869, remained there as a record, and was an assertion of a pre-emption claim, and that, under the case of Whitney v. Taylor, 158 U. S. 85, 39 L. ed. 906, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 796, the land described in that statement was excepted from the grant to the railroad company. The question was presented, whether the proceedings in the case of Flett were of such a character as to prevent the grant to the company from taking effect at the time of filing its map of definite location, March 26, 1884. It was held that, under the 2d section of the act of July 14, 1870 (16 Stat. at L. 279, chap. 272), claimants of pre-emption rights must make proper proof and payment of the lands claimed within eighteen months after the date prescribed for filing their declaratory notices shall have expired; that under the act of March 3, 1871 (16 Stat. at L. 601), twelve months in addition to that provided in the first act were given to the claimants to make proof and payment; that, adding the eighteen months given by the first act to the twelve months given by the second act, all claimants of pre-emption rights were given thirty months to make the proper proof and payment for the lands claimed; and that "whether such proof and payment were made would be matter of record, and if they were not so made the original claim was canceled by operation of law, 190 U. S.

and required no cancelation on the records of the Land Office to carry the forfeiture into effect. The law forfeited the right and canceled the entry just as effectually as if the fact were evidenced by an entry upon the record." The case of Whitney v. Taylor was distinguished upon the ground that, in that case, "there was no period within which a pre-emptor was compelled to prove up and pay for his claim, except that it should be done before the land was offered at public sale by the proclamation of the President." It was held that, as the thirty months allowed *to Flett had expired years before the [194] filing of the map of definite location, there was no existing claim at that time, and that the grant of the railroad company took effect. "Thereafter there was no claim, for it had ceased and determined, and with reference to the right it was of no more validity after the expiration of that time than if the statement had never been filed."

Recurring now to the case under consideration, it appears that by the 6th section of the Oregon donation act (9 Stat. at L. 498, chap. 76), it was incumbent upon the settler to notify the surveyor general, within three months from the commencement of his settlement, of the precise tract claimed by him; and by § 7, within twelve months from the time the settlement commenced, he must prove to the satisfaction of the surveyor general that the settlement and cultivation required by the act had been commenced, and that at any time after the expiration of four years from such settlement might prove the fact of continual residence and cultivation required by the 4th section, when, upon such proof being made, the surveyor general issues the proper certificate, forwards the same to the Commissioner of the General Land Office, whose duty it is to issue patents for the land.

It is true that by the act of July 26, 1894 (28 Stat. at L. 122, chap. 163, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1522), where proof of settlement had been made under the donation acts and notice given as required by law, but there had been a failure to execute and file in the Land Office proof of continued residence and cultivation of the land so settled upon, so as to entitle the donees to patents, such claimants, their heirs, devisees, assigns, and grantees, were given the right, until January 21, 1896, "to make and file final proofs and fully establish their rights to donations" under the aforesaid act of Congress, and, upon failure to do so, they were to be held to have abandoned their claims. But by § 2 of the same act the Commissioner of the Land Office was given the right, if such right existed, "to allow or direct hearings to be instituted to show that a donation claimant has abandoned the lands described in his notice, or prevent the Commissioner, when it is proved that such claim is invalid or abandoned, from canceling *the same upon [195] the official records, and thereafter disposing of the lands as a part of the public domain;" and by § 3, "nothing in this act contained shall be construed to impair or affect any adverse claims arising under any law of the United States other than said donation act, to or in respect of the lands in this act referred to."

It is entirely clear that the position of the government in this case is not strengthened by anything contained in this act, since it was intended only for the relief of those who had resided continuously upon and cultivated the lands specified in the original donation notification, but had through mistake or negligence omitted to make and file their final proofs and fully establish their rights to such donations. Such donees were given until January 1, 1896, to make such final proof and obtain their patents; but they were not given thereby the right to perfect their claims to lands which they had abandoned before completing a continued residence of four years thereon. This inference is rendered only the more clear by the 2d section, which authorizes the Commissioner, when it is proved that such claim is invalid or abandoned, to cancel the same upon the official records, and by the 3d section, which expressly saves adverse claims arising under any law other than the donation act.

It is clear that title to the land here in question never passed from the United States under the donation acts of 1850 and 1853, since the donation was only made to those "who shall have resided upon and cultivated the same for four consecutive years, and shall otherwise conform to the provisions of this act." Hall v. Russell, 101 U. S. 503, 25 L. ed. 829; Maynard v. Hill, 125 U. S. 190, 31 L. ed. 654, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 723. As these conditions were never complied with, the land continued to be the property of the United States, to which the railroad grant subsequently attached, unless such grant was defeated by the fact that the donation notification still remained of record in the office of the surveyor general. As the land had neither been "granted, sold, . . . occupied by homestead settlers, pre-empted, or otherwise disposed of," the bill can only be sustained upon the ground that at the time land was selected it was "reserved" from sale. But for what purpose [196]*was it reserved? Not for the donation settler, since he had abandoned the land fifteen years before; not for the United States, since every possible encumbrance had been removed from them, and they had lapsed into their original conditions of public lands, open to pre-emption or sale. It is true the donation notification had not been formally canceled, but the donation acts made no provision for such cancellation, although it may, perhaps, have been within the power of the Land Department to take such action even prior to the act of 1894. This, however, was not done, and the land might have remained in that condition permanently, had not some other person applied to enter or purchase it by showing that it had been abandoned by the original donee. But, if this may be done by an individual pre-emptor, why may not a railroad company do the same thing by claiming the land under its grant, and showing in defense to this suit that it had actually been abandoned? It may be said that presumptively the land had been reserved, as shown by the donation notification, and for aught that appeared the donee might still be in possession; but we know of no reason why the railroad company may not show the actual facts as well as an individual who might desire to enter the land upon his own account. Even admitting that the donation notification was on file in the office of the surveyor general, there was no proof, required by § 7 of the act to be filed within twelve months from the time of settlement, that the settlement and cultivation required by the act had been commenced; nor after the expiration of four years from such settlement was there any proof of continual residence or cultivation, required by the same section. The record which informed the company that the land had been settled by a donee also apprized it that the provision of the statute had not been complied with. We think that, considering the fact that fourteen years had elapsed since the original settlement, the railroad company would be authorized to infer that the donee had abandoned the land, as in fact appears to have been the case. Under the facts of this case, we think the lands were not reserved within the meaning of the granting act.

But, even if the position of the government be correct, and *the patent be subject to [197] cancellation, we see nothing to prevent the railroad company from again selecting the same land to make good its losses within the limits of its primary grant, no intermediate rights being shown to have accrued. If such be the fact, it would be useless to direct the cancellation of the patent, as it would become the duty of the Land Department to issue immediately a new one for the same property. Germania Iron Co. v. United States, 165 U. S. 379, 41 L. ed. 754, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 337; United States v. Central P. R. Co. 26 Fed. 479.

The decrees of the courts below are therefore reversed and the case remanded to the Circuit Court for the District of Oregon, with directions to dismiss the bill.

Mr. Justice McKenna, having filed the bill in this case as Attorney General, did not participate in this decision.

TERRITORY OF HAWAII, Appt.,

v.

OSAKI MANKICHI.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 197-249.)

Hawaiian annexation — effect of Newlands Resolution on criminal procedure.

Criminal proceedings by grand and petit juries as prescribed by U. S. Const. Amends. 5, 6, were not substituted for the existing criminal procedure in the Hawaiian islands by their annexation, "as a part of the territory of the United States and subject to the sovoreign dominion thereof," by the Newlands resolution of July 7, 1898 (30 Stat. at L. 750), accepting the cession theretofore made by the Republic of Hawaii, and continuing the municipal legislation of such islands not inconsistent with such resolution "nor contrary to the Constitution of the United States," until Congress should otherwise determine.

[No. 219.]

Argued March 4, 5, 1903. Decided June 1, 1903.

APPEAL from the District Court of the United States for the Territory of Hawaii to review a decree discharging on habeas corpus a person convicted of manslaughter upon an indictment not found by a grand jury and upon a verdict rendered upon the agreement of nine jurors. Reversed and remanded, with instructions to dismiss the petition.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brown:

This was a petition by Mankichi for a writ of habeas corpus to obtain his release from the Oahu convict prison, where he is confined upon conviction for manslaughter, in alleged violation of the Constitution, in that he was tried upon an indictment not found by a grand jury, and convicted by the verdict of nine out of twelve jurors, the other three dissenting from the verdict.

Following the usual course of procedure in the Republic of Hawaii, prior to its incorporation as a territory of the United States, the prisoner was tried upon an indictment much in the form of an information at common law, by the attorney general, and indorsed "a true bill, found this 4th day of May, A. D. 1899. A. Perry, first judge of the circuit court," etc.

From an order of the United States district court, discharging the prisoner, the attorney general of the territory appealed to this court.

Mr. Edmund P. Dole and Solicitor General Richards argued the cause and filed a brief for appellant:

Although the Constitution of the United States is the supreme law of the land in every state, it is settled beyond controversy that the 5th and 6th Amendments do not apply to states.

Spies v. Illinois, 123 U. S. 131, 31 L. ed. 80, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 21; Barron v. Baltimore, 7 Pet. 243, 247, 8 L. ed. 672, 674; Livingston v. Moore, 7 Pet. 469, 552, 8 L. ed. 751, 781; Fox v. Ohio, 5 How. 410, 434, 12 L. ed. 213, 223; Smith v. Maryland, 18 How. 71, 76, 15 L. ed. 269, 271; Withers v. Buckley, 20 How. 84, 91, 15 L. ed. 816, 819; Pervear v. Massachusetts, 5 Wall. 475, 479, 18 L. ed. 608, 609; Twitchell v. Pennsylvania, 7 Wall. 321, 325, 19 L. ed. 223, 224; New York Supreme Ct. Justices v. Murray, 9 Wall. 274, 278, 19 L. ed. 658, 660; Edwards v. Elliott, 21 Wall. 532, 557, 22 L. ed. 487, 492; Walker v. Sauvinet, 92 U. S. 90, 23 L. ed. 678; United States v. Cruikshank, 92 U. S. 542, 552, 23 L. ed. 588, 591; Pearson v. Yewdall, 95 U. S. 190, 24 L. ed. 436, 437; Davidson v. New Orleans, 96 U. S. 97, 101, 24 L. ed. 616, 618; Kelly v. Pittsburgh, 104 U. S. 79, 26 L. ed. 658; Presser v. Illinois, 116 U. S. 252, 265, 29 L. ed. 615, 619, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 580.

In the absence of congressional legislation directly or impliedly extending these Amendments, the like reasons apply with even greater force to a civilized nation which surrenders its sovereignty to the United States, and has nothing but its old legal machinery for protecting itself from anarchy until Congress shall provide a new government.

Barron v. Baltimore, 7 Pet. 243, 8 L. ed. 672; Ex parte Ah Oi, 13 Hawaiian Rep. 553; American Ins. Co. v. 356 Bales of Cotton, 1 Pet. 511, 7 L. ed. 242; Geofroy v. Riggs, 133 U. S. 258, 33 L. ed. 642, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 295; Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U. S. 244, 45 L. ed. 1088, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 770.

Solicitor General Richards also filed a separate brief for appellant:

Grand juries were not used nor unanimous verdicts required to convict in the Hawaiian islands at the time of the cession.

Republic v. Edwards, 11 Hawaiian Rep. 571.

Congress had power to provide a temporary government, not subject to all the restrictions of the Constitution, until it could frame a permanent government and incorporate the islands as a part of the United States.

Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U. S. 244, 45 L. ed. 1088, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 770.

The resolution of annexation did not incorporate the islands within the United States and render them subject to all the limitations of the Constitution applicable throughout the United States.

Ibid.

The existing government continued in the exercise of all its powers, under the resolution, until Congress should organize the islands.

Edwards Case, 11 Hawaiian Rep. 571.

The distinction between natural or fundamental rights and artificial or remedial rights, under the Constitution, is pointed out by Mr. Justice Brown in the opinion in Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U. S. 282, 45 L. ed. 1104, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 770.

That the right to be indicted by a grand jury and be tried by a petit jury is not fundamental, that the 5th and 6th Amendments enforcing this right apply only to the Federal courts, and that a citizen of the United States in a criminal prosecution in a state court may be deprived of his life, liberty, or property, by due process of law, without indictment by a grand jury and without unanimity in the verdict of a petit jury, is the established doctrine of this court.

Brown v. New Jersey, 175 U. S. 172, 44 L. ed. 119, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77; Bolln v. Nebraska, 176 U. S. 83, 44 L. ed. 382, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 287; Maxwell v. Dow, 176 U. S. 581, 44 L. ed. 597, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 448, 494.

Chief Justice Marshall said in American Ins. Co. v. 356 Bales of Cotton, 1 Pet. 541, 7

L. ed. 254, that acquired territory becomes a part of the nation to which it is annexed either on the terms stipulated in the treaty of cession, or on such as the new master shall impose.

If Congress is not ready to construct a complete government for the conquered territory, it may establish a temporary government, which is not subject to all the restrictions of the Constitution.

Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U. S. 244, 45 L. ed. 1088, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 770.

The presumption is that the government of Hawaii in offering to cede the islands, and Congress in accepting this proposition and annexing them, intended that the existing government of the islands should continue without interruption until another could be provided by Congress.

Holden v. Hardy, 169 U. S. 366, 42 L. ed. 780, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 383.

Mr. Edward P. Dole also filed a separate brief for appellant:

The law does not countenance the absurd or sanction the impossible.

Re Ross, 140 U. S. 464, 35 L. ed. 586, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 897.

The construction which both parties put upon the contract of annexation is beyond dispute.

22 Ops. Atty. Gen. 153, 249.

Whether certain provisions of the Constitution of the United States are applicable to the annexed territory depends upon its situation and its relations with the United States.

Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U. S. 244, 45 L. ed. 1088, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 770.

Messrs. Frederic R. Coudert, Jr., and Paul Fuller argued the cause, and, with Messrs. George A. Davis, F. M. Brooks, and Charles Fred Adams, filed a brief for appellee:

The power of Congress to deal with newly acquired territory has been held to be absolute and almost unlimited.

Insular Cases, 182 U. S. 1-391, 45 L. ed. 1041-1146, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 742, 743, 762, 770, 827; Church of Jesus Christ of L. D. S. v. United States, 136 U. S. 44, 34 L. ed. 491, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 792; Shively v. Bowlby, 152 U. S. 1, 48, 38 L. ed. 331, 349, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 548.

The difference in legal status between the treaty-acquired Spanish possessions and Congress-annexed Hawaii is stated in terms by Mr. Justice Gray in Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U. S. 345, 45 L. ed. 1128, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 770.

Where the Constitution has been once formally extended by Congress to territories, neither Congress nor the territorial legislature can enact laws inconsistent therewith.

Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U. S. 271, 45 L. ed. 1100, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 770.

Congressional extension carries with it the so-called common-law amendments.

Springville v. Thomas, 166 U. S. 707, 41 L. ed. 1172, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 717.

The situation of Hawaii was such that Congress evidently intended to incorporate the islands into the United States.

The present law allowing conviction upon agreement by nine jurors was not passed until 1847.

Hawaii v. Edwards, 11 Hawaiian Rep. 571.

All the details discoverable by reference to the legislation and the Constitution mentioned in the joint resolution are, both in logic and in law, to be deemed enacted by Congress precisely as if every syllable of those details had been actually and explicitly spelled out in the literal text of the resolution itself.

Broom, Legal Maxims, 7th Am. ed. p. 625.

The requirement of the Constitution, that prosecutions must be initiated by the presentment or indictment of a grand jury, by necessary implication gives to the courts invested with the jurisdiction to entertain such prosecutions, all powers and authority necessary for the organizing and utilizing of the grand jury.

United States v. Hill, 1 Brock. 156, Fed. Cas. No. 15,364; Ex parte Wilson, 114 U. S. 425, 29 L. ed. 92, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 935; Clawson v. United States, 114 U. S. 487, 29 L. ed. 183, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 949; Ex parte Edwards, 13 Hawaiian Rep. 47.

To argue that the words "nor contrary to the Constitution" mean nothing, but were employed to show that Congress understood the Constitution to carry some vague kind of humanitarianism based upon a supposed "law of nature" into Hawaii, is utterly unsound and wholly fanciful.

Messrs. Paul Fuller, Frederic R. Coudert, Jr., George A. Davis, and F. M. Brooks filed an additional brief for appellee:

Among the "essential principles upon which our system of government rests, and which are embodied in the Constitution," is the right of everyone living under the sovereignty of the United States to be free from any prosecution for crime at the hands of the central authority to which the government of the Union was deputed, unless after indictment by a grand jury of his fellows; and the right to be acquitted, unless found guilty by the unanimous verdict of a petit jury of twelve.

Callan v. Wilson, 127 U. S. 549, 550, 32 L. ed. 226, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1301.

It is contrary to the Constitution of the United States that any person should be held to answer for a capital crime unless on a presentment or indictment of a grand jury, and that in a criminal prosecution a conviction should be had by the verdict of nine members of the jury.

Ex parte Bain, 121 U. S. 1, 30 L. ed. 849, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 781; Thompson v. Utah, 170 U. S. 349, 42 L. ed. 1066, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 620; Springville v. Thomas, 166 U. S. 707, 41 L. ed. 1172, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 717.

Messrs. George A. Davis and F. M. Brooks also filed a brief for appellee:

This prisoner was tried in United States territory without the indictment of a grand jury by a circuit judge, who was continued in office under the Newlands Resolution. The President of the United States had the power to remove the judge who tried this prisoner, and yet it is contended that the Constitution did not apply. The words of the Resolution are, "Municipal legislation not contrary to the Constitution of the United States shall remain in force until Congress shall otherwise determine."

See United States v. Arredondo, 6 Pet. 691-748, 8 L. ed. 547-568; Haver v. Yaker, 9 Wall. 32, sub nom. Jecker v. Magee, 19 L. ed. 571; Davis v. Police Jury, 9 How. 280, 13 L. ed. 138.

The national government of the Union, by the voice of the people, had added these islands and made them a part of the body politic and corporate, and the United States government was then invested with supreme authority here for national purposes, with power to exercise all such authority that was expressly or impliedly committed to its jurisdiction by the Constitution.

Potter's Dwarrr. Stat. p. 333.

Congress, which is only the creature of the Constitution, cannot make any change in the fundamental law.

Potter's Dwarrr. Stat. p. 355.

The Constitution of the United States is an original, written, Federal, and social compact, freely and voluntarily entered into by the several states and ratified by the people, and the Federal government is bound by that Constitution to every citizen of the United States.

Ibid.

Trials, therefore, at least such as are criminal, are to be regular and conducted in their essential features, not by statute but by the common law. This is the constitutional guaranty.

Potter's Dwarrr. Stat. p. 437.

Grand juries alone can find probable cause to put a prisoner on trial under an indictment by finding a true bill.

Ex parte Bain, 121 U. S. 1, 2, 30 L. ed. 849, 850, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 781; Hill v. People, 16 Mich. 351; United States v. Taylor, 11 Fed. 471; Cancemi v. People, 18 N. Y. 129; Ex parte Wilson, 114 U. S. 417, 29 L. ed. 89, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 935.

The conviction was absolutely null and void. There was nothing before the court on which it could hear evidence or pronounce sentence. This case comes within the principles laid down by this court.

Ex parte Lange, 18 Wall. 163, 21 L. ed. 872; Ex parte Parks, 93 U. S. 18, 23 L. ed. 787; Ex parte Wilson, 114 U. S. 425, 29 L. ed. 92, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 935.

Any nation acquiring territory by treaty, or otherwise, must hold it subject to the Constitution and laws of its own government, and not according to the laws of the government ceding it.

1 Wharton's Dig. Int. Law, p. 4; Pollard v. Hagan, 3 How. 212, 11 L. ed. 565.

The rights and powers of sovereignty of a nation over its territory cease on the transfer of that sovereignty to another government by cession of its territory. The power to preserve peace and order may remain in the officers previously appointed by the ceding state until the actual presence of the agents of the succeeding government, but this does not imply that sovereign power remains in the former nation.

190 U. S.

United States v. Reynes, 9 How. 127, 13 L. ed. 74; Davis v. Police Jury, 9 How. 280, 13 L. ed. 138; Montault v. United States, 12 How. 47, 13 L. ed. 887; United States v. D'Auterive, 10 How. 609, 13 L. ed. 560.

Every action of the supreme court of the Hawaiian islands relative to the United States, which impairs the supremacy of the national authority and the rights of persons under the Constitution of the United States, is void.

Texas v. Wight, 7 Wall. 700, 19 L. ed. 227; Horn v. Lockhart, 17 Wall. 570, 21 L. ed. 657; Sprott v. United States, 20 Wall. 459, 22 L. ed. 371.

The provision in the national Constitution relating to trials by jury and to criminal prosecutions applies to the territories of the United States.

Thompson v. Utah, 170 U. S. 343, 42 L. ed. 1061, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 620.

The Hawaiian islands at the time of the finding of the true bill upon this indictment were territory of the United States. The United States acquired this territory by resolution of Congress and the Senate, and accepted it, and they held it subject to the Constitution of the United States government, and not according to the laws of the Hawaiian islands, which in this respect are contrary to, and in direct conflict with, the United States Constitution.

1 Wharton's Dig. Int. Law, p. 4; Pollard v. Hagan, 3 How. 212, 11 L. ed. 565.

Mr. Justice Brown delivered the opinion of the court:

The question involved in this case is an extremely simple one. The difficulty is in fixing upon the principles applicable to its solution. By a joint resolution adopted by Congress, July 7, 1898 (30 Stat. at L. 750), known as the Newlands resolution, and with the consent of the Republic of Hawaii, signified in the manner provided in its Constitution, the Hawaiian islands and their dependencies were annexed "as a part of the territory of the United States, and subject to the sovereign dominion thereof," with the following condition: "The municipal legislation of the Hawaiian islands, not enacted for the fulfilment of the treaties so extinguished, and not inconsistent with this joint resolution nor contrary to the Constitution of the United States, nor to any existing treaty of the United States, shall remain in force until the Congress of the United States shall otherwise determine." The material parts of this resolution are printed in the margin.† Though the resolution was passed †Joint Resolution to Provide for Annexing the Hawaiian Islands to the United States (30 Stat. at L. 750).

Whereas the government of the Republic of Hawaii having, in due form signified its consent, in the manner provided by its Constitution, to cede, absolutely and without reserve, to the United States of America, all rights of sovereignty of whatsoever kind in and over the Hawaiian islands and their dependencies, and also to cede and transfer to the United States the

1019

[210] July 7, the *formal transfer was not made until August 12, when, at noon of that day, the American flag was raised over the government house, and the islands ceded with appropriate ceremonies to a representative of the United States. Under the conditions named in this resolution, the Hawaiian islands remained under *the name of the "Republic of Hawaii" until June 14, 1900, when they were formally incorporated by act of Congress under the name of the "territory of Hawaii." (31 Stat. at L. 141, chap. 339.) By this act the Constitution was formally extended to these islands (§ 5), and special provisions made for impaneling grand juries, and for unanimous verdicts of petty juries. (§ 83.)

The question is whether, in continuing the municipal legislation of the islands not contrary to the Constitution of the United States, it was intended to abolish at once the criminal procedure theretofore in force upon the islands, and to substitute immediately, and without new legislation, the common-law proceedings by grand and petit jury, which had been held applicable to other organized territories (Webster v. Reid, 11 How. 437, 13 L. ed. 761; American Pub. Co. v. Fisher, 166 U. S. 464, 41 L. ed. 1079, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 618; Thompson v. Utah, 170 U. S. 343, 42 L. ed. 1061, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 620), though we have also held that the states, when once admitted as such, may dispense with grand juries (Hurtado v. California, 110 U. S. 516, 28 L. ed. 232, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 111, 292), and perhaps also allow verdicts to be rendered by less than a unanimous vote (American Pub. Co. v. Fisher, 166 U. S. 464, 41 L. ed. 1079, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 618; Thompson v. Utah, 170 U. S. 343, 42 L. ed. 1061, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 620).

In fixing upon the proper construction to be given to this resolution, it is important to bear in mind the history and condition of the islands prior to their annexation by Congress. Since 1847 they had enjoyed the blessings of a civilized government, and a system of jurisprudence modeled largely upon the common law of England and the United States. Though lying in the tropical zone, the salubrity of their climate and the fertility of their soil had attracted thither large numbers of people from Europe and America, who brought with them political ideas and traditions which, about sixty years ago, found expression in the adoption of a code of laws appropriate to their new conditions. Churches were founded, schools opened, courts of justice established, and civil and criminal laws administered upon substantially the same principles which prevailed in the two countries from which most of the immigrants had come. Taking the lead, however, in a change which has since been adopted by several of the United States, no provision was made for grand juries, and criminals were prosecuted *upon indictments [212] found by judges. By a law passed in 1847, the number of a jury was fixed at twelve, but a verdict might be rendered upon the agreement of nine jurors. The question involved in this case is whether it was intended that this practice should be instantly changed, and the criminal procedure embodied in the 5th and 6th Amendments to the Constitution be adopted as of August 12, 1898, when the Hawaiian flag was hauled down and the American flag hoisted in its place.

If the words of the Newlands resolution, adopting the municipal legislation of Hawaii, "not contrary to the Constitution of the United States," be literally applied, the petitioner is entitled to his discharge, since that instrument expressly requires (Amendment 5) that "no person shall be held to answer for a capital or otherwise infamous crime, unless on a presentment or indictabsolute fee and ownership of all public, government, or Crown lands, public buildings or edifices, ports, harbors, military equipment, and all other public property of every kind and description belonging to the government of the Hawaiian Islands, together with every right and appurtenance thereunto appertaining: Therefore,

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That said cession is accepted, ratified, and confirmed, and that the said Hawaiian islands and their dependencies be, and they are hereby, annexed as a part of the territory of the United States and are subject to the sovereign dominion thereof, and that all and singular the property and rights hereinbefore mentioned are vested in the United States of America.

Until Congress shall provide for the government of such islands, all the civil, judicial, and military powers exercised by the officers of the existing government in said islands shall be vested in such person or persons, and shall be exercised in such manner, as the President of the United States shall direct; and the President shall have power to remove said officers and fill the vacancies so occasioned.

The existing treaties of the Hawaiian islands with foreign nations shall forthwith cease and determine, being replaced by such treaties as may exist, or as may be hereafter concluded, between the United States and such foreign nation. The municipal legislation of the Hawaiian islands, not enacted for the fulfilment of the treaties so extinguished, and not inconsistent with this joint resolution nor contrary to the Constitution of the United States, nor to any existing treaty of the United States, shall remain in force until the Congress of the United States shall otherwise determine.

Until legislation shall be enacted extending the United States customs laws and regulations to the Hawaiian islands, the existing customs relations of the Hawaiian islands with the United States and other countries shall remain unchanged.

There shall be no further immigration of Chinese into the Hawaiian Islands, except upon such conditions as are now or may hereafter be allowed by the laws of the United States; and no Chinese, by reason of anything herein contained, shall be allowed to enter the United States from the Hawaiian Islands.

The President shall appoint five commissioners, at least two of whom shall be residents of the Hawaiian Islands, who shall, as soon as reasonably practicable, recommend to Congress such legislation concerning the Hawaiian islands as they shall deem necessary or proper.

ment of a grand jury;" and (Amendment 6), that "in all criminal prosecutions the accused shall enjoy the right to a speedy and public trial by an impartial jury of the state and district wherein the crime shall have been committed." But there is another question underlying this and all other rules for the interpretation of statutes, and that is, What was the intention of the legislative body? Without going back to the famous case of the drawing of blood in the streets of Bologna, the books are full of authorities to the effect that the intention of the lawmaking power will prevail, even against the letter of the statute; or, as tersely expressed by Mr. Justice Swayne in Smythe v. Fiske, 23 Wall. 374, 380, 23 L. ed. 47, 49: "A thing may be within the letter of a statute and not within its meaning, and within its meaning, though not within its letter. The intention of the lawmaker is the law." A parallel expression is found in the opinion of Mr. Chief Justice Thompson of the supreme court of the state of New York (subsequently Mr. Justice Thompson of this court), in People v. Utica Ins. Co. 15 Johns. 358, 381, 8 Am. Dec. 243: "A thing which is within the intention of the makers of a statute is as much within the statute as if it were within the letter; and a thing which is within the letter of the statute is not within the statute, unless it be within the intention of the makers."

[213] Without going farther, numerous illustrations of this maxim are found in the reports of our own court. Nowhere is the doctrine more broadly stated than in United States v. Kirby, 7 Wall. 482, 19 L. ed. 278, in which an act of Congress, providing that if "any person shall knowingly and wilfully obstruct or retard the passage of the mail, or of any driver or carrier," was held not to apply to a state officer who held a warrant of arrest against a carrier for murder, the court observing that no officer of the United States was placed by his position above responsibility to the legal tribunals of the country, and to the ordinary processes for his arrest and detention when accused of felony. "All laws," said the court, "should receive a sensible construction. General terms should be so limited in their application as not to lead to injustice, oppression, or an absurd consequence. It will always, therefore, be presumed that the legislature intended exceptions to its language, which would avoid results of this character. The reason of the law in such cases should prevail over its letter." A case was cited from Plowden, holding that a statute which punished a prisoner as a felon who broke prison did not extend to a prisoner who broke out when the prison was on fire, "for he is not to be hanged because he would not stay to be burned." Similar language to that in Kirby's Case was used in Carlisle v. United States, 16 Wall. 147, 153, 21 L. ed. 426, 429.

In Atkins v. Fibre Disintegrating Co. 18 Wall. 272, 21 L. ed. 841, it was held that a suit in personam in admiralty was not a "civil suit" within the 11th section of the judiciary act, though clearly a civil suit in the general sense of that phrase, and as used in other sections of the same act. See also Re Louisville Underwriters, 134 U. S. 488, 33 L. ed. 991, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 587. So in Heydenfeldt v. Daney Gold & Silver Min. Co. 93 U. S. 634, 638, 23 L. ed. 995, 996, it was said by Mr. Justice Davis: "If a literal interpretation of any part of it [a statute] would operate unjustly, or lead to absurd results, or be contrary to the evident meaning of the act taken as a whole, it should be rejected. There is no better way of discovering its true meaning, when expressions in it are rendered ambiguous by their connection with other clauses, than by considering the necessity for it, and the causes which induced its enactment." To the same effect are the Church of Holy Trinity v. United States, 143 U. S. 457, 36 L. ed. 226, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 511, in which many cases are cited and reviewed, and **Lau Ow Bew v. United States*, 144 U. S. 47, 59, 36 L. ed. 340, 345, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 517. In this latter case it was held that a statute requiring the permission of the Chinese government, and the identification of "every Chinese person other than a laborer, who may be entitled by said treaty or this act [of Congress] to come within the United States," did not apply to "Chinese merchants already domiciled in the United States, who, having left the country for temporary purposes, animo revertendi, seek to re-enter it on their return to their business and their homes." Said the Chief Justice: "Nothing is better settled than that statutes should receive a sensible construction, such as will effectuate the legislative intention, and, if possible, so as to avoid an unjust or an absurd conclusion."

Two recent English cases are instructive in this connection: In Plumstead Dist. Bd. of Works v. Spackman, L. R. 13 Q. B. Div. 878, 887, it was said by the Master of Rolls, afterwards Lord Esher: "If there are no means of avoiding such an interpretation of the statute" (as will amount to a great hardship), "a judge must come to the conclusion that the legislature by inadvertence has committed an act of legislative injustice; but, to my mind, a judge ought to struggle with all the intellect that he has, and with all the vigor of mind that he has, against such an interpretation of an act of Parliament; and, unless he is forced to come to a contrary conclusion, he ought to assume that it is impossible that the legislature could have so intended." See also Ex parte Walton, L. R. 17 Ch. Div. 746.

Is there any room for construction in this case, or, are the words of the resolution so plain that construction is impossible? There are many reasons which induce us to hold that the act was not intended to interfere with the existing practice, when such interference would result in imperiling the peace and good order of the islands. The main objects of the resolution were, 1st, to accept the cession of the islands theretofore made by the Republic of Hawaii, and to annex the same "as a part of the territory of the [215] United States, and subject to the sovereign dominion thereof;" 2d, to abolish all existing treaties with various nations, and to recognize only treaties between the United States and such foreign nations; 3d, to continue the existing laws and customs regulations, so far as they were not *inconsistent with the resolution, or contrary to the Constitution, until Congress should otherwise determine. From the terms of this resolution it is evident that it was intended to be merely temporary and provisional; that no change in the government was contemplated, and that, until further legislation, the Republic of Hawaii continued in existence. Even its name was not changed until 1900, when the "territory of Hawaii" was organized. The laws of the United States were not extended over the islands until the organic act was passed on April 30, 1900, when, so careful was Congress not to disturb the existing condition of things any further than was necessary, that it was provided (§ 5) that only "the laws of the United States which are not locally inapplicable shall have the same force and effect within the said territory as elsewhere in the United States." There was apparently some discretion left to the courts in this connection. Indianapolis & St. L. R. Co. v. Horst, 93 U. S. 291, 299, 23 L. ed. 898, 901. The fact, already mentioned, that Congress, in this organic act, inserted a provision for the empanelling of grand juries and for the unanimity of verdicts, indicates an understanding that the previous practice had been pursued up to that time, and that a change in the existing law was contemplated.

Of course, under the Newlands Resolution, any new legislation must conform to the Constitution of the United States; but how far the exceptions to the existing municipal legislation were intended to abolish existing laws must depend somewhat upon circumstances. Where the immediate application of the Constitution required no new legislation to take the place of that which the Constitution abolished, it may be well held to have taken immediate effect: but where the application of a procedure hitherto well known and acquiesced in left nothing to take its place, without new legislation, the result might be so disastrous that we might well say that it could not have been within the contemplation of Congress. In all probability the contingency which has actually arisen occurred to no one at the time. If it had, and its consequences were foreseen, it is incredible that Congress should not have provided against it.

[216] If the negative words of the resolution, "nor contrary to the Constitution of the United States," be construed as imposing *upon the islands every provision of a Constitution which must have been unfamiliar to a large number of their inhabitants, and for which no previous preparation had been made, the consequences in this particular connection would be that every criminal in the Hawaiian islands convicted of an infamous offense between August 12, 1898, and June 14, 1900, when the act organizing the territorial government took effect, must be set at large; and every verdict in a civil case rendered by less than a unanimous jury held for naught. Surely, such a result could not have been within the contemplation of Congress. It is equally manifest that such could not have been the intention of the Republic of Hawaii in surrendering its autonomy. Until then it was an independent nation, exercising all the powers and prerogatives of complete sovereignty. It certainly could not have anticipated that, in dealing with another independent nation, and yielding up its sovereignty, it had denuded itself, by a negative pregnant, of all power of enforcing its criminal laws according to the methods which had been in vogue for sixty years, and was adopting a new procedure for which it had had no opportunity of making preparation. The legislature of the Republic had just adjourned, not to convene again until some time in 1900, and not actually convening until 1901. The resolution on its face bears evidence of having been intended merely for a temporary purpose, and to give time to the Republic to adapt itself to such form of territorial government as should afterwards be adopted in its organic act.

The language of Mr. Buchanan, then Secretary of State, in holding that the military government established in California did not cease to exist with the treaty of peace, but continued as a government de facto until Congress should provide a territorial government, is peculiarly applicable to this case. "The great law of necessity justifies this conclusion. The consent of the people is irresistibly inferred from the fact that no civilized community could possibly desire to abrogate an existing government, when the alternative presented would be to place themselves in a state of anarchy, beyond the protection of all laws, and reduce them to the unhappy necessity of submitting to the dominion of the strongest." [Cross v. Harrison] 16 How. 184, 14 L. ed. 897.

*It is insisted, however, that, as the common law of England had been adopted in Hawaii by the Code of 1897, it was within the power of the courts to summon a grand jury, and that such action might have been taken and criminals tried upon indictments properly found, and convicted by a unanimous verdict. The suggestion is rather fanciful than real, since § 1109 of the Code of 1897, adopting the common law of England, contained a proviso that "no person shall be subject to criminal proceedings except as provided by the Hawaiian laws." These laws provided expressly (§ 616, Penal Laws of 1897) as follows: "The necessary bills of indictment shall be duly prepared by a legal prosecuting officer, and be duly presented to the presiding judge of a court before the arraignment of the accused, and such judge shall, after examination, certify upon each bill of indictment whether he finds the same a true bill or not." The question thus squarely presented to every judge in the Republic was, whether he was bound to summon a grand jury under the Newlands resolution, when no provision existed by law for impaneling the same, or their payment, and when, in so doing, he was obliged to ignore the plain statute of his own country.

It is not intended here to decide that the words "nor contrary to the Constitution of the United States" are meaningless. Clearly, they would be operative upon any municipal legislation thereafter adopted, and upon any proceedings thereafter had, when the application of the Constitution would not result in the destruction of existing provisions conducive to the peace and good order of the community. Therefore we should answer without hesitation in the negative the question put by counsel for the petitioner in their brief: "Would municipal statutes of Hawaii, allowing a conviction of treason on circumstantial evidence, or on the testimony of one witness, depriving a person of liberty by the will of the legislature and without process or confiscating private property for public use without compensation, remain in force after an annexation of the territory to the United States, which was conditioned upon the extinction of all legislation contrary to the Constitution?" We would even go farther, and say that most, if not all, the privileges and immunities contained in the [218] Bill of Rights of the Constitution *were intended to apply from the moment of annexation; but we place our decision of this case upon the ground that the two rights alleged to be violated in this case are not fundamental in their nature, but concern merely a method of procedure which sixty years of practice had shown to be suited to the conditions of the islands, and well calculated to conserve the rights of their citizens to their lives, their property, and their well being.

Inasmuch as we are of opinion that the status of the islands and the powers of their provisional government were measured by the Newlands Resolution, and the case has been argued upon that theory, we have not deemed it necessary to consider what would have been its position had the important words "nor contrary to the Constitution of the United States" been omitted, or to reconsider the questions which arose in the Insular Tariff Cases regarding the power of Congress to annex territory without, at the same time, extending the Constitution over it. Of course, for the reasons already stated, the questions involved in this case could arise only from such as occurred between the taking effect of the joint resolution of July 7, 1898, and the act of April 30, 1900, establishing the territorial government.

The decree of the District Court for the territory of Hawaii must be reversed, and the case remanded to that court, with instructions to dismiss the petition.

Mr. Justice White and Mr. Justice McKenna, concurring:

The court in its opinion disposes of the case solely by a construction of the act of Congress. Conceding, arguendo, that such view is wholly adequate to decide the cause, I concur in the meaning of the act as expounded in the opinion of the court, and, in the main, with the reasoning by which that interpretation is elucidated. I prefer, however, to place my concurrence in the judgment upon an additional ground which seems to me more fundamental. That ground is this: That as a consequence of the relation which the Hawaiian islands occupied towards the United States, growing out of the resolution of annexation, the provisions of the 5th and 6th Amendments *of [219] the Constitution concerning grand and petit juries were not applicable to that territory, because whilst the effect of the resolution of annexation was to acquire the islands, and subject them to the sovereignty of the United States, neither the terms of the resolution nor the situation which arose from it served to incorporate the Hawaiian islands into the United States, and make them an integral part thereof. In other words, in my opinion, the case is controlled by the decision in Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U. S. 244, 45 L. ed. 1088, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 770.

The resolution of Congress annexing the islands, it seems to me, makes the conclusion just stated quite clear, and manifests that it was not intended to incorporate the islands eo instanti, but, on the contrary, that the purpose was, whilst acquiring them, to leave the permanent relation which they were to bear to the government of the United States to await the subsequent determination of Congress. By the resolution the islands were annexed, not absolutely, but merely "as a part of the territory of the United States," and were simply declared to be subject to its sovereignty. The minutest examination of the resolution fails to disclose any provision declaring that the islands are incorporated and made a part of the United States, or endowing them with the rights which would arise from such relation. On the contrary, the resolution repels the conclusion of incorporation. Thus it provided for the government of the islands by a commission to be appointed by the President, until Congress should have opportunity to create the government which would be deemed best. Further, it stipulated "until legislation shall be enacted extending the United States customs laws and regulations to the Hawaiian islands, the existing customs relations of the Hawaiian islands with the United States and other countries shall remain unchanged." And, if possible, to make the purpose of Congress yet clearer, the act provided that "the President shall appoint five commissioners, at least two of whom shall be residents of the Hawaiian islands, who shall, as soon as reasonably practicable, recommend to Congress such legislation concerning the Hawaiian islands as they shall deem necessary or proper." All these provisions, in my opinion, clearly point out that, whilst the purpose was to acquire *and extend the sovereignty of the United [220] States over the islands, it was proposed only to provide, by the resolution of annexation, a provisional government until Congress should become possessed of the information necessary to enable it to determine what should be the permanent status of the annexed territory. And the meaning of the resolution of annexation thus indicated by its terms is reflexly demonstrated by the act "To Provide a Government for the Territory of Hawaii," approved April 30, 1900, by which the islands were undoubtedly made a part of the United States in the fullest sense and given a territorial form of government. When the two acts are put in contrast and the declarations in the later act are considered, which were not found in the earlier act, and which, it is to be presumed, were intentionally omitted from the resolution providing for annexation, I can see no reason for holding that the mere act of annexation accomplished the result which was brought about by the subsequent law containing the more comprehensive provisions.

The mere annexation not having effected the incorporation of the islands into the United States, it is not an open question that the provisions of the Constitution as to grand and petit juries were not applicable to them. Hurtado v. California, 110 U. S. 516, 28 L. ed. 232, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 111, 292; Re Ross, 140 U. S. 473, sub nom. Ross v. McIntyre, 35 L. ed. 583, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 897; Bolln v. Nebraska, 176 U. S. 83, and cases cited on page 83, 44 L. ed. 382, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 287; Maxwell v. Dow, 176 U. S. 584, 44 L. ed. 597, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 448, 494; and Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U. S. 244, 45 L. ed. 1088, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 770.

Nor is there anything in the provision in the act of annexation relating to the operation of the Constitution in the annexed territory which militates against the conclusions previously expressed. The text of the resolution on this subject is as follows:

"The municipal legislation of the Hawaiian islands, not enacted for the fulfillment of the treaties so extinguished, and not inconsistent with this joint resolution, nor contrary to the Constitution of the United States, nor to any existing treaty of the United States, shall remain in force until the Congress of the United States shall otherwise determine."

Now, in so far as the Constitution is concerned, the clause subjecting the existing legislation which was provisionally continued <sup>221</sup> to the control of the Constitution, clearly referred only to the provisions of the Constitution which were applicable, and not to those which were inapplicable. In other words, having, by the resolution itself, created a condition of things absolutely incompatible with immediate incorporation, Congress, mindful that the Constitution was the supreme law, and that its applicable provisions were operative at all times, everywhere, and upon every condition and persons, declared that nothing in the joint resolution continuing the customs legislation and local law should be considered as perpetuating such laws, where they were inconsistent with those fundamental provisions of the Constitution which were, by their own force, applicable to the territory with which Congress was dealing.

To say the contrary, would be but to declare that Congress had provided for the continuance of the tariff and other legislation, whilst, at the same time, it had enacted that that result should not be brought about. It would, moreover, lead to the assumption that provisions of the Constitution which were inapplicable to the particular situation should yet govern and control that condition.

Mr. Justice McKenna authorizes me to say that he also concurs in the result for the foregoing reasons.

Mr. Chief Justice Fuller, with whom concurred Mr. Justice Harlan, Mr. Justice Brewer, and Mr. Justice Peckham, dissenting:

In my opinion, the final order of the district court should be affirmed.

Mankichi was tried on an information filed May 4, 1899, charging him with the commission of the crime of murder on March 26 of that year, and was found guilty of manslaughter in the first degree by the verdict of nine jurors. The statutes of Hawaii prior to July 7, 1898, provided for such trial and conviction.

July 7, 1898, the "Joint Resolution to Provide for Annexing the Hawaiian Islands to the United States" was approved. *30 Stat. [222] at L. 750. Surrender of sovereignty and possession was effected August 12, 1898.

The act "To Provide a Government for the Territory of Hawaii" was approved April 30, 1900. 31 Stat. at L. 141, chap. 339.

If Articles of Amendment 5 and 6 were applicable to the territory of Hawaii after August 12, 1898, the district judge was right, and Mankichi was entitled to be discharged.

The annexation resolution contained three sections, and, omitting the 2d and 3d as not material here, is given in the margin.†

†Whereas the government of the Republic of Hawaii having, in due form, signified its consent, in the manner provided by its Constitution, to cede, absolutely and without reserve, to the United States of America, all rights of sovereignty of whatsoever kind in and over the Hawaiian Islands and their dependencies, and also to cede and transfer to the United States the absolute fee and ownership of all public, government, or Crown lands, public buildings or edifices, ports, harbors, military equipment, and all other public property of every kind and description belonging to the government of the Hawaiian Islands, together with every right and appurtenance thereunto appertaining: Therefore:

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That said cession is accepted, ratified, and confirmed, and that the said Hawaiian Islands and their dependencies be, and they are hereby, annexed as a part of the territory of the United States, and are subject to the sovereign dominion thereof, and that all and singular the property and rights hereinbefore mentioned are vested in the United States of America.

The existing laws of the United States relative to public lands shall not apply to such lands in the Hawaiian Islands; but the Congress of the United States shall enact special laws for [223] *By the specific language of this resolution no legislation which was contrary to the Constitution of the United States remained in force.

The language is plain and unambiguous, and resort to construction or interpretation is absolutely uncalled for. To tamper with the words is to eliminate them.

This is not one of those rare cases where adherence to the letter leads to manifest absurdity, as in United States v. Kirby, 7 Wall. 482, 19 L. ed. 278, and the illustrations there drawn by Mr. Justice Field from Puffendorf and Plowden.

The argument ab inconvenienti, without more, is an unsafe guide, and departure from the plain meaning tends to usurp legislative functions. Besides, that argument has no application here. Courts in Hawaii have had criminal law jurisdiction for more than half a century; and they had power to im-

[224] panel a *grand jury (United States v. Hill, 1 Brock, 159, Fed. Cas. No. 15,364), and to direct the petit jury of twelve that conviction could only be had by a unanimous verdict.

In giving the instructions which accompanied the joint resolution, Mr. Justice Day, then Secretary of State, under date of July 8, 1898, said: "These recitals, it will be observed, are made in the language of the treaty of annexation concluded at Washington on the 16th day of June, 1897. They, as well as the other terms of that treaty, were advisedly incorporated into the joint resolution, because they embodied the terms of cession, which have not only been agreed upon by the two governments, but which have also been ratified by the government of the Republic of Hawaii."

The reference is to a proposed treaty signed by Secretary Sherman on the part of the United States, and by three commissioners on the part of Hawaii, to which the advice and consent of the Senate was not given.

The preamble to this treaty expressed the "desire of the government of the Republic of Hawaii that those islands should be incorporated into the United States as an integral part thereof and under its sovereignty," and that the two governments "have determined to accomplish by treaty an object so important to their mutual and permanent welfare."

The language of the remainder of the treaty is reproduced in the joint resolution, including the provision that the municipal legislation of Hawaii should remain in force when not inconsistent with the resolution or any existing treaty of the United States nor contrary to the Constitution of the United States.

By the resolution, Congress provided for the government of Hawaii under the authority of the United States. All the civil, judicial, and military powers exercised by the officers in the islands were vested in the appointees of the President, and were to be exercised "in such manner as the President of the United States shall direct." The President prorogued the legislature; reappointed the officers "of the Republic of Hawaii as it existed just prior to the transfer of sovereignty; required such officers to take an oath of allegiance to the United States; and re-[225] quired all bonded officers to renew their bonds to the government of the United States."

All existing treaties of Hawaii were abrogated; further immigration of the Chinese was prohibited except as allowed "by the laws of the United States;" the customs laws of Hawaii, and its municipal legislation not contrary to the Constitution of the United States, were continued in force until Congress should otherwise determine.

their management and disposition: Provided, That all revenue from, or proceeds of, the same, except as regards such part thereof as may be used or occupied for the civil, military, or naval purposes of the United States, or may be assigned for the use of the local government, shall be used solely for the benefit of the inhabitants of the Hawaiian Islands, for educational and other public purposes.

Until Congress shall provide for the government of such islands, all the civil, judicial, and military powers exercised by the officers of the existing government in said islands shall be vested in such person or persons, and shall be exercised in such manner, as the President of the United States shall direct; and the President shall have power to remove said officers, and fill the vacancies so occasioned.

The existing treaties of the Hawaiian islands with foreign nations shall forthwith cease and determine, being replaced by such treaties as may exist, or as may be hereafter concluded, between the United States and such foreign nations. The municipal legislation of the Hawaiian islands, not enacted for the fulfillment of the treaties so extinguished, and not inconsistent with this joint resolution nor contrary to the Constitution of the United States nor to any existing treaty of the United States, shall remain in force until the Congress of the United States shall otherwise determine.

Until legislation shall be enacted extending the United States customs laws and regulations to the Hawaiian islands, the existing customs relations of the Hawaiian islands with the United States and other countries shall remain unchanged.

The public debt of the Republic of Hawaii, lawfully existing at the date of the passage of this joint resolution, including the amounts due to depositors in the Hawaiian Postal Savings Bank, is hereby assumed by the government of the United States; but the liability of the United States in this regard shall in no case exceed four million dollars. So long, however, as the existing government and the present commercial relations of the Hawaiian islands are continued as hereinbefore provided, said government shall continue to pay the interest on said debt.

There shall be no further immigration of Chinese into the Hawaiian islands, except upon such conditions as are now or may hereafter be allowed by the laws of the United States; and no Chinese, by reason of anything herein contained, shall be allowed to enter the United States from the Hawaiian islands.

The President shall appoint five commissioners, at least two of whom shall be residents of the Hawaiian islands, who shall, as soon as reasonably practicable, recommend to Congress such legislation concerning the Hawaiian islands as they shall deem necessary or proper.

Commissioners were to be and were appointed to recommend to Congress such legislation as they might "deem necessary and proper."

The act of April 30, 1900, was the result of their report, and provided further government, dealing with details, and permanent instead of temporary. But, while temporary under the resolution, it was nevertheless a system of government, and the territory was under the sovereignty of the United States, and governed by its agencies.

By the resolution, the annexation of the Hawaiian islands became complete, and the object of the proposed treaty, that "those islands should be incorporated into the United States as an integral part thereof, and under its sovereignty," was accomplished.

The exceptions in respect of customs relations and the prohibition of the immigration of the Chinese, embodied in the treaty agreement and in the resolution, could not destroy the effect of incorporation or of the extension of the Constitution. If this were possible, the act of April 30, 1900, would be open to the same objection.

It was said at the bar that the words "contrary to the Constitution of the United States" were inserted as a declaration that certain "fundamental rights and principles, the basis of all free government, which cannot with impunity be transgressed," were to be protected in Hawaii; that certain limitations of the Constitution applied "wherever the jurisdiction of the United States extends." But, in that view, the insertion of the phrase was superfluous and accomplished nothing.

Nor were we informed what those fundamental rights are. This is not a question of [226] natural rights, on the one hand, and *artificial rights on the other, but of the fundamental rights of every person living under the sovereignty of the United States in respect of that government. And among those rights is the right to be free from prosecution for crime unless after indictment by a grand jury, and the right to be acquitted unless found guilty by the unanimous verdict of a petit jury of twelve.

In Callan v. Wilson, 127 U. S. 540, 549, 32 L. ed. 223, 226, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1301, it was said by Mr. Justice Harlan, speaking for the court: "And as the guaranty of a trial by jury, in the 3d article, implied a trial in that mode and according to the settled rules of the common law, the enumeration, in the 6th Amendment, of the rights of the accused in criminal prosecutions, is to be taken as a declaration of what those rules were, and is to be referred to the anxiety of the people of the states to have in the supreme law of the land, and so far as the agencies of the general government were concerned, a full and distinct recognition of those rules, as involving the fundamental rights of life, liberty, and property."

Common-law rights are described in the ordinance of 1787 as "fundamental principles of civil and religious liberty," and the amendments embodying common-law rights were demanded, as the preamble of the act of Congress proposing them declares, "in order to prevent misconstruction or abuse" of the powers of the general government.

Assuming, solely for the sake of argument, that the mere fact of annexation might not in itself have at once extended to the inhabitants of Hawaii all the rights, privileges, and immunities guaranteed by the Constitution, and that Congress had the power to impose limitations in that regard, I think not only that Congress did not do so in the particulars in question, but that, in re-enacting existing legislation, Congress, by the terms of the resolution, intentionally invalidated so much thereof as in these particulars was inconsistent with the Constitution. The presumptions are all opposed to any capitulation in the matter of common-law institutions.

Mr. Justice Harlan, dissenting:

This case is of such exceptional importance in respect of the *principles announced [227] by my brethren of the majority, that I deem it not inappropriate to state my views in a separate opinion.

I entirely concur with the Chief Justice in holding that the accused was properly discharged from custody. Whether the legality of his detention be tested by the Constitution or alone by the joint resolution of Congress, approved July 7th, 1898, providing "for annexing the Hawaiian islands to the United States," his imprisonment was, in my judgment, wholly unauthorized.

What, at the time of the arrest and trial of the accused, were the relations existing between the United States and Hawaii? By what law were the personal rights of the people of Hawaii to be then determined? The decision of the case depends upon the answer to these questions.

In 1897 a treaty was made between the United States and the Republic of Hawaii, which was signed by Secretary Sherman on behalf of the United States, and by three commissioners on the part of Hawaii. Senate Report No. 681, 55th Congress, 2d Sess., March 16th, 1898.

The preamble to that treaty expressed the "desire of the government of the Republic of Hawaii that those islands shall be incorporated into the United States as an integral part thereof and under its sovereignty." It also recited the determination of the two governments "to accomplish by treaty an object so important to their mutual and permanent welfare."

The treaty stipulated that, until Congress provided for the government of such islands, all the civil, judicial, and military powers exercised by the officers of the existing government in the islands should be vested in such person or persons, and be exercised in such manner, as the President of the United States directed, and that the President should have power to remove said officers, and fill the vacancies so occasioned; also that the municipal legislation of the Hawaiian islands "not inconsistent with this treaty nor contrary to the Constitution of the United States, nor to any existing treaty of the United States, shall remain in force until the Congress of the United States shall otherwise determine."

[228] *The treaty was not formally ratified, but its object was accomplished by the passage of the joint resolution of July 7th, 1898. 30 Stat. at L. 750.

In order that the full scope of that resolution may be seen, it is here given in full:

"Whereas the government of the Republic of Hawaii having, in due form, signified its consent, in the manner provided by its Constitution, to cede absolutely and without reserve to the United States of America all rights of sovereignty of whatsoever kind in and over the Hawaiian islands and their dependencies, and also to cede and transfer to the United States the absolute fee and ownership of all public, government, or Crown lands, public buildings or edifices, ports, harbors, military equipment, and all other public property of every kind and description belonging to the government of the Hawaiian islands, together with every right and appurtenance thereunto appertaining: Therefore,

"Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That said cession is accepted, ratified, and confirmed, and that the said Hawaiian islands and their dependencies be, and they are hereby, annexed as a part of the territory of the United States and are subject to the sovereign dominion thereof, and that, all and singular, the property and rights hereinbefore mentioned are vested in the United States of America.

"The existing laws of the United States relative to public lands shall not apply to such lands in the Hawaiian islands; but the Congress of the United States shall enact special laws for their management and disposition: Provided, That all revenue from or proceeds of the same, except as regards such part thereof as may be used or occupied for the civil, military, or naval purposes of the United States, or may be assigned for the use of the local government, shall be used solely for the benefit of the inhabitants of the Hawaiian islands for educational and other public purposes.

[229] "Until Congress shall provide for the government of such islands, all the civil, judicial, and military powers exercised by the officers of the existing government in said islands shall be vested *in such person or persons, and shall be exercised in such manner, as the President of the United States shall direct; and the President shall have power to remove said officers and fill the vacancies so occasioned.

"The existing treaties of the Hawaiian islands with foreign nations shall forthwith cease and determine, being replaced by such treaties as may exist, or as may be hereafter concluded, between the United States and such foreign nations. The municipal legislation of the Hawaiian islands, not enacted for the fulfilment of the treaties so extinguished, and not inconsistent with this joint resolution nor contrary to the Constitution of the United States nor to any existing treaty of the United States, shall remain in force until the Congress of the United States shall otherwise determine.
190 U. S.

"Until legislation shall be enacted extending the United States customs laws and regulations to the Hawaiian islands, the existing customs relations of the Hawaiian islands with the United States and other countries shall remain unchanged.

"The public debt of the Republic of Hawaii, lawfully existing at the date of the passage of this joint resolution, including the amounts due to depositors in the Hawaiian Postal Savings Bank, is hereby assumed by the government of the United States; but the liability of the United States in this regard shall in no case exceed four million dollars. So long, however, as the existing government and the present commercial relations of the Hawaiian islands are continued as hereinbefore provided, said government shall continue to pay the interest on said debt.

"There shall be no further immigration of Chinese into the Hawaiian islands, except upon such conditions as are now or may hereafter be allowed by the laws of the United States; and no Chinese, by reason of anything herein contained, shall be allowed to enter the United States from the Hawaiian islands.

"The President shall appoint five commissioners, at least two of whom shall be residents of the Hawaiian islands, who shall, as soon as reasonably practicable, recommend to Congress such legislation concerning the Hawaiian islands as they shall deem necessary or proper.

*§ 2. That the commissioners hereinbefore [230] provided for shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate.

"§ 3. That the sum of one hundred thousand dollars, or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, and to be immediately available, to be expended at the discretion of the President of the United States of America, for the purpose of carrying this joint resolution into effect."

Under date of July 8th, 1898, the Secretary of State transmitted a copy of this joint resolution to the United States envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary accredited to Hawaii, with instructions as to his duty in the premises.

Referring to the preamble of that resolution, the Secretary, in his letter of instructions, said: "These recitals, it will be observed, are made in the language of the treaty of annexation concluded at Washington on the 16th day of June, 1897. They, as well as the other terms of that treaty, were advisedly incorporated in the joint resolution, because they embody the terms of cession which have not only been agreed upon by the two governments, but which have also been ratified by the government of the Republic of Hawaii. The joint resolution, therefore, accepts, ratifies, and confirms, on the part of the United States, the cession formally agreed to and approved by the Republic of Hawaii. As, by the adoption of the joint resolution, the cession of the Hawaiian islands and their dependencies to the United States is thus concluded, it is assumed that no further action will be necessary on the part of the Hawaiian government beyond the formalities of transfer. Should that government, however, desire to take any further action, formally confirmatory of what has been done, no objection will be interposed on the part of the United States. When all preliminaries shall have been settled, you are instructed to accept, in the name of the United States, the formal transfer of the sovereignty and property of the Hawaiian government, and to raise the American flag, with such suitable ceremonies as may be agreed on for the occasion. It [231] may be advisable *for the Hawaiian government to deliver to you an inventory of the public property transferred to the United States. There are several provisions of the joint resolution to which it is deemed proper specially to refer. Until Congress shall provide for the government of Hawaii, 'all the civil, judicial, and military powers exercised by the officers of the existing government' are to be vested in such person or persons, and to be exercised in such manner, as the President of the United States shall direct. In the exercise of the power thus conferred upon him by the joint resolution, the President hereby directs that the civil, judicial, and military powers in question shall be exercised by the officers of the Republic of Hawaii as it existed just prior to the transfer of sovereignty, subject to his power to remove such officers and to fill the vacancies. All such officers will be required at once to take an oath of allegiance to the United States, and all the military forces will be required to take a similar oath; and all bonded officers will be required to renew their bonds to the government of the United States. The powers of the minister of foreign affairs will, upon the transfer of the sovereignty and property of Hawaii to the United States, necessarily cease, so far as they relate to the conduct of diplomatic intercourse between Hawaii and foreign powers. The municipal legislation of Hawaii, except such as was enacted for the fulfillment of the treaties between that country and foreign nations, and except such as is inconsistent with the joint resolution, or contrary to the Constitution of the United States, or to any existing treaty of the United States, is to remain in force till the Congress of the United States shall otherwise determine. The existing customs relations of Hawaii with the United States and with other countries are to remain unchanged till Congress shall have extended the customs laws and regulations of the United States to the islands. Under these various provisions, the government of the islands will proceed without interruption. Upon the completion of the formalities of the transfer, your functions as envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary to Hawaii will necessarily cease. . . . These instructions will be borne to you by Rear Admiral Joseph N. Miller, U. S. Navy, who will proceed *to Honolulu in the U. S. S. Phila-[232] delphia, and who, together with the commander of the United States military forces present, will act with you in the ceremonies attending the formal transfer of the islands to the United States."

So that the Secretary of State gave the representative of the United States to understand that the joint resolution and the treaty had the same object in view, namely, to incorporate Hawaii into the United States "as an integral part thereof and under its sovereignty."

Proceeding in our examination of the history of annexation, we find that under date of August 15th, 1898, the United States minister made his official report as to what was done in execution of the joint resolution, annexing Hawaii to the United States. That report contains the details of the ceremonies attending the formal transfer of the sovereignty and property of the Hawaiian government to the United States. From it the following extract is made:

"At a quarter before 12 [on August 12th, 1898] the ceremonies opened with prayer, at the conclusion of which I [the United States minister] arose, and, addressing President Dole, said: 'Mr. President, I present you a certified copy of a joint resolution of the Congress of the United States, approved by the President on July 7th, 1898, entitled "Joint Resolution to Provide for Annexing the Hawaiian Islands to the United States." This joint resolution accepts, ratifies, and confirms on the part of the United States the cession formally consented to and approved by the Republic of Hawaii.' . . . President Dole, taking the copy of the resolutions, said: 'A treaty of political union having been made, and the cession formally consented to by the Republic of Hawaii having been accepted by the United States of America, I now, in the interest of the Hawaiian body, politic, and with full confidence in the honor, justice, and friendship of the American people, yield up to you, as the representative of the government of the United States, the sovereignty and public property of the Hawaiian islands;' and, waving his hand to his chief of staff, the Hawaiian flag was saluted by the battery of the Hawaiian national guard, in which salute our ships in the harbor joined. Then the Hawaiian band played *Hawaii Pono! for [233] the last time, taps were sounded, and the Hawaiian flag came down, and was taken possession of by the Hawaiian corporal of the guard. Then, replying to President Dole, I said: 'Mr. President, in the name of the United States, I accept the transfer of the sovereignty and property of the Hawaiian government. The admiral commanding the United States naval forces in these waters will proceed to perform the duty intrusted to him.' Thereupon the American flag was raised as the band played the Star Spangled Banner, and saluted."

The United States minister then congratulated "his fellow-countrymen," on "the inevitable consummation of the national policies and the natural relations between the two countries now formally and indissolubly united." He urged the Hawaiians not to rest content in the enjoyment of free institutions, but "to help maintain them in the spirit they will be extended to you, in the spirit you have sought them, in the spirit of fraternity and equality, in the spirit of the Constitution itself, now the supreme law of the land." The oath of allegiance was thereupon administered by the Chief Justice of Hawaii to the officers of that country, each one swearing that he would "support and defend the Constitution of the United States of America against all enemies, foreign and domestic."

It is thus perceived that the Republic of Hawaii ceded, absolutely and without reserve, to the United States of America, all rights and sovereignty of whatsoever kind in and over the Hawaiian islands and their dependencies, as well as the absolute fee and ownership of all public, government, or Crown lands, public buildings or edifices, ports, harbors, military equipment, and all other public property of every kind and description belonging to the government of the Hawaiian islands, together with every right and appurtenance thereunto appertaining; that the cession was accepted, ratified, and confirmed by Congress, and that the Hawaiian islands and their dependencies were "annexed as a part of the territory of the United States and are subject to the sovereign dominion thereof;" and, what is of vital moment in this case, that such municipal legislation of the islands as was not "con-[234]trary to the Constitution of the United States"—and therefore only such legislation as was consistent with that instrument—was to remain in force until Congress otherwise determined. Necessarily, therefore, if regard be had merely to the action of Congress, all local legislation inconsistent with the Constitution ceased to have any force in Hawaii after that country thus passed under the sovereign dominion of the United States.

After the passage of the joint resolution, and after the formal transfer of Hawaii to the United States, namely, in 1899, Osaki Mankichi, a subject of Japan, was tried in one of the courts of Hawaii for the alleged crime of murder. He was convicted of the crime of manslaughter in the first degree, and sentenced to imprisonment for twenty years at hard labor. Although the crime was of an infamous nature, there was no presentment or indictment of a grand jury, and the verdict was rendered by only nine of the twelve persons composing the petit jury.

Having been placed in prison pursuant to the verdict and sentence, the accused, in 1901, sued out a writ of habeas corpus from the district court of the United States for the territory of Hawaii, and was discharged, upon the ground that his trial, conviction, sentence, and imprisonment were in violation of the Constitution of the United States, in that he was not proceeded against upon the presentment or indictment of a grand jury, nor found guilty by the unanimous verdict of the petit jury, but only by a majority of the jurors. Hence this appeal.
190 U. S.

It should be here stated that by the act of Congress of April 30th, 1900, chap. 339, a territorial government was organized over the islands which had been acquired under the joint resolution of 1898, and those islands were designated as the territory of Hawaii. In that act provision was made for grand juries, and also for petit juries in criminal cases, to be composed, as at common law, of twelve persons. It was also declared that "no person should be convicted in any criminal case except by unanimous verdict of the jury." 31 Stat. at L. 141, 157. It is not contended that that act can have any effect upon the decision of the present case, because the trial, conviction, sentence, and imprisonment *of the accused all [235] occurred after the formal transfer to the United States pursuant to the joint resolution of 1898, and before the passage of the above act of 1900. We must consequently determine the legality of the proceedings against Mankichi by the law as it was between the date of the acquisition of sovereignty over the islands by the United States, and the date of the passage of the act of 1900. To that question I now address myself.

It must be assumed that the trial of the accused was in accordance with the municipal law of Hawaii as it existed prior to the approval of the joint resolution of 1898. The contrary is not asserted by the accused. But it is conceded by the court that if the words "contrary to the Constitution of the United States" in that resolution are interpreted according to their usual, ordinary meaning, and if the validity of the trial be tested by the provisions of that instrument, then the prisoner is entitled to his discharge. Nevertheless, it is now held that, although the United States acquired, on the passage of that resolution, "all rights of sovereignty of whatsoever kind" in and over the Hawaiian islands and their dependencies; although Hawaii then became "an integral part" of the United States, and subject to its "sovereign dominion;" although the United States obtained the absolute fee and ownership of all public, government, or Crown lands, public buildings or edifices, ports, harbors, military equipments, and all other public property belonging to Hawaii; although all its officers took an oath of allegiance to the United States; yet, persons there charged with infamous crimes could not, as of right, before the passage of the act of 1900, invoke for their protection, when prosecuted for crime, the guarantees relating to grand and petit juries found in the Constitution of the United States,—the supremacy of which instrument was, in effect, declared by the joint resolution when existing municipal legislation contrary to its provisions was superseded.

Practically, under the view taken by the court, and so far as those guarantees were concerned, if Congress had not chosen to provide a system of criminal procedure—as [236] it did by the act of 1900—for the government, tribunals, and people of Hawaii *then, for an indefinite time,—it may have been for a century,—the courts in Hawaii, although acting under and by the authority of the United States, might have tried persons there for capital or infamous crimes in a mode confessedly “contrary to the Constitution of the United States.” The Constitution, speaking with commanding authority to all who exercise power under its sanction, declares that “no person shall be held to answer for a capital or other infamous crime, unless on a presentment or indictment of a grand jury;” and it as clearly forbids a conviction in any criminal prosecution except upon the unanimous verdict of a petit jury. In other words, neither the life nor the liberty of any person can be taken, under the authority of the United States, except in the mode thus prescribed. Yet the present holding is that these constitutional requirements need not have been regarded in Hawaii at any time prior to the act of 1900, although that country was an integral part of the United States, and with its inhabitants, was subject, in all respects, to our sovereign dominion. It follows, under the view of the court, that Congress, by nonaction simply, could have kept in force even such municipal legislation of the Hawaiian islands relating to criminal trials as was in palpable conflict with the Constitution of the United States.

I dissent altogether from any such view. It assumes the possession by Congress of power quite as omnipotent as that possessed by the English Parliament. It assumes that Congress, which came into existence, and exists, only by virtue of the Constitution, can withhold fundamental guarantees of life and liberty from peoples who have come under our complete jurisdiction; who, to use the words of the United States minister, have become our fellow-countrymen; and over whose country we have acquired the authority to exercise sovereign dominion. In my judgment, neither the life nor the liberty nor the property of any person, within any territory or country over which the United States is sovereign, can be taken, under the sanction of any civil tribunal acting under its authority, by any form of procedure inconsistent with the Constitution of the United States. If the accused had committed the crime of murder in the territory of Arizona; if he had been convicted in any [237] *court in that territory, except under a presentment or indictment of a grand jury, and by the unanimous verdict of a petit jury; and if he had been then sentenced to be hanged, and was hanged, the judge of the court pronouncing the sentence would have been guilty of judicial murder. Of that the decisions of this court leave no room to doubt; for it has been adjudged repeatedly that the people of the organized territories, as well as the people of the District of Columbia, are entitled, by force of the Constitution alone, to the guarantees of life, liberty, and property found in the Constitution. And yet the result of the present judgment is that the hanging of the accused in Hawaii, an integral part of the United States, after a trial for murder committed there, but not upon indictment of a grand jury or on a verdict concurred in by all of the petit jury, could be sustained as legal if the case had arisen at any time prior to the act of 1900. This result has been achieved by the easy method of declaring that when Congress provided that only the municipal legislation of Hawaii not contrary to the Constitution should remain in force, it did not mean what its express words implied according to their ordinary signification; that Congress had no reference to the provisions of the Constitution relating to criminal prosecutions, but intended that the modes of criminal procedure in operation in Hawaii should remain in force until Congress otherwise provided, even if they were, as they are admitted to be, contrary to the Constitution,—thus conceding to Congress the power of suspending the constitutional guarantees of life and liberty among a people undeniably subject to the authority and jurisdiction of the United States as completely as are the people of our organized territories.

Three members of the court, constituting the majority, who concurred in the judgment in Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U. S. 244, 288, 289, 291, 292, 45 L. ed. 1088, 1106-1108, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 770, 787-789 distinctly held that “the government of the United States was born of the Constitution,” and that all the powers enjoyed by it, or which it may exercise, must be derived, either expressly or by implication, from that instrument; that that instrument, in respect of every function of the government, “is everywhere and at all times potential, in so far as its provisions are applicable;” that wherever a power is given by the *Consti-[238] tution, and a limitation imposed upon its exercise, “such restriction operates upon and confines every action on the subject within its constitutional limits;” that, “as Congress, in governing the territories, is subject to the Constitution, it results that all the limitations of the Constitution which are applicable to Congress in exercising this authority necessarily limit its power on this subject;” that “every provision of the Constitution which is applicable to the territories is also controlling therein;” and that “in the case of the territories, as in every other instance, when a provision of the Constitution is invoked, the question which arises is not whether the Constitution is operative, for that is self-evident, but whether the provision relied on is applicable.” In these views the minority in Downes v. Bidwell, constituting four other members of this court, substantially concurred.

The petit jury system existed in Hawaii long before the passage of the joint resolution. But it was inconsistent with the Constitution of the United States, in that it allowed a verdict of guilty in a criminal case by a majority of the jurors. Where was the difficulty in applying in Hawaii the constitutional provision forbidding such a verdict? To have applied that provision to Hawaii would not, in any essential sense, have imposed upon that country a new system for the trial of crimes. It would have only enforced the existing mode of trial so as to conform to the constitutional requirement in respect of petit juries. It would have left untouched the petit jury system in Hawaii, except as it was contrary to the Constitution. Whatever may be said as to the absence of a grand jury system in Hawaii, it cannot, I think, be said, with any show of reason, that the constitutional provision relating to petit juries was inapplicable in Hawaii after its annexation to this country. Nothing stood in the way of the court instructing the jury in a criminal case, arising after annexation, that unanimity among the jurors as to the verdict was essential under the Constitution.

In my opinion, the Constitution of the United States became the supreme law of Hawaii immediately upon the acquisition by the United States of complete sovereignty [239] over the Hawaiian *islands, and without any act of Congress formally extending the Constitution to those islands. It then, at least, became controlling, beyond the power of Congress to prevent. From the moment when the government of Hawaii accepted the joint resolution of 1898, by a formal transfer of its sovereignty to the United States,—when the flag of Hawaii was taken down, by authority of Hawaii, and in its place was raised that of the United States,—every human being in Hawaii charged with the commission of crime there could have rightly insisted that neither his life nor his liberty could be taken, as punishment for crime, by any process, or as the result of any mode of procedure, that was inconsistent with the Constitution of the United States. Can it be that the Constitution is the supreme law in the states of the Union, in the organized territories of the United States, between the Atlantic and Pacific oceans, and in the District of Columbia, and yet was not, prior to the act of 1900, the supreme law in territories and among peoples situated as were the territory and people of Hawaii, and over which the United States had acquired all rights of sovereignty of whatsoever kind? A negative answer to this question, and a recognition of the principle that such an answer involves, would place Congress above the Constitution. It would mean that the benefit of the constitutional provisions designed for the protection of life and liberty may be claimed by some of the people subject to the authority and jurisdiction of the United States, but cannot be claimed by others equally subject to its authority and jurisdiction. It would mean that the will of Congress, not the Constitution, is the supreme law of the land for certain peoples and territories under our jurisdiction. It would mean that the United States may acquire territory by cession, conquest, or treaty, and that Congress may exercise sovereign dominion over it, outside of and in violation of the Constitution, and under regulations that could not be applied to the organized territories of the United States and their inhabitants. It would mean that, under the influence and guidance of commercialism and the supposed necessities of trade, this country had left the old ways of the fathers, as defined by a written Constitution, and entered upon a new way, in following *which the American people will lose [240] sight of, or become indifferent to, principles which had been supposed to be essential to real liberty. It would mean that, if the principles now announced should become firmly established, the time may not be far distant when, under the exactions of trade and commerce, and to gratify an ambition to become the dominant political power in all the earth, the United States will acquire territories in every direction, which are inhabited by human beings, over which territories, to be called "dependencies" or "outlying possessions," we will exercise absolute dominion, and whose inhabitants will be regarded as "subjects" or "dependent peoples," to be controlled as Congress may see fit, not as the Constitution requires nor as the people governed may wish. Thus will be engrafted upon our republican institutions, controlled by the supreme law of a written Constitution, a colonial system entirely foreign to the genius of our government and abhorrent to the principles that underlie and pervade the Constitution. It will then come about that we will have two governments over the peoples subject to the jurisdiction of the United States,—one, existing under a written Constitution, creating a government with authority to exercise only powers expressly granted and such as are necessary and appropriate to carry into effect those so granted; the other, existing outside of the written Constitution, in virtue of an unwritten law, to be declared from time to time by Congress, which is itself only a creature of that instrument.

I stand by the doctrine that the Constitution is the supreme law in every territory, as soon as it comes under the sovereign dominion of the United States for purposes of civil administration, and whose inhabitants are under its entire authority and jurisdiction. I could not otherwise hold without conceding the power of Congress, the creature of the Constitution, by mere nonaction, to withhold vital constitutional guarantees from the inhabitants of a territory governed by the authority, and only by the authority, of the United States. Such a doctrine would admit of the exercise of absolute, arbitrary legislative power under a written Constitution full of restrictions upon Congress, and designed to limit the separate departments of *government to the exercise of only ex- [241] pressly enumerated powers and such other powers as may be implied therefrom,—each department always acting in subordination to that instrument as the supreme law of the land. Indeed, it has been announced by some statesmen that the Constitution should be interpreted to mean not what its words naturally, or usually, or even plainly, import, but what the apparent necessities of the hour, or the apparent majority of the people, at a particular time, demand at the hands of the judiciary. I cannot assent to any such view of the Constitution. Nor can I approve the suggestion that the status of Hawaii and the powers of its local government are to be "measured" by the resolution of 1898, without reference to the Constitution. It is impossible for me to grasp the thought that that which is admittedly contrary to the supreme law can be sustained as valid.

I have so far considered the case principally in the light of the results that must, as I think, follow from the interpretation placed by the majority on the joint resolution of 1898. But, in my judgment, Congress should not be held to have intended to do what is now attributed to it. When it declared that the municipal legislation of Hawaii not "contrary to the Constitution of the United States" should remain in force, it meant that legislation contrary to that instrument should not remain in force after annexation. Those words were inserted out of abundant caution, to make it certain that no municipal legislation of Hawaii contrary to the Constitution should thereafter be regarded as in force. If the above words did not have that effect, for what purpose were they inserted? What local legislation was declared to be abrogated, if not that which was "contrary to the Constitution?" Under the view taken by the court, those words in the joint resolution are made wholly inoperative.

It is said to be evident from the terms of the joint resolution that Congress intended it to be merely temporary and provisional. Of course, some further legislation by Congress was contemplated in order to provide a complete territorial government for Hawaii. But in language perfectly direct and explicit, Congress said that in the meantime [242] no municipal legislation **of Hawaii* should be enforced that was "contrary to the Constitution of the United States." And yet a trial conducted in a mode forbidden by that instrument is now sustained as legal.

It is also said that "the laws of the United States" were not extended over the islands until the organic act of April 30th, 1900, was passed. But, by the joint resolution of 1898, Congress—assuming that action upon its part to that end was necessary—did extend the Constitution over the Hawaiian islands when it declared that the municipal legislation of Hawaii "not contrary to the Constitution of the United States" should remain in force. And yet the court decides that, although the trial of Mankiehi, if tested by the Constitution, was illegal, it must be sustained from the necessities of the case.

Again, it is said that the words "contrary to the Constitution" in the joint resolution referred only to such provisions of that instrument as were applicable to Hawaii; and in support of that view, reference is made to that part of the resolution which keeps alive existing customs regulations between Hawaii and the United States and other countries. It seems to me that the argument based on that clause of the resolution is misleading and fallacious. Customs regulations are not determined by the Constitution. The authority to make them is given by that instrument to Congress; and it was for Congress to say what should be the nature of the customs regulations to be observed in Hawaii. Its direction that existing Hawaiian regulations of customs duties should remain in force until otherwise ordered was, in legal effect, an adoption of them by Congress for the time being. Now, the provisions as to grand and petit juries are in the Constitution, and could not be altered by Congress under any power it possessed. Their applicability, before civil tribunals, in a territory of the United States, was determinable by the Constitution itself. In other words, if the Constitution was in force at all in Hawaii, prior to the act of 1900, it was in force there for all it ordained, in respect, at least, of the guarantees of life and liberty. To sustain the prosecution of Mankiehi upon the ground that Congress did not intend to supersede the local law permitting a *verdict in criminal cases, by a majority of [243] the petit jury, but did intend to keep such law in force until altered or abrogated by Congress, is, in effect, to say that, if Congress so ordered, persons charged with crime in Hawaii could, consistently with the Constitution, be tried before a single judge. It is not perceived why the argument based upon the provision as to customs regulations does not lead, logically, to such a result, nor how that provision can have any bearing upon the present case, unless it be that the power of Congress over criminal proceedings in Hawaii, involving the life and liberty of a freeman, is as full, comprehensive, and complete as it is over mere customs regulations. I cannot go that far in upholding the power of Congress over what some are pleased to call our "dependencies" or "outlying possessions," and the "subjects" therein residing.

It is again said that the annexation of Hawaii, and the transfer of its sovereignty, of whatsoever kind, to the United States, did not so incorporate it into the United States as to make the Constitution supreme, in all respects, in that newly acquired territory. As the two countries desired that Hawaii, upon annexation, should become "an integral part" of the United States; as all the civil, military, and judicial officers of Hawaii were required to take, and did take, an oath of allegiance to the United States; as Hawaii passed under the "sovereign dominion" of the United States and became subject to all valid laws, civil and criminal, that Congress might enact; as its people may be subjected to punishment for any crime or offense committed against the United States; as by the authority of Hawaii the Hawaiian flag has come down, and in its place that of the United States substituted; and as Hawaiians cannot rightfully invoke for their protection the authority of any government except that of the United States,—in view of these relations between the two countries, it is, to my mind, inconceivable that Hawaii was not so far incorporated into the United States that the Constitution was in force there, after the passage of the joint resolution of 1898, in respect, at least, of those personal rights which that instrument expressly guarded [244] against infringement *by any tribunal deriving authority from its provisions.

It is further said that under the joint resolution of 1898 any new legislation must conform to the Constitution of the United States. This must mean that after the passage of that resolution the Constitution was operative in Hawaii to prevent new legislation inconsistent with its provisions, but was not operative there so as to prevent the enforcement of local enactments or regulations that were confessedly in violation of that instrument. I cannot forbear saying that this view of the Constitution is most extraordinary. It does not commend itself to my judgment. I had supposed that when the Constitution came into operation in any country or over any people, all local laws, customs, or usages, within the same jurisdiction, that were inconsistent with its provisions, necessarily ceased to have any legal force whatever; otherwise, the declaration of the Constitution, that it was the supreme law of the land, would be meaningless.

But it is said that while most, if not all, the privileges and immunities contained in the Bill of Rights of the Constitution were intended to apply "from the moment of annexation," yet the two rights created by the constitutional provisions as to grand and petit jurors "are not fundamental in their nature, but concern merely a method of procedure."

It is a new doctrine, I take leave to say, in our constitutional jurisprudence, that the framers of the Constitution of the United States did not regard those provisions, and the rights secured by them, as fundamental in their nature. It is an indisputable fact in the history of the Constitution that that instrument would not have been accepted by the required number of states, but for the promise of the friends of that instrument, at the time, that immediately upon the adoption of the Constitution, amendments would be proposed and made that should prevent the infringement by any Federal tribunal or agency, of the rights then commonly regarded as embraced in Anglo-Saxon liberty; among which rights, according to universal belief at that time, were those secured by the provisions relating to grand and petit juries. Whatever may be the power [245] of the *states in respect of grand and petit juries, it is firmly settled that the Constitution absolutely forbids the trial and conviction, in a Federal civil tribunal, of any one charged with crime, otherwise than upon the presentment or indictment of a grand jury, and the unanimous verdict of a petit jury, composed, as at common law, of twelve jurors.

In Ex parte Milligan, 4 Wall. 120, 121, 18 L. ed. 295, 296, the accused, not in the Army of the United States, was tried by a Federal military court-martial for a crime against the United States, alleged to have been committed in a state that adhered to the Union, and he was denied the right to a trial by jury. This court, referring to the provisions of the Federal Constitution relating to criminal offenses and proceedings, said: "These securities for personal liberty, thus embodied, were such as wisdom and experience had demonstrated to be necessary for the protection of those accused of crime. . . . Time has proven the discernment of our ancestors; for even these provisions, expressed in such plain English words that it would seem the ingenuity of man could not evade them, are now, after the lapse of more than seventy years, sought to be avoided. Those great and good men foresaw that troublous times would arise, when rulers and people would become restive under restraint, and seek by sharp and decisive measures to accomplish ends deemed just and proper; and that the principles of constitutional liberty would be in peril unless established by irrepealable law. The history of the world had taught them that what was done in the past might be attempted in the future. The Constitution of the United States is a law for rulers and people, equally in war and in peace, and covers with the shield of its protection all classes of men, at all times, and under all circumstances. No doctrine involving more pernicious consequences was ever invented by the wit of man than that any of its provisions can be suspended during any of the great exigencies of government."

In Ex parte Bain, 121 U. S. 1, 12, 13, 30 L. ed. 849, 853, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 781, 787, the court, referring to the constitutional provision relating to grand juries, said: "It is never to be forgotten that, in the construction of the language of the Constitution here relied on, as, indeed, in all other instances *where construction becomes necessary, we [246] are to place ourselves as nearly as possible in the condition of the men who framed that instrument. Undoubtedly the framers of this article had, for a long time, been absorbed in considering the arbitrary encroachments of the Crown on the liberty of the subject, and were imbued with the common-law estimate of the value of the grand jury as part of its system of criminal jurisprudence. They, therefore, must be understood to have used the language which they did . . . in the full sense of its necessity and of its value. We are of the opinion that an indictment found by a grand jury was indispensable to the power of the court to try the petitioner for the crime with which he was charged."

In Thompson v. Utah, 170 U. S. 343, 349-351, 42 L. ed. 1061, 1066, 1067, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 620, 622, 623, which was a case arising in an organized territory, the question was whether the jury referred to in the original Constitution of the United States, and in the 6th Amendment, was a jury constituted as it was at common law of twelve persons, neither more nor less. This court said: "When Magna Charta declared that no freeman should be deprived of life, etc., 'but by the judgment of his peers or by the law of the land,' it referred to a trial by twelve jurors. . . . When Thompson committed the offense of grand larceny in the territory of Utah,—which was under the complete jurisdiction of the United States for all purposes of government and legislation,—the supreme law of the land required that he should be tried by a jury composed of not less than twelve persons. . . . When Thompson's crime was committed, it was his constitutional right to demand that his liberty should not be taken from him except by the joint action of the court and the unanimous verdict of a jury of twelve persons."

Nevertheless, it is contended that the constitutional provisions in question are not fundamental in their nature; that whether a person charged, for instance, with murder, shall be convicted and hung pursuant to a verdict rendered by a majority of the petit jury, rather than by all the jurors, is only "a method of procedure." My judgment refuses assent to this doctrine. I believe it to be most mischievous in every aspect. The provisions as to grand and petit juries are [247] in the Constitution, and *the mandatory character of that instrument ought not to be disregarded. What tribunal, deriving its authority from the United States, can rightfully hold them to be immaterial? Whether those provisions are fundamental in their nature or not, no Federal civil tribunal, existing under the Constitution, and under a solemn obligation to maintain and defend it, can properly or safely ignore them. If the local law under which Mankichi was tried and convicted was contrary to any provision of the Constitution, that instrument should have been respected, whatever the nature of such provision.

The opinion of the court contains observations to the effect that some persons, heretofore convicted of crime in the Hawaiian courts, will escape punishment if the joint resolution of 1898 is so interpreted as to make Congress mean what, it is conceded, the words "contrary to the Constitution of the United States" naturally import. In the eye of the law, that is of no consequence. The cases cited by the court fall far short of sustaining the proposition that the court may reject the plain, obvious meaning of the words of a statute in order to remedy what it deems an omission by Congress. The consequences of a particular construction may be taken into account only when the words to be construed are ambiguous. If, after the passage of the joint resolution, the local authorities proceeded in the prosecution of crimes under municipal laws palpably contrary to the Constitution, the fault was theirs. They were informed by the joint resolution of 1898, by the Secretary of State, as well as by the proclamation of President McKinley, announcing the annexation of Hawaii to the United States, that only local legislation not contrary to the Constitution should remain in force. Their fault cannot justify the court in disregarding the express command of Congress that only municipal legislation that was consistent with the Constitution should remain in force in Hawaii.

If the accused is held in palpable violation of that instrument, we cannot shrink from discharging him because of its effect upon convictions in other cases. We must interpret the law as it is written. As just stated, the doctrine is well settled that, when the meaning of a statute is plain, there is no room for interpretation. The *consequences [248] are for the lawmaking power. If the intention of the legislature "is expressed in a manner devoid of contradiction and ambiguity, there is no room for interpretation or construction, and the judiciary are not at liberty, on considerations of policy or hardship, to depart from the words of the statute; that they have no right to make exceptions, or insert qualifications, however abstract justice or the justice of the particular case may seem to require it." Sedgw. Stat. & Const. Law, 253, 328. "We are bound to take the act of Parliament as they have made it; a casus omissus can in no case be supplied by a court of law, for that would be to make laws." Jones v. Smart, 1 T. R. 44, 52. "Arguments drawn from impolicy or inconvenience ought here to be of no weight. The only sound principle is to declare ita lex scripta est, to follow, and to obey. Nor, if a principle so just and conclusive could be overlooked, could there well be found a more unsafe guide in practice than mere policy and convenience." Story, Const. § 426. "I shall always deem it a duty to conform to the expressions of the legislature, to the letter of the statute, when free from ambiguity and doubt; without indulging a speculation either upon the impolicy or the hardship of the law." Mr. Justice Chase, in Priestman v. United States, 4 Dall. 30, note, 1 L. ed. 728, note. When, therefore, Congress, in words of perfectly clear and free from doubt, declares that the municipal legislation of Hawaii not contrary to the Constitution should remain in force, does not the court usurp the function of making laws, when it rules that certain municipal legislation of Hawaii was in force, although it was manifestly contrary to the Constitution? Can it depart from the plain, distinct words of the statute, upon any ground of policy or to remedy an omission by Congress?

I am of opinion: 1. That when the annexation of Hawaii was completed, the Constitution—without any declaration to that effect by Congress, and without any power of Congress to prevent it—became the supreme law for that country, and, therefore, it forbade the trial and conviction of the accused for murder otherwise than upon a presentment or an indictment of a grand jury, and by the unanimous verdict of a petit jury. *2. That [249] if the legality of such trial and conviction is to be tested alone by the joint resolution of 1898, then the law is for the accused, because Congress, by that resolution, abrogated, or forbade the enforcement of, any municipal law of Hawaii so far as it authorized a trial for an infamous crime otherwise than in the mode prescribed by the Constitution of the United States; and that any other construction of the resolution is for-bidden by its clear, unambiguous words, and is to make, not to interpret, the law.

The judgment of the District Court of the United States for Hawaii, discharging the accused, should be affirmed.

WILLIAM L. SNYDER, Executor, Plff. in Err.,
v.

BERNARD BETTMAN, Collector.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 249-260.)

Constitutional law—Federal succession tax on bequest to municipality.

A succession tax imposed under the authority of the act of Congress of June 13, 1898 (30 Stat. at L. 448, chap. 448, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2286), upon a bequest to a municipality for public purposes, is not unconstitutional as a tax upon an agency of the state, since such tax, being collected from the property while in the hands of the executor, who is required by § 30 of that act to liquidate it "before payment and distribution to the legatees," cannot be regarded as a tax upon the municipality, although it may operate incidentally to reduce the bequest by the amount of the tax.

[No. 230.]

Argued April 7, 8, 1903. Decided June 1, 1903.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of Ohio to review a judgment sustaining a demurrer to a petition in an action by an executor to recover from a collector of internal revenue the amount of a succession tax paid under protest upon a legacy bequeathed to a municipality in trust for public purposes. Affirmed.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brown:

This was an action brought by the executor of David L. Snyder against the collector of internal revenue to recover $22,000, succession tax upon a legacy of $220,000 bequeathed to the city of Springfield, Ohio, in trust to expend the income in the maintenance, improvement, and beautifying of a public park of the city, known as Snyder park, including any extension thereof which said city might acquire. Such tax having been paid under protest, this action was brought to secure a refunding of the same.

[250] *A demurrer to the petition having been sustained by the circuit court, and final judgment entered, the case was brought here by writ of error.

NOTE.—As to succession-tax laws generally—see notes to Re Howe (N. Y.) 2 L. R. A. 825; Wallace v. Myers (C. C. S. D. N. Y.) 4 L. R. A. 171; Com. v. Ferguson (Pa.) 10 L. R. A. 240; Re Romaine (N. Y.) 12 L. R. A. 401; Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 42 L. ed. U. S. 1037.

As to limitations on taxing power from mutual independence of Federal and state governments—see note to Grether v. Wright, 23 C. C. A. 515.

190 U. S.

Mr. J. E. Bowman argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The tax in question is a charge upon the legatee for the privilege of succeeding to the property.

Knowlton v. Moore, 178 U. S. 60, 44 L. ed. 977, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 747; Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 170 U. S. 283, 42 L. ed. 1037, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594.

The tax is an excise tax levied by the Federal government upon its subjects, the people of the United States, for the privilege of exercising the right to succeed to property under the laws of the several states.

This is in accord with the elementary principles of taxation. It is the exaction of money or services from individuals as and for their respective shares of contribution to any public burden, for the purpose of enabling the government to execute and discharge its functions.

25 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 12.

It is a contribution imposed by government on individuals for the services of the state.

Miller, Const. p. 235.

Taxation implies tribute from the governed to some form of sovereignty.

West Hartford v. Hartford Water Comrs. 44 Conn. 360.

Taxation is a charge levied by the sovereign power upon the property of its subjects. It is not a charge upon its own property, nor upon property over which it has no dominion. This excludes the property of the state, whether lands, revenues, or other property, and the property of the United States.

People v. McCrery, 34 Cal. 432; Van Brocklin v. Anderson, 117 U. S. 151, 29 L. ed. 845, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 670.

No state has any power to impose an income tax upon the salary of an officer of the United States.

Dobbins v. Erie County, 16 Pet. 435, 10 L. ed. 1022.

The United States has no power to impose an income tax upon the salary of a state officer.

Buffington v. Day, 11 Wall. 113, 20 L. ed. 122.

Congress did not intend by the internal revenue laws to tax property belonging to the states, or to municipal corporations.

United States v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 17 Wall. 322, 21 L. ed. 597.

The power to levy taxes, or to impose assessments for benefits, can only be exercised on the governed, and not on the governing power, whether state or Federal.

Van Brocklin v. Anderson, 117 U. S. 151, 29 L. ed. 845, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 670; Fagan v. Chicago, 84 Ill. 227.

The United States has no power under the Constitution to tax either the instrumentalities or the property of a state.

Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 157 U. S. 584, 39 L. ed. 820, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 673.

Assistant Attorney General Beck argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error:

The tax imposed by the war-revenue act is not imposed upon the property of the city of Springfield, but upon the estate of David L. Snyder, and his bequest did not become the property of the city of Springfield until after it had been diminished by the payment of the tax.

United States v. Perkins, 163 U. S. 628, 41 L. ed. 288, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1073.

The Federal government has a right to impose upon the assets of decedent a tax before its transmission to the legatee.

Plummer v. Coler, 178 U. S. 115, 44 L. ed. 998, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 774; Murdock v. Ward, 178 U. S. 139, 44 L. ed. 1009, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 775; Knowlton v. Moore, 178 U. S. 41, 44 L. ed. 969, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 747.

Mr. Justice Brown delivered the opinion of the court:

This case involves the single question whether it is within the power of the Federal government, and within the spirit of the act of Congress of June 13, 1898 (30 Stat. at L. 448, chap. 448, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2286), to impose a succession tax upon a bequest to a municipal corporation of a state for a corporate and public purpose.

The case is, to a certain extent, the converse of those of the United States v. Perkins, 163 U. S. 625, 41 L. ed. 287, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1073, and Plummer v. Coler, 178 U. S. 115, 44 L. ed. 998, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 774. In the first of these we held it to be within the competency of the state of New York to impose a similar tax upon a bequest to the Federal government, incidentally deciding that the inheritance tax of the state was "in reality a limitation upon the power of a testator to bequeath his property to whom he pleases, a declaration that, in the exercise of that power, he shall contribute a certain percentage to the public use;" and (2) that the tax was not a tax upon the property itself, but upon its transmission by will or descent. In Plummer v. Coler we held the incidental fact that the property bequeathed is composed in whole or in part of Federal securities did not invalidate the state tax or the law under which it was imposed, although it was accepted as undeniable that the state could not, in the exercise of the power of taxation, tax obligations of the United States, and, correlatively, that bonds issued by a state, or under its authority by its municipal bodies, were not taxable by the United States.

It is insisted, however, that the case under consideration is distinguished from those above cited, in the fact that the inheritance tax of New York was but a condition annexed to the power of a testator to dispose [251] of his property by will, and *that such power, being purely statutory, the state has the right to annex such conditions to it as it pleases. The case, then, really resolves itself into the question whether the authority to lay a succession tax arises solely from the power to regulate the descent of property, or, as well from the independent general power to tax, or, as expressed in the Constitution, art. I, § 8, "to lay and collect taxes, duties, imposts, and excises." The difficulty with this proposition of the plaintiff is that it proves too much. If it be true that the right to impose such taxes arises solely from the right to regulate successions, then a denial of such right goes to the whole power of the government to impose a succession tax, irrespective of the question whether the legacy is made to a private individual or to an agent of the state, and the cases in this court upholding the power of the Federal government to lay such tax were wrongly decided.

That question was exhaustively considered by this court in Knowlton v. Moore, 178 U. S. 41, 44 L. ed. 969, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 747, in which the constitutionality of this law was attacked upon four grounds: (1) That the taxes imposed were direct taxes, and not apportioned according to the population; (2) if not direct, they were levied on rights created solely by a state law, depending for their continued existence on the consent of the several states; (3) because they were not uniform throughout the United States; (4) that the rate of tax was determined by the aggregate amount of the personal estate of the deceased, and not by the sum of the legacies or distributive shares. It was held, following the cases of United States v. Perkins, 163 U. S. 625, 41 L. ed. 287, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1073, and Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 170 U. S. 283, 42 L. ed. 1037, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594, that an inheritance tax was not one upon property, but upon the succession. The question involved here, as to the power of Congress to levy a succession tax, was considered, and it was said by Mr. Justice White (p. 56, L. ed. p. 975, Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 753): "The proposition that it cannot rest upon the assumption that, since the transmission of property by death is exclusively subject to the regulating authority of the several states, therefore the levy by Congress of a tax on inheritances or legacies in any form is beyond the power of Congress, and is an interference by the national government *with a matter [252] which falls alone within the reach of state legislation." This proposition was pronounced a fallacy (p. 59, L. ed. p. 977, Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 755): "In legal effect, then, the proposition upon which the argument rests is that wherever a right is subject to exclusive regulation, by either the government of the United States on the one hand or the several states on the other, the exercise of such rights as regulated can alone be taxed by the government having the mission to regulate." In this connection was cited the power of the states to tax imported goods after they had been commingled with the general property of the state, as well as vehicles engaged in interstate commerce.

Continuing, it was further said (page 60, L. ed. p. 977, Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 755): "It cannot be doubted that the argument, when reduced to its essence, demonstrates its own unsoundness, since it leads to the necessary conclusion that both the national and state governments are divested of those powers of taxation which, from the foundation of the government, admittedly have belonged to them. . . . Under our constitutional system, both the national and the state governments, moving in their respective orbits, have a common authority to tax many and diverse objects, but this does not cause the exercise of its lawful attributes by one to be a curtailment of the powers of government of the other, for if it did there would practically be an end of the dual system of government which the Constitution established."

This case must be regarded as definitely establishing the doctrine that the power to tax inheritances does not arise solely from the power to regulate the descent of property, but from the general authority to impose taxes upon all property within the jurisdiction of the taxing power. It has usually happened that the power has been exercised by the same government which regulates the succession to the property taxed; but this power is not destroyed by the dual character of our government, or by the fact that, under our Constitution, the devolution of property is determined by the laws of the several states.

The principles laid down in Knowlton v. Moore were reiterated in Murdock v. Ward, 178 U. S. 139, 44 L. ed. 1009, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 775, although the case was decided upon the authority of Plummer v. Coler.

[253] If it be true that it is beyond the power of Congress to impose *an inheritance tax because the descent of property is regulated by state statutes, it would be difficult to support its power to impose stamp taxes upon commercial and legal instruments, since the conveyance, regulation, and transmission of all property is governed by the laws of the several states. Particularly would this be so with reference to stamp duties imposed upon documents connected with the devolution of the property of a deceased person. And yet, as stated in Knowlton v. Moore (page 50, L. ed. p. 973, Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 751) Congress, as early as 1797, imposed a stamp duty [1 Stat. at L. 527, chap. 11], not only upon receipts or other discharges for or on account of any legacy, or for a share of personal estate divided under the statute of distributions, proportioned to the amount of the legacy or such distributive share, but, in the internal revenue act of 1862 (12 Stat. at L. 432, 483, chap. 119, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 186), a tax was imposed upon the probate of wills and letters of administration, proportioned to the value of the estate. Not only this, but the same statute imposed a tax upon writs, or other original process, by which suits are commenced in any court of record, exempting only processes issued by justices of the peace, or in suits begun by the United States or any state. This act was treated as applicable to the state courts, although its constitutionality may well be doubted.

Referable to the same principle is the power of Congress to tax occupations which can only be carried on by permission of the state authorities and under conditions prescribed by its laws,—such, for instance, as the profession of a lawyer or physician, or the business of dealing in spirituous liquors, for which licenses are required under the laws of nearly all the states. While the power of Congress to impose such taxes may never have been expressly affirmed by this court, it does not seem to have been seriously questioned, and is a legitimate inference from McGuire v. Massachusetts, 3 Wall. 387, 18 L. ed. 226; License Tax Cases, 5 Wall. 462, 18 L. ed. 497; Pervear v. Massachusetts, 5 Wall. 475, 18 L. ed. 608; and Royall v. Virginia, 116 U. S. 572, 580, 29 L. ed. 735, 737, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 510. See also Ould v. Richmond, 23 Gratt. 464, 14 Am. Rep. 139; Humphreys v. Norfolk, 25 Gratt. 97.

Conceding fully that Congress has no power to impose a burden upon a state or its municipal corporations, the question *in [254] each case is whether the tax is direct or incidental; since we have had frequent occasion to hold that the imposition of a tax may indirectly affect the value of property to the amount of the tax without being legally objectionable as a direct burden upon such property. Thus, in Van Allen v. The Assessors, 3 Wall. 573, sub nom. Churchill v. Utica, 18 L. ed. 229, we held it to be within the power of the states to tax the shares of national banks, though a part or the whole of the capital of such bank were invested in national securities exempt from taxation, upon the ground that the taxation of the shares was not a taxation of the capital. So a tax upon deposits was upheld, though such deposits were invested in United States securities. Society for Savings v. Coite, 6 Wall. 594, 18 L. ed. 897; Provident Inst. for Savings v. Massachusetts, 6 Wall. 611, 18 L. ed. 907; Hamilton Mfg. Co. v. Massachusetts, 6 Wall. 632, 18 L. ed. 904. The same principle was extended to a statute of New York, imposing a tax upon corporations measured by its dividends, though such dividends were derived from interest upon government bonds. Home Ins. Co. v. New York, 134 U. S. 594, 33 L. ed. 1025, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 593. As the tax in the case under consideration is collected from the property while in the hands of the executor (§ 30), who is required to liquidate it "before payment and distribution to the legatees," we do not regard it as a tax upon the municipality, though it may operate incidentally to reduce the bequest by the amount of the tax. Such incidental effects are common to many, if not all, forms of taxation,—indeed, it may be said generally that few taxes are wholly paid by the person upon whom they are directly and primarily imposed.

Having determined, then, that Congress has the power to tax successions; that the states have the same power, and that such power extends to bequests to the United States, it would seem to follow logically that Congress has the same power to tax the transmission of property by legacy to states or their municipalities, and that the exercise of that power in neither case conflicts with the proposition that neither the Federal nor the state government can tax the property or agencies of the other, since, as repeatedly held, the taxes imposed are not upon property, but upon the right to succeed to property.

If the position of the plaintiff be sound, it [255] will come to pass *that, with the same power to tax the subject-matter, i. e., the transmission of the property, the states are competent to limit the amount of bequests to the Federal government by requiring the prepayment of a succession tax as a condition precedent to the transmission of the property, while Congress is impotent to accomplish the same result with respect to legacies to states or their agents. We are reluctant to admit the inferiority of Congress in that particular.

The judgment of the Circuit Court is therefore affirmed.

Mr. Justice White, with whom concur Mr. Chief Justice Fuller, and Mr. Justice Peckham, dissenting:

It is conceded in the opinion of the court that the bequest upon which it is sought to levy the United States inheritance tax was made to a municipal corporation for a public, that is, a governmental, purpose. This being the admitted premise, I cannot give my assent to the proposition that the tax can be imposed. Nothing is better settled than that the United States has no power to tax the governmental attributes of the states, and that municipal corporations are agencies of the states, and not subject, as to their public rights and duties, to direct or indirect taxation by the United States. The doctrine has nowhere been more clearly stated than in Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 157 U. S. 429, 583, 584, 39 L. ed. 759, 820, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 673, 690. In that case, despite the division of opinion on other questions, the court was unanimous in holding that, in any event, income subject to taxation by the United States could not include interest derived from municipal bonds, because to include such interest in income subject to taxation would amount at least to an indirect charge upon a state government's agency. Speaking through Mr. Chief Justice Fuller, the court said:

"The Constitution contemplates the independent exercise by the nation and the state, severally, of their constitutional powers.

"As the states cannot tax the powers, the operations, or the property of the United [256] States, nor the means which they employ *to carry their powers into execution, so it has been held that the United States have no power under the Constitution to tax either the instrumentalities or the property of a state.

"A municipal corporation is the representative of the state, and one of the instrumentalities of the state government. It was long ago determined that the property and revenues of municipal corporations are not subjects of Federal taxation. The Collector v. Day, 11 Wall. 113, 124, sub nom. Buffington v. Day, 20 L. ed. 122, 126; United States

v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 17 Wall. 322, 332, 21 L. ed. 597, 601."

It is true that in United States v. Perkins, 163 U. S. 625, 41 L. ed. 287, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1073, and Plummer v. Coler, 178 U. S. 115, 44 L. ed. 998, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 774, it was held in the one case that an inheritance tax of the state of New York could be taken out of a bequest to the United States, and in the other that a bequest of bonds of the United States was subject to a state inheritance tax. It is also true that in Knowlton v. Moore, 178 U. S. 41, 44 L. ed. 969, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 747, it was decided that the United States had the power to impose an inheritance tax. But the ruling in none of these cases, in my opinion, sustains the decision now made. The power of the state of New York, which was upheld in both the Perkins and Coler cases, rested not simply on the authority of that state to impose an inheritance tax, but upon its admitted right to regulate the transmission or receipt of property by death. On the other hand, the right of the United States to levy an inheritance tax, which was upheld in Knowlton v. Moore, was based solely upon the power of the United States to tax, and that case, therefore, conveys no intimation that there is authority in the United States to levy an inheritance tax upon an object which it has no power under the Constitution to tax at all, either directly or indirectly. The distinction between the two, that is, between the broader power of a state, resulting from its authority not only to tax but also to regulate the transmission or receipt of property by death, and the narrower power, that is, of taxation alone, vested in the government of the United States, was explicitly pointed out in Knowlton v. Moore, 178 U. S. at page 57, 44 L. ed. at p. 976, and 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. at p. 754. Moreover, attention was specially directed to the obvious distinction between the two on page 58, L. ed. p. 977, Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 754, where it was said:

"Of course, in considering the power of Congress to impose *death duties, we eliminate all thought of a greater privilege to do so than exists as to any other form of taxation, as the right to regulate successions is vested in the states, and not in Congress."

So also, the difference between the two had been previously accentuated in Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 170 U. S. 287, 288, 42 L. ed. 1040, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594. There is no confusion between the two classes of cases, and no room in reason seems to me to exist for the assumption that things which are different are nevertheless one and the same. On the contrary, to my mind it appears that misconception will necessarily be caused by confounding wholly different powers and from supposing that, because a particular result is justified where a specified power exists, the same consequence must obtain where the power upon which it depends is wanting. Certainly, I assume, it cannot be said because a state has the right to regulate successions and, therefore, to prevent property from passing by death to the United States, hence, also, the United States must have power, by regulating successions, to prevent property from passing by death to a state or its governmental agencies. And yet, in my opinion, this is the logical consequence of the doctrine that because the states may, in virtue of an authority belonging to them, accomplish a particular result as regards the United States, therefore the United States must have the right to bring about the same thing as to the states. The United States not possessing, as the states do, the right to regulate successions, when the United States calls into play its taxing power over the subject of the passage or receipt of property by death, the extent of its authority is to be measured solely by the scope of the taxing power conferred by the Constitution. When, on the contrary, the state imposes a burden upon the passage or receipt of property by death, its right to do so, if not sustainable by the exercise of the taxing power, finds adequate support in the authority vested in it to regulate the transmission or receipt of property on the occasion of death. This was clearly pointed out in United States v. Perkins, 163 U. S. 630, 41 L. ed. 289, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1075, where it was said: "The legacy becomes the property of the United States only after it has suffered a diminution to [258] the amount of the tax, and it is *only upon this condition that the legislature assents to a bequest of it." Nor do I see the force of the suggestion that, as the tax in question is imposed upon the property in the hands of the executor before payment and distribution to the legatees, it, therefore, cannot be regarded as tax upon the right of the municipality to receive the legacy. It was held, after great deliberation, in Knowlton v. Moore, 178 U. S. 41, 44 L. ed. 969, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 747, that the inheritance taxes levied by the act of Congress were not imposed on the estate of the decedent, but were laid on the passing of the legacies, and on nothing else. It cannot be the intention now to bring about the confusion which must arise from overthrowing this settled doctrine, since it is conceded that the only question for decision is the right of Congress to impose a succession tax upon the bequest to a municipal corporation, for a public purpose. It being admitted that such is the question for decision, I do not perceive how that question can be solved by saying that the tax is not on the passing of the bequest to the municipality, but is imposed on the estate in the hands of the executor before the municipality receives its legacy. It was not only directly held in Knowlton v. Moore that the tax was on the transmission or the receipt of the legacy occasioned by death, and was therefore not on the property, not on the estate, not on the executor, but that it was also held to be a burden imposed on the recipient. The court said (p. 60, L. ed. p. 977. Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 755):

"Certainly, a tax placed upon an inheritance or legacy diminishes, to the extent of the tax, the value of the right to inherit or receive, but this is a burden cast upon the recipient, and not upon the power of the state to regulate."

This conclusion was absolutely essential to the construction of the statute which was sustained in Knowlton v. Moore. I do not perceive how it can be now held that the tax is valid because it is on the estate in the hands of the executor and not a burden on the recipient, when the case of Knowlton v. Moore, which explicitly holds to the contrary, is expressly approved. It is, however, suggested that the tax is only incidentally on the right of the corporation to receive, and therefore is valid. If "incidentally" is intended to refer to the subject upon which the tax is levied, then the proposition, in my *opinion, only reiterates the misconception [259] to which attention has been previously called, and it, besides, conflicts with the conceded premise that the question for decision is whether a tax can be validly imposed on the right of a municipal corporation to take a legacy. Such cannot be the question if there is no such question in the case. If the term "incidentally" conveys the thought that the tax is only indirectly on the corporation's right to take the bequest, and therefore it may be lawfully imposed, the doctrine overthrows the rule announced by Chief Justice Marshall in M'Culloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheat. 316, 4 L. ed. 579, and reiterated in numberless cases since that decision, to the effect that where there is a want of constitutional power to tax a particular object, neither a direct nor an indirect tax can be imposed since the power to tax is the power to destroy. It to me seems that the tax here in question bears more directly upon the right of the corporation to take the bequest than did the tax which was condemned in M'Culloch v. Maryland. Assuredly, the inclusion, in income subject to taxation, of an amount derived from interest on municipal bonds, is less directly on the bonds than is the tax in this case on the right of the municipality to take; and yet, as I have said, in Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. the tax on an income made up in part of interest on a municipal bond was declared to be void, because, even if indirect, it could not be levied where there was no power to tax at all. The distinction was pointed out in Knowlton v. Moore, where, in referring to the statement of Mr. Chief Justice Marshall in M'Culloch v. Maryland, that the power to tax involves the power to destroy, it was said (p. 60, L. ed. p. 977, Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 755):

"This principle is pertinent only when there is no power to tax a particular subject. . . . In other words, the power to destroy, which may be the consequence of taxation, is a reason why the right to tax should be confined to subjects which may be lawfully embraced therein, even although it happens that, in some particular instance, no great harm may be caused by the exercise of the taxing authority as to a subject which is beyond its scope."

To my mind, no doctrine more dangerous and more subversive of a long line of settled authority in this court could be an-[260]nounced *than the statement that, although there is no power whatever to tax a particular object, the courts will nevertheless maintain a tax if it only indirectly puts a burden on the forbidden object, or that the tax may be sustained because, in the judgment of a court, the degree in which the Constitution has been violated is not great. Constitutional restrictions are, in my opinion, imperative, and ought not to be disregarded because, in a particular case, it may be the judgment of a court that the violation is not a very grievous one.

Testing the validity of the tax in this case solely by the extent of the power to tax conferred on the government of the United States by the Constitution, it follows, as the United States has no right to directly or indirectly burden a state governmental agency, that the tax here in question, in my opinion, cannot be sustained.

I am authorized to say that the CHIEF JUSTICE and Mr. Justice Peckham concur in this dissent.

GEORGE H. MIFFLIN et al., Appts.,
v.

R. H. WHITE COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 260-264.)

Copyright—sufficiency of notice—entry in author's name of prior publication in copyrighted magazine.

Any copyright protection for a work secured, under the act of February 3, 1831 (4 Stat. at L. 436, chap. 16), by entering for copyright in the name of the publishers the issues of a magazine which contain instalments thereof, is lost by the subsequent publication of the work in book form with no other notice of copyright than that of an entry in the author's name.

[No. 268.]

Argued April 30, May 1, 1903. Decided June 1, 1903.

APPEAL from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the First Circuit to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the Circuit Court for the District of Massachusetts dismissing a bill in equity for violation of a copyright. Affirmed.

See same case below, 50 C. C. A. 661, 112 Fed. 1004.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brown:

This was a bill in equity by the firm of Houghton, Mifflin, & Co., as assignees of the [261]late Oliver Wendell Holmes, against *the R. H. White Company, for a violation of the copyright upon "The Professor at the Breakfast Table." The work was published serially during the year 1859, in the Atlantic Monthly Magazine, at first by Phillips, Sampson, & Co., and later by the firm of Ticknor & Fields. The first ten parts were published from January to October, 1859, by Phillips, Sampson, & Co. without copyright protection. The remaining two numbers for the months of November and December, 1859, were entered for copyright by Ticknor & Fields, whose copyright purported to cover the entire magazine. After its publication serially had been completed, Dr. Holmes published the entire work in one volume, containing a proper notice of copyright.

Upon this state of facts the circuit court dismissed the bill (107 Fed. 708), and, upon appeal to the circuit court of appeals, that court affirmed the decree. 50 C. C. A. 661, 112 Fed. 1004.

Messrs. Samuel J. Elder and Edmund A. Whitman argued the cause and filed a brief for appellants:

The decisions in the United States on the requirement of notice have never held a copyright bad unless some essential element has been wholly omitted, or such notice is misleading.

Bleistein v. Donaldson Lithographing Co. 188 U. S. 239, ante, 460, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 298; Scribner v. Henry G. Allen Co. 49 Fed. 854; Scribner v. Clark, 50 Fed. 473, 144 U. S. 488, 36 L. ed. 514, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 734; Werckmeister v. Springer Lithographing Co. 63 Fed. 808; Sarony v. Burrow-Giles Lithographic Co. 17 Fed. 591.

Many informalities in such notices have been sustained so long as they contained all the elements, and did not mislead, and the statute had been substantially complied with.

Snow v. Mast, 65 Fed. 995; Falk v. Schumacher, 48 Fed. 222; Hefel v. Whitely Land Co. 54 Fed. 179; Bolles v. Outing Co. 46 L. R. A. 712, 23 C. C. A. 594, 77 Fed. 966.

The true test of the sufficiency of a copyright notice is its likelihood to mislead.

Callaghan v. Myers, 128 U. S. 617, 32 L. ed. 547, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 177.

Another test is whether the statute has been substantially complied with.

Myers v. Callaghan, 10 Biss. 139, 5 Fed. 726; Dwight v. Appleton, 1 N. Y. Legal Obs. 195, Fed. Cas. No. 4,215.

The magazine notice is distributive and carries entire protection for each contributor, although not specially named in the notice.

The relation between author and publisher is so close as to constitute such an identity of interest that notice in the name of the publisher is equivalent to notice in the name of the author.

Hole v. Bradbury, L. R. 12 Ch. Div. 886; Stevens v. Benning, 1 Kay & J. 168; Gibson v. Carruthers, 8 Mees. & W. 343.

The law secures copyright to the author alone, and it belongs to him, although registered in the name of his publisher.

1 Curtis, Hist. of U. S. Const. p. 532; Curtis, Copyright, pp. 77-79; Black v. Henry G. Allen Co. 56 Fed. 764; Pulte v. Derby, 5 McLean, 328, Fed. Cas. No. 11,465; Lawrence v. Dana, 4 Cliff. 1, Fed. Cas. No. 8,136; Drone, Copyright, pp. 260, 368.

Where copyright is registered in the publisher's name, the courts treat the author as the real owner and allow suits by him for protection of his copyright.
190 U. S.

Pulte v. Derby, 5 McLean, 328, Fed. Cas. No. 11,465; Scribner v. Clark, 50 Fed. 473; Belford C. & Co. v. Scribner, 144 U. S. 488, 36 L. ed. 514, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 734; Lawrence v. Dana, 4 Cliff. 1, Fed. Cas. No. 8,136.

It has been held in England that the court would enjoin a pirate from setting up in an action at law that the plaintiff did not have the legal title to the copyright when there was a real interest to be protected and the legal holder refused to allow suit in his name.

Sweet v. Cater, 11 Sim. 572.

This court always takes notice of the equitable interest, and if the equitable title to the copyright is complete this court will take care that the real question shall be tried, notwithstanding there may be a defect in respect of the legal property.

Bohn v. Bogue, 10 Jur. 420. See also Chappell v. Purday, 4 Younge & C. Exch. 485.

The statutory protection of literary property is a compensation given by the public to the author for dedicating his work to the public, and the public faith is pledged to secure him in his rights.

Bleistein v. Donaldson Lithographing Co. 188 U. S. 239, ante, 460, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 298; Walter v. Lane [1900] A. C. 539; Henderson v. Tompkins, 60 Fed. 758; Brightley v. Littleton, 37 Fed. 103; Carlisle v. Colusa County, 57 Fed. 979; Drury v. Ewing, 1 Bond, 540, Fed. Cas. No. 4,095; Grant v. Raymond, 6 Pet. 218, 8 L. ed. 376. See also Wheaton v. Peters, 8 Pet. 591, 8 L. ed. 1055; Kendall v. Winsor, 21 How. 322, 16 L. ed. 165; Gyles v. Wilcox, 2 Atk. 141; Maxwell v. Hogg, L. R. 2 Ch. 307; Beckford v. Hood, 7 T. R. 620.

The history of the notice clause shows that its purpose is merely to prevent the ignorant from being misled to their harm.

Beckford v. Hood, 7 T. R. 620.

The English decisions on their notice clause show that the name in a notice may be changed as the proprietorship of the copyright changes, so long as the change is not misleading.

Sayer v. Dicey, 3 Wils. 60; Thompson v. Symonds, 5 T. R. 41; Weldon v. Dicks, L. R. 10 Ch. Div. 247; Newton v. Cowie, 4 Bing. 234; Rock v. Lazarus, L. R. 15 Eq. 104.

Copyright can be secured for part of a work.

Low v. Ward, L. R. 6 Eq. 415; Cary v. Longman, 1 East, 358; Kipling v. G. P. Putnam's Sons, 120 Fed. 631; Reid v. Maxwell, 2 Times L. R. 790; Black v. Henry G. Allen Co. 9 L. R. A. 433, 42 Fed. 618; Harper v. Shoppell, 23 Blatchf. 431, 26 Fed. 519; White v. Geroch, 2 Barn. & Ald. 298; Drone, Copyright, 144-149; Lawrence v. Dana, 4 Cliff. 1, Fed. Cas. No. 8,136.

Every magazine is an illustration of the rule that the title has nothing necessarily to do with the contents, as the magazine title never changes, while its contents are always changing. There can be no copyright in a magazine title.

Osgood v. Allen, Holmes, 185, Fed. Cas. No. 10,603. See also Jollie v. Jaques, 1 Blatchf. 618, Fed. Cas. No. 7,437.

There is nothing in the language of the statute which prevents an author from changing the title between the time that he records it and the time that he deposits copies of the book.

Black v. Henry G. Allen Co. 56 Fed. 764.

President Walker's copyright on his work on the United States was not lost because he allowed it to be published as part of the contents of Vol. XXIII. of the Encyclopædia Britannica and under that title.

Ibid.

In Johnson v. Newnes [1894] 3 Ch. 663, the plaintiff was the author of a series of stories which he published serially and copyrighted under the general title of "Birds of the Night." One of the series with the subtitle "The Cabman's Story" was published separately under the latter title, and the objection was made that the title as registered was not used. The court, however, held the variance immaterial.

Mr. Andrew Gilhooly argued the cause and filed a brief for appellee:

The serial publication of "The Professor at the Breakfast Table," in the Atlantic Monthly, prior to any step being taken by Dr. Holmes towards securing a copyright of that work, invalidated the copyright thereof subsequently entered by Dr. Holmes.

Holmes v. Hurst, 174 U. S. 82, 43 L. ed. 904, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 606, Affirming 76 Fed. 757, 25 C. C. A. 610, 51 U. S. App. 271, 80 Fed. 514.

Where a copyright is originally invalid, no valid renewal can be secured.

Wheaton v. Peters, 8 Pet. 591, 8 L. ed. 1055; Drone, Copyright, 261.

The same exclusive right is continued the second term that existed the first.

Wheaton v. Peters, 8 Pet. 663, 8 L. ed. 1081.

The literary compositions, including the part of "The Professor at the Breakfast Table," which were published in the magazine number, received copyright protection—not under separate copyrights—but through the single copyright of the magazine number as an entire work, and a suit for reproduction of any part of that number must proceed for an infringement of a copyright of that number.

Bennett v. Boston Traveler Co. 41 C. C. A. 445, 101 Fed. 445; Harper v. Shoppell, 23 Blatchf. 431, 26 Fed. 519.

See also counsel's brief as reported in Mifflin v. Dutton, post, 1043.

Mr. Justice Brown delivered the opinion of the court:

That the copyright taken out by the author after the serial publication of his work in the Atlantic Monthly did not prevent the republication of so much of such serial as had appeared in the magazine prior to December, 1859, and before any steps taken to obtain a copyright, was settled by this court in Holmes v. Hurst, 174 U. S. 82, 43 L. ed. 904, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 606, wherein we held that the appearance of a work in a magazine, by consent of the author, was such a publication as vitiated the copyright, under § 4 of the copyright act of 1831. 4 Stat. at L. 436, chap. 16.

The question presented by this case is whether entering for copyright the last two parts of "The Professor at the Breakfast Table" in the December number of 1859 of the Atlantic Monthly by Ticknor & Fields, proprietors of the magazine, was sufficient to save the rights of the author, the plaintiff [262] *having purchased such rights from the executor of the late Dr. Holmes.

By § 1 of the act of February 3, 1831, "the author or authors of any book or books . . . not printed and published, . . . and the executors, administrators, or legal assigns of such person or persons, shall have the sole right and liberty of printing," etc. By § 4, "no person shall be entitled to the benefit of this act, unless he shall, before publication, deposit a printed copy of the title of such book . . . in the clerk's office of the district court of the district wherein the author or proprietor shall reside," when the clerk is directed to make a record of the same, in a form prescribed, wherein is stated the date, the name of the author or proprietor, etc.; and, by § 5, the person entitled to the benefit of the act shall give information of his copyright, by giving notice on the title page, or page immediately following, in a prescribed form. Construing these statutes together, it would seem that the word "proprietor," in the 4th section, must practically have the same meaning as "legal assigns," in the 1st section, and was designed to give to the legal assignee of any author or authors the right to take out the copyright in his own name.

There is no evidence in this case, however, that Dr. Holmes, the author of "The Professor at the Breakfast Table," ever assigned to either of the proprietors of the magazine the authority to copyright his work. While there is an allegation in the bill, upon information and belief, that the work—the first ten parts of which were published by Phillips, Sampson, & Co.—was printed, published, and sold by said Phillips, Sampson, & Co. "by and with the consent and authority of the said Oliver Wendell Holmes, and in accordance with an agreement" made with him by the said firm, whereby he granted to them the right to print, publish, and sell his work in the said magazine, there is no allegation that either Phillips, Sampson, & Co. or their successors, Ticknor & Fields, were authorized to enter "The Professor at the Breakfast Table" for copyright, either in their own names, or in the name of the author; nor does there appear to be any connection whatever between the copyright taken out by Ticknor & Fields and that subsequently taken out by Dr.

[263] Holmes. *The entry of the Atlantic Monthly by Ticknor & Fields was evidently not intended for the protection of the author of each article therein appearing, but for their own protection, and to prevent the republication of the December number of the Atlantic Monthly. While, without further explanation, it might, perhaps, be inferred that the author of a book who places it in the hands of publishers for publication, might be presumed to intend to authorize them to obtain a copyright in their own names (Pulte v. Derby, 5 McLean, 328, Fed. Cas. No. 11,465; Belford, C. & Co. v. Scribner, 144 U. S. 488, 504, 36 L. ed. 514, 519, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 734), it is apparent that there was no such intention in this case, inasmuch as, almost immediately after the publication of the December number of the magazine, Dr. Holmes himself entered the book, under its correct title, for copyright. That right was never assigned until 1895, when it was turned over to the plaintiffs by the executor of the author. Had the copyright been entered by Ticknor & Fields, as agents of Dr. Holmes, it is possible it might have been sustained, but there is nothing to indicate that Ticknor & Fields were acting for anyone else than themselves; and there is nothing to show that Dr. Holmes ever assented to their copyrighting his work. It is impossible to see how the copyright subsequently obtained by Dr. Holmes can derive any additional support from the fact that Ticknor & Fields chose to copyright the final chapters of the work in the Atlantic Monthly, since there is nothing to indicate that he even knew that any such proceedings were contemplated, much less that he authorized it.

But, even assuming that it was done by his authority, there is an additional question whether the entry of a book called the "Atlantic Monthly Magazine," in the name of Ticknor & Fields, is equivalent to entering a book called "The Professor at the Breakfast Table," by Oliver Wendell Holmes. The two entries were in the following form:

1. Entry of the Atlantic Monthly for the month of December, 1859: "Entered according to act of Congress in the year 1859, by Ticknor & Fields in the clerk's office of the district court of the district of Massachusetts."

2. Entry of "The Professor at the Breakfast Table:" "Entered according to act of Congress in the year 1859, by Oliver *Wen-[264] dell Holmes, in the clerk's office of the district court of the district of Massachusetts."

The object of the notice being to warn the public against the republication of a certain book by a certain author or proprietor, it is difficult to see how a person reading either of these notices would understand that they were intended for the protection of the same work. On their face they would seem to be designed for an entirely different purpose. While, owing to the great reputation of the work and the fame of its author, we might infer in this particular case that no publisher was actually led to believe that the book copyrighted by Dr. Holmes was not the same work which had appeared in the Atlantic Monthly, that would be an unsafe criterion to apply to a work of less celebrity. It might well be that a book not copyrighted, or insufficiently copyrighted, by the author might be republished by another in total ignorance of the fact that it had previously appeared serially in a copyrighted magazine. It is incorrect to say that any form of notice is good which calls attention to the person of whom inquiry can be made and information obtained, since, the right being purely statutory, the public may justly demand that the person claiming a monopoly of publication shall pursue, in substance, at least, the statutory method of securing it. Thompson v. Hubbard, 131 U. S. 123, 33 L. ed. 76, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 710. In determining whether a notice of copyright is misleading, we are not bound to look beyond the face of the notice, and inquire whether, under the facts of the particular case, it is reasonable to suppose an intelligent person could actually have been misled.

With the utmost desire to give a construction to the statute most liberal to the author, we find it impossible to say that the entry of a book under one title by the publishers can validate the entry of another book of a different title by another person.

The decree of the Court of Appeals was correct, and it is therefore affirmed.

[265] *GEORGE H. MIFFLIN et al., Appts.,
v.

BENJAMIN F. DUTTON et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 265, 266.)

Copyright—sufficiency of notice—magazine copyright of copyrighted book.

A copyright of a book, obtained by an author in her own name, is vitiated for failure to comply with the requirement of the act of February 3, 1831, § 5 (4 Stat. at L. 436, chap. 16), that notice of copyright be inserted in each copy of the work, by its subsequent publication, with her consent, in a magazine with no other notice of copyright than that of the entry of the magazine in the name of its publishers.

[No. 267.]

Argued April 30, May 1, 1903. Decided June 1, 1903.

APPEAL from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the First Circuit to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the Circuit Court for the District of Massachusetts dismissing a bill in equity for the violation of a copyright. Affirmed.

See same case below, 50 C. C. A. 661, 112 Fed. 1004.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brown:

This was a bill in equity by the firm of Houghton, Mifflin, & Co., assignees of the late Harriet Beecher Stowe, against the firm of Houghton & Dutton, for a violation of the copyright of "The Minister's Wooing," by Mrs. Stowe.

"The Minister's Wooing" appeared serially in the Atlantic Monthly during the year 1859. The contract between Mrs. Stowe and her publishers, Phillips, Sampson, & Co.,
190 U. S.

after reciting that Mrs. Stowe was the author and owned the copyright of, and right to publish, the book, gave to Phillips, Sampson, & Co. "the sole and exclusive right to publish the same in this country." After the first twenty-nine chapters had appeared in the first ten numbers of the Atlantic Monthly for the year 1859, the author published the whole work in book form on October 15, 1859, and took proper steps to secure the copyright, notice of which was given in the name of Harriet Beecher Stowe. At the date of this publication the last thirteen chapters had not been elsewhere published, but subsequently appeared in the November and December numbers, which were copyrighted by Ticknor & Fields, to whom the Atlantic Monthly had been sold, and in accordance with an arrangement with Mrs. Stowe, by which the contract between her and Phillips, Sampson, & Co. was assigned to Ticknor & Fields.

Upon this state of facts the circuit court dismissed the bill, *and, upon appeal to the [266] circuit court of appeals, that court affirmed the decree. Both this and the preceding case were covered by the same opinion.

Messrs. Samuel J. Elder and Edmund A. Whitman argued the cause and filed a brief for appellants.

For their contentions see their brief as reported in Mifflin v. R. H. White Co., ante. 1040.

Mr. Andrew Gilhooly argued the cause and filed a brief for appellees:

It is the settled law of this country that the right of an author to a monopoly of his publications is measured and determined by the copyright act.

Holmes v. Hurst, 174 U. S. 82, 43 L. ed. 904, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 606.

The right of action, as well as the copyright itself, is wholly statutory, and the means of securing any right of action are only those prescribed by Congress.

Thompson v. Hubbard, 131 U. S. 123, 33 L. ed. 76, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 710.

One of the conditions precedent to the perfection of a copyright was the insertion of notice of copyright in the prescribed form in all published copies.

Ibid.

The two copyrights which were entered by Ticknor & Fields on the November and December, 1859, numbers of the Atlantic Monthly, were clearly invalid so far as they related to the part of "The Minister's Wooing" therein published, because both of those copyrights were entered after publication of the whole of "The Minister's Wooing," by Harriet Beecher Stowe, in book form.

Holmes v. Hurst, 174 U. S. 82, 43 L. ed. 904, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 606.

As the first twenty-nine chapters of "The Minister's Wooing" were published in the Atlantic Monthly before Mrs. Stowe entered "The Minister's Wooing" for copyright, she could not obtain copyright for those twenty-nine chapters, and to that extent her attempted copyright of "The Minister's Wooing" was invalid.

Holmes v. Hurst, 174 U. S. 82, 43 L. ed. 904, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 606, Affirming 25 C. C. A. 610, 51 U. S. App. 271, 76 Fed. 757, 80 Fed. 514.

This requirement of giving the prescribed notice has always been held under all the statutes to be one of the conditions precedent to the perfection of a copyright, the other two being the deposit before publication of the printed copy of the title, and depositing in the proper office, within the prescribed time, of a copy or copies of the book.

Thompson v. Hubbard, 131 U. S. 123, 33 L. ed. 76, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 710; Drone, Copyright, p. 264.

While the courts have been liberal in holding any form of notice sufficient which contains the essentials of "name," "claim of exclusive right," and "date when obtained," they have not yet sustained the sufficiency of a notice which wholly omits some one of these essentials.

Burrow-Giles Lithographic Co. v. Sarony, 111 U. S. 53, 28 L. ed. 349, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 279; Bolles v. Outing Co. 46 L. R. A. 712, 23 C. C. A. 594, 45 U. S. App. 449, 77 Fed. 966; Hoertel v. Raphael Tuck Sons & Co. 94 Fed. 844.

There can be no valid copyright if the name of the person taking out the copyright is wholly omitted from the notice.

Thompson v. Hubbard, 131 U. S. 123, 33 L. ed. 76, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 710; Osgood v. A. S. Aloe Instrument Co. 83 Fed. 470, 69 Fed. 291; Higgins v. Keuffel, 30 Fed. 627, Affirmed in 140 U. S. 428, 35 L. ed. 470, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 731; 7 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 557; Jackson v. Walkie, 29 Fed. 15; Baker v. Taylor, 2 Blatchf. 82, Fed. Cas. No. 782.

The exact form of the notice is prescribed by law, and no equivalent is provided for, nor is any room for an equivalent left.

Higgins v. Keuffel, 30 Fed. 628; Thompson v. Hubbard, 131 U. S. 148, 33 L. ed. 85, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 710.

For other contentions of counsel see his brief as reported in Mifflin v. R. H. White Co. ante, 1040.

Mr. Justice Brown delivered the opinion of the court:

As the first twenty-nine chapters of "The Minister's Wooing" appeared in the Atlantic Monthly before any steps whatever were taken, either by the publishers or by Mrs. Stowe, to obtain a copyright, it follows that they, at least, became public property.

Mrs. Stowe's copyright of the last thirteen chapters would doubtless have been valid but for the fact that they subsequently appeared in the November and December numbers of the Atlantic Monthly without notice of such copyright. As we have already held that the copyright of the Atlantic Monthly by Ticknor & Fields did not operate as notice of the rights of the author to any article therein appearing, it follows from the case just decided that the appearance of the last thirteen chapters in the Atlantic Monthly vitiated the copyright under § 5, 1044 which provides that no person shall be entitled to the benefit of the act unless he shall give information of his copyright by causing to be inserted in the several copies of each and every edition published during the term secured a notice of such copyright.

It is exceedingly unfortunate that, with the pains taken by the authors of these works to protect themselves against republication, they should have failed in accomplishing their object; but the right being purely statutory, we see no escape from the conclusion that, unless the substance as well as the form of the statute be disregarded, the right has been lost in both of these cases.

The decree in this case is also affirmed.

*NORTHERN PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,
v.

ABNER TOWNSEND et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 267-273.)

Adverse possession — of railroad right of way.

Adverse ownership for private use under a state statute of limitations can confer no title on an individual to a portion of the right of way granted by the act of Congress of July 2, 1864, § 2 (13 Stat. at L. 365, chap. 217), to the Northern Pacific Railroad Company for the construction of its road.

[No. 160.]

Submitted January 30, 1903. Decided May 4, 1903.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Minnesota to review a judgment which reversed a judgment of the trial court in favor of the Northern Pacific Railroad Company in an action of ejectment brought by it to recover possession of a portion of its right of way. Reversed.

See same case below, 84 Minn. 152, 86 N. W. 1007.

Statement by Mr. Justice White:

This controversy concerns the validity of an asserted title, by adverse possession, to a portion of the right of way in Wadena county, Minnesota, granted to the Northern Pacific Railroad Company, its successors and assigns, by the 2d section of the act of Congress approved July 2, 1864. 13 Stat. at L. 365, chap. 217. The plaintiff in error, the Northern Pacific Railway Company, a corporation of the state of Wisconsin, acquired the railroad and property of the former named company on or about August 31, 1896, by purchase at a sale under foreclosure of certain mortgages.

By the 1st section of the act of 1864 the Northern Pacific Railroad Company was created a corporation, and was empowered to construct and maintain a continuous railroad and telegraph line from a point on NOTE.—On railroad rights of way—see note to Illinois C. R. Co. v. Houghton (Ill.) 1 L. R. A. 214.

Lake Superior to some point on Puget sound. In the 2d section of the act it was provided, among other things, as follows:

[268] **"And be it further enacted, That the right of way through the public lands be and the same is hereby granted to said 'Northern Pacific Railroad Company,' its successors and assigns, for the construction of a railroad and telegraph, as proposed; and the right, power, and authority is hereby given to said corporation to take from the public lands adjacent to the line of said road, material of earth, stone, timber, and so forth, for the construction thereof. Said way is granted to said railroad to the extent of 200 feet in width on each side of said railroad, where it may pass through the public domain, including all necessary ground for station buildings, workshops, depots, machine shops, switches, side tracks, turn-tables, and water stations; and the right of way shall be exempt from taxation within the territories of the United States. . . ."*

Section 3 created a large land grant to secure the construction and continuous maintenance of the road. Construction was to be supervised by commissioners appointed by the President. Sec. 4. Section 5 provided how the road must be built, and that the company should not charge the government higher rates than individuals. The right of eminent domain was conferred by § 7. In § 8 conditions of the grant in respect to the commencement and completion of the construction of the road were enumerated. Section 9 reserved the right to Congress to complete the road. Section 10 secured to all the people of the United States the right to subscribe for its stock. Section 11 made it a post road subject to the use of the United States for government service, and subject to such regulations as Congress might impose respecting charges for government transportation. The remaining provisions of the act dealt with the mode of acceptance of the grant, the powers and duties of the board of directors and other officers of the company, the payments of cash assessments, and other subjects. We need only further particularly refer, however, to § 18, wherein it was provided that the railroad company, previous to commencing the construction of its road, should obtain the consent of the legislature of any state through which any portion of its line might pass. Such consent was duly given by the state of Minnesota.

[269] *The company signified its acceptance in writing, as provided in the act. In November, 1871, the line of road was definitely located, and a duly approved map was filed showing said definite location. This line crossed the northwest quarter of section 24, township 134 north, of range 35 west, of the fifth principal meridian, Minnesota. At that time, as well as prior thereto, said quarter section was public land, to which the United States had full title, and the same was not reserved or otherwise appropriated, nor had any entries or filings or applications to make entry or filing thereon been made. During the years 1870 and 1871 the railroad was duly constructed through the section referred to, and the portion of the road thus constructed was thereafter duly accepted by the President.

In December, 1878, and February, 1882, homestead entries were initiated on said northwest quarter of section 24, and on November 30, 1885, and July 24, 1889, patents, which purported to convey the whole of each 40-acre subdivision, were issued to Abner Townsend and George H. Brown, respectively. Subsequently, in 1886 and 1888, the title to said northwest quarter was conveyed to the defendant in error Minerva Townsend. During the occupancy of the homesteaders, they cultivated up to the line of the ordinary and snow fences of the railroad, situated respectively 50 and 100 feet from the center of the track, and such occupancy continued a sufficient length of time to constitute a title by adverse possession under the limitation statutes of Minnesota. Demand was made by the railroad company for possession of that portion of the quarter section which was within the granted right of way, and, upon noncompliance, an action of ejectment was brought in a court of the state of Minnesota to recover possession of the disputed ground. The case was tried by the court without a jury. Lengthy findings of fact were made, and, as a conclusion of law, the court found that the railroad company was entitled to the possession of the premises described, and entered judgment accordingly.

On appeal the supreme court of Minnesota reversed the judgment of the trial court. 84 Minn. 152, 86 N. W. 1007. The cause was then brought to this court.

Messrs. C. W. Bunn and James B. Kerr submitted the cause for plaintiff in error:

This right of way is not a mere easement, or right of passage, but a fee title, conferring on the company the sole and exclusive right of occupation.

New Mexico v. United States Trust Co. 172 U. S. 171, 43 L. ed. 407, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 128.

The company was entitled to the full width of 200 feet on each side of the road, and this width could not be diminished by any court or tribunal upon the ground that a less width was sufficient for railroad purposes.

Northern P. R. Co. v. Smith, 171 U. S. 260, 43 L. ed. 157, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 794.

Under the decisions of this court the corporation is incapable of alienating any part of the right of way granted by Congress.

York & M. L. R. Co. v. Winans, 17 How. 30, 15 L. ed. 27; Gue v. Tide Water Canal Co. 24 How. 257, 16 L. ed. 635; East Alabama R. Co. v. Doe ex dem. Visscher, 114 U. S. 340, 29 L. ed. 136, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 869; Thomas v. West Jersey R. Co. 101 U. S. 71, 25 L. ed. 950; Hartford F. Ins. Co. v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 175 U. S. 91, 44 L. ed. 84, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 33; Grand Trunk R. Co. v. Richardson, 91 U. S. 454, 23 L. ed. 356; Slocumb v. Chicago, B. & Q.

R. Co. 57 Iowa, 675, 11 N. W. 641; Union P. R. Co. v. Kindred, 43 Kan. 134, 23 Pac. 112; Southern P. Co. v. Hyatt, 132 Cal. 240, 54 L. R. A. 522, 64 Pac. 272; East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. v. Telford, 89 Tenn. 293, sub nom. East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. v. West, 10 L. R. A. 855, 14 S. W. 776.

Mr. Harold Preston submitted the cause for defendants in error. Messrs. A. G. Broker and F. T. Post were with him on the brief:

The nature of the right of way through the public lands, which the railroad obtained by the grant, was no different from that which it had acquired from private lands by purchase or by condemnation proceedings under the laws of the several states through which it passed.

Northern P. R. Co. v. Spokane, 12 C. C. A. 246, 29 U. S. App. 81, 64 Fed. 508.

Not only did the predecessor of plaintiff, more than twenty years ago, dedicate streets across its right of way in the heart of the city of Spokane, but it also sold and conveyed lots and blocks carved out of this right of way to many different parties, who have erected thereon hotels, warehouses, and other permanent structures.

Northern P. R. Co. v. Ely, 25 Wash. 386, 54 L. R. A. 526, 65 Pac. 555.

A railroad company may lose part of its right of way by adverse possession.

St. Paul v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 45 Minn. 387, 48 N. W. 17, 22; Wayzata v. Great Northern R. Co. 50 Minn. 438, 52 N. W. 913; Pittsburg, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Stiekley, 155 Ind. 312, 58 N. E. 192; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Houghton, 126 Ill. 233, 1 L. R. A. 213, 18 N. E. 301; Illinois C. R. Co. v. O'Connor, 154 Ill. 550, 39 N. E. 563; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Moore, 160 Ill. 9, 43 N. E. 364; Donahue v. Illinois C. R. Co. 165 Ill. 640, 46 N. E. 714; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Wakefield, 173 Ill. 564, 50 N. E. 1002; Matthews v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. 110 Mich. 170, 67 N. W. 1111; Turner v. Fitchburg R. Co. 145 Mass. 433, 14 N. E. 627; Gay v. Boston & A. R. Co. 141 Mass. 407, 6 N. E. 236; Paxton v. Yazoo & M. Valley R. Co. 76 Miss. 536, 24 So. 536; Spottiswoode v. Morris & E. R. Co. 61 N. J. L. 322, 40 Atl. 505; Northern P. R. Co. v. Ely, 25 Wash. 384, 54 L. R. A. 526, 65 Pac. 555; Bobbett v. South Eastern R. Co. L. R. 9 Q. B. Div. 424; Norton v. London & N. W. R. Co. L. R. 13 Ch. Div. 268; Erie & N. R. Co. v. Rousseau, 17 Ont. App. Rep. 483.

Abandonment of part of a right of way, the remainder being still used, will not extinguish the entire right of way, but only so much of it as has been abandoned.

Lattimer v. Livermore, 72 N. Y. 174; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Covington, 2 Bush, 526.

If a grant is to be presumed by adverse possession, the plaintiff would be in the same position as if it had given a deed of the property to defendants and was seeking to set it aside and for possession, upon the ground that the deed was ultra vires. This it could not do.

St. Louis, V. & T. H. R. Co. v. Terre Haute & I. R. Co. 145 U. S. 393, 36 L. ed. 748, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 953.

If it would be in violation of its powers for the plaintiff to alienate or abandon any part of its right of way, no matter how small or useless, the validity of its acts can be questioned only by the government.

Union Nat. Bank v. Matthews, 98 U. S. 621, 25 L. ed. 188; American Emigrant Co. v. Adams County, 100 U. S. 61, 25 L. ed. 563; Fritts v. Palmer, 132 U. S. 282, 33 L. ed. 317, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 93.

Mr. Justice White, after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

At the outset, we premise that, as the grant of the right of way, the filing of the map of definite location, and the construction of the railroad within the quarter section in question preceded the filing of the homestead entries on such section, the land forming the right of way therein was taken out of the category of public lands subject to pre-emption and sale, and the Land Department was therefore without authority to convey rights therein. It follows that the homesteaders acquired no interest in the land within the right of way because of the fact that the grant to them was of the full legal subdivisions.

Conceding the adverse possession and its efficacy under the state law as against the railroad right of way to be as found by the state court, the sole question which arises, then, for decision is whether, in view of the provisions of the act of Congress to which we have referred, an asserted title by adverse possession can be made efficacious as respects the property in controversy. And depending, as this question does, upon the nature and effect of the acts of Congress, its solution necessarily involves a Federal question.

In determining whether an individual, for private purposes, may, by adverse possession, under a state statute of limitations, acquire title to a portion of the right of way granted by the United States for the use of this railroad, we must be guided by the doctrine enunciated in Paeker v. Bird, 137 U. S. 661, 669, 34 L. ed. 819, 821, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 210, and approvingly referred to in Shively v. Bowlby, 152 U. S. 1, 44, 38 L. ed. 331, 347, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 548, 564, viz.: "The courts of the United States will construe the grants of the general government without reference to the rules of construction adopted by the states for their grants; but whatever incidents or rights attach to the ownership *of property conveyed by the [271] government will be determined by the states, subject to the condition that their rules do not impair the efficacy of the grants or the use and enjoyment of the property by the grantee." Following decisions of this court construing grants of rights of way similar in tenor to the grant now being considered (New Mexico v. United States Trust Co. 172 U. S. 171, 181, 43 L. ed. 407, 410, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 128; St. Joseph & 190 U. S.

Denver C. R. Co. v. Baldwin, 103 U. S. 426, 26 L. ed. 578), it must be held that the fee passed by the grant made in § 2 of the act of July 2, 1864. But, although there was a present grant, it was yet subject to conditions expressly stated in the act, and also (to quote the language of the Baldwin Case) "to those necessarily implied, such as that the road shall be . . . used for the purposes designed." Manifestly, the land forming the right of way was not granted with the intent that it might be absolutely disposed of at the volition of the company. On the contrary, the grant was explicitly stated to be for a designated purpose,—one which negated the existence of the power to voluntarily alienate the right of way or any portion thereof. The substantial consideration inducing the grant was the perpetual use of the land for the legitimate purposes of the railroad, just as though the land had been conveyed in terms to have and to hold the same so long as it was used for the railroad right of way. In effect the grant was of a limited fee, made on an implied condition of reverter in the event that the company ceased to use or retain the land for the purpose for which it was granted. This being the nature of the title to the land granted for the special purpose named, it is evident that, to give such efficacy to a statute of limitations of a state as would operate to confer a permanent right of possession to any portion thereof upon an individual for his private use, would be to allow that to be done by indirection which could not be done directly; for, as said in Grand Trunk R. Co. v. Richardson, 91 U. S. 454, 468, 23 L. ed. 356, 361, "a railroad company . . . is not at liberty to alienate any part of it so as to interfere with the full exercise of the franchises granted." Nor can it be rightfully contended that the portion of the right of way appropriated was not necessary for the execution of the [272] powers conferred *by Congress, for, as said in Northern P. R. Co. v. Smith, 171 U. S. 261, 275, 43 L. ed. 158, 163, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 794, 799, speaking of the very grant under consideration: "By granting a right of way 400 feet in width, Congress must be understood to have conclusively determined that a strip of that width was necessary for a public work of such importance." Neither courts nor juries, therefore, nor the general public, may be permitted to conjecture that a portion of such right of way is no longer needed for the use of the railroad, and title to it has vested in whomsoever chooses to occupy the same. The whole of the granted right of way must be presumed to be necessary for the purposes of the railroad, as against a claim by an individual of an exclusive right of possession for private purposes.

To repeat, the right of way was given in order that the obligations to the United States, assumed in the acceptance of the act, might be performed. Congress having plainly manifested its intention that the title to, and possession of, the right of way should continue in the original grantee, its succe-sors and assigns, so long as the railroad was maintained, the possession by individuals of portions of the right of way cannot be treated without overthrowing the act of Congress, as forming the basis of an adverse possession which may ripen into a title good as against the railroad company.
190 U. S.

Of course, nothing that has been said in anywise imports that a right of way granted through the public domain within a state is not amenable to the police power of the state. Congress must have assumed when making this grant, for instance, that in the natural order of events, as settlements were made along the line of the railroad, crossings of the right of way would become necessary, and that other limitations in favor of the general public upon an exclusive right of occupancy by the railroad of its right of way might be justly imposed. But such limitations are in no sense analogous to claim of adverse ownership for private use.

As our construction of the act of Congress determines the question presented for decision, it becomes unnecessary to review the cases which have been called to our attention supporting, on the one hand, or denying, on the other, the broad contention *that ti- [273] tle by adverse possession, under state statutes of limitation, may be acquired by individuals to land within the right of way of a railroad. None of the cases adverted to as holding the affirmative of the proposition even suggest that the rule would be applicable where its enforcement would conflict with the powers and duties imposed by law on a railroad corporation in a given case. As here we find that the nature of the duties imposed by Congress upon the railroad company and the character of the title conferred by Congress in giving the right of way through the public domain are inconsistent with the power in an individual to acquire, for private purposes, by limitation, a portion of the right of way granted by Congress, the cases in question are inapposite.

The judgment of the Supreme Court of Minnesota must be reversed, and the case remanded to that court for further proceedings not inconsistent with this opinion. And it is so ordered.

Mr. Justice Harlan and Mr. Justice Brown dissent.

INTERSTATE COMMERCE COMMISSION, Appt.,
v.

LOUISVILLE & NASHVILLE RAILROAD COMPANY, Western Railway of Alabama, and Atlanta & West Point Railroad Company.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 273-287.)

Carriers — freight rates—discrimination—long and short hauls—possible competition.

1. Freight rates from New Orleans, Louisiana, to LaGrange, Georgia, arrived at by charging the through rate to Atlanta, Georgia, fixed as the result of competition at that point, and adding thereto the local rate back over the same line from Atlanta to LaGrange, are not obnoxious to the prohibition of the Interstate Commerce Act against undue discrimination and a greater charge for a shorter than for a longer haul under substantially similar circumstances and conditions, because stations between LaGrange and Atlanta to which the same rule is applied receive lower rates from New Orleans than LaGrange, where the LaGrange rates, if based on the nearest competitive point south, with the local rate from such point added, would be still higher.

NOTE.—On discrimination in freight rates—see notes to United States v. Tozer (D. C. E. D. Mo.) 2 L. R. A. 444; Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co. v. Dey (Iowa) 12 L. R. A. 436.

2. The possibility of competition arising at a particular point does not render freight rates to that point, though higher than those for a longer haul to a point where competition prevails, obnoxious to the prohibition of the Interstate Commerce Act against a greater charge for a shorter than for a longer haul under substantially similar circumstances and conditions.

[No. 214.]

Argued April 13, 1903. Decided May 18, 1903.

APPPEAL from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit to review a decree which reversed a decree of the Circuit Court for the Southern District of Alabama sustaining an order of the Interstate Commerce Commission and remanded the cause for further proceedings. Affirmed.

See same case below, 46 C. C. A. 685, 108 Fed. 988.

Statement by Mr. Justice White:

The connecting roads of the appellees form the short line—496 miles in length—between New Orleans and Atlanta. The through line consists of the Louisville & Nashville Railroad from New Orleans to Montgomery, the Western Railway of Alabama between Montgomery and West Point, and the Atlanta & West Point Railroad from West Point to Atlanta.

LaGrange is on the Western Railway of Alabama, 104 miles from Montgomery. Opelika lies between Montgomery and LaGrange, and is 38 miles distant from the latter place. LaGrange and the following stations between it and Atlanta are distant from Atlanta, as follows: LaGrange, 71 miles; Hogansville, 58 miles; Newnan, 30 miles; Palmetto, 25 miles; and Fairburn, 18 miles.

Pursuant to § 13 of the Act to Regulate Commerce [24 Stat. at L. 383, chap. 104, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3164], Fuller E. Calloway, a merchant of LaGrange, filed a complaint against the appellees herein with the Interstate Commerce Commission. We take from the opinion rendered by the Commission in that proceeding the following synopsis of the averments of the complaint and answer:

"The complaint alleges, in substance, that defendants are subject to the provisions of the Act to Regulate Commerce; that rates charged by them for the transportation by continuous carriage or shipment of freights, wholly by railroad, from New Orleans, Louisiana, to LaGrange, Georgia, are unjust and unreasonable *in themselves, and relatively unjust and unreasonable as compared with lower rates charged by defendants for carrying the same commodities over longer distances from New Orleans through LaGrange to Hogansville, Newnan, Palmetto, and Fairburn, Georgia, and other localities; that defendants' said rates from New Orleans to LaGrange and said longer-distance points and other localities unjustly discriminate against complainant and others, the city of LaGrange and vicinity and traffic carried thereto, and subject merchants and dealers therein to undue and unreasonable prejudice and disadvantage, and give undue and unreasonable preference and advantage to merchants and dealers at Hogansville, Newnan, Palmetto, Fairburn, and other localities and traffic consigned thereto; that defendants' said rates from New Orleans to LaGrange, Hogansville, Newnan, Palmetto, and Fairburn give them greater aggregate compensation for the transportation of like kind of property, under substantially similar circumstances and conditions, for the shorter distance from New Orleans to LaGrange than for the longer distance over the same line, in the same direction, from New Orleans to Hogansville, Newnan, Palmetto, or Fairburn; that the rates charged by defendants as aforesaid are in violation of §§ 1, 2, 3, and 4 of the Act to Regulate Commerce. The rates and distances involved are set forth in the complaint, and it is further alleged therein that the lowest rate charged by defendants from New Orleans to LaGrange yields them over 1½ cents per ton for each mile of haul, and that their highest rate between said points affords them nearly 6½ cents revenue per ton per mile.

"The defendants filed a joint answer, in which they admit that the rates charged are substantially as alleged in the complaint; that their rates to LaGrange amount for each mile to 1.36 cents per ton on the lowest class of freight (D), and to 6.71 cents per ton on the highest class (1), and that the rates for the shorter distance from New Orleans to LaGrange are more than they charge for the longer distances in the same direction from New Orleans to Hogansville, Newnan, Palmetto, and Fairburn; but they deny that the transportation to LaGrange, Hogansville, and other points mentioned is conducted under substantially *similar circumstances and conditions, and thereupon further deny that their said rates are in violation of § 4 of the statute. The defendants also deny the unreasonableness, injustice, wrongful discrimination, and undue and unreasonable prejudice and preference, advantage, and disadvantage, alleged by complainant under the 1st, 2d and 3d sections of the act. The answer contains statements of rates from New Orleans to the points in question, and to and from Montgomery, Alabama, and Atlanta, Georgia, showing, also, that the through rates to LaGrange, Hogansville, and the other points mentioned are made by combination of rates to Atlanta with local rates back over the same line to Fairburn, Palmetto, Newnan, Hogansville, and LaGrange; and it is further averred that the disparities in rates complained of are caused by a competitive situation at Atlanta which compels low rates to that point from New Orleans. The competitive circumstances and conditions at Atlanta are stated in the answer to be the competition of such supply markets as New Orleans, Baltimore, and other northeastern cities, Cincinnati, Louisville, and other Ohio river cities, and the competition of carriers from such markets to Atlanta, and to have resulted, after frequent and disastrous rate wars, in the establishment of certain relative rates from these various market cities to Atlanta, a disturbance of which would immediately lead to a repetition of such wars. Similar competitive conditions are claimed by the defendants to exist at Montgomery, Alabama, through which freight passes over defendants' through line to LaGrange and the other points mentioned or referred to in the complaint, and they further assert that the present relation of rates to Montgomery and Atlanta must also, under existing circumstances, be maintained. The following extract from the answer seems to succinctly set out the defendants' position in this case:

"The rates from Atlanta to those stations, respectively, LaGrange, Hogansville, Newnan, Palmetto, and Fairburn, are fixed by the Georgia Railroad Commission, and are just and reasonable. The rates from New Orleans to Atlanta are fixed by the competition between markets, and the competition between carriers, as explained above, and are just and reasonable. The rates charged by respondents are the sum [277] of those rates, *and, therefore, respondents' rates themselves are just and reasonable. The reason that Fairburn, Palmetto, Newnan, and Hogansville have lower rates than LaGrange is due alone to the fact that they are nearer to Atlanta, and not to any favoritism or discrimination on the part of the respondents."

The evidence introduced at the hearing before the Commission, in support of the complaint, consisted solely of the testimony of the complainant, which dealt merely with the discrimination alleged to exist against LaGrange in the lesser rates accorded to greater distance points from New Orleans beyond LaGrange towards Atlanta, viz., Hogansville, Newnan, Palmetto, and Fairburn. Much evidence—both oral and documentary—was introduced on behalf of the railroads in support of the averments of the answer.

The various contentions contained in the complaint were sustained by the Commission, which made voluminous findings, and issued an order requiring the railroads in general terms to "wholly cease and desist from each and every of the violations of law" found and set forth in its report and 190 U. S.

opinion. The remaining clauses of the order are set out in the margin†

†Portion of Order of Commission.

It is further ordered and adjudged that said defendants, the Louisville & Nashville Railroad Company, the Western Railway of Alabama, and the Atlanta & West Point Railroad Company, do more particularly cease and desist from violations of the law, so found and set forth in said report and opinion as follows, to wit:

1. That said defendants and each of them cease and desist from charging, demanding, collecting, or receiving rates for the transportation of the several kinds or classes of freight from New Orleans, Louisiana, to LaGrange, Georgia, which, as a whole or upon any article of merchandise, are in any respect unreasonable or unjust.

2. That said defendants and each of them cease and desist from charging, demanding, collecting, or receiving the following unreasonable, unjust, and unlawful rates for the transportation from New Orleans, Louisiana, to LaGrange, Georgia, of articles embraced in the various classes of their freight classification, that is to say:

Classes; rates in cents per 100 pounds.
1.	2.	3.	4.	5.	6.
143	124	109	93	74	59
					Per bar-rel.
A.	B.	C.	D.	E.	F.
41	48	33	1-229	66	74
					59

3. That said defendants and each of them cease and desist from charging, demanding, collecting, or receiving rates or charges for the transportation of freight articles from New Orleans, Louisiana, to LaGrange, Georgia, which are equal to rates or charges contemporaneously in force over their railroads on like traffic carried from New Orleans through LaGrange to Atlanta, Georgia; added to local rates in force on such traffic for local service over the Atlanta & West Point Railroad back from Atlanta to LaGrange, such combined rates having been found and held in and by said report and opinion of the Commission herein to be unreasonable, unjust, unduly prejudicial, and unlawful, and so unreasonable, unjust, unduly prejudicial, and unlawful to the extent of such added local charges of the defendant the Atlanta & West Point Railroad Company.

4. That said defendants, and each of them, cease and desist from charging, demanding, collecting, or receiving any greater compensation in the aggregate for the transporting of freight articles from New Orleans, Louisiana, for the shorter distance to LaGrange, Georgia, than they contemporaneously charge, demand, collect, or receive for transporting the like kind of freight traffic from New Orleans for the longer distance over the same line in the same direction to Hogansville, or Newnan, or Palmetto, or Fairburn, Georgia, the shorter being included within the longer distance.

5. That said defendants, and each of them, cease and desist from charging, demanding, collecting, or receiving unreasonable, unjust, unduly prejudicial, and unlawful rates for the transportation of freight articles from New Orleans to LaGrange, which are higher than aggregate rates contemporaneously charged, demanded, collected, or received by them, or either of them, for the transportation of like kind of freight from New Orleans to Hogansville, or from New Orleans to Newnan, or from New Orleans to Palmetto, or from New Orleans to Fairburn.

6. That said defendants, and each of them, in [278] *The railroads not having obeyed the order, the Commission instituted the present proceeding in equity, in the circuit court of the United States for the southern district of Alabama. That court sustained the order

[279] of the Commission. *The circuit court of appeals reversed the decree of the circuit court and remanded the cause, but "without prejudice to the right of the Commission to proceed, upon the evidence already introduced before it, or upon such further pleadings and evidence as it may allow to be made or introduced, to hear and determine the controversy according to law."

The cause was thereupon appealed to this court.

Mr. L. A. Shaver argued the cause and filed a brief for appellant:

Competition cannot justify rates excessive in themselves.

Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Behlmer, 175 U. S. 674, 44 L. ed. 319, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 209.

Through rates are lower than the sum of the separate rates of the different carriers composing the through line.

Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Osborne, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 257, 3 C. C. A. 347, 10 U. S. App. 430, 52 Fed. 912; Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. v. Minnesota, 186 U. S. 262, 46 L. ed. 1155, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 900.

Where goods are shipped under a through bill of lading the several roads constituting the through line have thereby subjected themselves to "a common control, management, or arrangement for a continuous carriage" within the meaning of the Act to Regulate Commerce.

Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 162 U. S. 193, 40 L. ed. 938, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 391, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 700; United States ex rel. Interstate Commerce Commission v. Seaboard R. Co. 82 Fed. 563.

The charge of a local rate as a part of a through rate, where the hauls are through hauls, and not local, and the extra expense of local hauls is not incurred, is prima facie excessive.

Augusta Southern R. Co. v. Wrightsville & T. R. Co. 74 Fed. 527; Minneapolis & St.

L. R. Co. v. Minnesota, 186 U. S. 262, 46 L. ed. 1155, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 900; Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Osborne, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 257, 3 C. C. A. 347, 10 U. S. App. 430, 52 Fed. 912.

There is no excuse whatever for charging local rates as parts of through rates to points surrounding trade centers or basing points.

Re Louisville & N. R. Co. 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 278; Martin v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 32; Re Atlanta & W. P. R. Co. 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 461; Union P. R. Co. v. Goodridge, 149 U. S. 690, 37 L. ed. 902, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 970.

The Commission does not require equal mileage rates.

McMorran v. Grand Trunk R. Co. 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 604.

The Atlanta rates are presumed to be reasonably high.

Interstate Commerce Commission v. East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. 85 Fed. 114.

The presumption that the Atlanta rates are reasonably remunerative is strengthened by the fact that they were originally established by agreement between the carriers.

United States v. Joint Traffic Asso. 171 U. S. 505, 43 L. ed. 259, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 25; United States v. Trans-Missouri Freight Asso. 166 U. S. 290, 41 L. ed. 1007, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 540.

Competition cannot justify unremunerative rates to competitive points.

Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 541, 42 L. ed. 847, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; Interstate Commerce Commission v. East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. 85 Fed. 115; Behlmer v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 28 C. C. A. 229, 42 U. S. App. 581, 83 Fed. 898; East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 181 U. S. 20, 45 L. ed. 726, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 516.

Whether discrimination to the extent practised is justifiable, is a question to be determined by the courts or the Commission.

Interstate Commerce Commission v. East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. 85 Fed. 118; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Alabama Midland R. Co. 168 U. S. 173, 42 L. ed. 425, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 45.

The situation of La Grange is just such a the transportation of freight articles from New Orleans, cease and desist from charging and collecting rates or compensation which subject complainant and other dealers and consignees at LaGrange, Georgia, their traffic, or the city of LaGrange itself, to undue and unreasonable prejudice or disadvantage in any respect whatsoever, and also cease and desist from giving any undue or unreasonable preference or advantage to merchants, dealers, and consignees at Atlanta, Fairburn, Palmetto, Newnan, or Hogansville, or to their traffic, or to either of such cities or localities, namely, Atlanta, Fairburn, Palmetto, Newnan, or Hogansville, as against complainant and said other dealers and consignees at LaGrange, or the city of LaGrange itself.

And it is further ordered and adjudged that said defendants be, and they severally are hereby, recommended to so revise their schedules of rates and charges that the aggregate compensation charged and collected by them for the transportation from New Orleans to LaGrange of freight articles embraced in the several freight classes shall not exceed reasonable, just, and lawful class rates in cents per hundred pounds and per barrel on Class F as follows, to wit:

Class.....	1.	2.	3.	4.	5.	6.
Rates.....	103	88	77	64	52	42
Class....	A.	B.	C.	D.	E.	F.
Rates....	24	31	24	20	44	49

—and that they make corresponding reductions or relatively reasonable and just charges in commodity rates, otherwise known as exceptions to class rates, from New Orleans to LaGrange, aforesaid.

And it is further ordered, that a notice embodying this order be forthwith sent to each of the defendant corporations, together with a copy of the report and opinion of the Commission herein. In conformity with the 15th section of the Act to Regulate Commerce.

situation as the Act to Regulate Commerce was designed to remedy, and this case falls clearly within the evil which that act was enacted to suppress.

Union P. R. Co. v. Goodridge, 149 U. S. 680, 37 L. ed. 896, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 970.

Statutes must be given operation.

Endlich, Interpretation of Statutes, pp. 351, 352; Potter's Dwarrr. Stat. p. 189.

The right to discriminate on the ground of competition is to be exercised with due regard to the interest of the locality to which the goods are shipped.

Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Behlmer, 175 U. S. 674, 44 L. ed. 319, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 209; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Alabama Midland R. Co. 168 U. S. 167, 42 L. ed. 423, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 45; East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 181 U. S. 19, 45 L. ed. 726, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 516; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 162 U. S. 220, 40 L. ed. 947, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 405, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 666.

This court has taken pains in all its decisions upon this subject to safeguard the interests of the locality to which the goods are shipped.

Texas & P. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 162 U. S. 220, 40 L. ed. 947, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 405, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 666; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Behlmer, 175 U. S. 674, 44 L. ed. 319, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 209.

Mr. Ed. Baxter argued the cause and filed a brief for appellees:

Though the lesser charge to the competitive point, Atlanta, may "seemingly" give a preference to that point, and the greater rate to the noncompetitive point, La Grange, may "apparently" engender a discrimination against it, such preference in favor of Atlanta is not "undue," and such discrimination against La Grange is not "unjust."

East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 181 U. S. 19, 45 L. ed. 725, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 516.

The order of the Commission concedes in effect that La Grange's rates are reasonable in and of themselves.

East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 181 U. S. 23, 45 L. ed. 727, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 516.

The first section of the Act to Regulate Commerce relates to the reasonableness of rates "in and of themselves," as contradistinguished from rates which constitute unjust discrimination or undue preference.

Interstate Commerce Commission v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 145 U. S. 277, 36 L. ed. 703, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 92, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 844; Kinnavey v. Terminal R. Asso. 81 Fed. 804.

The burden of proof under the first section rests upon the appellant.

Harding v. Chicago, St. P. M. & O. R. Co. 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 375; Brewer v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 7 Inters. Com. Rep. 234.

The evidence is wholly insufficient to enable either the Commission, or this court, to intelligently decide that the rates to La Grange are unreasonably high in and of themselves.

Ames v. Union P. R. Co. 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 835, 64 Fed. 173; Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 546, 42 L. ed. 849, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Tompkins, 176 U. S. 172, 44 L. ed. 419, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 336; United States v. Trans-Missouri Freight Asso. 166 U. S. 331, 41 L. ed. 1024, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 540; Van Patten v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 81 Fed. 551; Southern P. Co. v. California Railroad Comrs. 78 Fed. 263; Reagan v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 154 U. S. 402-413, 38 L. ed. 1025-1028, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 560, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1047.

The appellees are entitled to a fair return upon the value of that which they employ for the public convenience.

Ames v. Union P. R. Co. 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 835, 64 Fed. 176; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Tompkins, 176 U. S. 167, 44 L. ed. 417, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 336; Reagan v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 154 U. S. 412, 38 L. ed. 1028, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 560, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1047; Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 547, 42 L. ed. 849, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418.

The schedule of rates, as a whole, must control.

Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Dey, 1 L. R. A. 744, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 325, 35 Fed. 881; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Minnesota, 134 U. S. 460, 33 L. ed. 982, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 209, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 462, 702.

Freight rates are controlled by practical commercial considerations; and they cannot be adjusted by mathematical calculation.

Texas & P. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 162 U. S. 225, 40 L. ed. 949, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 405, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 666; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 73 Fed. 421; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Alabama Midland R. Co. 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 685, 21 C. C. A. 51, 41 U. S. App. 453, 74 Fed. 721.

In ascertaining the value of a road, upon which value "the company is entitled to ask a fair return," it is proper to consider, not only the original cost of construction, but also "the amount expended in permanent improvements."

Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 546, 547, 42 L. ed. 849, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418.

Combination rates are made upon a basis or method by which rates to noncompetitive points are arrived at by adding to competitive rates prevailing at the nearest competitive point, reasonable local rates from such competitive point to the noncompetitive points in its vicinity. Such rates are just and reasonable.

Achison, T. & S. P. R. Co. v. Denver & N. O. R. Co. 110 U. S. 684, 28 L. ed. 297, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 185; Little Rock & M. R. Co. v. St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 763, 41 Fed. 563; Oregon Short Line & U. N. R. Co. v. Northern P. R. Co. 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 249, 51 Fed. 474; Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Osborne, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 257, 3 C. C. A. 347, 10 U. S. App. 430, 52 Fed. 915; Little Rock & M. R. Co. v. St.

Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 537, 59 Fed. 402; Little Rock & M. R. Co. v. St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. 26 L. R. A. 192, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 854, 11 C. C. A. 417, 27 U. S. App. 280, 63 Fed. 778; St. Louis Drayage Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 137, 65 Fed. 41; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Miami S. S. Co. 30 C. C. A. 142, 52 U. S. App. 732, 86 Fed. 419; Southern Indiana Exp. Co. v. United States Exp. Co. 88 Fed. 662; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Western & A. R. Co. 35 C. C. A. 217, 93 Fed. 92.

When freight is shipped from New Orleans, consigned to La Grange, the carrier is bound to receive it at Montgomery, carry it to La Grange, and there deliver it to the consignee; but it has the right to charge on such freight a reasonable local rate from Montgomery to La Grange.

Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Denver & N. O. R. Co. 110 U. S. 684, 28 L. ed. 297, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 185.

A through rate which is less than the sum of two or more reasonable local rates cannot be unreasonable,—especially where it does not exceed a low competitive rate by more than a reasonable local rate.

Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. v. Minnesota, 186 U. S. 259, 46 L. ed. 1152, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 900.

Similar combination rates have been approved by the courts.

Troy Bd. of Trade v. Alabama Midland R. Co. 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 348; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Alabama Midland R. Co. 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 308, 69 Fed. 227, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 685, 21 C. C. A. 51, 41 U. S. App. 453, 74 Fed. 715, 168 U. S. 144, 42 L. ed. 414, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 45; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Western & A. R. Co. 88 Fed. 186, 35 C. C. A. 217, 93 Fed. 83; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Clyde S. S. Co. 181 U. S. 29, 45 L. ed. 729, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 512.

The second section of the Interstate Commerce Act is the equivalent of what is known as the English "equality clause."

Wight v. United States, 167 U. S. 516, 518, 42 L. ed. 259, 260, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 822.

The English "equality clause" requires equality of charge in no case except where goods pass "only over the same portion of the line of railway under the same circumstances."

2d Annual Report of Interstate Commerce Commission (1888) p. 89.

The English "equality clause" has no application where freight of one shipper, though carried over the same line, is carried a greater distance from a common point of departure than the freight of another shipper.

Lancashire & Y. R. Co. v. Greenwood, L. R. 21 Q. B. Div. 217.

The English "equality clause" did not apply either where the points of departure were different, or where the points of arrival were different, or where the distances over which the goods were carried were different.

Ibid.

The third section of the Act to Regulate Commerce prohibits only such preferences as are unjust or unreasonable.

Interstate Commerce Commission v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 145 U. S. 276, 277, 36 L. ed. 703, 704, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 92, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 844; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Alabama Midland R. Co. 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 308, 69 Fed. 231; Commercial Club v. Chicago & N. R. Co. 7 Inters. Com. Rep. 404.

The competition which exists at Atlanta is entitled to the same consideration under § 3, as it is under § 4, of the Act to Regulate Commerce.

Texas & P. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 162 U. S. 232, 40 L. ed. 952, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 405, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 666; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 192, 43 Fed. 53; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Behlmer, 175 U. S. 665, 44 L. ed. 315, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 209; East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 181 U. S. 18, 45 L. ed. 725, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 516.

While "mere" competition does not authorize a less charge for a longer than a shorter distance, the reverse is true where the competition, having due regard to the interests of the public and of the carrier, ought justly to have effect upon the rates.

Texas & P. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 162 U. S. 233, 40 L. ed. 952, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 405, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 666; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Alabama Midland R. Co. 168 U. S. 166, 42 L. ed. 423, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 45; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Behlmer, 175 U. S. 674, 675, 44 L. ed. 319, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 209; East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 181 U. S. 1, 45 L. ed. 719, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 516.

Atlanta is as much entitled to the advantage of the fact that it can avail itself of the competition which exists between the various competing lines, which extend from New Orleans to Atlanta, and of the competition which exists between those lines and other lines reaching Atlanta from other markets, as La Grange is entitled to avail itself of the advantage of the fact that it is (by appellees' line) nearer to New Orleans than Atlanta is.

Phipps v. London & N. W. R. Co. [1892] 2 Q. B. 229; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 162 U. S. 224, 40 L. ed. 948, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 405, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 666; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Alabama Midland R. Co. 168 U. S. 164, 42 L. ed. 422, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 45.

It is only "where the carrier cannot meet the competitive rate to a given point without transporting the merchandise at less than the cost of transportation, and therefore without bringing about a deficiency, which would have to be met by increased charges upon other business," that competition becomes illegitimate.

East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 181 U. S. 20, 45 L. ed. 726, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 516.

The mere fact that there is a material disparity between the rates to La Grange, and the rates to the longer distance points, does not, of itself, constitute an undue preference, or an unjust discrimination.

Texas & P. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 162 U. S. 219, 220, 40 L. ed. 947, 948, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 405, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 666; Savannah Bureau of Freight & Transp. v. Charleston & S. R. Co. 7 Inters. Com. Rep. 480.

The present differences between La Grange's rates and the rates to the longer distance points are justifiable.

East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 181 U. S. 21, 45 L. ed. 726, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 516.

The complaint made on behalf of persons at La Grange may be likened to that of the laborer, who, having worked all day, complained that others, who had worked much less, received a penny like himself.

Hozier v. Caledonian R. Co. 1 Nev. & Macn. 32, note 4; Jones v. E. C. R. Co. 1 Nev. & Macn. 45; Foreman v. Great Eastern R. Co. 2 Nev. & Macn. 202; Harris v. Cockermouth R. Co. 1 Nev. & Macn. 97; Ransome v. E. C. R. Co. 1 Nev. & Macn. 120.

The theory of equal mileage rates is entirely correct in all cases where competition does not interfere with it. But in cases where competition does interfere, the theory of equal mileage rates cannot be adopted in actual practice.

Interstate Commerce Commission v. Alabama Midland R. Co. 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 308, 69 Fed. 231; Imperial Coal Co. v. Pittsburgh & L. E. R. Co. 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 436; Savannah Bureau of Freight & Transp. v. Charleston & S. R. Co. 7 Inters. Com. Rep. 474.

Neither the common law nor the Act to Regulate Commerce requires equality of charge, except where the services are similar.

Interstate Commerce Commission v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 145 U. S. 275, 36 L. ed. 703, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 92, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 844; Ex parte Koehler, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 317, 31 Fed. 321; Brewer v. Central R. Co. 84 Fed. 268.

The service rendered by a carrier in the transportation of traffic to a competitive point, is not "similar" to the service rendered in the transportation of traffic to a noncompetitive point.

Texas & P. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 162 U. S. 219, 239, 40 L. ed. 947, 954, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 405, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 666; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Alabama Midland R. Co. 168 U. S. 144-175, 42 L. ed. 414-426, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 45; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Behlmer, 175 U. S. 648-675, 44 L. ed. 309-319, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 209; East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 181 U. S. 1, 45 L. ed. 719, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 516.

Competition is necessarily a dominating factor in fixing rates.

Ex parte Koehler, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 317, 31 Fed. 321.

The discrimination which exists in this ease against La Grange is not caused by any fault or contrivance of the appellees.

Ex parte Koehler, 23 Fed. 533; Ex parte Koehler, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 317, 31 Fed. 319; East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 181 U. S. 18, 19, 20, 45 L. ed. 725, 726, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 516.

It is not a proper function of government to attempt to equalize the social relations or business facilities of communities.

Ex parte Koehler, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 317, 31 Fed. 321; Brewer v. Central of Georgia R. Co. 84 Fed. 268.

Appellees' rates from New Orleans to La Grange do not violate § 4 of the Act to Regulate Commerce.

Interstate Commerce Commission v. Alabama Midland R. Co. 168 U. S. 169, 42 L. ed. 423, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 45; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Behlmer, 175 U. S. 669, 44 L. ed. 317, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 209; East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 181 U. S. 19, 45 L. ed. 726, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 516; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Western & A. R. Co. 35 C. C. A. 217, 93 Fed. 87.

It is not necessary that there should be anything "rare," "unusual," or "peculiar" in the competition.

Interstate Commerce Commission v. Alabama Midland R. Co. 168 U. S. 144-175, 42 L. ed. 414-426, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 45; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Behlmer, 175 U. S. 648-675, 44 L. ed. 309-319, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 209; East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 181 U. S. 1, 18, 19, 45 L. ed. 719, 725, 726, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 516.

Where "the interests of the public as well as of the carrier" demand it, Congress intended that competition should be an excuse.

Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Behlmer, 175 U. S. 674, 675, 44 L. ed. 319, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 209; East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 181 U. S. 1, 18, 19, 45 L. ed. 719, 725, 726, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 516.

It is not fair to compare competitive rates with noncompetitive rates.

Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Denver & N. O. R. Co. 110 U. S. 684, 28 L. ed. 297, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 185.

Where severe competition exists at the longer distance point, whether the competition be between market and market, or between product and product, or between carrier and carrier, the presumption, instead of being that the rates to that point are reasonably high, is that they are reasonably, or perhaps unreasonably, low.

Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 542, 42 L. ed. 847, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418.

If competitive rates will pay anything over and above "the additional cost of movement" of the competitive traffic, it is right and reasonable that they be accepted by the carrier, rather than abandon the competitive traffic.

East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 181 U. S. 18, 19, 45 L. ed. 725, 726, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 516;

Interstate Commerce Commission v. West-ern & A. R. Co. 35 C. C. A. 217, 93 Fed. 90.

It is impossible to increase the Atlanta rates without stifling the competition that has existed there for many years.

Ex parte Koehler, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 317, 31 Fed. 321.

The law does not prohibit the acceptance of rates that are "unreasonably low in themselves."

Re Chicago, St. P. & K. C. R. Co. 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 146.

In passing upon the question of undue or unreasonable preference or disadvantage, it is not only legitimate, but proper, to take into consideration various elements, and among others "the relative quantities or volume of the traffic involved."

Texas & P. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 162 U. S. 232, 40 L. ed. 952, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 405, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 666.

The Commission has no power to make specific rates.

Thacher v. Delaware & H. Canal Co. 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 317; Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 162 U. S. 197, 40 L. ed. 939, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 391, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 700; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. 167 U. S. 479, 42 L. ed. 243, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 896; Interstate Commerce Commission v. Alabama Midland R. Co. 168 U. S. 161, 162, 42 L. ed. 421, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 45.

The Commission has no power to make relative rates.

Southern P. Co. v. Colorado Fuel & Iron Co. 42 C. C. A. 12, 101 Fed. 784.

Mr. Justice White, after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

The circuit court concurred in the finding of the Commission, that by the exaction of the rates to LaGrange complained of the 3d and 4th sections of the Act to Regulate Commerce were violated, and, being unable to say that error clearly appeared in the finding that the 1st section of the act was also violated, refused to overrule the action of the Commission in any particular.

Whilst the circuit court of appeals announced its conclusions *in a per curiam opinion, it is fairly inferable from the authorities which are cited in that opinion that the court concluded that the rates charged to LaGrange did not constitute a violation of the 3d and 4th sections of the act, prohibiting undue discrimination and a greater charge for a shorter than for a longer haul under substantially similar circumstances and conditions. It is also inferable from the argument at bar that the appellate court, so far as the reasonableness per se of the rates was concerned, ordered the case to be dismissed, without prejudice to further proceedings, because it was of opinion that, in the consideration of this question, the Commission had been in effect controlled by its finding, held to have been erroneous, that there had been violations of the 3d and 4th sections of the act. It was, therefore, deemed that the controversy, in so far as the intrinsic reasonableness of the rates was concerned, should not be foreclosed, but should be left for further consideration and decision upon the evidence already introduced and such additional evidence as might be taken on a further hearing before the Commission if such new hearing was desired.

[280]

1054

Whether or not the circuit court of appeals was correct in the conclusions reached by it as above stated, is the question now for decision.

The record convinces us that the appellate court correctly decided that there was no legal foundation for the contention that the 3d and 4th sections of the Act to Regulate Commerce had been violated. It was and is conceded that the rates on through freight from New Orleans to Atlanta were the result of competition at Atlanta, and that there was, hence, such a dissimilarity of circumstances and conditions as justified the lesser charge for the carriage of freight from New Orleans to Atlanta, the longer distance point, than was exacted for the haul from New Orleans to LaGrange, the shorter distance point.

The sum of the rate to LaGrange was arrived at by charging the low rate produced by competition at Atlanta, and adding thereto the sum of the local rate back from Atlanta to LaGrange. The same rule was applied to the stations between *LaGrange [281] and Atlanta, each of those stations receiving, therefore, a somewhat lower rate than LaGrange, although they were located a greater distance from New Orleans and nearer Atlanta. The sum by which the rates from New Orleans to these respective stations between LaGrange and Atlanta were lower than the LaGrange rate, was dependent upon the distance these respective stations were from Atlanta. It was shown, however, and is unquestioned, that, except in a particular to which we shall have occasion hereafter to refer, if the charge had been based on the nearest competitive point south of LaGrange,—that is, Montgomery,—and there had been added to the competitive rate to Montgomery the local rate from Montgomery to LaGrange and the other stations beyond, the freight rates on shipments from New Orleans to LaGrange would have been much greater than the rates now complained of as excessive. In other words, the railroads, instead of putting out of view the competition prevailing at Atlanta, when they fixed the rates to the non-competitive points, took the low rates prevailing at Atlanta as a basis, and added thereto the local rate from Atlanta, the result being that the places in question were given the advantage resulting from their proximity to Atlanta, the competitive point, in proportion to the degree of such proximity.

When the situation just stated is comprehended, it results that the complaint in effect was that a method of rate making had been resorted to which gave the places referred to a lower rate than they otherwise would have enjoyed. In this situation of affairs, we fail to see how there was any just cause of complaint. Clearly, if, disregarding the competition at Atlanta, the higher rate had been established from New Orleans to the noncompetitive points within the designated radius from Atlanta, the inevitable result would have been to cause the traffic to move from New Orleans to the competitive point (Atlanta), and thence to the places in question, thus bringing about the same rates now complained of. It having been established that competition affecting rates existing at a particular point (Atlanta) produced the dissimilarity of circumstances and conditions contemplated by [282] the 4th section of the act, we *think it inevitably followed that the railway companies had a right to take the lower rate prevailing at Atlanta as a basis for the charge made to places in territory contiguous to Atlanta, and to ask, in addition to the low competitive rate, the local rate from Atlanta to such places, provided thereby no increased charges resulted over those which would have been occasioned if the low rate to Atlanta had been left out of view. That is to say, it seems incontrovertible that in making the rate, as the railroads had a right to meet the competition, they were authorized to give the shippers the benefit of it by according to them a lower rate than would otherwise have been afforded. True it is, that by this method a lower rate from New Orleans than was exacted at LaGrange obtained at the longer distance places lying between LaGrange and Atlanta, but this was only the result of their proximity to the competitive point, and they hence obtained only the advantage resulting from their situation. It could be no legal disadvantage to LaGrange, since, if the low competitive rate prevailing at Atlanta had been disregarded, and the rate had been fixed with reference to Montgomery, and the local rate from thence on, the sole result would have been, as we have previously said, to cause the traffic to move along the line of least resistance to Atlanta, and thence to the places named, leaving LaGrange in the exact position in which it was placed by the rates now complained of.

It is to be observed that it is shown that the local charges on freight moved between Atlanta and LaGrange and the stations intermediate—all of the points being in the state of Georgia—conformed to the requirements of the Georgia State Railroad Commission.

In the report of the Commission a suggestion is found that LaGrange should be entitled to the same rate as Atlanta, because, if the carriers concerned in this case in connection with other carriers reaching LaGrange chose to do so, they might bring about competition by the way of a line between Macon and LaGrange which would be equivalent to the competitive conditions existing at Atlanta. We are unable, however, to follow the suggestion. To adopt it would amount to this: That the substantial dissimilarity of circumstances and conditions *provided by the Act to Regulate Commerce [283] would depend, not as has been repeatedly held, upon a real and substantial competition at a particular point affecting rates, but upon the mere possibility of the arising of such competition. This would destroy the whole effect of the act, and cause every case where competition was involved to depend, not upon the fact of its existence as affecting rates, but upon the possibility of its arising. What the 4th section of the Act to Regulate Commerce has reference to is an actual dissimilarity of circumstances and conditions, not a conjectural one. Of course, if, by agreements or combinations among carriers, it were found that at a particular point rates were unduly influenced by a suppression of competition, that fact would be proper to consider in determining the question of undue discrimination and the reasonableness per se of the rates at such possible competitive points. As, however, the finding of the Commission concerning unjust discrimination was predicated solely upon the conclusion that the 4th section of the act had been violated, we may put that subject out of view. So far as the reasonableness per se of the rate is concerned, we come now to its consideration.

Whilst there was nothing in the evidence taken before the Commission to lend support to the finding that the rates to LaGrange were intrinsically unreasonable, in the report of the Commission considerable reference was made to facts and circumstances which it is to be presumed were upon the files of the Commission, and which were deemed to conduce to the conclusion that the rates to LaGrange were unreasonable per se. But when the statements on this subject made in the report are considered in connection with the report as a whole, and the subjects to which no reference is made in the report are recalled, we think it clearly results that every conclusion reached by the Commission concerning the unreasonableness per se of the rates to LaGrange rested wholly upon the error of law committed by the Commission when it decided that the railroad companies were powerless to consider the competitive rates prevailing at Atlanta, and to use those rates as a basis for the charges to points within the competitive area in order thereby to give a lower rate to such points than they otherwise would *have enjoyed. Thus, it was held in [28 effect that, because the competitive rate to Atlanta was not unduly low, therefore any higher charge to LaGrange, the shorter distance, was unreasonable. And the same misconception was manifested by the reasoning adopted concerning the rates to Hogansville and the other stations between LaGrange and Atlanta, since it was held that, because the charges to these points were lower than to LaGrange, therefore the rates to the last-named point were unreasonable per se. Both of these conclusions, however, but held that if the carriers elected to meet the competitive rate at Atlanta they must at once correspondingly reduce their rates to all shorter distance and noncompetitive points.

But such a ruling was equivalent to over-throwing the settled construction of the Interstate Commerce Act allowing carriers to charge the lesser rate for the longer than for the shorter distance, if at the further point the lesser rate was justified by a substantial dissimilarity of circumstances and conditions there prevailing, consequent upon real competition. A clause in the order of the Commission makes it clear that no independent finding as to the unreasonableness of the rates was made, since it allows the carriers to continue to charge the rates complained of to LaGrange, provided no higher rates were charged to the more distant points between there and Atlanta. The inconsistency between such an order and the conclusion that the rates to the shorter distance point were unreasonable per se was pointed out in East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 181 U. S. 1, 45 L. ed. 719, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 516, where it was said (p. 23, L. ed. p. 727, Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 524):

"A decree which ordered the carriers to desist from charging a greater compensation for the lesser than for the longer haul would be in no way responsive to the conclusion that the rate for the lesser distance was unreasonable in and of itself. Such a decree would in effect authorize the carrier to continue to charge at its election a rate which was in itself unreasonable to the shorter point."

And when, in connection with the matters just stated, it is observed that the report of the Commission makes no reference whatever to any intrinsic disparity between the [285] LaGrange *rates and those prevailing at other noncompetitive points between New Orleans and LaGrange, no room in reason is left to sustain the view that the Commission could have held that the rates to LaGrange were in and of themselves unreasonable, irrespective of the competitive condition prevailing at Atlanta, and the arrangement of rates which arose from it which formed the main subject of the complaint.

We conclude that, under the circumstances disclosed by the record, the circuit court of appeals committed no error in refusing to enforce the order of the Commission and in remanding the case to that body for such independent consideration of the question of the reasonableness per se of the rates as the ends of justice might require.

It remains only to consider a special question concerning the 3d and 4th sections of the act, which was passed over in an earlier part of this opinion. As has been said, the complaint made before the Commission alleged a disparity and discrimination alone, because of the difference of rates between LaGrange and the points beyond to Atlanta, and the report of the Commission in effect dealt only with such alleged grievances. However, in the course of its report, it was remarked by the Commission that Opelika, which was 38 miles south of LaGrange, was a competitive point, and that if Opelika was used as the basis for calculating the rate to LaGrange, a slightly lesser rate on some articles would be enjoyed by LaGrange than was the case by basing the rate on Atlanta as the nearest competitive point. The Commission, however, would seem to have attached no great importance to the matter which it thus noticed, since nothing in the order entered by it was responsive to the suggestion. It was stated, however, at bar that in the argument of the case in the circuit court of appeals that court directed the attention of the counsel of the railroads to the fact that, even if their theories of the case were sound and were approved, there was a suggestion in the report of the Commission which indicated that Opelika, and not Atlanta, was the proper basing point for fixing the rates to LaGrange, as thereby LaGrange would enjoy on some classes of freight a slightly lower rate than resulted from using Atlanta as the *basic [286] point. It was also conceded at bar by counsel for all parties that when this suggestion was made the counsel for the railroad companies immediately declared that such fact had escaped attention, that it would at once be brought to the notice of the railroad companies, and a change of rates would be immediately put into effect upon that basis. And the brief of counsel for the Commission states that a modified tariff, based on Opelika, was put into operation by the railroad companies in May, 1900, immediately after the argument of the case in the circuit court of appeals, and has been continued in force from that time to this, the decree below having been entered more than one year after the submission of the cause. It is, however, now insisted that the change made by the railway companies to conform to the development as to Opelika is a confession that there was error in the action of the circuit court of appeals, and therefore requires that the decree of that court should be at least in part reversed. It would be, it is said, indeed, dangerous to allow a railway company to exact illegal rates, and persist in doing so even after the order of the Commission had been issued, and then escape the consequences of its wrongdoing by at the last hour changing its rates in order to prevent the entry of a decree against it. The reasoning has abstract force, but its application to the case in hand is devoid of merit, since neither in the complaint made before the Commission nor in the evidence introduced for the complainant was any claim made that wrong had been done because of a combination of rates based on Atlanta instead of Opelika. Indeed, the relief sought by the complaint and that accorded by the Commission was inconsistent with the theory that the rates should be based on either Opelika or Atlanta. As the altered tariff based on Opelika had been in force more than one year prior to the entry of the decree below, the court doubtless considered it unnecessary to provide for its continuance. The record does not disclose, nor was it suggested, that any application was made to the circuit court of appeals to modify its decree so as to direct the continuance of such new tariff, both parties evidently acting on the reasonable assumption that it was an accomplished fact. Under these circumstances, *we do not think a formal modification of the decree of the circuit court of appeals is required; and that decree is therefore affirmed.

Mr. Justice Harlan dissents.

TEXAS & PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY,

Plff. in Err.,

v.

SAMUEL E. WATSON.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 287-293.)

Railroads—fires set by passing locomotive—evidence—of other fires—opinions of nonexperts—reading deposition of witness in attendance—harmless error—expert testimony—instructions—stipulations in lease—effect on third party.

1. Evidence that, at or about the time of a fire and of the passing of a locomotive which is claimed to have caused it, other fires were observed at various nearby points along the railroad track, is admissible on the issue of the liability of the railroad company for the value of the property destroyed by such fire, as tending to establish that such fire was caused by the locomotive in question, and as tending to show negligence in its construction or operation.
2. The testimony of witnesses to the effect that they did not know of or see any opportunity for certain cotton to have caught fire except from a passing locomotive is not inadmissible on the question of the liability of the railroad company for the value of such cotton, if objected to, not because of any omission to state the facts which induced the witnesses' belief, but because negative in character, irrelevant, and in the nature of a conclusion.
3. A competent expert witness may, on the trial of an action to recover the value of cotton claimed to have been destroyed by a fire set by a passing locomotive, give his opinion on a hypothetical state of facts based on the evidence as to whether a locomotive which in moving  $4\frac{1}{4}$  miles should set from five to eight fires and should emit five cinders was properly operated or constructed, where there is evidence that it is impossible, even with the most effective spark arresters, to prevent the escape of sparks.
4. Permitting the deposition of a witness to be read when the witness is actually in court and his presence is known is not prejudicial error, where he is subsequently called by the objecting party, and gives fully his explanation of the deposition and his testimony as to the subject to which it related.
5. An instruction that a railroad company was not liable for a loss from a fire set by a passing locomotive, if it used "the most approved spark arrester, at the time in good condition," and the engine was then and there operated with ordinary care and prudence; but that it was so liable if it failed "to use the most approved spark arrester and apparatus connected with the engine as in ordinary use by properly conducted railways to prevent the escape of fire," so far as it could consistently be done in its business,—is not open to the objection that it left the jury to consider the original construction of the spark arrester irrespective of its condition at the time of the fire.

6. A requested instruction that a person storing his cotton near a railroad assumed the risks which were to be anticipated from engines properly equipped with appliances for preventing the escape of sparks when properly operated need not be given in an action to recover the value of such cotton claimed to have been destroyed by a fire set by a passing locomotive, where the jury are told that no recovery could be had if the railroad company was not negligent in respect to the equipment and operation of the engine, and were fully instructed as to contributory negligence and its effect.
7. Stipulations and exemptions from liability for loss caused by fire, contained in a lease under which the lessee holds possession and occupancy of a storage platform near a railroad, are not binding on one not in privity with such lessee, who, without knowledge of such stipulations, stores his cotton on such platform.

[No. 223.]

Argued and submitted March 20, 1903. Decided May 4, 1903.

IN ERROR to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Circuit Court for the Eastern District of Texas establishing the liability of a railroad company for the value of cotton claimed to have been destroyed by a fire set by a passing locomotive. Affirmed.

See same case below, 50 C. C. A. 230, 112 Fed. 402.

Statement by Mr. Justice White:

*This action was originally commenced in [288] a Texas state court by the appellee Watson, to recover the value of 64 bales of cotton, less insurance thereon. The cotton was alleged to have been destroyed by fire on January 3, 1896, while stored upon what was known as the O'Neil cotton platform near the depot of the railway company at Clarks-ville, Red River county, Texas. The fire was averred to have been occasioned by the negligence of the railway company in the use of a defectively constructed locomotive

NOTE.—On expert testimony generally—see notes to Davis v. United States, 41 L. ed. U. S. 750; Scheuer v. Muller, 20 C. C. A. 180; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Hall, 32 C. C. A. 150; Graham v. Pennsylvania Co. (Pa.) 12 L. R. A. 293, and Moore v. Kenockee Twp. (Mich.) 4 L. R. A. 555.

As to the liability of railroad companies for fires caused by their negligence—see notes to Marvin v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. (Wis.)

190 U. S.

11 L. R. A. 506; Knowlton v. New York & N. E. R. Co. (Mass.) 1 L. R. A. 625; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Platzer (Tex.) 3 L. R. A. 639; Louisville, N. A. & C. R. Co. v. Nitsche (Ind.) 9 L. R. A. 750; White v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. (S. D.) 9 L. R. A. 824, and Grand Trunk R. Co. v. Richardson, 23 L. ed. U. S. 357.

As to presumption of negligence in case of railway fires—see note to Barnowski v. Helson (Mich.) 15 L. R. A. 40.

1057

and in the careless operation thereof while passing said platform. Subsequently the insurance company was joined as plaintiff, and recovery was asked of the full value of the cotton. Upon application of the defendant, based upon the fact that it was incorporated under the laws of the United States, the cause was removed to the United States circuit court for the eastern district of Texas. In the latter court an amended answer was filed. This pleading contained general and special demurrers, a general denial, and a special answer setting up various defenses. The general and special demurrers were subsequently overruled, and defendant excepted. A trial was had, and it was shown by the evidence that at the point where the fire in question occurred the track of the railway company ran east and west, and the train which it was asserted caused the fire in question was moving eastward, and a strong wind was blowing from the north. A verdict was rendered in favor of the plaintiff Watson and against the railroad and against the plaintiff insurance company in favor of the railroad. Judgment was entered on the verdict; the judgment was affirmed by the circuit court of appeals for the fifth circuit (50 C. C. A. 230, 112 Fed. 402), and the cause was then brought to this court by writ of error.

Mr. David D. Duncan argued the cause, and, with Messrs. John F. Dillon and Winslow S. Pierce, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

There was error in admitting evidence of fires in other places without proof that they were caused by defendant's engines.

St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Jones, 59 Ark. 105, 26 S. W. 595; Musselwhite v. Atlantic, M. & O. R. Co. 4 Hughes, 166, Fed. Cas. No. 9,972.

It is not permissible to allow an expert to give the ultimate conclusion to be drawn from a given state of facts; that is, the final conclusion at which the jury is to arrive from all the evidence.

Hunt v. Kile, 38 C. C. A. 641, 98 Fed. 49; Crane Co. v. Columbus Constr. Co. 20 C. C. A. 233, 46 U. S. App. 52, 73 Fed. 984; New York Electric Equipment Co. v. Blair, 25 C. C. A. 216, 51 U. S. App. 81, 79 Fed. 896.

The object of all questions to experts should be to obtain their opinion as to the matter of skill or science which is in controversy and at the same time to exclude their opinions as to the effect of the evidence in establishing controverted facts.

Hunt v. Lowell Gaslight Co. 8 Allen, 169, 85 Am. Dec. 697.

The court erred in submitting to the jury the issue that if defendant failed to use the most approved spark arresters, and plaintiff was free from contributory negligence, he could recover.

Texas & P. R. Co. v. Minnick, 10 C. C. A. 1, 23 U. S. App. 310, 61 Fed. 635.

The court erred in refusing to charge the jury that plaintiff, in placing his cotton upon the platform, assumed the risks which were to be anticipated from engines properly equipped with appliances for preventing the escape of sparks, and properly operated, and in saying to them that contributory negligence and assumed risk amount to the same thing.

Briant v. Detroit, L. & N. R. Co. 104 Mich. 307, 62 N. W. 365; Chicago & A. R. Co. v. Pennell, 94 Ill. 448; Hartford F. Ins. Co. v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 175 U. S. 91, 44 L. ed. 84, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 33.

The court erred in refusing to admit in evidence the stipulations and exemptions contained in the lease under which O'Neill held possession and occupancy of the platform.

Hartford F. Ins. Co. v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 175 U. S. 91, 44 L. ed. 84, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 33.

Mr. J. W. Bailey submitted the cause for defendant in error. Messrs. E. S. Chambers and Amos L. Beaty were with him on the brief:

There was no error in allowing witnesses to testify to fires other than the cotton fire, although they did not see them start, when such other fires were shown to have commenced burning almost immediately after the passing of the locomotive that is claimed to have set out the cotton fire.

Grand Trunk R. Co. v. Richardson, 91 U. S. 454, 23 L. ed. 356; Butcher v. Vacu Valley & C. L. R. Co. 67 Cal. 518, 8 Pac. 176; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Donaldson, 73 Tex. 124, 11 S. W. 164; Chicago & E. R. Co. v. Kreig, 22 Ind. App. 393, 53 N. E. 1035; Evansville & T. H. R. Co. v. Keith, 8 Ind. App. 57, 35 N. E. 298; Louisville, N. A. & C. R. Co. v. McCorkle, 12 Ind. App. 691, 40 N. E. 27; Lake Erie & W. R. Co. v. Middlecoff, 150 Ill. 27, 37 N. E. 660; Wiley v. West Jersey R. Co. 44 N. J. L. 247.

The objection made to the testimony of witnesses, to the effect that they saw no opportunity and knew of none for the cotton to have caught fire except from the locomotive, was properly overruled.

Pullman Palace Car Co. v. Smith, 79 Tex. 470, 13 L. R. A. 215, 14 S. W. 993.

It was proper to allow the hypothetical question put to the company's expert witness, Wells, on cross-examination.

Eastern Transp. Line v. Hope, 95 U. S. 297, 24 L. ed. 477; Chicago G. W. R. Co. v. Price, 38 C. C. A. 239, 97 Fed. 425; Union P. R. Co. v. Novak, 9 C. C. A. 629, 15 U. S. App. 400, 61 Fed. 579; 12 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 472; 1 Greenl. Ev. §§ 440, 440a; 2 Taylor, Ev. § 1275; Taylor v. Star Coal Co. 110 Iowa, 40, 81 N. W. 251; Williams v. Great Northern R. Co. 68 Minn. 55, 37 L. R. A. 204, 70 N. W. 860.

The expert witness may give his opinion on the very issue to be decided by the jury provided it involves a matter on which expert evidence is admissible, and not merely a question the ordinary mind is capable of determining.

Eastern Transp. Line v. Hope, 95 U. S. 297, 24 L. ed. 477.

The trial court properly admitted the deposition of the witness Caperton, although the witness was personally present and could have been called. Or, if there was error it was harmless.

Whitford v. Clark County, 119 U. S. 522, 30 L. ed. 500, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 306; Hinds v. Keith, 6 C. C. A. 231, 13 U. S. App. 222, 57 Fed. 12; Schnick v. Noel, 64 Tex. 406; O'Connor v. Andrews, 81 Tex. 28, 16 S. W. 628; San Antonio Street R. Co. v. Renken, 15 Tex. Civ. App. 229, 38 S. W. 830; 6 Ene. Pl. & Pr. 570.

The issue of whether the engine was equipped with the most approved spark arresters was properly submitted to the jury.

McCullen v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 49 L. R. A. 642, 41 C. C. A. 365, 101 Fed. 66; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Rice Bros. 24 Tex. Civ. App. 374, 59 S. W. 833; Smith v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 4 S. D. 71, 55 N. W. 717; Babcock v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 62 Iowa, 593, 13 N. W. 740, 17 N. W. 909.

The trial court was right in excluding the stipulations exempting the railway company from liability, as contained in the lease contracts under which O'Neil held the platform on which the cotton was stored.

McAdams v. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. 19 Tex. Civ. App. 82, 45 S. W. 936; King v. Southern P. Co. 109 Cal. 96, 29 L. R. A. 755, 41 Pac. 786; Ordelheide v. Wabash R. Co. 80 Mo. App. 507.

[289] *Mr. Justice White, after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

The various assignments of error relied upon in the brief of counsel for plaintiff in error will be disposed of in the order therein discussed.

First. In several assignments it is claimed that the circuit court of appeals erred in holding that the trial court properly admitted the evidence of witnesses to the effect that at or about the time of the fire complained of, and about the time of the passing of the locomotive which it was charged occasioned the fire, the witnesses observed other fires at various points not far removed from the place where the cotton was burned and south of and near to the railway track. In the light of the decision of this court in Grand Trunk R. Co. v. Richardson, 91 U. S. 454, 470, 23 L. ed. 356, 362, we think this evidence was competent as having a tendency to establish that the destruction of the property of the plaintiff was caused by the locomotive in question, and as tending to show negligence in its construction or operation.

Second. In an assignment of error it was contended that the appellate court erred in holding that the trial court properly admitted testimony to the effect that certain witnesses did not know of and saw no opportunity for the cotton to have caught fire except from the locomotive in question. The evidence in the record is in narrative form, and that portion relating to the criticized testimony merely recites that at the time said evidence was offered from each witness "defendant then and there objected, because the evidence was of a negative character and would not be relevant, and further, because it was in the nature of a conclusion of the witness to the effect that the fire had originated from the engine." Whether the question which elicited the testimony complained of was objectionable cannot be determined from the record, nor does the objection seem to have been addressed to an omission to state the facts which induced the belief that no other opportunity existed for the cotton to have caught fire than was afforded by the operation of the locomotive. Evidence of the surrounding circumstances *and condi-[290] tions which by a process of exclusion would have tended to establish that the burning of the cotton could not have been caused other than by the locomotive in question would, we think, have been clearly relevant. As the record stands, we think the assignment in question was without merit.

Third. A further contention is that the appellate court erred in permitting a question to be answered despite the objection that "the evidence sought to be elicited was not such as was the subject of expert testimony, but the endeavor was to substitute a conclusion of the witness for that of the jury, and it was not allowable by a hypothetical question, such as this and the answer thereto, to prove the bad equipment of the engine in the face of the actual testimony that the equipment was all in good order." The following is the question referred to:

"Suppose an engine should come along, and in the course of 4 miles and  $\frac{1}{4}$  should set out, say, eight fires, should set fire to the grass in some of these places, set fire to shavings 60 feet from the right of way, set cotton on fire, and that live cinders could be seen falling and did fall and smoked after falling on the ground, over the work benches and things and over platforms, would you say there was anything wrong about the operation or construction of that engine, or would you say it was all right? And suppose, instead of being eight fires, there were five under the conditions named to you, what would you say?"

The question was proper. The witness was foreman of the boiler department at the main shops of the defendant, having to do with the building of boilers, and was in special control of the part of the shops which had to do with spark arresters. The hypothetical question was based upon evidence, and if the witness was competent — as the evidence showed he was — to testify whether or not an engine so conducting itself was or was not in good working order or properly operated, we think the jury should have had the benefit of his opinion. Inasmuch as there was evidence to the effect that it is impossible, even with the use of the most effective spark arresters, to prevent the escape of sparks, a case was presented justifying the introduction of expert testimony to aid the jury in determining the ultimate*fact whether an engine was in good[291] repair and properly operated which conducted itself as the evidence tended to show this locomotive did. Eastern Transp. Line v. Hope, 95 U. S. 297, 298, 24 L. ed. 477.

Fourth. It is asserted that the appellate court erred in holding that prejudicial error was not committed in permitting the deposition of a witness to be read when the witness was actually in court and his presence was known to the plaintiff. We adopt as our own the language of the circuit court of appeals on this point:

"In view of the fact that the witness was called by the defendant after the deposition had been admitted over the defendant's objection, and gave fully his explanation of the deposition and his testimony as to the subject to which it related, we conclude that the error committed is not sufficiently grave in its results to require us to reverse the case."

Fifth. It is claimed that the appellate court erred in holding that the trial court rightly left it to the jury to determine that, if the railway company failed to use the most approved spark arrester, and plaintiff was free from contributory negligence, he could recover. This contention is based upon the assumption that there was no evidence tending to show that the most approved spark arrester was not used. We do not pause to analyze the evidence on the subject, because we think it not necessary to do so. The proposition, considering it in the light most favorable for the plaintiff in error, is but an abstraction, and assumes that, because it may be that at one time the spark arrester was of the most approved pattern, it continued to be such, even although it was not in good repair at the time of the fire and such defective condition occasioned the loss complained of. The court instructed that the jury must give a verdict for the railroad if it was found that it "did use the most approved spark arrester, at the time in good condition, and that the engine was then and there operated with ordinary care and prudence;" and, in stating the converse of the proposition, said: "But if the railroad failed to use the most approved spark arrester and apparatus connected with the engine as in ordinary use by properly conducted railways to prevent the escape of [292] *fire, in so far as it could consistently be done with the business" which the railroad was carrying on, a verdict should be returned against the railroad, provided it was found that the plaintiff Watson had not contributed to the injury. This charge as a whole we think is not amenable to the objection that it left to the jury to consider the original construction of the spark arrester, irrespective of its condition at the time of the fire. The expression, "as ordinarily used by properly conducted railways," of necessity implied that the apparatus must have been kept in proper condition for use. To construe to the contrary would presuppose that conflicting measures of liability were given to the jury by the court when it pointed out the opposing views which the jury were authorized to deduce from the proof. Thus rightly construing the charge, there was beyond peradventure evidence to be weighed by the jury in determining whether the spark arrester was or was not in satisfactory working order at the time the cotton was set on fire. Several witnesses testified that the engine emitted considerable fire and cinders, and the evidence upon which the hypothetical question quoted in subdivision third of this opinion was based clearly rebuts the assumption that there was not evidence of circumstances to be considered by the jury in connection with the evidence introduced by the defendant of the condition of the engine, spark arrester, etc., as disclosed by an inspection thereof. So, also, the answer to the hypothetical question clearly contained matter pertinent for the consideration of the jury in determining whether the engine was properly equipped and operated. The witness said:

"An engine that will do as you have stated is doing something unusual, very unusual. If there was dry and combustible material close to the track a spark from the ash pan might drop among it and set fire. What you said might have occurred, but it would be very unusual. I could not say that there would be anything wrong in the operation of the engine, but there might have been something deranged about the ash pan is the only way I could account for it. If the engine did set out sparks in the manner stated by you, I cannot believe that the engine was in quite perfect condition."

*Sixth. A further assignment of error is [293] to the effect that the appellate court erred in holding that error was not committed in refusing to charge the jury that plaintiff, in placing his cotton upon the platform, assumed the risks which were to be anticipated from engines properly equipped with appliances for preventing the escape of sparks and properly operated, and in saying to them that contributory negligence and assumed risk amount to the same thing. But the court charged the jury that, even though the cotton was set on fire by sparks communicated from the engine, yet, if the defendant used the most approved spark arrester, and the engine was operated with ordinary care and prudence, the plaintiff could not recover. As the court also fully instructed the jury as to what would have constituted contributory negligence on the part of Watson as respected the storing of his cotton on the platform, and informed the jury that recovery could not be had if there was such contributory negligence, it is quite clear that the jury could not have been misled by the failure of the trial court to point out the distinction between assumed risk and contributory negligence. It is not perceived, for instance, how the jury could have been aided in reaching a conclusion if, in addition to being informed that the plaintiff could not recover if the railway company was not negligent in respect to the equipment and operation of the engine, they were told that the plaintiff "assumed the risks which were to be anticipated from engines properly equipped with appliances for preventing the escape of sparks, and properly operated."

Seventh. The remaining assignment of error is to the effect that error was committed by the appellate court in affirming the judgment despite the fact that the trial court refused to admit in evidence the stipulations and exemptions from liability for loss caused by fire contained in the lease under which the lessee held possession and occupancy of the storage platform on which the cotton in question was when destroyed by fire. As Watson was not in privity with the lessee,—and it is conceded he had no knowledge of such stipulations when he stored his property on the platform,—there was no tenable ground on which to contend that he was in anywise bound by the stipulations in question.

Judgment affirmed.

14] *JOEL W. LOCKWOOD, Petitioner,
v.

EXCHANGE BANK OF FORT VALLEY and F. P. Rape, Trustee.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 294-301.)

Jurisdiction of bankruptcy court—administration of exempt property.

A court of bankruptcy has no jurisdiction to enforce, against the bankrupt's exemption, the rights of unsecured creditors whose evidences of indebtedness contain the waiver of homestead and exemption authorized by the state Constitution and laws, by reason of the authority conferred upon such court by the bankruptcy act of 1898 (30 Stat. at L. 544, chap. 541, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3418), to control exempt property, in order to set it aside, and thus exclude it from the assets of the bankrupt's estate to be administered.

[No. 226.]

Argued April 7, 1903. Decided June 1, 1903.

ON A WRIT of certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit, which brings up for consideration the record in a cause in the District Court for the Southern District of Georgia in which was denied the exemption claimed by a bankrupt because of his written waiver of homestead and exemption. Judgment of the District Court reversed and proceedings remanded, with directions to sustain the exemption and to withhold discharge to permit proceedings to be taken in the state court to subject the exempt property to the claims of creditors.

Statement by Mr. Justice White:

In this proceeding, upon certain questions being certified by the United States circuit court of appeals for the fifth circuit for decision by this court, a writ of certiorari was allowed, and the entire record has been brought up for consideration.

The controversy is fully set forth in the following "statement of case," embodied in the certificate of the circuit court of appeals:

"On the 23d day of November, 1900, said 190 U. S.

Joel W. Lockwood was, on his application, duly adjudged a bankrupt by the district court of the United States for the southern district of Georgia. On December 6, 1900, F. T. Rape was duly appointed trustee for said bankrupt; on the 16th day of December, 1900, the said F. T. Rape, trustee, set aside and designated as an exemption all of the property returned by the said bankrupt in his schedule of assets. On the 1st day of January, 1901, the Exchange Bank of Fort Valley, a creditor who had duly proven its debt as an unsecured claim, filed exceptions to the trustee's *assignment of [295] homestead and exemption, upon the following grounds:

"(a) That said creditor held a contract against the bankrupt in which said bankrupt specially waived and renounced all right to the homestead exemption allowed by the laws of Georgia or the United States. Said waiver is contained in a note constituting contract of indebtedness, and was made in accordance with the provisions of the Constitution and laws of said state, authorizing and empowering the debtor to waive and renounce in writing his right to the benefit of the exemption provided for by the Constitution and laws of said state.

"(b) That creditor's debt was unsecured, save and except so far as a waiver of homestead and exemption may be construed as a security.

"(c) That the trustee has set apart all the property of said bankrupt returned by him in bankruptcy.

"(d) Under the laws of Georgia, the debtor's exemption cannot be subjected to the payment of a debt containing a waiver of homestead except by putting said debt in judgment, and afterwards causing execution to issue thereon to be levied on the exempt property, in accordance with the provisions of §§ 2850 et seq. of the Code of Georgia. If bankrupt court should approve trustee's assignment in this case, without reserving to petitioner the right to sue his claim and put same in judgment, and without itself giving judgment for said debt, creditor would be left without means of enforcing his rights created and arising out of the aforesaid waiver, and would be without remedy.

"(e) Creditor therefore prays equitable relief and such decree as will protect his rights; that the homestead be set aside and trustee be required to take charge of and administer the property of said bankrupt so set apart, except so much as cannot be waived, for the benefit of creditors holding waiver contracts."

"To these exceptions of the creditor the bankrupt duly filed a demurrer on the following grounds:

"(a) That said exceptions are wholly insufficient in law to defeat the report of the trustee.

"(b) That the exceptions made are not [296] such as, under the laws of Georgia, will defeat the setting apart of the exemption, and furnish no reason why the trustee should not assign the exemption.

"(c) That the bankrupt court has no jurisdiction over exempted property, and no authority to administer the same.

"(d) That there is no authority of law for the exceptions made, nor for the relief sought."

"The referee, Honorable Shelby Myrick, overruled the aforesaid demurrer, and directed the trustee to carve out of the said exemption of property a portion of the same, amounting to $300.00, which was to be free from the claims of all creditors. The residue of the exempted property was to be sold, and the proceeds held by the trustee for the benefit of creditors holding waiver notes. The bankrupt was ordered to yield possession to the trustee for the purpose of carrying out this order. The referee, at the request of bankrupt, certified the record in said case, together with his decision thereon, to the Honorable Emory Speer, judge of the district court of said district, for final determination. On the 30th March, 1901, said case came on regularly to be tried before said district judge, and, after hearing argument of counsel, his honor Judge Emory Speer held and decided and adjudged the aforesaid exceptions to the determinations and report of the trustee be sustained, and that the exemptions set apart by the trustee in his said report be denied and refused to the said bankrupt, save and except the item of household furniture and wearing apparel, and that the said bankrupt was not entitled to an exemption as claimed by him, by reason of having waived and renounced in writing his rights thereto, in accordance with the Constitution and laws of the state of Georgia."

This judgment of the district court is the one complained of, and which was sought to be revised in the circuit court of appeals.

Mr. Stephen W. Parker argued the cause, and, with Messrs. J. M. Terrell and John W. Haygood, and Messrs. Allen Fort & Son, filed a brief for petitioner:

The title to the exempted property never vests in the trustee of the bankrupt for any purpose, and therefore such property cannot be administered by the bankrupt court.

Woodruff v. Cheeves, 44 C. C. A. 631, 105 Fed. 601; Re Bass, 3 Woods, 382, Fed. Cas. No. 1,091; Rix v. Capitol Bank, 2 Dill. 367, Fed. Cas. No. 11,869; Re Polcman, 5 Biss. 526, Fed. Cas. No. 11,247; Byrd v. Harrold, 18 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 437, Fed. Cas. No. 2,269; Re Stevens, 2 Biss. 373, Fed. Cas. No. 13,392; Re Preston, 6 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 545, Fed. Cas. No. 11,394; Re Camp, 91 Fed. 745; Re Wells, 105 Fed. 762.

The allowance to bankrupts of their exemption under the state law is not to be "afflicted" by the bankruptcy. As to exemptions the act of Congress adopts the state laws of the bankrupt's domicile, and his right to an exemption must depend on those laws, and must be determined by them.

Re Duerson, 13 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 183, Fed. Cas. No. 4,117; Re Feely, 3 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 66, Fed. Cas. No. 4,714; Re Wyllie, 2 Hughes, 449, Fed. Cas. No. 18,112.

The bankrupt court has no jurisdiction of exempt property.

Re Moore, 112 Fed. 289; Powers Dry Goods Co. v. Nelson, 10 N. D. 580, 58 L. R. A. 770, 88 N. W. 703.

Mr. Olin J. Wimberly argued the cause, and, with Mr. John F. Hall, filed a brief for respondents:

Under the laws of Georgia a debtor cannot claim any property as exempt until it is set apart to him on proceedings instituted for that purpose.

McDowell v. McMurria, 107 Ga. 812, 33 S. E. 709; Dunagan v. Stadler, 101 Ga. 474, 29 S. E. 440; Re Solomon, 2 Hughes, 164, Fed. Cas. No. 13,166.

When the debtor makes a general waiver of the homestead and exemption right in a note, or other paper, he parts with all right to take and hold the homestead or exemption as against such creditor.

Flemister v. Phillips, 65 Ga. 676; Boroughs v. White, 69 Ga. 842; Tribble v. Anderson, 63 Ga. 31; Cleghorn v. Greeson, 77 Ga. 343; Prather v. Smith, 101 Ga. 283, 28 S. E. 857.

The question as to what property the bankrupt is entitled to as an exemption must be decided by the bankrupt court, and if it is decided that the bankrupt is not entitled to his homestead and exemption out of any property, or out of any particular property, then that property is necessarily to be administered in the bankrupt court, and is not turned over to the bankrupt, although he may assert a claim of exemption against such property.

Re Solomon, 2 Hughes, 164, Fed. Cas. No. 13,166.

The bankrupt court will follow the practice of the state courts to the extent of permitting any objection to be filed to the bankrupt's exemption if filed within the time required by the act of Congress, which can be made and urged in the state courts as a reason for defeating the exemption.

Ibid.; Re Wyllie, 2 Hughes, 449, Fed. Cas. No. 18,112; Re Judkins, 2 Hughes, 401, Fed. Cas. No. 7,560; Re Whitehead, 2 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 599, Fed. Cas. No. 17,562; Re Perdue, 2 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 183, Fed. Cas. No. 10,975; Re Stevenson, 93 Fed. 789; Re Garden, 93 Fed. 423, Re Coffman, 93 Fed. 422; Re Sisler, 96 Fed. 402; Re Woodruff, 96 Fed. 317; Re Waxelbaum, 101 Fed. 228.

The property which the bankrupt may claim as his exemption shall be set apart to him by the bankrupt court, and it can be set apart to him only after the bankrupt court decides that, under the laws of the domicile of the bankrupt, he is entitled to the exemption.

Re Waxelbaum, 101 Fed. 228; Re Mayer, 47 C. C. A. 512, 108 Fed. 599; Re Beauchamp, 101 Fed. 106; Re Turnbull, 106 Fed. 668; Re Anderson, 103 Fed. 854.

Mr. Justice White, after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

The general exemption of property from levy or sale, authorized by article 9, § 1,

¶ 1, of the present Constitution of the state of Georgia (that of 1877), is "realty or personality, or both, to the value in the aggregate of $1,600." By article 9, § 3, ¶ 1, of the same Constitution, a debtor is vested with power to waive or renounce in writing this right of exemption, "except as to wearing apparel, and not exceeding $300 worth of household and kitchen furniture and provisions." The mode of enforcement of a waiver of exemption is provided for in § 2850 of the Code of 1895, reading as follows:

"In all cases when any defendant in execution has applied for and had set apart a homestead of realty and personality, or either, or where the same has been applied for and set apart out of his property, as provided for by the Constitution and laws of this state, and the plaintiff in execution is seeking to proceed with the same, and there is no property except the homestead on which to levy upon the ground that his debt falls within some one of the classes for which the homestead is bound under the Constitution, it shall and may be lawful for such plaintiff, his agent, or attorney, to make affidavit before any officer authorized to administer oaths that, to the best of his knowledge and belief, the debt upon which such execution is founded is one from which the homestead is not exempt, and it shall be the duty of the officer in whose hands the execution and affidavit are placed to proceed at once to levy and sell, as though the property had never been set apart. The defendant in such execution may, if he desires to do so, deny the truth of the plaintiff's affidavit by filing with the levying officer a counter affidavit."

[298] The question presented on the record before us may be stated in similar language to that which was used by the district judge *—the correctness of whose decision in the case at bar is now for review—in the course of his opinion in Re Woodruff, 96 Fed. 317, as follows (p. 318):

"Has the bankruptcy court jurisdiction to protect or enforce against the bankrupt's exemption the rights of creditors not having a judgment or other lien, whose promissory notes or other like obligations to pay contain a written waiver of the homestead and exemption authorized and prescribed by the Constitution of the state, or are such creditors to be remitted to the state courts for such relief as may be there obtained?"

The provisions of the bankruptcy act of 1898 [30 Stat. at L. 544, chap. 541 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3413).] which control the consideration of the question just propounded are as follows: By clause 11 of § 2 courts of bankruptcy are vested with jurisdiction to "determine all claims of bankrupts to their exemptions." Section 6 provides as follows:

"Sec. 6. This act shall not affect the allowance to bankrupts of the exemptions which are prescribed by the state laws in force at the time of the filing of the petition in the state wherein they have had their domicile for the six months or the greater portion thereof immediately preceding the filing of the petition."

By clause 8 of § 7 the bankrupt is required to schedule all his property, and to make "a claim for such exemptions as he may be entitled to. By clause 11 of § 47 it is made the duty of the trustees to "set apart the bankrupt's exemptions and report the items and estimated value thereof to the court as soon as practicable after their appointment." By § 67 it is provided, among other things, that the property of the debtor fraudulently conveyed, etc., "shall, if he be adjudged a bankrupt, and the same is not exempt from execution and liability for debts by the law of his domicile, be and remain a part of the assets and estate of the bankrupt," etc. In § 70 is enumerated the property of the bankrupt which is to vest in the trustee as of the date of the adjudication in bankruptcy, "except in so far as it is to property which is exempt."

Under the bankruptcy act of 1867 [14 Stat. at L. 522, chap. 176] it was held that property generally exempted by the state law from the claims of creditors "was not [299] part of the assets of the bankrupt, and did not pass to the assignee, but that such property must be pursued by those having special claims against it, in the proper state tribunals. Thus, speaking of the act of 1867, Mr. Justice Bradley (Re Bass, 3 Woods, 382, 384, Fed. Cas. No. 1,091) said:

"Not only is all property exempted by state laws, as those laws stood in 1871, expressly excepted from the operation of the conveyance to the assignee, but is added in the section referred to, as if ex industria, that 'these exceptions shall operate as a limitation upon the conveyance of the property of the bankrupt to his assignee, and in no case shall the property hereby excepted pass to the assignee, or the title of the bankrupt thereto be impaired or affected by any of the provisions of this title.'

"In other words, it is made as clear as anything can be that such exempted property constitutes no part of the assets in bankruptcy. The agreement of the bankrupt in any particular case to waive the right to the exemption makes no difference. He may owe other debts in regard to which no such agreement has been made. But whether so or not, it is not for the bankrupt court to inquire. The exemption is created by the state law, and the assignee acquires no title to the exempt property. If the creditor has a claim against it, he must prosecute that claim in a court which has jurisdiction over the property, which the bankrupt court has not."

We think that the terms of the bankruptcy act of 1898, above set out, as clearly evidence the intention of Congress that the title to the property of a bankrupt, generally exempted by state laws, should remain in the bankrupt, and not pass to his representative in bankruptcy, as did the provisions of the act of 1867, considered in Re Bass. The fact that the act of 1898 confers upon the court of bankruptcy authority to control exempt property in order to set it aside, and thus exclude it from the assets of the bankrupt estate to be administered, affords no just ground for holding that the court of bankruptcy must administer and distribute, as included in the assets of the estate, the very property which the act, in unambiguous language, declares [300] shall not pass from the bankrupt, or become part of the bankruptcy assets. The two provisions of the statute must be construed together, and both be given effect. Moreover, the want of power in the court of bankruptcy to administer exempt property is, besides, shown by the context of the act; since, throughout its text, exempt property is contrasted with property not exempt, the latter alone constituting assets of the bankrupt estate subject to administration. The act of 1898, instead of manifesting the purpose of Congress to adopt a different rule from that which was applied, as we have seen, with reference to the act of 1867, on the contrary, exhibits the intention to perpetuate the rule, since the provision of the statute to which we have referred in reason is consonant only with that hypothesis.

Though it be conceded that some inconvenience may arise from the construction which the text of the statute requires, the fact of such inconvenience would not justify us in disregarding both its letter and spirit. Besides, if mere arguments of inconvenience were to have weight, the fact cannot be overlooked that the contrary construction would produce a greater inconvenience. The difference, however, between the two is this: That in the latter case—that is, causing the exempt property to form a part of the bankruptcy assets—the inconvenience would be irremediable, since it would compel the administration of the exempt property as part of the estate in bankruptcy; whilst in the other, the rights of creditors having no lien, as in the case at bar, but having a remedy under the state law against the exempt property, may be protected by the court of bankruptcy, since, certainly, there would exist in favor of a creditor holding a waiver note, like that possessed by the petitioning creditor in the case at bar, an equity entitling him to a reasonable postponement of the discharge of the bankrupt, in order to allow the institution in the state court of such proceedings as might be necessary to make effective the rights possessed by the creditor.

As, in the case at bar, the entire property which the bankrupt owned is within the exemption of the state law, it becomes unnecessary to consider what, if any, remedy might be available in the court of bankruptcy for the benefit of general creditors, [301] in order to prevent the creditor holding the waiver as to exempt property from taking a dividend on his whole claim from the general assets, and thereafter availing himself of the right resulting from the waiver to proceed against exempt property.

The judgment of the District Court is reversed, and the proceeding is remanded to that court with directions to overrule the exceptions to the trustee's assignment of homestead and exemption, and to withhold the discharge of the bankrupt, if he be otherwise entitled thereto, until a reasonable time has elapsed for the excepting creditor to assert, in a state tribunal, his alleged right to subject the exempt property to the satisfaction of his claim. And it is so ordered.

COSMOS EXPLORATION COMPANY,
Appt.,
v.

GRAY EAGLE OIL COMPANY et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 301-315.)

Federal courts—interference with Land Department—forest reserve act—power of Land Department with reference to selection of lieu lands—acts of local officers insufficient to vest equitable title.

1. The Federal courts cannot finally determine the respective interests of claimants to public lands of the United States while the question of issuing a patent therefor is properly before the Land Department and not yet decided.
2. The Land Department has full jurisdiction over matters involving the right of parties to a patent for public lands selected under the act of Congress of June 4, 1897 (30 Stat. at L. 36, chap. 2, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1541), in lieu of lands relinquished in a forest reservation.
3. Local land officers were given no power to decide upon the sufficiency of an application, under the act of June 4, 1897 (30 Stat. at L. 36, chap. 2, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1541), for vacant public lands in lieu of lands relinquished in the forest reservation, by the act of 1883 (22 Stat. at L. 484, chap. 101, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1369) imposing upon them the duty of furnishing plats of townships showing what lands were vacant and what lands taken.
4. No equitable title to lands selected, under the act of June 4, 1897 (30 Stat. at L. 36, chap. 2, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1541), in lieu of land relinquished in a forest reservation, vests in the selector because the local land officers received, accepted, and filed his deed of relinquishment, abstract of title, and non-mineral affidavit, entered his selection upon the official records, and certified that it was free from conflict, as such action could not amount to a decision that the statute had been complied with, since authority so to decide was not conferred on such officials by that statute, and the regulations of the Land Department required all applications for change of entry or settlement to be forwarded to the Commissioner of the General Land Office "for consideration," together with a report "as to the status of the tract applied for."

[No. 217.]

Argued March 16, 17, 1903. Decided May 18, 1903.

NOTE.—On injunction to restrain acts of public officers—see note to Mississippi v. Johnson, 18 L. ed. U. S. 437.

A PPEAL from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the Circuit Court for the Southern District of California sustaining a demurrer to and dismissing a bill to enjoin interference with the possession of public land selected in lieu of land relinquished in a forest reservation. Affirmed, without prejudice to future proceedings.

See same case below, 50 C. C. A. 79, 112 Fed. 4.

Statement by Mr. Justice Peckham:

This is an appeal from the decree of the circuit court of appeals for the ninth circuit, affirming the decree of the circuit court for the southern district of California, sustaining the defendants' demurrer to the bill of complainant, and dismissing the same. The questions arise under the act of June 4, 1897, making appropriations for the sundry civil expenses of the government, etc. 30 Stat. at L. 11, 36, chap. 2, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 3768, 1541. The particular portion of the statute under which this litigation comes is set forth in the margin.†

The material facts averred in the bill are as follows: The assignor of the complainant, one C. W. Clarke, was on November 16, 1899, the owner in fee simple absolute of certain land in a forest reservation, non-mineral, and covered by a patent from the United States. On December 8, 1899, there were lands in the particular township described in the bill which for more than a year continuously theretofore had been surveyed, unappropriated, and vacant public land of the United States, open to settlement, returned and characterized upon the official records of the United States as agricultural land, free and open to settlement and entry under the laws thereof. This land did not then contain any known minerals, salines, petroleum, or mineral oils, nor had any minerals or petroleum or other mineral oils or mineral substances of any kind ever been discovered within the limits of such land, which was situated in the county of Kern, within the southern district of California, and within *the district of lands subject to sale and disposition by the United States land office at Visalia, California. On November 16, 1899, Clarke relinquished the land in the forest reservation to the United States by deed recorded in the office of the county in which the land was situated, and on December 8, 1899, he duly delivered to the register and receiver of the United States land office at Visalia, California, and filed in that land office his deed to the United States indorsed as recorded in the office where the land was situated, together with his selection of the land in lieu of the land relinquished; and at the same time he filed with the register and receiver a non-mineral affidavit showing the selected tract contained no known minerals, and he also delivered to and filed with the register and receiver an abstract of his title to the relinquished tract, duly certified as such by the recorder of the county in which the tract was situated, which abstract showed him to be the owner of the land by title in fee simple absolute, free of any lien or encumbrance at the time of such relinquishment and at the time the deed to the United States was made, and showed that his conveyance to the United States vested in the government the full, complete, and perfect title thereto. On the same day (December 8, 1899) the register and receiver of the United States land office at Visalia, California, duly accepted, received, and filed the deed, abstract of title, non-mineral affidavit and the selection of the land made by Clarke, and duly entered the selection upon the official records of the land office, and the register of the land office then certified that the land so selected by Clarke was free from conflict, and that there was no adverse filing, entry, or claim thereto; and Clarke thereupon and thereby became vested, as complainant averred, with the complete equitable title to the land so selected, and was thereupon and thereby entitled to receive a patent for the land from the United States in pursuance of that selection, under the terms and in pursuance of the provisions of the act of Congress above referred to. Clarke thereafter assigned and transferred to the complainant an undivided three-quarters interest in the land taken in lieu of the relinquished land, and by virtue of the above selection the full, complete, and equitable title to the so *selected land became [304] immediately vested in the complainant's assignor without further act upon his part, and complainant, by virtue of those acts and the assignment to it, is now the complete and equitable owner of a three-quarters interest in the land, and entitled to a patent therefor..

[303]

†(Page 36.) That in cases in which a tract covered by an unperfected bona fide claim, or by a patent, is included within the limits of a public forest reservation, the settler or owner thereof may, if he desires to do so, relinquish the tract to the government, and may select in lieu thereof a tract of vacant land open to settlement not exceeding in area the tract covered by his claim or patent; and no charge shall be made in such cases for making the entry of record or issuing the patent to cover the tract selected: Provided further, That in cases of unperfected claims, the requirements of the laws respecting settlement, residence, improvements, and so forth, are complied with on the new claims, credit being allowed for the time spent on the relinquished claims.

Clarke did not file any affidavit of non-occupancy of the land selected, so far as the record shows.

It is then averred that this claim of the complainant is denied by the defendants, who assert that the land remained subject to entry, exploration, selection, and purchase as mineral land, until a patent shall be issued to the complainant's assignor, and the complainant avers that the defendants since the selection have entered upon the land, bored for and obtained petroleum oil, and are engaged in taking it therefrom.

It is also averred that the right and title of the defendants are based upon some one or more of four certain pretended placer mining locations which the bill describes, and which cover the land claimed by complainant, and that the defendants assert title to and the right to the possession of the land described in those placer locations from some or all of the locators thereof; but complainant alleges that these placer locations are illegal and void, because they were not based upon any discovery of mineral within the boundaries thereof, or of petroleum oil within such boundaries, until after the land had been selected by complainant's assignor Clarke.

That after the land had been selected by complainant's assignor, the defendants filed in the United States land office at Visalia, California, a written verified protest against such selection, in which protest it was alleged that the land selected by Clarke was not subject to selection by him under the act of June 4, 1897, above referred to, because the same was mineral land and was included within the boundaries of a valid placer mining location. The protest asks that the Commissioner of the General Land Office should order a hearing to determine the mineral character of the land, and that the selection by Clarke be rejected and disapproved; and the bill specifically avers that such protest is now pending before the Commissioner of the General Land Office.

[305] *That the protest does not show there was any known mine, or that there were any known salines, or any known or existing petroleum wells, or known petroleum deposits, on any of the land selected by Clarke at the time the land was selected, and it is averred that the protest, failing to show such facts, is insufficient to warrant or justify a hearing being ordered by the Land Department to re-establish or redetermine the character of the land, or to change the present classification thereof as fixed by the former report of the Surveyor General and the confirmation thereof by the Land Department, and that such protest is insufficient to impair or affect the validity of Clarke's selection of the land; that notice of such selection by Clarke had been given and published on the — day of January, 1900, and that by law only sixty days are allowed to any person or persons to file protests in the local land offices of the United States against any selections under the law of June 4, 1897, and that the only protest or adverse claim filed against the selection was the protest of defendants above referred to, and that such protest does not state any facts which impair or affect the right of said Clarke or of the complainant in said selected land, nor does it show any grounds why a United States patent therefor should not issue to Clarke, and that defendants are bound and estopped by their protest and the contents thereof and the facts therein stated, and that if such facts be admitted they do not show that defendants, or any of them, have any interest in the lands as against Clarke or complainant; and it is averred that, upon the facts as pleaded by the protest, the Land Department of the United States cannot lawfully refuse or deny the issuance of a patent to Clarke, and that upon such facts he is entitled to the approval of his selection by the Land Department of the United States and to the issuance of a patent therefor.

Notwithstanding complainant was the complete and equitable owner of the land and entitled to the quiet and uninterrupted possession of the same, so far as regarded the three-quarters interest therein, yet the defendants herein, except Clarke, did, on or about February 1, 1890, and frequently since then, by themselves and their employees, without right, title, or claim, wrongfully and unlawfully, and in disregard of the right of Clarke, *enter upon the land, erect der- [306] ricks and other machinery thereon, and proceed to excavate the soil thereof and bore wells and drive iron pipes therein, seeking for petroleum oil and other mineral products in the land, for the purpose of taking the same, if found, to their own use, and removing the same; that thereafter, and on or about the last day of February, 1900, the defendants discovered in the wells petroleum oil in profitable quantities, and that the defendants are now wrongfully and unlawfully in possession of the premises, and unlawfully and continuously from day to day pumping large quantities of petroleum oil from the wells, and are about to and will, unless restrained by the court, remove the same from the land and sell and dispose of and market the same, and appropriate the proceeds thereof to their own use, to complainant's great loss and damage, and will continue so to do to the great waste and irreparable injury and damage of said property and the complainant, unless restrained therefrom by the court.

It was also alleged that the defendant Clarke is the owner of an undivided one-quarter interest in the selected land described, and that complainant requested him to join with it in instituting and prosecuting this suit, but he refused to join herein, and therefore complainant made him a defendant in order that all the parties interested in the premises might be before this court and their rights finally adjudicated by a decree to be entered herein.

Upon these allegations complainant prayed for a writ of injunction restraining defendants from interfering with complainant's entry upon the land, and enjoining defendants, other than Clarke, from excavating or digging upon the land for the purpose of taking petroleum oil from the wells thereon or from marketing or disposing of the oil, until the further order and decree of the court in the premises, and that upon final hearing the injunction should be made perpetual by an order and decree of the court.

It was also prayed that complainant might have the judgment of the court that the full and complete equitable title to an undivided three-quarters interest in the property is vested in the complainant, and an undivided one-quarter interest in Clarke, and that the adverse claims of defendants thereto should be decreed to be wholly without right and unfounded, and that *complain- [307] ant have judgment for the possession of the land, and that a receiver should be appointed to take possession of the land and to preserve the same and the product thereof on the premises until the further order of the court, but not to operate the wells thereon except to the extent necessary, if at all, to preserve the same from deterioration in value, nor to market or remove any oil therefrom.

Upon the filing of this bill the court granted an order to show cause why the complainant should not have a preliminary injunction as asked for in the bill. The defendants appeared and interposed a demurrer to the bill, and upon the hearing of the order to show cause they presented a large number of affidavits, which in substance averred that the complainant was guilty of fraud and bad faith in locating the claim, and that such location was a fraud upon the statute under which it was assumed to be made. Affidavits in reply were filed by the complainant.

The demurrer was argued at the same time as the argument was had upon the return of the order to show cause, and thereafter on September 24, 1900, an order was made by the circuit court denying the application for a receiver and for an injunction, and a decree was also made sustaining the defendants' demurrer and dismissing the bill with costs, and on September 26, 1900, such decree was entered dismissing the bill. 104 Fed. 20.

An appeal was taken from the decree sustaining the demurrer and dismissing the bill, but none from the order denying the application for a receiver and for an injunction. As the appeal to the circuit court of appeals was only from the decree overruling the demurrer and dismissing the complainant's bill, that court confined its discussion to the facts alleged in the bill.

After a hearing it affirmed the decree of the circuit court (50 C. C. A. 79, 112 Fed. 4), and the complainant has by appeal brought the case here.

Messrs. T. C. Van Ness and Jefferson Chandler argued the cause, and, with Messrs. John M. Thurston, Shirley C. Ward, M. A. Ballinger, Horace F. Clark, and William C. Prentiss, filed a brief for appellant:

The relinquishment of forest reserve lands, and the selection of vacant land open to settlement, constitutes a "contract fully executed" upon the part of the selector at the instant of the selection.

Olive Land & Development Co. v. Olmstead, 103 Fed. 568; Re McDonald, 30 Land Dec. 124; Clarke v. Northern P. R. Co. 30 Land Dec. 145; Kern Oil Co. v. Clarke, 30 Land Dec. 550.

When the right to a patent exists, the full equitable title has passed to the purchaser, with all the benefits, immunities, and burdens of ownership, and no third party can acquire from the government interests as against him.

Benson Min. & Smelting Co. v. Alta Min. & Smelting Co. 145 U. S. 428, 36 L. ed. 762, 190 U. S.

12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 877; Simmons v. Wagner, 101 U. S. 261, 25 L. ed. 911; United States v. Hughes, 11 How. 568, 13 L. ed. 816; Stark v. Starr, 6 Wall. 414, 18 L. ed. 928; Wirth v. Branson, 98 U. S. 118, 25 L. ed. 86; Carroll v. Safford, 3 How. 441, 11 L. ed. 671; Witherspoon v. Duncan, 4 Wall. 210, 18 L. ed. 339; Deffebach v. Hawke, 115 U. S. 392, 29 L. ed. 423, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 95; Colorado Coal & Iron Co. v. United States, 123 U. S. 307, 31 L. ed. 182, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 131; Davis v. Weibbold, 139 U. S. 524, 35 L. ed. 244, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 628.

When the purchase price has been fully paid, or the provisions of the statute for the acquiring of title otherwise complied with, the full equitable title thereby vests, and no subsequent event can impair such title.

Larriviere v. Madegan, 1 Dill. 457, Fed. Cas. No. 8,096; Culver v. Uthe, 133 U. S. 655, 33 L. ed. 776, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 415; Michigan Land & Lumber Co. v. Rust, 168 U. S. 594, 42 L. ed. 593, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 208; Cornelius v. Kessel, 128 U. S. 456, 32 L. ed. 482, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 122; Wright v. Roseberry, 121 U. S. 488, 30 L. ed. 1038, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 985; United States v. Iron Silver Min. Co. 128 U. S. 673, 32 L. ed. 571, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 195.

Equity will not suffer a wrong to be without a remedy.

Bispham, Eq. 6th ed. § 37.

The conserving power of a court of chancery is not limited to cases in which action is actually pending, but extends to cases wherein adverse rights are asserted whether action be actually pending or not.

Nantahala Marble & Talc Co. v. Thomas, 76 Fed. 59; Thomas v. Nantahala Marble & Talc Co. 7 C. C. A. 330, 8 U. S. App. 429, 58 Fed. 485; Northern P. R. Co. v. Hussey, 9 C. C. A. 463, 15 U. S. App. 391, 61 Fed. 231; Lanier v. Alison, 31 Fed. 100; Northern P. R. Co. v. Soderberg, 86 Fed. 49; Johnson v. Hughes, 58 N. J. Eq. 406, 43 Atl. 901; Wood v. Murray, 85 Iowa, 505, 52 N. W. 356; Olive Land & Development Co. v. Olmstead, 103 Fed. 568; West Coast Improv. Co. v. Winsor, 8 Wash. 490, 36 Pac. 441; Cox v. Garrett, 7 Okla. 375, 54 Pac. 546; Calhoun v. McCracken, 7 Okla. 347, 54 Pac. 493; Boyd v. Desrozier, 20 Mont. 444, 52 Pac. 53; Erhardt v. Boaro, 113 U. S. 538, 28 L. ed. 1117, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 565; Buskirk v. King, 18 C. C. A. 418, 25 U. S. App. 607, 72 Fed. 22; Wood v. Braxton, 54 Fed. 1005; Toledo, A. & N. M. R. Co. v. Pennsylvania Co. 19 L. R. A. 395, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 545, 54 Fed. 746; Union Mill & Min. Co. v. Warren, 82 Fed. 522; Walker v. Emerson, 89 Cal. 456, 26 Pac. 968; Richards v. Dower, 64 Cal. 62, 28 Pac. 113; More v. Massini, 32 Cal. 590; Kittle v. Pfeiffer, 22 Cal. 485; Poirier v. Fetter, 20 Kan. 47; Hall v. Equator Min. & Smelting Co. Fed. Cas. No. 5,931.

No remedy exists at law for the wrongs complained of.

Carter v. Ruddy, 166 U. S. 493, 41 L. ed. 1090, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 640.

The necessity for equitable interference is therefore clear.

Toledo, A. A. & N. M. R. Co. v. Pennsylvania Co. 19 L. R. A. 395, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 545, 54 Fed. 746; Waterloo Min. Co. v. Doe, 27 C. C. A. 50, 48 U. S. App. 411, 82 Fed. 45.

In the exercise of its jurisdiction to conserve property until legal title can be ascertained a court of equity must examine the facts and law of complainant's case and interpret the law upon which the rights asserted depend.

Gormley v. Clark, 134 U. S. 338, 33 L. ed. 909, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 554; Hunt v. Steese, 75 Cal. 620, 17 Pac. 920; Hess v. Winder, 34 Cal. 270; Porter v. Jennings, 89 Cal. 440, 26 Pac. 965; Bullard v. Kempff, 119 Cal. 9, 50 Pac. 780.

The complainant must make a prima facie case, not a clear and conclusive one.

Buskirk v. King, 18 C. C. A. 418, 25 U. S. App. 607, 72 Fed. 22; Hall v. Equator Min. & Smelting Co. Fed. Cas. No. 5,931.

It is the act of the party in full compliance with the act of Congress, and not the act of the land officers, that passes the equitable title.

Benson Min. & Smelting Co. v. Alta Min. & Smelting Co. 145 U. S. 428, 36 L. ed. 762, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 877; Simmons v. Wagner, 101 U. S. 261, 25 L. ed. 910; United States v. Hughes, 11 How. 568, 13 L. ed. 816; Stark v. Starr, 6 Wall. 414, 18 L. ed. 928; Wirth v. Branson, 98 U. S. 118, 25 L. ed. 86; Carroll v. Safford, 3 How. 441, 11 L. ed. 671; Witherspoon v. Duncan, 4 Wall. 210, 18 L. ed. 339; Deffeback v. Hawke, 115 U. S. 392, 29 L. ed. 423, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 95; Colorado Coal & Iron Co. v. United States, 123 U. S. 307, 31 L. ed. 182, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 131; Davis v. Weibbold, 139 U. S. 524, 35 L. ed. 244, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 628; Re McDonald, 30 Land Dec. 124; Clarke v. Northern P. R. Co. 30 Land Dec. 145; Hussman v. Durham, 165 U. S. 144, 41 L. ed. 664, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 253; Carter v. Ruddy, 166 U. S. 495, 41 L. ed. 1091, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 640.

Departmental approval is not only not a prerequisite to the vesting of equitable title, but equitable title frequently vests in the very face of departmental disapproval.

Ard v. Brandon, 156 U. S. 537, 39 L. ed. 524, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 406; Cunningham v. Ashley, 14 How. 377, 14 L. ed. 462; Samson v. Smiley, 13 Wall. 91, 20 L. ed. 489; Duluth & Iron Range R. Co. v. Roy, 173 U. S. 587, 43 L. ed. 820, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 549; Morrison v. Stalmaker, 104 U. S. 213, 26 L. ed. 741; Nelson v. Northern P. R. Co. 188 U. S. 108, ante, 406, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 302.

Continuing jurisdiction in the department, to inquire as to whether or not equitable title has vested, is not incompatible with such title having in fact vested.

Michigan Land & Lumber Co. v. Rust, 168 U. S. 594, 42 L. ed. 593, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 208; Cornelius v. Kessel, 128 U. S. 456, 32 L. ed. 482, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 122; Wright v. Roseberry, 121 U. S. 488, 30 L. ed. 1039, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 985; Guaranty

Sav. Bank v. Bladow, 176 U. S. 448, 44 L. ed. 540, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 425.

Equitable title vests at the date of selection, under the act of June 4, 1897, whether the selector's relinquishment of his forest reserve land be contemporaneous with his selection,—as the act of Congress contemplates,—or prior thereto, as made necessary by Land Office regulations.

Olive Land & Development Co. v. Olmstead, 103 Fed. 568.

The term "final entry," as distinguished from "original entry," is only applicable where title is acquired by progressive steps; and has no application where the original entry operates as an immediate consummated purchase.

Larriviere v. Madegan, 1 Dill. 457, Fed. Cas. No. 8,096; Freuch v. Spencer, 62 U. S. 228, 16 L. ed. 97; Culver v. Uthe, 133 U. S. 655, 33 L. ed. 776, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 415.

A third person, who is a mere trespasser, cannot upon demurrer invoke the weakness of an entry or selection of public land made by another, nor can a third person call upon that other to establish or defend his selection.

Northern P. R. Co. v. Sanders, 166 U. S. 631, 41 L. ed. 1143, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 671; Sioux City & I. F. Town Lot & Land Co. v. Griffey, 143 U. S. 32, 36 L. ed. 64, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 362; Re Bergen, 30 Land Dec. 266.

The defendants, as mere protestants, have no standing in court to argue against the strength of complainant's title.

Wight v. Dubois, 21 Fed. 694.

The government may waive as against itself any irregularity in the proceedings of complainant's grantor, and, if there was any, did so by accepting his selections and certifying to the same.

Barnard v. Ashley, 18 How. 43, 15 L. ed. 285.

The belief of a nonmineral claimant as to the mineral character of land does not affect the right of such claimant to make entry of the land.

Iron Silver Min. Co. v. Reynolds, 124 U. S. 374, 31 L. ed. 466, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 598; Sullivan v. Iron Silver Min. Co. 143 U. S. 431, 36 L. ed. 214, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 555; Colorado Coal & I. Co. v. United States, 123 U. S. 307, 31 L. ed. 182, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 131; Deffeback v. Hawke, 115 U. S. 399, 29 L. ed. 425, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 95; Davis v. Weibbold, 139 U. S. 507, 35 L. ed. 238, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 628; Olive Land & Development Co. v. Olmstead, 103 Fed. 578.

Mr. John S. Chapman argued the cause, and, with Mr. Frank H. Short, filed a brief for appellees:

A bill in equity to quiet a title cannot be maintained in the Federal courts sitting as courts of equity, by a party out of possession and against the parties in possession.

Northern P. R. Co. v. Amacker, 1 C. C. A. 345, 7 U. S. App. 33, 49 Fed. 529; Wehrman v. Conklin, 155 U. S. 314, 39 L. ed. 167, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 129; Whitehead v. Shattuck, 138 U. S. 146, 34 L. ed. 873, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 276; Frost v. Spitley, 121 U. S. 556, 30 L. ed. 1012, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep.

1129; Savage v. Worsham, 104 Fed. 18; Southern P. R. Co. v. Goodrich, 57 Fed. 879.

To such a suit as is here brought, it is necessary that the complainant should have a legal title, as well as be in possession.

Harland v. Bankers' & M. Teleg. Co. 32 Fed. 305; Kennedy v. Elliott, 85 Fed. 832; Morrison v. Marker, 93 Fed. 692.

A bill to quiet the title to a portion of the public lands of the United States cannot be maintained where it appears upon the face of the bill that a controversy is pending as to the rights of the parties in such lands before the Land Department of the United States.

Sioux City & St. P. R. Co. v. United States, 34 Fed. 835; Gaines v. Thompson, 7 Wall. 347, 19 L. ed. 62; Sloan v. United States, 95 Fed. 193; Ferry v. Street, 4 Utah, 521, 7 Pac. 712, 11 Pac. 571; Brandt v. Wheaton, 52 Cal. 430; Forbes v. Driscoll, 4 Dak. 336, 31 N. W. 633; Marquez v. Frisbie, 101 U. S. 473, 25 L. ed. 800.

The administration of these laws is under the jurisdiction of the Land Department; it has the power to prescribe reasonable regulations not inconsistent with law for the purpose of discharging the duties imposed upon it, and exercising the powers with which it is clothed.

Knight v. United Land Asso. 142 U. S. 161, 35 L. ed. 974, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 258; United States v. Winona & St. P. R. Co. 15 C. C. A. 96, 32 U. S. App. 272, 67 Fed. 948; Chapman v. Quinn, 56 Cal. 266; Poppe v. Athearn, 42 Cal. 607; Germania Iron Co. v. James, 32 C. C. A. 348, 61 U. S. App. 1, 89 Fed. 811; Hoover v. Salling, 102 Fed. 716; James v. Germania Iron Co. 46 C. C. A. 476, 107 Fed. 597; King v. McAndrews, 50 C. C. A. 29, 111 Fed. 860; Barden v. Northern P. R. Co. 154 U. S. 288, 38 L. ed. 992, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1030; Northern P. R. Co. v. Cannon, 4 C. C. A. 303, 7 U. S. App. 507, 54 Fed. 252; Steel v. St. Louis Smelting & Ref. Co. 106 U. S. 447, 27 L. ed. 226, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 389.

And not only has the Land Department jurisdiction over these matters, but that jurisdiction continues until the patent is issued, or until that stage is reached which, in law, is the legal equivalent of a patent.

Michigan Land & Lumber Co. v. Rust, 168 U. S. 589, 42 L. ed. 591, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 208; Knight v. United Land Asso. 142 U. S. 161, 35 L. ed. 974, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 258; Diller v. Hawley, 26 C. C. A. 514, 48 U. S. App. 462, 81 Fed. 651; Hawley v. Diller, 178 U. S. 476, 44 L. ed. 1157, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 986.

Where an act for the disposition of the public lands is passed, unless the administration of it is committed to some other specially enumerated tribunal, it comes within the scope of the jurisdiction of the Land Department.

Catholic Bishop v. Gibbon, 158 U. S. 155, 39 L. ed. 931, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 779.

The selection is not made until it is approved.

Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Sioux City 190 U. S. U. S., Book 47.

St. P. R. Co. 117 U. S. 406, 29 L. ed. 928, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 790; Wisconsin C. R. Co. v. Price County, 133 U. S. 496, 33 L. ed. 687, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 341.

Subsequent to the commencement of these suits, the controversies which were at the time of the commencement pending in the Land Department were decided by the Department, and the selections were rejected.

Kern Oil Co. v. Clarke, 30 Land Dec. 550; Gray Eagle Oil Co. v. Clarke, 30 Land Dec. 570.

No right vests by the mere presentation of the application or selection, or by any other act of the applicant.

Frisbie v. Whitney, 76 U. S. 187, 19 L. ed. 668; The Yosemite Valley Case, 82 U. S. 77, sub nom. Hutchings v. Low, 21 L. ed. 82; Wirth v. Branson, 98 U. S. 118, 25 L. ed. 86; Campbell v. Wade, 132 U. S. 34, 33 L. ed. 240, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 9.

No construction can be placed upon the forest lien law which will take cases arising under it out of the ordinary jurisdiction of the Land Department.

Orchard v. Alexander, 157 U. S. 372, 39 L. ed. 737, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 635; Michigan Land & Lumber Co. v. Rust, 168 U. S. 589, 42 L. ed. 591, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 208; Diller v. Hawley, 26 C. C. A. 514, 48 U. S. App. 462, 81 Fed. 651; Hawley v. Diller, 178 U. S. 476, 44 L. ed. 1157, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 986.

Until there is the judgment of the Land Department that the lands are of the character sought to be purchased or selected, no title vests.

Re Abercrombie, 6 Land Dec. 393; Spratt v. Edwards, 15 Land Dec. 290; Stinchfield v. Pierce, 19 Land Dec. 12; Zadig v. Central P. R. Co. 20 Land Dec. 26; Barnstetter v. Central P. R. Co. 21 Land Dec. 464; Walker v. Southern P. R. Co. 24 Land Dec. 172; Swark v. California, 27 Land Dec. 411; McQuiddy v. California, 29 Land Dec. 181; Re Harrell, 29 Land Dec. 553; Harnish v. Wallace, 13 Land Dec. 108; Re Placer, 13 Land Dec. 86; Jones v. Driver, 15 Land Dec. 514; Rea v. Stephenson, 15 Land Dec. 37; Re Laney, 9 Land Dec. 83; Re Plymouth Lode, 12 Land Dec. 513; Deffebach v. Hawke, 115 U. S. 392, 29 L. ed. 423, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 95; Sparks v. Pierce, 115 U. S. 411, 29 L. ed. 429, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 102; Davis v. Weibbold, 139 U. S. 515, 35 L. ed. 241, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 628; New Dundberg Min. Co. v. Old, 25 C. C. A. 116, 49 U. S. App. 201, 79 Fed. 598; Northern P. R. Co. v. Cannon, 4 C. C. A. 303, 7 U. S. App. 507, 54 Fed. 252.

Lands already occupied by others are not "vacant."

Shaw v. Kellogg, 170 U. S. 312, 42 L. ed. 1050, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 632.

Lands in the occupancy of one person are not open to be taken under any of the various laws of the United States.

Atherton v. Fowler, 96 U. S. 513, 24 L. ed. 732; Cosmos Explor. Co. v. Gray Eagle Oil Co. 50 C. C. A. 79, 112 Fed. 4; Basey v. Gallagher, 20 Wall. 670, 22 L. ed. 452.

When a mining location has been made, the party acquires right of exclusive possession, and the interest which thus vests removes the land from the public domain, and the United States has no authority to dispose of it.

Forbes v. Gracey, 94 U. S. 762, 24 L. ed. 313; Bell v. Meagher, 104 U. S. 279, 26 L. ed. 735; Noyes v. Mantle, 127 U. S. 348, 32 L. ed. 168, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1132.

To issue a patent to one person for lands to which another has, or may have, rights under the laws of the United States, without any notice or any opportunity to be heard in defense of those rights, is in violation of the Constitution, and this has been applied as well to the action of the Land Department as to the courts.

Cornelius v. Kessel, 128 U. S. 456, 32 L. ed. 482, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 122; Orchard v. Alexander, 157 U. S. 372, 39 L. ed. 737, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 635.

One who has acquired any rights under the homestead law is as against all persons except the United States government at least, entitled to protection of that right.

Sturr v. Beck, 133 U. S. 541, 33 L. ed. 761, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 350; Diller v. Hawley, 26 C. C. A. 514, 48 U. S. App. 462, 81 Fed. 653; Hawley v. Diller, 178 U. S. 476, 44 L. ed. 1157, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 986.

There is no delivery of the deeds until they are accepted, and the mere passing of the instruments to the hands of the grantee does not amount to a delivery. The grantee has the right to examine it, and to reject it if it is not proper. And, moreover, he has a reasonable time in which to determine whether it is acceptable or not.

Harris v. Harris, 59 Cal. 620; Tiedeman, Real Prop. § 812; 3 Washb. Real Prop. p. 354, § 28; Los Angeles Immigration & Land Co-op. Asso. v. Phillips, 56 Cal. 539; Ryan v. United States, 136 U. S. 68, 34 L. ed. 447, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 913.

If the lands are mineral, they are not subject to selection. And until there has been an official determination that they come within the class of lands subject to selection, the question of mineral or non-mineral is not precluded.

Barden v. Northern P. R. Co. 154 U. S. 288, 38 L. ed. 992, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1030.

This court takes judicial notice of the regulations of the Land Department.

Caha v. United States, 152 U. S. 211, 38 L. ed. 415, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 513.

The power to make regulations binding upon courts, if they are reasonable and consistent with law, has been affirmed by the courts in many different cases.

Chapman v. Quinn, 56 Cal. 266; Poppe v. Athearn, 42 Cal. 607; Germania Iron Co. v. James, 32 C. C. A. 348, 61 U. S. App. 1, 89 Fed. 811; Hoover v. Salling, 102 Fed. 716; Catholic Bishop v. Gibbon, 158 U. S. 155, 39 L. ed. 931, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 779.

In pleading a right given by a statute and dependent upon the existence of particular facts, the pleader must state the facts upon which that right or privilege depends.

Dye v. Dye, 11 Cal. 163; Himmelman v. Danos, 35 Cal. 441; Rhoda v. Alameda Co.

52 Cal. 350; San Luis Obispo County v. Hendricks, 71 Cal. 242, 11 Pac. 682; Perinc v. Forbush, 97 Cal. 309, 32 Pac. 226; Little York Gold-Washing & Water Co. v. Keyes, 96 U. S. 199, 24 L. ed. 656.

Mr. Justice Peckham, after making the foregoing statement of facts, delivered the opinion of the court:

An examination of the complainant's bill shows that it does not ask for an injunction until the decision of the Land Department upon the matters pending therein. The complainant ignores those proceedings so far as to claim now the final adjudication by the court, based upon its alleged equitable title to a three-quarters interest in the land selected, and it avers that the Land Department cannot lawfully refuse or deny the issuance of a patent to Clarke. It avers that the protest filed by defendants is insufficient to impair or affect the validity of the selection of land made by complainant's assignor. The court is, therefore, called upon in advance of and without reference to the action of the Land Department, to determine complainant's right and title to the three-quarters interest in the selected land, and a final decree is asked determining the interest of the parties in this land, while the question in relation to the title is still properly before the Land Department, and not yet decided. This we cannot do. Marquez v. Frisbie, 101 U. S. 473, 25 L. ed. 800; United States v. Schurz, 102 U. S. 378, 395, 26 L. ed. 167, 171. If the Land Department has any jurisdiction over the subject-matter, the question as to the sufficiency of the protest is one for the decision of that department, and its right to decide thereon is not taken from it by the averment of a legal conclusion contained in the complainant's bill that the department has no legal right to decide otherwise than in favor of the complainant upon the facts before it. But, assuming that the question of issuing a patent is still and properly before the Land Department, the complainant avers that it has an equitable title to the land which will be protected by the court. Whether complainant has a full, complete, and equitable title to the land is a question depending upon considerations hereinafter stated.

There can be, as we think, no doubt that the general administration of the forest reserve act, and also the determination*of the various questions which may arise thereunder before the issuing of any patent for the selected lands, are vested in the Land Department. The statute of 1897 does not in terms refer any question that might arise under it to that department, but the subject-matter of that act relates to the relinquishment of land in the various forest reservations, to the United States, and to the selection of lands in lieu thereof, from the public lands of the United States, and the administration of the act is to be governed by the general system adopted by the United States for the administration of the laws regarding its public lands. Unless taken away by some affirmative provision of law, the Land Department has jurisdiction over the subject. Catholic Bishop v. Gibbon, 158 U. S. 155, 166, 167, 39 L. ed. 931, 936, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 779. There is no such law, and we must hold that the Land Department has full jurisdiction over matters involving the right of parties to a patent for lands selected under that act in lieu of lands relinquished in a forest reservation. By virtue of that jurisdiction the General Land Department has power to review and set aside (though not arbitrarily) the decisions of local officers relating to those questions, where such officers have power to make those decisions in the first instance. Orchard v. Alexander, 157 U. S. 372, 39 L. ed. 737, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 635; Guaranty Sav. Bank v. Bladow, 176 U. S. 448, 451, 44 L. ed. 540, 542, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 425; Hawley v. Diller, 178 U. S. 476, 490, 44 L. ed. 1157, 1162, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 986.

The Land Department also has power to adopt, and did adopt, rules and regulations for the administration of the forest reserve act. The power existed by virtue of the provisions of the Revised Statutes, §§ 441, 453, and 2478 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 252, 257, 1586). Courts will take judicial notice of rules and regulations made by the Land Department regarding the sale or exchange of public land. Caha v. United States, 152 U. S. 211, 221, 38 L. ed. 415, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 513. The rules and regulations promulgated by that department for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of the act of June 4, 1897, are found in 24 Land Dec. 589, 592, and we think the rules set forth below are reasonable and entitled to respect and obedience as valid rules and regulations.

Among the rules it is provided:

"16. Where final certificate or patent has issued, it will be necessary for the entryman [310] or owner thereunder to execute a *quitclaim deed to the United States, have the same recorded on the county records, and furnish an abstract of title, duly authenticated, showing chain of title from the government back again to the United States. The abstract of title should accompany the application for change of entry, which must be filed as required by paragraph 15, without the affidavit therein called for.

"18. All applications for change of entry or settlement must be forwarded by the local officers to the Commissioner of the General Land Office for consideration, together with report as to the status of the tract applied for."

The "consideration," mentioned in rule 18, is clearly not of the character of a review of a decision already made by the local land officers, but is in the nature of an original consideration of the subject by the General Land Office, to which office the final decision belongs. The applications are to be forwarded, not a decision by the local land office, together with a report (not a decision) as to the status of the land. This rule makes it the duty of the local land officers merely to forward the various applications to the General Land Office, and an original decision is to be made by the latter office upon the papers transmitted to it.

190 U. S.

It will be noticed that the bill in this case alleges the proceeding before the local land officers, and also that defendants filed a protest, and that the questions raised thereby are still before the Land Department and not yet decided. The complete equitable title of the complainant is not, therefore, made out, and cannot exist until a favorable decision by that department has been made regarding the sufficiency of complainant's proof of his right to the selected land. That question the department is competent, and it is its duty, to decide. It may be that when the decision of the Land Department is made, if it be favorable to the applicant, the complete equitable title claimed will accrue from the time the selection of the lands was made in the local land office, and when the patent subsequently issues the legal title will vest from the time of selection. But before any decision is made how can there be an equitable title?

We do not think that by the act of 1883 (22 Stat. at L. 484, chap. 101, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1369), the *local land officers [311] were given any power to decide upon the sufficiency of the application in such a case as this. That act simply imposed upon them the duty of furnishing plats of townships showing what lands were vacant and what lands taken. It obviously referred to the lands that appeared vacant or appeared to have been taken on the records of their office. It did not assume to provide that no other lands could be taken than such as appeared so to be on those records.

The ground upon which complainant insists that it is the equitable owner of the land selected is that it has relinquished a title in fee in a forest reservation, and has selected in lieu thereof vacant land open to settlement, and that the local land officers duly accepted, received, and filed the deed of the land relinquished, and the affidavit that the land selected was nonmineral, and that the officers duly entered such selection upon the official records of the land office, and then and there certified that the land selected was free from conflict, and that there was no adverse filing, entry, or claim thereto. Complainant asserts that was all that it could reasonably do; that nothing remained on its part to do, and that when such is the case the equitable title vests, and it is entitled to the protection of a court of equity to preserve and defend the title so acquired.

Counsel insists that the act of June 4, 1897, constitutes a standing offer on the part of the government to exchange any of its "vacant land, open to settlement" for a similar area of patented land in a forest reservation, and that whenever a person relinquishes to the government a tract in a forest reservation, and places his deed to the government of record as required by the Land Department rules, and selects in lieu thereof a similar area of vacant land, open to settlement, that such offer of the government has thereupon been both accepted and fully complied with, and that a complete equitable title to the selected land is thereby vested in the selector.

But even the complete equitable title asserted by complainant must, as it would seem, be based upon the alleged right of the local land officers to accept the deed and approve the selection, even though such approval may be thereafter the subject of a review in the nature of an appeal from the action [312] *of the local officers. There must be a decision made somewhere regarding the rights asserted by the selector of land under the act, before a complete equitable title to the land can exist. The mere filing of papers cannot create such title. The application must comply with and conform to the statute, and the selector cannot decide the question for himself.

We do not see how it can be successfully maintained that, without any decision by any official representing the government, and by merely filing the deed relinquishing to the government a tract of forest reserve land and assuming to select a similar area of vacant land open to settlement, the selector has thereby acquired a complete equitable title to the selected land. The selector has not acquired title simply because he has selected land which he claims was at the time of selection vacant land open to settlement, nor does the filing of his deed conveying the land relinquished and the abstract of title with it show necessarily that he was the owner of the land as provided for by the statute. So far as his action goes, it is an assertion on his part that he was the owner in fee simple of the land he proposed to relinquish, and that the deed conveys a fee simple title to the government, and also that he has selected vacant land which is open to settlement, and that therefore he is entitled to a patent for such land. These assertions may or may not be true. Who is to decide? Complainant asserts that if a decision be necessary before the vesting of a complete equitable title, that in that case the local officers are to decide that question, and by accepting the deed and making the certificate already mentioned, they have decided it, and thereupon, at all events, the complete, equitable title accrued, even though such decision were subject to a review by the Commissioner of the General Land Office and thereafter by the Secretary.

But, as has already been stated, there is nothing in the statute of 1897 which gives the local land officers the right to decide whether the selector has complied with the provisions of the act, and unless those officers had that power they did not acquire it by assuming to exercise it. We do not say they did so assume. They received, accepted, and filed the deed, the abstract of title, the non-mineral affidavit, and the selection as [313] *made by Clarke. They entered that selection upon the official records of the land office, and they certified that it was free from conflict, and that there was no adverse filing, entry, or claim thereto; but it cannot be said that they decided that the selector had complied with the provisions of the statute, or that he had done all that he ought to have done in order to acquire his alleged complete, equitable title.

Their certificate that the land was free from conflict was simply a certificate as to what appeared on the books of the local office, and the same may be said of the statement that there was no adverse filing, entry, or claim thereto upon such books. No affidavit of non-occupancy was filed, and they did not certify that the land so selected was in fact vacant or unoccupied, nor did they assume to certify that the selected land contained no minerals, although an affidavit to that effect was presented to them. In truth, all that these local officers did was to certify that the selector had done certain things, and that the land selected was vacant and open to settlement so far as it appeared from the books of the local land office.

Taking into consideration, however, the fact that the statute did not vest the local officers with the right to decide upon the question of a compliance with its terms, and the further fact that the Land Department had adopted rule 18, above referred to, which provides for the forwarding of all applications for change of entry or settlement to the Commissioner of the General Land Office for his consideration, together with a report as to the status of the tract applied for, we must conclude that the action of the local officers did not, as it could not, amount to a decision upon the application of the selector, so that he became vested with the equitable title to the land he assumed to select. It is certain, as we have already remarked, there must be some decision upon that question before any equitable title can be claimed,—some decision by an officer authorized to make it. Under the rule above cited, that decision has not been made. The General Land Office has (so far as this record shows) come to no conclusion in regard to it.

The protest by the defendants was duly filed within the time permitted by the regulations of the office, and the questions *aris- [314] ing thereunder are, as stated, in the bill still pending before the General Land Office. Whether it was necessary, at the time of making the selection, for the selector to file, in addition to his non-mineral affidavit, an affidavit that the land was not occupied in fact, is a question of law for the Land Department to determine among the other questions to be decided by it. Its decision of any legal question would not, of course, be binding on the courts whenever such a question might properly arise in any future litigation. It is also for the Land Department to determine whether, if the land were not known to be mineral land at the time of the selection, the fact that mineral in paying quantities has been found since that time, will vitiate that selection.

In Kern Oil Co. v. Clarke, 30 Land Dec. 550, 567, referring to the necessity of the filing of a nonoccupancy affidavit, it was said:

"That a non-mineral affidavit should accompany the selection is not seriously questioned by appellant. It is just as essential that it should be accompanied by a vacancy or nonoccupancy affidavit. Appellant's contention, that the word 'vacant,' as used in the statute, means public lands which are not shown by the records of the local office or General Land Office to be claimed, appropriated, or reserved, cannot be accepted. Portions of the public lands may be occupied, and for that reason be not subject to selection, and yet there be no mention of their occupancy in the records of the Land Department."

Again, in Gray Eagle Oil Co. v. Clarke, 30 Land Dec. 570, it was also held that under the act of June 4, 1897, it must be shown that at the date of selection the selected lands were unoccupied as well as non-mineral in character, and that, until that proof was submitted, a selector had not done that which converts the offer of exchange into a contract fully executed on his part whereby he secures a vested right in the selected land. It is unnecessary for the court to express an opinion as to the correctness of these views of the Land Department as stated in its opinion in the above cases.

[315] What may be the decision of the Land Department upon these questions in this case cannot be known, but, until the various *questions of law and fact have been determined by that department in favor of complainant, it cannot be said that it has a complete equitable title to the land selected.

Concluding, as we do, that the question whether the complainant has ever made a proper selection of land in lieu of the land relinquished, has never been decided by the Land Department, but is still properly before that department, the courts cannot take jurisdiction and proceed to decide such question themselves. The government has provided a special tribunal for the decision of such a question arising out of the administration of its public land laws, and that jurisdiction cannot be taken away from it by the courts. United States v. Schurz, 102 U. S. 378, 395, 26 L. ed. 167, 171.

The bill is not based upon any alleged power of the court to prevent the taking out of mineral from the land, pending the decision of the Land Department upon the rights of the complainant, and the court has not been asked by any averments in the bill or in the prayer for relief to consider that question.

For the reasons stated, we think the bill does not state sufficient facts upon which to base the relief asked for, and that the defendants' demurrer to the same was properly sustained. The decree of the Circuit Court of Appeals must therefore be affirmed.

On a petition for a modification of the above decree of affirmance, Mr. Justice Peckham announced on June 1, 1903, the order of the court that the decree dismissing the bill be modified by providing that the dismissal is without prejudice to such future proceedings as complainant may be advised, and that as so modified the decree be affirmed.

*PACIFIC LAND AND IMPROVEMENT COMPANY, Appt.,

v.

ELWOOD OIL COMPANY et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 316.)

Federal courts—interference with Land Department—forest reserve act—power of Land Department with reference to selection of lieu lands—acts of local officers insufficient, to vest equitable title.

This case is governed by the decision in Cosmos Exploration Co. v. Gray Eagle Oil Co. ante, 1064.

[No. 218.]

Argued March 16, 17, 1903. Decided May 18, 1903.

A PPEAL from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the Circuit Court for the Southern District of California sustaining a demurrer to and dismissing a bill to enjoin interference with the possession of public land selected in lieu of land relinquished in a forest reservation. Affirmed without prejudice to future proceedings.

See same case below, 50 C. C. A. 79, 112 Fed. 4.

Messrs. T. C. Van Ness and Jefferson Chandler argued the cause, and, with Messrs. John M. Thurston, Shirley C. Ward, M. A. Ballinger, Horace F. Clark, and William C. Prentiss, filed a brief for appellant:

For their contentions see their brief as reported in Cosmos Explor. Co. v. Gray Eagle Oil Co. ante, 1064.

Mr. John S. Chapman argued the cause, and, with Mr. Frank H. Short, filed a brief for appellees:

That Congress might, at any time prior to the discovery of the mine, withdraw the lands or grant them to another, does not make it necessary to construe the forest lien act as an exercise of that power.

Washington & I. R. Co. v. Osborn, 160 U. S. 103, 109, 110, 40 L. ed. 356, 358, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 219.

When one enters upon the public land for a lawful purpose and with the intention to acquire the title to it by a lawful means, and goes under the sanction of the acts of Congress, he is entitled to perform the acts which are necessary to perfect that title free from the interference of other persons.

United States v. Waddell, 112 U. S. 76, 28 L. ed. 673, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 35.

For other contentions of counsel see their brief as reported in Cosmos Explor. Co. v. Gray Eagle Oil Co. ante, 1064.

Mr. Justice Peckham: This case is covered by the foregoing decision, and the deeree of the circuit court of appeals herein is therefore, affirmed.

On a petition for a modification of the above decree of affirmance, Mr. Justice Peckham announced on June 1, 1903, the order of the court that the decree dismissing the bill be modified by providing that the dismissal is without prejudice to such future proceedings as complainant may be advised, and that as so modified the decree be affirmed.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA on the Relation of THE RIVERSIDE OIL COM-PANY, Plff. in Err.,

v.

ETHAN A. HITCHCOCK, Secretary of the Interior.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 316-326.)

Mandamus—against Secretary of Interior—does not lie to control judicial action.

Mandamus will not lie against the Secretary of the Interior to compel him to vacate his decision that a selection of public land, under the act of June 4, 1897 (30 Stat. at L. 36, chap. 2, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1541), in lieu of land relinquished in a forest reservation, must be rejected because of the failure of the selector to show in due and proper form that the land was, at the date of selection, subject to selection as "vacant land open to settlement," which the Secretary construed as meaning to exclude land in the actual possession of any person under the local customs or rules of miners which are by statute incorporated into and have become part of the laws of the United States.

[No. 632.]

Argued March 17, 18, 1903. Decided May 18, 1903.

IN ERROR to the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Supreme Court of that District denying a petition for a writ of mandamus to compel the Secretary of the Interior to vacate an order rejecting a selection of public land. Affirmed.

Statement by Mr. Justice Peckham:

The relator, plaintiff in error, filed its petition in the supreme court of the District of Columbia, asking for a writ of mandamus to compel the defendant, the Secretary of the Interior, to vacate a certain order made by him rejecting selections of land by one Clarke, and to compel the defendant to order such selections passed to patent and to cause to be prepared and presented for signature to the proper officers of the United States of America a patent for the selected land, or for such other relief as might be proper. The court denied the petition, and from that judgment the relator appealed to the court of appeals of the District, which, after a hearing, affirmed the judgment of the court below. The relator has brought the case here by writ of error.

The petition for the writ filed in the court below, in addition to various conclusions of law, made the following averments of fact:

On October 28, 1898, one C. W. Clarke was the owner in fee of certain land in the state of Oregon covered by a patent from the United States to his grantors, which is described in the petition, and the land was situated in a forest reservation in that state, designated as the Cascade Range Forest Reservation. On the day above mentioned Clarke executed a deed, which conveyed in fee and relinquished to the United States the land above described, and the deed was surrendered to the register and receiver of the proper land office and received and accepted by them. Certain land was thereupon selected by Clarke, which land had been duly surveyed and classified as agricultural land prior to the selection, and appeared on the records of the Land Department as agricultural land, subject to disposition under the act of June 4, 1897 (30 Stat. at L. 36, chap. 2, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1541), relating to forest reserve lands. A copy of the material portion of that act is set forth in [318] the margin in the case immediately preceding, Cosmos Exploration Co. v. Gray Eagle Oil Co. 190 U. S. 301, ante, 1064, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 692.

After the selection of the land the register certified that the land thus selected in lieu of the land relinquished to the United States was free from conflict, and that there was no adverse filing, entry, or claim thereto, and he thereupon entered the selected land upon the records and tract books of the land office. The Land Department thereafter required Clarke (without authority of law as averred) to publish a notice of his selection for a period of sixty days, and the register forwarded all the papers to the Commissioner of the General Land Office, together with his above-mentioned certifi-

NOTE.—As to when mandamus will issue to public officers—see notes to United States ex rel. Pollok v. Hall (D. C.) 1 L. R. A. 738; People ex rel. Brokaw v. Bloomington Twp. Highway Comrs. (Ill.) 6 L. R. A. 161, and Territory ex rel. Choteau County v. Cascade County (Mont.) 7 L. R. A. 105.

That mandamus will not lie to control official judgment and discretion—see note to Bates v. Taylor (Tenn.) 3 L. R. A. 316, and State ex rel. Charleston, C. C. & C. R. Co. v. Whitesides (S. C.) 3 L. R. A. 777.

As to independence of departments of government—see note to Fleming v. Guthrie (W. Va.) 3 L. R. A. 53, and Bates v. Taylor (Tenn.) 3 L. R. A. 316.

As to when mandamus is the proper remedy—see notes to United States ex rel. International Contracting Co. v. Lamont, 39 L. ed. U. S. 160; McCluny v. Silliman, 4 L. ed. U. S. 263; Fleming v. Guthrie (W. Va.) 3 L. R. A. 54; Burnsville Turnp. Co. v. State (Ind.) 3 L. R. A. 265; State ex rel. Charleston, C. C. & C. R. Co. v. Whitesides (S. C.) 3 L. R. A. 777, and Ex parte Hurn (Ala.) 13 L. R. A. 120.

cate, and reported to that office that publication had been ordered pursuant to the circular of the General Land Office of December 18, 1899. Clarke complied with the requirements of the department and published the notice, and on February 6, 1900, before the sixty days had expired, the Kern Oil Company filed in the local office a protest against the selection, with accompanying affidavits, which protest and affidavits were also thereupon forwarded to the General Land Office. The petitioner avers that the protest was insufficient to constitute an issue as to whether or not the land selected by Clarke was vacant land open to settlement at the time of such selection, and it was averred that the protestant, by reason of the non-discovery of mineral in the land, was wholly without standing as an adverse claimant under the law and practice of the Land Department.

On January 2, 1900, Clarke duly conveyed by deed the selected land to the petitioner, and it thereby became vested with all of Clarke's rights in and to the land, and it is still the owner thereof and entitled to demand and receive from the United States a patent therefor. The petitioner then filed in the General Land Office a motion to dismiss the protest.

It was then averred that at the time of the selection by Clarke no other person had any right, title, or interest, vested or inchoate, in or to the land so selected, and that the persons mentioned in the protest and affidavits, and alleged to have been upon the land as locators at or before the time of the selection by Clarke, and under whom [319] the protestant asserted rights, *were pretended explorers for minerals who had made no discovery of minerals upon the land or any part thereof, but had merely staked off pretended mining claims for the purpose of deceiving others and discouraging and defeating them from acquiring title to such land under the land laws, and that such staking off initiated no lawful right, inchoate or vested, under such land laws.

The hearing was had before the Commissioner of the General Land Office, and a decision in the matter was given by him, by which he held that the title of the selector did not vest until approval by the Commissioner, and that the land in the selection was yet open to exploration under the mining laws, and if at the date of the decision the land is shown to be mineral it defeats the selection.

From this decision the petitioner appealed to the Secretary of the Interior, and assigned, among other things, that the Commissioner erred in not sustaining the motion to dismiss the protest and in not passing the land selected to patent, and that he also erred in ordering a hearing, and in not holding that the showing of the tract books and land records at the date of the selection governed the character of the land for the purpose of the selection, and also in holding that a discovery of mineral upon the land selected subsequent to the selection and before approval by the Commissioner would defeat such selection; that the Commissioner also erred in calling upon the selector to demand a hearing and assume the burden of proof upon the question of the character of the land, and in directing that at such hearing, if demanded, the character of the land subsequent to the selection should be embraced in the issue.

On April 25, 1901, the defendant rendered a decision in the matter, wherein, as averred, he held that questions respecting the class and character of the selected land were to be determined by the conditions existing at the time when all requirements necessary to obtain title have been complied with by the selector; that the mere recital in one of the forms approved by the respondent, of an accompanying non-mineral and non-occupancy affidavit, constituted a regulation of the department requiring the filing of such affidavit as a condition precedent to *the [320] vesting of selector's title; that such alleged regulation was binding upon selector's forest reserve lieu land; that the affidavits filed by the selector Clarke failed to allege non-occupancy, and therefore he had not complied with the requirements necessary to obtain title; that since the said selection by Clarke valuable deposits of mineral petroleum oil had been discovered, and that, in view of the alleged admitted occupancy subsequent to the said selection and the subsequently discovered value of the land for mining purposes, it was apparent that the required proofs of the then non-mineral character and non-occupancy of the land could not then be supplied; that, therefore, the selections must be rejected.

The petition averred that the defendant vacated the order of the Commissioner directing a hearing, and arbitrarily, wrongfully, and unlawfully attempted to reject the selections and destroy the vested rights of Clarke and his grantees.

The protest mentioned in nowise questioned the sufficiency in substance and form of the selection made by Clarke, nor was the point of the alleged insufficiency of the affidavit raised by the Commissioner of the General Land Office in his decision of December 18, 1900, and the United States has in nowise notified the selector of any defect in the exchange, and there is no issue in the record charging a failure to comply with the law.

The affidavits, though not essential to the validity of the contract of exchange tendered by Congress, and accepted and completed by the relinquishment and selection aforesaid, did in law and in fact allege the non-occupancy of the land as understood in the law and the practice of the Land Department, as they expressly negative all the elements of legal occupancy.

A motion for a review of the hearing was made and granted, and was thereafter had before the Assistant Attorney General of the United States for the Interior Department.

On April 12, 1902, the defendant rendered a decision, adhering to the ruling already given, ignoring the curative effect of supplemental affidavits of nonoccupancy, and denied the motion for a review.

By this decision the Secretary of the Interior erroneously held and decided that the land selected was not "vacant land," [321] *though in truth and in fact unoccupied, and such vacancy and lack of occupancy was not shown by an affidavit of selector, made and filed at the time and as a part of the selection: that the defendant erroneously held and decided that, in order to be vacant land within the meaning of the act of 1897, the selected land must not only be free from the presence of anyone on the land as a matter of fact, but must be shown to be free from such presence of anyone on the land at the date of selection by an affidavit of selector. It was then alleged that in fact there was no person present on the selected land at the time of the selection; that the decision of the Secretary of the Interior on review turned solely on a question of law, and not on any question of fact or on any question of mixed law and fact, and that the only question of law involved is the meaning of the act of June 4, 1897, and the particular words therein, "vacant land open to settlement."

The defendant arbitrarily refused to pass the selection to patent, and has arbitrarily ordered the case of the selector dismissed from his docket solely because of the alleged absence from the record of selection of a non-occupancy affidavit, and not because of any ground or cause of objection to the selection set up in said protest.

In conclusion, the petitioner prays for a writ of mandamus to command the defendant "to forthwith recall and vacate his said order rejecting said selections of said Clarke, and if said selections have already been canceled to vacate and recall said cancellation and reinstate the proceedings relating to the said selections, and thereupon to proceed therein as required by law, and to order said selections passed to patent, and cause to be prepared and presented for signature to and by the proper officer of the United States of America a patent or patents for the said selected lands, and that the petitioner may have such other or further relief as the premises warrant and to the court may seem meet."

To this petition the defendant made answer, admitting many averments in the petition, and setting up the facts as understood by the defendant, as follows: The defendant averred that Clarke did file his deed [322] with the local land officers and assumed *to select other land under the act of June 4, 1897; that a form of application to select land under the act had been prescribed by the Commissioner of the General Land Office in April, 1898, and approved by the Secretary of the Interior, and was in force when the selection was made, and which form contained, among other things, the following clause:

"There are also submitted certificates from the proper officers showing that the land relinquished or surrendered is free from encumbrance of any kind, also that all taxes thereon to the present time have been paid, and an affidavit showing the lands selected to be non-mineral in character and unoccupied."

It is then averred that the allegations showing the land selected to be non-mineral in character and unoccupied was an essential averment, for the reason that, unless the lands were non-mineral in character and unoccupied, the same were not vacant lands open to settlement within the intent and meaning of the act of 1897.

The regulation was not complied with and no evidence of non-occupancy was given, and the allegation contained in the proposed form as to the non-mineral character of the land was not complied with, as it was stated by the selector in this case that his affidavit as to the character of the lands was made "upon the evidence found upon the surface of the ground, and that the affiant does not undertake to express any opinion as to what may be under the ground."

The answer then set up the facts as to the protest of the Kern Oil Company and the various hearings and decisions of the Commissioner and the Secretary, in substance as set forth in the petition.

The defendant then averred that by the laws of the United States the duty was imposed upon him to construe the acts governing the disposition of the public lands of the United States, and, in pursuance of the duties so imposed upon him, he was required to construe and apply the terms of the act of Congress of June 4, 1897, and that, in the exercise of his judgment and discretion in that behalf, he did construe the term, "vacant land open to settlement," as meaning to exclude land in the actual occupation of any person or persons under the local customs *or rules of miners which are [323] by the statute incorporated into and have become part of the laws of the United States; that, in the exercise of his proper duty and function as Secretary of the Interior, the defendant decided that, by reason of the failure of Clarke to show in due and proper form that the lands were at the date of selection subject to selection as "vacant land open to settlement," the attempted selection thereof must be rejected, and it thereupon became and was unlawful for this respondent as such Secretary to order any patent or patents to the said lands to issue to the said Clarke as in the said petition prayed to be commanded.

To this answer the petitioner demurred on the ground that the same was insufficient and bad in form and substance. After the demurrer was overruled the petitioner elected to stand by it, and the court thereupon adjudged that the rule to show cause should be discharged, the prayer of petitioner denied, and the petition itself dismissed.

Messrs. Jefferson Chandler and Shirley C. Ward argued the cause, and, with Messrs. John M. Thurston, William C. Prentiss, M. A. Ballinger, and Horace F. Clark, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The supervisory power of the Commissioner of the General Land Office and the Secretary of the Interior over the action of the local officers is limited to vacating such action for causes which in law make the patent void or, in equity, would sustain suit to cancel it.

Cornelius v. Kessel, 128 U. S. 456, 32 L. ed. 482, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 122; Brown v. Hitchcock, 173 U. S. 473, 43 L. ed. 772, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 485.

When in cash sales the price has been paid, or in other cases all the conditions of entry performed, the full equitable title has passed, and only the naked legal title remains in the government in trust for the other party, in whom is vested all the rights and obligations of ownership.

Benson Min. & Smelting Co. v. Alta Min. & Smelting Co. 145 U. S. 428, 36 L. ed. 762, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 877.

The execution and delivery of a patent after the right to it has become complete are mere ministerial acts of the officers charged with that duty.

Barney v. Dolph, 97 U. S. 652, 656, 24 L. ed. 1063, 1064; Simmons v. Wagner, 101 U. S. 260, 261, 25 L. ed. 910, 911; Dibble v. Bellingham Bay Land Co. 163 U. S. 63, 74, 41 L. ed. 72, 76, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 939.

The determination of questions of law by the Land Department is not binding on the courts.

Northern P. R. Co. v. Colburn, 164 U. S. 383, 41 L. ed. 479, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 98.

The supervisory power of the defendant is purely ministerial.

Mullan v. United States, 118 U. S. 271, 30 L. ed. 170, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1041; Orchard v. Alexander, 157 U. S. 373, 39 L. ed. 737, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 635; Lewis, Government of Dependencies, pp. 6-8; Macse v. Herman, 183 U. S. 572, 581, 46 L. ed. 335, 339, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 91.

Rights under our system of law and procedure do not rest in the discretionary authority of any officer, judicial or otherwise.

Re Parker, 131 U. S. 221, 225, 33 L. ed. 123, 124, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 708.

Mandamus will lie wherever a right is denied through mistake of law on the part of a ministerial officer.

American School of Magnetic Healing v. McAnnulty, 187 U. S. 94, ante, 90, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 33; Payne v. United States, 20 App. D. C. 581.

Messrs. Jefferson Chandler, John M. Thurston, T. C. Van Ness, Shirley C. Ward, William C. Prentiss, M. A. Ballinger, and Horace F. Clark also filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The fact that the act which mandamus seeks to compel is the culmination of a series of proceedings, or is of a judicial or quasi-judicial nature, or is an act in the course of such proceedings, does not exempt it from judicial control by the courts through the writ of mandamus when the officer or person charged to perform it arbitrarily and without just legal cause refuses such performance.

United States ex rel. West v. Hitchcock, 19 App. D. C. 333.
190 U. S.

Mr. John S. Chapman argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Morgan H. Beach, Henry H. Glassie, Solicitor General Hoyt, and Assistant Attorney General Van Devanter, filed a brief for defendant in error:

The Department was necessarily called upon to construe the act. It had jurisdiction over the subject-matter and of the parties, and it did construe it; and whether that construction was right or wrong, its discretion cannot be controlled by the writ of mandamus.

Litchfield v. Richards, 9 Wall. 575, 577, 19 L. ed. 681, 682; Gaines v. Thompson, 7 Wall. 347, 19 L. ed. 62; Noble v. Union River Logging R. Co. 147 U. S. 165, 176, 177, 37 L. ed. 127, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 271; New Orleans v. Paine, 147 U. S. 261, 263, 264, 37 L. ed. 162, 163, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 303; United States ex rel. Dunlap v. Black, 128 U. S. 40, 45, 32 L. ed. 354, 355, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 12; Decatur v. Paulding, 14 Pet. 497, 499, 10 L. ed. 559, 560.

If any doubt may rightfully exist in the mind of the court on the subject, an answer is furnished to the application for mandamus.

Carrick v. Lamar, 116 U. S. 423, 426, 29 L. ed. 677, 678, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 424.

If the act be one requiring the exercise of judgment or discretion, whether in the ascertainment of fact or the interpretation of law, it makes no difference how gross an error may be committed or however ill advised the action of an executive officer may be.

Scymour v. United States, 2 App. D. C. 240; Lochren v. United States, 6 App. D. C. 486.

Nor will the writ be issued merely because the law has not provided any other remedy.

Re Rice, 155 U. S. 396, 39 L. ed. 198, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 149; American Constr. Co. v. Jacksonville, T. & K. W. R. Co. 148 U. S. 372, 379, 37 L. ed. 486, 489, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 758.

Messrs. John S. Chapman and Henry H. Glassie filed a supplemental brief for defendant in error:

Courts cannot by mandamus act directly upon a public officer, and guide and control his judgment or discretion in the matters committed to his care in the ordinary discharge of his official duties.

Decatur v. Paulding, 14 Pet. 497, 515, 10 L. ed. 559, 568; United States ex rel. Dunlap v. Black, 128 U. S. 41, 48, 49, 32 L. ed. 355, 357, 358, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 12.

A fortiori, the courts have no such power in respect of a department to which Congress has expressly confided judicial functions.

Gaines v. Thompson, 7 Wall. 347, 353, 19 L. ed. 62, 65.

Mr. Justice Peckham, after making the foregoing statement of facts, delivered the opinion of the court:

We have set out in the foregoing statement of facts, at very great length, a large portion of the contents of the petition and answer in this case. It has been done for the purpose of showing by the record itself the questions of law arising therefrom. Upon a perusal of the record it appears that those questions are not merely formal ones, nor are they so plain as not to require the careful judgment of any tribunal to which they may be referred for decision.

[324] Their solution was properly submitted *to the Land Department, which had full and complete jurisdiction over the matters arising under the act of June 4, 1897, and it thereby became the duty of the officers of that department to decide them. As is said in Knight v. United Land Asso. 142 U. S. 161, 35 L. ed. 974, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 258:

"The Secretary is the guardian of the people of the United States over the public lands. The obligations of his oath of office oblige him to see that the law is carried out, and that none of the public domain is wasted or is disposed of to a party not entitled to it. He represents the government, which is a party in interest in every case involving the surveying and disposal of the public lands."

Congress has constituted the Land Department, under the supervision and control of the Secretary of the Interior, a special tribunal with judicial functions, to which is confided the execution of the laws which regulate the purchase, selling, and care and disposition of the public lands.

Neither an injunction nor mandamus will lie against an officer of the Land Department to control him in discharging an official duty which requires the exercise of his judgment and discretion. Marquez v. Frisbie, 101 U. S. 473, 25 L. ed. 800; Gaines v. Thompson, 7 Wall. 347, 19 L. ed. 62; United States ex rel. Dunlap v. Black, 128 U. S. 40, 32 L. ed. 354, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 12; United States ex rel. Redfield v. Windom, 137 U. S. 636, 34 L. ed. 811, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 197.

In Decatur v. Paulding, 14 Pet. 497, 10 L. ed. 559, it was held that, in general, the official duties of the head of one of the executive departments, whether imposed by act of Congress or by resolution, are not mere ministerial duties. The head of an executive department of the government in the administration of the various and important concerns of his office is continually required to exercise judgment and discretion. He must exercise his judgment in expounding the laws and resolutions of Congress under which he is from time to time required to act.

That the decision of the questions presented to the Secretary of the Interior was no merely formal or ministerial act is shown beyond the necessity of argument by a perusal of the foregoing statement of the issues presented by this record for the decision of the Secretary. Whether he decided right or wrong, is not the question. Having jurisdiction to decide at all, he had *necessarily jurisdiction, and it was his duty to decide as he thought the law was, and the courts have no power whatever under those circumstances to review his determination by mandamus or injunction. The court has no general supervisory power over the officers of the Land Department, by which to control their decisions upon questions within their jurisdiction. If this writ were granted we would require the Secretary of the Interior to repudiate and disaffirm a decision which he regarded it his duty to make in the exercise of that judgment which is reposed in him by law, and we should require him to come to a determination upon the issues involved directly opposite to that which he had reached, and which the law conferred upon him the jurisdiction to make. Mandamus has never been regarded as the proper writ to control the judgment and discretion of an officer as to the decision of a matter which the law gave him the power and imposed upon him the duty to decide for himself. The writ never can be used as a substitute for a writ of error. Nor does the fact that no writ of error will lie in such a case as this, by which to review the judgment of the Secretary, furnish any foundation for the claim that mandamus may therefore be awarded. The responsibility as well as the power rests with the Secretary, uncontrolled by the courts.

[325]

Neither the case of Roberts v. United States, 176 U. S. 221, 44 L. ed. 443, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 396, nor that of American School of Magnetic Healing v. McAnnulty, 187 U. S. 94, ante, 90, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 33, decides anything opposing these views.

In the Roberts Case it was simply decided that the duty of the Treasurer to pay the money in question in that case was ministerial in its nature, and should have been performed by him on demand, and that, therefore, mandamus was the proper remedy for his failure to do it.

In the McAnnulty Case it was held that the order of the Postmaster General to the postmaster in the city of Nevada, not to deliver the mail to the relator, was not a justification for such refusal, because the order was given without authority of law, and the postmaster could, notwithstanding such order, be compelled by mandamus to do his duty and deliver the mail. The case has no relevancy to the one in hand.

*We are so clearly of opinion that the de- [326]cision of the defendant in this case was judicial in its nature that further argument upon the subject is needless.

The judgment of the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia is affirmed.

SOUTHERN RAILWAY COMPANY, Plff.
in Err.,
v.

JOHN H. ALLISON.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 326-339.)

Jurisdiction of Federal courts—diverse citi-

NOTE.—As to diverse citizenship as ground of Federal jurisdiction—see Shipp v. Williams, 10 C. C. A. 247, and note; Mason v. Dullaghan, 27 C. C. A. 296, and note; Seddon v. Virginia, T. 190 U. S.

zenship—suit against foreign corporation—effect of “domestication” statute—removal to Federal courts.

1. A foreign railroad corporation does not become a citizen of North Carolina, so far as to affect the jurisdiction of the Federal courts upon the question of diverse citizenship, by complying with N. C. Pub. Acts 1899, chap. 62, which declares that such a corporation becomes a domestic corporation by filing with the secretary of state duly authenticated copies of its charter and by-laws.
2. The right of a foreign railroad corporation under the act of Congress of August 13, 1888, chap. 866, § 2 (25 Stat. at L. 433), to remove to a Federal court, for prejudice or local influence, a suit brought in a court of North Carolina by a citizen of that state, is not defeated because such corporation has complied with the provisions of N. C. Pub. Acts 1899, chap. 62, which declares that foreign railroad corporations shall become domestic by filing with the secretary of state duly authenticated copies of their charters and by-laws.

[No. 232.]

Argued April 8, 1903. Decided May 18, 1903.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of North Carolina to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Superior Court of McDowell County entered on a verdict of a jury in favor of plaintiff in an action to recover from a railroad company the damages suffered by reason of its negligence. Reversed.

See same case below, 129 N. C. 336, 40 S. E. 91.

Statement by Mr. Justice Peckham:

The supreme court of the state of North Carolina affirmed a judgment against the railway company, which was entered on a verdict of a jury upon a trial in the state court, and the railway company has brought the case here by writ of error.

The plaintiff below brought his action in the state court against the railway company to recover damages suffered by reason of the alleged negligence of the defendant. The defendant answered, and averred that it was a corporation created and organized under the laws of the state of Virginia; it denied the various allegations of the complaint as to its negligence and as to the damages suffered by the plaintiff, and also set up as a defense plaintiff's contributory negligence.

[327] After answer *and under the provisions of the 2d section of the act of Congress, chapter 866, approved August 13, 1888 (25 Stat. at L. 433), the defendant, alleging that it was a corporation created under the laws of Virginia, submitted a petition to the United States circuit court in North Carolina, for the removal of the case from the state to the United States court, and the ground for removal, as stated in the petition, was because of “prejudice or local influence” to such an extent that it would “not be able to obtain justice in such state court, or in any other state court to which the said defendant may, under the laws of the state, have the right, on account of such prejudice or local influence, to remove said cause.” The petition was supported by an affidavit that set up facts from which the court might find that defendant could not obtain justice in the state court.

The circuit court decided that the proof submitted to it was sufficient; that defendant was a citizen of Virginia, and that it could not, on account of local prejudice and influence, obtain a fair trial in the state court, and it, therefore, ordered the removal of the cause to the United States circuit court for the western district of North Carolina. The court also ordered that its clerk should certify to the state court the order of removal, “together with copies of the petition, bond, and affidavit, to the end that the state court may be advised of the action of this court and of its order of removal, and to the further end that the said state court may proceed no further with the said suit or action, and to the end also that the said state court may direct the clerk of the superior court of the county of McDowell to make a full and complete transcript of the record of said action and to certify the same to this court for trial.”

Upon the filing of this order in the state court that court declined to grant the motion to surrender jurisdiction, holding that the case could not be legally removed to the circuit court of the United States, and it made the following order:

“In this case it appears to the court that the circuit court of the United States has caused an order for the removal of the case to the circuit court of the United States, upon petition setting forth that the defendant is a nonresident of the state of North Carolina; and it further appearing to the court, by *the admission of defendant, through its [328] counsel, that the defendant has complied with the terms of the act of the legislature of the state of North Carolina, being chapter 62 of the acts of the general assembly of North Carolina at its session of 1899: It is thereupon considered by the court that the defendant is a corporation of this state by virtue of said act, and that it is not entitled

& C. Steel & Iron Co. (C. C. W. D. Va.) 1 L. R. A. 108, and note; Myers v. Murray, N. & Co. (C. C. S. D. Iowa) 11 L. R. A. 216, and note. And see note to Roberts v. Lewis, 36 L. ed. U. S. 579.

On removal of causes generally—see notes to Whelan v. New York, L. E. & W. R. Co. (C. C. N. D. Ohio) 1 L. R. A. 65; Butler v. National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers, 36 L. ed. U. S. 346, and Torrence v. Shedd, 36 L. ed. U. S. 528.

190 U. S.

On removal from state to Federal court for prejudice or local influence—see notes to Whelan v. New York, L. E. & W. R. Co. (C. C. N. D. Ohio) 1 L. R. A. 65; Huskins v. Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. (C. C. N. D. Tenn.) 3 L. R. A. 545; Bierbower v. Miller (Neb.) 9 L. R. A. 228; Brodhead v. Shoemaker (C. C. N. D. Ga.) 11 L. R. A. 567; P. Schwenk & Co. v. Strang, 8 C. C. A. 95; Gaines v. Fuentes, 23 L. ed. U. S. 524, and Jefferson v. Driver, 29 L. ed. U. S. 897.

1079

to remove this cause to the Federal court. It is further considered by the court that the courts of the state of North Carolina have jurisdiction of this cause, and this court declines to surrender jurisdiction thereof. It is ordered by the court that a copy of this order be sent to the clerk of said circuit court of the United States by the clerk of this court."

The act of the legislature of North Carolina, referred to in the foregoing order, is set forth in full in the margin.†

29] *It was admitted that defendant had complied with the terms of the act before the cause of action set out in the complaint of plaintiff had accrued.

[330] When the case was thereafter called for trial in the state court, *a motion was again made to dismiss the same from that court because of the removal to the United States circuit court. The motion was again denied, and an exception taken by the defendant. The case was then tried in the state court, and resulted in a verdict for the plaintiff, upon which judgment was entered, and exception taken to the verdict and to the entry of judgment. Defendant appealed from the judgment to the supreme court of the state of North Carolina, and assigned as error, among other things, the refusal of the trial court to recognize the removal, and its trial of the cause after it had been legally removed to the Federal court. The supreme court of North Carolina affirmed the judgment (129 N. C. 336, 40 S. E. 91), and decided against the right claimed by defendant to a removal of the cause under the statute of the United States above referred to.

Mr. F. H. Busbee argued the cause, and, with Mr. Charles Price, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The order of removal was valid.

St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. James, 161 U. S. 545, 40 L. ed. 802, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 621; Louisville, N. A. & C. R. Co. v. Louisville Trust Co. 174 U. S. 552, 43 L. ed. 1081, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 817; Wilson v. Southern P. R. Co. 64 S. C. 162, 36 S. E. 701, 41 S. E. 971; Walters v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. 104 Fed. 377.

†(Chapter 62, Public Acts of 1899.)

The General Assembly of North Carolina do enact:

Sec. 1. That every telegraph, telephone, express, insurance, steamboat, and railroad company incorporated, created, and organized under and by virtue of the laws of any state or government other than that of North Carolina, desiring to own property or to carry on business, or to exercise any corporate franchise whatsoever in this state, shall become a domestic corporation of the state of North Carolina by filing in the office of the secretary of state a copy of its charter, duly authenticated in the manner directed by law for the authentication of statutes of the state or country under the laws of which such company or corporation is chartered and organized, and a copy of its by-laws duly authenticated by the oath of its secretary. Such corporation shall pay therefor to the secretary of state, to be turned over by him into the state treasury, such fees as are or may be required by law.

Sec. 2. That if any such charter or by-laws, or any part thereof, filed in the office of the Secretary of State, shall be in contravention or violation of the laws of this state, such charter or by-laws, or such part thereof as are in conflict with the laws of this state, shall be null and void in this state.

Sec. 3. That when any such corporation shall have complied with the provisions of this act above set out it shall thereupon immediately become a corporation of this state, and shall enjoy the rights and privileges and be subject to the liability of corporations of this state the same as if such corporation had been originally created by the laws of this state. It may sue and be sued in all the courts in this state as fully as if such corporation were originally created under the laws of the state of North Carolina.

Sec. 4. That on and after the 1st day of June, 1899, it shall be unlawful for any such corporation to do business, or attempt to do business, in this state without having fully complied with the requirements of this act.

Sec. 5. Any such corporation violating any of the provisions of this act shall forfeit to the state of North Carolina a penalty of $200 for each and every day after the 1st day of June, 1899, on which such corporation shall have continued to operate and do business without having complied with the requirements of this act. Such penalty shall be recovered by the treasurer of the state for the benefit of the state of North Carolina, and it shall be his duty to sue for such forfeitures in the superior court of Wake county as the same accrue.

Sec. 6. No telegraph, telephone, express, insurance, steamboat, or railroad company, which is a foreign corporation of another state doing business in North Carolina, shall be allowed to sue in the courts of North Carolina on or after June 1st, 1899, until such foreign corporation has become a domestic corporation, either by a special act of the legislature, or under the provisions of this act.

Sec. 7. No such foreign corporation, mentioned in the preceding section of this act, shall be allowed to enter into a contract in the state of North Carolina on or after the 1st day of June, 1899, nor shall any such contract heretofore or hereafter made, or attempted to be made and entered into by such corporation in the state of North Carolina, be enforceable by such corporation unless such corporation shall, on or before the 1st day of June, 1899, become a domestic corporation under and by virtue of the laws of North Carolina.

Sec. 8. Any such corporation violating the provisions of this act by doing any business in this state without first becoming a domestic corporation in the manner prescribed by law shall, in addition to the penalty prescribed in § 5 of this act, forfeit a penalty of $500 for each day any such business shall be done by it in the state of North Carolina on or after the 1st day of June, 1899. The amount so forfeited under the provisions of this section shall be recovered by the treasurer of North Carolina, and it shall be the duty of said state treasurer to institute suit for same in the superior court of Wake county: Provided, The business contemplated in this section of this act does not embrace such business as is strictly the business of interstate commerce.

Sec. 9. That all laws and clauses of laws in conflict with the provisions of this act are hereby repealed.

Sec. 10. That this act shall be in force from and after its ratification.

Ratified the 10th day of February, A. D. 1899.

Mr. W. A. Henderson also argued the cause for plaintiff in error.

Mr. E. J. Justice argued the cause, and with Mr. J. C. Pritchard, filed a brief for defendant in error:

Whether the Southern Railway Company had the right to remove, into the circuit court of the United States, this action brought against it by a citizen of North Carolina in a court of that state, depends upon the question whether this company was a corporation created by the laws of Virginia only, or by the laws of North Carolina also.

Gerling v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 151 U. S. 677, 38 L. ed. 311, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 533; Memphis & C. R. Co. v. Alabama, 107 U. S. 581, 27 L. ed. 518, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 432.

The decisions of the supreme court of North Carolina are uniform to the effect that a compliance with the act of 1899, chap. 62, by a corporation, charters it in North Carolina, as distinguished from licensing a foreign corporation to do business therein.

Debnam v. Southern Bell Teleph. & Teleg. Co. 126 N. C. 831, 36 S. E. 269; Layden v. Endowment Bank, K. of P. 128 N. C. 546, 39 S. E. 47.

In St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. James, 161 U. S. 545, 40 L. ed. 802, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 621; Louisville, N. A. & C. R. Co. v. Louisville Trust Co. 174 U. S. 552, 43 L. ed. 1081, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 817, and that line of cases, the question was: If a corporation is chartered in one state, and afterwards is chartered in another state, which state is it a citizen of for purposes of jurisdiction when it sues or is sued in the United States courts?

Mr. Justice Peckham, after making the foregoing statement of facts, delivered the opinion of the court:

The state court refused to recognize the validity of the order of removal of this case to the Federal court solely because of the state statute, and because of the admitted compliance of defendant with its provisions. It held that by complying with the statute the defendant became a citizen of North Carolina, so far, at least, as to prevent it from applying for removal as a citizen of another state. We, therefore, assume the sufficiency of the facts to warrant the decision of the circuit court of the United States removing the case to that court, provided the defendant company was a citizen of Virginia and did not become a citizen of North Carolina by virtue of its compliance with the state statute.

[331] The ruling of the state court, by which it proceeded to judgment *in the case notwithstanding the order of removal to the Federal court, is reviewable here under § 709, Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 575). Stone v. South Carolina, 117 U. S. 430, 29 L. ed. 962, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 799; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Fitzgerald, 160 U. S. 556, 40 L. ed. 536, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 389.

Two propositions were argued at the bar: (1) Whether the state court had the right to pass upon the question of the validity of the order of the circuit court of the United States removing the case to that court. (2) Did the defendant company, which was originally incorporated in the state of Virginia, have the right, as a citizen of Virginia, to remove the case into the Federal court, notwithstanding the defendant company had complied with the statute of North Carolina, which declared that upon doing the things therein mentioned the defendant became a domestic corporation of North Carolina?

In the view we take of this case, it is unnecessary to dwell upon the first of these questions. We therefore address ourselves to the second.

The statute of North Carolina provides, in substance, that a railroad company incorporated under the laws of any state or government, other than North Carolina, which desires to own property or carry on business, or to exercise any corporate franchises within that state, shall become a domestic corporation of the state of North Carolina "by filing in the office of the secretary of state a copy of its charter, duly authenticated in the manner directed by law for the authentication of statutes of the state or country under the laws of which such company or corporation is chartered or organized, and a copy of its by-laws duly authenticated by the oath of its secretary." Section 3 of the act provides:

"That when any such corporation shall have complied with the provisions of this act (above set out) it shall thereupon immediately become a corporation of this state and shall enjoy the rights and privileges, and be subject to the liability, of corporations of this state the same as if such corporation had been originally created by the laws of this state. It may sue and be sued in all courts of this state, and shall be subject to the jurisdiction of the courts of this state as fully as if such corporation were originally created under the laws of the state of North Carolina."

*It is further provided by § 4 that it shall [332] be unlawful for such foreign corporation to do business, or attempt to do business, in North Carolina after the 1st day of June, 1899, without having fully complied with the requirements of the act. It is admitted that the company did comply with the provisions of the act in relation to filing its charter, by-laws, etc., with the secretary of state.

It early became material to inquire into the nature of the status of corporations with regard to the jurisdiction of the Federal courts under the Constitution and laws of the United States. A recent statement of the law on that subject is contained in the case of St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. James, 161 U. S. 545, 40 L. ed. 802, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 621. It was said by Mr. Justice Shiras, in delivering the opinion of the court in that case, that, after considerable contention in the courts, it was finally determined by this court that the citizenship of a corporation was that of the state originally creating it, and that it was a presumption of law that the members of the corporation were citizens of the same state.

The facts upon which the decision of the court in that case was based, so far as important to be here observed, were these: The St. Louis & San Francisco Railway Company was a corporation originally created under the laws of the state of Missouri, and it operated a railroad from Monett in the state of Missouri to the southern border of that state. Subsequently, and under provisions of the laws of Arkansas, it entered that state for the purpose of operating its road therein from the southern boundary of the state of Missouri to Fort Smith in the state of Arkansas; the portion of the railroad in Arkansas was operated by the leasing of a railroad already or partly built in that state. The state of Arkansas had provided by its legislation that before any railroad corporation of any other state or territory should be permitted to avail itself of the benefits of the act allowing the purchasing or leasing of any road within that state, the foreign corporation should "file with the secretary of state of this state a certified copy of its articles of incorporation, if incorporated under a general law of such state or territory, or a certified copy of the statute [333] *laws of such state or territory incorporating such company, where the charter of such railroad corporation was granted by special statute of such state; and upon the filing of such articles of incorporation or such charter, with a map and profile of the proposed line, and paying the fees prescribed by law for railroad charters, such railroad company shall, to all intents and purposes, become a railroad corporation of this state, subject to all of the laws of the state now in force or hereafter enacted, the same as if formally incorporated in this state, anything in its articles of incorporation or charter to the contrary notwithstanding, and such acts on the part of such corporation shall be conclusive evidence of the intent of such corporation to create and become a domestic corporation: And provided further, That every railroad corporation of any other state, which has heretofore leased or purchased any railroad in this state, shall, within sixty days from the passage of this act, file a duly certified copy of its articles of incorporation or charter with the secretary of state of this state, and shall, thereupon, become a corporation of this state, anything in its articles of incorporation or charter to the contrary notwithstanding; and in all suits or proceedings instituted against any such corporation process may be served upon the agent or agents of such corporation or corporations in this state, in the same manner that process is authorized by law to be served upon the agents of railroad corporations in this state organized and existing under the laws of this state."

The railroad company, pursuant to that act, filed with the secretary of state of the state of Arkansas a duly certified copy of its articles of incorporation under the laws of Missouri. After this had been done and while the company was operating its railroad from Monett, Missouri, to Fort Smith, Arkansas, one Etta James brought an action in the circuit court of the United States for the western district of Arkansas against the company for negligence in maintaining a switch track at Monett, in Barry county, Missouri, so near its tracks that the husband of plaintiff was struck and killed by it on July 3, 1889, while employed as a fireman on one of the company's engines. The plaintiff was the widow and sole heir at law of her husband, * and resided at Monett, and [334] was a citizen of the state of Missouri. She recovered a verdict in the United States circuit court in Arkansas, and the cause was taken to the circuit court of appeals for the eighth circuit by the railroad company, which claimed that the circuit court of Arkansas had no jurisdiction, because the railroad company was a citizen of Missouri and the plaintiff was a citizen of the same state. That court, desiring instructions from the Supreme Court of the United States before deciding the case, propounded the following questions:

"1. In view of the provisions of the act of the general assembly of Arkansas, approved March 13, 1889, did the St. Louis & San Francisco Railway Company, by filing a certified copy of its articles of incorporation under the laws of Missouri with the secretary of state of Arkansas, and continuing to operate its railroad through that state, become a corporation and citizen of the state of Arkansas?

"2d. In view of the provisions of the act of the general assembly of Arkansas, approved March 13, 1889, did the St. Louis & San Francisco Railway Company, by filing a certified copy of its articles of incorporation under the laws of Missouri with the secretary of state of Arkansas, and continuing to operate its railroad through that state, become a citizen of the state of Arkansas, so as to give the circuit court of the United States for the western district of Arkansas jurisdiction of this action, in which the defendant in error was and is a citizen of the state of Missouri?

"3d. In view of the provisions of the act of the general assembly of Arkansas, approved March 13, 1889, did the St. Louis & San Francisco Railway Company, by filing a certified copy of its articles of incorporation under the laws of Missouri with the secretary of state of Arkansas, and continuing to operate its railroad through that state, become a citizen of the state of Arkansas, so as to give the circuit court of the United States for the western district of Arkansas jurisdiction of this action, in which defendant in error was and is a resident and citizen of the state of Missouri, and the cause of action accrued in the state of Missouri, and arose from an accident that resulted *from [335] the operation of the railroad of the company in that state?

"4th. In view of the facts hereinbefore set forth, did the circuit court of the United States for the western district of Arkansas have jurisdiction of this action?"

After a full examination of the prior cases

Mr. Justice Shiras, speaking for the court, answered the second question in the negative, observing that such answer rendered it unnecessary to answer the other questions.

Here was a corporation originally incorporated in the state of Missouri going into the state of Arkansas and operating a railroad in that state by leasing a portion of it therein and complying with a statute which provided that, upon filing a certified copy of its articles of incorporation with the secretary of state of Arkansas, it should be regarded as formally incorporated in that state, and it should thereby become a domestic corporation, and yet it was held that defendant could not be sued by a citizen of Missouri in the Federal court in the state of Arkansas; that, although to some extent and for some purposes it might be regarded as a corporation of Arkansas, it was for purposes of jurisdiction in the Federal courts to be regarded as a corporation of the state of Missouri.

The case, it will be seen, was not decided upon the ground that the cause of action had arisen in the state of Missouri. It was admitted that the cause of action was transitory, but the broad question was decided that the company was a corporation of Missouri and a citizen of that state, and could not be sued by another citizen of that state in the Federal courts of Arkansas.

It is stated in the opinion:

"The presumption that a corporation is composed of citizens of the state which created it accompanies such corporation when it does business in another state, and it may sue or be sued in the Federal courts in such other state as a citizen of the state of its original creation.

[336] "We are now asked to extend the doctrine of indisputable citizenship, so that if a corporation of one state, indisputably taken, for the purpose of Federal jurisdiction, to be composed *of citizens of such state, is authorized by the law of another state to do business therein, and to be endowed, for local purposes, with all the powers and privileges of a domestic corporation, such adopted corporation shall be deemed to be composed of citizens of the second state, in such a sense as to confer jurisdiction on the Federal courts at the suit of a citizen of the state of its original creation.

"We are unwilling to sanction such an extension of a doctrine which, as heretofore established, went to the very verge of judicial power. That doctrine began, as we have seen, in the assumption that state corporations were composed of citizens of the state which created them; but such assumption was one of fact, and was the subject of allegation and traverse, and thus the jurisdiction of the Federal courts might be defeated. Then, after a long contest in this court, it was settled that the presumption of citizenship is one of law, not to be defeated by allegation or evidence to the contrary. There we are content to leave it."

In Louisville, N. A. & C. R. Co. v. Louisville Trust Co. 174 U. S. 552, 43 L. ed. 1081. 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 817, a question arose as to whether the railway company was a corporation of Kentucky as well as of the state where it was originally created. The exigencies of the case did not require a solution of that question, but the James Case, 161 U. S. 545, 40 L. ed. 802, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 821, was referred to with approval in the opinion of the court, which was delivered by Mr. Justice Gray. In the course of that opinion, he said (p. 563, L. ed. p. 1087, Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 821):

"But a decision of the question whether the plaintiff was or was not a corporation of Kentucky does not appear to this court to be required for the disposition of this case, either as to the jurisdiction, or as to the merits. As to the jurisdiction, it being clear that the plaintiff was first created a corporation of the state of Indiana, even if it was afterwards created a corporation of the state of Kentucky also, it was and remained, for the purposes of the jurisdiction of the courts of the United States, a citizen of Indiana, the state by which it was originally created. It could neither have brought suit as a corporation of both states against a corporation or other citizen of either *state, nor could it have sued or been [337] sued as a corporation of Kentucky, in any court of the United States."

So it seems that a corporation may be made what is termed a domestic corporation, or in form a domestic corporation, of a state in compliance with the legislation thereof, by filing a copy of its charter and by-laws with the secretary of state; yet such fact does not affect the character of the original corporation. It does not thereby become a citizen of the state in which a copy of its charter is filed, so far as to affect the jurisdiction of the Federal courts upon a question of diverse citizenship.

Considerable stress has been laid, by those holding opposite views, upon the case of Memphis & C. R. Co. v. Alabama, 107 U. S. 581, 27 L. ed. 518, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 432. It was there held that a railroad company, having been made by the statutes of Alabama an Alabama corporation, although having previously been incorporated in Tennessee, could not remove into the circuit court of the United States a suit brought against it in Alabama by a citizen of that state. But in that case the company was required by the legislation of Alabama to open books in that state for the subscription of stock in the capital of the corporation, so as to afford the citizens thereof an opportunity to take stock to the amount of a million and a half of dollars of the capital of the company. The Alabama act also provided that the company should, at the first meeting of the stockholders, designate a time when and a place or places in northern Alabama where, for the convenience of the citizens of the state who may be stockholders, an election for directors should be held, notice whereof was to be given in the newspapers, and elections for directors should be held at the same time both in Alabama and in Tennessee.

This court held that, by reason of the particular language used in the act, there was a separate original Alabama corporation formed; that the sections, taken altogether, made it a corporation created as well as controlled by the state of Alabama. It is stated in the opinion, page 584, L. ed. p. 519, Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 435:

[338] "The whole act, taken together, manifests the understanding and intention of the legislature of Alabama that the corporation, *which was thereby granted a right of way to construct through this state a railroad, with which any railroad company, chartered or to be chartered in this state, should have the right to connect its road, and which was required to construct a branch railroad in this state, to open books for subscriptions of stock to a certain amount in this state, to apply the moneys here subscribed to the construction of the road within this state, and to hold elections in this state, was and should be in law a corporation of the state of Alabama, although having one and the same organization with the corporation of the same name previously established by the legislature of Tennessee."

The difference between the above case and the cases we have already referred to is plain and fundamental, but in any event we regard the James Case, reaffirmed and approved as it is by that of Louisville, N. A. & C. R. Co. v. Louisville Trust Co. 174 U. S. 552, 43 L. ed. 1081, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 817, as decisive of the case before us.

We do not subscribe to the doctrine that, if a corporation files its charter in one state, after having been first chartered in another state, and is sued by a citizen of the state in which it filed its charter, in the state courts of that state, the right of removal to the Federal courts will be denied, while, at the same time, if such a corporation is sued by a citizen of the state in which it filed its charter, in the United States courts, the jurisdiction of the United States courts will be sustained upon the ground that in the Federal courts the corporation is domestic in the state where it was originally created and where its original incorporators are citizens, and it will be conclusively presumed, as a matter of law, that they are citizens of the state originally chartering it. If there be jurisdiction in the United States courts in the latter case, on the ground that it is a corporation and citizen of the state in which it was created, that fact gives jurisdiction to the Federal court to remove the case from the state court when the corporation is sued by a citizen of the state in which it filed its charter, because such corporation is a citizen of another state, namely, the state in which it was originally created. The citizenship of the corporation is not changed because of the particular court in which the action is commenced. If it be a citizen of [339] another state *in the one case, it is such citizen also in the other, and, if the other party to the action be a citizen of a state other than the one which created the corporation, the jurisdiction of the Federal courts exists, and the right of the corporation (upon complying with the statute) to remove the case from the state court when it is sued by a citizen of the state where its charter may have been subsequently filed, is granted by the laws of the United States.

We have read with respectful consideration the cases of Debnam v. Southern Bell Teleph. & Teleg. Co. 126 N. C. 831, 36 S. E. 269, and Layden v. Endowment Rank, K. of P. 128 N. C. 546, 39 S. E. 47, in which the supreme court of North Carolina comes to a different conclusion from that which we have reached in regard to the jurisdiction of the Federal courts in such a case as this; but we cannot concur in the doctrine of the supreme court of the state as announced in those cases. We feel bound by the decisions of this court upon that subject.

The supreme court of South Carolina has come to the same conclusion that we reach in this case, having altered its holding in Mathis v. Southern R. Co. 53 S. C. 257, 31 S. E. 240, after the decision of the James Case, 161 U. S. 545, 40 L. ed. 802, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 821. See, to that effect, Wilson v. Southern R. Co. 64 S. C. 162, 36 S. E. 701, 41 S. E. 971.

In Walters v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. 104 Fed. 377, the United States circuit court in Nebraska held, in accordance with the principles maintained in the James Case, that the defendant, although made a domestic corporation of Nebraska, yet, having in fact been originally created by the state of Illinois, was a citizen of that state. The motion to remand to the state court was therefore denied.

We are of opinion that the plaintiff in error was not a citizen of the state of North Carolina at the time it was sued by the defendant in error, so far as regards the jurisdiction of the Federal courts, and that the order of removal made by the circuit court of the United States operated to withdraw from the state court the right to hear and determine the case. The judgment of the Supreme Court of North Carolina is therefore reversed, and the case remanded to that court for further proceedings not inconsistent with the opinion of this court.

So ordered.

*HORACE B. DUNBAR, Plff. in Err., [340]
v.

LOTTIE E. DUNBAR.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 340-353.)

Bankruptcy—discharge—effect on contingent liability—agreement to support divorced wife until remarriage—contract to support minor children.

1. A discharge in bankruptcy is no bar to a claim under an agreement by a bankrupt to pay an annuity to his divorced wife "during her life or until she remarries," since, by reason of the substantial impossibility of estimating the value of the contingency of a remarriage, such a contract is not provable under the provisions of the bankruptcy act of 1898, § 63a (30 Stat. at L. 562, chap. 541 U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3447), for the proving, inter alia, of a fixed liability owing at the time of the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, whether then payable or not, and of debts which are "founded upon an open account or upon a contract express or implied."

2. A father is not relieved by his discharge in bankruptcy from his liability under an agreement to pay his divorced wife a certain sum yearly for the support of his children during their minority.

[No. 244.]

Argued April 16, 1903. Decided June 1, 1903.

IN ERROR to the Superior Court of the State of Massachusetts to review a judgment entered in accordance with the direction of the Supreme Court of that State in favor of plaintiff in an action on a contract to which a discharge in bankruptcy was pleaded as a bar. Affirmed.

See same case below, 180 Mass. 170, 62 N. E. 248.

Statement by Mr. Justice Peckham:

The defendant in error, being the plaintiff below, brought her action in October, 1899, against the plaintiff in error, in the municipal court of Boston, to recover moneys alleged to be due upon a contract, which was set forth in the complaint. Issue was joined and the case tried before a single justice, and judgment ordered for the defendant, with costs. An appeal was taken to the superior court of the county of Suffolk, and that court ordered judgment for the plaintiff for one branch only of her claim. The case was reported to the supreme judicial court for the commonwealth, and that court ordered the court below to enter judgment for the plaintiff for both branches of her claim (180 Mass. 170, 62 N. E. 248), and the case was remanded to the superior court for the purpose of entering such judgment. Pursuant to the directions of the supreme court, the superior court did enter judgment against the defendant for both [341] branches of her claim, for the sum of $851.60 and costs. The defendant then obtained a writ of error from this court, directed to the superior court of Massachusetts, where the record remained.

The case shows these facts: The parties were husband and wife, who, in 1889, were living apart, the husband in Ohio and the wife in Massachusetts. In May, 1889, the attorney for her husband came to Massachusetts and saw Mrs. Dunbar, and told her that her husband was about to seek a divorce from her. The wife at this time had no means, and the two sons of the marriage, then respectively nine and twelve years old, were living with her. The purpose of the visit of the attorney was to obtain some assurance from her that she would not contest the case, and, if she did not, that the husband would make provision for aiding in the support of herself and her sons until they arrived of age. The wife denied any intended desertion of her husband, but the result of the negotiations after the wife had taken counsel of friends was to give assurance to the attorney that no defense would be interposed if he made some suitable provision for herself and her children.

Upon the return of the attorney to Ohio, a suit for divorce was commenced by the husband, and the summons served by publication. No appearance was made and there was no opposition to the decree of divorce, which was obtained in July, 1889. It adjudged that the marriage contract theretofore existing between the parties was thereby dissolved, and both parties released from the obligation of the same, and "that the custody of the children of such marriage, one boy, Harry H. Dunbar, aged twelve years, and Willie W. Dunbar, aged nine years, be, and the same are, to remain in charge and under the control of the said Lottie E. Dunbar, the said Horace B. Dunbar to have the privilege of seeing said children at all reasonable times."

The ground of divorce was stated, and the court found "upon the evidence adduced that the defendant has been guilty of wilful absence for more than three years last past from plaintiff, and that, by reason thereof, the plaintiff is entitled to a divorce as prayed for."

After the divorce the husband sent to a friend of his wife, to be delivered to her in performance of his agreement, a written contract, in which he bound himself to pay [342] to Lottie E. Dunbar, of Ashburnham, Mass., $500 yearly, so long as she remained unmarried, in monthly instalments. In that contract he also agreed to pay "to our children, Harry H. Dunbar and Willie W. Dunbar, the sum of $250 each, yearly, until they each attain the age of fourteen years; after that age they are to be paid by me such extra allowance as will give them a good and sufficient education befitting their station in life, and a suitable maintenance until each attains the age of twenty-one years." This writing was signed by the husband and acknowledged before a notary public of Hamilton, Ohio.

Payments upon this contract were made by the husband, but in 1896 they had become somewhat in arrears, and disputes arose as to the validity of the agreement. Thereafter another contract was entered into and payments were made as called for in that contract until some months prior to December 2, 1898. On such last-named date the defendant was adjudged a bankrupt, on his voluntary petition in bankruptcy, in the United States district court in bankruptcy, southern district of Ohio, western division, and on April 24, 1899, was discharged from all debts and claims provable, under the act of Congress relating to bankruptcy, against his estate, existing on the 2d day of December, 1898.

In the schedule of the defendant it appeared that he named the plaintiff as a creditor, as follows:

Lottie E. Dunbar, Charlestown, Mass. $540

Alimony due up to present time.

Lottie E. Dunbar, Charlestown, Mass. 1,300

Alimony payable yearly.

The plaintiff, at the first meeting of the creditors in bankruptcy proceedings, which was held before a referee appointed therein, appeared by an attorney, who produced and filed his power of attorney, and filed her claim for $691.63, for instalments on the contract due to December 2, 1898. The husband had paid nothing on the contract since some time before December 2, 1898, and finally the wife commenced an action to recover the amounts due thereon.

[343] *The following is a copy of the contract sued on:

"Controversies having arisen concerning the agreement heretofore made between Horace B. Dunbar and Lottie E. Dunbar in September, 1889, in consideration of said Lottie E. Dunbar's forbearance of suit on such controversies, and in settlement of all such controversies, and in substitution of said agreement of September, 1889, and in further consideration of the release by Lottie E. Dunbar and in satisfaction of all claims under said original agreement, Horace B. Dunbar agrees with the said Lottie E. Dunbar as follows:

"That said Horace B. Dunbar will pay to Lottie E. Dunbar during her life, or until she marries, for her maintenance and support, yearly, the sum of $500, and will pay to her yearly for the support and maintenance of her child, Harry H. Dunbar, the sum of $400 until he shall attain the age of twenty-one years; and shall pay to her yearly for the support and maintenance of her child, Willie W. Dunbar, the sum of $400 until he shall attain the age of twenty-one years, all said sums to be paid in equal monthly instalments between the 1st and 10th of each and every month,—the first instalment being for the month of May, 1896, shall be paid between the 1st and 10th of June, 1896.

"And, in addition to the foregoing, said Horace B. Dunbar agrees to pay the further sum of $100 between the 1st and 10th of July, 1896, over and above the instalment otherwise due for said month.

"And the said Lottie E. Dunbar hereby agrees that she has not, nor shall she have, any other claim or demand against Horace B. Dunbar for contribution to her support and maintenance, or for the support, maintenance, or education of said children, save and except as fixed and limited by this agreement."

Properly signed by both parties and witnessed.

The particulars of her claim were stated as follows:

Horace B. Dunbar to Lottie E. Dunbar, Dr.

1. To instalments due under covenant for alimony from December, 1898, to October 1, 1899, ten months, at $41.66 a month. $416 60

[344] *2. To monthly allowance due her for support and maintenance of Willie W. Dunbar, from December, 1898, to October 1, 1899, ten months, at $33.33 a month . . . . . 333 30

$749 90

The defendant pleaded his discharge in bankruptcy as a bar, and the supreme judicial court of the state held that it was not good.

Messrs. James Hamilton Lewis and George Fred Williams argued the cause, and, with Mr. James A. Halloran, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

No recovery can be had in a state court, on a debt that was provable against an estate in bankruptcy, after the debtor had obtained a discharge under the national bankrupt law, whether proved or not, unless the debt in question belonged to one of the excepted classes.

Talbott v. Suit, 68 Md. 443, 13 Atl. 356; Withers v. Stinson, 79 N. C. 341; Miller v. Chandler, 29 La. Ann. 88; Mace v. Wells, 7 How. 272, 12 L. ed. 698.

The claim is not one for alimony, nor can it be treated as a covenant for alimony or in lieu of alimony with respect to the operation of a discharge in bankruptcy.

Alimony means decree for alimony, a judicial debt without the ordinary incidents of a contract.

Audubon v. Shufeldt, 181 U. S. 577, 45 L. ed. 1010, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 735; Re Nowell, 99 Fed. 931; Parsons v. Parsons, 9 N. H. 309, 32 Am. Dec. 362; Taylor v. Taylor, 93 N. C. 418, 53 Am. Rep. 460.

Alimony can only be obtained by decree on the granting of a divorce.

Darrow v. Darrow, 43 Iowa, 411; Burrows v. Purple, 107 Mass. 428; Fischli v. Fischli, 1 Blackf. 360, 12 Am. Dec. 251; Heyob v. Her Husband, 18 La. Ann. 41; Moore v. Moore, 18 La. Ann. 613; Shotwell v. Shotwell, Smedes & M. Ch. 51; Bowman v. Worthington, 24 Ark. 522; Doyle v. Doyle, 26 Mo. 545.

The allowance of alimony, its amount, and the time of its payment, are all within the discretion of the court.

Bergen v. Bergen, 22 Ill. 187; McDonough v. McDonough, 26 How. Pr. 193; Jolliff v. Jolliff, 32 Ill. 527; Brown v. Brown (Va.) 24 S. E. 238; Call v. Call, 65 Me. 407; McCarthy v. McCarthy, 143 N. Y. 235, 38 N. E. 288; Downs v. Flanders, 150 Mass. 92, 22 N. E. 585.

Where the husband, as in this case, obtains a divorce for his wife's misconduct or fault, there is a presumption that the wife is not entitled to alimony.

Perry v. Perry, 2 Barb. Ch. 311; Spitler v. Spitler, 108 Ill. 120; 2 Am. & Eng. Enc. of Law, p. 118.

The instrument upon which the present action is founded may be properly characterized as a covenant for annuities.

Holbrook v. Comstock, 16 Gray, 109.

An annuity is a yearly sum stipulated to be paid to another in fee for life, or years, and chargeable on the person of the grantor.

Black's Law Dict. p. 74; Bouvier's Law Dict. p. 144; Co. Litt. 144 B.; Turrentine v. Perkins, 46 Ala. 631; Booth v. Ammerman, 4 Bradf. 132; Pearson v. Chace, 10 R. I. 455; Holbrook v. Comstock, 16 Gray, 109;

190 U. S.

Shover v. Myrick, 4 Ind. App. 7, 30 N. E. 207.

An annuity may be created by contract.

Cox v. Maxwell, 151 Mass. 336, 24 N. E. 50; Turrentine v. Perkins, 46 Ala. 631.

The contract in this case is an entire contract, although it is one the performance of which on the part of the plaintiff in error required him to make various payments at various times. The consideration moving from the defendant in error was an entirely executed one. The only acts to be done were those to be performed by the plaintiff in error.

Schell v. Plumb, 55 N. Y. 592; Kirkland v. Oates, 25 Ala. 465; Lucesco Oil Co. v. Brewer, 66 Pa. 351; Shaffer v. Lec, 8 Barb. 412; Wiggins v. Keizer, 6 Ind. 252.

A contract to be held severable must embrace several undertakings, each supported by a distinct consideration. It is one divisible in its nature and purposes, i. e., susceptible of division and apportionment where the matters and things contemplated and embraced by it are not necessarily dependent upon each other, nor intended by the parties so to be.

Wooten v. Walters, 110 N. C. 251, 14 S. E. 734, 736; Kceler v. Clifford, 165 Ill. 544, 46 N. E. 248; Coos Bay Wagon Co. v. Crocker, 6 Sawy. 574, 4 Fed. 577.

The word "debt" is not given a confined and limited meaning in the bankruptcy act, but "shall" include any debt, demand, or claim provable in bankruptcy; and this broad signification of the term "debt" is recognized in subd. b, § 63, by the provision that unliquidated claims may be liquidated as the court may direct, and thereafter proved and allowed against the bankrupt's estate.

Re Hilton, 104 Fed. 981.

The term "demand" is of much broader import than "debt."

Co. Litt. 291 b.; 3 Coke, Thomas ed. 427; Vedder v. Vedder, 1 Denio, 257; Re Denny, 2 Hill, 223; Gray v. Bennett, 3 Met. 522; Jemison v. Blowers, 5 Barb. 686.

If, therefore, the claim in this case might be in any event a provable claim, then the defendant in error is bound to regard it as such and apply to the court, pursuant to § 63, subd. b, to have it liquidated, or abide by the consequences of her failure to do so.

Re Hilton, 104 Fed. 981.

Liquidation of this claim would be no more difficult to accomplish than in many cases which are regularly presented to courts of law for adjustment.

United States v. Behan, 110 U. S. 338, 28 L. ed. 168, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 81; Pierce v. Tennessee Coal, I. & R. Co. 173 U. S. 1, 43 L. ed. 591, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 335; Roehm v. Horst, 178 U. S. 1, 44 L. ed. 953, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 780; Marks v. Van Eeghen, 30 C. C. A. 208, 57 U. S. App. 149, 85 Fed. 853; Re Stern, 54 C. C. A. 60, 116 Fed. 604; Parker v. Russell, 133 Mass. 74; James v. Allen County, 44 Ohio St. 226, 58 Am. Rep. 821, 6 N. E. 246; East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. v. Staub, 7 Lea, 397.

The bankruptcy act was intended to relieve insolvent debtors from their pecuniary liabilities as well as to secure ratable distribution of their assets among their creditors.

Moch v. Market Street Nat. Bank, 47 C. C. A. 49, 107 Fed. 897.

The bankruptcy act, to accomplish its purpose, compels the creditor to elect to treat the contract as broken, and to prove his claim for the entire damages suffered by breach of it.

Ex parte Pollard, 2 Low. Dec. 411, Fed. Cas. No. 11,252.

The contention here made finds strong support in the decisions made under the act of 1841, where the language of the act was that persons having uncertain and contingent demands against the bankrupt "shall be permitted to come in and prove such debts and claims." It has been held under that act that creditors holding such demands were compelled to prove their claims, and that the discharge was a bar to such claims.

Mace v. Wells, 7 How. 272, 12 L. ed. 698; Jemison v. Blowers, 5 Barb. 686.

A doctrine of law that promoted litigation by compelling a suit for each of a series of breaches of one contract is recognized by the later decisions as serviceable neither to the public, nor to the injured party. Hence, the rule of damages in actions of contract has gravitated toward the rule of damages in actions of tort.

Pierce v. Tennessee Coal, I. & R. Co. 173 U. S. 1, 43 L. ed. 591, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 335; Tarbox v. Hartenstein, 4 Baxt. 78.

As a general rule every debt recoverable at law or in equity is provable.

Re Jordan, 2 Fed. 319.

It is certain that a bankruptcy act may be so framed as to avoid and annul all contracts existing at the time of the bankruptcy, whether the liability of the bankrupt at the time upon such contracts be certain or contingent.

Shelton v. Pease, 10 Mo. 478.

A debt is liquidated when it is certain what is due and how much is due.

2 Bouvier's Law Dict. p. 263.

It is significant in this connection that in § 19 of the act of 1867, the term "liquidation" is applied to contingent debts. By § 5 of the act of 1841, it was that class of persons who were annuitants and holders of debts payable in future, i. e., having uncertain and contingent demands, who might have the value of such claims ascertained under the direction of the court.

Lowell, Bankruptcy, p. 485.

And the ground upon which uncertain or contingent debts under the early English bankrupt laws and the United States law of 1800 were excluded, was that no mode was provided for their liquidation.

Jemison v. Blowers, 5 Barb. 686.

In England successive statutes have continually enlarged the class of debts which may be proved in bankruptcy.

Lowell, Bankruptcy, § 164.

It is the purpose of bankruptcy laws to terminate all the contractual relations of the bankrupt.

Lowell, Bankruptcy, p. 486.

Nor can it be fairly urged against this contention that clause 4 is dependent upon or to be governed by clause (1) of subdivision a, § 63. On the face of the act they are distinct and independent provisions, and reasonable effect can be given to both by treating them as separate and independent clauses.

Moch v. Market Street Nat. Bank, 47 C. C. A. 49, 107 Fed. 897.

It has been frequently determined that claims of a character similar to the one in suit can be liquidated, and that the discharge in bankruptcy is a bar to recovery upon them. The test laid down in this court with respect to the proof of this class of claims is the possibility of their estimation or valuation.

Riggin v. Magwire, 15 Wall. 549, 21 L. ed. 232.

A bankrupt is released by his discharge from further liability on a covenant for quiet enjoyment, although no breach occurred before bankruptcy.

Jemison v. Blowers, 5 Barb. 686.

A claim upon a bond conditioned on the payment of all the debts of a firm by the continuing partner, where no debts were paid by the obligee until after bankruptcy, was "capable of approximate proof," and barred by a discharge of the obligor in bankruptcy.

Fisher v. Tift, 12 R. I. 56.

The obligation to pay an annuity for life by quarter-yearly instalments was discharged by bankruptcy of the obligor. With respect to payments which might become due after the petition in bankruptcy was filed, the present value of the liability was ascertainable and provable.

Heywood v. Shreve, 44 N. J. L. 94.

The liability of a subscriber to corporate stock for his unpaid subscription was a provable debt under the bankrupt act of 1867, although no assessment had been made at the time of bankruptcy.

Glenn v. Abell, 39 Fed. 10.

A claim based on a contract right, although for unliquidated damages for loss of future profits, is provable in bankruptcy.

Re Manhattan Ice Co. 114 Fed. 399; Re Stern, 54 C. C. A. 60, 116 Fed. 604.

Claim based on a bond to secure the payment of an annuity to a wife for life held to be provable in bankruptcy. The payment is clearly one the value of which can be ascertained.

Cobb v. Overman, 48 C. C. A. 223, 109 Fed. 65.

Liabilities involving payment or the ceasing to pay at the end of a life or lives in being can always be valued by the tables of actuaries.

Lowell, Bankruptcy, 131; Lovell v. St. Louis Mut. L. Ins. Co. 111 U. S. 264, 28 L. ed. 423, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 390; Pierce v. Tennessee Coal, I. & R. Co. 173 U. S. 1, 43 L. ed. 591, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 335; Parker v. Russell, 133 Mass. 74; Schell v. Plumb, 55 N. Y. 592; Heywood v. Shreve, 44 N. J. L. 94; Cobb v. Overman, 48 C. C. A. 223, 109 Fed. 65; Shover v. Myrick, 4 Ind. App. 7, 30 N. E. 207; Ex parte Granger, 10 Ves. Jr. 348; Ex parte Tindal, 1 Dea. & Ch. 291; Ex parte Broadley, 2 Mont. D. & De G. 524; Ex parte Naden, L. R. 9 Ch. 670.

The liability to pay "until she marries," in England, has been held to be discharged in bankruptcy.

Ex parte Blakemore, L. R. 5 Ch. Div. 372; Ex parte Neal, L. R. 14 Ch. Div. 579.

The hardship to the other creditors is no greater than upon many claims the liquidation and proof of which are undoubted.

Lowell, Bankruptcy, § 171, p. 130; Jemison v. Blowers, 5 Barb. 686; Moch v. Market Street Nat. Bank, 47 C. C. A. 49, 107 Fed. 897; Re Manhattan Ice Co. 114 Fed. 399; Fisher v. Tift, 12 R. I. 56.

Payment under this contract was not dependent upon the happening of an event which might never occur.

Wolf v. Stix, 99 U. S. 1, 25 L. ed. 309.

The word "contingent," when applied to a use, remainder, devise, etc., or other legal right or interest, implies that no present interest exists, and that whether such right or interest ever will exist depends upon a future uncertain event. The term "contingent demand" would, therefore, be inapplicable where a present claim exists or where it is certain to arise in future, and is only appropriate when there is no claim in presenti, and when it is uncertain whether any in fact will arise.

Jemison v. Blowers, 5 Barb. 686.

In Riggin v. Magwire, 15 Wall. 549, 21 L. ed. 232, Mr. Justice Bradley said that the covenant sued on did not come within the category of annuities and debts payable in future, which are absolute existing claims. If it had come within that category, the value of the wife's probability of survivorship after the death of her husband might have been calculated on the principle of life annuities.

The agreement in suit, in so far as it provided for the payment of a certain yearly sum by monthly instalments for the support and maintenance of the son until he shall attain the age of twenty-one years, did not impose a contingent liability on the plaintiff in error. It cannot be doubted that the claim of the defendant in error in respect to this part of the contract could be liquidated and proved in bankruptcy. It is therefore barred by the discharge.

Ex parte Pollard, 2 Low. Dec. 411, Fed. Cas. No. 11,252; Riggin v. Magwire, 15 Wall. 549, 21 L. ed. 232; Cobb v. Overman, 48 C. C. A. 223, 109 Fed. 65.

If a fiduciary creditor prove his debt, he shall be bound by the discharge.

Chapman v. Forsyth, 2 How. 202, 11 L. ed. 236; Re Tebbetts, Fed. Cas. No. 13,817; Morse v. Lovell, 7 Met. 152; Burpee v. Sparhawk, 108 Mass. 111, 11 Am. Rep. 320; Fisher v. Currier, 7 Met. 424.

Furthermore, in such a contract as the one in this case, there can be but one recovery, as there is but one breach. The plaintiff in error disabled himself by bankruptcy from performing his contract.

Re Swift, 50 C. C. A. 264, 112 Fed. 315.

In fact, long before his bankruptcy he had ceased to make the payments required by the contract. This repudiation of his obligations was communicated to the defendant in error, and she acted upon it by proving for her claim in part. She was entitled and compelled, because of this breach of the entire contract, to have her entire damages assessed at once, and having sought to recover on her demand she must be held to have waived all right to claim for a greater sum than that for which she proved in bankruptcy.

James v. Allen County, 44 Ohio St. 226, 58 Am. Rep. 821, 6 N. E. 246; Wrubel v. Muth, 11 Ohio C. C. 559; Tarbox v. Hartenstein, 4 Baxt. 78; Fish v. Folley, 6 Hill, 54.

Mr. Frank H. Stewart argued the cause, and, with Mr. John Oscar Teele, filed a brief for defendant in error:

Alimony has never been considered a debt provable in bankruptcy in this country, but simply a duty, and as such is not barred by the discharge.

Audubon v. Shufeldt, 181 U. S. 575, 45 L. ed. 1009, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 735; Lynde v. Lynde, 181 U. S. 183, 45 L. ed. 810, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 555; Barber v. Barber, 21 How. 582, 16 L. ed. 226; Re Lachemeyer, 18 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 270, Fed. Cas. No. 7,966; Re Garrett, 2 Hughes, 235, Fed. Cas. No. 5,252; Re Baker, 96 Fed. 955; Re Shepard, 97 Fed. 187; Re Anderson, 97 Fed. 321; Re Hubbard, 98 Fed. 710; Re Nowell, 99 Fed. 931.

It is not necessary in this case to consider whether the wife's claims are strictly alimony, or even in the nature of alimony, in order to determine whether the state court erred. The judgment complained of was rendered upon the ground that they were contingent claims, and so not provable under the bankrupt act of 1898.

Dunbar v. Dunbar, 180 Mass. 170, 62 N. E. 248.

The wife's claim in her own direct behalf was contingent (a) upon her death, and (b) upon her remarriage. The obligation is a continuing liability; and new breaches give new causes of action, which are not provable under the proceedings in bankruptcy.

Austin v. Moore, 7 Met. 116; Shute v. Taylor, 5 Met. 67; Waldo v. Fobes, 1 Mass. 10.

As the act makes no provision for the proof of claims depending upon a contingency which does not happen before the time of the adjudication of the bankruptcy, this claim could not be proved at all unless as an unliquidated one.

Re Big Meadows Gas Co. 113 Fed. 974.

But liquidation was impossible.

Ex parte Pollard, 2 Low. Dec. 411, Fed. Cas. No. 11,252; Riggin v. Maguire, 15 Wall. 549, 21 L. ed. 232.

Under the English statutes of bankruptcy down to 1869 such contingent claims were held not to be provable, and so not barred.

Millen v. Whittenbury, 1 Campb. 428; St. Martin v. Warren, 1 Barn. & Ald. 491; Mills 190 U. S.

v. Auriol, 1 H. Bl. 433; Mudge v. Rowan, L. R. 3 Ex. Ch. 85.

The English act of 1869, however, enlarged the language of claims provable, so as to make "every kind of a debt or liability provable in bankruptcy except demands in the nature of unliquidated damages arising otherwise than by reason of a contract or promise," and that whether the liability is "capable of being ascertained by fixed rules, or assessed only by a jury, or as a matter of opinion."

Ex parte Blakemore, L. R. 5 Ch. Div. 372; Ex parte Neal, L. R. 14 Ch. Div. 579.

Under that statute claims of this nature were held to be provable, and so barred; but these cases are not of authority in this country, since the English bankrupt law permitted the proof of contingent debts to an extent outside the utmost possibility of the construction of the present bankrupt act of the United States.

Re Nowell, 99 Fed. 931. See also Re Ells, 98 Fed. 967; Re Arnstein, 101 Fed. 706; Re Mahler, 105 Fed. 428; Re Jefferson, 93 Fed. 948; Re Garlington, 115 Fed. 999; Morgan v. Wordell, 178 Mass. 350, 55 L. R. A. 33, 59 N. E. 1037; Goding v. Rosenthal, 180 Mass. 43, 61 N. E. 222; Ex parte Lake, 2 Low. Dec. 544, Fed. Cas. No. 7,991.

The only reference in the act of 1898 to contingent claims, even by construction, other than that of the surety of a bankrupt (§ 57i) is contained in § 63b. This paragraph, however, does not in any way enlarge the class of debts which may be proved, but provides that, if any claim coming within the scope of § 63 is unliquidated, it may be liquidated and proved.

Lowell, Bankruptcy, p. 487; Re Hirschman, 104 Fed. 69; Re Yates, 114 Fed. 365; Re Marcus, 104 Fed. 331.

The contingency was of such a nature that it could not be valued for the purposes of proof under any bankrupt law existing or known to the history of the law, except perhaps the English act of 1869, and even under that act alimony was not provable.

Kerr v. Kerr [1897] 2 Q. B. 439; Linton v. Linton, L. R. 15 Q. B. Div. 239.

The relations between parent and child, and the parent's liabilities, must be worked out independently of all bankruptcy laws.

Millen v. Whittenbury, 1 Campb. 428; Re Baker, 96 Fed. 954; Re Hubbard, 98 Fed. 710; Re Cotton, Fed. Cas. No. 3,269; Re Garrett, 2 Hughes, 235, Fed. Cas. No. 5,252; Re Lachemeyer, 18 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 270, Fed. Cas. No. 7,966.

The bankruptcy act was passed to relieve persons bringing themselves within its provisions from the incubus of hopeless indebtedness; but it was not intended to, nor does it, subvert the higher rule, which casts upon a parent the care and maintenance of his offspring. The welfare of the state, as also of every principle of law, statutory, natural, and divine, demand that, so long as he has any substance at all, he shall apply it to the maintenance of his children. Creditors, as well as all citizens, are interested in the enforcement of this rule.

Re Hubbard, 98 Fed. 710.

Mr. Justice Peckham, after making the foregoing statement of facts, delivered the opinion of the court:

Had the provisions of this contract, so far as contracting to pay money for the support of his wife is concerned, been embodied in the decree of divorce which the husband obtained from his wife in Ohio on the ground of desertion, the liability of the husband to pay the amount as alimony, notwithstanding his discharge in bankruptcy, cannot be doubted. Audubon v. Shufeldt, 181 U. S. 575, 45 L. ed. 1009, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 735. We are not by any means clear that the same principle ought not to govern a contract of this nature when, although the judgment of divorce is silent upon the subject, it is plain that the contract was made with reference to the obligations of the husband to aid in the support of his wife, notwithstanding the decree. The facts appearing in this record do not show a case of any moral delinquency on the part of the wife, and the contract, considering the circumstances, might possibly be held to take the place of an order or judgment of the court for the payment of the amount, as in the nature of a decree for alimony. We do not find it necessary, however, to decide that question in this case, because, in [345] any *event, we think the contract as to the support of the wife is not of such a nature as to be discharged by a discharge in bankruptcy.

Conceding that the bankruptcy act provides for discharging some classes of contingent demands or claims, this is not, in our opinion, such a demand. Even though it may be that an annuity dependent upon life is a contingent demand within the meaning of the bankruptcy act of 1898 (30 Stat. at L. 544, chap. 541, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3418), yet this contract, so far as regards the support of the wife, is not dependent upon life alone, but is to cease in case the wife remarries. Such a contingency is not one which, in our opinion, is within the purview of the act, because of the innate difficulty, if not impossibility, of estimating or valuing the particular contingency of widowhood. A simple annuity which is to terminate upon the death of a particular person may be valued by reference to the mortality tables. Mr. Justice Bradley, in Rigin v. Magwire, 15 Wall. 549, 21 L. ed. 232, speaking for the court, said that so long as it remained uncertain whether a contract or engagement would ever give rise to an actual duty or liability, and there was no means of removing the uncertainty by calculation, such contract or engagement was not provable under the bankruptcy act of 1841 [5 Stat. at L. 445, chap. 9]. The 5th section of that act gave the right to prove "uncertain and contingent demands," but it was held that a contract such as above described was not within that section.

It was remarked by the justice in that case that, if the contract had come within the category of annuities and debts payable in future, which are absolute and existing claims, that the value of the wife's probability of survivorship after death of her husband might have been calculated on the principle of life annuities.

But how can any calculation be made in regard to the continuance of widowhood when there are no tables and no statistics by which to calculate such contingency? How can a valuation of a probable continuance of widowhood be made? Who can say what the probability of remarrying is in regard to any particular widow? We know what some of the factors might be in the question: inclination, age, health, property, attractiveness, children. *These would, at [346] least, enter into the question as to the probability of continuance of widowhood, and yet there are no statistics which can be gathered which would tend in the slightest degree to aid in the solving of the question.

In many cases where actions are brought for the violation of contracts, such as Pierce v. Tennessee Coal, I. & R. Co. 173 U. S. 1, 43 L. ed. 591, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 335; Roehm v. Horst, 178 U. S. 1, 44 L. ed. 953, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 780, and Schell v. Plumb, 55 N. Y. 592, it is necessary to come to some conclusion in regard to the damages which the party has sustained by reason of the breach of the contract, and in such cases resort may be had to the tables of mortality, and to other means of ascertaining as near as possible what the present damages are for a failure to perform in the future; but we think the rules in those cases are not applicable to cases like this, under the bankruptcy act.

Taking the liability as presented by the contract, if the mortality tables were referred to for the purpose of ascertaining the value so far as it depended upon life, the answer would be no answer to the other contingency of the continuance of widowhood; and if, having found the value as depending upon the mortality tables, you desire to deduct from that the valuation of the other contingency, it is pure guesswork to do it.

It is true that this has been done in England under the English bankruptcy act of 1869 [32 & 33 Vict. chap. 71, § 31]. In Ex parte Blakemore (1877) L. R. 5 Ch. Div. 372, it was held by the court of appeal that the value of the contingency of a widow's marrying again was capable of being fairly estimated, and that proof must be admitted for the value of the future payments as ascertained by an actuary. That decision was made under the 31st section of the bankruptcy act of 1869. James, Lord Justice, said:

"No doubt it is uncertain whether the appellant will marry again, just as the duration of any particular life is uncertain. But, though the duration of any particular life is uncertain, the expectation of life at a given age is reduced to a certainty when we have regard to a million of lives. The value of the expectation of life is arrived at by an average deduced from practical experience."

[347] Although the English statute makes it necessary to arrive at a conclusion upon this point, yet there is no "practical experience" as to the chances of the continuance of widowhood, such as may be referred to where the probable continuance of life is involved. In the latter case we have the experience tables in regard to millions of lives, and, under such circumstances, there is, as Lord Justice James said, almost a certainty as to the valuation to be put on such a contingency. But under the English statute, the 31st section makes every kind of debt or liability provable in bankruptcy except demands in the nature of unliquidated damages arising otherwise than by reason of a contract or promise, so long as the value of the liability is "capable of being ascertained by fixed rules, or assessable only by a jury, or as matter of opinion." So, under that act, in Ex parte Neal, L. R. 14 Ch. Div. 579, there was a separation deed between husband and wife, and the husband was to pay an annuity to the wife, which was terminable "in case the wife should not lead a chaste life; in case the husband and wife should resume cohabitation; and in case the marriage should be dissolved in respect of anything done, committed, or suffered by" the other party, after the date of the deed. The annuity was also to be proportionately diminished in the event of the wife's becoming entitled to any income independent of the husband, exceeding a certain amount a year. After the execution of the deed the husband went through bankruptcy, and it was held that the value of the annuity was capable of being fairly estimated and was provable in the liquidation. In that case, speaking of the 31st section of the act of 1869, it was stated that "words more large and general it is impossible to conceive; they cover every species of contingency." It was also stated that it was "difficult to see how any case could arise which would not come within" the language of this act. Bramwell, Lord Justice, said: "But for the present bankruptcy act, our decision must have been the same as that in Mudge v. Rowan" (1868) L. R. 3 Exch. 85; but he said that the present bankruptcy act was very different in its terms from the act which was in force when that case was decided.

In the case of Mudge v. Rowan, L. R. 3 Exch. 85, there was a deed of separation between husband and wife, in which the husband covenanted to pay an annuity to his wife by quarterly instalments, the annuity to cease in the event of future cohabitation *by mutual consent. It was held that this was not an annuity provable under the bankruptcy act of 1849, 12th and 13th Vict. chap. 106, § 175; nor a liability to pay money under the 24th and 25th Vict. chap. 134, § 154.

[348] The 175th section of the act of 1849 expressly provided that the creditor might prove for the value of any annuity, which value the court was to ascertain. Kelly, Chief Baron, said:
190 U. S.

"The annuity seems to me to be so uncertain in its nature as to be impossible to be valued. In many cases the commissioner of bankruptcy may have to deal with contingencies the value of which depend on a variety of considerations, and where the valuation is very difficult. But here I am at a loss to see any single circumstance upon which a calculation of any kind could be based."

Martin, Baron, said:

"This contingency depends on an infinite variety of circumstances, into which it is idle to suppose a commissioner could inquire."

Channell, Baron, concurring, said:

"The tendency of recent legislation, and the course of recent decisions, has been to free a debtor who becomes a bankrupt, from all liability of every kind; but I do not think an order of discharge a bar to such a claim as the present. . . . I quite admit that, to bring an annuity within the act of 1849, it is not necessary to have any actual pecuniary consideration. I also feel that in many cases the difficulty of calculating the present value of contingencies may be very great, and yet they may be within the acts. But here it appears to me that the difficulty is insuperable."

In Parker v. Ince (1859) 4 Hurlst. & N. 52, there was a bond conditioned to pay an annuity during the life of the obligor's wife, provided that if the obligor and his wife should at any time thereafter cohabit as man and wife the annuity should cease, and it was held that the annual sum thus covenanted to be paid by the defendant was not an annuity within the 175th section of the bankruptcy law or consolidation act of 1849, nor a debt payable upon a contingency *within the 177th section, nor a liability to [349] pay money upon a contingency within the 178th section, and consequently the discharge in bankruptcy was no bar to an action for a recovery of a quarterly payment due on the bond. Martin, Baron, said:

"That cannot be such an annuity as would fall within the 175th section, because a value cannot be put upon it. How is it possible to calculate the probability of a man and his wife, who are separated, living together again? Their doing so depends on their character, temper, and disposition, and, it may be, a variety of other circumstances. Then, is it money payable upon a contingency within the 178th section? I think it is not."

It is only, therefore, by reason of the extraordinarily broad language contained in the 31st section of the English bankruptcy act of 1869 that the English courts have endeavored to make a fair estimate of the value of a contract based on the continuance of widowhood, even though the value was not capable of being ascertained by fixed rules, nor assessable by a jury, but was simply to be estimated by the opinion of the court or of some one intrusted with the duty.

In the Blakemore Case, L. R. 5 Ch. Div.

372, after the announcement of the judgment, the report states that it was then arranged that it should be referred to an actuary to ascertain the annuity as a simple life annuity, and to deduct from that value such a sum as he should estimate to be the proper deduction for the contingency of widowhood. In other words, it was left to the actuary to guess the proper amount to be deducted.

No such broad language is found in our bankruptcy act of 1898. Section 63a provides for debts which may be proved, which, among others, are: (1) "A fixed liability, as evidenced by a judgment or an instrument in writing, absolutely owing at the time of the filing of the petition against him, whether then payable or not, with any interest thereon which would have been recoverable at that date, or with a rebate of interest upon such as were not then payable and did not bear interest." (4) "Founded upon an open account or upon a contract, express or implied."

[350] *In § 63b, provision is made for unliquidated claims against the bankrupt, which may be liquidated upon application to the court in such manner as it shall direct, and may thereafter be proved and allowed against his estate. This paragraph b, however, adds nothing to the class of debts which might be proved under paragraph a of the same section. Its purpose is to permit an unliquidated claim, coming within the provisions of § 63a, to be liquidated as the court should direct.

We do not think that by the use of the language in § 63a it was intended to permit proof of contingent debts or liabilities or demands the valuation or estimation of which it was substantially impossible to prove.

The language of § 63a of the act of 1898 differs from that contained in the bankruptcy act of 1867, and also from that of 1841. The act of 1867, § 19 (14 Stat. at L. 517, 525, chap. 176, carried into the Revised Statutes as § 5068), provided expressly for cases of contingent debts and contingent liabilities contracted by the bankrupt, and permitted applications to be made to the court to have the present value of the debt or liability ascertained and liquidated, which was to be done in such manner as the court should order; and the creditor was then to be allowed to prove for the amount so ascertained.

Section 5 of the act of 1841 (5 Stat. at L. 440, chap. 9) provides in terms for the holders of uncertain or contingent demands coming in and proving such debts under the act. But neither the act of 1841 nor that of 1867 would probably cover the case of such a contract as the one under consideration.

Cases have been cited showing some contingent debts which were held capable of being proved under the bankruptcy act of 1898, among which are Moch v. Market Street Nat. Bank, 47 C. C. A. 49, 107 Fed. 897, Circuit Court of Appeals, Third Circuit, 1901, and Cobb v. Overman, 54 L. R.

A. 369, 48 C. C. A. 223, 109 Fed. 65. Circuit Court of Appeals, Fourth Circuit, 1901. And under former bankrupt acts, the cases of Fisher v. Tiff (1878) 12 R. I. 56; Heywood v. Shreve (1882) 44 N. J. L. 94, and Shelton v. Pease (1847) 10 Mo. 473.

The contingency in the case of Moch v. Market Street Nat. Bank, 47 C. C. A. 49, 107 Fed. 897, was that the bankrupt was the indorser of commercial paper *not due [351] at the time of filing the petition, and it was held that under § 63a, subdivision 4, the creditor might prove against the estate of the bankrupt after the liability had become fixed.

In Cobb v. Overman, 54 L. R. A. 369, 48 C. C. A. 223, 109 Fed. 65, the bond of the bankrupt to secure payment to the obligee of an annuity for life was held to be properly proved under § 63a, clause 1.

These cases, it will be seen, do not come within the principle of the case at bar. The other cases arising under the acts of 1867 and 1841 do not affect this case.

The Massachusetts court held the debt herein not provable, upon the authority of Morgan v. Wordell, 178 Mass. 350, 55 L. R. A. 33, 59 N. E. 1037, and Goding v. Rosenthal, 180 Mass. 43, 61 N. E. 222. Mr. Justice Barker, in delivering the opinion of the supreme judicial court of Massachusetts in the latter case, said:

"But in Morgan v. Wordell, 178 Mass. 350, 55 L. R. A. 33, 59 N. E. 1037, this court assumed that such claims were not provable under the act, and we follow that view in the present case."

We think the contract, so far as it related to the payment to the wife during her life or widowhood, was not a contingent liability provable under the act of 1898.

In relation to that part of the husband's contract to pay for the support of his minor children until they respectively became of age, we also think that it was not of a nature to be proved in bankruptcy. At common law, a father is bound to support his legitimate children, and the obligation continues during their minority. We may assume this obligation to exist in all the states. In this case the decree of the court provided that the children should remain in the custody of the wife, and the contract to contribute a certain sum yearly for the support of each child during his minority was simply a contract to do that which the law obliged him to do; that is, to support his minor children. The contract was a recognition of such liability on his part. We think it was not the intention of Congress, in passing a bankruptcy act, to provide for the release of the father from his obligation to support his children by his discharge in bankruptcy, and if not, then we see no reason why his contract to do that which the law obliged him to do *should be discharged [352] in that way. As his discharge would not, in any event, terminate his obligation to support his children during their minority, we see no reason why his written contract acknowledging such obligation and agreeing to pay a certain sum (which may be presumed to have been a reasonable one) in fulfilment thereof should be so discharged. It is true his promise is to pay to the mother; but, on this branch of the contract, it is for the purpose of supporting his two minor children, and he simply makes her his agent for that purpose.

In Re Baker, 96 Fed. 954, in the district court of Kansas, it was held that a judgment in a bastardy proceeding against the putative father, adjudging him to pay a certain sum to the mother of the child for its maintenance, was not such a debt as would be released by the discharge of the father in bankruptcy, and it was put upon the ground that, by virtue of the judgment and bond given thereon, the father became liable for the maintenance of the illegitimate son the same as if he were his legitimate offspring, and that the bankruptcy law was never intended to affect the liability of the father for the support of his children.

In the case of Re Hubbard, 98 Fed. 710, the district court of Illinois held that a discharge in bankruptcy did not release the bankrupt from the obligation to obey an order made by a state court requiring him to pay a certain sum for the support of his minor children. Kohlsaat, District Judge, said:

"The bankruptcy act was passed to relieve persons bringing themselves within its provisions from the incubus of hopeless indebtedness; but it was not intended to nor does it subvert the higher rule, which casts upon a parent the care and maintenance of his offspring. The welfare of the state, as also every principle of law,—statutory, natural, and divine,—demand that, so long as he has any substance at all, he shall apply it to the maintenance of his children. Creditors, as well as all citizens, are interested in the enforcement of this rule."

As the defendant would still remain liable for the support of his minor children, even if discharged from this contract under the act, and he would remain liable for past support, why should it be held that Congress intended that such a contract, to do [353] what *the law enjoins upon him as a duty, should be released? There is no language in the act which plainly so provides, and we ought not to infer it.

The amendments to the bankruptcy act passed in 1903 (32 Stat. at L. 797, chap. 487) contain an amendment of § 17 of the act of 1898, which relates to debts not affected by a discharge, and it provides, among those not released by a discharge in bankruptcy, a debt due or to become due for alimony or for the maintenance or support of wife or child. It is true that the provisions of the amendatory act are not to apply to cases pending before their enactment. They are only referred to here for the purpose of showing the legislative trend in the direction of not discharging an obligation of the bankrupt for the support and maintenance of wife or children.

The judgment is affirmed.

190 U. S.

ESTHER S. BUCHANAN et al., Plffs. in Err.,
v.

LAURA PATTERSON et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 353-367.)

French spoliation claims—appropriation for payment—identification of distributees.

Congress by making an appropriation in the act of March 3, 1899 (30 Stat. at L. 1161, chap. 426, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 751), in accordance with the report of the court of claims on certain French spoliation claims, to an administratrix "representing" a designated firm, and a similar appropriation to the same person as administratrix of the estate of a person designated as "the surviving partner" of such firm, cannot be deemed thereby to have determined that the next of kin of such surviving partner should share in the distribution, where such administratrix represented in the court of claims all the interested parties, and that court mistakenly supposed such surviving partner to have been a member of the firm at the time of the illegal seizures of its property, but must be regarded as having intended such appropriation for the next of kin of those composing the firm at the time of the seizures, without attempting to identify the particular persons belonging to that class.

[No. 266.]

Argued April 29, 30, 1903. Decided June 1, 1903.

IN ERROR to the Court of Appeals of the State of Maryland to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the Circuit Court No. 2. of Baltimore City giving directions for the distribution of moneys received under the French spoliation acts. Affirmed.

See same case below, 94 Md. 534, 51 Atl. 169; on prior appeal, 92 Md. 334, 48 Atl. 158.

Statement by Mr. Justice Peckham:

The plaintiff in error, Esther S. Buchanan, filed her bill in circuit court No. 2, of Baltimore city, on August 17, 1899, against the parties defendant, for the purpose of obtaining the instructions of that court as to whom and in what proportions she should pay and distribute certain sums of money received by her from the United States under what is termed the French spoliations acts of Congress. Answers were made by the various parties, and a decree was subsequently entered giving directions for the distribution of the funds. An appeal from that decree was taken by some of the defendants to the court of appeals, and that court reversed a portion of the decree (as to the proper distribution of the money), and remanded the case for further proceedings. 92 Md. 334, 48 Atl. 158. The trial court then entered a decree in accordance with the directions of the court of appeals, and thereupon the original plaintiff, Esther S. Buchanan, appealed to the court of appeals, and that court then affirmed the decree of the court below. 94 Md. 534, 51

Atl. 169. Plaintiffs in error bring the case here by writ of error.

The first act of Congress relating to the French spoliations was passed January 20, 1885. 23 Stat. at L. 283, chap. 25 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 750).

[355] *Miss Buchanan was, in May, 1885, duly appointed administratrix upon the estate of her father, William B. Buchanan, deceased. She then, through her counsel and in common with other claimants for losses sustained by the seizures of the two vessels Patapasco and Jane, came into the court of claims and proved the facts upon which the rights of the several claimants were based as against the United States. In presenting the claims, she did in truth represent, with their consent, all the parties interested therein, including those now claiming against her.

The court reported (May 18, 1887) that the seizures of the two vessels complained of were illegal, and that the claimants were entitled to the following sums from the United States. A list was then given of those entitled to an appropriation on account of the ship Patapasco, in which was included the name of Esther S. Buchanan, as follows:

"Esther S. Buchanan, administratrix of the estate of William Buchanan, who was the surviving partner of the firm of S. Smith & Buchanan, deceased, to the sum of $25,056."

In relation to the ship Jane, in the list of those entitled to an appropriation was the following:

"Esther S. Buchanan, administratrix, representing Smith & Buchanan, $11,660.21."

After this report had been made, and on March 23, 1891, Esther S. Buchanan was duly appointed administratrix de bonis non with the will annexed of the personal estate of James A. Buchanan, her grandfather.

No action of Congress in relation to these claims was had until 1899, when an act was passed, approved March 3, 1899 (30 Stat. at L. 1161, chap. 426, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 751). The act provided for the payment of claims allowed under the Bowman and Tucker acts by the court of claims, and on page 1191 it provided as follows:

"French Spoliation Claims.

"To pay the findings of the court of claims on the following claims for indemnity for spoliations by the French prior to July thirtieth, eighteen hundred and one, under the act entitled 'An Act to Provide for the Ascertainment of Claims of Ameri-

[356] Jean *Citizens for Spoliations Committed by the French Prior to the Thirty-first Day of July, Eighteen Hundred and One:' Provided, That in all cases where the original sufferers were adjudicated bankrupts the awards shall be made on behalf of the next of kin instead of to assignees in bankruptcy, and the awards in the cases of individual claimants shall not be paid until the court of claims shall certify to the Secretary of the Treasury that the personal representatives on whose behalf the award is made represent the next of kin, and the courts which granted the administrations, respectively, shall have certified that the legal representatives have given adequate security for the legal disbursements of the awards, namely."

Then follow appropriations to a number of claimants in satisfaction of the losses sustained by the illegal seizures of vessels and cargoes.

Among them, on page 1194, is included the following:

"On the ship Jane, John Wallace, master, namely:

"Esther S. Buchanan, administratrix, representing Smith & Buchanan, $11,660.21."

On page 1195 is the following:

"On the ship Patapasco, William Hill, master, namely: . . . [names of various claimants for other interests in same ship].

"Esther S. Buchanan, administratrix of the estate of William B. Buchanan, who was the surviving partner of the firm of S. Smith & Buchanan, deceased, $25,056, the value of the cargo shipped by said firm."

Pursuant to the proviso in the act of 1899, the court of claims, upon the application of the attorney of record for Esther S. Buchanan, administratrix, representing Smith & Buchanan, deceased, ordered, in the case of the ship Jane, a certificate to be issued to the Secretary of the Treasury, as follows:

"The court of claims hereby certifies that it appears by evidence on file in the above-entitled case that said Esther S. Buchanan, on whose behalf an appropriation or award was made by the act of March 3, 1899, entitled 'An Act for the Allowance of Certain Claims for Stores and Supplies Reported by the Court of Claims under the Provisions of the Act Approved March Third, *Eighteen [357] Hundred and Eighty-three, and Commonly Known as the Bowman Act, and for Other Purposes,' for the sum of eleven thousand six hundred and sixty dollars and twenty-one cents ($11,660.21), represents the next of kin of William B. Buchanan, the surviving member of the firm of Samuel Smith & Buchanan, deceased, the original owner of the claim upon which said award was made.

"And the court further certifies that it appears on the record of the said case that at the time when the award of this court was made the said claim was not held by assignment or owned by an insurance company."

The same kind of a certificate was made in relation to the ship Patapasco.

These certificates were made on June 15, 1899, and were filed with the Secretary of the Treasury, and the moneys mentioned, being a total of $36,716.21, were thereafter paid to Miss Buchanan.

Having received the money from the government, the plaintiff in error then commenced this suit individually, and as administratrix of the estate of William B. Buchanan, deceased, and as administratrix de bonis non with the will annexed of James A. Buchanan, deceased, in circuit court No. 2, of Baltimore city, in which she stated the various facts under which the money had been paid her, and that she had in her hands for distribution, among the persons particularly entitled to the same, the sum of $22,629.47, after the payment of all costs, etc. She also averred that she was advised that she held funds for the benefit of and distribution among, not only the next of kin of her own decedent, the said William B. Buchanan, but also the next of kin of the other partners of said firm of S. Smith & Buchanan, to wit, Samuel Smith and James A. Buchanan, in the proportions and according to the laws of distribution which the court might hold to be proper in the cause. She also gave the names of the next of kin of William B. Buchanan, namely, herself and her brother, Wilson C. Buchanan, and then stated who were the next of kin of James A. Buchanan, deceased, living at the date of the passage of the act of Congress directing the payment of the claims, to wit, March 3, 1899, [358] so far as they were known to her, and she stated that she had given the names of all of the next of kin of Samuel Smith and James A. Buchanan living at the time of the passage of the act of Congress, March 3, 1899, although she said there might be others unknown to her who might lay claim to participate in the distribution of the fund, and she was in doubt as to the proportion in which the beneficiaries should participate in the shares of their ancestors in the fund. She then stated:

"Twelfth. That according to the information and belief of your oratrix, the said Samuel Smith, James A. Buchanan, and William B. Buchanan were equal copartners, but a claim has been made on your oratrix by Robert Carter Smith, one of the distributees of Samuel Smith, and a party defendant herein, wherein he asserts that his ancestor, the said Samuel Smith, had a one-half interest in the property of said copartnership, and that, therefore, the next of kin of the said Samuel Smith are entitled to have for distribution among them one half of the fund now in the hands of your oratrix for distribution; but your oratrix is informed and does verily believe that distribution of said fund should be made in three equal parts among the next of kin of the three partners in said firm of S. Smith & Buchanan."

Other facts were given in relation to the existence of parties who might possibly claim some interest in the fund, and in her complaint she finally said that, by reason of the facts above set forth, she was in doubt to whom and in what proportion she should pay and distribute the sum of money in her hands, and that she was advised, and therefore alleges, that a distribution of the same can only be had under the order of a court of equity, in a manner adequate to insure her own protection in the future. She thereupon asked that the court assume jurisdiction of the fund in her hands as administratrix, as already set forth, and that it direct and supervise the distribution of the same among the parties whom the court may find to be entitled to participate therein, according to the proportion and rule which this court may declare to govern the same.

Answers were made by some of the parties and the bill taken as confessed as against others. Upon the trial, evidence was *given under objection, and the state[359] court has found that at the time of the illegal seizures of the vessels in 1798, William B. Buchanan was about three years old, he having been born on September 9, 1795; that in 1798, the year the losses occurred, there was a firm of S. Smith & Buchanan, consisting only of S. Smith and James A. Buchanan, the father of William B. Buchanan, and they were the only original sufferers from the illegal seizures of the ships. William B. Buchanan did not become a member of the firm until about twenty years later, or until January 1, 1818, and he became the survivor of the firm formed in 1818, which was also known as S. Smith & Buchanan.

It thus appears that, although William B. Buchanan was the survivor of a firm of S. Smith & Buchanan as that firm was constituted in 1818, he was not the survivor of the firm of S. Smith & Buchanan as that firm was constituted in 1798, when these illegal seizures occurred.

The trial court held that the moneys should be divided into three portions, one of which should go to the next of kin of Samuel Smith, another to the next of kin of James A. Buchanan, and another to the next of kin of William B. Buchanan, being Esther S. and Wilson C. Buchanan.

The court of appeals, on appeal from the decree of the circuit court, held that this was an erroneous disposition of the money, and that it should be divided into two portions, one of which should go to the next of kin of Samuel Smith, and the other to the next of kin of James A. Buchanan; Samuel Smith and James A. Buchanan being the only members of the firm that sustained the losses, and being the original sufferers from the illegal seizures. The writ of error has been sued out for the purpose of reviewing this decree.

Messrs. Archibald H. Taylor and Edward P. Keech, Jr., argued the cause, and, with Mr. John Peirce Bruns, filed a brief for plaintiffs in error.

Messrs. Arthur W. Machen, Jr., Frank P. Clark, and Arthur W. Machen, argued the cause and filed a brief for defendants in error.

Contentions of counsel sufficiently appear in the opinion.

*Mr. Justice Peckham, after making the[360] foregoing statement of facts, delivered the opinion of the court:

The contention of the plaintiffs in error is that Congress, by the acts mentioned, and particularly that of March 3, 1899, ratified and adopted the findings and decisions of the court of claims, made in pursuance of the act of 1885, in the cases of the two ships Patapsco and Jane, and that the act of 1899 recognized and designated William B. Buchanan as an original sufferer within the meaning of Congress, by virtue of his being a partner, and the surviving partner, of S. Smith & Buchanan, and that the act gave to the personal representative of William B. Buchanan the awards in question, for the benefit of his next of kin and the next of kin of his two partners. They also assert that the court of claims having made the additional final certificate required by the act of Congress, and the Secretary of the Treasury, in accordance with those certificates, having paid the money to the plaintiff in error, administratrix, for the benefit of the next of kin of William B. Buchanan, to the full extent of his partnership interest in the firm, there was no power in any court to in anywise alter the statute or make any other distribution than such as would give to the next of kin of William B. Buchanan one third of the total sum to be distributed.

It becomes necessary, in order to fully appreciate the action of the court of claims and of Congress subsequently to the passage of the act of 1885, to examine the latter act and determine its scope and purpose. The act provided for an investigation to be undertaken by the court as to the validity of the claims for indemnity upon the French government, for losses of citizens of the United States or their legal representatives, arising from illegal captures, seizures, etc., of vessels or cargoes prior to the treaty of 1800 between France and the United States. The act did not assume to provide for the identification of all the next of kin of the original sufferers from such illegal seizures. The court was to determine the validity and the amount of the claims included within the description contained in § 1 of the act [361] of 1885, and it was also to determine *the present ownership of such claims. The matter of chief importance between the claimants and the United States was for the court to ascertain and determine the validity and the extent of the claims.

The particular class of persons who were the owners of the claims, and to whom the moneys might be properly paid, was at this time of subsidiary importance, so far as the United States was concerned. Although the present ownership was to be determined, and, if by assignee, the date of the assignment and the consideration paid therefor, yet this was obviously for the mere purpose of informing Congress as to the present situation of a claim, whether owned by next of kin of those who suffered the loss or by assignees; but the particular individuals who composed the next of kin or the assignees were not then of importance, as gathered from the language and purpose of the act. All this action of the court was, by the terms of the act, made advisory only. Congress specifically withheld from the court any right to render a judgment which would in any manner conclude the United States, or commit it to the payment of any claims determined by the court under the 3d section of the act. All that Congress did was to give jurisdiction to the court of claims to inquire into the matter of each claim which might be presented to it, and to report to Congress its opinion of the validity and the amount of the claim, with a statement as to its ownership. The whole subject thereafter remained with Congress, subject to its future action.

Regarding its powers and duties under this act, the court of claims itself stated its opinion in the case of the ship Jane. 24 Ct. Cl. 74. It held that the court could not determine to whom the money should be distributed, which Congress might thereafter award as indemnity in the French spoliation cases, nor could it determine who were the next of kin of a deceased claimant, nor whether there were any. All that the court could determine in its report to Congress was the validity of a claim against France, its relinquishment by the United States, and the amount thereof. It also held that its decisions in these cases were not judgments which judicially affect the rights of anyone, and that, after the court had reported a French spoliation case, it remained [362] with Congress to determine, first, the measure of the indemnity which the United States should give; and, second, the persons who were equitably entitled to participate therein. The purpose of the court was, as it stated, to require a claimant to file his letters of administration and prove, to the satisfaction of the court, that the decedent whose estate he administered was the same person who suffered loss through the capture of a vessel.

Again, in The Leghorn Seizures, 27 Ct. Cl. 224, the court held that the French spoliation act of 1885 conferred jurisdiction, but did not impose liabilities; that Congress conceded that several classes of claimants seeking redress for French spoliation might come into the court of claims, and have the question of the liability of the United States determined, and conceded nothing more.

From these extracts it is plain that the court of claims did not regard it as its duty under the act of 1885 to investigate and determine the rights of each individual of a class, but only to determine the validity and amount of a claim, with a specification of ownership sufficient to identify the claim itself, for the payment of which an appropriation might be thereafter made. The particular individuals of the class would be matter for subsequent investigation by some other tribunal.

In Blagge v. Balch, 162 U. S. 439, 40 L. ed. 1032, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 853, the meaning and purpose of the act of 1885, together with the act of March 3, 1891 (26 Stat. at L. 908, chap. 540), came before this court for consideration, and it was held that the result of the action of Congress was to place the payments prescribed under the act of 1891 within the category of payments by way of gratuity and grace, and not as of right as against the government; that, under the proviso contained in the act of 1891, Congress intended the next of kin to be beneficiaries in every case, and excluded creditors, legatees, assignees, and all strangers to the blood, and that the words "next of kin," as used in the proviso, meant next of kin living at the date of the act (1891), to be determined according to the statute of distribution of the respective states of the domicile of the original sufferers.

[363] The court distinguished the case from Comegys v. Vasse, 1 Pet. 193, 7 L. ed. 108, and **Williams v. Heard*, 140 U. S. 529, 35 L. ed. 550, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 885. In these cases it was held that assignees in bankruptcy took title to the moneys.

The same proviso mentioned in Blagge v. Balch, 162 U. S. 439, 40 L. ed. 1032, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 853, and contained in the act of March 3, 1891, is found in the act of 1899 (30 Stat. at L. 1161, 1191, chap. 426, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 751). So we know from the above case that the desire of Congress was to make payments to the next of kin of the original sufferers of the losses, and that assignees in bankruptcy should not take. The identification of the particular persons belonging to the class that Congress desired to aid was evidently not within the purpose of the act of 1891 or that of 1899.

Under the act of 1885, the plaintiff in error, Esther S. Buchanan, presented the claims arising out of the capture of the vessels Patapsco and Jane, together with their cargoes. It is not disputed—on the contrary, it is admitted—that she represented on the trial before the court of claims, with their consent, all the parties interested in the claim of S. Smith & Buchanan, including those who now claim in opposition to her so far as the proportion of the award to be paid to the different parties is concerned. That she represented these different persons, with their consent, in the examination before the court of claims, shows that there was between them at that time no diverse interest involved; that, so far as regarded the validity of the whole claim and its amount, the parties were situated alike, and had the same interest as against the United States in proving the validity of their claim and the amount thereof. That she was authorized to receive the amount that might be awarded, and that thereafter the question of proportion and distribution would arise, is a plain deduction from the facts stated. As the material point before the court of claims was the validity of the claim and its amount, in regard to which all claimants appeared in the same interest, it was not of much moment who should be named to receive the award (if any were to be made), and therefore the statement by the court that Esther S. Buchanan was the administratrix of William B. Buchanan, the survivor of the firm, was not calculated to call for any comment, for the reason, as stated, that the appropriation would be to [364] a *representative of the next of kin, the individual members of which might be thereafter identified. The history given by the 190 U. S.

court of claims was, upon the question of ownership, just enough to form a basis for an appropriation to some one, who would thereupon distribute to the proper persons among themselves. The reports of the court were not intended as an identification of such persons.

After the report of the court of claims to Congress, Miss Buchanan had, in 1891, taken out letters of administration upon the estate of James A. Buchanan. Soon after the passage of the act of 1899 she obtained the certificates already referred to from the court of claims, in one of which, in regard to the ship Jane, it was stated that she "represents the next of kin of William B. Buchanan, the surviving member of the firm of Samuel Smith & Buchanan, deceased, the original owners of the claim upon which said award was made," and in the other certificate, in regard to the ship Patapsco, it was stated that she "represents the next of kin of William B. Buchanan, surviving partner, etc., deceased, the original owner of the claim upon which said award was made." These certificates obviously proceeded upon the report which the court had theretofore made in these two cases, and in which it is plain that the court reported the fact that the members of the firm of S. Smith & Buchanan, as that firm was constituted in 1798, were the original sufferers of the loss in 1798. It is also plain that the court assumed that the William B. Buchanan named in the certificate was a member of the firm in 1798, which suffered the loss, and it was to the administratrix of the survivor of that firm (1798) that the certificate in truth applied. This simply carried out the purpose of the court, expressly stated in this case, to insist that the decedent whose estate was administered was the same person who suffered loss through the capture of a vessel. In the certificates, as well as in the report of the court of claims, it is evident that the court assumed that the persons entitled to the distributive share of the moneys were the next of kin of the original sufferers, whoever they might turn out to be, although the court supposed that William B. Buchanan was the survivor of the firm that suffered the loss in 1798.

*The case of United States v. Gilliat, 164 [365] U. S. 42, 41 L. ed. 344, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 16, simply holds that, under the special statute therein referred to, the certificate made by the court of claims and sent to the Secretary of the Treasury was conclusive, and the United States had no right of appeal from the conclusion stated in the certificate.

In this case, the court of claims thought there were three members of the firm of S. Smith & Buchanan at the time of these captures. In the 4th finding, in regard to the ship Patapsco, the court reported that "John Donnell and the firm of S. Smith & Buchanan owned jointly the cotton shipped on that vessel, and that Samuel Smith, James A. Buchanan, and William B. Buchanan, citizens of the United States, formed the said firm of S. Smith & Buchanan;" that is, formed the firm at the time of the capture in 1798; and in the 10th finding the court found that on November 9, 1820, "said Samuel Smith, James A. Buchanan, and William B. Buchanan, copartners, and trading as hereinbefore set forth as copartners, under the firm name of S. Smith & Buchanan, assigned" to assignees for the benefit of their creditors. Thus the court assumed that the firm consisted of the same members in 1798 and in 1820, and that William B. Buchanan was the survivor. This is clearly a mistake. William B. Buchanan was born in 1795, and was then, at the time of these captures, but three years old, and was not a member of the firm at that time, as the state court finds. But clearly the court of claims had reference to the firm as it was composed when the losses occurred, whoever in fact were then the members of that firm.

There is nothing in its report which would show that it regarded William B. Buchanan as one of the original sufferers because of his being a member of the firm of 1818, of S. Smith & Buchanan. The whole history of the case as given by the court shows that William B. Buchanan was mistakenly supposed to have been a member of the firm in 1798, and it was on that account that he was regarded as the survivor of that firm. Whatever equity the parties might claim on account of William B. Buchanan becoming a member of the firm in 1818, it is plain that those equities were not regarded or known or supposed to exist by the court of claims.

[366] *Taking this report of the court of claims, it seems to us evident that the appropriations for the payment of the claims made by the act of 1899 (30 Stat. at L. 1194, 1195, chap. 426) proceeded upon the report made by that court to Congress in these cases, and that the language of that act, in the case of the ship Jane, to "Esther S. Buchanan, administratrix, representing Smith & Buchanan, $11,660.21," and in the case of the ship Patapsco, "Esther S. Buchanan, administratrix of the estate of William B. Buchanan, who was the surviving partner of S. Smith & Buchanan, deceased, $25,056, the value of the cargo shipped by said firm," when taken in connection with the other facts as to the firm of 1798, shows that the appropriation was intended for the administratrix of the survivor of the original firm existing in 1798, at the time the losses occurred, and that the next of kin of the members of that firm at that time were in reality the parties intended by Congress to receive its gratuity. It was not within the intention of Congress to determine by the appropriation who those persons were, but the appropriation was to Esther S. Buchanan as a representative of the class; in other words, the representative of the next of kin of the original sufferers, without therein determining who they were. The intent of Congress to make the payment in each case to the representative of those who were next of kin of the original sufferers, or, in other words, of the firm as it stood in 1798, we think is perfectly certain. Whoever they might be, Congress intended the payment to be for those who were the next of kin, and it did not conclude the fact as to who they were, by appropriating the money to Esther S. Buchanan. It was to be for her as the representative of the next of kin of the original sufferers.

1098

Congress could, of course, have given this fund to anyone it chose, as it was a case of gratuity, in any event; but the question is, What did Congress, in fact, mean when it made the appropriation in the act of 1899? and that meaning, we feel convinced, was as we have already stated.

The cases of United States v. Jordan, 113 U. S. 418, 28 L. ed. 1013, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585; United States v. Price, 116 U. S. 43, 29 L. ed. 541, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 235, and United States v. Louisville Sinking Fund Comrs. 169 U. S. 249, 42 L. ed. 735, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 358, are not in conflict with this result. In those cases the *appropriation[367] was to the party named in the act, and a specific sum was directed to be paid to such party. It was not a payment to him in trust for some other and unidentified members of a class to which he belonged, but it was a positive and absolute direction by Congress to pay to the individual named in the act the amount stated therein. In such cases there is no subject for identification of the members of any class and no occasion for the further action of anyone before payment is to be made.

In the case at bar, it is clear that the party named in the appropriation was not entitled to the money absolutely as her own. It was an appropriation to her for the benefit of others, herself included, and those others were identified only as a class, and that class was intended as the next of kin of the firm of S. Smith & Buchanan as it existed in 1798.

Having obtained payment of the sum appropriated by Congress, the plaintiff in error, Esther S. Buchanan, came into a court of equity and asked to have the fund distributed under its authority. She stated all the facts, and while claiming the right to share in the distribution of the money in her character as one of the next of kin of William B. Buchanan, yet she still submitted the whole question as to the proper distribution to the court. The court had jurisdiction to determine as to the real meaning and the proper construction of the act of Congress, and the highest court of that state, upon appeal from the trial court, has held in substance that it appears that there were but two members of the firm in 1798, and it accordingly decided that the intent of Congress was clearly to make the gift to the next of kin of the members of the firm in 1798, which would result in giving one half to the next of kin of S. Smith and the other one half to the next of kin of James A. Buchanan, among whom are found Esther S. Buchanan and her brother, Wilson C. Buchanan.

We see no error in the decree of the Mary*land Court of Appeals, and it is, for the reasons stated, affirmed.*
190 U. S.

[368]*JOHNSON BLACKFEATHER, the Principal Chief of the Shawnee Tribe of Indians, etc., Appt.,

v.

UNITED STATES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 368-379.)

Jurisdiction of court of claims—rights of individual Shawnee Indians.

Jurisdiction over the claims of individual members of the Shawnee tribe of Indians was not included in the grant of jurisdiction to the court of claims by the act of October 1, 1890 (26 Stat. at L. 636, chap. 1249), to hear and determine the rights of the Shawnee Indians to moneys, lands, and rights which may be due to "the said Shawnees" under the treaty of July 19, 1866 (14 Stat. at L. 803), between the United States and the Cherokee Nation, and under articles of agreement between such nation and the Shawnees, Delawares, and Cherokee freedmen, and to moneys due from the United States "to said tribes in reimbursement of their tribal fund for money wrongfully diverted therefrom;" nor was such jurisdiction conferred by the act of July 6, 1892 (27 Stat. at L. 86, chap. 151), enlarging the scope of the earlier act so as to include all claims of "the Shawnee tribe or band . . . arising out of treaty relations with the United States, rights growing out of such treaties, and from contracts, expressed or implied, under such treaties."

[No. 276.]

Submitted April 28, 1903. Decided June 1, 1903.

A PPEAL from the Court of Claims to review a judgment sustaining a demurrer to a petition by a Shawnee Indian to recover a sum of money from the United States. Affirmed.

See same case below, 37 Ct. Cl. 233.

Statement by Mr. Justice Peckham:

The petitioner filed his amended petition in the court of claims in August, 1892, in which he asked to recover from the United States over five hundred and thirty thousand dollars on the grounds therein set forth. There was a demurrer to the amended petition, by the United States, on the ground that it did not allege facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action. The demurrer was sustained, and the plaintiff has appealed to this court.

In his petition the petitioner represents himself as a Shawnee Indian by blood and descent, a member and the principal chief of the Shawnee Tribe or Nation, and residing in the Indian territory. He states that

NOTE.—On suits by Indians—see note to Missouri P. R. Co. v. Cullers (Tex.) 13 L. R. A. 542.

On Indians and Indian tribes generally—see note to Worcester v. Georgia, 8 L. ed. U. S. 483. 190 U. S.

he brings suit in the court of claims as such principal chief of such Shawnee Tribe or Nation under the provisions of two acts of Congress, the first of which is entitled "An Act to Refer to the Court of Claims Certain Claims of the Shawnee and Delaware Indians and the Freedmen of the Cherokee Nation, and for Other Purposes," approved October 1, 1890 (26 Stat. at L. 636, chap. 1249), and the second entitled "An Act Supplementary*and Amendatory to an Act Entitled 'An Act to Refer to the Court of Claims Certain Claims of the Shawnee and Delaware Indians and the Freedmen of the Cherokee Nation, and for Other Purposes,' Approved October 1, 1890, Approved July 6, 1892" (27 Stat. at L. 86, chap. 151). These acts are set out in the margin.†

*The petitioner asks to recover and collect [370] from the United States the several amounts

†Act of 1890 (26 Stat. at L. 636, chap. 1249).

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That full jurisdiction is hereby conferred upon the court of claims, subject to an appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States as in other cases, to hear and determine what are the just rights in law or in equity of the Shawnee and Delaware Indians, who are settled and incorporated into the Cherokee Nation, Indian territory, east of ninety-six degrees west longitude, under the provisions of article fifteen of the treaty of July nineteenth, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, made by and between the United States and the Cherokee Nation, and articles of agreement made by and between the Cherokee Nation and the Shawnee Indians, June seventh, eighteen hundred and sixty-nine, approved by the President June ninth, eighteen hundred and sixty-nine, and articles of agreement made with the Delaware Indians April eighth, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven; and also of the Cherokee freedmen, who are settled and located in the Cherokee Nation, under the provisions and stipulations of article nine of the aforesaid treaty of eighteen hundred and sixty-six, in respect to the subject-matter herein provided for.

Sec. 2. That the said Shawnees, Delawares, and freedmen shall have a right, either separately or jointly, to begin and prosecute a suit or suits against the Cherokee Nation and the United States government to recover from the Cherokee Nation all moneys due, either in law or equity, and unpaid to the said Shawnees, Delawares, or freedmen, which the Cherokee Nation have before paid out, or may hereafter pay, per capita, in the Cherokee Nation, and which was, or may be, refused or neglected to be paid to the said Shawnees, Delawares, or freedmen by the Cherokee Nation out of any moneys or funds which have or may be paid into the treasury of, or in any way have come, or may come, into the possession of, the Cherokee Nation, Indian territory, derived from the sale, leasing, or rent for grazing purposes on Cherokee lands west of ninety-six degrees west longitude, and which have been, or may be, appropriated and directed to be paid out per capita by the acts passed by the Cherokee Council, and for all moneys, lands, and rights which shall appear to be due to the said Shawnees, Delawares, or freedmen under the provisions of the aforesaid articles of treaty and articles of agreement.

Sec. 3. That the said suit or suits may be brought in the name of the principal chief or chiefs of the said Shawnee and Delaware Indians, and for the of money thereafter set out at length in payment for the destruction, loss, forcible taking, carrying, and driving away of live stock, farm products, household goods, money, and other personal property of divers descriptions and kinds belonging to, owned, and possessed by, and the property of, the said Shawnee Indians, by white and United States citizens and soldiers, in the state of Kansas and the Indian territory, at divers times and places in the year 1861, and all the time up to and including the year 1866. Reference is then made to a schedule which is made part of the petition, and in which appear the names of between three and four hundred Indians, and the schedule gives their individual claims, varying in amounts from as high as $7,000 down to $75, and aggregating $530,945.14.

It is contended that the claims arise out of treaty relations with the United States (mentioned in the foregoing acts of Congress), [371] *particularly articles 11 and 14 of the treaty of May 10, 1854 (10 Stat. at L. 1053, 1057), between the United States and the Indians, and also out of §§ 2154 and 2155 of the Revised Statutes of the United States. The articles of the treaty are as follows:

"Article 11. It being represented that many of the Shawnees have sustained damage in the loss and destruction of their crops, stock, and other property, and otherwise, by reason of the great emigration which has for several years passed through their country, and of other causes, in violation, as they allege, of guarantees made for their protection by the United States, it is agreed that there shall be paid in consideration thereof, to the Shawnees, the sum of twenty-seven thousand dollars, which shall be taken and considered in full satisfaction, not only of such claim, but of all others of what kind soever, and in release of all demands and stipulations arising under former treaties, with the exception of the perpetual annuities, amounting to three thousand dollars, hereinbefore named and which*are set apart and appropriated in [372] the third article hereof. All Shawnees who have sustained damage by the emigration of citizens of the United States, or by other acts of such citizens, shall, within six months after the ratification of this treaty, file their claims for such damages with the Shawnee agent, to be submitted by him to the Shawnee council, for their action and decision, and the amount in each case approved shall be paid by said agent: Provided, The whole amount of claims thus approved shall not exceed the said sum stipulated for in this article. And provided, That if such amount shall exceed that sum, then a reduction shall be made pro rata from each claim until the aggregate is lowered to that amount. If less than that amount be adjudged to be due, the residue, it is agreed, shall be appropriated as the council shall direct."

"Article 14. The Shawnees acknowledge their dependence on the government of the United States, and invoke its protection and care. They will abstain from the commission of depredations and comply, as far as they are able, with the laws in such cases freedmen, and in their behalf and for their use in the name of some person as their trustee, to be selected by them with the approval of the Secretary of the Interior. And the exercise of such jurisdiction shall not be barred by any lapse of time heretofore, nor shall the rights of such Indians be impaired by any acts passed and approved by the Cherokee National Council. Suits may be instituted within twelve months after the passage of this act, and the law and practice and rules of procedure in such courts shall be the practice and law in these cases; and copies of the petitions filed in the case at the commencement of the suit shall be served upon the Attorney General of the United States, and on the principal chief of the Cherokee Nation, by the marshal of the district court for the Indian territory; and that the costs of the said suits shall be apportioned between the United States and the other parties to such suits as to said court, law and equity shall require. The Attorney General shall designate and appoint from the Department of Justice a person who is competent to defend the said Cherokee Nation and the United States. And the said Shawnees, Delawares, and freedmen may be represented by attorneys and counsel. And the court is hereby authorized to decree the amount of compensation of such attorneys, and counsel fees, not to exceed ten per centum of the amount recovered, and order the same to be paid to the attorneys and counsel of the said Shawnees, Delawares, and freedmen; and all judgments for any sum or sums of moneys which may be ordered or decreed by such court in favor of the Shawnees, Delawares, or freedmen, and against the Cherokee Nation, shall be enforced by the said court or courts against the said Cherokee Nation by execution, mandamus, or in any other way which the said court may see fit.

Sec. 4. That the said Shawnee Indians are hereby authorized and empowered to bring and begin a suit in law or equity against the United States government in the court of claims, to recover and collect from the United States government any amount of money that in law or equity is due from the United States to said tribes in reimbursement of their tribal fund for money wrongfully diverted therefrom. The right to appeal, jurisdiction of the court, process, procedure, and proceedings in the suit here provided for shall be as provided for in sections one, two, and three of this act.

Act of 1892 (27 Stat. at L. 86, chap. 151).

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Shawnee tribe or band of Indians, whose claims and demands against the Cherokee Nation and the United States were referred to the United States court of claims for adjudication under the act of Congress passed and approved October first, eighteen hundred and ninety, entitled "An Act to Refer to the Court of Claims Certain Claims of the Shawnee and Delaware Indians and the Freedmen of the Cherokee Nation, and for Other Purposes," shall present to the said court all their claims against the United States and the Cherokee Nation, or against either or both of them, of every description whatsoever, arising out of treaty relations with the United States, rights growing out of such treaties, and from contracts, expressed or implied, under such treaties, made and entered into by and between the said Shawnees and Cherokees, and between them, or either of them, and the United States.

made and provided, as they will expect to be protected and to have their rights vindicated."

Section 2154 of the Revised Statutes, which is part of the act of June 30, 1834 (4 Stat. at L. 731, chap. 161), reads as follows:

"Sec. 2154. Whenever, in the commission, by a white person, of any crime, offense, or misdemeanor, within the Indian country, the property of any friendly Indian is taken, injured, or destroyed, and a conviction is had for such crime, offense, or misdemeanor, the person so convicted shall be sentenced to pay such friendly Indian to whom the property may belong, or whose person may be injured, a sum equal to twice the just value of the property so taken, injured, or destroyed."

Section 2155 of the Revised Statutes, which is also part of the act of June 30, 1834 (4 Stat. at L. 731, chap. 161), reads as follows:

"Sec. 2155. If such offender shall be unable to pay a sum at least equal to the just value or amount, whatever such payment shall fall short of the same shall be paid out of the Treasury of the United States. If such offender cannot be apprehended and brought to trial, the amount of such property shall be paid out of the Treasury. But [373] no Indian shall be entitled to any *payment out of the Treasury of the United States for any such property if he, or any of the nation to which he belongs, have sought private revenge, or have attempted to obtain satisfaction by any force or violence."

It is also stated that, at the time the property was taken, the Indians were in amity with, and had always been loyal to, the United States. Judgment was asked in favor of the Indians mentioned for the respective sums set opposite their names, and that 10 per centum of the amount might be allowed the attorneys for their services.

Messrs. John C. Chaney and Alphonso Hart submitted the cause for appellant.

Assistant Attorney General Pradt and Mr. William H. Button submitted the cause for appellee.

Mr. Justice Peckham, after making the foregoing statement of facts, delivered the opinion of the court:

The duty of this court is simply to construe the acts of Congress of 1890 and 1892. The court of claims has no jurisdiction of the subject-matter of this petition, unless it is conferred by one or the other of the above acts. The moral obligations of the government toward the Indians, whatever they may be, are for Congress alone to recognize, and the courts can exercise only such jurisdiction over the subject as Congress may confer upon them.

Upon examination of the act of 1890, it appears that jurisdiction is conferred upon the court of claims to hear and determine what are the just rights in law or in equity of the Shawnee and Delaware Indians, who are settled and incorporated into the Cherokee Nation, under the provisions of article 15 of the treaty of 1866 (14 Stat. at L. 803) between the United States and the Cherokee Nation, and also under articles of agreement between the Cherokee Nation and the Shawnee Indians, made June 7, 1869, and articles of agreement made with the Delaware Indians, April 8, 1867, and also of the Cherokee freedmen settled, etc., under provisions of article 9 of the treaty of 1866.

*The language of the 1st section, in our [374] opinion, confers jurisdiction upon the court of claims to hear and determine the rights in law or equity of the tribes of the Shawnee or Delaware Indians, arising out of the subject-matter provided for in the subsequent parts of the act, and there is no grant of jurisdiction to hear or determine the rights of individual members of those tribes. It is true the statute speaks of the Shawnee and Delaware Indians, but the words "Shawnee and Delaware Indians" mean the tribes, and not individual members of those tribes of Indians. The rights must be those which arise out of the subject-matter which is referred to in §§ 2, 3, and 4 of the act. This is stated in terms in the 1st section. The subsequent sections of the act show, as we think, that Indian tribes, and not individual members thereof, are intended. And no jurisdiction is granted to hear claims such as are included in this case, whether they are made by tribes or by individual members of a tribe.

The 2d section permits a suit against the Cherokee Nation and the United States government to recover from the Cherokee Nation moneys due and unpaid to the Shawnees, etc., which the Cherokee Nation have before paid out, or may hereafter pay per capita in the Cherokee Nation, and which the Cherokee Nation had refused or neglected to pay to the other Indians. The suits are in reality against the Cherokee Nation, and the recovery is from that nation. The separate or joint suit mentioned in this section is a separate or joint suit of the tribes and of the freedmen, and not of the individual members thereof. In either event, it does not include such a case as this.

Section 3 permits the bringing of "the said suit or suits" in the name of the principal chief or chiefs of the said Shawnee and Delaware Indians, and for the freedmen, in their behalf and for their use, in the name of some person as their trustee, to be selected by them with the approval of the Secretary of the Interior. The exercise of this jurisdiction is not to be barred by any lapse of time heretofore, nor are the rights of the Indians to be impaired by any acts passed and approved by the Cherokee National Council. The right given by the 3d section is to commence a suit or suits which had already *been spoken [375] of in the 2d section of the act. The 2d section gave no right to commence this suit, as we have seen. Neither section includes the rights of individual Indians.

A perusal of § 4 shows that the right to bring a suit against the United States, therein provided for, was limited to the purpose of collecting from the United States government any amount of money that in law or equity may be due from the United States "to said tribes in reimbursement of their tribal fund for money wrongfully diverted therefrom." We think that individual Indians had no right to commence such an action as this under the act of 1890, even though it be assumed that the tribe had such right under that act for the recovery of the value of property taken from the tribe. Such a suit as the one before us is plainly not included in the grant of jurisdiction in this section.

By the act of 1892, it is provided that "the Shawnee tribe or band of Indians, whose claims and demands against the Cherokee Nation and the United States were referred to the United States court of claims for adjudication" (under the act of 1890), "shall present to the said court all their claims against the United States and the Cherokee Nation," etc.

The result is that this act does not grant jurisdiction to the court of claims to hear and decide the questions arising under this petition. The grant of jurisdiction is to hear and determine all the claims of the Shawnee tribe or band of Indians.

The claims are those of a tribe or band, and not those of the individual members of the Shawnee tribe or band. The reference in the act of 1892 shows that Congress assumed that, whatever their nature, it was the claims of the Shawnee tribe or band that had been referred to the court of claims for adjudication by the act of 1890, and not claims of the individual members thereof. The act of 1892 enlarges the scope of the act of 1890 so as to include all claims of the tribe or band, instead of claims of the nature provided for in §§ 2, 3, and 4 of the act of 1890, but the claims must be claims of a band, and not of an individual.

These acts have been before this court on a previous occasion.

[376] *In United States v. Blackfeather, 155 U. S. 180, 194, 39 L. ed. 114, 119, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 64, 70, Mr. Justice Brown, speaking for the court, said:

"While there may be a moral obligation on the part of the government to reimburse the money embezzled by the Indian superintendent, and, in fact, an appropriation appears to have been made for that purpose (Act of July 7, 1884, chap. 334, 23 Stat. at L. 236, 247), it is by no means clear that, under the acts of 1890 and 1892, the Shawnees were authorized to recover and collect from the government any other moneys than those which they claimed in their tribal relation or capacity. The money in question is not due the tribe as such, but to certain individual orphans, who claim to have been defrauded. But whether this be so or not, there is nothing in the record to indicate how much of this money was embezzled by the guardians created by the Indian council, and how much by the Indian superintendent, so that there is in reality no basis for a decree in their favor."

While the question in issue here was, as is seen, not decided in the above case, yet the expression contained in the opinion shows the court was not prepared to hold that the acts embraced claims of individual Indians.

As these statutes extend the jurisdiction of the court of claims and permit the government to be sued for causes of action therein referred to, the grant of jurisdiction must be shown clearly to cover the case before us, and if it do not, it will not be implied. Statutes of this nature extending the right to sue the government will generally be strictly construed. We concur with the following remarks of Judge Weldon, contained in the opinion delivered by him in this case in the court of claims:

"The act of 1892 seems to have been enacted for the purpose of enlarging the scope of the right given under the act of 1890. But is it sufficiently broad to embrace the individual right of each Indian who may have suffered a depredation at the hands of the persons alleged?"

"The statute [1890] is entitled 'An Act to Refer to the Court of Claims Certain Claims of the Shawnee and Delaware Indians and the Freedmen of the Cherokee Nation, and for Other Purposes,' and provides, in substance, that they shall present to the *said [377] court all their claims against the United States and the Cherokee Nation, or against either or both of them, of any description whatsoever, arising out of treaty relations with the United States, rights growing out of such treaties, and from contracts, expressed or implied, under such treaties, made and entered into by and between the said Shawnees and Cherokees, and between them, or either of them, and the United States.

"The right to sue, by the phraseology of this statute, is in the assertion of rights growing out of treaties, and for contracts, expressed or implied, under treaties made and entered into by and between the said Shawnees, Cherokees, and the United States. Can it be said that there has been a treaty, a contract, expressed or implied, between the United States and the individual Indians, who, through the medium of the principal chief, are now prosecuting these claims?"

"The attention of the court is called to the 14th article [of the treaty of 1854], which provides that 'the Shawnees acknowledge their dependence on the government of the United States, and invoke its protection and care. They will abstain from the commission of depredations and comply, as far as they are able, with the laws in such cases made and provided, as they will expect to be protected and to have their rights vindicated.' Does this phraseology establish contractual or treaty relations, having the effect of contracts, with each individual Indian composing the Shawnee tribe? Or, rather, is it not a general clause, limited in its effect to the parties to the treaty, to wit, the United States on one side and the Shawnee tribe upon the other?"

"The plaintiff, by the allegations of the petition, has asserted an individual obligation existing between the United States and each of the claimants, and, in order to recover, it must appear that such a relation exists.

"The United States, as the guardian of the Indians, deal with the nation, tribe, or band, and have never, so far as is known to the court, entered into contracts, either expressed or implied, compacts, or treaties with individual Indians so as to embrace within the purview of such contract or undertaking the personal rights of individual Indians.

[378] *"The acts of Congress referred to by the allegations of the petition and the argument of counsel for the claimant are not applicable to the claim made by this petition. The condition upon which remuneration to the Indian is to be made under § 2154, Revised Statutes, is not shown to exist in this case. And so it may be said of § 2155 of Revised Statutes, that the condition upon which the Indian is entitled to remuneration out of the Treasury is not shown to exist in the claims made in this proceeding.

"The act of 1892 specifies that the Shawnee tribe or band of Indians, whose claims and demands against the Cherokee Nation and the United States were referred to the United States court of claims for adjudication under the act of Congress passed and approved October 1, 1890, shall present to said court all their claims against the United States. The claims referred to this court under the act of 1890 were the claims of the Shawnee tribe or band of Indians, and not the personal claims of the individual Indians belonging to said tribe or band of Shawnees.

"The evident object of the act of 1892 was to enlarge the jurisdiction of this court with reference to the same class of claims as were cognizable under the act of 1890, to wit, the claims of the Shawnee tribe or band of Indians."

We think it clear that no jurisdiction over this case is granted by the language of the sections of the Revised Statutes above referred to.

We see nothing in the act, approved May 9, 1860 (12 Stat. at L. 15, chap. 40), appropriating moneys for the payment of "claims of certain members of the Shawnee tribe of Indians," which affects the conclusion we have reached that the acts of 1890 and 1892 refer to tribes, and not individuals. The act of 1860 appropriates, in terms, money to pay claims of certain members of the tribe. It is apparent that when Congress intends to include individuals as distinct from tribes, it does not speak of them as Shawnee Indians, but as "certain members" of the Shawnee tribe.

Congress may, of course, at its pleasure, still confer jurisdiction upon the court of claims in such terms as shall, without *doubt, cover claims of the nature set forth in this record. In our judgment it has not done so as yet. The judgment of the Court of Claims must be affirmed.

190 U. S.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, Complainant,

v.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, Defendant.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 379-406.)

Ship canal surplus—state ownership of—charged with trust in favor of United States—laches.

1. Surplus moneys over and above the cost of the ship canal at Saint Marys Falls, arising from sales of the public lands granted by the act of August 26, 1852 (10 Stat. at L. 35, chap. 92), to the state of Michigan in aid of its construction on a right of way therein granted to the state for that purpose, and any surplus tolls remaining after the formal transfer of such canal to the United States, and all the tools and machinery on hand at the time of such transfer, must be deemed to be held in trust by the state for the United States, in view of the provision of such act, which was accepted by the state subject to all its conditions, by Mich. act February 5, 1853, that the tolls which the state might charge were to be only such, after it was repaid for the cost, as should be sufficient to pay the necessary expenses for the care, charge, and repairs.
2. The ownership by the state of Michigan of surplus tolls and surplus moneys arising from sales of public lands granted by the act of August 26, 1852 (10 Stat. at L. 35, chap. 92), in aid of the construction of a ship canal at Saint Marys Falls, and of the tools and machinery belonging thereto, was not acknowledged to be free from the trust in favor of the United States created by the acceptance by the state, through Mich. act February 5, 1853, of the conditions of such grant, by the offer of the United States, under the act of June 14, 1880 (21 Stat. at L. 189, chap. 211), to accept a transfer of the canal without liability for debts or claims in regard thereto; nor was the liability of such state as trustee altered by its attempt, in accepting such offer through Mich. Pub. Acts 1881, act No. 17, to impose the condition upon its payment of such moneys and its transfer of materials belonging to the canal that the United States should build a dry dock to be operated in connection therewith.
3. Laches is no defense to a suit by the United States to compel the state of Michigan to account for surplus moneys over and above the cost of the ship canal at Saint Marys Falls, arising from sales of the public lands granted by the act of August 26, 1852 (10 Stat. at L. 35, chap. 92), to that state in aid of its construction on a right of way therein granted to the state for that purpose, and for any surplus tolls remaining after the formal transfer of such canal to the United States, and for all tools and machinery on hand at the time of such transfer.

[No. 11, Original.]

Argued April 20, 21, 1903. Decided June 1, 1903.

DEMURRER to an original bill in equity filed by the United States to compel the NOTE.—That the statute of limitations does not run against the state—see note to Gibson v. Chouteau, 20 L. ed. U. S. 534.

state of Michigan to account for surplus moneys in the Saint Marys Falls ship canal fund, and for tools and machinery belonging to such canal. Overruled and leave to answer given.

Statement by Mr. Justice Peckham:

The United States, by leave of court, duly filed in this court its original bill in equity against the state of Michigan, to which bill the defendant has filed a demurrer substantially for want of equity, and also because it appears therefrom that the complainant has been guilty of gross laches in regard to the matters therein set forth. It will be most convenient to set forth the bill, with the exception of some portions thereof which do not seem to be material, and it is as follows:

"To the Chief Justice and the Associate Justices of the Supreme Court of the United States, in Equity:

[380] "Philander C. Knox, Attorney General of the United States of America, for and in behalf of said United States, brings this *bill of complaint against the state of Michigan, and thereupon your orator complains and says:

"First.

"That the said state of Michigan, for some years previous to the date first herein-after mentioned, was desirous of procuring the construction of a canal and lock in the Saint Marys river, at or near Saint Marys falls, where Lake Superior empties into said river, and did at various times, by joint resolutions of the legislature thereof, importune the Congress of the United States to construct such a canal and lock on the Michigan side of said river, and was able, through the influence of its senators and representatives in Congress from said state, with the co-operation and influence of other states which might become directly affected in a desirable manner, to cause and procure said Congress to pass a law, which became operative on the 26th day of August, 1852, appropriating to the state of Michigan 750,000 acres of land, to be afterwards selected, to construct such ship canal and lock. Said act is in terms as follows:

"Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That there be, and is hereby, granted to said state the right of locating a canal through the public lands known as the military reservation at the falls at Saint Marys river in said state, and that four hundred feet of land in width, extending along the line of such canal, be, and the same is hereby, granted, to be used by said state, or under the authority thereof, for the construction and convenience of such canal, and the appurtenances thereto and the use thereof is hereby vested in said state forever for the purposes aforesaid and no other: Provided, That in locating the line of said canal through said military reservation the same shall be located on the line of the survey heretofore made for that purpose, or such other route between the waters above and below said falls as, under the approval of the Secretary of War, may be selected. And provided further, That said canal shall be at least one hundred feet wide, with a depth of water *twelve feet, [381] and the locks shall be at least two hundred and fifty feet long and sixty feet wide.

"Sec. 2. And be it further enacted, That there be, and hereby is, granted to the said state of Michigan, for the purpose of aiding said state in constructing and completing said canal, seven hundred and fifty thousand acres of public lands, to be selected in subdivisions, agreeably to the United States surveys, by an agent or agents, to be appointed by the governor of said state, subject to the approval of the Secretary of the Interior, from any lands within said state subject to private entry.

"Sec. 3. And be it further enacted, That the said lands hereby granted shall be subject to the disposal of the legislature of said state for the purposes aforesaid and no other; and the said canal shall be and remain a public highway for the use of the government of the United States, free from toll or other charge upon the vessels of said government engaged in the public service, or upon vessels employed by said government in the transportation of any property or troops of the United States.

"Sec. 4. And be it further enacted, That if the said canal shall not be commenced within three, and completed within ten, years, the said state of Michigan shall be bound to pay to the United States the amount which may be received upon the sale of any part of said lands by said state, not less than one dollar and twenty-five cents per acre, the title to the purchasers under said state remaining valid.

"Sec. 5. And be it further enacted, That the legislature of said state shall cause to be kept an accurate account of the sales and net proceeds of the lands hereby granted, and of all expenditures in the construction, repairs, and operating of said canal, and of the earnings thereof, and shall return a statement of the same annually to the Secretary of the Interior; and whenever said state shall be fully reimbursed for all advances made for the construction, repairs, and operating of said canal, with legal interest on all advances until the reimbursement of the same, or upon payment by the United States of any balance of such advances over such receipts from said lands and canal, with such interest, the said state shall be allowed to tax for the use of said canal *only such tolls as shall be sufficient [382] to pay all necessary expenses for the care, charge, and repairs of the same.

"Sec. 6. And be it further enacted, That before it shall be competent for said state to dispose of any of the lands to be selected as aforesaid, the route of said canal shall be established as aforesaid, and a plat or plats thereof shall be filed in the office of the War Department, and a duplicate thereof in the office of the Commissioner of the General Land Office.

"Approved, August 26, 1852.' [10 Stat. at L. 35, chap. 92.]

"And your orator further shows that the legislature of the state of Michigan afterwards passed an act providing for the construction of a ship canal around the falls of Saint Mary, the same being number thirty-eight of the session laws of the state of Michigan for the year 1853. By this act the appropriation of land made by Congress as aforesaid was accepted, with all conditions therein expressed attached, and made obligatory upon the state of Michigan. By its said act, also, the governor was authorized to appoint a board of five commissioners and an engineer for the purpose of looking after the construction of said canal and lock; provisions were made relative to the contract proposed to be entered into for the construction of the canal; the expenses of surveying, locating, and constructing the same; the manner in which the expenses attendant upon such construction should be paid, which was substantially out of the lands so appropriated by Congress; the keeping of accounts connected with such construction; the turning out of lands to the contractor and subcontractor; and other matters connected with such work, such act being in terms as follows:

"Section 1. The People of the State of Michigan enact, That the act of Congress entitled "An Act Granting to the State of Michigan the Right of Way and a Donation of Public Land for the Construction of a Ship Canal around the Falls of Saint Mary, in Said State," approved August 26, 1852, is hereby accepted, and all conditions expressed in said act are hereby agreed to and made obligatory upon the state of Michigan.

[383] "Sec. 2. For the purpose of carrying out the objects of said act the governor is hereby authorized, by and with the advice and consent of the senate, to appoint five commissioners and an engineer, *who shall prepare a plan for the construction of said canal in conformity with the provisions of said act of Congress and this act, to be approved by the governor, and who shall have the entire and absolute control and supervision of the construction of said canal.

"Sec. 3. The said commissioners shall receive proposals for the construction of said canal, agreeable to said plan, and, in deciding upon said proposals, are required to take into consideration the responsibility of the person or persons offering to contract for the same, and his or their ability to carry into effect the object and intention of said act of Congress, by constructing said canal in the best and most expeditious manner; and said commissioners, in making said contract, shall require good and ample security for the performance thereof.

"Sec. 5. . . . The cost of locating the said canal, and all expenses of every kind incidental to the supervision of the construction and completion of said canal, shall be reimbursed by the contractors as fast as ascertained, and shall be paid by them into the state treasury, and under the direction of said commissioners. When and as fast as the lands shall have been selected and located, an accurate description thereof, certified by the persons appointed to select the same, shall be filed in the office of the commissioner of the state land office, whose duty it shall be to transmit to the Commissioner of the General Land Office a true copy of said list, and to designate and mark upon the books and plats in his office the said lands as Saint Mary canal lands.

"Sec. 6. The commissioners shall require said canal to be constructed and completed within two years from making the contract; and, on the completion of the same within said period to their satisfaction and acceptance, and the satisfaction of the governor and engineer, they shall have a certificate thereof, to be signed by the commissioners, governor, and engineer, and filed in the office of the commissioner of the state land office. Thereupon it shall be the duty of the said commissioner of the state land office forthwith to make certificates of purchase for so much of said lands as by the terms of the contract for *the construction[384] of said canal are to be conveyed for the purpose of defraying its costs and the expenses hereinbefore provided, which certificates shall run to such persons and for such portions of said lands so selected and to be conveyed as the contractor may designate, and shall forthwith be delivered to the Secretary of State, and patents shall immediately be issued thereon, as in other cases.

"Sec. 7. That said commissioners shall keep an accurate account of the sales and net proceeds of the lands granted by said act of Congress, and of all expenditures in the construction of said canal, and the earnings thereof, and on or before the first Monday in October in each year return a statement thereof to the governor, whose duty it shall be to return the same, or a copy thereof, to the Secretary of the Interior, at Washington, as required by said act of Congress.

"Sec. 9. For the selection of the lands granted by Congress, as aforesaid, for the construction of said canal, the governor shall appoint agents, in pursuance of said act. He shall give notice to the person or persons contracting under this act to construct said canal, to recommend to him suitable persons to make such selections; and he shall appoint such agents from the persons so recommended, if, in his judgment, suitable and proper persons for that purpose.

"Approved, February 5, 1853."

"Second.

"Your orator shows that the lands so appropriated were duly selected and certified to the state of Michigan, and that he is informed and verily believes, and so charges the fact to be, that the lands so appropriated were all sold and disposed of in some manner by the state of Michigan, and that at some time subsequent to such selection and certification said state of Michigan constructed, or caused to be constructed, and put into operation, the canal and lock so appropriated for, but that the said state of Michigan did not report to the Secretary of the Interior, as required by the terms of § [385] 5 of said act of *Congress, an accurate account of the sales and net proceeds of the lands granted and of all expenditures in the construction, repairs, and operating of said canal, and of the earnings thereof; but, on the contrary, your orator shows that after diligent search and inquiry in the office of the Secretary of the Interior, to whom such annual reports should have been made, no such reports can be found on file, and no record or memoranda indicating that any report or reports, such as were provided for in said section, were ever made, so that your orator is unable to state in what manner said lands were sold or disposed of, or whether all the proceeds thereof were in fact devoted to the construction, control, and management of said canal, as in said act provided.

"Third.

"Your orator further shows that by an act of the legislature of the state of Michigan, approved February 12, 1855, a superintendent was authorized to be appointed by the governor of the state of Michigan, with the advice and consent of the senate thereof, his salary fixed, and the manner of keeping record of the vessels navigating said canal and passing through said lock, as well as the tolls to be collected and the keeping of accounts, were all provided for; that from the completion of said canal and lock the same were controlled, operated, and managed by the state of Michigan, and that during the entire management of the same by said state, as your orator is informed and verily believes and therefore charges the fact to be, no funds belonging to the state of Michigan were ever permanently invested or involved in such control, operation, and management, but, on the contrary, said canal was wholly constructed from the appropriation of such lands so made by the United States aforesaid, and was managed, controlled, repaired, and maintained from the amounts collected as tolls from the vessels passing through said canal and lock during the several years when said state of Michigan was in such control thereof.

"Fourth.

"And your orator further shows that he is informed and verily believes, and there- [386] fore charges the fact to be, that during *such management and control by the state of Michigan there were from time to time moneys collected in the form of tolls in excess of the amounts actually used at the period of such collection, and that this was done without intention on the part of the state of Michigan to make a profit from the management and control of said canal in violation of the act of Congress hereinbefore quoted, but for the purpose of having cash on hand to make repairs either during the season when the canal was closed to navigation or any time when so needed, and that said fund gradually increased in amount with the increasing volume of commerce through the canal until finally, at the time when the canal was turned over to the United States, there was in the treasury of the state of Michigan; belonging to the fund of said canal, not appropriated or the expenditure thereof in any way provided for, the acknowledged sum of $68,927.12, all of which had been paid for or collected in the manner hereinbefore stated for the purposes hereinbefore mentioned, and in direct compliance with the requirements of the act of Congress originally providing for the construction of said canal; and that said money had been collected in good faith and for the purposes of devoting the same ultimately to the repair, improvement, supervision, and expenses of the management thereof.

"And your orator further shows that there was purchased and collected from time to time a large quantity of tools, implements, and property of various kinds in connection with extensions, repairs, improvements, management, and control of said canal and lock by defendant, and at the time of the transfer to the United States, as aforesaid, the same were on hand and within the control and in the custody of the defendant, all of which properly belonged and appertained to the said canal and lock and to the defendant in its capacity as the manager and controller thereof; but whether any further and larger sum of money than is hereinbefore stated was, should, or might have been on hand and within the control of said defendant, in its treasury or otherwise, or might or should have been accredited to the account of the said canal and lock, your orator does not know and has no means of being informed, and is therefore *obliged to [387] depend upon an accounting by the defendant, hereinafter to be prayed for, for correct and authentic information.

"Fifth.

"And your orator further shows that the state of Michigan had no beneficial interest in said canal or lock, except as it affected the general public welfare, and had expended, or claimed to have expended, all the appropriation of Congress for the construction of the same, and that the increasing demands of commerce required great expenditures of money for the enlargement and betterment of said canal and lock, together with the probable construction of a new and enlarged lock, and that it was not convenient, if possible, to provide the funds therefor by the collection of tolls upon the vessels passing and repassing through said canal; that the state of Michigan not alone being interested in such enlargement and improvement, but rather the general public, and particularly the inhabitants of several rapidly growing states of the Union, it was proposed to transfer the canal to the United States to accomplish such end, and for that purpose an act was passed by the legislature of the state of Michigan and became operative on March 3, 1881."

(This act, although not set forth in the bill, is given in the margin.)†

[388] “By the terms of said act the board of control of said canal, constituted by defendant for its management, was authorized and empowered, at any time when they might deem it proper, to transfer all material belonging to said canal and to pay over to the United States all moneys remaining in the canal fund, excepting so much as might be necessary to put the canal in repair for its acceptance in accordance with the act transferring the same to the United States; and the Congress of the United States in turn passed an act authorizing the Secretary of War to accept, on behalf of the United States, from the state of Michigan, the said canal and the public works thereon, and appropriating $250,000 to improve and operate the same, the same being the act approved June 14, 1880, found in 21 Stat. at L. 189, chap. 211.” (This act is correctly set forth in the preamble to the foregoing act of the state of Michigan.)

[389] “And thereupon said canal actually was transferred to the officers of the government of the United States connected with the War Department thereof, and your orator shows, avers, and charges that no tools, implements, personal property, chattels, goods, moneys, or effects of any name or nature that were in the treasury of the state of Michigan, or should or might have been therein at the time of such transfer, or within the custody of said state of Michigan, defendant herein, or might have been in such custody, connected with or belonging to said canal or lock, its funds, its management, and control, were so transferred and turned over.

“Sixth.

“Your orator further shows that, while

†Act No. 17, Public Acts 1881.

An Act to Authorize the Board of Control to Transfer the Saint Marys Falls Ship Canal, with the Property Belonging to the Same, to the United States.

Whereas, Congress, at its last session, included in the river and harbor bill the following:

For improving and operating the Saint Marys River and Saint Marys Falls canal, two hundred and fifty thousand dollars. “And the Secretary of War is hereby authorized to accept, on behalf of the United States, from the state of Michigan, the Saint Marys canal and the public works thereon: Provided, Such transfer shall be so made as to leave the United States free from any and all debts, claims, or liability of any character whatsoever, and said canal, after such transfer, shall be free for public use: And provided further, That, after such transfer the Secretary of War be, and hereby is, authorized to draw, from time to time, his warrant on the Secretary of the Treasury to pay the actual expense of operating and keeping said canal in repair.” Therefore,

Sec. 1. The People of the State of Michigan enact, That the board of control of the Saint Marys Falls ship canal be, and hereby is, authorized and directed to transfer the said canal and the public works thereon, with all its appurtenances and all the right and title of the state of Michigan in and to the same, to the United States in accordance with (the) provisions of the above-mentioned clause: Provided.

190 U. S.

certain of the terms of the act of Congress appropriating the land for the construction of said lock and canal indicated a donation to the state of Michigan for such purpose, it was really the intent and purpose of the Congress of the United States to appropriate such lands, not for the purposes of exclusively enriching the state of Michigan, increasing its commerce, or extending its authority alone, but for the purpose of accomplishing a public work for the general good of all classes of people engaged or interested in the commerce of the Great Lakes of the United States, and for that reason, while granting said lands to the state of Michigan in certain of its terms, it was provided that, in case of the failure to construct said canal, the proceeds of the sale of such lands should be returned to the United States; also that the state of Michigan should have no beneficial interest in the revenue from said canal, when constructed, while in its management and control, but that the said canal and lock should be actually free to the United States government, and for the use of all persons desiring the same, except as to the necessary tolls to pay for their supervision, repairs, and maintenance; and it was also provided that a strict account should be kept of the sales of said lands, and that they should be applied to the construction of said canal and lock and to no other purpose whatever; also that annual reports should be made by the state of Michigan, and forwarded by the governor thereof to the Secretary *of the Interior, [390] concerning the management, control, and sale of lands; and thus, instead of being an actual grant or donation of lands to the state of Michigan for its individual benefit, and to become a part of its domain and to be within its ownership, the terms of said act

That this cession is upon the express condition that the state of Michigan shall so far retain concurrent jurisdiction with the United States over the Saint Marys Falls ship canal, and in and over all lands acquired, or hereafter acquired, for its use, that any civil or criminal process issued by any court of competent jurisdiction, or officers having authority of law to issue such process, and all orders made by such court, or any judicial officer duly empowered to make such orders, and necessary to be served upon any such person, may be executed upon said Saint Marys Falls ship canal, its lands, and in the buildings that may be erected thereon, in the same way and manner as if jurisdiction had not been ceded as aforesaid.

Sec. 2. The board of control of the Saint Marys Falls ship canal are hereby authorized and empowered, at any time when they may deem it proper, to transfer all material belonging to said canal, and to pay over to the United States all moneys remaining in the canal fund, excepting so much as may be necessary to put the said canal in repair for its acceptance in accordance with the act above recited: Provided, Such transfer of material and payment of moneys shall be in consideration of the construction, by the United States, of a suitable dry dock, to be operated in connection with the Saint Marys Falls ship canal for the use of disabled vessels.

This act is ordered to take immediate effect.

Approved March 3, 1881.

merely operated to create a trust in the state of Michigan for the purpose of carrying out a public work in which it, the state of Michigan, had become interested for the general public good. Your orator further shows that by the act of the legislature of the state of Michigan, hereinbefore quoted, said donation or appropriation of lands was accepted subject to all limitations, restrictions, and conditions imposed by Congress, as aforesaid. Your orator further shows that the state of Michigan, at the time and continuously until a very recent period, hereinafter to be mentioned and set forth, not only regarded its sale of said lands, its construction of said works, and its management and control of the latter as a trust for the public good from the complainant, but also through its legislature, as well as various of its officers, so declared; and that in an act of the legislature of the state of Michigan, passed and approved February 14, 1859, the same being No. 175 of the Session Laws of the state of Michigan for said year, and particularly in the third paragraph of the preamble thereof, said legislature made use of the following language:

"Whereas such canal, having been built and accepted by the authorities of this state, is found to need repairs in order to its preservation and usefulness, and the due performance of the trust created by said act of Congress, and the assent of this state thereto," etc.

"And your orator further shows that the treasurer of the state of Michigan, who, by virtue of his office, was one of the members of the said board of control of the Saint Marys Falls ship canal, in his annual report for the year 1883, duly made to the governor and transmitted to the legislature of said state, made use of the following language:

"Since my last report, the remainder of the personal property belonging to the Saint Marys Falls ship canal has been sold, making a final balance in that fund of $68,927.- [391] 12. All *business pertaining to the management of the canal on the part of the state has ceased and the moneys in the fund remain in the state treasury under act No. 17, Laws 1881, the state acting simply as trustee."

"But your orator shows that of late said defendant, through its officers and servants, and particularly its attorney general and the board of control of St. Marys Falls ship canal, denies such a trust, or its liability to the United States in the premises."

"Seventh.

"Your orator further shows and charges that it became and was the duty of the state of Michigan to transfer and pay over to the United States all funds appertaining to or connected with or collected for the repairs and management of said canal to the complainant, and to transfer to the complainant all property of every name and nature within its custody and control in connection with said canal and lock; and that, instead of so performing its equitable duty in the premises, the said state of Michigan, the defendant herein, converted said funds to its own use, by passing a joint resolution transferring the same from the canal fund to the general fund in the treasury of said state, said joint resolution being No. 20 of the Public Acts of 1897, which in terms is as follows:

"Whereas there has remained to the credit of the St. Marys ship canal fund a credit balance which was on hand at the time of the transfer of the said canal from the state to the United States, and no claim has been made for any part of such moneys, either by any person who paid the same into the fund or by the general government;

"And whereas there now remains on hand, under the board of control of the St. Marys ship canal, an invoice of tools and machinery, and no demand by any person or persons or by the United States having been made for a transfer of said tools and machinery:

"Therefore, resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the State of Michigan, That the auditor general be, and he is hereby, directed to transfer such balance as shown upon *the books of his office [392] to the same, and it shall hereafter become a part of the general fund of the state.

"And be it further resolved, That the board of control of the St. Marys ship canal be, and they are hereby, authorized to dispose of, at the best possible advantage, the tools and machinery aforesaid and now under their control, and deposit the money received from the sale of said property in the general fund of this state."

"Your orator further shows that a due and proper request to account to the United States in the premises, and to pay over all funds and turn over all property in its hands to the United States, has been made by your orator of the governor of the state of Michigan and all of the officers of said state directly concerned in any manner with the custody, management, or control of said fund or property, and particularly of the board of control of the St. Marys ship canal, which consists of the governor, auditor general, and treasurer of the said state of Michigan; and also of the attorney general of the state of Michigan; and that said reasonable and just request has been refused by them and each of them."

The bill prayed for an accounting as to the sales of the lands, the prices obtained therefor, the application of the proceeds of the sales or exchange of such lands to the cost of the construction of the canal, the tolls received, their application, and also an accounting as to the tools on hand at the time of the transfer of the canal to the United States.

Mr. Marsden C. Burch argued the cause and filed a brief for complainant:

A mixed trust and power is where the settlor sketches the outlines of a trust and leaves the details to be settled and carried into effect, according to the best judgment of his trustee. The power joined to the trust in such case is imperative and must be exercised; but the mode of its execution is a matter of judgment, and discretionary.

Perry, Tr. § 20.

The word "grant" may be used in a restricted sense and be so limited that the grantee will take but a naked trust or power to dispose of the thing granted and to apply the proceeds arising out of it to the use and benefit of the grantor.

Rice v. Minnesota & N. W. R. Co. 1 Black, 378, 17 L. ed. 153.

Laches will not apply to a proceeding in equity instituted by the United States.

United States v. Beebe, 127 U. S. 338, 32 L. ed. 121, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1083; United States v. Dalles Military Road Co. 140 U. S. 599, 35 L. ed. 560, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 988; San Pedro & C. d. A. Co. v. United States, 146 U. S. 120, 36 L. ed. 911, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 94; United States v. Insley, 130 U. S. 263, 32 L. ed. 968, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 485.

Mr. Horace M. Oren argued the cause, and, with Mr. Charles A. Blair, filed a brief for defendant:

A settlement of accounts between parties is prima facie a settlement of all accounts.

Bourke v. James, 4 Mich. 336.

If no cestui que trust is named, or so designated that he can be identified, the court cannot carry a trust into effect, however clearly it may be created in other respects.

Perry, Tr. 4th ed. § 95.

A settlor or founder of a trust created by grant, by his own act becomes a stranger to the trust, in the sense that he no longer has an interest in property he has aliened. It is true, as to a certain class of corporations, the founder has a right of visitation which he may retain or may assign, but the court of chancery has nothing to do with his visitatorial power. It is only as respects the administration of the corporate property that the court has any jurisdiction.

Perry, Tr. 4th ed. § 742.

A trustee may be relieved from his office by the consent of all parties interested, without the decree of a court, even if the instrument of trust is silent upon that subject. But the transaction operates rather as an estoppel of the cestui que trust than as an affirmative transfer of power.

Perry, Tr. 4th ed. § 285.

A conveyance by the trustee to the cestui que trust merges the title and determines the trust.

Perry, Tr. 4th ed. § 921.

Mr. Justice Peckham, after making the foregoing statement of facts, delivered the opinion of the court:

[396] *By its bill the United States invokes the original jurisdiction of this court for the purpose of determining a controversy existing between it and the state of Michigan. This court has jurisdiction of such a controversy, although it is not literally between two states, the United States being a party on the one side and a state on the other. This was decided in United States 190 U. S.

v. Texas, 143 U. S. 621, 642, 36 L. ed. 285, 292, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 488.

In the consideration of this case, the controlling thought must, of course, be to arrive at the meaning of the parties, as expressed in the various statutes set forth in the bill. While that meaning is to be sought from the language used, yet its construction need not be of a narrow or technical nature, but, in view of the character of the subject, the language should have its ordinary and usual meaning.

Whether, under these circumstances, technical words were used to express the thought that the state was to be a trustee, is not important if, upon a reading of the statutes and a survey of the condition of the country when the acts were passed, it is apparent that the intent was that the state should occupy the position of trustee in the construction and operation of the canal. Winona & St. P. R. Co. v. Barney, 113 U. S. 618, 625, 28 L. ed. 1109, 1111, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 606.

The general purpose of these statutes was to build a ship canal, by means of the funds procured from the sale or other disposition of the public lands of the United States, to be used by all those whose business or pleasure should call them to pass through it in order to reach their destination.

As is well known, the Saint Marys river connects the waters of the lakes Huron and Superior. The navigation of the river is interrupted by Saint Marys falls, and it early became necessary, in order to provide conveniences for a rapidly increasing commerce, that there should be built a ship canal around these falls, so that large vessels coming from, or going to, Lake Superior should be thereby enabled to pursue their voyage to the east or to the west without interruption by those falls. The state of Michigan did not feel at that time (1850-1852) able to undertake such work itself, although it was a matter of much importance to many of her citizens. Finally the United States passed the act of 1852, set out in full in the foregoing statement. *The state subsequently accepted the [397] same with all the conditions contained therein. We think it sufficiently appears from a perusal of these two acts that it was assumed that the grant of the right of way through the lands of the United States, and the grant of the 750,000 acres of its public lands in the state of Michigan, would pay the cost of construction of the canal, and the tolls to be collected by the state would repay it for all advances made by it in the repairs which would naturally and from time to time be required in such a work. There was no reason why the United States should provide that the state of Michigan should actually receive a profit over and above the payment to it of all its expenses for the construction of the canal and for keeping it in repair. If, through the action of the United States, a public work of national importance were constructed within the boundaries of that state, and the state itself reimbursed for every item expended by it in the construction and in the keeping of such work in repair, it would certainly seem as if the state could properly ask no more. It was clearly not the intention that the state should realize a beneficial interest from the transaction between the United States and the state over and beyond that which would arise from the existence of this canal. The cost of its construction and the keeping of it in repair were not to be borne by the state, even to the extent of a single dollar. That the parties supposed the cost would be borne by the United States is proved by an examination of the statutes; and, if it be a fact, it goes far to show that the state was, in this matter, acting in effect and substance as an agent, or, in other words, as a trustee for the United States, and that the transaction was not to be a source of profit to the state, by reason of getting more from the United States than it would cost to build the canal.

The expectation that the means provided by the United States for the construction of the work would be adequate for that purpose was not a visionary one, and it is proved by the fact, alleged in the bill and admitted by the demurrer, that such means were in truth adequate, and the canal was wholly constructed from the appropriation of the lands granted by the United States, and managed, repaired, and maintained [398] from *the tolls exacted by the state from vessels passing through the canal.

An examination of the act of Congress of 1852, set forth in the foregoing statement of facts, will show, as we think, the trust character of the transaction between the United States and the state. There is granted to the state, by § 1, the right of locating a canal through the public lands of the United States 400 feet in width; but this right of way is, by the terms of the act, to be used by the state, or under its authority, for the construction or convenience of such canal and the appurtenances thereto; and the use thereof is thereby vested in the state forever, but "for the purposes aforesaid and no other." The canal must be at least 100 feet wide, with a depth of water of 12 feet, and with locks at least 250 feet long and 60 feet wide. The act does not grant an absolute estate in fee simple in the land covered by this right of way. It was in effect a grant upon condition for a special purpose; that is, in trust for use for the purposes of a canal, and for no other. The state had no power to alien it and none to put it to any other use or purpose. Such a grant creates a trust, at least by implication. We have just held in Northern P. R. Co. v. Townsend, 190 U. S. 267, ante, 1044, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 671, in reference to a grant of a right of way for the railroad, that it was in effect a grant of "a limited fee, made on an implied condition of reverter, in the event that the company ceased to use or retain the land for the purpose for which it was granted."

The 2d section granted to the state,

"for the purpose of aiding said state in constructing and completing said canal, 750,000 acres of public lands," belonging to the United States and lying within the state, which were to be subject to the disposal of the legislature of the state for such purpose and no other, and the canal was to be and remain a public highway for the use of the government of the United States, free from toll or other charge upon the vessels of said government engaged in public service, or upon vessels employed by said government in the transportation of any property or troops of the United States. It was also provided that if the canal should not be commenced within three years and completed within ten years, the state *was [399] bound to pay to the United States the amount it received upon the sale of any part of said lands by the state at not less than $1.25 per acre, although the title to the purchasers from the state should remain valid. The state was bound to cause to be kept accurate accounts of the sales and net proceeds of the lands granted, and of all expenditures in the construction, repair, and operating of the canal and of the earnings thereof, and was to render a statement of the same annually to the Secretary of the Interior, and whenever the state should be fully reimbursed for all advances made for the construction, repairs, and operating the canal, with legal interest on all advances until the reimbursement of the same, or upon payment by the United States of any balance of such advances from the receipts from the lands and canal with such interest, the state was then only to be allowed to tax for the use of the canal such tolls as should be sufficient to pay all necessary expenses for its care, charge, and repairs of the same; and, before the state could dispose of any of the lands, the route of the canal was to be established and a plat thereof filed in the office of the War Department, and a duplicate thereof in the office of the Commissioner of the General Land Office. The 6th paragraph of the bill calls special attention to these facts.

In this Federal statute we find the purpose of the United States in granting the land. It was not for the benefit of the state of Michigan, and the state did not thereby receive any beneficial interests in such lands. As soon as it was repaid its outlay for the cost of the construction and for the maintenance and repairs of the canal, the tolls were to be reduced to such a sum as should be sufficient only to pay the necessary expenses for the care, charge, and repair of the same. Evidently, it was not supposed that the state was to profit from this grant further than such profit as might arise indirectly from the completion and operation of the canal.

Defendant refers to certain grants of land made to Illinois, Indiana, and Ohio, and perhaps to some of the other states, where such grants were made to aid in the construction of canals in those states, and where possible profits from the construction [400] of such canals were within the contemplation of the various grants. *But in the acts referred to there are no restrictions upon the tolls which the states may charge for the use of their respective canals, the only limitation imposed being that the government should have their free use for the passing of its vessels; while, in this act, the tolls which the state may charge are to be only such after the payment for its construction, etc., as should be sufficient to pay the necessary expenses for the care, charge, and repairs thereof.

The state of Michigan, through an act of its legislature, duly accepted the terms of the act of Congress, and agreed to carry out all the conditions therein made obligatory upon that state. An attentive reading of that statute shows its purpose to conform to all of the provisions of the Federal statute. It provides (§ 7) for keeping accurate books of account of sales and net proceeds of the lands, and for making returns to the Secretary of the Interior containing such accounts; provides (§ 5) for designating the lands granted as "Saint Marys canal lands;" and also (§ 3) provides that, in letting contracts for construction of the canal, the responsibility of the proposed contractor and his ability to carry into effect the object of the act of Congress are to be considered. Reading both statutes, it seems to us the effect was to create a trust, and that the state was made the trustee to carry out the purposes of the act of Congress in the construction and maintenance of the canal. If there were funds arising from the sale of the lands over and above the cost of construction and other expenses of the canal, it could not within reason (after a perusal of these two statutes, with the provisions for accounting for sales and net proceeds of lands, and the other provisions of the statutes already mentioned) be supposed the parties understood that Michigan was to have for its own treasury the balance arising beyond such cost, maintenance, etc., of the canal. If a surplus arose in the course of the operation of the canal, the tolls were to be at once reduced; and it seems to us that that surplus would, upon a fair and reasonable construction of the acts, belong to the original owner of the lands, by means of which the state, as, in substance, the agent of the United States, was enabled to construct the canal, and secure the tolls arising from its operation, to be expended upon its maintenance *and for necessary repairs. This would certainly be so after the formal transfer of the canal, and after the surplus was conclusively ascertained, and was subject to no further claims for repairs of the canal on the part of the state. The tolls were, in fact, the proceeds of the trust fund (the lands), which belonged to the United States, and should be transferred with the rest of the trust property.

[401] Where Congress grants land to a state, to be used as provided in this statute, we think a trust, or power to dispose of the lands for the purpose of carrying out the improvement, is granted; and, in this case, no beneficial interest passes to the state by the language used, considering the whole statute. Rice v. Minnesota & N. W. R. Co. 1 Black, 358, 378, 17 L. ed. 147, 153.

If any particular part of the statute in this case were ambiguous or its meaning doubtful, of course the intention must be deduced from the whole statute and every part of it. Hence the importance of those provisions which, in effect, if carried out, prevent the state from making any direct profit by the construction of the canal, or from the tolls received from vessels passing through it. And, where words are ambiguous, legislative grants must be interpreted most strongly against the grantee and for the government, and are not to be extended by implication in favor of the grantee beyond the natural and obvious meaning of the words employed. Any ambiguity must operate against the grantee and in favor of the public. Rice v. Minnesota & N. W. R. Co. 1 Black, 380, 17 L. ed. 154. This rule of construction obtains in grants from the United States to states or corporations in aid of the construction of public works. (Id. 10.)

Then, too, there is the almost contemporaneous construction placed upon the Federal statute by the legislature of Michigan in the act No. 175, approved February 14, 1859, in the preamble of which it is said that "whereas such canal, having been built and accepted by the authorities of this state, is found to need repairs in order to its preservation and use to the due performance of the trust created by said act of Congress and the assent of this state thereto," etc. Again, the treasurer of the state, who, by virtue of his office, was one of the members of the board of control of the Saint Marys Falls ship *canal, in the [402] course of his annual report for the year 1883, made to the governor and transmitted to the legislature of the state, used the following language:

"Since my last report, the remainder of the personal property belonging to the Saint Marys Falls ship canal has been sold, making a final balance in that fund of $68,927.12. All business pertaining to the management of the canal on the part of the state has ceased, and the moneys in the fund remain in the state treasury under act No. 17, Laws of 1881, the state acting simply as trustee."

We do not, of course, assume that the state treasurer could bind the state of Michigan by any admission he might make in a report to the legislature of that state, but it shows simply the understanding of that official, who was so closely connected with the construction and operation of the canal, in relation to the surplus funds in the treasury of the state, arising out of the operation of the canal. That the state legislature in 1859 regarded the state as a trustee is evident from the above language in the portion of the preamble quoted.

Finally, by the joint resolution of the legislature, being No. 20 of the Public Acts of 1897, it was stated as follows:

"Whereas there has remained to the credit of the Saint Marys ship canal fund a credit balance which was on hand at the time of the transfer of the said canal from the state to the United States, and no claim has been made for any part of such moneys, either by any persons who paid the same into the fund or by the general government;

"And whereas there now remains on hand, under the board of control of the Saint Marys ship canal, an invoice of tools and machinery, and no demand by any person or persons or by the United States having been made for a transfer of said tools and machinery:

"Therefore, resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the State of Michigan, That the auditor general be, and he is hereby, directed to transfer such balance as shown upon the books of his office to the same, and it shall hereafter become a part of the general fund of the state.

[403] "And be it further resolved, That the board of control of the *Saint Marys ship canal be, and they are hereby, authorized to dispose of, at the best possible advantage, the tools and machinery aforesaid and now under their control, and deposit the money received from the sale of said property in the general fund of this state."

From these statutes and resolutions we think it quite clearly appears that the state and its public officers thought that a trust had been created, and that the state had received the lands in trust for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of the Federal statute. A surplus arising from the sales of lands and from the tolls, over and above all cost of construction, repairs, etc., after the formal transfer of the canal itself, belongs to the United States, and it is the proper party to recover the same.

The counsel for defendant, however, urged that other action by the United States shows that no such trust existed. He referred to the joint resolution of the state, adopted in 1869, wherein the necessity for the immediate enlargement of the Saint Marys Falls canal, a work of urgent necessity and national importance, was advocated, and it was therein said that the state of Michigan had no funds properly applicable to such purpose, and it was, therefore, resolved that the board of control of the canal should be authorized and directed to transfer the canal, with all its appurtenances and all the right and title of the state of Michigan in and to the same, to the United States, provided the state should be first guaranteed and secured, to the satisfaction of the board, against loss, by reason of its liability, on certain bonds which had been issued by it under authority of an act to provide for the repairs upon the canal, "and to perform the trust respecting the same," approved February 14, 1859. Even in this act of 1859, the legislature, as has already been stated, acknowledges the trust, and passes an act for the purpose of performing its obligations respecting the same. But it is said that this resolution (of 1869) providing for the transfer of the canal was not noticed or accepted by the United States until 1880, when Congress, by an act approved June 14, 1880, authorized the Secretary of War to accept, on behalf of the United States, from the state of Michigan, the *canal, provided "such trans-[404]fer shall be so made as to leave the United States free from any and all debts, claims, or liability of any character whatsoever, and said canal, after such transfer, shall be free for public use."

This offer under the act of 1880 was accepted by the state by act No. 17, Public Acts of Michigan of 1881, supra, and the board of control was authorized and directed: First. "To transfer the said canal and the public works thereon, with all its appurtenances, and all the right and title of the state of Michigan in and to the same, to the United States," in accordance with the provisions of the act of Congress approved June 14, 1880; and, second, "at any time when they may deem it proper, to transfer all material belonging to said canal, and to pay over to the United States all moneys remaining in the canal fund, excepting so much as may be necessary to put the said canal in repair, for its acceptance in accordance with the act above recited: Provided, Such transfer of material and payment of moneys shall be in consideration of the construction, by the United States, of a suitable dry dock, to be operated in connection with the Saint Marys Falls ship canal for the use of disabled vessels."

It is argued from this legislation that Congress thereby recognized and acknowledged the ownership of the canal by the state, free from any trust connected therewith, and that the provisions by the state for transferring all material belonging to the canal and for paying over to the United States all moneys remaining in the canal fund, etc., were upon the condition just quoted; and it is stated that there was no proof that such dry dock had been constructed, and hence there was no liability on the part of the state to pay the moneys or deliver the tools. But, if the original transaction amounted to a trust, as we think it did, the attempt of the state to impose a condition upon its payment of the moneys and the transfer of the tools did not take away its liability as trustee, nor make it necessary that the United States should build the dry dock before it should be entitled to the money and the tools. The United States might have been satisfied to permit the state to retain its nominal title and to remain in possession, and to operate the canal under its original obligations; and when, in 1880, it authorized the Secretary *of War to accept the ca-[405]nal from the state without any liability on its part for debts or claims in regard to the canal, it did not thereby in any manner admit the nonexistence of any trust theretofore created. Assuming that the land grant and the tolls had been sufficient to construct the canal and operate and repair it, there was no reason why the United States should assume or agree to pay any debts or claims which might exist in regard to the canal. The consideration for the transfer of the material and the payment of the moneys amounted, at most, to a provision in the nature somewhat of a condition subsequent, and the right to such transfer and payment did not rest upon the prior building of the dry dock by the United States. There was nothing in this legislation, in our opinion, which changed the character in which the state had acted as trustee up to the time of such transfer of the canal, and the liability of the state was not altered by reason of the act of 1880 or that of 1881.

We are of opinion that the bill shows a cause of action against the state of Michigan as trustee, and its liability to pay over the surplus moneys (if any), which upon an accounting it may appear have arisen from the sale of the granted lands, over and above all cost of the construction of the canal and the necessary work appertaining thereto, and the supervision thereof, together with the surplus money arising from the tolls collected, which latter sum by the demurrer is admitted to amount to $68,927.12. This sum the United States in substance (especially in the 4th paragraph of the bill) admits is all that is due from the state on account of such tolls. It is not entitled to go back of that amount and call for an accounting as to the tolls prior to the transfer of the canal to the United States. The latter is also entitled to recover the value of the tools, etc., mentioned in the bill, as of the time of the transfer of the canal.

We think there is no ground of defense arising from any alleged laches on the part of the United States in bringing this suit. Assuming the existence of what would be laches in a private person, the defense that might arise therefrom is not available ordinarily against the government. United States v. Beebe, 180 U. S. 343, 353, 45 L. ed. 563, 570, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 371.

[406] *There must be judgment overruling the demurrer, but as the defendant may desire to set up facts which it might claim would be a defense to the complainant's bill, we grant leave to the defendant to answer up to the first day of the next term of this court. In case it refuses to plead further, the judgment will be in favor of the United States for an accounting and for the payment of the sum found due thereon.

Demurrer overruled and leave to answer given, etc.

JEFFERSON B. CONLEY, Plff. in Err.,
v.

MATHIESON ALKALI WORKS.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 406-412.)

Service of process on foreign corporation.

NOTE.—As to service of process upon foreign corporations—see notes to Foster v. Charles Betcher Lumber Co. (S. D.) 23 L. R. A. 490, and Eldred v. American Palace-Car Co. 45 C. C. A. 3.

190 U. S.

Service of summons within the state on resident directors of a foreign corporation is insufficient to give the court jurisdiction of such corporation, where, at the time of such service, it had ceased to do business within the state, and had designated no agent upon whom service could be made.

[No. 238.]

Argued April 15, 16, 1903. Decided May 18, 1903.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York to review an order which set aside a service of summons on a foreign corporation. Affirmed.

See same case below, 110 Fed. 730.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. W. W. MacFarland argued the cause, and, with Messrs. MacFarland, Taylor, & Costello, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

Cases in which service of process will not be regarded by this court as sufficient to give jurisdiction over the foreign corporation for the purpose of rendering a valid personal judgment are those where the cause of action against the foreign corporation did not arise within the state, and the corporation was not doing any business within the state, and the service was upon an officer or agent only casually within the state, and not charged with any business of the corporation there.

Goldey v. Morning News, 156 U. S. 518, 39 L. ed. 517, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 559; Fidelity Trust & S. V. Co. v. Mobile Street R. Co. 53 Fed. 850; Reifsnider v. American Imp. Pub. Co. 45 Fed. 433; Carpenter v. Westinghouse Air-Brake Co. 32 Fed. 434; United States v. American Bell Teleph. Co. 29 Fed. 17; Elgin Canning Co. v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 24 Fed. 866; American Wooden-Ware Co. v. Stem, 63 Fed. 676; Clews v. Woodstock Iron Co. 44 Fed. 31; Golden v. Morning News, 42 Fed. 112.

Directors of a corporation are its principal officers and agents.

Hiller v. Burlington & M. River R. Co. 70 N. Y. 226.

State decisions sustain the validity of the service in the present case.

Tuchband v. Chicago & A. R. Co. 115 N. Y. 437, 22 N. E. 360; Hiller v. Burlington & M. River R. Co. 70 N. Y. 223; Pope v. Terre Haute Car & Mfg. Co. 87 N. Y. 139.

Everything is presumed against those who do not produce books that would show the fact.

Lindley, Partn. pp. 808, note, 993.

Every decision of the Federal courts upon any state of facts at all resembling the facts of the case at bar has affirmed the validity of such a service as was made in the present case.

Simon v. Craft, 182 U. S. 427, 45 L. ed. 1165, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 836; Barrow S. S.

That a foreign corporation must be engaged in business within the state in order to validate service of process upon it—see note to Pinney v. Providence Loan & Invest. Co. (Wis.) 50 L. R. A. 591.

Co. v. Kane, 170 U. S. 100, 42 L. ed. 964, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 526; Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Spratley, 172 U. S. 602, 43 L. ed. 569, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 308; Henrietta Min. & Mill. Co. v. Johnson, 173 U. S. 221, 43 L. ed. 675, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 402; Société Foncière v. Milliken, 135 U. S. 304, 34 L. ed. 208, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 823; Cowley v. Northern P. R. Co. 159 U. S. 583, 40 L. ed. 267, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 127; Tootle v. Coleman, 57 L. R. A. 120, 46 C. C. A. 132, 107 Fed. 41; Purdy v. Wallace Müller & Co. 81 Fed. 513; Reilly v. Philadelphia & R. R. Co. 109 Fed. 349; Re Hohorst, 150 U. S. 653, 37 L. ed. 1211, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 221; Meyer v. Pennsylvania Lumbermen's Mut. F. Ins. Co. 108 Fed. 169; Revans v. Southern M. & A. R. Co. 114 Fed. 982.

Mr. Alfred Ely argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Agar, Ely, & Fulton, filed a brief for defendant in error:

The service was insufficient.

Goldney v. Morning News, 156 U. S. 518, 39 L. ed. 517, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 559.

It is immaterial whether such service is recognized as sufficient by the statutes or the judicial decisions of the state where the service is made.

Barrow S. S. Co. v. Kane, 170 U. S. 100, 42 L. ed. 964, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 526; St. Clair v. Cox, 106 U. S. 350, 27 L. ed. 222, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 354.

Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

[407] The plaintiff is a citizen of the state of New York, and the defendant was incorporated in the state of Virginia. The plaintiff, as *assignee of T. T. Mathieson, brought this action in the supreme court of New York county, state of New York, against the defendant for moneys alleged to be due on a contract made and entered into by Mathieson and defendant. The complaint alleged that the contract was made in the city of New York on the 15th of August, 1893. The articles of agreement show that Mathieson's employment was as general superintendent for the term of eight years, in the erection and general management of the works of the corporation, "and also of their operation, after the same shall have been erected." The defendant had designated no agent upon whom service could have been made, and summons was served on R. T. Wilson and John G. Agar, two members of the board of directors of the corporation, both residents of the city of New York. They were not officers of the company. Before the time for answer had expired, on defendant's motion the cause was transferred to the United States circuit court for the southern district of New York. A motion was made in that court to set aside the summons and service as null and void. Affidavits were presented by both parties, and ruling on them the court said that if the facts stated by the affidavits of the defendant were true, that, at the time of the service of the summons and for some months before, defendant corporation had ceased to do business in the state, the motion should be granted. But it was said that "the affidavits of complainant are mainly on information and belief, but annexed to them is a letter, the genuineness of which is not questioned, which bears date March 15, 1901 (two months and a half after the alleged cessation of business at Niagara Falls), and signed by the treasurer of the defendant corporation, in which he speaks of the plant at Niagara Falls as still being operated by the defendant. Under these circumstances the court would not be warranted in granting this motion, in view of the conflict of fact. If, however, the defendant feels assured that the apparent discrepancy can be explained, and is willing to pay the expenses of a reference, it may be sent to a master to take testimony and report to the court whether or not at the time of the service of the summons the defendant corporation was doing business within this state."

*A reference to the master was made. [408] After taking testimony (which occupies sixty-two pages of the record), the master reported that, beside its plant at Saltville, the defendant, prior to December 31, 1900, owned and operated a plant for the manufacture of caustic soda and bleaching powder by electricity, located at Niagara Falls, under a patented process, known as the Castner electrolytic process; that on the 31st of December, 1900, it conveyed this plant and all of the property of the defendant, of every kind and description, to the Castner Electrolytic Alkali Company, a corporation organized under the laws of Virginia; that the consideration expressed for the conveyance was $1 and other valuable considerations, but that the substantial consideration was the entire capital stock of the Castner Electrolytic Alkali Company; that the selling agent for the products manufactured at Niagara Falls, before and after the transfer, was Arnold Hoffman & Co., a corporation organized under the laws of Rhode Island, and [which] had and has its principal place of business in Providence, in that state; that said company was and is the selling agent for the Saltville products, with some exceptions, and that said corporation has a branch office in the city of New York, but the business dealings of the defendant corporation and of the Castner company with Arnold Hoffman & Co. are carried on through its Providence office; that the defendant, since a period prior to the 31st day of December, 1900, had, and still has, its principal place of business in the city of Providence, and that its books and records are kept there, and it has also an office force, consisting of several employees, that its bank account is also kept in said city, and that it has no office in the state of New York,—none of its books, records, or accounts are kept there, nor has it, since January 1, 1901, sold any of its products there; that a by-law of the company, adopted in 1896, provided that the directors should hold monthly meetings in the city of New York, on the second Wednesday of each and every month in each year, but that it did not appear, however, that meetings had been held in compliance with the by-laws, the fact being that they were held sometimes in Saltville and sometimes in Providence, and, during the year 1901, at [409] least, were held not more than two or *three times in New York city, and then at the branch office of Arnold Hoffman & Co., or at the office of R. T. Wilson & Co., bankers, in Wall street, a member of which firm was a director of the defendant company, and one of its principal stockholders; that the admissions in a letter of the treasurer of the company, March 15, 1901, "are fully explained by the fact that it followed earlier correspondence in which the plan of disposing of the plant at Niagara Falls for the stock of a new company was brought to the attention of Mr. Pell," the president, to whom the letter was addressed. The master's report concluded as follows:

"Upon the facts thus outlined, it does not appear that the defendant corporation was, at the time of the service of the summons herein, viz., April 18, 1901, doing business within this state.

"The fact that it held the entire capital stock of the Castner Electrolytic Alkali Company, and that the operations of that company were carried on under the same management as before December 31, 1900, is not material. The new corporation was a separate legal entity, and, whatever may have been the motives leading to its creation, it can only be regarded as such for the purposes of legal proceedings.

"It was that corporation alone which transacted any business in this state, notwithstanding it may have been for all practical purposes merely the instrument of the defendant corporation. People v. American Bell Teleph. Co. 117 N. Y. 241, 22 N. E. 1057; United States v. American Bell Teleph. Co. 29 Fed. 17."

The plaintiff excepted to the report, the rulings of the master on the admission of testimony, and to his conclusions. The report was affirmed and the service of summons set aside and declared null and void. This ruling is assigned as error.

The fundamental proposition of plaintiff in error is that the state court had jurisdiction of the defendant in error, and that, therefore, the circuit court of the United States had jurisdiction. To sustain the jurisdiction of the state court subdivision 3 of § 432 and § 1780 of the Code of Civil Procedure of the state are cited. Subdivision 1 of § 432 provides for service upon certain enumerated officers of a foreign corporation; *subdivision 2 provides for the designation of a person by the corporation upon whom process may be served. Subdivision 3 is as follows:

"If such a designation is not in force, or if neither the person designated nor an officer specified in subdivision 1st of this section can be found with due diligence, and the corporation has property within the state, or the cause of action arose therein, to the cashier, a director, or a managing agent of the corporation within the state."

190 U. S.

Section 1780 is as follows:

"Sec. 1780. An action against a foreign corporation may be maintained by a resident of the state, or by a domestic corporation, for any cause of action. An action against a foreign corporation may be maintained by another foreign corporation, or by a nonresident, in one of the following cases only:

"1. Where the action is brought to recover damages for the breach of a contract, made within the state or relating to property situated within the state, at the time of the making thereof.

"2. Where it is brought to recover real property situated within the state, or a chattel, which is replevied within the state.

"3. Where the cause of action arose within the state, except where the object of the action is to affect the title to real property situated without the state."

These sections, it is insisted, gave the state court jurisdiction, and it follows that the circuit court had jurisdiction. But, granting the existence of a cause of action, it is not every service upon an officer of a corporation which will give the state court jurisdiction of a foreign corporation. This was declared in Goldney v. Morning News, 156 U. S. 518, 39 L. ed. 517, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 559. The case arose in New York, and the question presented was "whether, in a personal action against a corporation which neither is incorporated nor does business within the state, nor has any agent or property therein, service of the summons upon its president, temporarily within the jurisdiction, is sufficient service upon the corporation."

As there was a difference between the rulings of the state court of New York and the circuit courts of the United States *on [411] the question, it was elaborately considered "upon principle and in the light of previous decisions of this court." The decisions were examined, and the question was answered in the negative, and it was announced, as "an elementary principle of jurisprudence, that a court of justice cannot acquire jurisdiction over the person of one who has no residence within its territorial jurisdiction, except by actual service of notice within the jurisdiction upon him or upon some one authorized to accept service in his behalf, or by his waiver, by general appearance or otherwise, of the want of due service. Whatever effect a constructive service may be allowed in the courts of the same government, it cannot be recognized as valid by the courts of any other government." It was also held that the defendant, by filing a petition for removal, did not waive defects in the service of summons, and that objection could be made of such service in the circuit court of the United States in the same manner as if the action had been originally commenced there. Goldney v. Morning News was affirmed in Wabash Western R. Co. v. Brow, 164 U. S. 271, 41 L. ed. 431, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 126.

The principle announced in Goldney v. Morning News covers the case at bar. The residence of an officer of a corporation does not necessarily give the corporation a domicile in the state. He must be there officially, — there representing the corporation in its business. St. Clair v. Cox, 106 U. S. 350, 27 L. ed. 222, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 354. In other words, a corporation must be doing business there, and, recognizing the necessity of this, the circuit court referred that issue to a master. The decision upon the issue was adverse to the contention of the plaintiff, and we cannot say that it was not sustained by the evidence and the presumptions which must be conceded to the report of a master and the judgment of the lower court. The defendant was competent to convey its property to the Castner Electrolytic Alkali Company, and afterwards make the locality of its own business Providence and Saltville. Whether the transfer to the latter company was fraudulent we certainly cannot decide from this record, and the by-law, which provided for a monthly meeting in New York, could not of itself keep the corporation in New York. The testimony is positive that [412] no business of the corporation was done in New York city after the transfer of the Niagara Falls plant; that all of the business of the corporation was conducted at Providence, except of a purely manufacturing character, which was conducted at Saltville.

The following is an extract from the testimony of the secretary and treasurer:

"The offices of the Mathieson Alkali Works at Providence conducted all the business of the company except that of a purely manufacturing character, which was conducted at Saltville. They keep there the general books of account, the books of record, the stock books. They had charge of the general course of the company's affairs and transacted its finances; collected the money and paid the bills. In fact, attended to all the business which generally comes under the conduct of a company's general office. This was done solely at Providence, and nowhere else."

And he further testified that all of the goods of the corporation were sold at Providence. The affidavits filed by the defendants were as positive as the oral testimony. The order of the Circuit Court is therefore affirmed.

WESTERN UNION TELEGRAPH COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,

v.

STATE OF MISSOURI at the Relation and the Use of CHRIS. GOTTLIEB, Collector of the Revenue for Jackson County, Missouri.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 412-427.)

State taxation — of foreign telegraph companies — valuation of property within state — discrimination or overvaluation no defense to suit for taxes.

1. A state tax on the property within the state belonging to a foreign telegraph corporation, the value of which was determined by regarding it as a part of a system operated in other states, is not invalid because such corporation is engaged in interstate business, and has accepted the provisions of the act of July 24, 1866, giving it the privilege of operating a line over military and post roads, and was not created by such state or given any franchise by it.

2. Discrimination or overvaluation by a state board of equalization in assessing property for purposes of taxation is not a ground of defense to an action at law to collect the taxes.

[No. 256.]

Argued April 21, 1903. Decided May 18, 1903.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of Missouri to review a judgment which reversed a judgment of the Circuit Court of Jackson County for a portion of the taxes sought to be collected from a foreign telegraph company, and entered judgment for the full amount of the tax sued for. Affirmed.

See same case below, 165 Mo. 502, 65 S. W. 775.

Statement by Mr. Justice McKenna:

The defendant in error is the tax collector of Jackson county, Missouri, and brought this action against the plaintiff in error in the circuit court of that county for the sum of $1,027.22, the taxes assessed against plaintiff in error for the year 1899, apportioned to Jackson county. The answer of the plaintiff in error alleged illegality in the taxes upon two grounds: First, that the taxes were levied upon the franchise of the plaintiff in error, derived from the United States under certain acts of the Congress; second, that the state board of equalization, intending to injure the plaintiff by compelling it to pay an excessive and disproportionate share of state and local taxes, assessed its poles, wires, and instruments at far more than their actual value.

The plaintiff in error is a telegraph company, incorporated by the state of New York. It does business in the state of Missouri, having offices in a number of cities of that state, and its lines run between those cities and to and from them to other places in the Union; in other words, the plaintiff in error engages in intrastate and interstate business. It claims to have no franchises from the state of Missouri (except in an unimportant instance), but occupies the streets of its cities, and its public roads and highways, by authority of the act of Congress of July 24, 1866 (16 Stat. at L. 221, chap. 230, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3579), entitled "An Act to Aid in the Construction of Telegraph Lines, and to Secure to the Government the Use of the Same for Postal, Military, and Other Purposes." The material part of § 1 of the act is as follows:

"Section 1. That any telegraph company

NOTE.—As to the power of states to control or impose burdens upon interstate telephone and telegraph companies—see notes to Postal Tele.

Cable Co. v. Baltimore (Md.) 24 L. R. A. 161, and Orleans v. Pullman's Palace-Car Co. 8 C. A. 498.

[414] now organized, or which may hereafter be organized, under the laws of any state in this Union, shall have the right to construct, maintain, and operate lines of telegraph through and over any portion of the public domain of the United States, over and along any of the *military or post roads of the United States, which have been or may hereafter be declared such by an act of Congress, and over, under, or across the navigable streams or waters of the United States: Provided, That such lines of telegraph shall be so constructed and maintained as not to obstruct the navigation of such streams and waters or interfere with the ordinary travel of such military or post roads."

Section 2 provides that the messages between the officers and agents of the government shall have priority, and be sent at rates to be fixed by the Postmaster General.

Section 3 forbids the transfer of the rights conferred by the act.

Section 4 gives the United States the power to purchase the telegraph lines, property, and effects of any company availing itself of the benefits of the act.

Section 4 is as follows:

"And be it further enacted, That before any telegraph company shall exercise any of the powers or privileges conferred by this act, such company shall file their written acceptance with the Postmaster General of the restrictions and obligations required by this act."

Under the Constitution and laws of Missouri, the state board of equalization, composed of the governor, secretary of state, state auditor, state treasurer, and attorney general, assesses railroad and telegraph property, and it also equalizes the real and personal property assessed by the local assessors. Exercising its powers of original assessment, the board made the following order in regard to the property of plaintiff in error:

State of Missouri, office of state auditor.

Be it remembered that heretofore, to wit, on the 25th day of July, 1899, the following, among other proceedings, were had by the state board of equalization, viz.:

The state board of equalization having given to the Western Union Telegraph Company opportunity to be heard personally by the board, and having heard the said company, through its officers and agents, and having carefully considered the facts set out in the returns and the statements of said company, and all evidence of value, and all [415] matters bearing upon *the question of the value of the property of said company, and considering the cost of construction and equipment of said Western Union Telegraph Company, and the location thereof, and its traffic and business, and the market and par value of its stocks and bonds, and the gross receipts and net earnings and franchise owned by said company, and the value thereof, and having received evidence concerning the value of the cost of construction of said telegraph line, and the market value and par value of the stocks and bonds, and the gross receipts and net earning power, and the franchise and value thereof, and having heard evidence upon and considering all other matters ascertainable by said board bearing upon the question of the value of said company, which, in the opinion of the board, would assist in its findings, conclusions, and judgment in arriving at the actual cash value of the property of said telegraph company; on motion the state board of equalization assesses and values for taxes of 1899 the property of said Western Union Telegraph Company at $1,827,727.45; and it is further ordered by the state board of equalization that the assessed value thereof be distributed upon the classes of property as follows:

6,075.98 miles of poles at
$71.50 per mile .....	$434,432 57
23,767.34 miles of wire at
$22.02 per mile .....	523,356 82
3,375 instruments at $5.70
each .....	13,537 50
All other property at.....	856,400 56
	<hr/>
	$1,827,727 45

The apportionment of the tax to Jackson county was as follows:

For state purposes .....	$202 43
For county purposes .....	283 40
For road purposes .....	35 41
For general county school purposes .....	370 61
For school building purposes ..	2 98
For other school purposes .....	19 03
For Kansas City municipal purposes .....	81 21
For Independence municipal purposes .....	25 38
For Kaw township railroad purposes .....	2 03
For Blue township railroad purposes .....	4 74
	<hr/>
Total .....	$1,027 22

*The case was tried without a jury and [416] the trial court found "the fact to be from the evidence and the pleadings that the defendant owned in the state of Missouri, at the time of said assessment, the poles, wires, and instruments of the value hereinbefore set forth. And the court finds the fact to be from the evidence that in valuing 'all other property' of defendant the state board took into consideration the franchise of defendant company, and the court finds under the law, and so declares, that the franchise of defendant company is not subject to valuation and taxation, and as to this item of the above-named valuation the court finds the issues for the defendant."

Judgment was entered against plaintiff in error in the sum of $605.82, being the tax on the poles, wires, and instruments of the company, with interest at 2 per cent for collector's fees, and also for attorneys' fees. The amount found due was made a first lien against the property of defendant in error, and special execution ordered to be issued. Both parties moved for a new trial, which motions were denied. Both parties then appealed to the supreme court of the state, which court reversed the judgment of the circuit court. After an elaborate discussion of the case the supreme court said:

"It follows that the judgment of the circuit court holding the tax assessed against 'all other property at $856,400.56' to be unlawful, is erroneous, and that the plaintiff is entitled to a judgment for the whole amount of the tax sued for. Judgment is accordingly entered here for the plaintiff for $1,027.22, back taxes for the year 1899, with interest thereon from the 1st of January, 1900, at the rate of 1 per cent per month (Rev. Stat. 1899, § 9225), and costs."

This writ of error was then sued out. Other facts appear in the opinion.

Messrs. Eleneious Smith and John F. Dillon argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Alexander New and Henry D. Estabrook, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The Western Union Telegraph Company is an agent of the government and an instrument of interstate commerce; and its franchises exercised in Missouri having been derived solely from the Federal government are exempt from taxation by the taxing authorities of the state.

Pensacola Teleg. Co. v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 96 U. S. 1, 24 L. ed. 708; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Texas, 105 U. S. 460, 26 L. ed. 1067; California v. Central P. R. Co. 127 U. S. 1, 32 L. ed. 150, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 153, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1073; San Francisco v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 96 Cal. 140, 17 L. R. A. 301, 31 Pac. 10; Central P. R. Co. v. California, 162 U. S. 91, 40 L. ed. 903, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 766; Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co. v. Illinois, 118 U. S. 557, 30 L. ed. 244, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 31, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 4; Union P. R. Co. v. Peniston, 18 Wall. 5, 21 L. ed. 787; Leloup v. Port of Mobile, 127 U. S. 640, 32 L. ed. 311, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 134, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1380; Robbins v. Shelby County Taxing Dist. 120 U. S. 493, 30 L. ed. 696, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 45, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 592; Philadelphia & N. Mail S. S. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 122 U. S. 344, 30 L. ed. 1204, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 308, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1118; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Pendleton, 122 U. S. 358, 30 L. ed. 1189, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 306, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1126.

The state board of equalization has discriminated against plaintiff in error and in favor of other persons generally. The board, in order to discriminate as aforesaid, fixed the value of the property of the Western Union Telegraph Company for taxation at far more than its full actual cash value, and intentionally so equalized and adjusted the values of other property throughout the state at 40 per cent of the actual cash value thereof. The necessary effect of all of which has been that the said company has been discriminated against in violation of the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

Pellon v. Commercial Nat. Bank, 101 U. S. 143, 25 L. ed. 901; Cummings v. Merchants' Nat. Bank, 101 U. S. 153, 25 L. ed. 903; German Nat. Bank v. Kimball, 103 U. S. 732, 26 L. ed. 469; State ex rel. Morris v. Cunningham, 153 Mo. 642, 55 S. W. 249; State ex rel. Wright v. St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. 82 Mo. 683; State ex rel. Gibson v. Davis, 131 Mo. 457, 33 S. W. 22; Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. v. State Bd. of Equalization, 64 Mo. 294; State v. Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. 75 Mo. 208; Ward v. Gentry County Bd. of Equalization, 135 Mo. 309, 36 S. W. 648; House v. Clinton County Ct. 67 Mo. 522; State ex rel. Lemon v. Buchanan County Bd. of Equalization, 108 Mo. 235, 18 S. W. 782; State ex rel. Wyatt v. Vaile, 122 Mo. 33, 26 S. W. 672; State Bd. of Equalization v. People, 191 Ill. 528, 58 L. R. A. 513, 61 N. E. 339; Ex parte Ft. Smith & V. B. Bridge Co. 62 Ark. 461, 36 S. W. 1060; Los Angeles County v. Ballerino, 99 Cal. 597, 32 Pac. 583, 34 Pac. 329; Pacific Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. Dalton, 119 Cal. 604, 51 Pac. 1072; Randell v. Bridgeport, 63 Conn. 321, 28 Atl. 523; Bureau County v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. 44 Ill. 229; Iowa & D. Teleph. Co. v. Schamber, 15 S. D. 588, 91 N. W. 78; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Atchison County, 54 Kan. 786, 39 Pac. 1039; Merrill v. Humphrey, 24 Mich. 170; Walsh v. King, 74 Mich. 350, 41 N. W. 1080; State ex rel. Wright v. Savage (Neb.) 91 N. W. 557; Cocheco Mfg. Co. v. Strafford, 51 N. H. 455; Manchester Mills v. Manchester, 58 N. H. 38; Mercantile Nat. Bank v. New York, 172 N. Y. 35, 64 N. E. 756; Chattanooga v. Nashville, C. & St. L. R. Co. 7 Lea. 563; Weeks v. Milwaukee, 10 Wis. 243; Hersey v. Milwaukee County, 16 Wis. 186, 82 Am. Dec. 713; Lefferts v. Calumet County, 21 Wis. 688; Milwaukee Iron Co. v. Hubbard, 29 Wis. 52; Hersey v. Barron County, 37 Wis. 75; Railroad Tax Case, 8 Sawy. 238, 13 Fed. 722; Second Nat. Bank v. Caldwell, 13 Fed. 429; Re Watson, 15 Fed. 511; Santa Clara County v. Southern P. R. Co. 9 Sawy. 165, 18 Fed. 385; Indiana ex rel. Wolf v. Pullman Palace Car Co. 11 Biss. 561, 16 Fed. 193; Dundee Mortg. Trust Invest. Co. v. School Dist. No. 1, 10 Sawy. 52, 21 Fed. 151, 11 Sawy. 92, 24 Fed. 197; Taylor v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 31 C. C. A. 537, 60 U. S. App. 166, 88 Fed. 350; Railroad & Teleph. Cos. v. Tennessee, 85 Fed. 302; Chicago Union Traction Co. v. State Bd. of Equalization, 114 Fed. 557; Cooley, Taxn. 2d ed. pp. 748-785; Judson, Taxn. § 478; Welty, Assessments, § 186.

Where discrimination of this character exists, it amounts to fraud in law, and a denial of equal protection of the law, and the courts will grant relief. Likewise where lack of jurisdiction to make the assessment is shown.

State ex rel. Wyatt v. Vaile, 122 Mo. 33, 26 S. W. 672; State ex rel. Love v. Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. 101 Mo. 120, 13 S. W. 406; Black v. McGonigle, 103 Mo. 192, 15 S. W. 615; State ex rel. Morris v. Cunningham, 153 Mo. 642, 55 S. W. 249.

In all cases where franchises such as those possessed by the Western Union Telegraph Company have been considered in estimating the value of property assessed, and such assessments have been sustained, statutes providing for the assessment of corporations under a "unit" system have contained express and detailed provisions for correctly ascertaining the valuation of the property to be assessed. No such provisions are found in the laws of Missouri. The "ways and means" for any such assessment have not been prescribed. Furthermore, the statutes of Missouri exclude any such mode of assessment of telegraph companies.

Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Atty. Gen. 125 U. S. 530, 31 L. ed. 790, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 961; Atty. Gen. v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 141 U. S. 40, 35 L. ed. 628, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 889; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Taggart, 163 U. S. 1, 41 L. ed. 49, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1054; State Railroad Tax Cases, 92 U. S. 575, sub nom. Taylor v. Secor, 23 L. ed. 669; Pullman's Palace Car Co. v. Pennsylvania, 141 U. S. 18, 35 L. ed. 613, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 595, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 876; Adams Exp. Co. v. Ohio State Auditor, 165 U. S. 194, 41 L. ed. 683, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 305; on Rehearing 166 U. S. 185, 41 L. ed. 965, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 604; Henderson Bridge Co. v. Kentucky, 166 U. S. 150, 41 L. ed. 953, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 532; St. Louis v. Wenneker, 145 Mo. 238, 47 S. W. 105.

The franchise of a corporation "to be" a corporation is not taxable in a foreign state in which it is licensed to do business.

London & S. F. Bank v. Block, 117 Fed. 900.

Mr. Hunter M. Meriwether argued the cause, and, with Mr. Robert E. Ball, filed a brief for defendant in error:

The franchises, in the sense of intangible property, as well as the poles and wires of the Western Union Telegraph Company, are taxable by the several states. Such franchise taxes have been sustained in all recent cases by the Supreme Court of the United States against this defendant, and others similarly situated.

Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Atty. Gen. 125 U. S. 530, 31 L. ed. 790, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 961; Atty. Gen. v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 141 U. S. 40, 35 L. ed. 628, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 889; Central P. R. Co. v. California, 162 U. S. 91, 40 L. ed. 903, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 766; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Norman, 77 Fed. 13; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Taggart, 163 U. S. 1, 41 L. ed. 49, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1054; 25 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 873; Adams Exp. Co. v. Ohio State Auditor, 166 U. S. 220, 41 L. ed. 977, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 604; Com. v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 2 Dauph. Co. Rep. 40; Michigan Teleph. Co. v. Charlotte, 93 Fed. 11; Keokuk & H. Bridge Co. v. Illinois, 175 U. S. 626, 44 L. ed. 299, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 205; Henderson Bridge Co. v. Kentucky, 166 U. S. 154, 41 L. ed. 954, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 532; Louisville Tobacco Warehouse Co. v. Com. 106 Ky. 165, 57 L. R. A. 33, 49 S. W. 1069; Com. v. Manor Gas Coal Co. 188 Pa. 195, 41 Atl. 605; Adams Exp. Co. v. Kentucky, 166 U. S. 171, 41 L. ed. 960, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 527.

190 U. S.

The assessment made by the state board was an assessment of the property of plaintiff in error, and did not include or in any way affect the right to exist and transact its business in Missouri or elsewhere. The tax is strictly a property tax, and having been fairly and legally assessed upon a reasonable valuation of the property, should be sustained.

First Nat. Bank v. Kentucky, 9 Wall. 353, 19 L. ed. 701; Union P. R. Co. v. Peniston, 18 Wall. 5, 21 L. ed. 787; Commercial Electric Light & P. Co. v. Judson, 21 Wash. 49, 57 L. R. A. 78, 56 Pac. 829; Louisville R. Co. v. Com. 105 Ky. 710, 49 S. W. 486; Paducah Street R. Co. v. McCracken County, 105 Ky. 472, 49 S. W. 178; Owensboro Nat. Bank v. Owensboro, 173 U. S. 664, 43 L. ed. 850, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 537; Com. v. Manor Gas Coal Co. 8 Pa. Dist. R. 258; New York v. Roberts, 171 U. S. 658, 43 L. ed. 323, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 58.

There is a clear distinction between a license tax and a property tax. The former involves a charge for permission or authority to transact certain business, while the latter is a contribution imposed upon, and measured by, the property of an individual or corporation. The state cannot impose a license, impost, or embargo on plaintiff in error, even though it be called a tax. But it can take from the property owned by plaintiff in error within the jurisdiction of the state, a sufficient amount to pay its just proportion of its governmental expenses. Nothing else having been attempted, the tax should be sustained.

Cooley, Taxn. 2d ed. pp. 383, 576; Burroughs, Taxn. § 77, p. 146, § 85, p. 169; Judson, Taxn. p. 130; Welton v. Missouri, 91 U. S. 275, 23 L. ed. 347; State v. Emert, 103 Mo. 241, 11 L. R. A. 219, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 527, 15 S. W. 81; Emert v. Missouri, 156 U. S. 296, 39 L. ed. 430, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 68, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 367.

The action of the state board in valuing and assessing the property of the plaintiff in error is not subject to review or attack in this proceeding.

Cooley, Taxn. 2d ed. p. 748; Burroughs, Taxn. p. 238; Hamilton v. Rosenblatt, 8 Mo. App. 237; Yazoo & M. Valley R. Co. v. Adams, 77 Miss. 764, 25 So. 355; Home F. Ins. Co. v. Lynch, 19 Utah, 189, 56 Pac. 681; Danforth v. Livingston, 23 Mont. 558, 59 Pac. 916; State, Elizabeth, Prosecutor, v. New Jersey Jockey Club, 63 N. J. L. 515, 44 Atl. 207; Dayton v. Multnomah, 34 Or. 239, 55 Pac. 23; Ledoux v. Le Bee, 83 Fed. 761; McLeod v. Receveur, 18 C. C. A. 188, 34 U. S. App. 533, 71 Fed. 455; Brooklyn Elev. R. Co. v. Brooklyn, 16 Misc. 416, 38 N. Y. Supp. 154; State ex rel. Harrison County Bank v. Springer, 134 Mo. 212, 35 S. W. 589.

Mr. Justice McKenna, after stating the facts, delivered the opinion of the court:

On the question of fact, if it be such, as to what the item "of other property at $856,400.56," in the *assessment by the board[421] of equalization, was constituted of, the trial court and the supreme court of the state are not in accord. The trial court found the "fact to be from the evidence that, in valuation 'of other property' of defendant, the state board took into consideration the franchise of defendant company." It is apparent from the court's opinion that by franchise the court meant the rights and privileges obtained by the plaintiff in error under the act of Congress of July 24, 1866. The supreme court of the state, however, expressed its conclusion from the evidence, as follows:

"So, that, when, in determining the value of the property of the defendant in this state, the board of equalization took into consideration 'the cost of construction and equipment of said Western Union Telegraph Company, and the location thereof, and its traffic and business, and the par value of its stock and bonds, and the gross receipts and net earnings and franchises owned by said company, and the value thereof,' it did not and could not have included therein any franchise derived by the defendant from the government of the United States, because that government had conferred no such franchise; nor was such a valuation placed upon 'all other property,' a tax upon the franchise of the defendant company. The franchise derived by the defendant from the state of New York was considered by the board in determining the value of the property of the defendant located in this state. That is, that property was valued, not as so many poles, so much wire, so many instruments, or so much 'other property,' in the abstract, but was valued in the concrete, in the relation that such property in the abstract bore to other property in the abstract, which being brought into relation towards each other—into a system, located partly in this state and partly in other states—gave each part a concrete value, which was much greater than its abstract value. The right to exist,—the franchise—of the defendant, was property, and was subject to taxation, either directly, in the proportion that the portion of the franchise exercised in this state bore to the proportion of the franchise exercised in all other states, or indirectly, as was done in Massachusetts and was done here, by being impressed upon the [422] tangible property owned by it, thereby increasing its value, and by considering the franchise and its tangible property as a system, and then assessing the part of the property forming a part of the system and located in Missouri as of its proportionate value of the whole property constituting the system."

Plaintiff in error asserts the correctness of the finding of the trial court, and insists that it is the only finding that could have been made, and bases the argument against the taxes assessed on that insistence. But if the finding on the question is one of fact, necessarily we are bound by that made by the supreme court of the state. The trial court picked out the rights given to the defendant under the act of Congress, denominated them a franchise, contemplated the franchise as a distinct proprietary entity, and, because it was derived from the Federal government, decided that it was exempt from taxation. The necessary consequence was and is to destroy the relation between that franchise and the other properties of the plaintiff in error, regarding them, not as parts of the system, but abstractly,—regarding the poles not differently from other poles, the wire not different from other wire. The supreme court, on the contrary, regarded the properties as related and as constituting a system, and because of their relation having a value greater than the sum of the values of the individual things regarded merely as such. Viewing the order of the board of equalization as the supreme court viewed it, was it valid? In other words, Is the state in exercising its taxing power limited to assessing the mere material things used by the plaintiff in error, and must it regard them as of no greater value than they had when they reposed in lumber yards and factories, with cost added of putting them in place? Or the proposition may be stated another way, which better expresses the ultimate contention of the plaintiff in error. Conceding that the tangible property of the telegraph company derives value from its use in a system, does the company do business in the state in pursuance of the Constitution of the United States and the act of July, 1866, and become thereby an instrument of interstate commerce and a government agent, and as such exempt from the taxation contested in this case? We think the question has been answered by this court.

*In Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Atty. Gen. [423] 125 U. S. 530, 31 L. ed. 790, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 961, the effect of the act of July, 1866, upon the power of the state to tax the property of telegraph companies was considered. The laws of Massachusetts imposed a tax upon the Western Union Telegraph Company on account of the property owned and used by it within that state, the value of which was ascertained by comparing the length of its lines within the state with the length of its entire lines. The tax was sustained. The act of July, 1866, was urged against the tax as it is urged here.

The contentions of the company in that case was, as it is in this, that it did not derive its existence from the state of Missouri, but from the state of New York; that it did not do business in the state of Missouri by permission of that state, but by virtue of being an instrument of interstate commerce; that its rights and privileges and franchises were conferred by the United States and constituted it an agent of the United States, and as such agent it was exempt from the tax imposed. The contentions were rejected. The court did not test or measure the power of the state by the name which its laws gave the tax, and, speaking by Mr. Justice Miller, said:

"The argument is very much pressed that it is a tax upon the franchise of the company, which franchise being derived from the United States by virtue of the statute above recited, cannot be taxed by a state, and counsel for appellant occasionally speak of the tax authorized by the law of Massachusetts upon this as well as all other corporations doing business within its territory, whether organized under its laws or not, as a tax upon their franchises. But by whatever name it may be called, as described in the laws of Massachusetts it is essentially an excise upon the capital of the corporation. The laws of that commonwealth attempt to ascertain the just amount which any corporation engaged in business within its limits shall pay as a contribution to the support of its government upon the amount and value of the capital so employed by it therein."

And that power of the state was explained in an elaborate opinion, and sustained. [424] These propositions were laid down: *The company owed its existence as a corporation and its right to exercise the business of telegraphy to the laws of the state under which it was organized; that the privilege of running the lines of its wires over and along the military and post roads of the United States was granted by the act of Congress, but that the statute was merely permissive, and conferred no exemption from the ordinary burdens of taxation; that the state could not, by any specific statute, prevent a corporation from placing its lines along the post roads or stop the use of them after they were so placed, but the corporation could be taxed, in exchange for the protection it received from the state, "upon its real or personal property as any other person would be." And, describing the particular tax imposed, it was said:

"The tax in the present case, though nominally upon the shares of the capital stock of the company, is in effect a tax upon that organization on account of property owned and used by it in the state of Massachusetts, and the proportion of the length of its lines in that state to their entire length throughout the whole country is made the basis for ascertaining the value of that property. We do not think that such a tax is forbidden by the acceptance on the part of the telegraph company of the rights conferred by § 5263 of the Revised Statutes [U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3579] or by the commerce clause of the Constitution."

In other words, the lines in Massachusetts were regarded as a part of a system, and assessed accordingly.

The statute of Massachusetts came up again for consideration in Atty. Gen. v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 141 U. S. 40, 35 L. ed. 628, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 889, and the principles announced in Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Atty. Gen. 125 U. S. 530, 31 L. ed. 790, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 961, were affirmed and followed. See also Ratterman v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 127 U. S. 411, 32 L. ed. 229, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 59, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1127; Leloup v. Port of Mobile, 127 U. S. 640, 32 L. ed. 311, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 134, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1380.

These cases establish that, in estimating the value of the property of a telegraph company situate within a state, it may be regarded, not abstractly or strictly locally, but as a part of a system operated in other states, and that the state was not precluded from taxing the property because the state had not created the company or conferred franchise upon it, or because it derived rights or privileges under the act of July, 1866, or *was engaged in interstate commerce. Every one of the fundamental propositions, therefore, contended for by plaintiff in error, those decisions declare unsound.

But it is contended that the method of assessment followed in those cases was sustained because they were prescribed by the legislature, and that in the case at bar the method adopted was not prescribed or authorized by the laws of Missouri. The answer is obvious. What the laws of Missouri authorized was competent for the supreme court of Missouri to decide, and it decided that the order of the board of equalization was legal under the Constitution and statutes of the state. The decision, constituting, as it does, an interpretation of the Constitution and laws of the state, is not open to dispute here. If it were, it would seem uncontestable that the state could either prescribe the method or confer upon its taxing officers the power to adopt a suitable one. And there is nothing in the Adams Exp. Co. Cases, 166 U. S. 171, 225, 41 L. ed. 960, 979, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 527, 608, to the contrary.

2. The plaintiff in error asserts that the board of equalization practised discrimination against it by assessing at a value disproportionate to the value assessed on real and personal property by local assessing officers. This defense was expressed as follows:

"Defendant avers that under the law it was the duty of said board of equalization to adjust and equalize as aforesaid the valuation of all real and personal property in the state of Missouri, among the several counties in the state, and that during the period aforesaid it did so proceed to adjust and equalize such valuations. That said state board of equalization, by common arrangement, understanding and purpose among themselves, in fact did during the period aforesaid, in violation of the Constitution and laws of said state of Missouri, with intent to compel defendant to pay a greater proportion of taxes than the owners of other real and personal property in said state of Missouri, assess all property, to wit, other than the property of the telegraph companies, to wit, from 35 to 40 per cent of its true value, whereby as to taxes levied upon real and personal property other than telegraph property in the state of Missouri, this defendant was unlawfully and wrongfully discriminated *against to the extent of [426] 60 per cent of the amount of taxes assessed by said state board of equalization and levied by the taxing officers of the state upon defendant in pursuance of such assessment."

Testimony was introduced to sustain the averments.

The supreme court of Missouri held, however, that plaintiff in error could not, even under the cases cited by it, avail itself of the defense. The court said:

"The defendant cannot avail itself of these cases, for the reasons (1) that it seeks to raise the question of discrimination by a defense to an action at law to collect the taxes, and thereby collaterally attacks the judgment of the board of equalization; (2) that such questions can only be raised by a direct attack, in equity, and then only upon the condition precedent that it pays or tenders the amount justly due and only asks to have the collection of the excess restrained. This the defendant has not done in this case. It simply alleges a discrimination or excessive tax, and then seeks to defeat the whole assessment without paying or tendering anything, notwithstanding it admits by its answer and its proofs that it has property in this state subject to taxation of the value of $541,472.40. Upon the authority of the cases relied on by it, this cannot be done."

We concur in this view. The proceedings before the board were quasi judicial, and the order made by it was within its jurisdiction. It was not void on its face, and cannot be resisted in an action at law. This is the principle announced in the case referred to. In Stanley v. Albany County [121 U. S. 535, 30 L. ed. 1001, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1234] is cited, among other cases, Balfour v. Portland, 28 Fed. 738. The case is especially pertinent. The action was at law for the recovery of taxes paid under protest which had been levied upon property which, it was charged, had been deliberately overvalued. Recovery was denied. The circuit court said:

"The property was subject to taxation by the authority and for the purpose alleged. True, the result reached was erroneous, because of the wilful disregard in the proceeding of the law requiring uniformity in the [427] valuation of property for taxation *within the jurisdiction of the defendant. Still the proceeding being quasi judicial, and the subject-matter within the jurisdiction of the officers who conducted it, the result reached is so far conclusive that the legality of it cannot be questioned in an action at law to recover back the one half of the tax as illegal."

So this court said in Stanley v. Albany County:

"It is only where the assessment is wholly void, or void with respect to separable portions of the property, the amount collected on which is ascertainable, or where the assessment has been set aside as invalid, that an action at law will lie for the taxes paid, or for a portion thereof. Over-valuation of property is not a ground of action at law for the excess of taxes paid beyond what should have been levied upon a just valuation. The courts cannot, in such cases, take upon themselves the functions of a revising or equalizing board. Newman v. Livingston County, 45 N. Y. 676, 687; National Bank v. Elmira, 53 N. Y. 49, 52; Bruecher v. Port Chester, 101 N. Y. 240, 244. 4 N. E. 272; Lincoln v. Worcester, 8 Cush.

55, 63; Hicks v. Westport, 130 Mass. 478; Balfour v. Portland, 28 Fed. 738."

And we think overvaluation of property cannot be a ground of defense at law. In other words, the action of the tax officers, being in the nature of a judgment, must be yielded to until set aside. This can only be done in a direct proceeding. The property owner is in effect a plaintiff, and the condition of relief against the enforcement of the quasi judicial order, which he attacks, is a tender of payment of the taxes that he ought to pay. And this condition would still be upon him if he set up overvaluation as an equitable defense to an action brought against him. Los Angeles County v. Ballerino, 99 Cal. 594, 597, 32 Pac. 581, 34 Pac. 329. This certainly would be so in Missouri, under the doctrine expressed by the supreme court of the state in the case at bar.

Judgment affirmed.

Mr. Justice Brewer concurs in the result.

Mr. Justice White and Mr. Justice Peckham dissent.

*DANFORTH GEER, Willard F. Gay, Ar-[428] thur W. Smith, et al., Appts.,
v.

MATHIESON ALKALI WORKS, Castner Electrolytic Alkali Company, Edward E. Arnold, Richard T. Wilson, John G. Agar, Alfred Ely, John Russel Gladdings, et al., as Directors of the Said Mathieson Alkali Works.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 428-437.)

Service of summons on foreign corporation—removal of causes—separable controversy.

1. Service of summons within the state on resident directors of a foreign corporation is insufficient to give the court jurisdiction of such corporation, where at the time of such service it had ceased to do business within the state, and had designated no agent on whom service could be made.
2. A separable controversy which justifies a removal to a Federal court, where there is diverse citizenship, exists between plaintiffs and two corporations named as defendants in a complaint which seeks to set aside for fraud a conveyance between such corporations, and to prevent the directors of the grantor from making any further disposition of its property, and prays for a reconveyance of such property and an accounting by the grantee for the damages sustained by the transfer.

NOTE.—As to service of process on foreign corporations—see notes to Foster v. Charles Betcher Lumber Co. (S. D.) 23 L. R. A. 490, and Eldred v. American Palace-Car Co. 45 C. C. 3.

As to what service of process is sufficient to constitute due process of law—see note to Pinney v. Providence Loan & Invest. Co. (Wis.) 50 L. R. A. 577.

On removal of causes generally—see notes to Whelan v. New York, L. E. & W. R. Co. (C. C. N. D. Ohio) 1 L. R. A. 65; Butler v. National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers, 36 L. ed. U. S. 346, and Torrence v. Shedd, 36 L. ed. U. S. 528.

and also asks that such directors, who are joined as defendants and are not all residents of different states from plaintiffs, be compelled to account as agents and trustees for their actions in the premises, and be required to make good all loss and damage caused by their wrongful conduct.

[No. 261.]

Submitted April 24, 1903. Decided June 1, 1903.

A PPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York to review an order dismissing a suit for want of due service of process. Affirmed.

Statement by Mr. Justice McKenna:

This is an appeal from an order dismissing appellants' bill for want of due service of process.

The suit is in equity, and was commenced in the supreme court of the state of New York to set aside the conveyance made by the Mathieson Alkali Company to the Castner Electrolytic Alkali Company, on the ground that the conveyance was fraudulent. The directors of the former company were made defendants. On the petition of the defendant companies the case was removed to the circuit court of the United States for the southern district of New York, on the ground that the controversy was wholly between citizens of different states, and separable as to them. The appellants made the motion in the circuit court to remand the case to the state court, but the motion was denied, the circuit court saying:

"Whatever relief the complainants may be entitled to against the directors upon the facts alleged, they would, as to the two corporations, be entitled to a decree for retransfer of the property, and an accounting for damages sustained by the transfer. This is a controversy separable from the one between complainants and the officers and directors who effected the transfer, *and citizenship of the parties to that separable controversy being such as the statute contemplates, the motion to remand is denied."

The Mathieson Alkali Works (which we shall designate hereafter as the Mathieson Company) then moved the court to set aside the summons and the service thereof, on the ground that it, the Mathieson Company, was, at the time of the service of the summons, a foreign corporation, and at that time, and for some time before, had no place of transacting business in the state of New York, and transacted no business therein. Affidavits were presented on the motion, and it was granted.

The appellants were plaintiffs in the court below, and we will so call them. They are stockholders in the Mathieson Company. Some of them are citizens of the state of New York, some citizens of states other than Virginia, and some citizens of Great Britain and Ireland. It is alleged that the defendant corporations are Virginia corporations, and that each has an office and place of business in the city of New York, and that all but two of the directors of the Castner Electrolytic Alkali Company, hereafter called the Castner Company, resided there, and that the property, to recover which the suit is brought, is situated in the state of New York.

The purpose of the Mathieson Company was to manufacture salt, soda, soda ash, bleaching powder, and other minerals, and to carry on a general merchandise business, and engage in agriculture and stock raising.

The bill is very voluminous, and it is enough to explain the contentions in the case to say that it recites the organization and history of the Mathieson Company; the erection and operation by it of a manufacturing plant at Saltville, Virginia; the leasing by it from the Niagara Falls Power Company of land and power at Niagara Falls, and the establishment of a plant there for the manufacture of the commodities mentioned in the charter of the company, and the carrying on of a profitable business. The bill alleges, on information and belief, that the defendants Arnold and Wilson are, respectively, the president and financial agent and manager of the company; the defendants Agar and Ely, their attorneys; Gladding, an employee of *some sort, and the directors[430] other than Arnold and Wilson are dummies, without substantial interest in the company. That Arnold and Wilson have conducted the affairs of the company with great secrecy, and for their own interests; that Arnold is a member of the firm of Arnold, Hoffman, & Co., dealers in chemicals, in the city of New York, and by arrangements nominally between the firm and the company, but really between Wilson and the firm, the latter has had the exclusive sale and disposition of the products of the company since the organization, of the details of which the plaintiffs are ignorant, because they have been kept secret from the stockholders. That, though dividends have been earned, none have been declared or paid, but have been appropriated by Arnold and Wilson. That they, with the other directors, have confederated and conspired to fraudulently dispose of, and do away with, substantially all of the property of the company, and have attempted to do so by means of the conveyance to the Castner Company, set out in the bill; and, to better conceal their acts, have obtained no certificate from the secretary of state, or designated any person upon whom process can be served. That the Castner Company was promoted and organized by the defendants Arnold and Wilson, and is controlled by them, and they are chiefly interested in its affairs. That plaintiffs only obtained knowledge of the existence of that company within the past few days, and of the conveyance to it, but have no precise knowledge of its affairs, and believe that the great body of the stockholders of the Mathieson Company are ignorant of the existence of the Castner Company or of the conveyance to it. That, by a communication from the secretary of state, it appears that the Castner Company was incorporated April 30, 1901, under the laws of Virginia, and that its officers consisted of a president, vice president, and seven directors; and a provision in the articles of incorporation shows that the defendants Wilson, Arnold, and Agar are directors, and that Richard T. Wilson, Jr., a son of the defendant Wilson, is also a director. It is alleged that the other officers and directors are mere servants and instruments of the defendants Arnold and Wilson, and they created and organized the Castner Company as a means and contrivance to cheat and defraud the creditors 31]*and stockholders of the Mathieson Company by means of the conveyance to the Castner Company. The conveyance is set out in full. It recites that it is executed for and in consideration of one dollar, and other valuable considerations, and purports to convey certain patent rights and all of the property of the Mathieson Company in the state of New York. The bill also alleges the property conveyed was delivered to the Castner Company, and it is in the possession thereof; that the patents and property conveyed are "essentially necessary" to enable the Mathieson Company to carry on the business for which it was organized, and their conveyance in effect wholly destroys the business of that corporation and renders its capital stock utterly worthless, and deprives the creditors of the corporation, of whom there then were and are a large number, and for a large amount in the aggregate, of all remedy for the collection of their debts. That the conveyance is ultra vires, and the defendant directors are trustees and agents of and for the stockholders, and had no power to convey away the property and patents of the company essential to the carrying on of its business. And, by reason of the facts alleged, the defendant directors are unfit persons to have the charge and management of the affairs of the company, and that a receiver of the corporation should be appointed, and the defendants enjoined. That, for the reasons set forth, plaintiffs have not applied to the defendant the Mathieson Company to bring this action, being advised that its directors "would not be proper persons to prosecute an action in the name of the company, which was practically an action to redress frauds they themselves had committed."

The specific relief asked is stated in the opinion.

Mr. W. W. MacFarland submitted the cause for appellants. Messrs. MacFarland, Taylor, & Costello were with him on the brief.

There is no separable cause of action stated in the complaint, and, therefore, no right of removal on that ground.

Black's Dillon, Removal of Causes, §§ 77, 143, 144; Hyde v. Ruble, 104 U. S. 409, 26 L. ed. 823; Fraser v. Jennison, 106 U. S. 191, 27 L. ed. 131, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 171; Ayers v. Wiswall, 112 U. S. 187, 28 L. ed. 693, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 90. See also Broadway Ins. Co. v. Chicago G. W. R. Co. 101 Fed. 507.

The directors are not nominal and unnecessary parties, when by the bill they are expressly implicated in a breach of trust, an abuse of the corporate name and seal, and a fraudulent disposition of the property intrusted to their management, as they are in this case, and where, as in this case, the bill prays for relief against them.

Seddon v. Virginia, T. & C. Steel & I. Co. 1 L. R. A. 108, 36 Fed. 6; Hanover Nat. Bank v. Credits Commutation Co. 118 Fed. 110.

The directors are the real defendants; the corporations, whose names they have used and abused, are merely legal entities whose presence is legally essential for mechanical purposes.

Black's Dillon, Removal of Causes, § 87.

The directors of a business corporation, which is practically a copartnership (Ervin v. Oregon R. & Nav. Co. 23 Blatchf. 517, 27 Fed. 625; Morawetz, Priv. Corp. §§ 973, 818), are in a very strict sense accountable agents.

The case is substantially a suit in rem.

Waples, Proceedings in Rem, chaps. 56, 57.

Mr. Alfred Ely submitted the cause for appellees. Messrs. Agar, Ely, & Fulton were with him on the brief.

The service of summons was invalid.

Goldney v. Morning News, 156 U. S. 518, 39 L. ed. 517, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 559; Wabash Western R. Co. v. Brow, 164 U. S. 271, 41 L. ed. 431, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 126; Barrow S. S. Co. v. Kane, 170 U. S. 100, 42 L. ed. 964, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 526.

Only necessary parties are to be regarded by the court, and the residence of president and directors, codefendants, does not bar the corporation's right of removal.

New York v. New Jersey S. B. Transp. Co. 24 Fed. 818.

The decision of the circuit court denying the plaintiff's motion to remand should be affirmed.

Barney v. Latham, 103 U. S. 205, 26 L. ed. 514.

Mr. Justice McKenna, after stating the facts as above, delivered the opinion of the court:

The facts and arguments by which it is attempted to sustain the service on the Mathieson Company are the same as *were [432] presented in the case of Conley v. Mathieson Alkali Works, decided May 18 of this term. 190 U. S. 406, ante, 1113, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 728. On the authority of the case the service in this must be held insufficient to give jurisdiction of the Mathieson Company, and the order of the circuit court setting aside the service of summons must be affirmed if the case was properly removed to that court. And this depends upon the question whether the complaint exhibits a separable controversy between the plaintiffs and the companies.

A suit may, consistently with the rules of pleading, embrace several distinct controversies. Barney v. Latham, 103 U. S. 212, 26 L. ed. 517. It was said in Hyde v. Ruble, 104 U. S. 409, 26 L. ed. 824: "To entitle a party to a removal under this clause [2d clause of § 2 of the act of 1875 (18 Stat. at L. 470, chap. 137, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 508), same as 2d clause in the act of 1887 (24 Stat. at L. 552, chap. 373, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 582)], there must exist in the suit a separate and distinct cause of action in respect to which all the necessary parties on one side are citizens of different states from those on the other." In other words, as expressed in Fraser v. Jennison, 106 U. S. 194, 27 L. ed. 132, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 171 "the case must be one capable of separation into parts, so that, in one of the parts, a controversy will be presented with citizens of one or more states on one side, and citizens of other states on the other, which can be fully determined without the presence of any of the other parties to the suit as it has been begun." And, when two or more causes of action are united in one suit, there can be a removal of the whole suit on the petition of one or more of the plaintiffs or defendants (now only the defendants) interested in the controversy which, if it had been sued on alone, would be removable. Hyde v. Ruble, 104 U. S. 409, 26 L. ed. 824. See also Ayers v. Wiswall, 112 U. S. 187, 28 L. ed. 693, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 90. The application of these principles to the case at bar will be seen by the relief prayed for.

The relief prayed against the companies is as follows: Against the Mathieson Company, that the conveyance in its name be adjudged fraudulent and void, and that the same be annulled; that a receiver of its works be appointed; that its directors be enjoined from making any further disposition of its property; that it be required to make a full disclosure in respect to all of the premises set forth and alleged, and that *the complainants have access to all books, records, and papers, including the stock book. Against the Castner Company, that it may be required to account for all acts and doings in the premises set forth; to make good and pay all of the damages sustained by complainants to the Mathieson Company by reason thereof; that it be adjudged to reconvey the property so wrongfully conveyed to it in the name of the Mathieson Company; that it account for and pay all of the income, earnings, and revenue of the property since the date of the conveyance.

To the relief asked against the companies, were the directors of the Mathieson Company necessary parties? In Winch v. Birkenhead, L & C. Junction R. Co. 5 De G. & S. 562, it was held, in a suit by a stockholder of the corporation in behalf of himself and all other stockholders, to restrain the performance of an ultra vires agreement, that it was not necessary that the directors should be made parties. It was said by the vice chancellor: "The act that is sought to be restrained is the act of the company. It is quite sufficient if there is an order restraining the company. The company itself cannot act except by means of its officers. It appears to me that the suit is properly framed, by the relief being sought against the company alone."

Hatch v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. and Same v. Same, 6 Blatchf. 105, Fed. Cas. 190 U. S.

No. 6,204, were suits brought by the plaintiff in each in behalf of himself and all other stockholders of the defendant corporation, to restrain it from executing a contract which was alleged to be in excess of its powers. The plaintiff was a citizen of New York. The suits were brought in the supreme court of the state of New York. The individual defendants were directors of the corporation, and resided in the state of New York, except one, who was a citizen of the state of Illinois. In the second suit one Denham was made a party, who was the treasurer of the company, but not one of its directors. His citizenship does not appear. The plaintiff in the second suit alleged that the committee of directors had determined to close the transfer office of the company in the city of New York, and to remove all of its books, moneys, securities, and property beyond the jurisdiction of the *court; that the defendants had refused to [434] permit any transfer of the shares of stock on the books of the company. Judgment was prayed in the first suit for an injunction against the execution of the illegal contract, and of the acts which were alleged to be contemplated in the performance thereof. In the second suit judgment was prayed for the same injunction, and an injunction against the other acts alleged. On the petition of Tracy and the company, the cases were removed to the circuit court for the southern district of New York, and a motion was made to remand. The motion was heard by Mr. Justice Blatchford, who was then United States district judge, who said:

"These suits, therefore, are suits brought in the state of New York, by Hatch, a citizen of New York, against the members of the company, all of whom are citizens of the state which created the company, and which is a state other than New York, and against Tracy, a citizen of Illinois, and against other defendants, who are citizens of New York."

And describing the suits, said further:

"All the relief that is prayed for in either suit is by injunction, except the prayer in the first suit for a receiver. All the relief by injunction is prayed for in respect to all of the defendants. No such relief is prayed for in respect to any defendant other than the company that is not prayed for in respect to the company. The suits are really, both of them, wholly against the company alone. The directors and the treasurer, who are its codefendants, are merely its servants and agents, through whom necessarily it acts. It was not necessary or proper to make them parties to the suit at all. The injunctions prayed for and the injunctions issued, if issued against the company alone, and served on any director, or on the treasurer, would bind the person so served to obedience, and, even without such service, knowledge by the officer of the existence of the injunction against the company would bind the officer to obedience. People ex rel. Davis v. Sturtevant, 9 N. Y. 263, 277, 59 Am. Dec. 536. The directors and the treasurer are, therefore, not real parties to the suits, but merely nominal parties. No personal demand is made against any one of [435] them, nor is any personal accounting*asked from any one of them, and it is only in his relation to the company, and in the official position that he occupies toward the company, that any one of them is made a party. The test of this is, that, if any one of the directors or the treasurer were to resign his office, he would necessarily cease, ipso facto, to be a proper party to the suit, and the plaintiff would be obliged to make his successor in office a party, and so on with every change. The reason for this would be that, there being no relief prayed against the individual in his individual capacity, and the injunction asked being to restrain him merely from doing or not doing what his official relation to the company alone enables him to do, or to refrain from doing, when such official relation ceases, the relief asked and the injunction issued become, as to him, utterly futile. This would not be the case where he was made a party defendant, jointly with the corporation of which he was an officer, for the purpose of obtaining some specific relief against him on a personal liability, or in order to obtain a discovery from him in regard to matters peculiarly within his knowledge. There, the dissolution of his official relation would not affect the propriety of his being retained as a defendant. This view is conclusive to show that the entire real controversy in both suits, so far as it is shown by the prayer of the complainants, and which is the only guide the court can have, is between the plaintiff on the one side, and the company, as a corporate body, on the other. The plaintiff cannot, by joining as nominal defendants with the corporation persons who are citizens of the same state with the plaintiff, deprive the corporation of any right which it would otherwise have in respect to removing the cause into this court."

Heath v. Erie R. Co. came up before the same learned justice, and is reported in 8 Blatchf. 347, Fed. Cas. No. 6,306, 8 Blatchf. 413, Fed. Cas. No. 4,513. It was a suit by stockholders against the railway company and Jay Gould, James Fisk, Jr., and Frederick A. Lane, who were directors of the company. The object of the suit was to restrain ultra vires acts. The bill prayed for an injunction, for a receiver, for an accounting by Gould, Fisk, and Lane of the profits made by them, and that they "make payment and compensation to the company, for the [436] benefit of the plaintiffs and the *other bona fideshareholders, to the full extent of all such profits, benefits, gains, and advantages, and of all such damages, losses, and injuries." The bill was demurred to, on the ground, among others, that the other directors, fourteen in number, were not made parties to the bill. The court overruled the demurrer. The main part of the opinion, which was very elaborate, is devoted to the consideration of the right of the stockholders to maintain the suit, which right was sustained on the authority of many cases. Of the ground of demurrer that the other directors had not been made parties, the court said:

"The objection that such fourteen persons ought to be made parties, as appearing to have been directors when the bill was filed, for the reason that the bill asks for an injunction against the corporation, and for a receiver of the corporation, is not well taken. The relief so asked is against the corporation. If such fourteen persons were made parties, they would be merely nominal parties, and not real parties, in respect to any relief that is asked against the corporation; and no relief is asked as against them, except in respect to the matter of the classification, which has already been disposed of. This question was fully considered in the case of Hatch v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 6 Blatchf. 105, 114-116, Fed. Cas. No. 6,204."

It was, however, said by Lord Cairns in Ferguson v. Wilson, L. R. 2 Ch. 90, and it was held in Clinch v. Financial Corporation, L. R. 4 Ch. 117, that it was proper in a suit by a stockholder to restrain ultra vires acts of a corporation to join as defendants the directors of the corporation. This ruling is reconcilable with the other cases. The reconciliation lies in the distinction between proper and indispensable parties in view of the statute providing for the removal of causes to the Federal courts. Barney v. Latham, 103 U. S. 212, 26 L. ed. 517.

But relief is prayed against the individual defendants as follows:

"That the individual defendants, directors of the said Mathieson Alkali Works, may be compelled to account as agents and trustees of the said company for all their acts and doings in the premises above set forth; and that they may severally and respectively be adjudged and required to make good and pay *to the said Mathieson Alkali Works [437] and to the plaintiffs all loss and damage caused by their wrongful conduct in the premises as hereinabove set forth."

If it be conceded that, in a suit which seeks such relief, the Mathieson Company is a necessary party, it is certain the Castner Company is not. Besides, the relief is distinct from—separable from, to keep to the language of the cases—that which is sought as a result of the grounds of suit against the companies.

It follows from these views that the bill exhibits a controversy between the plaintiffs and the defendant companies, to which the individual defendants are not necessary parties, and the case was rightfully removed to the circuit court.

The order of the latter court setting aside the service of summons on the Mathieson Company, and dismissing the bill for want of jurisdiction of that company, is affirmed.

BOARD OF COMMISSIONERS OF STAN-
LY COUNTY and I. W. Snuggs, Treasurer of Stanly County, Petitioners,

v.

W. N. COLER & COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 437-451.)

Railway aid—validity of county bonds—cf—

NOTE.—On municipal bonds generally—see notes to Sutcliffe v. Lake County, 37 L. ed. U. S. 190 U. S.

fect of recitals—bona fide purchaser—construction of state statute—when not binding on Federal courts.

1. Purchasers of county bonds purporting to be issued for subscriptions to the capital stock of a railroad company, under the authority of N. C. Code, §§ 1996-1999, authorizing such subscriptions when necessary to aid in the completion of any railroad in which the citizens of the county may have an interest, are not entitled to assume, for the purpose of sustaining the validity of the bonds, that the railroad had been begun before the adoption of N. C. Const. 1868, which antedated the charter of the railroad company.
2. Federal courts, in determining the validity, in the hands of bona fide purchasers, of county bonds issued in aid of railroad construction under the authority of N. C. Code, §§ 1996-1999, are not bound by the construction given such statute by a decision of the highest state court subsequent to such purchase, but will exercise an independent judgment as to its meaning.
3. An interest in an unfinished railroad begun before the adoption of N. C. Const. 1868 cannot be deemed essential to the exercise by a county of the power to issue bonds in aid of railroad construction, conferred by N. C. Code, §§ 1996-1999, "when necessary to aid in the completion of any railroad in which the citizens of the county may have an interest," on the theory that such sections, being a reproduction of a statute passed shortly after the adoption of such Constitution, must be construed in the light of the constitutional provision which forbade the state to lend its aid to any corporation except in aid of the completion of such railroads as might be unfinished at the time of its adoption, or in which the state had a direct pecuniary interest.
4. Recitals in county bonds that they were issued, under the authority of N. C. Code, §§ 1996-1999, to pay a subscription to the capital stock of a railway, entitled bona fide purchasers to assume that the condition of the railroad as to construction and the "interest" of the county therein were such as, by § 1996, were required to exist before the power to issue such bonds could be exercised.

[No. 264.]

Argued April 27, 28, 1903. Decided June 1, 1903.

ON WRIT of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit to review a decree which on rehearing affirmed a decree of the Circuit Court for the Western District of North Carolina sustaining the validity of county 145; Harper County v. Rose, 35 L. ed. U. S. 344; Ilch v. Mentz, 33 L. ed. U. S. 1075, and Citizens' Sav. & L. Asso. v. Perry County, 39 L. ed. U. S. 585.

On estoppel by recital in negotiable bonds—see note to Mercer County v. Hackett, 17 L. ed. U. S. 548.

As to state decisions and laws as rules of decision in Federal courts—see notes to Wilson v. Perrin, 11 C. C. A. 71; Hill v. Hite, 29 C. C. A. 553; Griffin v. Overman Wheel Co. 9 C. C. A. 548; Elmendorf v. Taylor, 6 L. ed. U. S. 290; Jackson ex dem. St. John v. Chew, 6 L. ed. U. S. 583; United States ex rel. Butz v. Muscatine, 19 L. ed. U. S. 490; Clark v. Graham, 5 L. ed. U. S. 334, and Forepaugh v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. (Pa.) 5 L. R. A. 508.

190 U. S.

bonds issued in aid of railroad construction. Affirmed.

See same case below, 37 C. C. A. 484, 96 Fed. 284, 51 C. C. A. 379, 113 Fed. 705.

Statement by Mr. Justice McKenna:

*This suit was brought in the United [438] States circuit court for the western district of North Carolina, by the respondents against the petitioner, to recover on certain coupons attached to bonds alleged to have been issued by Stanly county, state of North Carolina, in part payment of the subscription of said county to the capital stock of the Yadkin Valley Railroad Company. The bill alleged the following facts:

The Yadkin Valley Railroad Company was organized as a corporation under the laws of North Carolina, to construct and operate a railroad running from Salisbury in that state, south to Norwood, a point in Stanly county.

The incorporation of the said company was under and by virtue of chapter 236 of the Acts of 1870, passed by the legislature for that year; and the said chapter was amended by an act of the legislature,—chapter 183 of the Acts of 1887.

The county, being desirous of aiding in the construction of said road, and acting through its proper authorities, subscribed the amount of $100,000 to the capital stock of the company, in pursuance of the authority and power conferred upon the said county under and by virtue of the acts of the legislature of North Carolina as above set out; and, also, under and by virtue of §§ 1996, 1997, 1998, and 1999 of the Code of North Carolina, all of the said acts and sections of the Code of North Carolina having been enacted and become laws in accordance with the Constitution of the state.

The county still holds the stock and derives benefit from the road in increased facilities for transportation, greatly increased value of the lands of the county, and from the taxes paid thereon. A copy of the bonds was attached to the bill, and is inserted in the margin.†

†EXHIBIT A.

(Copy.)

County of Stanly Six per Cent Bond.

Stanly county, state of North Carolina, is indebted to the bearer in the sum of five hundred dollars, lawful money of the United States, payable on the first day of July, A. D. one thousand nine hundred and twenty, with interest thereon from the first day of July, A. D. one thousand eight hundred and ninety, at the rate of six per cent per annum, payable on the first day of July in each year at the First National Bank of Salisbury, North Carolina, on presentation and surrender of the respective coupons hereto attached, as they severally become due and payable. This bond is one of a series of eighty of the denomination of one thousand dollars each, and forty of the denomination of five hundred, making a total of one hundred thousand dollars, issued by authority of an act of the general assembly of North Carolina, ratified the third day of March, A. D. 1887, entitled "An Act to Amend the Charter of the Yadkin Railroad Company," and of §§ 1996, 1997, 1998, and 1999 of the Code of North Carolina, and author-[439] *The bonds were exposed for sale, and the respondents became purchasers of them in good faith, and at the highest market price, and without any notice, express or implied, that there was any suggestion of their being void, invalid, fraudulent, or otherwise than perfectly legal in their issue and sale.

1127

Interest on the bonds issued, as the same has become due, has been paid for the last four years. The coupons due and the amounts thereof are as follows:

48 Stanly county coupons, Nos. 2,
46, 48, 49, and 72, $60.00 each..	$2,880 00
33 Stanly county coupons, Nos.
81, 92, 95, 96, 98, 108, 110, 112, 116, 118, 120, all numbers inclusive, $30.00.....	990 00

Making the sum of..... $3,870 00

[440] *The payment of said sums was demanded at the proper time and refused, although the said total sum had been collected from the taxpayers of the county by the board of commissioners, in pursuance of the power conferred upon them, and was in the hands of I. W. Snuggs (one of the petitioners here), as treasurer of the county, and, having received the same for the payment of said interest, he became and is the trustee and agent of the bond and coupon holders, and therefore holds the same "for the use and in trust for complainants." The complainants are informed and believe that the reason why said treasurer has not accounted to them is that he has been restrained by a certain process of injunction, issued by one of the superior courts of the state of North Carolina in a suit brought in the name of the board of commissioners, and in the names of James P. Nash and G. R. McCain as plaintiffs, and against the said I. W. Snuggs as defendant, but that complainants were not made parties to the same, nor was any other bondholder. The treasurer and board of commissioners, unless restrained, will dispose of the fund collected as aforesaid. An injunction was prayed, and the statement of an account, and the appointment of a receiver asked.

The answer attacked the validity of the bonds, and averred that their invalidity was adjudged by the supreme court of the state in the case of Stanly County v. Snuggs, 121 N. C. 394, 39 L. R. A. 439, 28 S. E. 539, "and that there has been no other decision or judgment given by said supreme court in conflict with the aforesaid decision; but that the said decision is uniform with the decision of the same court, delivered in the case of Union Bank v. Oxford, 119 N. C. 214, 34 L. R. A. 487, 25 S. E. 966, which are the only two cases in which the principle, or validity of these bonds has ever been before the supreme court of the state." There were proper replications made to the answer. The case was submitted on the pleadings and certain exhibits, some of them being the records of the suits in the courts of North Carolina.

The grounds upon which the bonds are claimed to be invalid are indicated in the opinion. A decree was entered declaring and adjudging the bonds to be valid obligations of the county of Stanly; that complainants (respondents here) in the suit *were bona fide purchasers and holders thereof; that I. W. Snuggs was the trustee of the bondholders, and held the sum of $6,000 as such trustee, for the benefit of the bondholders, under and by virtue of the law and the orders of the board of commissioners of the county, and for the sole purpose of paying off and discharging the interest due on the bonds as set out in the bill. The decree also appointed a receiver for said sum, and ordered that said I. W. Snuggs pay the same to the receiver. It was further adjudged that the board of commissioners of Stanly county be enjoined from in any manner interfering with the execution and performance of the decree. The decree was reversed by the circuit court of appeals, and the cause was remanded "with directions to dissolve the injunction, discharge the receiver, and dismiss the bill." 37 C. C. A. 484, 96 Fed. 284. A rehearing was granted, and the decree of the circuit court was affirmed. 51 C. C. A. 379, 113 Fed. 705.

Messrs. James E. Shepherd and A. C. Avery argued the cause, and, with Mr. Charles M. Busbee, filed a brief for petitioners:

The construction by the courts of a state of its Constitution and statutes is, as a general rule, binding on the Federal courts.

Claiborne County v. Brooks, 111 U. S. 400, 28 L. ed. 470, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 489; Burgess v. Seligman, 107 U. S. 20, 27 L. ed. 359, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 10; Bucher v. Cheshire R. Co. 125 U. S. 555, 31 L. ed. 795, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 974; Detroit v. Osborne, 135 U. S. 492, 34 L. ed. 260, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1012; South Branch Lumber Co. v. Ott, 142 U. S. 622, 35 L. ed. 1136, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 318; Kaukauna Water Power Co. v. Green Bay & M. Canal Co. 142 U. S. 254, 35 L. ed. 1004, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 173; McElvaine v.

ized by a majority vote of the qualified voters of Stanly county, at an election regularly held for that purpose on the 15th day of August, A. D. 1889, duly ordered by the board of commissioners of Stanly county.

This series of bonds is issued to pay the subscription of one hundred thousand dollars made by Stanly county to the capital stock of the said railroad, known as "The Yadkin Railroad Company." Stanly county reserves the privilege of paying the principal and interest of any or all of this series of bonds at any time after the expiration of ten years, upon the board of commissioners of said county first giving three months' notice of such payment in some newspaper published in said county, when such bonds shall be paid, according to number, beginning with number one.

In testimony whereof, the chairman of the board of county commissioners of Stanly county hath hereunto subscribed his name, for and on behalf of said board, and the clerk of the superior court of Stanly county hath countersigned the same and affixed thereto the seal of said superior court, this first day of July, A. D. one thousand eight hundred and ninety.

_____, Chairman.
Countersigned:

_____, Clerk of Superior Court.
190 U. S.

Brush, 142 U. S. 155, 35 L. ed. 971, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 156; Stutsman County v. Wallace, 142 U. S. 293, 35 L. ed. 1018, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 227; Norton v. Shelby County, 118 U. S. 425, 30 L. ed. 178, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1121; Gormley v. Clark, 134 U. S. 338, 33 L. ed. 909, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 554; Morley v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. 146 U. S. 162, 36 L. ed. 925, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 54; Bauserman v. Blunt, 147 U. S. 647, 37 L. ed. 316, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 466; May v. Tenney, 148 U. S. 60, 37 L. ed. 368, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 491; Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Baugh, 149 U. S. 368, 37 L. ed. 772, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 914; Lewis v. Monson, 151 U. S. 545, 38 L. ed. 265, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 424; Balkam v. Woodstock Iron Co. 154 U. S. 177, 38 L. ed. 953, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1010; Leffingwell v. Warren, 2 Black, 599, 17 L. ed. 261.

When it is found that no construction had been given to a statute by the state court when the transaction was entered into, the Federal courts will lean toward an agreement of views with the state courts, if the question seems to them balanced with doubt.

Burgess v. Seligman, 107 U. S. 20, 27 L. ed. 359, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 10.

The courts have uniformly construed the word "interest" in such connection as here used to mean "pecuniary interest" in the thing referred to.

Smedly v. Kirby, 120 Mich. 253, 70 N. W. 188; Taylor v. Normal Highway Comrs. 88 Ill. 527; Northampton v. Smith, 11 Met. 395; Dunlap v. Philadelphia, 13 W. N. C. 98; McGrath v. People, 100 Ill. 464; State, National R. Co., Prosecutors, v. Easton & A. R. Co. 36 N. J. L. 184; Linden v. Alameda County, 45 Cal. 7; Ashe v. Colusa County, 71 Cal. 236, 16 Pac. 783.

Interest has often been construed as meaning a pecuniary, valuable, or beneficial interest, not merely a patriotic or sentimental interest, which a citizen of a state or county feels in a public improvement.

Todd v. Robinson, L. R. 14 Q. B. Div. 739; Hunnings v. Williamson, L. R. 11 Q. B. Div. 536; Dexter v. Cotting, 149 Mass. 92, 21 N. E. 230; Bachman v. Packard, 2 Sawy. 264, Fed. Cas. No. 709; Northampton v. Smith, 11 Met. 395; Goodall v. Tuttle, 3 Biss. 219, Fed. Cas. No. 5,533; Whitney v. Britton, 16 App. Div. 457, 45 N. Y. Supp. 1150; Horn v. Volcano Water Co. 13 Cal. 62, 73 Am. Dec. 569; Brigham v. Gott, 20 N. Y. S. R. 420, 3 N. Y. Supp. 518; Whiteley v. Barley, L. R. 21 Q. B. Div. 154; Burgess v. Clark, L. R. 14 Q. B. Div. 735; Gasquet v. Johnson, 1 La. 431; Sauls v. Freeman, 24 Fla. 209, 4 So. 525; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Kellogg, 54 Neb. 138, 74 N. W. 403; Taylor v. Normal Highway Comrs. 88 Ill. 527; Re White, 37 Cal. 190; Shelton v. Derby, 27 Conn. 415; Phillips v. Smith, 62 Ala. 578.

The definitions of lexicons and law-books uniformly define an interest in any kind of property in the same way. If the word has no technical meaning, then it must be interpreted according to its ordinary meaning. If the courts have given it a technical meaning, that must be adopted.

190 U. S.

Adams v. Turrentine, 30 N. C. (8 Ired. L.) 147; Blue v. McDuffie, 44 N. C. (Busbee, L.) 131; Randall v. Richmond & D. R. Co. 107 N. C. 748, 11 L. R. A. 460, 12 S. E. 605.

The question of legislative authority in a municipal corporation to issue bonds in aid of a railroad company cannot be concluded by mere recitals.

Gunnison County v. E. H. Rollins & Sons, 173 U. S. 255, 43 L. ed. 689, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 390.

The estoppel does not arise except upon matters of fact, which the corporate officers had authority by law to determine and to certify.

Dixon County v. Field, 111 U. S. 83, 28 L. ed. 360, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 315; Gunnison County v. E. H. Rollins & Sons, 173 U. S. 255, 43 L. ed. 689, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 390.

No recital will create or dispense with the requisite authority to issue the bond.

1 Randolph, Com. Paper, § 345a.

Otherwise, it would always be in the power of a municipal body, to which power is denied, to usurp the forbidden authority by declaring that its assumption was within the law.

Dixon County v. Field, 111 U. S. 83, 28 L. ed. 360, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 315.

The rule, as settled by the latest authority, seems to be that where the law authorizes the municipal authorities to determine whether a condition precedent to subscribing and issuing bonds has been complied with, or when the data for determining whether it has been complied with are peculiarly within the knowledge or possession of such authorities, as to such conditions the recitals in bonds issued are conclusive.

Gunnison County v. E. H. Rollins & Sons, 173 U. S. 255, 43 L. ed. 689, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 390.

Neither the question whether Stanly county had an interest, nor whether the road was complete, was within the peculiar knowledge of the commissioners of Stanly county, nor were they custodians of a record by which alone that question could be determined, as in the case where the Constitution or law prescribed a limit as to the amount of indebtedness, and the county authorities only have the data for ascertaining the outstanding indebtedness.

Ibid.

The respondents are deemed to have notice of the fact that the railroad had never been begun, and was not such a road as the supreme court of the state had defined to be an unfinished or incomplete road, or one in which the county was interested.

Galloway v. Jenkins, 63 N. C. 149.

The preliminary question whether the railroad was incomplete, or the county had an interest, was not one as to which the commissioners had peculiar knowledge, qualifying them to answer. They had such knowledge as the whole public could obtain,—nothing more. It was incumbent on the respondents to inquire about the fact, because the incompleteness or completeness, or the interest of the county, was a test of the existence of the power of the board, not a condition precedent to the exercise of a power granted.

2 Dill. Mun. Corp. § 542; Sherrard v. Lafayette County, 3 Dill. 236, Fed. Cas. No. 12,771; Marsh v. Fulton County, 10 Wall. 676, 19 L. ed. 1040; Kelly v. Milan, 21 Fed. 842; East Oakland Twp. v. Skinner, 94 U. S. 255, 24 L. ed. 125; McClure v. Oxford Twp. 94 U. S. 429, 24 L. ed. 129; South Ottawa v. Perkins, 94 U. S. 261, 24 L. ed. 154; Hayes v. Holly Springs, 114 U. S. 120, 29 L. ed. 81, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 785; Ogden v. Daviess County, 102 U. S. 634, 26 L. ed. 263; Buchanan v. Litchfield, 102 U. S. 278, 26 L. ed. 138; Purdy v. Lansing, 128 U. S. 557, 32 L. ed. 531, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 172; Knox County v. Aspinwall, 21 How. 539, 16 L. ed. 208; Coloma v. Eaves, 92 U. S. 484, 23 L. ed. 579.

Even if this were not so the recital, to be conclusive, must have been in this case to the effect that the bonds were issued to aid in the completion of the Yadkin railroad; were "necessary to aid in the completion" of that railroad; and that "the citizens" of Stanly county had an interest in said railroad, at the time contemplated by the legislature in passing the act of 1869.

Orleans v. Platt, 99 U. S. 676, 25 L. ed. 404; Gunnison County v. E. H. Rollins & Sons, 173 U. S. 264, 43 L. ed. 694, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 390.

Mr. John F. Dillon argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Harry Hubbard, John M. Dillon, and Charles Price filed a brief for respondents:

No court in this country has stated in stronger language than the supreme court of North Carolina the doctrine of the negotiability of municipal bonds and of estoppel by recitals in such bonds.

Belo v. Forsythe County, 76 N. C. 489.

Federal courts will follow the decisions of the state court which had been rendered at the time the bonds were issued.

Wilkes County v. Coler, 180 U. S. 506, 45 L. ed. 642, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 458; Folsom v. Township Ninety-Six, 159 U. S. 616, 40 L. ed. 278, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 174; Burgess v. Seligman, 107 U. S. 20, 27 L. ed. 359, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 10; Pine Grove Twp. v. Talcott, 19 Wall. 667, 22 L. ed. 227.

Decisions in a state court rendered after the issuance of bonds by some municipality in such state are not binding on the Federal courts.

Venice v. Murdock, 92 U. S. 494, 23 L. ed. 583; Burgess v. Seligman, 107 U. S. 20, 27 L. ed. 359, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 10; Pine Grove Twp. v. Talcott, 19 Wall. 666, 22 L. ed. 227.

The words "issued by authority of §§ 1996, 1997," etc., in favor of bona fide purchasers for value, import full compliance with these sections of the Code.

Evansville v. Dennett, 161 U. S. 434, 40 L. ed. 760, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 613; Independent School Dist. v. Stone, 106 U. S. 183, 27 L. ed. 90, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 84; Waite v. Santa Cruz, 184 U. S. 302, 46 L. ed. 552, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 327.

It is immaterial that the bonds also recited the act of 1887 (even if said act is invalid).

Wilkes County v. Coler, 180 U. S. 506, 45 L. ed. 642, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 458; Evansville v. Dennett, 161 U. S. 434, 40 L. ed. 760, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 613; Anderson County v. Beal, 113 U. S. 227, 28 L. ed. 966, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 433.

The order of the commissioners recites that the citizens of the county have an interest in the railroad, and this is conclusive of the fact, whatever these words of the Code may mean.

Belo v. Forsythe County, 76 N. C. 489.

The express recital in these bonds is conclusive in favor of the bona fide holder of these bonds, that all those conditions existed which were required by the said sections of the Code to exist precedent to the issue of the bonds.

Evansville v. Dennett, 161 U. S. 434, 40 L. ed. 760, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 613.

The recital of the act of March 3, 1887, in the bonds is immaterial.

Wilkes County v. Coler, 180 U. S. 506, 45 L. ed. 642, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 458; Anderson County v. Beal, 113 U. S. 227, 28 L. ed. 966, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 433; Evansville v. Dennett, 161 U. S. 434, 40 L. ed. 760, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 613; Knox County v. Ninth Nat. Bank, 147 U. S. 91, 37 L. ed. 93, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 267; Cairo v. Zane, 149 U. S. 122, 37 L. ed. 673, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 803.

Whether or not the railroad had been begun before April 10, 1869, or even before the adoption of the Constitution, was a fact in pais to be determined by the county commissioners before they issued the bonds, and not a matter with which the bona fide purchaser of these negotiable municipal bonds is concerned.

Knox County v. Ninth Nat. Bank, 147 U. S. 91, 37 L. ed. 93, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 267; Cairo v. Zane, 149 U. S. 122, 37 L. ed. 673, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 803; Anderson County v. Beal, 113 U. S. 227, 28 L. ed. 966, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 433; Evansville v. Dennett, 161 U. S. 434, 40 L. ed. 760, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 613; Wilkes County v. Coler, 180 U. S. 506, 45 L. ed. 642, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 458.

Mr. Justice McKenna, after stating the case as above, delivered the opinion of the court:

It will be observed that the bonds recited that they were "issued by authority of an act of the general assembly of North Carolina, ratified the 3d day of March, A. D. 1887, entitled 'An Act to Amend the Charter of the Yadkin Railroad Company,' and of §§ 1996, 1997, 1998, and 1999 of the Code of North Carolina, and authorized by the majority vote of the qualified voters of Stanly county, at an election regularly held for that purpose, on the 15th day of August, A. D. 1889, duly ordered by the board of commissioners of Stanly county." The act of March 3, 1887, referred to, was an amendment of the act by which the Yadkin Railroad Company was incorporated (1870-71), and was declared by the supreme court of the state not to have been passed in accordance with the constitutional provision requiring the yeas and nays to be entered upon the journals of each house of the general assembly. Union Bank v. Oxford, 119 N. C. 214, 34 L. R. A. 487, 25 S. E. 966; Stanly County v. Snuggs, 121 N. C. 394, 39 L. R. A. 439, 23 S. E. 539. The ruling was decided to be binding upon this court. Wilkes County v. Coler, 180 U. S. 506, 45 L. ed. 642, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 458, 190 U. S. 107, ante, 971, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 738.

The same objection does not lie to the sections of the Code of North Carolina recited in the bonds, and the controversy in the pending case turns upon the meaning of those sections and the effect of the recitals in the bonds.

Section 1996 provides as follows: "The boards of commissioners of the several counties shall have power to subscribe stock to any railroad company or companies, when necessary to aid in the completion of any railroad in which the citizens of the county may have an interest." This section and the four succeeding sections were the reproductions of a statute passed in 1868-69, a few days more than a year after the Constitution of 1868, and were passed upon and interpreted by the supreme court of North Carolina in Stanly County v. Snuggs, 121 N. C. 394, 39 L. R. A. 439, 23 S. E. 539. The court said:

"It is most reasonable to conclude that the policy and purpose of both the constitutional provision and the statute [Code provisions] were the same, the only difference being that, in case of state aid, no approval by vote of the people was required, while a majority vote of the people was required in cases of county aid. The object of the statute must have been to provide, by a general act, means by which the counties, without special legislation for each county by separate bills, might be enabled to complete unfinished railroads in which the counties had a pecuniary interest. At the time of the enactment of the statute of 1868-69, and always since that time, any county of the state, duly observing the limitations of § 7 of article 7 of the Constitution, and under an act passed according to the requirements of § 14, art. 2, of the Constitution, could and can subscribe to the capital stock of the railroad company, whether unfinished or to be begun. The act of 1868-69, however, considering the condition of affairs then existing, that is, that there were counties which had a pecuniary [443] interest in railroads *that had been begun but were unfinished, enabled such counties to make subscriptions of bonds to complete such unfinished roads at the earliest moment and with the least cost, by a general law passed according to § 14, art. 2, of the Constitution. This reasoning leads us to the still further conclusion that, at the time when the act of 1868-69 was brought forward in the Code, § 1996, and the four succeeding sections, it could have had reference to no cases except those where the counties had a pecuniary interest in unfinished railroads at the adoption of the Constitution of 1868, and that, therefore, the Code sections could not apply to the 190 U. S. present case, because the Yadkin Railroad was not begun to be constructed until about 1889."

It will be observed, therefore, that the supreme court decides that the interest of the county must have been pecuniary, and the railroad must have been begun at the adoption of the Constitution of 1868.

To this case the respondents oppose the contentions that its interpretation of the Constitution and Code sections is (1) incorrect, and this involves the further contention that we may exercise an independent judgment of them; (2) that the recitals in the bonds were assurances to bona fide purchasers that the conditions expressed had been fulfilled. In other words, the recitals were assurances that the county had a pecuniary interest (assuming such to be the interest meant) in the Yadkin Railroad, and that the road had been begun before the bonds were issued,—even begun before the adoption of the Constitution of 1868. As far as the contention includes both dates, we may immediately dispose of it. We cannot assent to the view that purchasers of the bonds could have assumed that the railroad had been begun before the adoption of the Constitution of 1868. The adoption of the Constitution antedated the charter of the company. It would therefore be extreme to hold that purchasers of the bonds could have assumed that the railroad had been begun before it was authorized to be built, or that a different act of incorporation could have been assumed from that which the bonds themselves indicated. Commercial securities must necessarily be fortified by many presumptions, as *we shall hereafter have occasion to remark, but it would be straining somewhat to hold that a purchaser of bonds issued for a subscription to the capital stock of a railroad company could assume that the company existed prior to the time stated in the bonds or was incorporated by a different statute than that mentioned. Pretermittting consideration of the other conditions for a time, we are brought to the contention of the respondents, that we are not constrained to follow the opinion of the supreme court of North Carolina.

The general rule undoubtedly is that we accept the interpretation put by the state courts upon the state constitutions and statutes. There are exceptions to the rule, and the case at bar presents one of them. The rule and its exceptions are stated in Burgess v. Seligman, 107 U. S. 20, 27 L. ed. 359, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 10, and the many cases by which the rule was sustained are collected in a note on page thirty of the opinion. In that case a statute of Missouri provided that the stockholders of a corporation at its dissolution were liable for its debts. It also provided that no person holding stock as executor, etc., or holding stock as collateral security, should be personally liable, but the persons who pledged the stock should be considered as holding the same, and be liable. The supreme court of Missouri held that the exemption of the statute did not extend to persons receiving from the corporation itself stock as collateral security. This court decided to the contrary, and held that it was not bound to follow the decision of the supreme court of the state. The question presented was regarded as one of commercial law and general jurisprudence, and the right to exercise our own judgment was asserted. It was said that state decisions were to be followed when they had become a rule of property, and that "this is specially true with regard to the law of real estate and the construction of state constitutions and statutes. Such established rules are always regarded by the Federal courts, no less than by the state courts themselves, as authoritative declarations of what the law is. But where the law has not been thus settled it is the right and duty of the Federal courts to exercise their own judgment, as they also always do in reference to the doctrines of [445] commercial law and general *jurisprudence. So, when contracts and transactions have been entered into, and rights have accrued thereon under a particular state of the decisions, or when there has been no decision of the state tribunals, the Federal courts properly claim the right to adopt their own interpretation of the law applicable to the case, although a different interpretation may be adopted by the state courts after such rights have accrued."

Burgess v. Seligman was applied in Folsom v. Township Ninety-Six, 159 U. S. 611, 40 L. ed. 278, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 174, to sustain the validity of bonds issued by the defendant township to aid in the construction of a railroad. The power to issue them depended upon several statutes and the Constitution of the state. After the bonds were issued, the supreme court of the state decided that the statutes authorizing the issue of the bonds were unconstitutional. There had been no decision to that effect prior to the issuing of the bonds. We held that the decision of the supreme court was not binding, and construed the Constitution and statutes for ourselves, and sustained the bonds.

It was, however, said in Burgess v. Seligman that, even in cases in which we may exercise an independent judgment, if the question seems "balanced with doubt," we will "lean towards an agreement of views with the state courts." But we are unable to yield that deference to the decision in Stanly County v. Snuggs, notwithstanding our respect for the learned tribunal that delivered it. We are unable to construe the Code sections as having had "reference to no cases except those where the counties had an interest in unfinished railroads at the adoption of the Constitution of 1868." The prohibition of the Constitution was directed to the state; the power given by the Code sections was directed to counties. It is easy to conceive the reasons which induced the different provisions. The state might, indeed, not have desired to extend its general aid beyond what had been done or commenced. Local interest might be different, and the exact fulfilment of the conditions upon which aid could be granted was assured, and any abuse guarded against, by requiring a vote of the people. Besides, there is no reference in the Code sections to the Constitution of 1868, or any retrospective implications in them. The language is that *which would natural- [446] ly be employed to express a present and continuing power, to be exercised as occasion should arise. And the contemporaneous construction sustains this view. There was a vote of the people of the county authorizing the subscription, and not through all the publicity and discussion of the canvass, not in the proceedings before the board of commissioners when the subscription was made, was there an intimation expressed, as far as the record shows, that the power by the counties of the state was limited by and depended upon what existed at the date of the Constitution of 1868. And for four years a tax was levied and interest paid on the bonds.

As we have seen, § 1996 confers power on the boards of commissioners of counties "to subscribe stock to any railroad company or companies, when necessary to aid in the completion of any railroad in which the citizens of the county may have an interest." These conditions, as we have also seen, were defined to mean, by the supreme court of the state, in Stanly County v. Snuggs, an interest of the county, as distinguished from the interest of its citizens, and a pecuniary interest, as distinguished from that which comes from the facilities afforded by a railroad; and the completion of a railroad to signify one begun, but not finished. These definitions may be disputed, and are disputed.

A county is, in many ways, a distinct legal entity from its citizens, but it is created for their benefit, and its duties and powers are conferred to be exercised for their welfare. This is true even of its ordinary and governmental functions; it is especially true of the power to subscribe to the stock of a railroad company, and, in conferring such power, the predominant thought would be, not the interests of the county as such, but the interest of its citizens as such. And the language of the Code of North Carolina conforms to and exactly expresses the thought,—accurately marks a distinction between the county, acting through its board of commissioners, and the citizens of the county; and provides that the interests of the latter shall induce the exercise of the powers and duties of the former. Such interest could not be pecuniary,—could only be that which comes from the possession and advantages of railroads. And *the same consideration would [447] seem to lead to a different definition of the word "completion" than that given by the supreme court of North Carolina. Of course, there can be no completion of a thing which has not been begun, but it does not follow that the legislature intended to express a distinction between railroads which could receive, according to the degree of their construction. The statute regards not actual construction, but aid to construction. Its purpose is the production of a result,—the building of railroads; and it is manifest that aid given before their commencement would be as efficient, and might be more necessary, than that given after their commencement. It is not easy to conceive what purpose would be subserved by confining the aid to roads which have been begun; and there would be certain embarrassment in deciding the degree to which construction must be advanced. However, these are but passing observations. We may rest the validity of the bonds on the right of a bona fide holder, from their recitals, to assume that the county had the interest claimed and that the railroad had been begun before subscription to its stock was made. It makes no difference whether the existence or nonexistence of those conditions could have been ascertained by inquiry. Purchasers were not expected to be at or near the sources of information. The bonds were not offered in Stanly county only, or in the state of North Carolina only. They were expected to be offered in the financial markets of the other states of the Union; even offered in the financial markets of the world. They were payable to bearer. They were expected to have, and their value, to an extent, depended upon their having, almost the currency and sanction of money. If a buyer of bonds is chargeable not only with want of power to issue them (a considerable risk, as the records of the courts show), but also with the performance of conditions in pais, their value would be much diminished. And what good would such a holding subserve? The affairs of a county can only be administered by its officers, and to their attention and duty its interests must be intrusted. When the power to issue bonds, therefore, depends upon the existence of conditions, the local officers are charged with the duty and the responsibility of ascertaining [448]ing *them; and the presumption that the duty was exercised should and does accompany and guarantee the bonds in every financial market. And this court has so decided. In Evansville v. Dennett, 161 U. S. 434, 40 L. ed. 760, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 613, the bonds passed upon recited that they were "issued by the city of Evansville in payment of a subscription to the Evansville, Henderson, & Nashville Railroad Company, made in pursuance of an act of the legislature of the state of Indiana, and ordinances of the city council of said city, passed in pursuance thereof." The bonds were dated May 1, 1858. Other bonds were issued December 1, 1870, in payment of the subscription of the city to the stock of the Evansville, Carmi, & Paducah Railroad Company. The recital in the latter bonds was as follows:

"By virtue of an act of the general assembly of the state of Indiana, entitled 'An Act Granting to the Citizens of the Town of Evansville, in the County of Vanderburg, a City Charter,' approved January 27, 1847, . . . conferring upon the city council of said city power to take stock in any company authorized for the purpose of making a road of any kind leading to said city; and by virtue of the resolution of said city council of said city, passed October 4, 1869, ordering an election of the qualified voters of said city upon the question of subscribing $300,000 to the capital stock of the Evansville, Carmi, & Paducah Railroad Company, and said election, held on the 13th day of November, 1868, resulting in a legal majority in favor of such subscription, and by virtue of a resolution of said city council, passed May 23, 1870, ordering an issue of the bonds of the city of Evansville (of which this is a part) to an amount not to exceed $300,000, bearing interest at the rate of 7 per cent per annum, for the purpose of paying the subscription as authorized above. [The charter of Evansville authorized the city to take stock in any chartered company for making roads to said city.] . . . Provided, That no stock shall be subscribed or taken by the common council in any such company unless it be on the petition of two thirds of the residents of said city, who are freeholders of the city, distinctly *setting [449] forth the company in which stock is to be taken, and the number and amount of shares to be subscribed."

The charter of Evansville was amended in 1865, but the amendment was declared unconstitutional by the supreme court of the state, and another act was passed in 1867. The latter act authorized a subscription to the stock of the railroad company, when a majority of the qualified voters of the city, who were also taxpayers, should vote therefor. The ordinances of the city recited that an election was held, but did not recite that a petition of resident freeholders of the city was presented to the common council as required by the charter, and no such petition was in fact presented. The case came to this court on certificate, and the following questions were propounded: Did the recital in the first series of bonds put the purchaser upon inquiry as to the terms of ordinances under which the bonds were issued? Did the recital in the second series of bonds, those issued to the Evansville, Carmi, & Paducah Railroad Company, (1) put the purchaser upon inquiry as to the terms of the resolution under which they were purported to have been issued? (2) estop the city from asserting that the bonds were not issued for a stock subscription upon a petition, as prescribed by the charter? (3) "Was a bona fide purchaser for value of the bonds issued to the Evansville, Carmi, & Paducah Railroad Company charged, by the recitals in said bonds, with notice that they were issued in pursuance of an invalid act, and in pursuance of an election under it, or had such a purchaser a right to assume, from the recital, that the prerequisites of both the valid act and the invalid act had been observed by the common council before the issuance of such bonds?"

Sustaining the validity of the first series of bonds, the court said, by Mr. Justice Harlan, it could not be doubted that the city had the power to subscribe to the stock, upon the performance of the conditions expressed in the questions propounded, and further said they "were only conditions which the statute required to be performed or met before the power given was exercised. That there was legislative authority to subscribe to the stock of these companies cannot be [450]questioned, although *the statute declared that the power should not be exercised except under the circumstances stated in the statute."

And of the effect of the recital that the subscription was "made in pursuance of an act of the legislature thereof," it was observed: "This imports not only compliance with the act of the legislature, but that the ordinances of the city council were in conformity with the statute. It is as if the city had declared, in terms, that all had been done that was required to be done in order that the power given might be exercised."

Passing on the second series of bonds, and expressing the principle applicable, Independent School Dist. v. Stone, 106 U. S. 183, 27 L. ed. 90, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 84, was quoted from as follows: "Numerous cases have been determined in this court, in which we have said that where a statute confers power upon a municipal corporation, upon the performance of certain precedent conditions, to execute bonds in aid of the construction of a railroad, or for other like purposes, and imposes upon certain officers—invested with authority to determine whether such conditions have been performed—the responsibility of issuing them when such conditions have been complied with, recitals, by such officers, that the bonds have been issued 'in pursuance of,' or 'in conformity with,' or 'by virtue of,' or 'by authority of' the statute, have been held in favor of bona fide purchasers for value to import full compliance with the statute, and to preclude inquiry as to whether the precedent conditions had been performed before the bonds were issued. Coloma v. Eaves, 92 U. S. 484, 23 L. ed. 579; Douglas County v. Bolles, 94 U. S. 104, 24 L. ed. 46; Mercer County v. Hackett, 1 Wall. 83, 17 L. ed. 548; Anderson County v. Beal, 113 U. S. 227, 238, 239, 28 L. ed. 966, 970, and authorities there cited Cairo v. Zane, 149 U. S. 122, 37 L. ed. 673, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 803."

And again: "As, therefore, the recitals in the bonds import compliance with the city's charter, purchasers for value having no notice of the nonperformance of the conditions precedent were not bound to go behind the statute conferring the power to subscribe, and to ascertain, by an examination of the ordinances and records of the city council, whether those conditions had, in fact, been performed. With such recitals be-[451]fore *them, they had the right to assume that the circumstances existed which authorized the city to exercise the authority given by the legislature."

In Gunnison County v. E. H. Rollins & Sons [173 U. S. 255, 43 L. ed. 689, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 390], the bonds passed on recited that all the requirements of law had been fully complied with by the proper officers in the issuing of the bonds. It was held that the county was estopped from asserting, against a bona fide holder for value, that the bonds so issued created an indebtedness in excess of the limit prescribed by the Constitution of Colorado. See also Waite v. Santa Cruz, 184 U. S. 302, 46 L. ed. 552, 22 Sup. 1134

Ct. Rep. 327, where effect of recitals in bonds was thoroughly considered, and the doctrine of prior cases repeated and affirmed.

The application of these cases to that at bar is denied by petitioners. The argument is (to quote counsel):

"The preliminary question, whether the railroad was incomplete or the county had an interest, was not one as to which the commissioners had peculiar knowledge, qualifying them to answer. They had such knowledge as the whole public could obtain,—nothing more. It was incumbent on the respondents to inquire about the fact, because the incompleteness or completeness or the interest of the county was a test of the existence of the power of the board, not a condition precedent to the exercise of a power granted."

It is also said that counties having an interest were constituted a class, and only members of the class could have exercised the power conferred by the Code sections. We think the distinctions made are not substantial. No matter how you may designate the interest of the county or the condition of the railroad, they were facts which bore the same relation to the power of the board of commissioners of Stanly county as the facts in the cited cases bore to the power of the officers, the exercise of which was sustained. It is indifferent whether you call the facts which were to be ascertained tests of power or conditions precedent or marks of a class. They were something which were to exist prior to the exercise of the power, and the existence of which the law imposed on the board of commissioners the duty to ascertain.

Decree affirmed.

*ANNIE R. KEAN et al., Plffs. in Err., [452] v.

CALUMET CANAL & IMPROVEMENT COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 452-507.)

Public lands — fractional sections on non-navigable waters — effect of resurvey.

1. Letters patent from the United States to the state of Indiana, purporting to be in pursuance of the swamp land act of September 28, 1850, chap. 84 (9 Stat. at L. 520), which refer to the official plat of survey and describe the land as "the whole of fractional sections" therein enumerated, convey to the extent of full subdivisions the land under non-navigable water on which such fractional sections border, as appears from the meander line shown on such plat, beyond which the survey did not extend.
2. The title to lands embraced within patents from the United States in pursuance of the swamp land act of September 28, 1850, chap. 84 (9 Stat. at L. 520), cannot be affected by a resurvey of the land covered by water at the time of the original survey, and patents granted, pursuant to such resurvey, for tracts below the original water line.

NOTE.—As to the effect of bounding a grant on river or tide water—see note to Hanlon v. Hobson (Colo.) 42 L. R. A. 502.

On title to land under water—see note to Goff v. Cougle (Mich.) 42 L. R. A. 161.

[No. 8.]

Argued October 23, 1901. Ordered for re-argument December 22, 1902. Reargued January 9, 12, 1903. Decided May 4, 1903.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Indiana to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the trial court in favor of plaintiff in a suit to quiet title. Affirmed.

See same case below, 150 Ind. 699, 50 N. E. 85.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. William P. Fennell argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiffs in error:

A survey made by proper officers of the United States and confirmed by the Land Department cannot be shown to be inaccurate by collateral attack in the courts.

Russell v. Maxwell Land Grant Co. 158 U. S. 253, 39 L. ed. 971, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 827.

The fact that the survey under which the patents issued was contested at every step by the interested parties and was finally decided after six months' consideration by the Secretary of the Interior affirming the decision of the Land Office affords strong evidence of its correctness and honesty.

United States v. San Jacinto Tin Co. 125 U. S. 273, 31 L. ed. 747, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 850.

This case is identical in law and in fact with Hardin v. Jordan, 140 U. S. 379, 35 L. ed. 432, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 808, 838, only the rule of property is different in Indiana from what this court assumed to be the law in Illinois.

State v. Portsmouth Sav. Bank, 106 Ind. 459, 7 N. E. 379.

By reference, the plat became a part of the patent as much so as if it had been copied therein.

Piper v. Connelly, 108 Ill. 646; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Koelle, 104 Ill. 455.

When lands are purchased and conveyed in accordance with a plat, the purchaser will be restricted to the boundaries as shown by the plat.

McCormick v. Huse, 78 Ill. 363; McClintock v. Rogers, 11 Ill. 279.

As to mere intruders, the patents issued under the new survey are conclusive that the lands were of the character which by the patents they were represented to be.

Wright v. Roseberry, 121 U. S. 488, 30 L. ed. 1039, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 985; Ehrhardt v. Hogaboom, 115 U. S. 67, 29 L. ed. 346, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1157.

It is the duty of the Land Department to determine whether land patented to a settler is of the class subject to settlement under the pre-emption laws, and its judgment as to this fact is not open to contestation in an action at law.

Ehrhardt v. Hogaboom, 115 U. S. 67, 29 190 U. S.

L. ed. 346, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1157; Iowa Railroad Land Co. v. Antoine, 52 Iowa, 429, 3 N. W. 468.

Riparian rights have nothing to do with the title to land under the water.

Diedrich v. Northwestern Union R. Co. 42 Wis. 262, 24 Am. Rep. 399.

Deeds of the border lands did not convey the bed of the lake.

State v. Portsmouth Sav. Bank, 106 Ind. 459, 7 N. E. 379; Indiana v. Milk, 11 Biss. 197, 11 Fed. 389; Boorman v. Sunnucks, 42 Wis. 233; State v. Gilmanton, 9 N. H. 461; Seaman v. Smith, 24 Ill. 521; Fletcher v. Phelps, 28 Vt. 257; Mansur v. Blake, 62 Me. 38; Wheeler v. Spinola, 54 N. Y. 377; Angell, Watercourses, § 41; Paine v. Woods, 108 Mass. 160; Diedrich v. Northwestern Union R. Co. 42 Wis. 248, 24 Am. Rep. 399.

The action of the Land Department in issuing a patent is conclusive in all courts and in all proceedings where by the rules of law the legal title must prevail.

Johnson v. Towsley, 13 Wall. 83, 21 L. ed. 485; Warren v. Van Brunt, 19 Wall. 653, 22 L. ed. 219; Shepley v. Cowan, 91 U. S. 340, 23 L. ed. 428; Moore v. Robbins, 96 U. S. 530, 24 L. ed. 848; Marquez v. Frisbie, 101 U. S. 473, 25 L. ed. 800; Vance v. Burbank, 101 U. S. 519, 25 L. ed. 931; United States v. Schurz, 102 U. S. 401, 26 L. ed. 173; St. Louis Smelting & Ref. Co. v. Kemp, 104 U. S. 646, 26 L. ed. 879; Steel v. St. Louis Smelting & Ref. Co. 106 U. S. 447, 27 L. ed. 226, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 389; Quinby v. Conlan, 104 U. S. 421, 26 L. ed. 800; Baldwin v. Stark, 107 U. S. 465, 27 L. ed. 526, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 473; Powell v. Lammers, 10 Sawy. 246, 21 Fed. 200; Wight v. Dubois, 21 Fed. 693; Cragin v. Powell, 128 U. S. 693, 32 L. ed. 566, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 203; Gazzam v. Phillips, 20 How. 374, 15 L. ed. 958.

Land cannot pass as appurtenant to land.

Child v. Starr, 4 Hill. 369; Webber v. Eastern R. Co. 2 Met. 147; Parker v. Framingham, 8 Met. 260; Harris v. Elliott, 10 Pet. 25, 9 L. ed. 333; Jackson ex dem. Yates v. Hathaway, 15 Johns. 447, 8 Am. Dec. 263.

Mr. Silas H. Strawn for defendant in error on original argument. Messrs. James F. Meagher, Frederick S. Winston, and G. E. Hamilton were with him on the brief:

Hardin v. Jordan, 140 U. S. 371, 35 L. ed. 428, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 808, 838, and Mitchell v. Smale, 140 U. S. 406, 35 L. ed. 442, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 819, 840, control this case.

It is the settled law in the state of Indiana that where an inland non-navigable lake covers a portion of a section of land and the government survey designates the dry land in such subdivision as a fractional subdivision or lot, the purchaser from the government of such lots acquires title to all that portion of the bed of the lake included in the whole subdivision.

Stoner v. Rice, 121 Ind. 51, 6 L. R. A. 387, 22 N. E. 968; Brophy v. Richeson, 137 Ind. 114, 36 N. E. 424; Tolleston Club v. State, 141 Ind. 197, 38 N. E. 214, 40 N. E. 690; Tolleston Club v. Clough, 146 Ind. 93, 43 N. E. 647; Mason v. Calumet Canal & Im- prov. Co. 150 Ind. 699, 50 N. E. 85; Kean v. Roby, 145 Ind. 221, 42 N. E. 1011; Kirwan v. Murphy, 28 C. C. A. 348, 49 U. S. App. 658, 83 Fed. 275; Forsyth v. Smale, 7 Biss. 201, Fed. Cas. No. 4,950.

When a patent has been awarded, delivered, and accepted thenceforth all right to control the title or to decide the right to the title has passed from the Land Office. Not only has it passed from the Land Office, but it has passed from the Executive Department of the government.

Moore v. Robbins, 96 U. S. 530, 24 L. ed. 848; Hardin v. Jordan, 140 U. S. 371, 35 L. ed. 428, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 808, 838; Mitchell v. Smale, 140 U. S. 406, 35 L. ed. 442, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 819, 840; Davis v. Weibbold, 139 U. S. 507, 35 L. ed. 238, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 628.

This court has repeatedly decided that if lands patented or attempted to be patented were not at the time public property, having been previously disposed of, the Department had no jurisdiction to transfer the lands, and their attempted conveyance by patent is inoperative and void.

St. Louis Smelting & Ref. Co. v. Kemp, 104 U. S. 640, 26 L. ed. 876; Wright v. Roseberry, 121 U. S. 488, 30 L. ed. 1039, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 985; Francoeur v. Newhouse, 40 Fed. 618; Doolan v. Carr, 125 U. S. 618, 31 L. ed. 844, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1228.

Mr. Frederick S. Winston for defendant in error on reargument. Mr. Silas H. Strawn was with him on the brief:

The supreme court of Indiana, having held that all of the land involved in this suit was in fact included in the survey of 1834-35, this court will not disturb that finding of fact.

Gardner v. Bonestell, 180 U. S. 362, 45 L. ed. 574, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 399; Egan v. Hart, 165 U. S. 188, 41 L. ed. 680, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 300; Dower v. Richards, 151 U. S. 658, 38 L. ed. 305, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 452; Hedrick v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 167 U. S. 673, 42 L. ed. 320, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 922; Republican River Bridge Co. v. Kansas P. R. Co. 92 U. S. 315, 23 L. ed. 515.

All of the land in question having been included in the survey of 1834-35, the United States having conveyed it all under that survey to the state of Indiana in 1853, and defendant in error holding under mesne conveyances from the state, by the same description, the survey of 1875 was void, and plaintiffs in error acquired no rights thereunder.

Mason v. Calumet Canal & Improv. Co. 150 Ind. 699, 50 N. E. 85; Kean v. Roby, 145 Ind. 221, 42 N. E. 1011; Tolleston Club v. State, 141 Ind. 197, 38 N. E. 214, 40 N. E. 690; Hardin v. Jordan, 140 U. S. 371, 35 L. ed. 428, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 808, 838; Mitchell v. Smale, 140 U. S. 406, 35 L. ed. 442, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 819, 840; Moore v. Robbins, 96 U. S. 530, 24 L. ed. 848; St. Louis Smelting & Ref. Co. v. Kemp, 104 U. S. 640, 26 L. ed. 876; Wright v. Roseberry, 121 U. S. 488, 30 L. ed. 1039, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 985; Doolan v. Carr, 125 U. S. 618, 31 L. ed. 844, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1228.

1136

The rights of the owners of land bordering on inland, non-navigable lakes are settled by the law of the state wherein the land lies.

Hardin v. Jordan, 140 U. S. 380, 35 L. ed. 433, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 808, 838; Lowndes v. Huntington, 153 U. S. 1, 38 L. ed. 615, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 758; Grand Rapids & I. R. Co. v. Butler, 159 U. S. 87, 40 L. ed. 85, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 991; St. Anthony Falls Water Power Co. v. St. Paul Water Comrs. 168 U. S. 349, 42 L. ed. 497, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 157.

The owner of lands bordering on non-navigable inland lakes, when the subdivisions of the land are surveyed by running a meander line between the dry land and the water to ascertain the number of acres of dry land, and designating such subdivision as a fractional quarter or a lot, giving the number of acres of dry land, takes the title to all the land contained within the subdivision.

Ross v. Faust, 54 Ind. 471, 23 Am. Rep. 655; Ridgway v. Ludlow, 58 Ind. 248; Edwards v. Ogle, 76 Ind. 302; Kean v. Roby, 145 Ind. 221, 42 N. E. 1011; Tolleston Club v. State, 141 Ind. 197, 38 N. E. 214, 40 N. E. 690; Indiana v. Milk, 11 Biss. 197, 11 Fed. 389; Stoner v. Rice, 121 Ind. 51, 6 L. R. A. 387, 22 N. E. 968; Brophy v. Richeson, 137 Ind. 114, 36 N. E. 424; Tolleston Club v. Clough, 146 Ind. 93, 43 N. E. 647.

If there be any inconsistency in the several opinions of a state court, the general rule is that this court will follow the latest settled adjudications in preference to the earlier ones.

Wade v. Travis County, 174 U. S. 499, 43 L. ed. 1061, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 715; Leffingwell v. Warren, 2 Black, 599, 17 L. ed. 261; Fairfield v. Gallatin County, 100 U. S. 47, 25 L. ed. 544.

If the common law of Indiana were as found by this court, in Hardin v. Jordan, to be the common law of Illinois, then the defendant in error, as a riparian owner of bordering lands, owns to the center of the lakes, and, consequently, all of the land in controversy.

Forsyth v. Smale, 7 Biss. 201, Fed. Cas. No. 4,950; Fuller v. Shedd, 161 Ill. 462, 33 L. R. A. 146, 44 N. E. 286; Hardin v. Jordan, 140 U. S. 381, 35 L. ed. 433, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 808, 838.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a proceeding to quiet title, brought by the Calumet Canal & Improvement Company in a court of the state of Indiana. The company got judgment, which was affirmed by the supreme court of the state (150 Ind. 699, 50 N. E. 85), and the case is brought here by writ of error. The land in question is land bordering on and extending under certain non-navigable water up to the state line, the Illinois side of which was the subject of the decisions in Hardin v. Jordan, 140 U. S. 371, 35 L. ed. 428, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 808, 838, and Mitchell v. Smale, 140 U. S. 406, 35 L. ed. 442, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 819, 840. But the facts in

190 U. S.

[459] this case are somewhat different. The Calumet company claims title through mesne conveyances from the state of Indiana. The state of Indiana got its title under the swamp-land act, September 28, 1850, chap. 84 (9 Stat. at L. 520, Rev. Stat. §§ 2479 et seq., U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1586), and patents *of the United States, dated 1853, purporting to be in pursuance of that act, and referring to the official plat of survey, which was made in 1834. The patent set forth describes "the whole of fractional sections" enumerated and bordering on the water, in which sections lies the disputed land. The state afterwards conveyed by the same description. It is not denied that the company got the land above the water line, as shown in the plat referred to, but it is denied that it got more. The water has been receding and drying up, so that the question is important. The defendants set up a later survey in 1875 of the land which was covered by water in 1834, and is covered, to a less extent, still, and patents from the United States in pursuance of the same, for tracts below the original water line. They deny that the state ever owned this land, or, if it did, that it conveyed it, and they allege the later survey to be conclusive.

On general principles of conveyancing, the state would have acquired the land in controversy here by a conveyance from the United States describing the upland according to the survey, because the local law of Indiana, and the common law as understood by this court, are the same, so far as this case is concerned. Stoner v. Rice, 121 Ind. 51, 6 L. R. A. 387, 22 N. E. 968; Hardin v. Jordan, 140 U. S. 371, 35 L. ed. 428, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 808, 838. The case is stronger if the land passed under the swamp land act, as has been held by the state court with regard to this and similar patents. Mason v. Calumet Canal & Improv. Co. 150 Ind. 699, 50 N. E. 85; Kean v. Roby, 145 Ind. 221, 42 N. E. 1011; Tolleston Club v. Clough, 146 Ind. 93, 43 N. E. 647; Tolleston Club v. State, 141 Ind. 197, 38 N. E. 214. See Mitchell v. Smale, 140 U. S. 406, 414, 35 L. ed. 442, 445, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 819, 840.

The making of a meander line has no certain significance. French-Glenn Live Stock Co. v. Springer, 185 U. S. 47, 52, 46 L. ed. 800, 802, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 563. It does not necessarily import that the tract on the other side of it is not surveyed, or will not pass by a conveyance of the upland shown by the plat to border on the lake. It is not always a boundary. St. Paul & P. R. Co. v. Schurmeir, 7 Wall. 272, 19 L. ed. 74; Hardin v. Jordan, 140 U. S. 371, 380, 35 L. ed. 428, 432, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 808, 838; Mitchell v. Smale, 140 U. S. 406, 414, 35 L. ed. 442, 445, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 819, 840; Horne v. Smith, 159 U. S. 40, 43, 40 L. ed. 68, 69, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 988; Grand Rapids & I. R. Co. v. Butler, 159 U. S. 87, 93, 40 L. ed. 85, 87, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 991. In this case its immediate import was only to indicate the contour of 190 U. S.

the lake. It would *seem, to be sure, that [460] the settled understanding of the Land Department has been that in cases like the present the meander line marked the limit of the grant. But probably the cases are comparatively rare in which that understanding was acted on by an attempt subsequently to convey the land under water on the further side of the line at dates before the transactions with which we have to deal. The title to such land was not considered of much importance in the early days, or worth the trouble of an independent survey. See Newson v. Pryor, 7 Wheat. 7, 11, 5 L. ed. 382, 383. The United States was more anxious for settlers than for revenue from that source. It is not necessary to consider how we should decide the case with our present light if the question were a new one. It is not new. For twelve years the decisions in Hardin v. Jordan and Mitchell v. Smale have stood as authoritative declarations of the law. Probably in most cases the statute of limitations has cured the defects of title which those cases may have shown. Meantime many titles must have passed on the faith of those decisions. The United States can meet them by the form of its conveyances. It seems to us that it would be likely to do more harm than good to allow them to be called in question now.

It is said that the land under water was not embraced in the survey of 1834. It would seem from the plat and the field notes that the sections and dividing lines were clearly marked off and posts set. The case is similar to Kean v. Roby, 145 Ind. 221, 42 N. E. 1011, where the survey was pronounced sufficient. No difficulty was felt on the ground that the survey did not cover the submerged land in Hardin v. Jordan, 140 U. S. 371, 35 L. ed. 428, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 808, 838. But furthermore, the land was selected as "swamp and overflowed lands" by the state. It not appearing otherwise, the selection must be presumed to have included the land overflowed, and if so it was confirmed to the state by the act of March 3, 1857, chap. 117 (11 Stat. at L. 251, Rev. Stat. § 2484, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1588). The confirmation encounters none of the difficulties of cases like Stoneroad v. Stoneroad, 158 U. S. 240, 39 L. ed. 966, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 822. The land surrounding the water, at least, was surveyed, so that the identification of the submerged portion was absolute. We are of opinion that the state of Indiana got a title to the whole land in dispute.

*If the state of Indiana got a title, it gave [461] one. There is not much controversy on this point. We should follow the decision of the state court in this case so far as this question is concerned, if there was no other evidence of the state law. But the law of Indiana is shown, by the other cases cited above, to be clear on this point.

The resurvey by the United States in 1874 does not affect the Calumet company's rights. As the United States already had conveyed the lands, it had no jurisdiction to intermeddle with them in the form of a second survey. Hardin v. Jordan, 140 U. S. 371, 400, 35 L. ed. 428, 439, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 808, 838; Grand Rapids & I. R. Co. v. Butler, 159 U. S. 87, 94, 95, 40 L. ed. 85, 88, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 991; St. Paul & P. R. Co. v. Schurmeir, 7 Wall. 272, 289, 19 L. ed. 74, 78.

Of course, we shall not undertake to revise the finding of the state courts that the statute of limitations had not run in favor of the plaintiffs in error, and that, if anyone is to profit by it, the Calumet company would prevail.

Judgment affirmed.

Mr. Justice White, with whom concurs Mr. Justice McKenna, dissenting:

The importance of the question which this cause involves, and the far-reaching and injurious consequences which, in my opinion, must arise from the continued application of what seems to me to be the erroneous theories upon which it is now decided, not only constrain me to dissent, but cause me to state fully the reasons by which I am controlled.

The controversy is between opposing claimants to lands once a part of the beds of certain non-navigable bodies of waters, styled lakes,—and which shall be hereafter referred to by such designation. Both parties asserted title under patents of the United States.

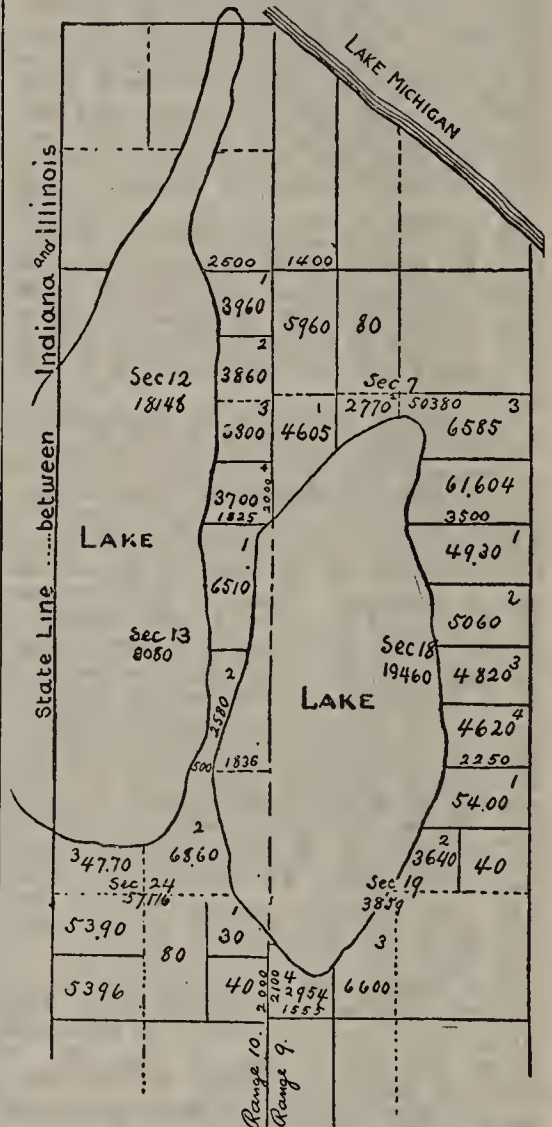

[462] In 1834 surveys were made by the United States of townships 37 north, in ranges 9 and 10 west, second principal meridian, lying in Lake county, in the extreme north-western portion of the state of Indiana. Township 37 in range 9 was bounded on the west by township 37 in range 10, and the latter was bounded on the west by the state of Illinois. From *the eastern boundary of township 37 in range 10 there was less than a mile intervening to the Illinois boundary on the west. In consequence, the sections or fractional sections appearing on the plat of survey of that township were only the extreme easterly tier of sections, being those numbered 1, 12, 13, 24, 25, and 36. A copy of a portion of the government plat of survey of the townships named, in which are embraced the lands whose title is in dispute, is here inserted for convenience of reference.

The easterly of the two bodies of water, lying partly in both townships, is known as Lake George or Mud lake. The westerly body is called Wolf lake. As shown by the plat, the lines of survey were not actually run across the water of the lakes, and, consequently, no attempt was made to subdivide the lands in the then beds of the lakes into legal subdivisions. The lines of survey were in fact run around the rim of each lake, and the fractional lots resulting from the meander line were given numbers, as was customary in such cases.

The land about the margin of the lakes was very flat, and the average depth of water at the time of the surveys was conjectured to be about 5 or 6 feet.

None of the fractional lots abutting on the two lakes in the townships in question had been disposed of by the United States prior to the passage of the swamp land act of September 28, 1850 (9 Stat. at L. 520, chap. 84, Rev. Stat. §§ 2479 et seq., U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1586). Thereafter, the state of Indiana transmitted a list of lands which it desired should be patented to the state under said act, and the list embraced the portions of the townships in which Wolf lake and Lake George were situated. This list, however, referred only to entire sections, took no note of the plat of survey, and made no reference to the fractional lots abutting on the lakes or the other subdivisions of sections. In the approved list of selections made by the Secretary of the Interior the general description of the lands as given in the state lists was followed, except that, where, by the meander line shown on the plat of survey, it appeared that a section was made fractional, the section was termed a fractional section, and the quantity of land shown on the plat to be contained in each minor subdivision or fractional section was specifically stated.
*

[463]

[464] *A patent dated March 24, 1853, was issued to the state of Indiana for the approved selections. The mode in which the lands were described in the patent is illustrated in the following excerpt:

"Also, the whole of fractional sections one, twelve, thirteen, and twenty-four, the north half of the southeast quarter, the southeast quarter of the southeast quarter, and the northeast quarter of section twenty-five and the whole of fractional section thirty-six, all one thousand seven hundred and ninety-one acres and sixty-hundredths of an acre. . . ."

After the description of the lands was the following:

"According to the official plats of survey of the said lands returned to the General Land Office by the surveyor general."

Soon after acquiring title in this manner to the border lots, the state of Indiana conveyed them, by the plat numbers, to private individuals.

While the record does not show the causes which led to the drying up of the beds of the two lakes within the meander lines on the plats of surveys of 1834, it is nevertheless certain that about the year 1874 the waters of these lakes had in great part disappeared. In the years 1874 and 1875 various persons settled on the uncovered lands referred to, with the intent of acquiring title under the homestead law. Application was made to the Interior Department for a survey thereof. In virtue of this application, a survey was made in 1875,—known as the Walcott survey,—and a plat was drawn exhibiting the subdivisions thereof. The confirmation of this survey was resisted in the Land Department by one who had acquired title to border lots from the state of Indiana, on the ground that the United States had no land to survey in the beds of the lakes, as the effect of the conveyance by the United States to the state had been to pass title to the beds of the lakes. This controversy before the Land Department was finally disposed of on February 23, 1877, by the Secretary of the Interior, in favor of the validity of the Walcott survey. Thereafter, patents for the lands in the beds of the lakes covered by the survey were issued by the United States.

In 1895, the Calumet Canal & Improvement Company brought an action in the [465] Lake circuit court of Indiana, to *quiet its asserted title to certain of these border lots and its alleged title as riparian owner to land in front thereof, once part of the beds of the lakes, and, upon a second trial of the action, obtained judgment. On appeal, the supreme court of Indiana affirmed the judgment, and the cause was then brought to this court on a writ of error prosecuted by claimants under the Wolcott survey, based upon the contention that the decision of the supreme court of Indiana was against a title and right specially set up "under the statutes, patents, deed of conveyance, and authority of the United States of America."

190 U. S.

In deciding against the validity of the Wolcott survey and the patents to land in the beds of the lakes based on such survey the supreme court of Indiana said (p. 699, 150 Ind. p. 85, 50 N. E.):

"In 1875 certain persons, under the assumption that the beds of the lakes had not been surveyed in 1834, procured a resurvey of that part of the lands formerly covered by the waters, and it is through this last survey and the sales made in pursuance thereof, that appellants claim title. The case before us, therefore, in so far as concerns source of title, does not differ from that of Kean v. Roby, 145 Ind. 221, 42 N. E. 1011. On the authority of the decision in that case, there can be no question that the resurvey of 1875, as also the sales made thereunder, were wholly invalid, and consequently that appellee's title, as based upon the original survey of 1834, and the sales made under that survey, is good. No real distinction in this regard has been shown between the two cases."

It becomes necessary, therefore, to refer to the case of Kean v. Roby, upon which the supreme court of Indiana rested its conclusion. As, moreover, the comprehension of the doctrines involved in that case necessitates a consideration of the course of previous decisions in Indiana relative to the subject involved, I shall review the Indiana cases preceding Kean v. Roby, in order, as far as may be, to an exact elucidation of the legal principles by which the decision of this case was below controlled.

Ross v. Faust (1876) 54 Ind. 471, 23 Am. Rep. 655, involved the title to land under the bed of a non-navigable river. The land abutting on the stream had been surveyed and the stream had been *meandered. The [466] question was whether patents of the United States conveyed land under water within the meander lines. Determining the construction of the patent solely by reference to the laws of the United States, the court decided that, as the stream was in fact non-navigable, the holder of the patent to the border lots had title to the center of the stream despite the meander line.

Ridgway v. Ludlow (1877) 58 Ind. 248, involved a controversy respecting the ownership of land once forming part of the bed of a non-navigable lake. The land bordering on the lake had evidently been acquired from the United States, and the lake had been meandered. The rule in Ross v. Faust was applied, the court saying:

"We can see no difference in principle in this rule, whether applied to non-navigable rivers or non-navigable lakes, when they are within the congressional surveys."

Edwards v. Ogle (1881) 76 Ind. 302, presented the following state of facts: On a plat of survey of a section of land, which was in great part covered by the waters of a pond, the banks of the pond were shown as meandered, but the lines of the sections, half sections, and quarter sections were extended across the pond by dotted lines. A fractional portion of the southwest quarter, represented as containing 39 acres—the dry land outside of the meander—was patented by the United States in 1845. In 1851 the United States, under the swamp land act, executed to the state of Indiana a patent for the east half of the southwest quarter, being within the meander line. In 1858 the United States issued a patent to one Ogle for the west half of the same quarter section. Edwards, as owner of the 39-acre tract, asserted a right to the center of the pond, which, if allowed, would have absorbed the land claimed by Ogle. Edwards was confined to the actual quantity of land specified in the patent. Ross v. Faust was distinguished, the court remarking of that case: "The bed of the river had not been surveyed as a part of the public domain, but, on the theory that White river was a navigable stream, the government surveys had been terminated at the margin thereof."

[467] State v. Portsmouth Sav. Bank (1886) 106 Ind. 459, 7 N. E. 379,* involved the question whether conveyances of fractional lots bordering on Beaver lake, in Newton county, Indiana, passed title to land under the bed of the lake. The controversy was between the state claiming the bed of the lake and certain private individuals who deraigned title from the state, claiming that, as the state had transferred to them rights derived under patents from the United States, their rights were coterminous with the patent, and extended across a meander line to the center of the lake. Beaver lake was a body of water covering about 17,000 acres of land, and averaging from 5 to 7 miles in length and from 2 to 4 miles in width. The border lands had been surveyed in 1835 by authority of the United States, and were subject to private entry. In making the survey the same was extended around the lake and a meandering line established. As a necessary result of the meander line fractional lots were shown on the plat around the margin of the lake. Under the swamp land act the border lands, by the government subdivisions, were selected by the Secretary of the Interior and patented to the state of Indiana.

The supreme court of Indiana declared that it was not necessary "to determine whether the patents of the United States to the state for the fractional lots bordering upon and surrounding the lake, being grants from one government to another, by their own force carried the bed of the lake." Reviewing previous decisions of this court, construing the swamp land act, the Indiana court held that that act was a grant in presenti. It was further held that, although the bed of Beaver lake was not embraced in the list of selections made by the state, yet, by the acts of its officials, immediately after the grant to it of the border lands, the state had treated the bed of the lake as swamp and overflowed land, and constructively selected the same, and that an act of Congress, approved January 11, 1873 (17 Stat. at L. 409, chap. 32), releasing and quitclaiming the bed of Beaver lake to the state of Indiana, did not operate as a grant, but simply as a confirmation of the prior selection, thereby perfecting the title as indefeasible.

1140

The court came next to consider the claims of the grantees of the state of border lots, described in the patent from the *state according to the plat of survey which [468] had been made by the United States. It was declared that state patents for border lots must be construed with reference to the power conferred upon state officials by the state law, and not by the rules which would govern a conveyance by a private individual; and, applying this rule, it was held that the patents for border lots carried to the grantees "no more of the swamp and overflowed lands than were included in the several surveyed subdivisions bounded by the lake."

Stoner v. Rice (1889) 121 Ind. 51, 6 L. R. A. 387, 22 N. E. 968, was a controversy between owners of border lots as a meandered non-navigable lake claiming under patents of the United States and patentees of the United States under a subsequent survey of the bed of the lake. Despite its previous ruling in Ridgway v. Ludlow, 58 Ind. 248, it was now held that the rule giving a riparian owner of fractional lots abutting on a meander line title to the thread or center of the stream was not applicable. The case was decided upon what the court assumed to be the law of the United States governing surveys of the public domain. The court said (p. 54, L. R. A. p. 389, N. E. p. 969):

"The true doctrine to apply, in the disposition of such land as is covered by the body of such lakes, we think is that the government in making surveys included in such surveys all the land within the district surveyed, and if there was a lake or large pond, which covered a part of a subdivision, it was meandered out, and the dry land in such subdivision designated as a fractional subdivision or lot; that, in the purchase of such fractional subdivision or lot, the purchaser took title to it as a riparian owner, with the right to the land, as the water receded, within the boundary lines of the subdivision conveyed to the purchaser. In other words, the purchaser acquired title to all the land within the subdivision, though it was described as a fractional subdivision or lot. The authorized survey divided all the land within the district into subdivisions, and if, by reason of water upon a tract of land, a portion of it was regarded at the time as worthless and unsalable, there was a meander line run to ascertain the amount of dry land, and such subdivision was designated as a fractional subdivision or lot, and, although thus described, the sale passed title to the whole subdivision."

*The court declared that the doctrine thus [469] announced by it was not in conflict with its previous ruling in Edwards v. Ogle.

Brophy v. Richeson (1894) 137 Ind. 114, 36 N. E. 424, was a contest between the patentees of a fractional tract of dry land termed the southeast fractional quarter of a certain section, lying north and east of a meandered lake, and the patentees under a later survey made by the United States of the bed of the lake. It was held—following Stoner v. Rice—that the claimant under the first patent took title to all the land within the quarter section, whether dry or covered by the waters of the lake.

190 U. S.

Tolleston Club v. State (1894) 141 Ind. 197, 38 N. E. 214, was an action brought by the state of Indiana for the recovery of lands within the meander lines of a United States survey. The claim was that the state had acquired title to the lands within the meander upon selections made under the swamp land act of certain land, for which patents of the United States had been issued to the state of Indiana in 1853. Although the state had conveyed the border lots which she had acquired from the United States, the theory of the claim of the state was that, despite this conveyance, she remained the owner of, and was entitled to recover, the land within the meander, because it was deemed, in accordance with the ruling in the Portsmouth Bank Case (involving Beaver lake), that the state, in transferring the border lots, by their designation on the government plat of survey, had retained to herself, and not conveyed, her title to the land under water. The defendants asserted title derived from the United States under patents issued subsequent to 1870, based upon a survey made of the bed of the water by reason of an act of Congress, which is excerpted in the margin.†

[470] *It suffices to remark that it was held that, although the United States survey showed a meander line and fractional lots or sections thereon, this meander line, under the laws of the United States, was not a boundary, because, under said laws, its sole purpose was, not to limit the survey in any way, but simply to indicate how much dry land there was in the subdivision purchased. Consequently, it was determined that the land, both dry and wet, should be treated as having been wholly surveyed, because the lines of survey might be protracted across the meander so as to make complete surveyed sections, embracing both the dry and the wet land. The enumeration in the plat of the quantity of land contained in the subdivisions of the sections was considered as immaterial, and the doctrine of Stoner v. Rice was applied.

Whilst the claims of the patentees under the subsequent United States survey of the land within the meander were therefore rejected, and the act of Congress directing the survey was decided to be void, it was yet held that, as the state must recover upon the strength of her own title, she was not entitled to judgment for any land within the meander lines, because the grants made by the state of the fractional lots passed title to the legal subdivision beyond the meander lines, upon the theory of survey above noticed and the controlling effect of the decision in Stoner v. Rice. A petition for rehearing was filed on behalf of the state. An opinion denying such rehearing is reported in 141 Ind. 214, 40 N. E. 690. The principal contention on behalf of the state was that "the court erred in holding that the land in controversy had been surveyed, either by the government of the United States, or by the state of Indiana, at the time of the *sale of such border[471] lots by the state." The court, however, observing that this contention was dangerous ground for the state to stand upon, considered at length the provisions of §§ 2395 and 2396 of the Revised Statutes of the United States (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 1471, 1473), and concluded as follows:

"The land in controversy was therefore surveyed into sections, as provided by law, by the United States government surveyors, in 1834. But, even if we were mistaken in this, it would, as we have said, be a dangerous contention for appellee to undertake to show that such survey was not made. The swamp land act of 1850, under which the state claims title, requires that the lands should be selected, and the selections approved, by the Secretary of the Interior, as swamp lands. The land in dispute consists of parts of surveyed sections of land, selected, approved, and certified from the General Land Office of the United States. The land so selected is described as in township No. 36, range 8 west, and being 'all of . . . [sections] 12, 15, 17, 18, 19, and 20. All of 21 and 22 [and] N. W. ¼ 23.' But, if there were in fact no survey, then no such sections would exist,—at least between the meanders of the Calumet river; and so no selections would ever have been made by the state, or approved by the Secretary of the Interior. The consequence would be that the state had never received title, and the unsurveyed lands, having remained in possession of the general govern-

†Act approved July 1, 1870 (16 Stat. at L. 187). Chap. cxcix.—An Act in Relation to Certain Unsold Lands in the Counties of Porter and Lake, in the State of Indiana.

Whereas, there is lying along the Little Calumet river, in the counties of Porter and Lake, in the state of Indiana, a body of lands supposed to contain about four thousand acres, which has never been sold or surveyed, and which was described in the original government surveys as impassable morass; and whereas, the Calumet Drainage Company has been organized under the laws of said state, for the purpose of draining the valley of said river, including said morass: Therefore,

190 U. S.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That said unsold lands shall be subject to a lien under the laws of the state of Indiana for its proper proportion of the cost of such drainage, and such lien may be enforced against said lands in the same manner and to the same extent as if the said lands were owned by private persons: Provided, That no claim shall be held to exist against the United States for such drainage.

Sec. 2. And be it further enacted, That said lands may be surveyed and sold to the highest bidder, under the directions of the Secretary of the Interior, subject to said lien.

ment, were correctly surveyed, and sold under the act of Congress of 1870. If, therefore, we should admit this main contention of counsel for appellee, the consequence would inevitably follow that the state had never acquired title to the land in dispute. We are satisfied, however, that the conclusions reached in the original opinion—that the lands were surveyed in 1834; that they were selected, and the selections approved, under the swamp land act of 1850; that the state therefore acquired good title under that act; and that the act of 1870, with the resurvey and sales thereunder, was a nullity—are all correct; and we are quite unable to understand why counsel should here insist upon a contention which, if agreed to, would cut the ground entirely from under their own feet.”

[472] The Portsmouth Savings Bank Case was distinguished by *the statement that “Beaver lake was a large body of water, of shallow depth, which had not been surveyed by the United States government.

The precise import of the doctrine which, following Stoner v. Rice, the court applied in the case just reviewed is so aptly portrayed in the case of Tolleston Club v. Clough, 146 Ind. 93, 45 N. E. 647, that it is here noticed out of its chronological order. The plaintiff commenced his action to quiet title to land derived from the state through patents issued to the state by the United States under the swamp land act. The lands in controversy were part of those which were involved in the case of Tolleston Club v. State, 141 Ind. 197, 38 N. E. 214, 40 N. E. 690. The exact situation of the lands is shown on the following plat, which is reproduced from the opinion of the supreme court of Indiana:

To convey a clear conception of the situation and character of the land, a passage is here excerpted from the opinion in Tolleston Club v. State, 141 Ind. 205, 38 N. E. 216:

“The lands claimed by the state are within the meander lines of the United States survey, on each side of the Little Calumet river, being a tract about 6 miles in length, and from about three-quarters of a mile to about a mile and a quarter in width. In the original field notes of the survey the region is referred to as a ‘lake,’ while on the plat it is marked ‘impassable marsh.’ At the time of the United States survey in 1834 the territory was completely covered with water, in which, outside the river proper, there was a heavy growth of cattails, wild rice, and other swamp-like products.”

*The plaintiff, deriving title from the pat-[473] ents of the United States covering the fractional lots outside of the meander line, claimed to be the owner of the marsh land inside of the meander up to the thread of the stream marked on the plat as a river.

The court followed its ruling in Tolleston Club v. State, and said:

“It is plain that the lots described, being lot 1 and parts of lots 2 and 3, in section 19, and lots 1, 2, 3, and 4 in section 20, all extend north to the north section lines of their respective sections.”

By this ruling the lots abutting on the meander were made to cross that line, embrace the marsh land lying between them and the river, and would have extended across the river, so as to include practically the entire river in those sections, except where, in the sinuosity of the river, it crossed the section line. As, however, the court found that the owner of the lots abutting on the meander had only claimed to the bed of the river, it limited his rights in consequence of the pleadings to that extent, thus preventing the acquisition of the entire section where the section line was beyond the bed of the river.

I now come to the case of Kean v. Roby (1896) 145 Ind. 221, 42 N. E. 1011, upon the authority of which case the supreme court of Indiana affirmed the judgment of the trial court in the case at bar. Kean v. Roby was an action brought by the owner of lands abutting on Wolf lake, to quiet her title to land once part of the bed of the lake. The plaintiff claimed title to the border lots as well as to the lake-bed land by virtue of the survey made in 1834 and a patent from the United States to the state, made in 1853, under the swamp land act. The defendants claimed title under patents, based upon the Wolcott survey of 1875, of lands once part of the bed of the lake. Despite the fact that on the plat of survey the lake was meandered, and there were no sectional corners to which the lines could be protracted, the court held that the case was covered by the Tolleston Club decision, because it was deemed that the field notes showed that it would be possible to protract the lines so as to make regular and complete sections, *and it was therefore held [474] that the owner of the border lots was entitled to the adjacent land under water as well.

It therefore results that the doctrine embodied in the case of Kean v. Roby, and the previous cases commencing with Stoner v. Rice, was the rule applied in the decision of the case now under review, and by which the beds of the lakes were given to the owner of the border lots.

All the cases which have been recapitulated, I submit, divide themselves into two classes, the first, those prior to Stoner v. Rice; the second, the case of Stoner v. Rice, and those subsequent to it, including the ruling therein made. Without pausing to ascertain whether the cases in the first class are reconcilable with each other, or those in the second class can be made to harmonize with those in the first, one thing it seems to me is apparent: That is, that all the cases in both the classes, including the decision in the case at bar, indubitably held—

1. That the government of the United States owned the soil under all bodies of non-navigable water lying within the public domain of the United States, and that the title thereto remained in the United States until it had parted with it pursuant to the laws of the United States; and

2. That, in determining whether the United States had parted with title to such lands, the Indiana court always decided that question, not upon the controlling effect of any supposed rule of state or local law, but by what it deemed to be the proper construction of the laws of the United States governing the survey and disposition of the public domain.

The right of the defendants under patents of the United States, which they specially set up, having been denied, because it was conceived by the court below that no title vested in them under the laws of the United States, it would seem that the question arising for decision is this: Did the court correctly interpret the statutes of the United States?

This is a Federal question. But it is pressed that what title to the beds of the lakes passed to the state from the United States, either under the swamp land act or in virtue of the patents issued to the state, is to be determined, not by the law of the United States, but solely by the state or local law; hence, it *is insisted the case must be decided by the law which is rightfully applicable to it, and not by the law of the United States, which the supreme court of Indiana erroneously deemed was essential to its decision. If I entertained the opinion that the state or local law governed, and in consequence that this case was to be disposed of by considerations inherently local, I would, of course, be obliged to conclude that the controversy must be judged by that law which properly controlled it, and not by the law of the United States, which was mistakenly applied by the lower court. In that view my mind would be driven to the conclusion that this case should be dismissed for want of jurisdiction, since here there is no authority to review the action of the state court in a cause inherently depending upon the state or local law. Nor would this result be changed because the defendants asserted rights to the beds of the lakes under patents of the United States issued subsequent to those relied upon by the plaintiff, as its ultimate source of title. This follows, since the claim of the plaintiff was that title had passed to it and out of the United States by the swamp land act or the patents issued prior to those upon which the defendants relied. Now, if the question whether the land claimed by both parties had passed to the plaintiff or its grantors, prior to the issue of the patents to the defendants, is to be determined solely by the state or local law, it would follow that a decision of the state court in favor of the right of the plaintiff involved only a conclusion of state or local law broad enough to sustain the judgment, wholly irrespective of the Federal rights asserted by the defendants, and also entirely without reference to the soundness of the reasoning by which the court had reached its all-sufficient and non-Federal conclusion. Before, therefore, coming to consider the correctness of the ruling of the state court concerning the United States law which that court deemed to be decisive, it becomes necessary for me to ascertain whether, as asserted, the question as to the extent of the title derived from the United States by the plaintiff or its grantors is to be determined by the state or local law.

190 U. S.

The issue which first arises then is, By what law is the quantity of land which passed to the state under the statutes of the *United States and its patents to be determined,—by the law of the United States, which conferred on the state whatever rights it acquired, or solely by the state or local law, which had no agency or influence in passing rights from the United States to the state? In solving this question it is at once conceded that there are two cases—decided by this court on the same day, one resting upon the other, and therefore virtually but one case—announcing the doctrine that where the United States has conveyed land bordering on the meander line of a non-navigable body of water the question of what rights in the land under water passed from the United States to its grantee is to be determined solely by the state or local law.

The cases referred to are Hardin v. Jordan and Mitchell v. Smale, reported respectively in 140 U. S. 371 and 406, 35 L. ed. 428 and 442, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 808, 838, and 819, 840. Both cases were actions of ejectment, and the judgments reviewed were rendered by the circuit court of the United States for the northern district of Illinois. The plaintiff in each case was the owner, by mesne conveyances, under patents of the United States, based upon surveys made in 1834 of fractional lots abutting on the portion of Wolf lake situated in the state of Illinois, and they claimed as such abutting owners title to land once forming part of the bed of the lake. The defendants asserted title to the lake-bed lands upon the survey made in 1874 by the United States, and patents issued to them founded upon such survey. The trial court had held that the title of the owners of the border lots extended only to low-water mark, and found in favor of the defendants as to the land under water. The ground upon which the decision of the court reversing the trial court in both cases was based is shown in the following excerpts from the opinion in Hardin v. Jordan, pages 379-381 and 384,

L. ed. pages 432, 433, and 434, Sup. Ct. Rep. pages 811 and 813:

"The government surveys made in 1834-35, upon which the patent was issued, not only laid down a meander line next to the lake, but also described said lines as running 'along the margin of the lake;' and the plat of the survey, returned to the general and local land offices, and referred to in the patent for identification of the land granted, exhibited the granted tracts as actually bordering upon the lake; and the lake itself on said plat was marked with the words 'navigable lake,' although the fact [477] *found by the court is that the lake was not and is not a navigable lake, but a non-navigable fresh-water lake or pond. The patent itself does not contain all the particulars of the survey, but the grant of the lands is recited to be according to the official plat of the survey of said lands, returned to the General Land Office by the surveyor general, thereby adopting the plat as a part of the instrument.

"It has never been held that the lands under water, in front of such grants, are reserved to the United States, or that they can be afterwards granted out to other persons, to the injury of the original grantees. The attempt to make such grants is calculated to render titles uncertain, and to derogate from the value of natural boundaries, like streams and bodies of waters.

"Such being the form of the title granted by the United States to the plaintiff's ancestor, the question is as to the effect of that title in reference to the lake and the bed of the lake in front of the lands actually described in the grant. This question must be decided by some rule of law, and no rule of law can be resorted to for the purpose except the local law of the state of Illinois.

"It has been the practice of the government, from its origin, in disposing of the public lands, to measure the price to be paid for them by the quantity of upland granted, no charge being made for the lands under the bed of the stream, or other body of water. The meander lines run along or near the margin of such waters are run for the purpose of ascertaining the exact quantity of the upland to be charged for, and not for the purpose of limiting the title of the grantee to such meander lines.

"We do not think it necessary to discuss this point further. In our judgment the grants of the government for lands bounded on streams and other waters, without any reservation or restriction of terms, are to be construed as to their effect according to the law of the state in which the lands lie."

What was the law of Illinois with regard [478] to such grants, was *next considered, and it was determined "that the law of Illinois in this regard is the common law, and nothing else;" and that the title of the owners of border lots on a non-navigable body of water extended to the middle of the water.

If the doctrine announced in the cases referred to is to be here applied, then, as I have said, there is an end to this case, and the writ should be dismissed for want of jurisdiction, since in that view there is no substantial Federal contention in this record, for the reason, as I have previously remarked, that the decision of the state question would be broad enough to sustain the judgment without reference to the Federal rights asserted by the defendants. The doctrine, however, of Hardin v. Jordan, as it is given me to understand it, is not only unsound in reason, but incompatible with many cases decided in this court prior to and since its announcement, and, besides, is in conflict with the legislation of Congress and the practice of the government from the beginning. Impressed with the correctness of these views, and entertaining the conviction that the enforcement of the doctrine will lead to the gravest consequences in the future, it is proposed to consider its correctness as an original question, before agreeing that its application in the case at bar is proper. If the result of my investigation be the conclusion that the state or local law should not be applied, contrary to the ruling in Hardin v. Jordan, I shall then proceed to ascertain what are the rights of the parties, when measured by the law of the United States. If that investigation develops that the court below erroneously interpreted the law of the United States, and therefore wrongfully denied the title of the plaintiffs in error, it will be left for me to consider whether it is my duty, under the principle of stare decisis, to give my assent to the legal wrong which, under the views stated, was below committed.

It is unnecessary to elaborately demonstrate the elementary proposition that the United States, under the Articles of Confederation, was the owner of the public domain, however acquired, and that, since the adoption of the Constitution, the United States had also possessed, in full proprietorship, the public domain, from whatever source its title has been derived. *The doctrine on the subject was summarized by Chancellor Kent (Com. vol. 1, p. 257) in the following language:

"Upon the doctrine of the court in that case [Johnson v. McIntosh (1823) 8 Wheat. 543, 5 L. ed. 681] and in that of Fletcher v. Peck (1810) 6 Cranch, 142, 143, 3 L. ed. 179, 180, the United States own the soil as well as the jurisdiction of the immense tracts of unpatented lands included within their territories, and of all the productive funds which those lands may hereafter create. The title is in the United States by the treaty of peace with Great Britain, and by subsequent cessions from France and Spain, and by cessions from the individual states."

The matter was aptly epitomized in Irvine v. Marshall (1858) 20 How. 558, 15

L. ed. 994, where it was said (p. 561, L. ed. p. 996) :

"It cannot be denied that all the lands in the territories, not appropriated by competent authority before they were acquired, are in the first instance the exclusive property of the United States, to be disposed of to such persons, at such times, and in such modes, and by such titles, as the government may deem most advantageous to the public fisc, or in other respects most politic."

It is also elementary that land covered by water within the public domain of the United States is as much a part thereof as the dry land. Thus, in Illinois C. R. Co. v. Chicago (1900) 176 U. S. 646, 44 L. ed. 622, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 509, speaking through Mr. Justice Brown, it was said:

"We do not question the general principle that the word 'lands' includes everything which the land carries or which stands upon it, whether it be natural timber, artificial structures, or water, and that an ordinary grant of land by metes and bounds carries all pools and ponds, non-navigable rivers, and waters of every description by which such lands, or any portion of them, may be submerged; since, as was said by the court in Queen v. Leeds & L. Canal Nav. Co. 7 Ad. & El. 671, 685, 'lands are not the less land for being covered with water.'"

But, whilst the ownership of the United States, under the Confederation and under the Constitution, both of the dry land and that covered with water in the public domain, cannot be controverted, from the beginning it was conceded that the ownership [480] *of the public domain did not carry with it navigable waters or the land constituting the beds thereof, as such waters were considered within the class of public waters to be forever devoted to the public use. This was recognized by a provision of the ordinance of 1787 for the government of the Northwest territory, as follows:

"The navigable waters leading into the Mississippi and St. Lawrence, and the carrying places between the same, shall be common highways, and forever free, as well to the inhabitants of the said territory as to the citizens of the United States, and those of any other states that may be admitted into the confederacy, without any tax, impost, or duty therefor."

And, early in the history of Congress, prior to the adoption in 1805 of a general system for the survey of the whole public domain of the United States, the same principle was expressed in the act of May 18, 1796 (1 Stat. at L. 464, chap. 29, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1567), the 9th section of which act was as follows:

"Sec. 9. And be it further enacted, That all navigable rivers within the territory to be disposed of by virtue of this act shall be deemed to be and remain public highways. And that in all cases where the opposite banks of any stream, not navigable, shall belong to different persons, the stream and the bed thereof shall become common to both."

And because navigable waters were thus, from the beginning, recognized as public highways, and have ever since then been treated as sacredly devoted to the public use, they were always in principle excluded from the sales of the public domain. But the contrary rule has from the beginning prevailed as respected non-navigable waters, which have always been surveyed and sold and paid for. I shall take occasion hereafter, in reviewing the legislation of Congress, to demonstrate this fact, and, therefore, to point out that the statement to the contrary in the passage from the opinion in Hardin v. Jordan, which I have already quoted, must have been the result of confounding the general practice not to sell public waters with the universal practice to survey and sell non-navigable or private waters. No better illustration of the truth of this statement is required than is shown by this case, where the United States sold and *surveyed the beds of the non-navigable [481] waters to the defendants below long after the grant of the border lots; and the same condition of things is evidenced by other of the Indiana cases which have been reviewed, and it is to be observed that in two of the cases the grant or direction to sell the land covered by non-navigable waters was made by special acts of Congress long after the border lots had been disposed of.

Doubtless, as the result of the provisions treating navigable waters as public highways, and from a consideration of the nature and extent of the powers vested by the Constitution in the Federal government and those reserved to the states, and by a consideration of the doctrine of public and private waters known to the common law, it was early decided, and has been repeatedly reiterated, that the navigable waters and the land under them belonged to the states—as well the new as the old—in virtue of their sovereignty, to be held in trust for their people subject to the power of Congress to regulate commerce. And, in harmony with the principle just stated, it has been decided that such navigable waters and the land under them in the public domain of the United States within the territories, while subject to be disposed of by Congress, under the trust for public use, were yet held by the United States to be transmitted to the new states to be formed, and which should, when endowed with statehood, possess them with the same rights and powers as the original states. A list of the cases in which this doctrine is stated is appended in the margin.†

†Martin v. Waddell (1842) 16 Pet. 367, 410, 10 L. ed. 997, 1012; Pollard v. Hagan (1845) 3 How. 213, 11 L. ed. 566; Goodtitle ex dem. Pollard v. Kibbe (1850) 9 How. 471, 13 L. ed. 220; Doe ex dem. Hallett v. Beebe (1851) 13 How. 25, 14 L. ed. 35; United States v. Pacheco (1864) 2 Wall. 587, 17 L. ed. 865; Mumford v. Wardwell (1864) 6 Wall. 423, 18 L. ed. 756; Smith v. Maryland (1855) 18 How. 74, 15 L. ed. 270; Weber v. State Harbor Comrs. (1873) 18 Wall. 57, 21 L. ed. 798; Barney v. Keokuk

[482] *The doctrine of the cases was clearly stated in the opinion delivered by Mr. Justice Field, speaking for the court, in Illinois C. R. Co. v. Illinois, 146 U. S. 387, 435, 36 L. ed. 1018, 1036, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 110, 111, where it was said:

"It is the settled law of this country that the ownership of, and dominion and sovereignty over, lands covered by tide waters, within the limits of the several states, belong to the respective states within which they are found, with the consequent right to use or dispose of any portion thereof, when that can be done without substantial impairment of the interest of the public in the waters, and subject, always, to the paramount right of Congress to control their navigation so far as may be necessary for the regulation of commerce with foreign nations and among the states. This doctrine has been often announced by this court, and is not questioned by counsel of any of the parties. Pollard v. Hagan, 3 How. 212, 11 L. ed. 565; Weber v. State Harbor Comrs. 18 Wall. 57, 21 L. ed. 798.

"The same doctrine is in this country held to be applicable to lands covered by fresh water in the Great Lakes, over which is conducted an extended commerce with different states and foreign nations. These lakes possess all the general characteristics of open seas, except in the freshness of their waters, and in the absence of the ebb and flow of the tide. In other respects they are inland seas, and there is no reason or principle for the assertion of dominion and sovereignty over and ownership by the state of lands covered by tide waters that is not equally applicable to its ownership of and dominion and sovereignty over lands covered by the fresh waters of these lakes."

And, as a necessary consequence of the ownership by the states, in trust, of the navigable waters and the land under them within their territorial jurisdiction, it came to be decided that rights in and incident to such navigable waters or the land under them were to be determined solely with reference to the law of the state in which such navigable waters were situated. Barney v. Keokuk (1876) 94 U. S. 324, 24 L. ed. 224; St. Louis v. Myers (1885) 113 U. S. 566, 28 L. ed. 1131, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 640; Packer v. Bird (1891) 137 U. S. 669, 34 L. ed. 821, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 210; St. Louis v. Rutz (1891) 138 U. S. 226, 34 L. ed. 941, 947, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 337; Shively v. Bowlby (1894) 152 U. S. 1, 40, 38 L. ed. 331, 346, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 548; Grand Rapids & I. R. Co. v. Butler (1897)

159 U. S. 87, 40 L. ed. 85, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 991; St. Anthony Falls Water Power Co. v. St. Paul Water Comrs. (1897) 168 U. S. 349, 42 L. ed. 497, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 157. But, resting, as this last rule necessarily does, upon the ownership of such waters by the states, it can have no application to the proposition that rights in and to the land beneath the non-navigable waters of the public domain which belong to the United States, are to be determined solely by the law of the states. On the contrary, the decision that the right to the property belonging to the states is to be determined by the state law, because of the state ownership, involves the converse proposition that the effect of a grant of land and waters in the public domain of the United States, which are not navigable, and, therefore, belong to the United States, is to be determined by the law of the United States.

The ownership by the United States of the public domain being thus unquestionable, there can be no room for the contention that the quantity and character of property in the public domain which passes by grant from the United States is not to be exclusively measured by the law of the United States, because of want of power in the United States over the subject-matter of sale of the public domain. Such a contention would be obviously without merit, in view of the express delegation of authority concerning the property of the United States, contained in the 3d section of the 4th article of the Constitution, whereby Congress was vested with power "to dispose of and make all needful rules and regulations respecting the territory or other property belonging to the United States."

The comprehensive system of legislation, beginning with the very birth of the government, providing for the survey and sale of the public domain, the administrative machinery devised for executing these laws, and the multitude of decisions of this court concerning questions which have arisen thereunder, which have ever been deemed proper to be determined solely from a consideration of the laws of the United States, to my mind serve to demonstrate the unsoundness of the proposition that *any other law than that of the United States measures the nature and extent of title to the public domain conveyed by authority of the laws of the United States. [484]

Besides the implication resulting from the general legislation of Congress concerning the sale and disposition of the public domain, the special statutes granting rights in, and regulating the use of, the non-navigable waters upon the public lands, are very conclusive. Act of July 26, 1866 (14 Stat. at L. 253, chap. 262); Act of March 3, 1877 (19 Stat. at L. 377, chap. 107, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1548); Act of March 3, 1891 (26 Stat. at L. 1095, chap. 561, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1535); Act of June 17, 1902 (32 Stat. at L. 388). See, in this connection, Gutierrez v. Albuquerque Land & Irrig. Co. 188 U. S. 545, ante, 588, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 338, and United States v. Rio Grande Dam & Irrig. Co. 174 U. S. 690, 704, 43 L. ed. 1136, 1142, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 770.

(1876) 94 U. S. 324, 24 L. ed. 224; McCready v. Virginia (1876) 94 U. S. 391, 24 L. ed. 248; St. Louis v. Myers (1885) 113 U. S. 566, 28 L. ed. 1131, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 640; Manchester v. Massachusetts (1891) 139 U. S. 240, 35 L. ed. 159, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 559; Packer v. Bird (1891) 137 U. S. 661, 34 L. ed. 819, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 210; St. Louis v. Rutz (1891) 138 U. S. 226, 34 L. ed. 941, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 337; San Francisco v. Le Roy (1891) 138 U. S. 656, 671, 34 L. ed. 1096, 1101, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 364; Knight v. United Land Assn. (1891) 142 U. S. 161, 183, 35 L. ed. 974, 981, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 258;

Kaukauna Water Power Co. v. Green Bay & M. Canal Co. (1891) 142 U. S. 255, 35 L. ed. 1004, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 173; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Illinois (1892) 146 U. S. 387, 36 L. ed. 1018, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 110; Shively v. Bowlby (1894) 152 U. S. 1, 38 L. ed. 331, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 548; Grand Rapids & I. R. Co. v. Butler (1895) 159 U. S. 87, 40 L. ed. 85, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 991; St. Anthony Falls Water Power Co. v. St. Paul Water Comrs. (1897) 168 U. S. 349, 42 L. ed. 497, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 157; and Mobile Transp. Co. v. Mobile (1903) 187 U. S. 479, ante, 266, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 170.

I refer to a few cases in which the complete and efficient power of the United States and the controlling effect of its laws have been considered and lucidly stated.

In Bagnell v. Broderick (1839) 13 Pet. 436, 10 L. ed. 235, it was held that a state legislature was not competent to declare a certificate of purchase of equal dignity with a patent; and it was observed (p. 450, L. ed. p. 242):

"Congress has the sole power to declare the dignity and effect of titles emanating from the United States."

Wilcox v. Jackson ex dem. M'Connel (1839) 13 Pet. 498, 10 L. ed. 264, was an action in ejectment, brought in a state court of Illinois, to recover property which had at one time been part of a military post. The plaintiff based his claim upon a register's certificate, which the laws of Illinois declared to be evidence of title sufficient to support an action in ejectment. In reversing the judgment for the plaintiff, the court, in the course of the opinion, speaking through Mr. Justice Barbour, said (p. 516, L. ed. p. 273):

"It has been said that the state of Illinois has a right to declare by law that a title derived from the United States, which, by their laws, is only inchoate and imperfect, shall be deemed as perfect a title as if a patent had issued from the United States, and the construction of her own courts seems to give that effect to her statute. . . . We hold the true principle to be this, that whatever the question in any court, state or Federal, is, whether a title [485] to land which had once been the 'property of the United States has passed, that question must be resolved by the laws of the United States; but that whenever, according to those laws, the title shall have passed, then that property, like all other property in the state, is subject to state legislation, so far as that legislation is consistent with the admission that the title passed and vested according to the laws of the United States."

Irvine v. Marshall (1858) 20 How. 558, 15 L. ed. 994, was an action originally brought in a court of the territory of Minnesota. It was alleged that the defendant Marshall, as the agent of the plaintiff, had purchased certain public lands with funds belonging to plaintiff and a codefendant; that Marshall thereafter took a patent certificate in his own name, and refused to convey an undivided half of the land to the plaintiff. The bill of complaint was demurred to upon the ground that the action could not be maintained because of certain provisions of the territorial statute relating to resulting trusts. Applying its previous ruling in Wilcox v. Jackson ex dem. M'Connel, the court, in the course of the opinion, speaking through Mr. Justice Daniel, said (p. 563, L. ed. p. 997):
190 U. S.

"Within the provisions prescribed by the Constitution, and by the laws enacted in accordance with the Constitution, the acts and powers of the government are to be interpreted and applied so as to create and maintain a system, general, equal, and beneficial as a whole. By this rule, the acts and the contracts of the government must be understood as referring to and sustaining the rights and interests of all the members of this Confederacy, and as neither emanating from, nor intended for the promotion of, any policy peculiarly local, nor in any respect dependent upon such policy. The system adopted for the disposition of the public lands embraces the interests of all the states, and proposes the equal participation therein of all the people of all the states. This system is, therefore, peculiarly and exclusively the exercise of a Federal power. The theater of its accomplishment is the seat of the Federal government. The mode of that accomplishment, the evidences or muniments of right it bestows, are all the work of Federal functionaries alone."

"In United States v. Gratiot (1840) 14 [486] Pet. 526, 537, 10 L. ed. 573, 578, considering an objection that Congress was without power to lease the public lands, it was said (p. 537, L. ed. p. 578):

"Congress has the same power over . . . [the public lands] as over any other property belonging to the United States; and this power is vested in Congress without limitation."

In Gibson v. Chouteau (1872) 13 Wall. 92, 20 L. ed. 534, a state statute of limitations was held ineffective as against a patent from the United States. The court, speaking through Mr. Justice Field, said (p. 100, L. ed. p. 536):

"The same principle which forbids any state legislation interfering with the power of Congress to dispose of the public property of the United States also forbids any legislation depriving the grantees of the United States of the possession and enjoyment of the property granted by reason of any delay in the transfer of the title after the initiation of proceedings for its acquisition. The consummation of the title is not a matter which the grantees can control, but one which rests entirely with the government. With the legal title, when transferred, goes the right to possess and enjoy the land; and it would amount to a denial of the power of disposal in Congress if these benefits, which should follow upon the acquisition of that title, could be forfeited because they were not asserted before that title was issued."

In Fink v. O'Neill (1882) 106 U. S. 283, 27 L. ed. 200, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 325, Mr. Justice Matthews, delivering the opinion of the court, considering the 4th section of the homestead act of May 20, 1862 (12 Stat. at L. 393, chap. 75, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1398), which provided that no lands acquired thereunder should in any event become liable to any debt contracted prior to the issuing of the patent therefor, it was declared that Congress, by such provision had made the exemption of such lands from sale on execution a permanent part of the national policy.

[487] In Packer v. Bird (1891) 137 U. S. 661, 34 L. ed. 319, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 210, the court passed on the extent of the grant contained in a patent of the United States, to land in California, one portion whereof abutted on the Sacramento river. The patent was issued upon a decree of confirmation on a previously existing right or equity of the patentee to the lands, and the survey made pursuant to the *decree was incorporated in the patent. In the course of the opinion, speaking through Mr. Justice Field, the court said (p. 669, L. ed. p. 821, Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 212):

"The courts of the United States will construe the grants of the general government without reference to the rules of construction adopted by the states for their grants; but, whatever incidents or rights attach to the ownership of property conveyed by the government will be determined by the states, subject to the condition that their rules do not impair the efficacy of the grants or the use and enjoyment of the property by the grantee."

In Shively v. Bowlby (1894) 152 U. S. 1, 44, 38 L. ed. 331, 347, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 548, Mr. Justice Gray delivering the opinion, the language just quoted was approvingly referred to; and Mr. Justice Peckham, speaking for the court, in St. Anthony Falls Water Power Co. v. St. Paul Water Comrs. (1897) 168 U. S. 349, 362, 42 L. ed. 497, 502, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 157, again approvingly referred to the statement.

How completely these authorities apply to this case becomes, I think, manifest when it is borne in mind that the question is whether the United States, by the conveyance which it made of the land abutting on the water, parted with the title, which it confessedly owned prior to the conveyance, to the beds of the lakes themselves. The reservation as to rights and incidents referred to in the excerpt made above from the opinion in Packer v. Bird is but a reiteration of the doctrine enunciated by the court in the concluding sentences of the opinion in Irvine v. Marshall, 20 How. 558, 15 L. ed. 994, and its import is further shown by the opinion in Barney v. Keokuk, 94 U. S. 324, 24 L. ed. 224. In the latter case, the question presented was what rights in the beds of navigable streams attached to abutting lands conveyed by grants of the United States, and the court said that, as the beds of navigable waters within a state were the property of the state, by virtue of its sovereignty, no rights in the bed of such a stream could be conferred by a conveyance from the United States, unless the state law vested such rights in the owners of the upland without reference to the source from which the title to the upland had been derived. If such be the power of the states as to navigable waters which they hold in trust, it necessarily follows *that[488] what rights pass by a conveyance from the United States to land under non-navigable waters must be determined by the laws of the United States, to whom such land and water when situated in the public domain belong in absolute ownership.

The ownership in the United States and its exclusive power under the Constitution to administer and control its property being thus demonstrated, it follows that the state law is not the proper criterion by which to ascertain what the United States conveyed, and, therefore, there is a Federal question to be examined.

The court below held, although the United States survey had not, in fact, been extended beyond the meander line, and the lots conveyed by the United States were described as fractional on the plat and in the patents, that the patentees yet took full subdivisions. The principle applied was this: Where marsh land or non-navigable waters were within a meander line upon which fractional lots were abutted, the conveyance of such lots by the United States carries also the marsh land or non-navigable water beyond the meander to the extent of a full subdivision. And, in order to accomplish this result, the marsh land and water inside of the meander will be considered to have been surveyed, and the lines of the survey be hence protracted across the meander so as to embrace a full subdivision. Whilst this theory was plainly irreconcilable with the construction given to the United States law by the supreme court of Indiana in cases decided by it prior to Stoner v. Rice, 121 Ind. 51, 6 L. R. A. 387, 22 N. E. 968, that case announced the rule, and the subsequent cases in Indiana have sanctioned it down to and including Kean v. Roby, upon which the decision in this case was rested. In Hardin v. Jordan the doctrine of Stoner v. Rice was criticised as an unwarranted departure from the common law, and it was observed—as was undoubtedly the case—that the Indiana court, in Stoner v. Rice, but adopted the rule announced by the supreme court of Michigan in Clute v. Fisher, 65 Mich. 48, 31 N. W. 614, decided in 1887, shortly before the decision in Stoner v. Rice. Now, the opinion in Clute v. Fisher shows that the Michigan court in that case but followed a prior ruling made by it at the same term, in Palmer v. Dodd, 64 Mich. 474, 31 N. W. 209. The latter case involved title to land within a *section made fractional by a meandered lake or marsh, and the controversy turned upon whether, under the law of the United States, the rights of the owner of the fractional section extended beyond the meander line. The supreme court of Michigan, in deciding the question, said:

"When the United States grants by patent land described by a legal subdivision, the grantee is entitled to all the land embraced within the legal subdivision contained in his grant, and is not limited by the number of acres specified in the patent or upon the government plat. The meanders have no significance as boundaries, and are not intended as such. They are run simply to afford a means of computing the area contained in the fraction which the United States requires payment for on sale of the public domain. But no grantee by such patent, granting a legal subdivision of land, can derive title to land upon another legal subdivision. This we have decided in the cases of Wilson v. Hoffman, 54 Mich. 246, 20 N. W. 37; Keyser v. Sutherland, 59 Mich. 455, 26 N. W. 865, which were based upon the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States in Brown v. Clements, 3 How. 650, 11 L. ed. 767."

It is, hence, apparent that the rule in Clute v. Fisher was based upon the construction of the law of the United States expounded by this court in Brown v. Clements, 3 How. 650, 11 L. ed. 767. But, long prior to the decision in Clute v. Fisher, this court, in Gazzam v. Phillips (1857) 20 How. 372, 15 L. ed. 958, had reviewed the case of Brown v. Clements, and decided that the sale of a fractional lot did not convey a full subdivision; and, in consequence of this view, the case of Brown v. Clements was expressly overruled. In subsequent cases in Michigan the fact that that court had mistakenly predicated its conclusion in Clute v. Fisher on a case which this court had overruled, has been conceded. Grand Rapids Ice & Coal Co. v. South Grand Rapids Ice & Coal Co. 102 Mich. 227, 25 L. R. A. 815, 60 N. W. 681. But, whilst the Michigan court has thus recognized the error into which it inadvertently fell in Clute v. Fisher, the Indiana court has continued to apply that rule, although the sole authority upon which it rests has been repudiated.

[490] Besides the error in the ruling below which is thus shown to *exist, the principle applied is, moreover, in conflict with decisions of this court since the ruling in Gazzam v. Phillips.

In Horne v. Smith, 159 U. S. 40, 40 L. ed. 68, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 988, certain fractional lots appeared by the plat of survey to be bounded on the west by the meander line of the Indian river. It was, however, found as a fact that the water line which was surveyed and made the boundary of the lots was the line of a bayou or savannah, and that there had been an omission to make a survey of the land west of the bayou and between it and the main bed of the Indian river. The court, speaking through Mr. Justice Brewer, said (p. 45, L. ed. p. 70, Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 990):

"Although it was unsurveyed, it does not follow that a patent for the surveyed tract adjoining carries with it the land which, perhaps, ought to have been, but which was not in fact, surveyed. The patent conveys only the land which is surveyed; and, when it is clear from the plat and the surveys that the tract surveyed terminated at a particular body of water, the patent carries no land beyond it."
190 U. S. U. S., Book 47.

In Niles v. Cedar Point Club, 175 U. S. 300, 44 L. ed. 171, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 124, it appeared that a survey was made in 1834-1835 of fractional townships in the northern part of Ohio, adjacent to Lake Erie. By the field notes and plat certain sections were shown as fractional, because a tortuous meander line was shown upon the plat of survey upon which the fractional lots abutted. *Across this meander line there was a region of country described as a marsh, and agreed in the statement of facts to be a body of low, swamp land, partly boggy and partly dry, stretched beyond to the shores of Lake Erie. The claim of the owner of the abutting lands was that his boundary was not the meander at the edge of the marsh, but Lake Erie. By referring to the plat previously excerpted in reviewing one of the Tolleston Club Cases, showing the situation of the land which was in controversy in those cases, it will be seen that the precise condition passed upon in those cases was involved in Niles v. Cedar Point Club, 175 U. S. 300, 44 L. ed. 171, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 124. With the exact situation confronting it, instead of applying the erroneous rule announced in Indiana, this court held that the purchaser of the fractional lots abutting on the meander did not take a complete subdivision, but was *con- [491] fined by the meander line and got only the land which he bought and paid for. The court, speaking through Mr. Justice Brewer, said (p. 306, L. ed. p. 173, Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 127):

"It appears distinctly from the field notes and the plat that the surveyor, Rice, stopped his surveys at this 'marsh,' as he called it. These surveys were approved and a plat prepared, which was based upon the surveys and field notes, and showed the limits of the tracts which were for sale. The patents, referring in terms to the survey and plat, clearly disclose that the government was not intending to, and did not, convey any land which was a part of the marsh.

"It may be that surveyor Rice erred in not extending his surveys into this marsh, but his error does not enlarge the title conveyed by the patents to the surveyed fractional sections. The United States sold only the fractional sections, received only pay therefor, an amount fixed by the number of acres conveyed, and one receiving a patent will not ordinarily be heard to insist that, by reason of an error on the part of the surveyor, more land was bought than was paid for, or than the government was offering for sale."

And the same meaning was attributed to a meander line in French-Glenn Live Stock Co. v. Springer, 185 U. S. 54, 46 L. ed. 803, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 563.

But it is said the state of Indiana was entitled to the land under the beds of the lakes in and by virtue of the act of Congress of September 28, 1850, known as the swamp land act, and, therefore, the error committed below, as to the meaning of the survey and patents, is without importance. But the state could not acquire a legal title to land under the swamp land act except by patent (Niles v. Cedar Point Club, 175 U. S. 309, 44 L. ed. 174, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 124; Brown v. Hitchcock, 173 U. S. 473, 43 L. ed. 772, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 485; Rogers' Locomotive Mach. Works v. American Emigrant Co. 164 U. S. 559, 574, 41 L. ed. 552, 558, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 188; Michigan Land & Lumber Co. v. Rust, 168 U. S. 589, 592, 42 L. ed. 591, 592, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 208), and such patent must have been based upon a survey, as the statute clearly contemplated the selection and patenting only of "legal subdivisions." Act September 28, 1850 (9 Stat. at L. 519, chap. 84, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1587). The survey having stopped at the bank, and the bed of the lake not having been surveyed, platted, or subdivided, or the area thereof ascertained, *no right of the state had attached to the lake-bed land under the swamp land act. Indeed, whilst some of the earlier cases in Indiana construed the swamp land act in direct conflict with the meaning of that act as interpreted by this court in the cases above cited, in a later case (Tolleston Club v. State) the Indiana court, on the rehearing, pointed out that, under a correct construction of the swamp land act, a survey and a patent were essential prerequisites to the passing of rights to the state under the swamp land act. And the confirmatory act of March 3, 1857 (11 Stat. at L. 251, chap. 117, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1588), clearly has no application, as patents had issued in 1853 upon all the selections made for the state.

The mind cannot fail at once to perceive the serious disturbance to vested rights which must follow from the suggestion that title passed to the state of Indiana, under the swamp land act, to land belonging to the United States, which at the time of the issue of the patents to the state had not been surveyed or selected by the Secretary of the Interior for account of the state, and which was not parceled into legal subdivisions until 1875, when the lake-bed land in question was surveyed as the property of the United States.

I am brought, then, to these questions: Did the United States, by running meander lines, lose her title to the lands within such lines? and, Did she, by issuing patents for the fractional lots abutting on lakes which were thus meandered, convey to her grantees title to the center of the lakes?

It cannot be successfully controverted that from the beginning, both under the Confederation and since the adoption of the Constitution, the laws for the survey and sale of the public domain have contemplated as well the survey and sale of both dry land and land covered by water, except that under navigable waters. This so clearly results from the text of the statutes that I content myself with making reference to the sections of the Revised Statutes relating to the subject, and to a citation in the margin of some of the earlier statutes.†

*The fact that land under non-navigable[493] waters was subject to survey and sale, and the settled practice of meandering navigable streams and making fractional abutting lots, is aptly illustrated by the case of Surgett v. Lapiee (1850) 8 How. 48, 12 L. ed. 982. The question presented in that case arose under the act of March 3, 1811 (2 Stat. at L. 662, chap. 46), relating to the mode of surveying public lands in the territory of Orleans. By the 2d section of that act power was conferred to depart from the rectangular mode of survey as respected lands abutting on certain waters in the territory. Such lands were to be laid out into tracts as near as practicable of a specified frontage and depth on a river or bayou, and to be bounded by such lines as the nature of the country would render practicable and most convenient. By the 5th section of the act certain rights of pre-emption or double concessions in the lands back of tracts fronting on such waters were created under described conditions in favor of the front proprietors, it being provided in the act that double concessions should in no event extend so far in depth as to include lands fit for cultivation "bordering on another river, creek, bayou, or water course." Within the area of a double concession involved in the controversy in the case named, there was a bayou, and the claim on one side was that the double concession should extend back and embrace the lands on the bayou on the theory that it was non-navigable, while, on the other hand, it was contended that the bayou should be treated as navigable, and that the double concession could not be extended back to embrace the lands bordering on the bayou. Considering the contention that the waters of the bayou in question, though non-navigable, came within the description of water courses recited in the act, the court said (p. 69, L. ed. p. 991):

"To what description of water course did the legislature refer? *The enacting clause[494] provides that every person who owns a tract of land, 'bordering' on any river, creek, bayou, or water course, shall have the right of pre-emption to the back land. The act of 1811 has been construed, in the Department of Public Lands, for nearly forty years, to mean that those owners whose lands fronted on a navigable stream were only provided for; and that the word 'border,' both in the enacting clause and in the exception, meant to front on a navigable water course; that is to say, such waters as are described in the 3d section of the act of February 20, 1811 [2 Stat. at L. 642, chap. 21], by which Louisiana was authorized to form a state Constitution and government, by which act the River Mississippi, and the navigable rivers and waters leading into the same, or into the Gulf of Mexico, were declared to be common highways, and forever free, as well to the inhabitants of the said state, as to other citizens of the United States.

†Ordinances of Confederation: May 20, 1785 (1 Brechard's Land Laws, p. 11); July 13, 1787, art. 4 (Id. p. 18); July 23, 1787 (Id. p. 24); June 20, 1788 (Id. p. 29); and July 9, 1788 (Id. p. 33). Acts of Congress: April 21, 1792 (1 Stat. at L. 257, chap. 25); May 5, 1792 (1 Stat. at L. 266, chap. 30); May 18, 1796 (1 Stat. at L. 464, chap. 29, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1362); May 10, 1800 (2 Stat. at L. 73, chap. 55); March 3, 1803 (2 Stat. at L. 233, chap. 27); March 26, 1804 (2 Stat. at L. 277, chap. 35); February 11, 1805 (2 Stat. at L. 313, chap. 14); March 2, 1805 (2 Stat. at L. 329, chap. 26); March 3, 1811 (2 Stat. at L. 662, chap. 46); April 24, 1820 (3 Stat. at L. 566, chap. 51); April 5, 1832 (4 Stat. at L. 503, chap. 65). Revised Statutes: Title 32, The public lands, particularly chapter 4 (Pre-emptions), chapter 5 (Homesteads), chapter 7 (Sale and disposal of the public lands), and chapter 9 (Survey of the public lands).

"Similar provisions as respects navigable waters are common to other states where there are public lands, and the practice has been uniform to survey and sell the lands 'bordering' on navigable streams as fractional sections; nor is the channel ever sold to a private owner. Of necessity, it had to be left almost exclusively to the Department of Lands executing the public surveys to ascertain what stream was navigable, and should be bordered by fractions and reserved from sale; and on the other hand, what waters were not navigable, and should be included in square sections, and the channel sold."

Whilst, of course, the case arose under the act of 1811, the opinion points to the general rule obtaining for years in the Land Department on the subject of the sale of land under non-navigable waters and the exclusion of land forming the beds of navigable or public waters from survey and sale.

[495] Without presently developing this subject further, I append in the margin a reference to acts of Congress, rules of the *Land Department governing surveys, and reports of the executive officers charged with the survey and disposition of the public domain, which, beyond peradventure, show that, from the very beginning of the government up to the decision in Hardin v. Jordan, the general practice was to treat the land under non-navigable waters as the property of the United States, and to survey and sell the same as part of the public domain. Indeed, the proposition just stated is established by the facts disclosed in the various cases decided by the supreme court in Indiana which I have at the outset reviewed.

Whilst, as pointed out in Surgett v. Lapice, the existence of a navigable stream was the reason which usually occasioned a meander line, and hence fractional subdivisions, the provisions of the surveying laws, both under the Confederation and since, contemplated such a meander line also wherever there existed an Indian reservation or private land claim which at the time of the survey was made prevented the extension of the public surveys. But it is apparent that from an early day meander lines and resulting fractional sections came to be established, not only when occasioned by navigable rivers, Indian reservations, or private land claims, but from other causes. Thus, where the deputy surveyor encountered a morass or swamp which he deemed impassable, or such a body of non-navigable water as in his judgment it would not be profitable then to survey, a meander line would be run and fractional sections created. When this practice first originated, and whether the surveyor general of the respective surveying districts applied uniform rules concerning it, the official documents of which I can take judicial notice do not enable me to determine. But certain it is that the practice prevailed prior to 1827. This is evidenced *by a communica-[496] tion from the Land Department to the surveyor general at Washington, Mississippi, dated January 30, 1827 (2 Birchard's Comp. p. 862), and also by a letter from the Commissioner to the surveyor general at Cincinnati, Ohio, dated March 11, 1836 (Id. 962). That complaint was sometimes made that deputy surveyors had mistakenly meandered marsh land, which it was asserted should have been surveyed, subdivided, and platted, is also indicated by the official communication last referred to. The practice as to non-navigable lakes, above alluded to, is, moreover, shown by the meandering of the very lakes here in controversy (Wolf and George) as early as 1835, of Beaver lake and the lands adjacent to the Calumet river about the same time, as shown by the Indiana decision in the Portsmouth Bank and Tolleston Club Cases, and of Cross, Soda, Clear, and Fairy lakes in Louisiana in 1839. Sen. Doc. 101, 54 Cong. 1st session.

The general practice as to meandering lakes and ponds, prevailing in the survey-

† Act of July 1, 1870 (16 Stat. at L. 187, chap. 199); Act of January 11, 1873 (17 Stat. at L. 409, chap. 22); Act of February 19, 1874 (18 Stat. at L. 16, chap. 30); Act of December 21, 1874 (18 Stat. at L. 293, chap. 5); Manual of Surveying Instructions, February 22, 1855, approved by Congress, May 30, 1862 (12 Stat. at L. 409, chap. 86); Instructions of Commissioner of General Land Office of July 13, 1874 (Copp's Public Land Laws, p. 765); Report of Commissioner of General Land Office, 1868 (p. 131); Manual of Surveying Instructions, May 3, 1881 (p. 34), January 1, 1890 (p. 33), and June 30, 1894 (p. 57), which last was approved by act of August 15, 1894 (28 Stat. at L. 285, chap. 288, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1474); Report of the Commissioner of the General Land Office, 1877 (p. 11); Letter of Secretary of Interior in response to a resolution of the House of Representatives respecting the survey of Lakes Wolf and George in Indiana and Illinois (H. R. Ex. Doc., No. 83, 45th Congress, 2d session); Report of the Commissioner of the General Land Office, in response to Senate resolution of January 14, 1896, giving information relative to certain lakes in Louisiana (Sen. Doc., No. 101, 54th Congress, 1st session).

ing districts created prior to 1850, is, however, conclusively shown by the "Manual of Instructions" dated February 22, 1855, issued by the Land Department for the guidance of the surveyors and deputy surveyors. In a letter transmitting this manual, the Commissioner of the General Land Office directed attention to the fact that it was a revised edition of the previous instructions on the subject. Among the instructions contained in this manual was the following (Lester Land Laws, p. 714):

"3. You are also to meander, in manner aforesaid, all lakes and deep ponds of the area of 25 acres and upwards; also navigable bayous; shallow ponds, readily to be drained, or likely to dry up, are not to be meandered."

This manual was approved by Congress on May 30, 1862 (12 Stat. at L. 409, chap. 86). Like manuals, reiterating the instructions above referred to, were issued on May 3, 1881, January 1, 1890, and June 30, 1894 (p. 57); and the manual of 1894 was approved by Congress on August 15, 1894. 23 Stat. at L. 285, chap. 288, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1474.

[497] Whilst the statements already made are sufficient to demonstrate that the rule contained in the manuals but substantially expressed the practice prevailing from the beginning, such *fact is additionally demonstrated by the report of the Commissioner of the General Office for 1868 (p. 131), wherein, referring to the rule, he said that, in substance, it but reiterated the practice always followed in the Land Department.

There is in reason, then, no support for the proposition announced in some cases decided by state courts,—presumably on the authority of the rule in Hardin v. Jordan,—that the stopping of a survey at the margin of a non-navigable body of water and the meandering of the same operate to deprive the United States of the title to land within the meanders, which the United States had owned before the meander lines were run. To say this would be only to declare that power existed in the executive officers of the government to strip the United States of its property by a mere method of survey, when from the beginning no authority to that effect had been conferred, and no such purpose was contemplated. The practice of the government and the decisions of this court, it seems to me, leave no room for controversy on this subject. Thus, where a navigable stream was meandered, and within the meander lines were unsurveyed islands forming part of the public domain of the United States, and a request was subsequently made under the provisions of the statutes of the United States for their survey (12 Stat. at L. 410, chap. 90), the practice of the department was to comply with the request and survey and dispose of the islands as parts of the public domain. Report Land Office, 1868, p. 121. And, as said in the same report, in referring to the rule prevailing from the beginning concerning the meandering of lakes and ponds, where, subsequently to such meandering, lake beds were reported as dry, they "were surveyed and brought into the market. In all these instances the United States has but exercised the ordinary right of proprietorship."

The decisions of this court already referred to conclusively establish at the same time that the mere running of a meander line did not affect the title of the United States to the land within such meanders. Without going over all the cases, it suffices to call attention on this point to Gazzam v. Phillips, 20 How. 372, 15 L. ed. 958, and Niles v. Cedar Point Club, 175 U. S. 300, 44 L. ed. 171, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 124. *Quite recently the subject was again passed [498] upon in United States v. Mission Rock Co. 189 U. S. 391, ante, 865, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 606. In that case there existed in navigable waters a small island, and, whilst the title of the state to the land under the navigable waters was sustained, the title of the United States to the island was upheld.

The prior title of the United States being unaffected by the meander, did the conveyance by the United States of a specified quantity of land contained in described fractional lots abutting on a meander, the land under water within the meanders being unsurveyed and unplatted, convey by legal intendment more than the grant purported to embrace?

It cannot be controverted that, at common law, as elaborately pointed out in Hardin v. Jordan, the owner of land abutting on an unnavigable body of water, by conveying the upland as bounding on the water, without restriction or reservation in the deed, in legal effect, caused the center of the stream to be the boundary of the land conveyed. But, it seems to me, it cannot be questioned that the statutes of the United States relating to the disposal of the public domain confer no power whatever to sell unsurveyed public land, nor do such statutes invest courts with the authority to enlarge the grants actually specified in the patents of the United States. A grant by the United States is to be interpreted by the statutes of the United States, and therefore is not subject to be enlarged by any principle of conveyance beyond the express intendment of the statute under the authority of which the grant is made. The difference between the rules of construction applicable to grants made by a government and the grant made by an individual is that grants of the government are to be strictly construed in its favor and against the grantee; in other words, that nothing passes by the grant but that which is necessarily and expressly embraced in its terms.

The doctrine on this subject was aptly stated by the court in Shively v. Bowlby, speaking through Mr. Justice Gray, where it was said (152 U. S. 10, 38 L. ed. 335, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 551):

"It was argued for the defendants in error that the question presented was a mere question of construction of a grant bounded *by tide water, and would have been the [499] same as it is if the grantor had been a private person. But this is not so. The rule of construction in the case of such a grant from the sovereign is quite different from that which governs private grants. The familiar rule and its chief foundation were felicitously expressed by Sir William Scott: 'All grants of the Crown are to be strictly construed against the grantee, contrary to the usual policy of the law in the consideration of grants; and upon this just ground, that the prerogatives and rights and emoluments of the Crown being conferred upon it for great purposes, and for the public use, it shall not be intended that such prerogatives, rights, and emoluments are diminished by any grant, beyond what such grant by necessary and unavoidable construction shall take away.' The Rebeckah, 1 C. Rob. 227, 230. Many judgments of this court are to the same effect. Charles River Bridge v. Warren Bridge, 11 Pet. 420, 544-548, 9 L. ed. 773, 822-824; Martin v. Waddell, 16 Pet. 367, 411, 10 L. ed. 997, 1013; Central Transp. Co. v. Pullman's Palace Car Co. 139 U. S. 24, 49, 35 L. ed. 55, 64, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 478."

Applying this doctrine to the lands in question, as the law of the United States conferred no authority to transfer unsurveyed land, and confined the patentee to the land actually described in the patent as strictly construed, it follows that, by the issue of its patents for fractional lots abutting on the water, the United States did not transfer the title to the beds of the lakes in question within the meander lines.

And the Land Department, in executing the acts of Congress, and Congress itself, in dealing with the subject, have so uniformly manifested the purpose that the grants of the United States to land bordering on a non-navigable body of water should not convey the land under the water belonging to the United States beyond the limits of the land actually expressed in the patent as conveyed, that it seems to me the statutes for the disposition of the public domain should be read as if they contained an express provision to that effect.

[500] I have already shown the rule prevailing from the earliest day for the meandering of non-navigable lakes and ponds, and, in doing so, called attention to the report of the Commissioner of the General Land Office made in 1868, in which he stated *that it had been the constant practice from the beginning, after lakes had been meandered and on the lakes becoming dry, to survey and dispose of the beds thereof. As evidencing this practice, I call attention to the following:

The Land Department, on July 13, 1874 (Copp's Public Land Laws, p. 765), issued directions which were to govern the survey of the bed of non-navigable lakes and other like bodies of water which had been meandered at the time of the original survey, and which had become suitable for survey and sale. As the circular of instructions related only to districts where the office of surveyor general had been abolished, and could not have been intended to create a rule in such districts different from that obtaining in other districts, the legitimate inference from the instructions is that it was intended to put in effect in such districts the practice usual in other districts where the office of surveyor general had not been done away with. This view finds support in the prelude to the letter forwarding the circular of instructions, which says: "As inquiries arise in regard to the survey of the beds of meandered lakes or other similar bodies of water in districts where the office of surveyor general has been discontinued, the following is communicated," etc. The instructions which followed authorized the survey of the beds of such lakes as the property of the United States, when the waters had "so permanently receded or dried up as to leave within the unsurveyed area dry land fit, in ordinary seasons, for agricultural purposes." The remainder of the instructions dealt with the mode of proceeding to have a survey made and title obtained by individuals.

Here, again, as in the case of the rule of 1855, concerning the meandering of non-navigable lakes, the fact that it but in substance formulated the practice prevailing from the beginning, is shown by the report of the Commissioner of the General Land Office made in 1877 (Report, Land Office, p. 11), where, referring to the practice of the department as to surveying islands situated in navigable waters within a meander and the circular in respect thereto issued in 1868, and also referring to the circular of July 13, 1874, above referred to, it was said:

"The regulations embraced in these circulars were not new *in their substance, but [501] were simply a formulation of the pre-existing practice of the office theretofore administered with reference to the class of lands to which they were applicable."

It is then established that from the very beginning of the government, until at least the date of the circular just referred to, the practice was, after non-navigable bodies of water had been meandered, when the beds thereof became uncovered, to dispose of such beds as the property of the United States, separately from the former border lots. As the record does not disclose the number of instances in which this practice was observed during nearly one hundred years prior to Hardin v. Jordan, I may not state them, but, as no single instance to the contrary appears, it seems to me that the statement in Hardin v. Jordan, that the contrary rule had always prevailed, is left without any support whatever, and must have arisen from confounding the uniform practice not to sell the channel of navigable rivers, which belonged to the states, with the uniform practice to the contrary as to non-navigable waters, which belonged to the United States. But, the acts of Congress on the subject are so clear that they leave no room for substantial controversy, and they, in effect, amount to a legislative approval of the construction of the laws of the United States affixed by the administrative officers to those laws from the very foundation of the government. Thus, on July 1, 1870 (16 Stat. at L. 187, chap. 199), after the sale of border lots abutting on the meander of a marsh and the Little Calumet river, Congress provided for the survey and sale of the lands within the meanders. So, also, after the patenting to the state of Indiana of the fractional lots abutting on Beaver lake, Congress, by act of January 11, 1873 (17 Stat. at L. 409, chap. 32), granted the bed of the lake to the state. Again, by the act of February 19, 1874 (18 Stat. at L. 16, chap. 30), the bed of a meandered lake, known as Tarkio lake, situated in Holt county, Missouri, was conveyed to the county, with a reservation, however, that the county should make title to such person as might have settled upon any portion of the land once part of the bed of the lake, under the homestead and pre-emption laws. Yet a further illustration, which, because [502] its brevity and importance, is excerpted *in full. Congress passed an act, approved on December 21, 1874 (18 Stat. at L. 293, chap. 5), which reads as follows:

"Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That so much of the bed of the marsh or pond in sections fourteen, twenty-three, and twenty-six, in township sixteen north, of range twenty east of the fourth principal meridian in the county of Sheboygan, in the state of Wisconsin, as shall or may be reclaimed by draining the water from the same, shall be owned and held, so far as any rights or interests of the United States are concerned, by the owners of the lands abutting upon said marsh or pond, and draining the same to the center or thread thereof, and divided among the several owners adjoining and abutting said marsh or pond, according to the rules of law, upon payment by said adjoining owners into the treasury of the United States of $1.25 per acre for the amount of land that has been or may be so reclaimed."

But, it is said, although it be conceded that the patentee, under the law of the United States, was confined to the land within the actual boundaries of the fractional lots conveyed, nevertheless if, as a matter of conveyancing, a grant by an individual would be construed under the state law as extending beyond the dry land to the center of the water, such construction should be applied to the patents of the United States. This, however, but asserts the same proposition which I have already fully considered, and, whilst seemingly accepting the true meaning of the law of the United States and the interpretation given to it from the beginning, proceeds to overthrow it.

To argue that, because conveyances made by individuals are controlled by the law of the states, therefore conveyances made by the United States are likewise so controlled, involves, as I see it, not only a non sequitur, but, besides, amounts to denying, so far as the public domain is concerned, that there is a government of the United States having complete ownership and supreme power in the premises. The suggestion that courts as a matter of convenience will determine by the state *law the extent of a grant made by the United States is without force, since courts have no power upon their conception of convenience to deprive the United States of its property by resorting to the laws of a state in order to divest the title of the United States in and to property which it owns, and which it has never voluntarily parted with if its own laws be applied. Moreover, the argument of convenience, when inherently considered, is without merit, since it rests on the assumption that, for the purpose of convenience, it will be held that what property passed by a grant of the United States is to be measured by a variable standard, the divergent laws of the several States, instead of the law of the United States operating generally throughout the United States, thus creating uncertainty and confusion by causing it to come to pass that a grant made by the United States in virtue of the authority conferred by the statutes of the United States will mean one thing in one state and a wholly different thing in another.

1154

As pointed out by this court in Irvine v. Marshall, 20 How. 558, 563, 15 L. ed. 994, 997, one of the very objects of the provision of the Constitution conferring ample power upon Congress with respect to the property of the United States was to prevent this very condition of things. In other words, the proposition is that, for the sake of assumed convenience, a rule of interpretation should be resorted to to bring about the very condition of inconvenience which it was the purpose by the constitutional provision in question to guard against.

Conceding, however, arguendo, that a grant by the United States should be construed as a matter of conveyancing by the local law prevailing in a particular state, it nevertheless seems to me clear that the conclusion which the court reaches is erroneous. As has been shown in the Portsmouth Bank Case, the supreme court of Indiana expressly decided that a conveyance of border lots by the state was to be governed, not by the rules of conveyancing applicable to private individuals, but that the power of the state officers was to be ascertained from the statutes of the state alone; consequently, it was decided that, where the state had conveyed the lots abutting *on Beaver lake by the ex-

[504] act description contained in the patents of the United States, such conveyances gave no right to the bed of the lake, because power existed in the officers of the state only to sell lands which had been regularly surveyed and platted. In other words, the local decisions in Indiana establish the exact distinction between the rule of conveyancing applicable to individuals and those controlling the grant by a government, which was pointed out by this court in the passage from the opinion in Shively v. Bowlby, previously quoted.

Surely, if it be the rule in Indiana that the construction of a grant made by the state of its public lands is to be controlled by the state statutes, it should not now be held that a grant by the United States of its lands situated in Indiana is not to be construed by the statutes of the United States, but by the rules of conveyancing applicable to private grants. In other words, that, in dealing with the lands of the United States, the government is to be subjected to the local law of Indiana, and yet at the same time be deprived of the rights which are accorded by that law to the state, regarded as a government. To now so hold, it seems to me, is but to declare that it is within the province of the local law to strip the United States of its governmental attributes and reduce it to the condition of a mere private individual. This difficulty cannot be avoided by suggesting that in this particular case the Indiana courts have decided that the transfer of the border lots carried the beds of the lakes, and hence it must be construed that such land passed by the local law. As has been previously demonstrated, the decision of the supreme court of Indiana in this case was in effect predicated on its previous rulings in Stoner v. Rice and the Tolleston Club Cases. In those cases it was declared that the doctrine previously announced in the Portsmouth Bank Case was not overruled, but the court proceeded upon the theory that that case was inapplicable, because it held in the subsequent cases that there had been in those cases a survey of the land under water at the time the border lots were conveyed by the United States. This was based, not upon any local law, but upon the law of the United States as construed by the state court. That *construction being overthrown by the decision of this court in Gazzam v. Phillips and the many other cases in this court which have followed it, it results that by the Federal law, upon which the court based its decision, the beds of the lakes did not pass. And that this result was understood by the supreme court of Indiana is shown by the opinion on the rehearing in the Tolleston Club Case, where it was expressly declared that, if the theory of survey announced by the court was incorrect, it was its opinion that the bed of the lake did not pass, and title thereto remained in the United States. The decision now announced, therefore, holds that the question whether the beds of the lakes passed is to be determined by the local law as a matter of conveyancing. When it develops by the decision of the Indiana court that, under the local law, as a matter of conveyancing, the beds of the lakes did not pass, it is then in effect decided that the beds did pass, because it has been decided by the supreme court of Indiana that there had been a survey under the law of the United States, although the fact that there had been none conclusively results from a line of decisions of this court which are not now questioned. It comes then, as my mind sees it, to this: The beds of the lakes did not pass by the local law, and they did not pass by the Federal law correctly construed; but, although passing by neither the Federal nor the local law, they must yet be held to have passed because of a principle of law which it is impossible for me to state, because my mind does not perceive it.

[505]

190 U. S.

Pretermittig, however, this view, and considering the case as controlled by the rule of Hardin v. Jordan, it only remains to determine whether, under the principle of stare decisis, my duty is to assent to its application in the case at hand. Undoubtedly, since Hardin v. Jordan was decided, rights of property may have accrued predicated on the ruling made in that case; but it is also unquestionable that rights of property which had vested prior to that ruling under the acts of Congress, and the settled construction and practice of the government prevailing for almost a century, would be divested if that case were applied. Indeed, the case in hand is but an illustration of this fact, since patents of the United States to land once forming *part of the beds of the lakes [506] which are in controversy in this case were issued prior to the decision in Hardin v. Jordan. Two classes of rights of property then must be considered,—the one resting on the true rule existing from the foundation of the government, and the other upon the mistaken theory of Hardin v. Jordan. I do not feel at liberty to indulge in the conjecture that the rights which were brought into existence during a century are less important than those which may have arisen in the comparatively short period since the decision in Hardin v. Jordan. Putting this view aside, if only the rights of those who had actually received the patents of the United States for the beds of the lakes which had once been meandered were concerned, it might be that I should consider it my duty to accept as controlling, under the rule of stare decisis, the decision in Hardin v. Jordan, and thus deprive the plaintiffs in error, whose rights are here at issue, of their property, and this upon the assumption that the legislative department of the government would rectify the wrong which would be thus inflicted. My mind, however, cannot escape the conviction that the consequence of adhering to the doctrine of Hardin v. Jordan cannot be limited merely to the rights of those who may have in the past actually acquired from the United States title to land once forming the beds of meandered lakes. On the contrary, that doctrine strips the United States of the title to the bed of every pond or lake which was meandered during the nearly a century which preceded the decision in Hardin v. Jordan, where the lots bordering on such meandered lakes had been disposed of by the United States. This shows the inadequacy of the suggestion that the United States may, by a change of the form of conveyancing, obviate the doctrine now maintained. Whatever be the change in the rules of conveyancing whenever the bed of a meandered lake hereafter becomes fit for sale, the question must recur and call for a reiteration of the ruling now made. Under these circumstances, the line upon which I should act seems to me to have already been plainly pointed out by the court in Gazzam v. Phillips, 20 How. 372, 15

L. ed. 958. There the court, as I have said, having been called upon to consider the correctness of the rule announced by it twelve [507] years *before in Brown v. Clements, 3 How. 650, 11 L. ed. 767, and having concluded that that case had been wrongly decided, was required to determine whether it was its duty under the rule of stare decisis to perpetuate an erroneous principle or apply a correct one. In deciding to follow the latter course, the reason which controlled to the conclusion is so directly applicable to the subject-matter of this case, and was so frankly and ably stated, that I excerpt a passage from the opinion, as follows (p. 378, L. ed. p. 961):

"It is possible that some rights may be disturbed by refusing to follow the opinion expressed in that case; but we are satisfied that far less inconvenience will result from this dissent, than by adhering to a principle which we think unsound, and which, in its practical operation, will unsettle the surveys and subdivisions of fractional sections of the public land running through a period of some twenty-eight years. Anyone familiar with the vast tracts of the public domain surveyed and sold, and tracts surveyed and yet unsold, within the period mentioned, can form some idea of the extent of the disturbance and confusion that must inevitably flow from an adherence to any such principle. We cannot, therefore, adopt that decision or apply its principles in rendering the judgment of the court in this case."

Concluding that the patents of the United States to the state of Indiana for the fractional lots abutting upon Wolf lake and Lake George did not convey title to land under the water, and that the patents subsequently issued by the United States, based upon the Wolcott survey of 1875, purporting to pass the title to land once a part of the beds of the lakes were valid, I dissent.

I am authorized to say that Mr. Justice McKenna joins in this dissent.

[508]**GERTRUDE H. HARDIN* and the Cook County Canal & Dock Company, Plffs. in Err.,

v.

CHARLES B. SHEDD.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 508-524.)

Public lands—grant of land bordering on non-navigable water—title to adjoining submerged land—question of local law.

Whether the patentee of the United States to land bounded on a non-navigable lake belonging to the United States takes title to the adjoining submerged land is determined by the law of the state where the land lies.

[No. 56.]

Submitted January 13, 1902. Ordered for reargument December 22, 1902. Reargued January 12, 13, 1903. Decided May 18, 1903.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Illinois to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the Circuit Court of Cook County in favor of petitioner in a proceeding under the burnt records act of that state. Affirmed.

See same case below, 177 Ill. 123, 52 N. E. 380.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Thomas Dent submitted the cause for plaintiffs in error:

Land belonging to the United States cannot be disposed of, except by the authority of Congress.

Gibson v. Choutcau, 13 Wall. 92, 20 L. ed. 534; Irvine v. Marshall, 20 How. 558, 15 L. ed. 994.

Whenever the question in any court, state or Federal, is whether a title to land which had once been the property of the United States has passed, that question must be resolved by the laws of the United States.

Wilcox v. Jackson ex dem. McConnel, 13 Pet. 498, 516, 10 L. ed. 264, 273; Bagnell v. Broderick, 13 Pet. 436, 10 L. ed. 235; Paige v. Peters, 70 Wis. 178, 35 N. W. 328; Irvine v. Marshall, 20 How. 564, 15 L. ed. 997; Gibson v. Chouteau, 13 Wall. 92, 20 L. ed. 534; Scymour v. Sanders, 3 Dill. 440, Fed. Cas. No. 12,690; Gilmore v. Sapp, 100 Ill. 297.

The supreme court of Illinois has been in accord with this court in treating the meander of a body of water in the government surveys as having been run, not as a limitation upon boundaries, but for showing the water as a boundary, and ascertaining quantities approximately.

St. Paul & P. R. Co. v. Schurmeir, 7 Wall. 272, 19 L. ed. 74; Middleton v. Pritchard, 4 Ill. 510, 38 Am. Dec. 112; Houck v. Yates, 82 Ill. 179; Fuller v. Dauphin, 124 Ill. 542, 16 N. E. 917.

The courts of the United States will construe the grants of the general government, without reference to the rules of construction adopted by the states for their grants

Packer v. Bird, 137 U. S. 661, 34 L. ed. 819, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 210.

The presumption is in ordinary cases that a deed for a tract having water frontage conveys as far as the grantor owns.

NOTE.—As to title to land under water—see note to Goff v. Cogle (Mich.) 42 L. R. A. 161.

As to ownership of the bed of lakes and ponds—see note to Gouverneur v. National Ice Co. (N. Y.) 18 L. R. A. 695.

As to state decisions and laws as rules of decision in Federal courts—see notes to Wilson v. Perrin, 11 C. C. A. 71; Hill v. Hite, 29

C. C. A. 553; Griffin v. Overman Wheel Co. 9 C. C. A. 548; Elmendorf v. Taylor, 6 L. ed. U. S. 290; Jackson ex dem. St. John v. Chew, 6 L. ed. U. S. 583; United States ex rel. Butz v. Muscatine, 19 L. ed. U. S. 490; Clark v. Graham, 5 L. ed. U. S. 334, and Forepaugh v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. (Pa.) 5 L. R. A. 508.

Paine v. Woods, 108 Mass. 160; Trustees of Schools v. Schroll, 120 Ill. 509, 60 Am. Rep. 575, 12 N. E. 243; Bristol v. Carroll County, 95 Ill. 84; Hogg v. Berman, 41 Ohio St. 81, 52 Am. Rep. 71; Middleton v. Pritchard, 4 Ill. 510, 38 Am. Dec. 112; 3 Kent, Com. 428; Elphinstone, Interpretation of Deeds, 182, 183.

The weight of authority as to what is the common law is most decidedly with the view that was adopted by this court in Hardin v. Jordan, 140 U. S. 371, 35 L. ed. 428, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 808, 838; Mitchell v. Smale, 140 U. S. 406, 35 L. ed. 442, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 819, 840.

Beckman v. Kremer, 43 Ill. 447, 92 Am. Dec. 146; Bristol v. Carroll County, 95 Ill. 84; Bristol v. Cormican, L. R. 3 App. Cas. 641; Smith v. Rochester, 92 N. Y. 463, 44 Am. Rep. 393; Gouverneur v. National Ice Co. 134 N. Y. 355, 18 L. R. A. 695, 31 N. E. 865; Lamprey v. State, 52 Minn. 181, 18 L. R. A. 670, 53 N. W. 1139; Kirkpatrick v. Yates Ice Co. 45 Mo. App. 335; Grand Rapids Ice & Coal Co. v. South Grand Rapids Ice & Coal Co. 102 Mich. 227, 25 L. R. A. 815, 60 N. W. 681; Olson v. Huntamer, 6 S. D. 364, 61 N. W. 479; Shell v. Matteson, 81 Minn. 38, 83 N. W. 491; Kanouse v. Stockbower, 48 N. J. Eq. 42, 21 Atl. 197; State v. Portsmouth Sav. Bank, 106 Ind. 435, 7 N. E. 379.

This court is not required, in passing upon the effect of a patent for public lands, to surrender its own judgment as to what is the common law.

Yates v. Milwaukee, 10 Wall. 497, 19 L. ed. 984.

This court should not feel bound to surrender its convictions on the subject on account of a contrary subsequent decision of the state court.

Pease v. Peck, 18 How. 595, 15 L. ed. 518; Roberts v. Bolles, 101 U. S. 119, 25 L. ed. 880; Nelson v. Madison, 3 Biss. 244, Fed. Cas. No. 10,110; Morgan v. Curtenius, 20 How. 1, 15 L. ed. 823; Gelpcke v. Dubuque, 1 Wall. 175, 17 L. ed. 520.

Mr. Thomas Dent also argued the cause for plaintiffs in error on reargument.

Mr. Harry S. Mecartney submitted the cause for defendant in error:

The local law of the state in which lands patented by the United States lie governs the construction to be given to grants of lands bordering upon waters, whether navigable lake, navigable stream, or non-navigable lake or stream.

Hardin v. Jordan, 140 U. S. 371, 35 L. ed. 428, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 808, 838; Shively v. Bowlby, 152 U. S. 1, 38 L. ed. 331, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 548; St. Anthony Falls Water Power Co. v. St. Paul Water Comrs. 168 U. S. 349, 42 L. ed. 497, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 157.

Mr. Harry S. Mecartney also argued the cause for defendant in error on reargument.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a proceeding under the burnt records act of the state of Illinois, by which 190 U. S.

the defendant in error, Shedd, seeks to establish his record title to certain land adjoining and under a non-navigable lake called Wolf lake, lying partly in Illinois and partly in Indiana. The plaintiff in error, Hardin, also owns land adjoining the same lake, by succession to a title under patents from the United States, and under these patents makes claims to land now or originally under the lake, which conflict with the claim of Shedd and with the decree of the court. The other plaintiff in error is a grantee of Hardin. The decree having been affirmed by the supreme court of the state (177 Ill. 123, 52 N. E. 380; S. C. 161 Ill. 462, 33 L. R. A. 146, 44 N. E. 286), the case is brought here by writ of error. Mitchell v. Smale, 140 U. S. 406, 410, 35 L. ed. 442, 443, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 819, 840; Shively v. Bowlby, 152 U. S. 1, 9, 10, 38 L. ed. 331, 335, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 548. It seems unnecessary to go into details of the difference, as the main question here goes to the foundation of Hardin's Case, and we are against her on that. Her title and a plan of the territory in which lies the disputed land will be found set out in Hardin v. Jordan, 140 U. S. 371, 35 L. ed. 428, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 808, 838.

The claim of the plaintiffs in error to the land below the original water line depends on its having passed by the patent of the United States. The patent to Holbrook, from which they derive an important part of their title, was dated May 20, 1841, long before the swamp land act. [9 Stat. at L. 519, chap. 84.] At that time the land under the lake, as well as that surrounding it, belonged to the United States, and, if grants of the United States should be construed without regard to state laws, it may be assumed that, subject to all questions of the proper adjustment of lines, Hardin would have prevailed. When land is conveyed by the United States bounded on a non-navigable lake belonging to it, the grounds for the decision must be quite different from the considerations affecting a conveyance of land bounded on navigable water. In the latter case the land under the water does not belong to the United States, but has passed to the state by its admission to the Union. Nevertheless, it has become established almost without argument that in the former case, as in the latter, the effect of the grant on the title to adjoining submerged land will be determined by the law of the state where the land lies. In the case of land bounded on a non-navigable lake the United States assumes the position of a private owner subject to the general law of the state, so far as its conveyances are concerned. Hardin v. Jordan, 140 U. S. 371, 35 L. ed. 428, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 808, 838; Shively v. Bowlby, 152 U. S. 1, 45, 38 L. ed. 331, 347, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 548; Grand Rapids & I. R. Co. v. Butler, 159 U. S. 87, 90, 93, 40 L. ed. 85-87, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 991; St. Anthony Falls Water Power Co. v. St. Paul Water Comrs. 168 U. S. 349, 363, 42 L. ed. 497, 502, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 157. Such cases are not affected by Rev. Stat. §§ 2476, 5251, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 1567, 3522. When land under navigable water passes to the riparian proprietor, along with the grant of the shore by the United States, it does not pass by force of the grant alone, because the United States does not own it, but it passes by force of the declaration of the state which does own it that it is attached to the shore. The rule as to conveyances bounded on non-navigable lakes does not mean that the land under such water also passed to the state on its admission or otherwise, apart from the swamp land act, but is simply a convenient, possibly the most convenient, way of determining the effect of a grant. We are particular in calling attention to this difference, because we fear that there has been some misapprehension with regard to the point.

[520] The law of Illinois has been settled since Hardin v. Jordan, 140 U. S. 371, 35 L. ed. 428, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 808, 838, and it now is clear, by the decision in this case and later, that conveyances of the upland do not carry adjoining land below the water line. Fuller v. Shedd, 161 Ill. 462, 33 L. R. A. 146, 44 N. E. 286; Hardin v. Shedd, 177 Ill. 123, 52 N. E. 380; Hammond v. Shepard, 186 Ill. 235, 57 N. E. 867. *Following these decisions, we must hold that the title set up by the plaintiffs in error fails. Even accepting the principles of the common law, it may be a question whether one consideration in this case was not overlooked in Hardin v. Jordan. It was noted that the conveyance was by reference to the official plat. The plat of the Illinois portion, unlike that of the part in Indiana, described the lake as a "navigable lake." It is true that this was a mistake, but it might be urged that the description must be taken to have the same effect as if it were true when we are determining the effect of a conveyance adopting it. It would seem that if a conveyance of land bounded by navigable water would not pass land below the water line, a conveyance purporting to bound the land by navigable water does not purport to pass land below the water line. The common law as understood by this court and the local law of Illinois with regard to grants bounded by navigable water are the same. Shively v. Bowlby, 152 U. S. 1, 43, 47, 51, 38 L. ed. 331, 347, 348, 350, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 548; Seaman v. Smith, 24 Ill. 521.

Of course, it would result from the Illinois ruling that the survey of the submerged land in 1874, referred to in Hardin v. Jordan, and the conveyances in pursuance of it, may have been good on the Illinois side of the state line, unless the state had got a title before that date under the swamp land act. Whether it did so or not, it is unnecessary to consider in this case.

The land which Shedd gets under the decree of the state court he gets, not in derogation of the foregoing principles, but on findings of fact as to what land was above water at the date of the patents from the United States (161 Ill. 469, 470, 33 L. R. A. 149, 154, 44 N. E. 289), and as to accretions to that land by the gradual drying up of the water at a later date. 161 Ill. 473, 494, 33 L. R. A. 155, 161, 44 N. E. 289, 297. We perceive no need for considering the decree in detail.

Decree affirmed.

Mr. Justice White, with whom concurs Mr. Justice McKenna, dissenting:

This case, in some aspects, involves contentions supposed to have been finally decided by this court in Hardin v. Jordan. 140 U. S. 371, 35 L. ed. 428, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 808, 838, *and Mitchell v. Smale, 140 U. S. [521] 406, 35 L. ed. 442, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 819, 840. In those cases there was a controversy between persons holding the patents of the United States to fractional lots abutting on the meander line of Wolf lake in Illinois and those holding the patents of the United States subsequently issued to the bed of the lake. The latter patents were based upon a survey made of the bed, approved after contest in the Land Department. It was held in the cases referred to that the rights of the claimants to the bed of the lake were to be determined by the local law of Illinois. Ascertaining what the local law was, it was decided that the abutting lot owners took to the center of the lake, and hence the subsequent patents to the bed were void.

The controversy presented by this record originated from conflicting claims made in two suits (subsequently consolidated) to the bed of Wolf lake, between Mrs. Hardin (who was the plaintiff in Hardin v. Jordan) and one of her grantees, as owners of the border lots, Shedd (grantee of Mitchell, the plaintiff in Mitchell v. Smale), also as an owner of border lots, and various claimants under patents of the United States based upon the survey of the bed of the lake. Although the judgment below was against the second patentees, they have not prosecuted error. The supreme court of Illinois declined to apply the rule laid down by this court because it held that this court had, in Hardin v. Jordan and Mitchell v. Smale, misconceived the state law. By the local law it was held that the lot owners, by the conveyance to them of lots abutting on the meander line, took no title whatever to the bed of the lake. It was, however, decided that the effect of the conveyance by the United States to private persons of the border lots was to transfer the title of the bed of the lake to the state of Illinois. The doctrine of the supreme court of Illinois on the subject is not only shown in the opinion of that court in this case (Fuller v. Shedd, 161 Ill. 462, 33 L. R. A. 146, 44 N. E. 286), but also in the subsequent case of Hammond v. Shepard, 186 Ill. 235, 57 N. E. 867. In the first case (Fuller v. Shedd), after expressly deciding that the state of Illinois did not acquire title to the bed of the lake under the swamp land act, the court declined to hold that "the grant to the riparian owner conveys the bed of a non-navigable [meander] lake, and makes its waters mere private waters:" *and, further, said that, "so long as such [522] meander lakes exist, over their waters and bed, when covered with water, the state exercises control, and holds the same in trust for all the people who alike have benefit thereof, in fishing, boating, and the like." In the second case (Hammond v. Shepard) the supreme court of Illinois said (p. 241, N. E. p. 867):

"The law of this state, as repeatedly announced, is that shore owners on meandered lakes, whether navigable or non-navigable, take title only to the water's edge, the bed of the lake being in the state.

"No shore owner can take away from the state its title to the former bed of the lake unless he can establish by proof that the dry land was formed by the water receding from his shore line."

Under the doctrine thus stated, having treated the bed of the lake as the property of the state, the court determined the rights of the parties by reference to principles of accretion which it deemed applicable to the property in the bed of the lake owned by the state. Now, in Kean v. Calumet Canal & Improv. Co., quite recently decided by this court [190 U. S. 452, ante, 1134, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 651], the doctrine announced in Hardin v. Jordan was re-examined, and it was in effect held that that case, whilst recognizing that the ownership of the beds of non-navigable lakes on the public domain was in the United States, simply decided that when the United States sold lots bordering on such a lake the question whether or not the bed of the lake passed by the grant of the border lots was to be determined by the principles of conveyancing in force under the local law of the state where the lake was situated. Now, as the settled rule in Illinois is that, under the principles of conveyancing prevailing in that state, no title to the bed of a lake passes to the patentees of the United States by the sale of border lots, I do not perceive how the United States has been divested of its title to the bed of Wolf lake. To say that, although, on the principles of conveyancing under the local law, the bed did not pass, nevertheless, because the United States sold the border lots, the state of Illinois thereby became the [523] owner of the bed of the lake, is, *as I understand it, to declare that it is in the power of the state of Illinois to appropriate the property of the United States.

The suggestion that the considerations just stated are immaterial, because, even although by the local law the United States did not convey to the patentees of the border lots title to the bed of the lake, it may have parted with its title to the bed by the swamp land act, involves a departure from the settled construction of the swamp land act to which attention was called in the dissent in Kean v. Calumet Canal & Improv. Co. Besides the disturbance of vested rights to which it seems to me such a suggestion must give rise, it must be remembered that it is directly in conflict with the opinion of the supreme court of Illinois in this very case, where it was expressly declared that the state did not take title to the bed of Wolf lake under the swamp land act, because as a matter of fact the converse had been explicitly decided by the Secretary of the Interior in a contest before the Land Department to which the state of Illinois was a party. The result of the suggestion as to the swamp land act then, as I see it, is to cause the state of Illinois to become the owner of the bed of the lake under the swamp land act, in derogation of the act of Congress, contrary to the rulings of this court and of the supreme court of the state, and in disregard of the express findings of fact made by the Secretary of the Interior when he approved the second survey, and also when he rendered the decision on the contest to which the state of Illinois was a party.

I fail to perceive if, as a matter of conveyancing under the local law, the title to the bed of the lake did not pass with the sale of the border lots, how the United States has lost its title. If it be conceded that the view of the local law, announced by this court in Hardin v. Jordan, was a mistaken one, and that the local law must be taken to be what the lower court held it to be in this case, then it seems to me the only foundation upon which the title of the United States to the bed of the lake can be disputed has disappeared, since, in my opinion, the theory of accretion which the court below applied cannot be *sustained [524] either by reason or authority. I content myself with merely stating this view, which involves the merits, and do not elaborate, because, in my opinion, if it be—as the court now decides—that the question whether the title of the United States to the bed of Wolf lake passed to the state of Illinois is to be determined solely by the local law of Illinois, as construed by the courts of that state, I do not perceive how a Federal question arises on this record, since I find it impossible to think that there can be a Federal question depending exclusively for its solution upon non-Federal or state law.

I am authorized to say that Mr. Justice McKenna concurs in this dissent.

REPUBLIC OF COLOMBIA, Appt.,
v.

CAUCA COMPANY and Colombian Construction & Improvement Company.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 524-532.)

Appeal—from circuit court of appeals—suit by foreign state—arbitration—majority award—elements of award—indemnity for railway construction.

1. An appeal lies to the Supreme Court of the NOTE.—As to when equity will set aside an award—see notes to Burchell v. Marsh, 15 L. ed. 96; District of Columbia v. Bailey, 43 L. ed. 118; Hartford F. Ins. Co. v. Bonner Mercantile Co. (C. C. D. Mont.) 11 L. R. A. 623, and Nolan v. Colorado Cent. Consolidated Mtn. Co. 12 C. A. 592.

United States from a decree of a circuit court of appeals in a controversy between a foreign state and citizens of one of the United States, since such decree is not made final by the provision of the act of March 3, 1891, chap. 517, § 6 (26 Stat. at L. 826, 828, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 550), declaring decrees of such court to be final "in all cases where the jurisdiction is dependent entirely upon the opposite parties to the suit or controversy being aliens and citizens of the United States, or citizens of different states."

2. An award signed by two of the three members of a commission appointed to determine the amount of the indemnity to be paid by the Republic of Colombia to the assignee of a railroad concession in exchange for the surrender of the concession and railroad cannot be defeated by that government because its commissioner resigned after the discussions were closed, where the commission had, at the outset, resolved, under the power given to it by the submission agreement to determine the procedure to be followed, that a majority vote should govern,—especially where possession of the railroad was surrendered to the government pursuant to the terms of the submission.
3. The salaries and traveling expenses of executive officers of a railway construction company devoting itself solely to the business of building a railroad in the Republic of Colombia, and the office expenses of its New York office, are elements of the indemnity which that Republic agreed, in exchange for the surrender of the concession and the railroad, to pay to the assignee of such concession for the works and labors (las obras y trabajos) executed by it and its expenditures on the works and labors executed by it in the construction of such railroad.
4. Cash paid by a railway construction company for the purchase of a railway concession granted by the Republic of Colombia, and sums voted by that company to its officers for services in securing an agreement to submit to arbitration the question of the amount of the indemnity to be paid by such Republic to the assignee of the concession in exchange for the latter's surrender of the concession and railroad, for the works and labors (las obras y trabajos) executed by it, and expenditures on works and labors executed by it in the construction of the railroad, are not properly allowed as elements of such indemnity.

[No. 259.]

Argued April 23, 24, 1903. Decided May 18, 1903.

APPEAL from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the Circuit Court for the District of West Virginia confirming in part an award under a submission entered into between the Republic of Colombia and the Cauca Company. Reversed and remanded to the Circuit Court, with directions to confirm the award in part.

See same case below, 51 C. C. A. 604, 113 Fed. 1020.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. William G. Johnson argued the cause and filed a brief for appellant: "Aliens" and "foreign states" are not identical.

Story, Const. §§ 1699, 1700.

Jurisdiction in The Sapphire, 11 Wall. 164, 20 L. ed. 127, rested upon the character of the party as a "foreign state."

The term "foreign state" is synonymous with "foreign nation."

Cherokee Nation v. Georgia, 5 Pet. 15, 5 L. ed. 30.

In Stone v. South Carolina, 117 U. S. 430, 29 L. ed. 962, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 799, this court pointed out the obvious distinction between a state and a citizen of a state.

A voluntary submission to arbitration is a contract.

District of Columbia v. Bailey, 171 U. S. 161, 43 L. ed. 118, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 868.

The decision of the arbitrators, that a matter does come within the terms of the submission, cannot be conclusive of the fact. If it could, all matters would be included which they pleased to consider to be so, however at variance with the terms of the submission and contrary to the intent of the parties to it.

Sawyer v. Freeman, 35 Me. 546.

Preliminary negotiations, bases of agreement, discussions, claims and counterclaims of the parties, as to the matters to which the proposed submission should extend, are merged, superseded, abrogated, and utterly annulled by the ultimate written agreement which the parties signed.

Van Ness v. Washington, 4 Pet. 232, 7 L. ed. 842; Emerson v. Slater, 22 How. 28, 16 L. ed. 360; Oelricks v. Ford, 23 How. 49, 16 L. ed. 534; The Delaware, 14 Wall. 579, 20 L. ed. 779; Bast v. First Nat. Bank, 101 U. S. 93, 25 L. ed. 794; Ruggles v. Illinois, 108 U. S. 526, 27 L. ed. 812, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 832; Palmer v. Green, 6 Conn. 14; De Long v. Stanton, 9 Johns. 38; Efner v. Shaw, 2 Wend. 567; Billington v. Sprague, 22 Me. 34; Loring v. Alden, 3 Met. 576; District of Columbia v. Bailey, 171 U. S. 161, 43 L. ed. 118, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 868.

Defendants cannot be permitted to use, for their own benefit, evidence which they did not themselves offer for any purpose and which the complainant has no right to use in its own behalf.

Marine Ins. Co. v. Hodgson, 6 Cranch, 206, 3 L. ed. 200; Tappan v. Beardsley, 10 Wall. 427, 19 L. ed. 974.

At common law, an arbitrator cannot administer an oath.

Morse, Arbitration & Award, 131, 132, 133; Russell, Power & Duty of Arbitrator, 5th ed. § 179; Tobey v. Bristol County, 3 Story, 800, Fed. Cas. No. 14,065; People v. Townsend, 5 How. Pr. 315; Regina v. Hallett, 20 L. J. M. C. N. S. 197; Wellington v. Mackintosh, 2 Atk. 569; Street v. Rigby, 6 Ves. Jr. 815.

Statements of witnesses in a common-law arbitration are not admissible in evidence in judicial proceedings.

Jessup v. Cook, 6 N. J. L. 434.

The fact that the arbitrators, or some of them, or some one or other of the parties, or some persons appearing before the arbitrators, might have supposed that there was uncertainty or ambiguity in the agreement, does not constitute an ambiguity.

1 Greenl. Ev. 15th ed. § 298.

If the arbitrators act in excess of their powers, if they consider and make their award as to matters not submitted, their award is void.

Leslie v. Leslie, 50 N. J. Eq. 107, 24 Atl. 319, Affirmed in 52 N. J. Eq. 332, 31 Atl. 724; Cook v. Carpenter, 34 Vt. 126, 80 Am. Dec. 670; Adams v. Adams, 8 N. H. 91; Gilmore v. Hubbard, 12 Cush. 221; Sawyer v. Freeman, 35 Me. 546; Wyman v. Hammond, 55 Me. 537; Swann v. Deem, 4 W. Va. 369; Dunlap v. Campbell, 5 W. Va. 197; Gibson v. Powell, 5 Smedes & M. 726; Glade v. Schmidt, 20 Ill. App. 160; Carmack v. Grant, 5 Litt. (Ky.) 33; Lynch v. Nugent, 80 Iowa, 431, 46 N. W. 61; White v. Arthur, 59 Cal. 33; Reynolds v. Reynolds, 15 Ala. 398; Butler v. New York, 7 Hill, 330; Bullock v. Bergman, 46 Md. 277; McCormick v. Gray, 13 How. 35, 14 L. ed. 36; DeGroot v. United States, 5 Wall. 419, 18 L. ed. 700.

Upon the resignation of one arbitrator the others were not competent to make an award before the vacancy had been filled.

Morse, Arbitration & Award, p. 151; Brower v. Kingsley, 1 Johns. Cas. 334; Harris v. Norton, 7 Wend. 534; Russell, Arbitration & Award, p. 209; Re Beck, 1 C. B. N. S. 695; Little v. Newton, 2 Mann. & G. 351; Lord v. Lord, 5 El. & Bl. 404; Hoff v. Taylor, 5 N. J. L. 829; Moore v. Ewing, 1 N. J. L. 144, 1 Am. Dec. 195.

Even if the arbitrators' work had been completed and there only remained the formal rendition of their decision in the form of an award at the time of Pena's resignation, it would not remove the objection to the validity of the award.

Moore v. Ewing, 1 N. J. L. 144, 1 Am. Dec. 195.

Messrs. John W. Beaumont and John K. Cowen argued the cause, and, with Mr. Edward H. Murphy and Messrs. Cowen, Cross, & Bond, filed a brief for appellees:

Where matter of a purely private nature has been submitted to arbitration, it is essential to the validity of the award that it must be concurred in by all of the arbitrators; unless the intention of the parties appears to the contrary.

Hobson v. M'Arthur, 16 Pet. 182, 10 L. ed. 930.

But in matters of public concern a different rule seems to prevail; there the voice of the majority shall govern.

Green v. Miller, 6 Johns. 39, 5 Am. Dec. 184; Eames v. Eames, 41 N. H. 177; People ex rel. Hawes v. Walker, 23 Barb. 304; Grindley v. Barker, 1 Bos. & P. 236, Co. Litt. 181a; King v. Beeston, 3 T. R. 592; McCoy v. Curtice, 9 Wend. 17, 24 Am. Dec. 113; Ex parte Rogers, 7 Cow. 526; People ex rel. Washington v. Nichols, 52 N. Y. 478, 11 Am. Rep. 734; Cooley v. O'Connor, 79 U. S. 391, 20 L. ed. 446; Patterson v. Leavitt, 4 Conn. 50, 10 Am. Dec. 98; Young v. Buckingham, 5 Ohio, 485; First Nat. Bank v. Mt. Tabor, 52 Vt. 87, 36 Am. Rep. 734; Soens v. Racine, 10 Wis. 271; Com. ex rel.

190 U. S.

Hall v. Canal Comrs. 9 Watts, 466; Williams v. Lunenburg School District No. 1, 21 Pick. 75, 32 Am. Dec. 243.

If it can be inferred from the agreement of submission that the parties intended the vote of a majority to govern, an award made by them will be binding, even in the case of a purely private matter.

Hobson v. M'Arthur, 16 Pet. 182, 10 L. ed. 930.

In the case at bar, that such was the intention of the parties is clearly inferable from the personnel of the commission.

Ibid.; Wheeling Gas Co. v. Wheeling, 8 W. Va. 320.

A resignation to be effective must be accepted.

People ex rel. McCune v. Board of Police, 26 Barb. 487; Edwards v. United States, 103 U. S. 471, 26 L. ed. 314; Thompson v. United States, 103 U. S. 480, 26 L. ed. 521.

Pena's withdrawal did not deprive the majority of its power to award, because it took place at a time when his membership in the commission had ceased to be material.

Carpenter v. Wood, 1 Met. 409; Dodge v. Brennan, 59 N. H. 138; Crofoot v. Allen, 2 Wend. 494; Dickerson v. Rorke, 30 Pa. 390; King v. Grey, 31 Tex. 22; Doyle v. Patterson, 84 Va. 800, 6 S. E. 138; Hobson v. M'Arthur, 16 Pet. 182, 10 L. ed. 930; Savannah, F. & W. R. Co. v. Decker, 94 Ga. 149, 21 S. E. 372; Scudder v. Johnson, 5 Mo. 551; Stiringer v. Toy, 33 W. Va. 86, 10 S. E. 26; Maynard v. Frederick, 7 Cush. 251; Witz v. Tregallas, 82 Md. 351, 33 Atl. 718; Ex parte Rogers, 7 Cow. 526.

Even in a court of law the rule of unanimity has been disregarded where rights had vested under a contract of arbitration.

Phirpen v. Stickney, 3 Met. 384.

Unless there is a reservation made in the submission, the parties are presumed to agree that everything both as to law and fact, which is necessary to the ultimate decision, is included in the authority of the referees.

Kleine v. Catara, 2 Gall. 69, Fed. Cas. No. 7,869.

In deciding whether or not the commission erred in its interpretation of the submission the court must consider the evidence laid before that tribunal.

Burchell v. Marsh, 17 How. 344, 15 L. ed. 96.

The appellant is estopped from asserting that the award was invalid.

Morse, Arbitration & Award, pp. 171, 264; 2 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 727 (2d ed.)

Messrs. E. J. D. Cross, John W. Beaumont and Edward H. Murphy, and Messrs. Cowen, Cross & Bond, filed a brief in support of motion to dismiss:

An appeal does not lie to the Supreme Court from a decree of the circuit court of appeals, in a case in which the jurisdiction of the circuit court is dependent entirely upon the opposite parties to the controversy being aliens and citizens of the United States.

American Constr. Co. v. Jacksonville, T. & K. W. R. Co. 148 U. S. 372, 47 L. ed. 486, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 758.

A foreign independent government, as a legal entity, is a person within the meaning of the provision of N. Y. Code Civ. Proc. § 3268, providing that a defendant in an action brought by "a person residing without the state" may require security for costs.

Honduras v. Soto, 112 N. Y. 310, 2 L. R. A. 642, 19 N. E. 845.

The term "alien" as used in the judiciary act of 1789 has been held to apply to a personal foreign sovereign.

King of Spain v. Oliver, 2 Wash. C. C. 429, Fed. Cas. No. 7,814.

A foreign government is exempt from suits; and this exemption is based on its sovereign character. However, it may bring suit in the courts of another country. But in doing so it divests itself of its sovereign character and privileges as regards all matters connected with or growing out of that particular suit. In other words, it has descended from its high plane of sovereignty to the level of an ordinary private litigant, and thereafter in reference to the suit it has no greater rights, exemptions, or privileges than has an ordinary litigant.

Rhode Island v. Massachusetts, 12 Pet. 657, 9 L. ed. 1233.

A foreign sovereign cannot bring suit for an infringement of his prerogative rights. His right of suit is confined to those cases in which it is sought to enforce his private rights.

1 Dan. Ch. Pl. & Pr. chap. I., § 2, p. 17; Austria v. Day, 3 DeG. F. & J. 217.

The word "state" has been held by this court to comprehend only a state of the Union.

Texas v. White, 7 Wall. 700, 19 L. ed. 227; Hepburn v. Ellzey, 2 Cranch, 445, 2 L. ed. 332.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an appeal by the Republic of Colombia from a decree of the circuit court of appeals, affirming a decree of the circuit court upon a bill brought by the Republic and a cross bill by the defendant, the Cauca Company. The bill is a bill to set aside an award under a submission entered into by the above-mentioned parties. The cross bill is to establish the award as valid, notwithstanding the withdrawal of the representative named by the plaintiff, and prays specific performance. The decree confirms the award after rejecting certain items. Of course it does not attempt to order specific performance.

Before going further with the statement of facts we must dispose of an objection to the jurisdiction of this court to entertain this appeal. As a foreign government has seen fit to submit its case to the courts of the country with whose citizens its controversy exists, it would be unfortunate if, through any mistake, it was prevented from carrying questions of law to the court of last resort. We are of opinion that it had the right to appeal. The circuit court had jurisdiction under the Constitution, art. 3, § 2, and the act of August 13, 1888, chap. 866, 1162

§ 1 (25 Stat. at L. 434), as the suit is "a controversy between citizens of a state and foreign states, citizens, or subjects," within the words and meaning of the act. The Sapphire, 11 Wall. 164, 167, sub nom. The Sapphire v. Napoleon III., 20 L. ed. 127, 130. The right to appeal from the decree of the circuit court of appeals is given by the act of March 3, 1891, *chap. 517, § 6 (26 Stat. [526] at L. 826, 828, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 550), "in all cases not hereinbefore, in this section, made final." The only words of the section relied upon as making the decree of the circuit court of appeals final are those which declare it so "in all cases in which the jurisdiction is dependent entirely upon the opposite parties to the suit or controversy being aliens and citizens of the United States or citizens of different states." We see no reason to doubt that Congress was as well aware of the distinction between foreign states and foreign citizens when it passed the act of 1891 as when it passed the act of 1888, and that when it spoke of aliens it meant foreign citizens alone. We are confident that it did not dream of excluding sovereign powers that choose to sue here from the right to an appeal. The word "aliens" could be given that effect only by straining it beyond its natural meaning and away from the indications of the context. As the decree of the circuit court of appeals is not made final by § 6, an appeal lies to this court.

Whether technically proved or not, we assume the commission making the award to have found the facts hereafter stated, and we think that they were fully warranted in doing so. The subject-matter of the award was a railroad intended to run from Buenaventura to the Pacific, via Cali, to the city of Manizales, and partly built. In 1890 one Cherry received a concession to build and operate this road, with land grants and various guaranties from the government, and with the right to transfer the concession, but all subject to the condition of the work being done in four years. Thereupon the Cauca Company was incorporated in West Virginia for the purpose, among other things, of building and operating the road, and Cherry transferred his concession to it, stipulating that he should be employed to do the work, receive all the company's stock and bonds and various benefits of the concession. On the same day the Colombian Construction & Improvement Company also was incorporated, for many purposes, including that of building the road, and Cherry forthwith assigned to it his contract with the Cauca Company, stipulating that he should receive in return a large amount of full-paid stock of the company and $135,000 in cash. Cherry was to be employed as chief constructor *of the road, and the com-[527] pany was to take his place under the Cauca Company's contract.

The time for building the road went by, the road was not built, and the government claimed a forfeiture. On the other hand, the Cauca Company set up that the failure was due to the fault of the government, and other justifications, and the matter became a subject of diplomatic discussion between this country and Colombia. With the merits of this controversy we have nothing to do. As a result, a submission to a special commission, as it was termed, was agreed upon and signed. The essential features of the agreement were that the company by the second article surrendered the railroad, and that Colombia agreed to pay a just indemnity, the scope of which will be considered later, and which was to be determined by the commission. The commission consisted of three,—one appointed on behalf of Colombia, one on behalf of the company and the third by agreement between the Secretary of State of this country and the Colombian Minister at Washington. The commission, spoken of in the agreement in the singular, was to “determine the procedure to be followed in the exercise of the power conferred upon it, both as to its own acts and as to the proceedings of the parties.” In pursuance of this power, it resolved that all decisions should be by majority vote. Thereafter the case was tried, and several items were allowed to the company which it was contended by the representatives of Colombia were not within the scope of the submission. At the end of the trial, when hardly anything remained to be done except to sign the award, the questions remaining open concerning only matters of interest which have been disallowed, the Colombian commissioner announced his resignation to the commission.

The agreement gave Colombia thirty days to appoint a new member, and on its failure the Secretary of State for the United States and the Colombian Minister were to appoint him. But the commission was allowed only one hundred and fifty days “from its installation,” which might be extended sixty days more for justifiable grounds. It had sat two hundred and three days when the resignation was announced. Manifestly it was possible, if not certain, that its only way of saving [528] the proceedings “from coming to naught was to ignore the communication and to proceed to the award. This it did. Colombia by its bill and argument now lays hold of the resignation of its commissioner as a ground for declaring the award void.

Colombia thus is put in the position of seeking to defeat the award after it has received the railroad in controversy and while it is undisputed that an appreciable part of the consideration awarded ought to be paid to the company under the terms of the submission. It is fair to add that the bill offers to pay the undisputed sum, but not to rescind the submission and return the railroad. We shall spend little argument upon this part of the case. Of course, it was not expected that a commission made up as this was would be unanimous. The commission was dealt with as a unit, as a kind of court, in the submission. It was constituted after, if not as the result of, diplomatic discussion in pursuance of a public statute of Colombia. It was to decide between a sovereign state and a railroad, declared by a law of Colombia to be a work of public utility. In short, it was dealing with matters of public concern. It had itself resolved, under the powers given to it in the agreement, that a majority vote should govern. Obviously that was the only possible way, as each party appointed a representative of its side. We are satisfied that an award by a majority was sufficient and effective. We are satisfied, further, that whatever might be the technical rule for three arbitrators dealing with a private dispute, neither party could defeat the operation of the submission, after receiving a large amount of property under it, by withdrawing or adopting the withdrawal of its nominee when the discussions were closed. See Cooley v. O'Connor, 12 Wall. 391, 398, 20 L. ed. 446, 448; Kingston v. Kincaid, 1 Wash. C. C. 448, Fed. Cas. No. 7,821; Ex parte Rogers, 7 Cow. 526; Carpenter v. Wood, 1 Met. 409; Maynard v. Frederick, 7 Cush. 247; Kunkle v. Kunkle, 1 Dall. 364, 1 L. ed. 178; Cumberland v. North Yarmouth, 4 Me. 459, 468; Grindley v. Barker, 1 Bos. & P. 229, 236; Dalling v. Matchett, Willes Rep. 215, 217. In private matters the courts are open if arbitration fails, but in this case the alternative was a resort to diplomatic demands.

We pass now to the main and serious question of the case, *which is, whether the [529] scope of the submission was exceeded by any of the items of the award. The submission was in Spanish only, and there is a dispute about the translation of the most important words. In exchange for the surrender of the concession and the railroad with all of its fixed plant, rolling stock, obras, etc., Colombia is to pay to the company “a just indemnity por las obras y trabajos (literally, the works and labors) which the company may have executed during the time in which the undertaking has been in its charge, and for the rolling stock,” etc. So, in the following article: “The government of Colombia and the company recognize in advance as just and sole indemnity a sum which shall equal that which the company shall prove that it has expended en los trabajos y obras ejecutados por ella en la construccion de la expresada via ferrea y en los materiales rodantes, herramientas, etc., etc., introducidos con destino á la misma via.”

It is argued for Colombia that the untranslated words limit the indemnity to the immediate cost on the ground of the works and labors executed there. On the other side, it is argued, especially in view of the previous dealings, that indemnity for the total cost of the enterprise was intended. Our opinion falls between these two extremes. The company, to be sure, was claiming the larger amount, but Colombia had asserted a forfeiture. The submission was a compromise, and presumably the company meant the most and Colombia the least which the words used were capable of meaning. The only fair way is to take the language in its natural sense, not straining it either way. In article 5 it is contemplated.

as the means of reaching the indemnity mentioned, that the commission shall appraise obras, trabajos, y materiales aforesaid; that it shall examine the books and accounts of the Cauca Company in New York; and that it shall inspect on the ground los obras y trabajos of the railroad and the rolling stock. In article 10 it is said that Colombia calculates approximately that the Cauca Company has disbursed in the obra of the railroad a sum of $200,000 (somewhat less than the cost on the ground as agreed before the commission), while the company considers that sum as much below the just price of the obras y trabajos por ella ejecutados. *And the sum named is paid on account in advance for the purpose of obtaining the immediate delivery of the railway. Whether the preliminary negotiations be considered or not, it seems to us to carry out the import of the words used if we limit the indemnity to expenditures which fairly could be found to have contributed in a direct way to the result on the surface of the earth, but extend it to such expenditures, even when they took place at a distance. If the latter were not included, there was no sufficient reason for a commission meeting in New York.

It is for us to determine the scope of the commission, whatever may have been its own finding with regard to its powers. But when its powers are established we are not called upon to revise any finding that could have been made without going beyond the line which we lay down. On this footing, subject to a further point to be mentioned, the salaries of executive officers of the Colombian Construction & Improvement Company ($108,181.42), the traveling expenses of these officers ($29,386.30), and the office expenses of the New York office ($21,727.58), properly were allowed, so far as appears. Although the facts were gone into with superfluous detail, it cannot be said, as matter of law, that those items might not have been necessary in order to lay the tracks upon the ground. The company devoted itself wholly to the business of building the road. The initial expense naturally would be the greatest, and the company's contention was that but for Colombia the work would have been done.

It is said that the last-named company was not a party to the submission, which is true. But, as we have said, it reasonably might have been found by the commission that it was assignee of the contract between Cherry and Cauca Company, by which Cherry was to build the road and to receive the Cauca Company's stock and bonds. Therefore the work done by the construction company had to be paid for by the Cauca Company, and the result of its work was the railroad which the company surrendered. Under such circumstances we can listen to no hair splitting as to whether work done upon the road by the construction company can be called the Cauca Company's obras y trabajos. We certainly should not disturb

[531] a *finding by the commission that the cost of building, by whomsoever incurred, was part of the Cauca Company's work.

1164

On the other hand, we cannot uphold the award of $135,000, for cash paid for purchase of the concession. If, as would seem, this was the sum which the construction company was to pay Cherry for the assignment of the Cauca Company contract, it requires a layman's superiority to form an interest of substance to connect this with the Cauca Company at all. But, assuming that connection established, the expense is too remote from cost of construction to be allowed under the words used in this submission. It was contemplated by the concession that it might come to the hands of a corporation having its headquarters elsewhere, and the expenses which we have allowed might have been found necessary, if a Virginia or New York corporation were to begin the construction of this road in Colombia. But the purchase of the right to do the job was an accident. The cost of it would not have been incurred, so far as appears, if the concession had been made to the company direct. Therefore it is not to be paid for unless we adopt the view that the company is to be made whole for all that it paid in connection with the enterprise, rather than for what it paid to get the tracks laid, assuming that it had the right to lay them. As we have said, we adopt the latter view. We think it unlikely and not within the clear meaning of the words that the government undertook to pay an additional sum because its own concession had changed hands.

It is much more obvious that the submission did not warrant charging Colombia with an extra sum of $29,200, voted by the construction company to its officers for services in securing the agreement of submission. We have indicated our reasons sufficiently above.

The award was for a single sum, which the report of the proceedings of the commission shows to have been made up of items, some of which we have considered. These items were discussed by the courts below, seemingly at the instance of Colombia, and without objection on the part of the company, and some of them were disallowed without appeal. If they are open to consideration they show that the award was made up of several *items, some of which [532] may be disallowed without affecting the rest. If they should not be considered, the only course would seem to be to presume that the commission followed its authority, and to sustain the award for the whole original amount. Certainly they could not be given a partial consideration and be taken account of so far as to invalidate the award, and yet be denied examination on the further question whether they could not be stricken out without affecting the residue of the award.

In addition to the oral arguments, we have considered every detail of the elaborate briefs submitted and the record, but have not thought it necessary to mention many of those details, or to protract our judgment to an equal length. The amount allowed by the circuit court of appeals is reduced as stated by $164,200, but in our opinion the following items must stand:

Agreed cost of work on the ground and rolling stock ..	$233,909 14
Salaries of executive officers..	108,181 42
Traveling expenses of officers..	29,385 88
Expenses and incidentals New York office .....	21,727 58
	<hr/>
	$393,204 02
Deduct paid on account..	200,000 00
	<hr/>
Amount of award .....	193,204 02

Decree reversed, and cause remanded to the Circuit Court with directions to enter a decree confirming the award for and up to the sum of $193,204.02.

[533] *RANDOLPH & RANDOLPH, Appts.,
v.

J. W. SCRUGGS, Trustee in Bankruptcy of the Langstaff Hardware Company.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 533-540.)

Bankruptcy—preferred claims—charge for preparing general assignment—services rendered assignee.

1. A general deed of assignment is so far avoided by an adjudication in bankruptcy against the assignor on a petition filed within four months after the making of the assignment as to defeat the right of any claim

NOTE.—On the effect of the bankruptcy act on state laws—see notes to State ex rel. Strohl v. King County Super. Ct. (Wash.) 45 L. R. A. 177; Garner v. Second Nat. Bank, 16 C. C. A. 96; Carling v. Seymour Lumber Co. 51 C. C. A. 11, and Sturgis v. Crowninshield, 4 L. ed. U. S. 529.

Allowances in bankruptcy proceedings to bankrupt's assignee for creditors.

Cases under the bankrupt act of 1867.

Where a Federal court set aside a deed of assignment for creditors made within six months before proceedings in bankruptcy it was held that an allowance of expenses and charges of the assignee for creditors should not be made where it could not be guarded so as to prevent duplicate charges, and no allowance should be made to include any reservation for the expense of a future settlement in the state court. Burkholder v. Stump, 8 Phila. 172, Fed. Cas. No. 2,165.

This case was approved in Platt v. Archer, 13 Blatchf. 351, Fed. Cas. No. 11,214, where the question was as to a receiver's fees as against an assignee in bankruptcy.

And compensation for services of an assignee for creditors was refused where an assignment was avoided. Re Stubbs, 4 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 376, Fed. Cas. No. 13,557; Re Kurth, 17 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 573, Fed. Cas. No. 7,948.

And an allowance for attorneys' fees was refused. Re Cohn, 6 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 379, Fed. Cas. No. 2,966.

An assignee for creditors should be allowed against the bankrupt's estate to the preference given by such deed.
190 U. S. U. S., Book 47.

2. A charge for the preparation of a general deed of assignment which is avoided by an adjudication in bankruptcy against the assignor on a petition filed within four months after the making of the assignment may be proved as an unsecured claim against the bankrupt's estate.
3. An assignee in a general deed of assignment which has been avoided by an adjudication in bankruptcy against his assignor on a petition filed within four months after the making of the assignment has a lien on the bankrupt's estate for the sums paid by him for such services rendered to him prior to such adjudication as were beneficial to the estate.
4. Claims for services rendered to the assignee in a general deed of assignment prior to an adjudication in bankruptcy against the assignor on a petition filed within four months after the making of the assignment are preferred claims against the bankrupt's estate to the same extent as if the assignee had paid the claims.
5. A claim for legal services rendered to the assignee in a general deed of assignment in unsuccessfully resisting an adjudication of bankruptcy against his assignor on a petition filed within four months after the making of the assignment is not provable against the bankrupt's estate.

[No. 272.]

Submitted April 24, 1903. Decided May 18, 1903.

ON A CERTIFICATE from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit presenting questions as to the allowance of claims for services rendered a bankrupt in preparing a general deed of assignments made legitimately for collections, as this was beneficial to the estate. But the claims for personal services and for attorneys' fees should be disallowed in his settlement with the assignee in bankruptcy. Re Lains, 16 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 168, Fed. Cas. No. 7,989. The court held that these claims could only be allowed as other claims against the bankrupt's estate, and be proved against it.

In Clark v. Marx, 6 Ben. 275, Fed. Cas. No. 2,830, where an assignment was set aside, it was said that the assignee should not be allowed for any disbursements or expenses which he made or incurred by virtue of such transfer, or to maintain his title or possession thereunder; but that, so far as he acted with the permission of the court given in its orders in making sales of the property, he ought to be allowed such expenses as were necessary.

In Hunker v. Bing, 9 Fed. 277, where the assignment for creditors was avoided by the assignee in bankruptcy as void under the state law for failure of the assignee to file an inventory within thirty days, it was held that the assignee was not entitled to any compensation as "assignee." But for acts performed in the way of services and disbursements, which, considered independent of the assignment itself, were lawfully rendered and were beneficial to the general body of creditors or necessary to the care of the property, or its conversion into money, allowance should be made, and the sum of $500 for attorneys' fees was allowed covering charges for collection suits, for advice concerning disputed claims, signment, and for services rendered the assignee prior to the adjudication in bankruptcy. Answered in the negative except that, so far as the assignee would be allowed for the payment of such claims, they may be preferred in the right of the assignee, and that the charge for the preparation of the deed may be proved as an unsecured claim.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. William M. Randolph and Wassell Randolph submitted the cause for appellants. Mr. George Randolph was with them on the brief:

The act of Congress, having gone no further than to declare a general assignment an act of bankruptcy, it is not the province of the courts to go beyond that, and add a penalty as a result of what the statute has declared.

Hanover Nat. Bank v. First Nat. Bank, 48 C. C. A. 482, 109 Fed. 422; Fritts v. Palmer, 132 U. S. 282, 33 L. ed. 317, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 93; Union Nat. Bank v. Matthews, 98 U. S. 621, 25 L. ed. 188; National Bank v. Whitney, 103 U. S. 99, 26 L. ed. 443; First Nat. Bank v. Stewart, 107 U. S. 676, 27 L. ed. 592, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 778; Thompson v. St. Nicholas Nat. Bank, 146 U. S. 240, 36 L. ed. 956, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 66; McBroom v. Scottish Mortg. & Land Invest. Co. 153 U. S. 323, 38 L. ed. 731, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 852.

In order to render a transfer fraudulent under the bankrupt act, it must fall within the provisions of that statute.

and for negotiations concerning litigations beneficial to the creditors.

In Jones v. Kinney, 5 Ben. 259, Fed. Cas. No. 7,473, where an assignment was set aside, the assignee was allowed for disbursements to lawful creditors before bankrupt proceedings. But as to disbursements and other expenses the question was reserved until the master should make a report, and that evidence could be given by either side.

In Wald v. Wehl, 18 Blatchf. 495, 6 Fed. 163, where the assignment was avoided only under the bankrupt statute, the assignee was allowed on accounting for all proper services and expenses under the assignment prior to the bringing of this suit to avoid the same.

But in the following cases, where the assignment was set aside at the instance of an assignee in bankruptcy, the assignee for creditors was allowed his expenses for making a sale. Re Cohn, 6 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 379, Fed. Cas. No. 2,966; Stobaugh v. Mills, 8 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 361, Fed. Cas. No. 13,461.

And he was allowed his expense of administering the estate while in his hands. Re Kurth, 17 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 573, Fed. Cas. No. 7,948.

And he was allowed compensation for his services in such a case. Catlin v. Foster, 3 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 540, Fed. Cas. No. 2,519.

And in such a case was allowed for his services and counsel fees. MacDonald v. Moore, 8 Ben. 579, Fed. Cas. No. 8,763.

In Re Cohn, 6 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 379, Fed. Cas. No. 2,966, the court referred to Catlin v. Foster, 3 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 540, Fed. Cas. No. 2,519; Re Stubbs, 4 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 376, Fed. Cas. No. 13,557, and Burkholder v. Stump, 8 Phila. 172, Fed. Cas. No. 2,165, and said that the decisions on this point were variant; and further said: "In some of the judicial districts

Loveland, Bankruptcy, § 157; Tiffany v. Lucas, 15 Wall. 410, 21 L. ed. 198.

It is the fraudulent intent of the debtor alone that determines whether the act complained of is an act of bankruptcy or not.

Loveland, Bankruptcy, § 51; Re McKibben, 12 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 97, Fed. Cas. No. 8,859; Re Drummond, 1 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 231, Fed. Cas. No. 4,093; Re Franklin, 8 Ben. 233, Fed. Cas. No. 5,053; Tiffany v. Lucas, 15 Wall. 410, 21 L. ed. 198; Cook v. Tullis, 18 Wall. 332, 21 L. ed. 933; Clark v. Iselin, 21 Wall. 360, 22 L. ed. 568; Armstrong v. Chemical Nat. Bank, 6 L. R. A. 226, 41 Fed. 234.

The pro rata distribution of the property of the bankrupt was the main purpose of the bankrupt statute.

Reed v. McIntyre, 98 U. S. 507, 25 L. ed. 171; Trimble v. Woodhead, 102 U. S. 650, 26 L. ed. 290; International Bank v. Sherman, 101 U. S. 406, 25 L. ed. 866; Mayor v. Hellman, 91 U. S. 496, 23 L. ed. 377.

A general assignment for the benefit of creditors is valid, except against the administration of the estate in bankruptcy in the bankrupt court.

Sedgwick v. Place, 1 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 673, Fed. Cas. No. 12,622; Langley v. Perry, 2 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 596, Fed. Cas. No. 8,067; Haas v. O'Brien, 66 N. Y. 597; Bostwick v. Burnett, 74 N. Y. 317; Boese v. King, 78 N. Y. 471; Thrasher v. Bentley, 59 N. Y. 649; Hawkins's Appeal, 34 Conn. 548; Patty-Joiner & E. Co. v. Cummins, 93 Tex. 598, of the United States the allowance is refused wholly, and occasional precedents of contrary directions here will not be followed, if to follow them would result in any injustice to creditors."

Cases under bankrupt act of 1898.

A similar divergence of opinion prevails in cases arising under the bankrupt act of 1898.

Actual and necessary expenses incurred in preserving the estate while in the possession of the assignee will be allowed. Re Tatum, 112 Fed. 50; Re Bussey, 6 Am. B. R. 603; Re Pauly, 2 Am. B. R. 333; Re Mays, 114 Fed. 600.

But reimbursement for such expenses was confined, by the referee in Re Gilblom, 2 N. B. N. Rep. 60, to those incurred in the care and preservation of the estate subsequent to the filing of the petition in bankruptcy and prior to the appointment of a trustee or receiver in bankruptcy. To the same effect is Re B. H. Gladding Co. 9 Am. B. R. 171.

And in Stearns v. Filck, 103 Fed. 919, the court went to the full extent of disallowing all the expenses of the assignee whether incurred before or after the petition in bankruptcy had been filed, though it did not require the assignee to refund to the bankrupt's estate disbursements in good faith prior to the filing of such petition.

These last decisions must be regarded as overruled by RANDOLPH v. SCRUGGS, which declares that compensation should be allowed for such services rendered to the assignee prior to the adjudication in bankruptcy as were beneficial to the estate.

In some cases an allowance has been made to the assignee for his services as custodian while in possession of the property. Re Pauly 2 Am. B. R. 333; Re Bussey, 6 Am. B. R. 603.

An assignee for the benefit of creditors of a 57 S. W. 566 (Tex. Civ. App.) 59 S. W. 297; Reed v. McIntyre, 98 U. S. 507, 25 L. ed. 171; Mayer v. Hellman, 91 U. S. 502, 23 L. ed. 379; Simonson v. Sinsheimer, 37 C. C. A. 337, 95 Fed. 948; George M. West Co. v. Lea Bros. 174 U. S. 591, 43 L. ed. 1098, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 836; Re Gutwillig, 34 C. C. A. 377, 63 U. S. App. 191 92 Fed. 337; Davis v. Bohle, 34 C. C. A. 372, 92 Fed. 325; Leidigh Carriage Co. v. Stengel, 37 C. C. A. 210, 95 Fed. 638; Re Plotke, 44 C. C. A. 282, 104 Fed. 968; Bryan v. Bernheimer, 181 U. S. 188, 45 L. ed. 814, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 557.

State legislation on the subject of general assignments, and on the subject of insolvencies, is abrogated or displaced by the bankrupt law only so far as there is necessary conflict between the state legislation and the bankrupt law.

Sturges v. Crowninshield, 4 Wheat. 122, 4 L. ed. 529; Ogden v. Saunders, 12 Wheat. 213, 6 L. ed. 606; Baldwin v. Hale, 1 Wall. 223, 17 L. ed. 531; Tua v. Carriere, 117 U. S. 201, 29 L. ed. 855, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 565; Butler v. Goreley, 146 U. S. 303, 36 L. ed. 981, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 84; Denny v. Bennett, 128 U. S. 497, 32 L. ed. 494, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 134; Brown v. Smart, 145 U. S. 457, 36 L. ed. 775, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 958; Geilinger v. Philippi, 133 U. S. 257, 33 L. ed. 618, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 266; Stewart v. Platt, 101 U. S. 731, 25 L. ed. 816; Smith v. Union Bank, 5 Pet. 518, 8 L. ed. 212; Cole v. Cunningham, 133 U. S. 107, 33 L. ed. 538, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 269; Walworth v. Harris, 129 U. S. 355, 32 L. ed. 712, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep.

340; Crapo v. Kelly, 16 Wall. 610, 21 L. ed. 430; 2 Story, Const. § 1115.

Such portions of the assignment, and of the laws of Tennessee applicable to it, as necessarily conflicted with the bankrupt law, and excluded or denied or withheld such substantial rights and remedies of administration as the creditors are entitled to under the bankrupt law, but no more, were displaced and superseded by the bankrupt law, upon the adjudication, and the creditors had the right to apply to the court in bankruptcy, and to have the assets and property embraced in the assignment, administered there through a trustee, under the terms and provisions of the bankrupt law.

Parmenter Mfg. Co. v. Hamilton, 172 Mass. 178, 51 N. E. 529; Tua v. Carriere, 117 U. S. 210, 29 L. ed. 858, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 565; Butler v. Goreley, 146 U. S. 303, 36 L. ed. 981, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 84; Boese v. King, 108 U. S. 379, 27 L. ed. 760, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 765.

Equity never allows a trust to fail for the want of a trustee. And in the application of this principle, it has frequently occurred that the courts, by construction, or interpretation, or in order to execute the trust and give it force and effect, have displaced one trustee and substituted another, for the purposes of the trust.

Field v. Arrowsmith, 3 Humph. 442, 39 Am. Dec. 185; Mills v. Haines, 3 Head, 332; Hughes v. Brown, 88 Tenn. 578, 8 L. R. A. 480, 13 S. W. 286; Brennan v. Willson, 71 corporation was allowed by the referee in Re Lock-Stub Check Co. 5 Am. B. R. 106, note, compensation out of the estate as custodian for services in preserving the assigned property and carrying on the business, from the date of the assignment to the date of the possession by the trustee in bankruptcy.

An assignee for the benefit of creditors who, while bankruptcy proceedings were pending against his assignor, but prior to the adjudication, makes a sale for full value of the property in his hands which would have depreciated in value if not promptly sold, is entitled to retain out of the proceeds in his hands a reasonable sum allowed by the state court as compensation for his services and for those of his attorneys. Re Scholtz, 106 Fed. 834.

Only in unusual circumstances, however, can an allowance be made out of the bankrupt's estate to the attorneys of his assignee for the benefit of creditors. Re Pauly, 2 Am. B. R. 333; Re Bussey, 6 Am. B. R. 603.

A distinction as to the time when such services were rendered has been drawn in some cases, and the conclusion reached that while services rendered by a general assignee in preserving the assigned estate subsequent to the institution of bankruptcy proceedings against his assignor may be compensated by an allowance out of the bankrupt's estate (Re Peter Paul Book Co. 104 Fed. 786; Re B. H. Gladling Co. 9 Am. B. R. 171), no such allowance can be made for services rendered prior to the filing of the petition in bankruptcy. Ibid.; Wilbur v. Watson, 111 Fed. 493.

This question was not directly involved in RANDOLPH v. SCRUGGS, but grave doubt as to the soundness of the cases making such a distinction, as well as those which, like Stearns v. Flick, 103 Fed. 919; Re Tatum, 112 Fed. 50;

Re Mays, 114 Fed. 600, deny any right of the assignee to compensation for his services, arises in view of this language from the opinion by Mr. Justice Holmes: "But the assignee is acting lawfully in what he does before proceedings in bankruptcy are begun, and, although it may be assumed that the avoidance of the assignment relates back to the date of the deed, still, so far as his services, or services procured by him, tend to the preservation or benefit of the estate, the mere fiction of relation is not enough to forbid an allowance for them."

In Re Kingman, 5 Am. B. R. 251, the referee held that an assignee for the benefit of creditors under an assignment made with the express understanding and agreement that it was liable to be rendered void by the institution of bankruptcy proceedings within four months from its date, who did nothing more than to take possession of the property, file an inventory, and make some effort to sell it, was not entitled to an allowance for such services or for attorneys' fees based upon services rendered in connection with the assignment, where voluntary bankruptcy proceedings were instituted within four months from the date of the assignment.

In Re McCauley, 2 N. B. N. Rep. 1089, the referee held that a voluntary assignee for the benefit of creditors, who accepts the trust knowing that it is liable to be avoided by bankruptcy proceedings, cannot be allowed compensation for his services, at least where such allowance would lead to a duplication of charges.

Where the services of the assignee and of his counsel, instead of benefiting the estate, were injurious thereto, no compensation therefor will be allowed out of the bankrupt's estate. Sinsheimer v. Simonson, 106 Fed. 870.

N. Y. 502; Mark's Appeal, 85 Pa. 233; Price v. Parker, 11 Iowa, 144; Holtoquist v. Clark, 59 Minn. 59, 60 N. W. 1077; Brown v. Parker, 38 C. C. A. 261, 97 Fed. 447; Perry, Tr. §§ 38, 45, 240, 248, 427; Burrill, Assignm. § 240, 6th ed.

The requirement of uniformity in the Constitution does not prevent Congress leaving in force state laws on the subject of bankruptcies or insolvencies, or providing for the administration of the bankrupt system it has created through the courts of the several states, or permitting such administration through such courts either wholly, or to any prescribed extent.

Hanover Nat. Bank v. Moyses, 186 U. S. 181, 46 L. ed. 1113, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 857.

Acts of Congress, where exclusive jurisdiction of their enforcement is not given to the Federal courts, may be enforced in the courts of the states of competent jurisdiction.

Bardes v. First Nat. Bank, 178 U. S. 524, 44 L. ed. 1175, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1000; Hicks v. Knost, 178 U. S. 541, 44 L. ed. 1183, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1006; Clafin v. Houseman, 93 U. S. 130, 23 L. ed. 833.

Why does not the rule apply to bankruptcy which has been applied to foreign and interstate commerce?

Until some inconsistent action, in the form of legislation, is taken by Congress in the exercise of its power to regulate foreign and interstate commerce, the legislation of a state, not directed against commerce in any of its regulations, but relating generally to the rights, duties, and liabilities of citizens, is of obligatory force within its territorial jurisdiction, although it may directly and remotely affect the operations of foreign and interstate commerce, or persons engaged therein.

Cooley v. Philadelphia Port Wardens, 12 How. 299, 13 L. ed. 996; Sherlock v. Alling, 93 U. S. 99, 23 L. ed. 819; Munn v. Illinois, 94 U. S. 113, 24 L. ed. 77; Peik v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 94 U. S. 164, 24 L. ed. 97; Mobile County v. Kimball, 102 U. S. 691, 26 L. ed. 238.

Even if the general assignment is adjudicated to have been void, and is set aside, the appellants are entitled to compensation for their services.

Williams v. Gibbs, 20 How. 535, 15 L. ed. 1013; Douglas v. Bank of Commerce, 97 Tenn. 133, 36 S. W. 874; Lassiter v. Travis, 98 Tenn. 330, 39 S. W. 226; Knower v. Central Nat. Bank, 124 N. Y. 552, 27 N. E. 247; McBlair v. Gibbs, 17 How. 232, 15 L. ed. 132; Williams v. Gibbs, 17 How. 239, 15 L. ed. 135; Pullman's Palace Car Co. v. Central Transp. Co. 171 U. S. 138, 43 L. ed. 108, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 808.

It was the plain duty of the assignee to see that no adjudication of bankruptcy was made against the assignor except upon a petition presenting a case within the jurisdiction of the court, and setting forth with sufficient accuracy a cause of bankruptcy sufficient to support the petition.

Re Meyer, 39 C. C. A. 368, 98 Fed. 980.

The bankruptcy, or the adjudication of bankruptcy, could no more relieve or impair the obligations of the Langstaff Hardware Company to the appellants, as its creditors, than the death of a natural person could relieve his representatives from the payment of his debts out of his assets.

Winchester v. Heiskell, 16 Lea, 556, 119 U. S. 450, 30 L. ed. 462, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 281, 120 U. S. 273, 30 L. ed. 464, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 562; Jeffries v. Mutual L. Ins. Co. 110 U. S. 305, 28 L. ed. 156, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 8; Wylie v. Cowe, 15 How. 415, 14 L. ed. 753; 2 Morawetz, Priv. Corp. §§ 1010, 1035; Wait, Insolvent Corp. §§ 199, 236, 277, 305, 486; Burrill, Assignm. 6th ed. § 349; Perry, Tr. 1st ed. §§ 231, 907; Fewlass v. Keeshan, 32 C. C. A. 8, 60 U. S. App. 133, 88 Fed. 573; Kinsey v. McDearmon, 5 Coldw. 392.

As the trustee is "vested with the title of the bankrupt" and hence takes no greater interest in, or better title to, the property than the bankrupt had at the date of the adjudication, except only as to the property disposed of by the bankrupt, in fraud of the bankrupt law, the trustee can claim no more than the bankrupt had, and in the same condition in which he had it.

Donaldson v. Farwell, 93 U. S. 631, 23 L. ed. 993; Yeatman v. New Orleans Sav. Inst. 95 U. S. 766, 24 L. ed. 589; Stewart v. Platt, 101 U. S. 738, 25 L. ed. 816; Porter v. Lazear, 109 U. S. 84, 27 L. ed. 865, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 58; Dudley v. Easton, 104 U. S. 103, 26 L. ed. 668; Adams v. Collier, 122 U. S. 388, 30 L. ed. 1208, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1208; Loveland, Bankruptcy, § 149, p. 285.

Taking the title the bankrupt had, the trustee also takes such title subject to all equities, liens, or encumbrances, whether created by operation of law, or by the act of the bankrupt, which existed against the property in the hands of the bankrupt, except in cases of judicial liens created against the property within four months preceding the commencement of the proceedings in bankruptcy, and except in cases where the disposition of the property by the bankrupt is declared by the law to be fraudulent and void.

Yeatman v. New Orleans Sav. Inst. 95 U. S. 764, 24 L. ed. 589; Jerome v. McCarter, 94 U. S. 734, 24 L. ed. 136; Donaldson v. Farwell, 93 U. S. 631, 23 L. ed. 993; Cook v. Tullis, 18 Wall. 332, 21 L. ed. 933; Gibson v. Warden, 14 Wall. 244, 20 L. ed. 797; Stewart v. Platt, 101 U. S. 731, 25 L. ed. 816; Hauselt v. Harrison, 105 U. S. 401, 26 L. ed. 1075; Re Blair, 108 Fed. 529; Loveland, Bankruptcy, § 149, pp. 285, 286.

There is no room for the operation of the doctrine of relation under the very terms of the act itself. But if there was room for the operation of such doctrine, it could not be applied to defeat any right or claim of the appellants in this case, as the courts apply such doctrine only to subserve the ends of justice, and to protect parties deriving their interests from the claimant, pending the proceedings for the confirmation of his title.

Lynch v. Bernal, 9 Wall. 317, 19 L. ed. 714.

The Langstaff Hardware Company had the power, and the right, to employ the appellants as its counsel and attorneys, to perform the services they rendered, and to bind its assets by the contract contained in the general assignment for their payment.

See Graham v. La Crosse & M. R. Co. 102 U. S. 160, 26 L. ed. 111; Hollins v. Brierfield Coal & I. Co. 150 U. S. 385, 37 L. ed. 1113, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 127; First Nat. Bank v. Lumber & Mfg. Co. 91 Tenn. 12, 18 S. W. 400; McClaren v. Union Roller Mills & Elevator Co. 95 Tenn. 696, 35 S. W. 88.

No counsel for appellee.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

The certificate in this case is as follows:

[534] "This is an appeal from the district court for the western district of Tennessee, sitting as a court of bankruptcy, disallowing *a claim filed by the appellants against the bankrupt estate, exceeding $500 in amount. From the transcript of the record it appears:

"(1.) That the Langstaff Hardware Company is a mercantile corporation, organized under the general law of Tennessee, providing for the organization of such corporations, which was engaged in carrying on a general hardware business at Memphis, in the western district of Tennessee.

"(2.) Being embarrassed, it, on the 13th day of August, 1900, made a general deed of assignment, under the general-assignment law of Tennessee, by which it conveyed to one C. W. Griffith, as assignee, all its corporate property of every kind, for the equal benefit of all its creditors. The assignee accepted the trust and qualified by executing bond and taking the oath prescribed by the Tennessee statute, and entered into possession of all the assigned estate. This deed of assignment provided that the assignee should pay 'reasonable counsel and attorneys' fees for preparing this deed and for advice and service to be furnished and rendered him in the course of the administration of the trust hereby created.' Within four months after this deed of assignment the Langstaff Hardware Company, upon a petition by its creditors, was adjudicated a bankrupt, and this deed set aside as in contravention of the bankrupt law. A trustee was duly chosen, who has taken possession of the assigned assets of the bankrupt.

"(3.) The appellants filed a claim against the bankrupt estate for professional services rendered the bankrupt in preparing the said deed of general assignment, and the assignee thereunder in advising and counseling him in respect of his duties, and in defending a suit brought to wind up the corporation in a state chancery court, and for services rendered the assignee in resisting the adjudication of bankruptcy.

"The items of this claim were as follows:

(a.) For services rendered the corporation in preparing the general assignment ..... $500 00

190 U. S.

(b.) For general advice and counsel to the assignee in respect to the duties of his trust ..... 250 00

* (c.) For legal services in defense of a suit brought in a state court wherein it was sought to have the corporation wound up as an insolvent corporation, and its assets distributed under the orders and decrees of the court ..... 100 00

(d.) For services rendered by employment of the assignee in resisting an adjudication of bankruptcy against the Langstaff Hardware Company ..... 300 00

"The appellants asserted and claimed that each of said items constituted a prior charge upon the assets, and asked to have same paid by the trustee in preference to the unsecured creditors. The trustee and certain creditors excepted to each item of this account.

"The referee, upon the evidence, found and certified that the services had been rendered as claimed, and were reasonably worth the amount claimed, but that the same did not constitute expenses allowable as a preference, and were not otherwise a lien. He allowed the item of $500.00 as an unsecured claim against the bankrupt, but disallowed the other items as not being debts of the bankrupt. His order was duly excepted to and the questions certified to the court in due form. The district judge sustained the referee so far as he held the claim to be non-preferential and adjudged that none of the items constituted a debt, provable for any purpose against the bankrupt estate. From this judgment the appellants have appealed and assigned error.

"Upon this state of facts this court desires the instruction of the Supreme Court, that it may properly decide the questions of law thus arising:

"(1) Is a claim for professional services rendered to a bankrupt corporation in the preparation of a general assignment, valid under the law of Tennessee, entitled to be paid as a preferential claim out of the estate of the corporation in the hands of a trustee in bankruptcy, when the corporation was adjudicated an involuntary bankrupt within four months after the *making of the [536] assignment, and the assignment set aside as in contravention of the bankrupt law?

"(2) Is a claim for professional advice and legal services rendered such an assignee, prior to an adjudication of bankruptcy against the assignor, the assignment providing that the costs and expenses of administering the trust should be first paid, entitled to be proved as a preferential claim against the bankrupt estate?

"(3) Is a claim against such an assignee for legal services rendered at his employment in resisting an adjudication of involuntary bankruptcy against the assignor allowable as a preferential claim, when the necessary effect of the adjudication would be to set aside the assignment under which the assignee was acting?

"(4) If not entitled to be allowed as preferential claims, may either of the items described in the foregoing questions be proved as unsecured debts of the bankrupt corporation?"

It is admitted that a general assignment for the benefit of creditors, made within four months from the filing of a petition in bankruptcy, is void as against the trustee in bankruptcy, so far as it interferes with his administering the property assigned. This could not be denied. George M. West Co. v. Lea Bros. 174 U. S. 590, 595, 43 L. ed. 1098, 1099, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 836; Boese v. King, 108 U. S. 379, 385, 27 L. ed. 760, 762, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 765; Bryan v. Bernheimer, 181 U. S. 188, 45 L. ed. 814, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 557. It hardly is necessary to discuss whether such an assignment should be held to be embraced in the express avoidance of conveyances made with intent to hinder, delay, or defraud creditors in § 67c, of the bankruptcy law. (30 Stat. at L. 565, chap. 541, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3450.) It is possible to say that constructively a general assignment falls under that description. Re Gutwillig, 90 Fed. 475, 34 C. C. A. 377, 63 U. S. App. 191, 92 Fed. 337; Davis v. Bohle, 34 C. C. A. 372, 92 Fed. 325. One ground for such a construction would be that making the assignment is declared an act of bankruptcy by § 3. As it could not have been intended that the very conveyance which warranted putting the grantor into bankruptcy should withdraw all his property from distribution there, it seems sufficient to rely upon the necessarily implied effect of § 3. At all events, if such a conveyance be called constructively fraudulent, it would be severe to deduce consequences as *to the validity of the appellants' claim from that circumstance alone.

[537]

The assignment was not illegal. It was permitted by the law of the state, and cannot be taken to have been prohibited by the bankruptcy law absolutely in every event, whether proceedings were instituted or not. Re Sievers, 91 Fed. 366; Re Romanow, 92 Fed. 510. It had no general fraudulent intent. It was voidable only in case bankruptcy proceedings should be begun. At the time when it was made the institution of such proceedings was uncertain. It seems to us that it would be a hard and subtle construction to say, as seems to have been thought in Bartlett v. Bramhall, 3 Gray, 257, 260, that when they were instituted they not only avoided the assignment, but made it illegal by relation back to its date, when, if they had not been started, it would have remained perfectly good. No doubt the corporation had notice of the bankruptcy law, but it could not go into bankruptcy by voluntary petition, and there is no objection to a debtor's distributing his property equally among his creditors of his own motion, if bankruptcy proceedings do not intervene. The view we take is that which has been taken by state decisions with reference to similar questions raised by creditors or under state insolvent laws. Bigelow v. Baldwin, 1 Gray, 245, 247; White v. Hill, 148 Mass. 396, 19 N. E. 407; Clark v. Sawyer, 151 Mass. 64, 23 N. E. 726; Wakeman v. Grover, 4 Paige, 23, 43, 11 Wend. 187, 226, 25 Am. Dec. 624. See also Mayer v. Hellman, 91 U. S. 496, 500, 501, 23 L. ed. 377, 378.

The appellants do not stop here, however, but argue that the avoidance of the voluntary assignment goes only to the administration of the property, and not to the title; that the trustee simply succeeds the privately chosen assignee in the administration of the trust under the deed. Of course the object of this contention is to uphold the provision in favor of the appellants for preparing the deed and for service to be rendered the assignee. It does not seem to us to need much argument to show that this artificial refinement cannot stand. If by declaring the assignment an act of bankruptcy, the statute means that the conveyance shall not be effectual against the bankruptcy proceedings, as is agreed, the natural and simple construction is that it means that the deed shall be avoided as a whole when the trustee takes the goods. The cases which we have cited and others under insolvent and bankruptcy laws evidently take that view. It follows that the appellants can assert no preference by way of lien under the deed.

It does not follow, however, from the avoidance of the deed, that the service of preparing it did not raise a valid debt. There is no sufficient reason why it should not when once it is decided that the service for which the debt is alleged was lawful when it was rendered. Re Lains, 16 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 168, 170, Fed. Cas. No. 7,989.

The more difficult question is how to deal with the services rendered to the voluntary assignee. The claim for them must be worked out through the assignee, and cannot be put higher than his claim for allowances, supposing that they had been paid. We may assume that there is no question of form before us, and that whatever the appellants properly might have been paid by the assignee they may prove for now. See Central R. & Bkg. Co. v. Pettus, 113 U. S. 116, 124, 125, 28 L. ed. 915, 918, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 387; Mason v. Pomeroy, 151 Mass. 164, 167, 7 L. R. A. 771, 24 N. E. 202. But it has been held that the assignee, even of a corporation, cannot be allowed anything for his services before the filing of the petition in bankruptcy. See e. g. Re Peter Paul Book Co. 104 Fed. 786. So far as this opinion rests on constructive fraud, we have indicated above that it does not command our assent. The case would be different if the assignee were party to an actual fraud. Hastings v. Spencer, 1 Curt. C. C. 504, 507, Fed. Cas. No. 6,201; Smith v. Wise, 132 N. Y. 172, 178, 30 N. E. 229; Perry-Mason Shoe Co. v. Sykes, 72 Miss. 390, 401, 28 L. R. A. 277, 17 So. 171. But the assignee is acting lawfully in what he does before proceedings in bankruptcy are begun, and, although it may be assumed that the avoidance of the assignment relates back to the date of the deed, still, so far as his services, or services procured by him, tend to the preservation or benefit of the estate, the mere fiction of relation is not enough to forbid an allowance for them. See Lynch v. Bernal, 9 Wall. 315, 325, 326, 19 L. ed. 714, 716. This is the doctrine of the state courts with reference to the operation of insolvent laws upon voluntary assignments, and of the better-considered decisions under the bankrupt laws. [539] Platt v. Archer, 13 Blatchf. 351, Fed. Cas. No. 11,214; Havemeyer v. Loeb, 5 Abb. N. C. 338, 345; Macdonald v. Moore, 15 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 26, Fed. Cas. No. 8,763; Wald v. Wehl, 18 Blatchf. 495, 6 Fed. 163, 169; Hunker v. Bing, 9 Fed. 277; Re Kurth, 17 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 573, Fed. Cas. No. 7,948; Re Scholtz, 106 Fed. 834; White v. Hill, 148 Mass. 396, 19 N. E. 407; Clark v. Sawyer, 151 Mass. 64, 23 N. E. 726; Wakeman v. Grover, 4 Paige, 23, 43, 11 Wend. 187, 25 Am. Dec. 624; Collumb v. Read, 24 N. Y. 505, 515; T. T. Haydock Carriage Co. v. Pier, 78 Wis. 579, 47 N. W. 945; Perry-Mason Shoe Co. v. Sykes, 72 Miss. 390, 28 L. R. A. 277, 17 So. 171. See Williams v. Gibbs, 20 How. 535, 15 L. ed. 1013; Internal Improvement Fund v. Greenough, 105 U. S. 527, 532, 26 L. ed. 1157, 1160; Thompson v. Phenix Ins. Co. 136 U. S. 287, 294, 295, 34 L. ed. 408, 412, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1019; Woodruff v. New York, L. E. & W. R. Co. 129 N. Y. 27, 29 N. E. 251. If beneficial services are allowed for they are to be regarded as deductions from the property which the assignee is required to surrender, and in that way they gain a preference. Platt v. Archer, 13 Blatchf. 351, Fed. Cas. No. 11,214; Re Scholtz, 106 Fed. 834; White v. Hill, 148 Mass. 396, 19 N. E. 407; Clark v. Sawyer, 151 Mass. 64, 23 N. E. 726.

We are not prepared to go further than to allow compensation for services which were beneficial to the estate. Beyond that point we must throw the risk of his conduct on the assignee, as he was chargeable with knowledge of what might happen.

It does not appear how far the services to the assignee were beneficial. Therefore the questions of the circuit court of appeals cannot be answered in full. But the principles as to which it desired instruction may be stated sufficiently for the disposition of the case upon a subsequent finding of facts. None of the claims is entitled to preference under the deed. The charge for the preparation of the assignment properly may be proved as an unpreferred debt of the bankrupt. The services to the voluntary assignee may be allowed so far as they benefited the estate, and, inasmuch as he would be allowed a lien on the property if he had paid the sum allowed, the appellants may stand in his shoes, and may be preferred to that extent. No ground appears for allowing the item for services in resisting an adjudication of bankruptcy. See Platt v. Archer, 13 Blatchf. 351, 354, Fed. Cas. No. 11,214; Perry-Mason Shoe Co. v. Sykes, 72 Miss. 190 U. S.

390, 398, 28 L. R. A. 277, 17 So. 171; **T. T. Haydock Carriage Co. v. Pier*, 78 Wis. 579, 582, 47 N. W. 945; Clark v. Sawyer, 151 Mass. 64, 23 N. E. 726.

We answer the questions as follows: (1) No. (2) Not under the deed, but, so far as the assignee would be allowed for payment of the claim, the claim may be preferred in the right of the assignee. (3) Not on the facts appearing in the certificate. (4) The charge for the preparation of the deed may be proved as an unsecured claim.

GLOBE REFINING COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,
v.

LANDA COTTON OIL COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 540-547.)

Damages—breach of seller's agreement to deliver—pleading—sufficiency of allegations to show jurisdictional amount involved.

1. Mere notice to a seller of some interest or probable action of the buyer is not enough necessarily and as matter of law, to charge the seller with special damage on that account if he fails to deliver the goods.
2. The amount of the damages involved in an action for the breach of a written contract to deliver oil at a specified price f. o. b. buyer's tanks at seller's mill is not increased, for jurisdictional purposes, over and above the difference between the contract and market value by allegations in the petition that the seller had notice that the buyer would be compelled to send its tanks from distant points to the seller's mill; that in so doing transportation charges were incurred and the use of the tanks lost for thirty days; that seller was well aware that buyer had contracts over, and "had contracted to that end" with buyer; and that seller, contemplating the breach of its contract, maliciously caused the buyer to send the tanks a specified distance at a specified cost.

[No. 241.]

Submitted April 16, 1903. Decided June 1, 1903.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Western District of Texas to review a judgment sustaining a plea that the damages had been unduly magnified for the purpose of conferring jurisdiction, and dismissing the cause. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. C. W. Ogden submitted the cause for plaintiff in error. Mr. J. D. Guinn was with him on the brief:

The measure of damages is either such as may fairly and reasonably be considered as arising naturally or such as may reasonably be supposed to have been in contemplation by both parties at the time they made the contract, as the probable result of the breach of it.

NOTE.—As to the damages recoverable for the breach of a contract to deliver goods—see notes to Osgood v. Bauder (Iowa) 1 L. R. A. 655; Shepherd v. Hampton, 4 L. ed. U. S. 369, and Telfener v. Russ, 36 L. ed. U. S. 800.

Hadley v. Baxendale, 9 Exch. 341; Field, Damages, §§ 252, 253, 254; Taylor Mfg. Co. v. Hatcher Mfg. Co. 3 L. R. A. 587, 39 Fed. 440; Smith v. Bolles, 132 U. S. 125, 33 L. ed. 279, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 39; Grand Tower Min. Mfg. & Transp. Co. v. Phillips, 23 Wall. 471, 23 L. ed. 71; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Dunman, 85 Tex. 179, 19 S. W. 1073.

In this case, while the buyer had not advanced the whole price of the goods, he had advanced freight, and advanced the use of tank cars so as not to have them for use to send to other places. This being true, the rule would be the same as when the price of the goods had been advanced; that is, the highest price up to the time of suit and such other losses as reasonably arose out of the breach.

Chatham v. Jones, 69 Tex. 745, 7 S. W. 600; Hadley v. Baxendale, 9 Exch. 341; Wetmore v. Rymer, 169 U. S. 115, 42 L. ed. 682, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 293; Randon v. Barton, 4 Tex. 295; Cartwright v. McCook, 33 Tex. 613; Griffin v. Colver, 16 N. Y. 489, 69 Am. Dec. 718; Hamilton v. McPherson, 28 N. Y. 72, 84 Am. Dec. 330; Crater v. Binniger, 33 N. J. L. 513, 97 Am. Dec. 737; Richardson v. Chynoweth, 26 Wis. 656.

The court having held that the pleadings state sufficient matter to state a cause of action, and that there were facts to be determined, in order to reach the entire case, it should have heard all the facts, and not merely those appertaining to the plea in abatement.

Blachly v. Davis, 1 McLean, 412, Fed. Cas. No. 1,456; Allen v. Southern California R. Co. 70 Fed. 370; Poster v. Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. 56 Fed. 434; Jones v. League, 18 How. 76, 15 L. ed. 263; Wetmore v. Rymer, 169 U. S. 121, 42 L. ed. 684, 18 Sup. Ct. Ct. Rep. 293.

Plaintiff had the right to have a jury, to pass on these matters.

Blachly v. Davis, 1 McLean, 412, Fed. Cas. No. 1,456; Wetmore v. Rymer, 169 U. S. 117, 42 L. ed. 683, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 293.

No counsel for defendant in error.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an action of contract brought by [541] the plaintiff in error, *a Kentucky corporation, against the defendant in error, a Texas corporation, for breach of a contract to sell and deliver crude oil. The defendant excepted to certain allegations of damage, and pleaded that the damages had been claimed and magnified fraudulently for the purpose of giving the United States circuit court jurisdiction, when in truth they were less than $2,000. The judge sustained the exceptions. He also tried the question of jurisdiction before hearing the merits, refused the plaintiff a jury, found that the plea was sustained, and dismissed the cause. The plaintiff excepted to all the rulings and action of the court, and brings the case here by writ of error. If the rulings and findings were right, there is no question that the judge was right in dismissing the suit (North American Transp. & Trading Co. v. Morrison, 178 U. S. 262, 267, 44 L. ed. 1061, 1064, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 869); but the grounds upon which he went are re-examinable here. Wetmore v. Rymer, 169 U. S. 115, 42 L. ed. 682, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 293.

The contract was made through a broker, it would seem by writing, and, at all events, was admitted to be correctly stated in the following letter:

Dallas, Texas, 7/30/97.

Landa Oil Company,
New Braunfels, Texas.

Gentlemen:—

Referring to the exchange of our telegrams to-day, we have sold for your account to the Globe Refining Company, Louisville Kentucky, ten (10) tanks prime crude C/S oil at the price of 15½ cents per gallon of 7½ pounds, f. o. b. buyers' tank at your mill. Weights and quality guaranteed.

Terms: Sight draft without exchange b/l'dg. attached. Sellers paying commission.

Shipment: Part last half August and balance first half September. Shipping instructions to be furnished by the Globe Refining Company. Yours truly, Thomas & Green, as Broker.

Having this contract before us, we proceed to consider the allegations of special damage over and above the difference between the contract price of the oil and the price at the time of the breach, which was the measure adopted by the judge. These *allegations must be read with care, for it [542] is obvious that the pleader has gone as far as he dared to go, and to the verge of anything that could be justified under the contract, if not beyond.

It is alleged that it was agreed and understood that the plaintiff would send its tank cars to the defendant's mills, and that the defendant promptly would fill them with oil (so far, simply following the contract), and that the plaintiff sent tanks. "In order to do this, the plaintiff was under the necessity of obligating itself unconditionally to the railroad company (and of which the defendant had notice) to pay to it for the transportation of the cars from said Louisville to said New Braunfels in the sum of $900," which sum plaintiff had to pay, "and was incurred as an advancement on said oil contract." This is the first item. The last words quoted mean only that the sum paid would have been allowed by the railroad as part payment of the return charges had the tanks been filled and sent back over the same road.

Next it is alleged that the defendant, contemplating a breach of the contract, caused the plaintiff to send its cars a thousand miles, at a cost of $1,000; that defendant canceled its contract on the 2d of September, but did not notify the plaintiff until the 14th, when, if the plaintiff had known of the cancellation, it would have been supplying itself from other sources; that plaintiff (no doubt defendant is meant) did so wilfully and maliciously, causing an unnecessary loss of $2,000.

Next it is alleged that, by reason of the breach of contract and want of notice, plaintiff lost the use of its tanks for thirty days, — a loss estimated at $700 more. Next it is alleged that the plaintiff had arranged with its own customers to furnish the oil in question within a certain time, which contemplated sharp compliance with the contract by the defendant; "all of which facts, as above stated, were well known to the defendant, and defendant had contracted to that end with the plaintiff." This item is put at $740, with $1,000 more for loss of customers, credit, and reputation. Finally, at the end of the petition, it is alleged generally that it was known to defendant, and [543] in contemplation of the contract, *that plaintiff would have to send tanks at great expense from distant points, and that plaintiff "was required to pay additional freight in order to rearrange the destination of the various tanks and other points." Then it is alleged that by reason of the defendant's breach, the plaintiff had to pay $350 additional freight.

Whatever may be the scope of the allegations which we have quoted, it will be seen that none of the items was contemplated expressly by the words of the bargain. Those words are before us in writing, and go no further than to contemplate that when the deliveries were to take place the buyer's tanks should be at the defendant's mill. Under such circumstances the question is suggested how far the express terms of a writing, admitted to be complete, can be enlarged by averment and oral evidence; and, if they can be enlarged in that way, what averments are sufficient. When a man commits a tort, he incurs, by force of the law, a liability to damages, measured by certain rules. When a man makes a contract, he incurs, by force of the law, a liability to damages, unless a certain promised event comes to pass. But, unlike the case of torts, as the contract is by mutual consent, the parties themselves, expressly or by implication, fix the rule by which the damages are to be measured. The old law seems to have regarded it as technically in the election of the promisor to perform or to pay damages. Bromage v. Genning, 1 Rolle, 368; Hulbert v. Hart, 1 Vern. 133. It is true that, as people when contracting contemplate performance, not breach, they commonly say little or nothing as to what shall happen in the latter event, and the common rules have been worked out by common sense, which has established what the parties probably would have said if they had spoken about the matter. But a man never can be absolutely certain of performing any contract when the time of performance arrives, and, in many cases, he obviously is taking the risk of an event which is wholly, or to an appreciable extent, beyond his control. The extent of liability in such cases is likely to be within his contemplation, and, whether it is or not, should be worked out on terms which it fairly may be presumed he would have assented to if they had been presented to his mind. For instance, *in the present [544] case, the defendant's mill and all its oil might have been burned before the time came for delivery. Such a misfortune would not have been an excuse, although probably it would have prevented performance of the contract. If a contract is broken, the measure of damages generally is the same, whatever the cause of the breach. We have to consider, therefore, what the plaintiff would have been entitled to recover in that case, and that depends on what liability the defendant fairly may be supposed to have assumed consciously, or to have warranted the plaintiff reasonably to suppose that it assumed, when the contract was made.

This point of view is taken by implication in the rule that "a person can only be held to be responsible for such consequences as may be reasonably supposed to be in the contemplation of the parties at the time of making the contract." Grebert-Borgnis v. Nugent, L. R. 15 Q. B. Div. 85, 92; Horne v. Midland R. Co. L. R. 7 C. P. 583, 591; Hadley v. Baxendale, 9 Exch. 341, 354; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Hall, 124 U. S. 444, 456, 31 L. ed. 479, 483, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 577; Howard v. Stillwell & B. Mfg. Co. 139 U. S. 199, 206, 35 L. ed. 147, 150, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 500; Primrose v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 154 U. S. 1, 32, 38 L. ed. 883, 895, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1098. The suggestion thrown out by Bramwell, B., in Gee v. Lancashire & Y. R. Co. 6 Hurlst. & N. 211, 218, that perhaps notice after the contract was made and before breach would be enough, is not accepted by the later decisions. See further, Hydraulic Engineering Co. v. McHaffie, L. R. 4 Q. B. Div. 670, 674, 676. The consequences must be contemplated at the time of the making of the contract.

The question arises, then, What is sufficient to show that the consequences were in contemplation of the parties, in the sense of the vendor taking the risk? It has been held that it may be proved by oral evidence when the contract is in writing. Messmore v. New York Shot & Lead Co. 40 N. Y. 422. See Sawdon v. Andrew, 30 L. T. N. S. 23. But, in the language quoted, with seeming approbation, by Blackburn, J., from Mayne on Damages, 2d ed. 10, in Elbinger Actien-Gesellschaft v. Armstrong, L. R. 9 Q. B. 473, 478, "it may be asked, with great deference, whether the mere fact of such consequences being communicated to the other party will be sufficient, without *going on to [545] show that he was told that he would be answerable for them, and consented to undertake such a liability." Mr. Justice Willes answered this question, so far as it was in his power, in British Columbia & V. I. Spar, Lumber, & Saw-Mill Co. v. Nettleship, L. R. 3 C. P. 499, 500: "I am disposed to take the narrow view that one of two contracting parties ought not to be allowed to obtain an advantage which he has not paid for. . . . If that [a liability for the full profits that might be made by machinery which the defendant was transporting, if the plaintiff's trade should prove successful and without a rival] had been presented to the mind of the ship owner at the time of making the contract, as the basis upon which he was contracting, he would at once have rejected it. And though he knew, from the shippers, the use they intended to make of the articles, it could not be contended that the mere fact of knowledge, without more, would be a reason for imposing upon him a greater degree of liability than would otherwise have been cast upon him. To my mind, that leads to the inevitable conclusion that the mere fact of knowledge cannot increase the liability. The knowledge must be brought home to the party sought to be charged, under such circumstances that he must know that the person he contracts with reasonably believes that he accepts the contract with the special condition attached to it." The last words are quoted and reaffirmed by the same judge in Horne v. Midland R. Co. L. R. 7 C. P. 583, 591; S. C., L. R. 8 C. P. 131. See also Benjamin, Sales, 6th Am. ed. § 872.

It may be said with safety that mere notice to a seller of some interest or probable action of the buyer is not enough necessarily and as matter of law to charge the seller with special damage on that account if he fails to deliver the goods. With that established, we recur to the allegations. With regard to the first, it is obvious that the plaintiff was free to bring its tanks from where it liked,—a thousand miles away or an adjoining yard,—so far as the contract was concerned. The allegation hardly amounts to saying that the defendant had notice that the plaintiff was likely to send its cars from a distance. It is not alleged that the defendant had notice that the plaintiff had to bind itself to pay $900, [546] at the time when the *contract was made, and it nowhere is alleged that the defendant assumed any liability in respect of this uncertain element of charge. The same observations may be made with regard to the claim for loss of use of the tanks and to the final allegations as to sending the tanks from distant points. It is true that this last was alleged to have been in contemplation of the contract, if we give the plaintiff the benefit of the doubt in construing a somewhat confused sentence. But, having the contract before us, we can see that this ambiguous expression cannot be taken to mean more than notice, and notice of a fact which would depend upon the accidents of the future.

It is to be said further, with regard to the foregoing items, that they were the expenses which the plaintiff was willing to incur for performance. If it had received the oil, these were deductions from any profit which the plaintiff would have made. But, if it gets the difference between the contract price and the market price, it gets what represents the value of the oil in its hands, and to allow these items in addition would be making the defendant pay twice for the same thing.

It must not be forgotten that we are dealing with pleadings, not evidence, and with pleadings which, as we have said, evidently put the plaintiff's case as high as it possibly can be put. There are no inferences to be drawn, and therefore cases like Hammond v. Bussey, L. R. 20 Q. B. Div. 79, do not apply. It is a simple question of allegations which, by declining to amend, the plaintiff has admitted that it cannot reinforce. This consideration applies with special force to the attempt to hold the defendant liable for the breach of the plaintiff's contract with third persons. The allegation is that the fact that the plaintiff had contracts over was well known to the defendant, and that "defendant had contracted to that end with the plaintiff." Whether, if we were sitting as a jury, this would warrant an inference that the defendant assumed an additional liability, we need not consider. It is enough to say that it does not allege the conclusion of fact so definitely that it must be assumed to be true. With the contract before us it is in a high degree improbable that any such conclusion could have been made good.

The only other allegation needing to be dealt with is that *the defendant maliciously [547] caused the plaintiff to send the tanks a thousand miles, contemplating a breach of its contract. So far as this item has not been answered by what has been said, it is necessary only to add a few words. The fact alleged has no relation to the time of the contract. Therefore it cannot affect the damages, the measure of which was fixed at that time. The motive for the breach commonly is immaterial in an action on the contract. Grand Tower Min. Mfg. & Transp. Co. v. Phillips, 23 Wall. 471, 480, 23 L. ed. 71, 75; Wood's Mayne, Damages, § 45; 2 Sedgw. Damages, 8th ed. § 603. It is in this case. Whether, under any circumstances, it might give rise to an action of tort, is not material here. See Emmons v. Alvord, 177 Mass. 466, 470, 59 N. E. 126.

The allowance of the exceptions made the trial of the plea superfluous. If the question of fact was to be tried as to whether the amount of damages that fairly could be claimed was sufficient to give the court jurisdiction, the court had authority to try it. Wetmore v. Rymer, 169 U. S. 115, 121, 42 L. ed. 682, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 293; Act of March 3, 1875, 18 Stat. at L. 472, chap. 137, § 5, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 511. In coming to his conclusion, apart from what was apparent on the face of the pleadings, the judge no doubt was influenced largely by a letter from the plaintiff to the defendant, inclosing an itemized bill for $1,021.28. This letter suggested no further claim except for "any additional mileage we may have to pay." Of course, if the judge accepted the plaintiff's own view of its case as expressed here, the pretence of jurisdiction was at an end. Some attempt was made to make out this was an offer of compromise, and inadmissible. But the letter did not purport to be anything of the sort; it was an out and out adverse demand.

Judgment affirmed.

[548] *THOMAS P. QUEENAN, Plff. in Err.,
v.
TERRITORY OF OKLAHOMA.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 548-552.)

Evidence—nonexpert opinion as to sanity—homicide—instructions — disqualification of juror waived by failure to object.

1. A nonexpert witness cannot give his opinion formed since the commission of a crime, as to the accused's mental condition at the time the offense was committed, where his only knowledge in respect thereto was derived from his familiarity with the accused as a patron of the latter's barber shop.
2. An instruction to find defendant not guilty of murder if it should be found that he was not able to know that the act of killing was wrongful, and was not able to comprehend and understand the consequences of such act, is not open to the objection that it made it necessary for the jury to find that both conditions existed in order to acquit, where the condition of a verdict of guilty was made by the same instruction to be a finding beyond a reasonable doubt that the prisoner knew and understood that it was wrong to take the life, and was able to comprehend and understand the consequences of such act.
3. The right of defendant to object that a juror was disqualified because it appeared during the trial that he had been convicted of a felony, contrary to his statement on his voir dire, is waived by failure to raise the question until after verdict.

[No. 246.]

Argued April 16, 17, 1903. Decided June 1, 1903.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the Territory of Oklahoma to review a judgment which affirmed a conviction for murder. Affirmed.

See same case below, 11 Okla. 261, 71 Pac. 218.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Stilwell H. Russel argued the cause, and, with Messrs. J. W. Johnson, H. H. Howard, and C. B. Ames, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

A nonexpert, after stating the facts upon which it is based, may give his opinion as to mental condition.

Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Lathrop, 111 U. S. 612, 28 L. ed. 536, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 533.

And this opinion must be that of the witness at the time of his examination.

Runyan v. Price, 15 Ohio St. 1, 86 Am. Dec. 459.

NOTE.—As to nonexpert opinion of sanity or insanity—see note to Ryder v. State (Ga.) 38 L. R. A. 721, and Dexter v. Hall, 21 L. ed. U. S. 73.

190 U. S.

And the fact that the witness did not form his opinion at the time he observed the facts on which it is based, but afterwards, does not affect its competency.

Buswell, Insanity, § 246; Hathaway v. National L. Ins. Co. 48 Vt. 335.

It is held to be the correct practice to call for the opinion of the witness at the time of the delivery of his testimony, for the reason that subsequent consideration and reflection may have changed an opinion formed at the time the facts were observed by him.

Runyan v. Price, 15 Ohio St. 1, 86 Am. Dec. 468; 1 Clevenger, Med. Jur. 589.

An opinion is but a conclusion arrived at from an ascertained condition, and, expressed by one who has had opportunities of observation, becomes the statement of a fact.

Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Lathrop, 111 U. S. 612, 28 L. ed. 536, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 533.

The incapacity to know the wrongfulness of an act does not embrace necessarily the incapacity to understand the nature and consequences of the same. The conditions are not convertible.

Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. Terry, 15 Wall. 581, 21 L. ed. 236; 1 Clevenger, Med. Jur. of Insanity, p. 410, § 6; Ritter v. Mutual L. Ins. Co. 169 U. S. 149, 150, 42 L. ed. 696, 697, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 300.

The law requires that an accused be ignorant of the character of the act as a crime, and not of the mere act itself.

Bigelow v. Berkshire L. Ins. Co. 93 U. S. 284, 23 L. ed. 918.

A mind so far bankrupt as to be unable to know the wrongfulness of an act, and unable to comprehend and understand the physical consequences or effect of the act, is reduced to such extremity as to make an act no more the act of such a mind, in the sense of the law, than if impelled by irresistible physical power.

Manhattan L. Ins. Co. v. Broughton, 109 U. S. 131, 27 L. ed. 882, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 99.

An insurance company cannot, as a condition precedent to the payment of a policy upon the life of an assured who has taken his own life, require it to be shown that, at the time of the act, he was incapable of knowing its wrongfulness and incapable of understanding the consequences of it, for the reason that if the intellect is thus distressed it would be so far bereft of reason that the act would be no more his act in the sense of the law than that of the instrument used when committing it.

Manhattan L. Ins. Co. v. Broughton, 109 U. S. 131, 27 L. ed. 882, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 99; Charter Oak L. Ins. Co. v. Rodel, 95 U. S. 241, 24 L. ed. 436; Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. Terry, 15 Wall. 581, 21 L. ed. 236; Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Akens, 150 U. S. 473, 37 L. ed. 1149, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 155.

In construing the Constitution, we look to the history of the times, and examine the state of things when it was framed and adopted.

Rhode Island v. Massachusetts, 12 Pet. 657, 9 L. ed. 1233.

The history of the times discloses that the Constitution was framed in the light of the common law.

United States v. Wong Kim Ark, 169 U. S. 649, 42 L. ed. 890, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 456.

The "jury" mentioned in the Constitution means a common-law jury, and "according to the principles of the common law" means the common law of England, and not the common law of the several states, for to undertake to interpret according to the common law of the several states with their modifications would be to make it mean one thing at one place and something different in another.

Capital Traction Co. v. Hof, 174 U. S. 1, 43 L. ed. 873, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 580.

The adoption of the Constitution superseded the laws of the Confederation, but some of them were continued in force by the Federal Congress, and among them the ordinance of 1787, guaranteeing to the people of the Northwest Territory that they "shall always be entitled to the benefits of the writ of habeas corpus, and of the trial by jury, of a proportionate representation of the people in the legislature, and of judicial proceedings according to the course of the common law."

1 Stat. at L. 50, chap. 8.

And when finally the territories were authorized to adopt codes and the proceedings had thereunder were ratified by Congress, it was upon the express condition, "that no party has been or shall be deprived of the right of trial by jury."

18 Stat. at L. 27, chap. 80.

The defendant could not waive a constitutional right.

Thompson v. Utah, 170 U. S. 343, 42 L. ed. 1061, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 620.

There are some things a defendant may waive even in a capital case. But it appears they are such things as concern him alone, such as are for his benefit, in way of privilege, and not such as are general and apply to all cases wherein persons may be accused of crime, for there is a public interest in the administration of the criminal law.

Hopt v. Utah, 110 U. S. 574, 28 L. ed. 262, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 202; Day v. Territory, 2 Okla. 409, 37 Pac. 806.

Where the instructions are contradictory or inconsistent with each other; or if they were calculated to confuse and mislead the jury, or if they must have left the jury in doubt or uncertainty as to the law applicable, then the judgment should be reversed.

Somers v. Pumphrey, 24 Ind. 241; Kirland v. State, 43 Ind. 154, 13 Am. Rep. 386.

An objectionable instruction cannot be corrected by other instructions which are not objectionable, nor can an erroneous instruction be corrected by one not erroneous.

Guetig v. State, 63 Ind. 282; People v. Bush, 65 Cal. 129, 3 Pac. 590.

It is important that the deliberations of the jury be not influenced by an improper instruction.

Shaw v. People, 81 Ill. 151.

The language of the instructions ought to be unambiguous,—direct and comprehensible by persons not educated in the law, such as the men addressed will understand.

1 Bishop, Crim. Proc. 3d ed. § 980.

The grand jury with one or more unqualified members is an illegally constituted body, and its presentments void.

Dovey v. Hobson, 6 Taunt. 460; United States v. Wilson, 6 McLean, 610, Fed. Cas. No. 16,737; Com. v. Parker, 2 Pick. 550; Doyle v. State, 17 Ohio, 225.

The court should have declared a mistrial.

United States v. Haskell, 4 Wash. C. C. 410, Fed. Cas. No. 15,321; Com. v. McCormick, 130 Mass. 62, 39 Am. Rep. 423; Simmons v. United States, 142 U. S. 148, 35 L. ed. 968, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 171; United States v. Morris, 1 Curt. C. C. 23, Fed. Cas. No. 15,815.

Mr. J. C. Robberts, argued the cause, and, with Mr. C. H. Woods, filed a brief for defendant in error:

Under proper circumstances, the opinions of nonexperts upon the question of sanity are admissible; but they are not admitted, except when tested and when they pass the test of all the established rules of evidence, applicable generally.

State v. Pike, 49 N. H. 401, 6 Am. Rep. 533.

They are not admitted when they violate the established rules of evidence relating to relevancy or pertinency.

Cochrane v. Little, 71 Md. 323, 18 Atl. 701.

They are not admissible when they violate the doctrines of relevancy.

State v. Pike, 49 N. H. 401, 6 Am. Rep. 533; Sullivan v. Hugly, 32 Ga. 316.

They are not admitted when, from the facts detailed, it is as possible for the jury to arrive at an opinion as it was for the witness.

Wharton, Crim. Ev. § 459.

A wide discretion is vested in the trial court to determine whether, from the evidence disclosed by the witness, he has shown that degree of intimate acquaintanceship which would enable the court to receive his opinion with reference to sanity or insanity.

Colee v. State, 75 Ind. 511; Sutherland v. Hankins, 56 Ind. 349; Com. v. Sturtivant, 117 Mass. 122, 19 Am. Rep. 401; Nunes v. Perry, 113 Mass. 274.

A known cause of challenge is always waived by withholding it or raising it as an objection after verdict.

Thompson, Trials, § 114; Hollingsworth v. Duane, Wall. C. C. 147, Fed. Cas. No. 6,618; Brewer v. Jacobs, 22 Fed. 243; Hill v. Yates, 12 East, 229; Thomp. & M. Juries, § 295 et nota; 17 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 1161, note 5.

The Oklahoma statute is but confirmatory of the common law, so far as appellant's right to complain after verdict is concerned.

4 Cooley, Bl. Com. 3d ed. p. 350; 2 Hale P. C. 293; Bacon, Abr. "Juries," 365-66; Brewer v. Jacobs, 22 Fed. 217; Fisher v. Yoder, 53 Fed. 565; State v. Ready, 44 Kan. 700, 26 Pac. 58; State v. Jackson, 27 Kan. 581, 41 Am. Rep. 424; Cox v. People, 80 N. Y. 500; Stewart v. State, 15 Ohio St. 159;

Dilworth v. Com. 12 Gratt. 689, 65 Am. Dec. 264; Bristow v. Com. 15 Gratt. 646; Childress v. Ford, 10 Smedes & M. 25; People v. Stewart, 64 Cal. 60, 28 Pac. 112.

Under the common law if the objection that the juror is disqualified is not interposed at trial it is waived and the person disqualified may constitute a juror of twelve.

1 Co. Litt. § 234, pp. 155a-158b; Re Chelsea Waterworks Co. 10 Exch. 731; Hill v. Yates, 12 East, 229; Kohl v. Lehlback, 160 U. S. 293, 40 L. ed. 432, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 304; Hollingsworth v. Duane, Wall. C. C. 147, Fed. Cas. No. 6,618.

When a party has had an opportunity of challenge, no disqualification of a juror entitles him to a new trial after verdict.

Wassum v. Feeney, 121 Mass. 93, 23 Am. Rep. 258; Jeffries v. Randall, 14 Mass. 205; Woodward v. Dean, 113 Mass. 297; People v. Scott, 56 Mich. 154, 22 N. W. 274; Leeper v. State, 29 Tex. App. 63, 14 S. W. 398; Lane v. State, 29 Tex. App. 310, 15 S. W. 827; Mays v. State, 36 Tex. Crim. Rep. 437, 37 S. W. 721; People v. Mortier, 58 Cal. 262; Garrett v. Weinberg, 54 S. C. 127, 31 S. E. 341; Mew v. Charleston & S. R. Co. 55 S. C. 90, 32 S. E. 828; State v. Hartley, 22 Nev. 342, 28 L. R. A. 33, 40 Pac. 374; State v. Pickett, 103 Iowa, 714, 39 L. R. A. 302, 73 N. W. 346; State v. Robertson, 54 S. C. 147, 31 S. E. 868; State v. Powers, 10 Or. 145, 45 Am. Rep. 138.

A criminal has no vested constitutional right in the practice and procedure under which he is to be tried.

Maxwell v. Dow, 176 U. S. 581, 44 L. ed. 597, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 449, 494; Iowa C. R. Co. v. Iowa, 160 U. S. 389, 40 L. ed. 467, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 344; Hornbuckle v. Toombs, 18 Wall. 648, 21 L. ed. 966; Hershfield v. Griffith, 18 Wall. 657, 21 L. ed. 968; Davis v. Bilsland, 18 Wall. 659, 21 L. ed. 969; Miles v. United States, 103 U. S. 304, 26 L. ed. 481.

The number of grand jurors necessary to find an indictment in the territory must be determined by the territorial laws, and not the acts of Congress.

Reynolds v. United States, 98 U. S. 145, 25 L. ed. 244.

The laws of the territorial legislature providing the mode and manner of impaneling grand and petit jurors must govern in the courts of the territory.

Clinton v. Englebrecht, 13 Wall. 434, 20 L. ed. 659; Thiede v. Utah, 159 U. S. 514, 40 L. ed. 241, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 62.

The 5th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States has the same relation to the territory that the 14th Amendment has to the states. The following cases have decided beyond question that the 14th Amendment does not operate to control the practice and procedure of state courts:

Munn v. Illinois, 94 U. S. 114, 24 L. ed. 77; Kelly v. Pittsburgh, 104 U. S. 78, 26 L. ed. 658; Nashville, C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Alabama, 128 U. S. 96, 32 L. ed. 352, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 238, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 28; Hallinger v. Davis, 146 U. S. 314, 36 L. ed. 986, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 105; United States v. 190 U. S.

Cruikshank, 92 U. S. 542, 23 L. ed. 588; Maxwell v. Dow, 176 U. S. 581, 44 L. ed. 597, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 449, 494; Scott v. Toledo, 1 L. R. A. 688, 36 Fed. 385.

There are many grounds for challenge and disqualification under the common law that are entirely at variance with our institutions.

1 Co. Litt. § 234, pp. 155a-158a; 2 Sharswood, Bl. Com. pp. 352, 353, 354.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an indictment for murder, upon which the plaintiff in error has been found guilty, and has been sentenced to be hanged. It comes here by writ of error to the supreme court of the territory of Oklahoma, that court having decided that there *was [549] no error in the proceedings and having affirmed the judgment. 11 Okla. 261, 71 Pac. 218. The errors assigned will be taken up in the order in which they were argued.

1. The only defense was insanity. A lawyer, called as a witness for the defendant, stated that he knew the prisoner quite well; that the prisoner was his barber for some years, and that he saw him on the day before the killing. He then described the appearance and conduct of the prisoner, and said that at the time he did not notice any difference from the prisoner's usual demeanor. He then was asked if, since the killing, he had formed an opinion as to the prisoner's mental condition at that time. This opinion he was not allowed to state, and this is alleged as error. It will be seen that the witness was allowed to sum up his impressions received at the time. The court said in terms that he might state any condition that existed then or any impression that it made upon the witness's mind as to the prisoner's condition. That is all that was decided in Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Lathrop, 111 U. S. 612, 28 L. ed. 536, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 533. Some states exclude such opinions, even when formed at the time. But, as is pointed out in the case cited, it is impossible for a witness to reproduce all the minute details which he saw and heard, and most witnesses make but a meagre and halting effort. Therefore, in this as in many other instances, after stating such particulars as he can remember,—generally, only the more striking facts,—an ordinary witness is permitted to sum up the total remembered and unremembered impressions of the senses by stating the opinion which they produced. To allow less may deprive a party of important and valuable evidence that can be got at in no other way. But, on the other hand, to allow more, to let a witness who is not an expert state an opinion upon sanity which he has formed after the event, when a case has arisen and become a matter of public discussion, must be justified, if at all, on other grounds. It is unnecessary to lay down the rule that it never can be done, for instance, when the opinion clearly appears to sum up a series of impressions received at different times. Hathaway v. National L. Ins. Co. 48 Vt.

[550] 335, 350. It is enough to say that, at least, it should be done with caution and not without special *reasons. In this case the only knowledge shown by the witness was the familiarity of a man with his barber. So far as the evidence went, his present opinion might have been the result of interested argument, and, leaving such suggestions on one side, no reason of necessity or propriety was shown for the statement that would not have applied to any other man who had had his hair cut in the prisoner's shop. It does not appear that there was error in the ruling of the court.

2. The next error alleged is in the following instruction of the court:

"Homicide committed by one who has not sufficient knowledge and understanding to understand right from wrong and to comprehend and understand the consequences of his act is excusable for any act in reference to which his mind is in such weakened condition. But it is not every derangement of the mind that will excuse one for the commission of crime. If one has sufficient mind and understanding to know right from wrong regarding the particular act, and is able to comprehend and understand the consequences of such act, the law recognizes him as sane, and holds him responsible for such acts; and in this connection, if you should find beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant took the life of Ella Queenan, as charged in the indictment, and that at the time of such homicide he knew and understood that it was wrong to take her life, and was able to comprehend and understood the consequences of such act, then and in that event it will be your duty to find the defendant guilty of murder, as charged in the indictment. But, on the other hand, if you should find that he was not able to know that the act of taking her life was wrongful, and was not able to comprehend and understand the consequences of such act, then you should find the defendant not guilty."

By § 1852 of the Oklahoma Statutes of 1893, "all persons are capable of committing crimes, except . . . all persons of unsound mind, including persons temporarily or partially deprived of reason, upon proof that, at the time of committing the act charged against them, they were incapable of knowing its wrongfulness." It was argued very earnestly that the latter part of the instruction added a second condition [551] to acquittal *by directing it if the jury found that the prisoner was not able to know that the act was wrongful, "and was not able to comprehend and understand the consequences of such act." But, on the other hand, the condition of a verdict of guilty was made to be a finding that the prisoner knew and understood that it was wrong to take the life, "and was able to comprehend and understood the consequences of such act." So that the most material part of the charge, that relating to conviction, was favorable to the prisoner. If it be supposed that such abstract language was remembered and was nicely considered and analyzed by the jury, the total effect of the charge was that, unless the two conditions concurred, the prisoner must be acquitted. We do not mean to imply that any part of the instruction, fairly understood, was wrong, but for purposes of decision it is enough to say what we have said. The instructions asked and refused were covered by that which was given as stated above.

3. In the course of the trial the government announced that since the last adjournment it had been informed that one of the jurors, named, had been convicted in Nebraska of what, by the law of that state, was a felony,—grand larceny,—at a time and place mentioned, contrary to the statement of the juror on the voir dire. We assume, for the purposes of decision, that this disqualified the juror from serving in any case. Okla. Stat. §§ 3093, 5182, 5183. The court asked the counsel for the prisoner what they desired to do, and its intimation indicated that if the objection were pressed the juror would be excused. This, of course, meant that the trial would have to be begun over again. The counsel for the prisoner answered that they had nothing to say, and the trial went on. It now is argued that the defendant was deprived of a constitutional right, which he could not waive. Thompson v. Utah, 170 U. S. 343, 42 L. ed. 1061, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 620. The contrary plainly is the law as well for the territories as for the states. See Kohl v. Lehlback, 160 U. S. 293, 299, 40 L. ed. 432, 434, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 304 et seq.; Raub v. Carpenter, 187 U. S. 159, 164, ante, 119, 121, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 72.

It is argued that the court could not have permitted a challenge at that time, because the statutes of Oklahoma, § 5177, provided that "the court, for good cause shown, may permit a *juror to be challenged after he is [552] sworn to try the cause, but not after the testimony has been partially heard." This statute cannot be construed as going merely to the order of procedure,—as depriving a party of the right to challenge pending the trial, but as preserving the right for the purpose of a motion for a new trial. Either it does not apply to the case of a disqualification discovered, as this was, after a part of the evidence was in, or it purports to take away the right altogether. Whatever may be the true construction of the last clause, the court seems to have been ready to stop the trial. But if the court's view was wrong, if the statute is constitutional,—as to which we do not mean to express a doubt,—the prisoner had no right to complain; and if it is not, it was his duty to object at the time, if he was going to object at all. He could not speculate on the chances of getting a verdict and then set up that he had not waived his rights.

Judgment affirmed.

FREEDOM HUTCHINSON, Trustee, Appt.,
v.
OTIS, WILCOX, & COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 552-556.)

Bankruptcy—proof of claim—effect of record of satisfaction by invalid attachments—amendment of proof—independent ground of appeal—allowance of lien waived by mistake.

1. Creditors of a bankrupt, who had collected their claim by attachments in suits begun less than four months before the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, are, notwithstanding the entry of satisfaction of record in such suits, entitled to have the proof of their claim against the bankrupt's estate allowed, where on demand of the trustee in bankruptcy they subsequently paid over to him the full amount of the debts, although the payment, for convenience of counsel, was delayed for a day or two beyond one year after the adjudication in bankruptcy.
2. An amended proof of claim against a bankrupt's estate, filed with the trustee's consent more than a year after adjudication, may be substituted for the defective original proof, although by the bankruptcy act of 1898, § 57n (30 Stat. at L. 561, chap. 541, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3418), proofs subsequent to one year after adjudication are forbidden.
3. A court of bankruptcy may allow an amended proof of claim against a bankrupt's estate, filed with the trustee's consent, to be substituted for the defective original proof, although an appeal has been taken by the trustee to the circuit court of appeals from a decree of such court permitting the owners of the claim to prove as creditors.
4. A petition filed in a bankruptcy court by creditors of the bankrupt, asserting a lien on the proceeds of a seat in the stock exchange, which had not been insisted upon because they had collected their claims by what they mistakenly supposed were valid attachments of the bankrupt's property, is a bankruptcy proceeding under the bankruptcy act of 1898, § 2, cl. 7, within the meaning of § 25, regulating appeals in bankruptcy proceedings, and a decree thereon is, therefore, not an independent ground of appeal, where it was not, within the meaning of § 25a, 3, "a judgment allowing or rejecting a debt or claim of $500 or over."
5. Creditors of a bankrupt who fail to insist upon a lien on proceeds of a seat in a stock exchange which had formerly belonged to the bankrupt, because they have collected their claims by what they mistakenly supposed were valid attachments of the bankrupt's property, are entitled to have such lien allowed in the bankruptcy court, where no one has changed his position on the faith of their waiver.

[No. 634.]

Submitted May 4, 1903. Decided June 1, 1903.

APPEAL from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the First Circuit to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the District Court for the District of Massachusetts allowing proof of a claim in bankruptcy. Affirmed.
190 U. S.

See same case below, 53 C. C. A. 419, 115 Fed. 937.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Frederic D. McKenney and Freedom Hutchinson submitted the cause for appellant:

The record of satisfaction duly set up would have been a bar in the courts of New York to any further action upon the judgment by Otis, Wilcox, & Company, or upon the claim upon which such judgment was based, so long as the record entry remained unchanged.

Taylor v. Ranney, 4 Hill. 619; Dundee Nat. Bank v. Wood, 30 N. Y. S. R. 608, 9 N. Y. Supp. 351; Todd v. Botchford, 86 N. Y. 517; Crotty v. McKenzie, 10 Jones & S. 192.

The fact that bankruptcy proceedings intervened while the action begun in New York by Otis, Wilcox, & Company against the bankrupts was still pending did not affect the New York proceedings, nor in any way nullify the records made in that court.

Eyster v. Gaff, 91 U. S. 521, 23 L. ed. 403.

Such record of satisfaction duly set up has the same force and effect that it had in New York, in all courts, both state and Federal, within the United States.

Mills v. Duryee, 7 Cranch, 481, 3 L. ed. 411.

The allowance of a substituted proof of claim after the expiration of a year from the time of adjudication was plainly prohibited by the bankrupt act, § 57n.

Re Moebius, 116 Fed. 47.

The trustee's appeal was perfected on November 6, 1901, and the case was then removed from the district court. It was not within the power of the judge of the district court to allow amendments or pass orders in regard to a case which was no longer in his court.

Draper v. Davis, 102 U. S. 370, 26 L. ed. 121; Keyser v. Farr, 105 U. S. 265, 26 L. ed. 1025.

The question of priority in payment, or of the validity of a lien claimed by a creditor who has a provable debt, is an incident of the allowance of the claim, and reviewable by the circuit court of appeals on an appeal from such allowance.

Cunningham v. German Ins. Bank, 43 C. A. 377, 103 Fed. 932, 4 Am. B. R. 192.

The petition filed in the bankruptcy court by Otis, Wilcox, & Company, praying that the proceeds of the seat be paid to them, was in its nature an intervening petition to reach a fund in the registry of the court.

Krippendorf v. Hyde, 110 U. S. 276, 285, 28 L. ed. 145, 148, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 27; Hinckley v. Gilman, C. & S. R. Co. 94 U. S. 467, 24 L. ed. 166; Van Norden v. Morton, 99 U. S. 378, 25 L. ed. 453; Williams v. Morgan, 111 U. S. 684, 28 L. ed. 559, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 638; Gumbel v. Pitkin, 113 U. S. 545, 28 L. ed. 1128, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 616; Gumbel v. Pitkin, 124 U. S. 131, 145, 31 L. ed. 374, 378, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 379.

The provisions of the bankrupt act in regard to appeals do not in any way limit the scope of the judiciary act of 1891.

Elliott v. Toepfner, 187 U. S. 327, 334, ante, 200, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 133.

And even when the question arises in the bankruptcy court, the right of appeal to this court from the circuit court of appeals is not limited to the cases enumerated in § 25, ¶ b (1), of the bankrupt act.

Page v. Edmunds, 187 U. S. 596, ante, 318, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 200.

Messrs. John C. Gray and Roland Gray submitted the cause for appellee:

Under the bankrupt act of 1867, appeals from the allowance of proofs of claim were not allowed to be carried to the Supreme Court.

Wiswall v. Campbell, 93 U. S. 347, 23 L. ed. 923; Leggett v. Allen, 110 U. S. 741, 28 L. ed. 313, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 195.

The fact that a trustee in bankruptcy is a party to a suit, or that it concerns his rights as trustee to certain property, does not raise a Federal question, unless the question in issue involves the construction of part of the bankrupt act, or some other Federal statute.

Scott v. Kelly, 22 Wall. 57, 22 L. ed. 729; McKenna v. Simpson, 129 U. S. 506, 32 L. ed. 771, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 365.

That one of the parties to a suit claims rights under a law of the United States, or an authority or privilege derived therefrom, does not show that the question involved is a Federal one. The construction of the statute, or the validity of the authority or privilege under it, must be the point really at issue in the case, and on which a decision adverse to the appellant was rendered.

Boatmen's Sav. Bank v. State Sav. Asso. 114 U. S. 265, 29 L. ed. 174, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 878; Blackburn v. Portland Gold Min. Co. 175 U. S. 571, 576, 44 L. ed. 276, 279, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 222; De Lamar's Nevada Gold Min. Co. v. Nesbitt, 177 U. S. 523, 44 L. ed. 872, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 715; Avery v. Popper, 179 U. S. 305, 314, 45 L. ed. 203, 206, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 94.

The claim of the attaching creditors was properly allowed.

Willis v. Jelineck, 27 Minn. 18, 6 N. W. 373.

If there was any question as to a law of New York, which might have been raised, it was a question of construction, and not of validity.

Johnson v. New York L. Ins. Co. 187 U. S. 491, ante, 273, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 194.

Otis, Wilcox, & Company did not offer to prove the judgment in the garnishment case, which was rendered after the adjudication of bankruptcy. It proved its debt as it existed at the time of the bankruptcy; and that debt was not, for the purpose of bankruptcy proceedings, merged in the judgment.

Boynton v. Ball, 121 U. S. 457, 465, 30 L. ed. 985, 986, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 981.

The substituted proof of claim presented by the appellee was properly allowed by the district court.

Re Parkes, 10 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 82, Fed. Cas. No. 10,754; Re Baxter, 12 Fed. 72; Re Glass, 119 Fed. 509.

The jurisdiction of the Supreme Court under the act of March 3, 1891, was not widened by § 24a of the bankrupt act of 1898.

First Nat. Bank v. Klug, 186 U. S. 202, 46 L. ed. 1127, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 899.

An appeal to the Supreme Court, from the circuit court and the circuit court of appeals, lies only from final decrees.

McLish v. Roff, 141 U. S. 661, 35 L. ed. 893, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 118; Kirwan v. Murphy, 170 U. S. 205, 209, 42 L. ed. 1009, 1010, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 592.

None of the orders and decrees made in the course of a bankruptcy proceeding are final decrees for the purposes of appeal, in the absence of provisions of the bankruptcy act expressly giving an appeal.

Wiswall v. Campbell, 93 U. S. 347, 348, 23 L. ed. 923. See also Sandusky v. First Nat. Bank, 23 Wall. 289, 23 L. ed. 155; Conro v. Crane, 94 U. S. 441, 24 L. ed. 145.

The proceeding by Otis, Wilcox, & Company to establish its lien on the proceeds of the stock exchange seat was a "proceeding in bankruptcy."

Bardes v. First Nat. Bank, 178 U. S. 524, 534, 44 L. ed. 1175, 1180, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1000.

The court is empowered to cause the estates of bankrupts to be collected, reduced to money, and distributed, and determine controversies in relation thereto, except as herein otherwise provided.

Re Whitener, 44 C. C. A. 434, 105 Fed. 180; Re McCallum, 113 Fed. 393.

The determination of the justice of an assertion of a priority, or of a lien, as against other creditors, is a part of the administration of the estate, and not the allowance or rejection of a claim against the estate.

Re Whitener, 44 C. C. A. 434, 105 Fed. 180; Re Worcester County, 42 C. C. A. 637, 102 Fed. 808; York's Case, 1 Abb. (U. S.) 503, Fed. Cas. No. 18,139.

The question whether or not a "debt or claim" of a certain amount fixed by the proof is entitled to be paid in full, or is to be paid in full up to a certain sum, is independent of the question whether the "debt or claim" for which proof is offered is a just and valid debt. The latter question is to be appealed under § 25a, 3; the former cannot be appealed, but can be brought to the circuit court of appeals only by a petition for reversion under § 24b.

Re Whitener, 44 C. C. A. 434, 105 Fed. 180; Re Worcester County, 42 C. C. A. 637, 102 Fed. 808; Re Rouse, H. & Co. 33 C. C. A. 356, 63 U. S. App. 570, 91 Fed. 96; Re Richards, 37 C. C. A. 634, 96 Fed. 935; Re Hutchinson, 51 C. C. A. 159, 113 Fed. 202.

Under the bankrupt act of March 2, 1867, an appeal was given from the district court to the circuit court from the rejection of claims of creditors and the allowance of claims of creditors. This appeal did not extend to a question of the priorities of liens.

York's Case, 1 Abb. (U. S.) 503, Fed. Cas. No. 18,139.

Appeals under § 25a and petitions for revision under § 24b are mutually exclusive remedies; and when a question can be brought up to the circuit court of appeals by one method, the other cannot be employed.
190 U. S.

Re Worcester County, 42 C. C. A. 637, 102 Fed. 808; Re Eggert, 43 C. C. A. 1, 102 Fed. 735; Re Good, 39 C. C. A. 581, 99 Fed. 389.

A similar rule prevailed under the bankrupt act of 1867 as to appeals under § 8 of that act (Rev. Stat. § 4980), and petitions for revision under § 2 of the act (Rev. Stat. § 4986).

Re Alexander, 3 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 29, Fed. Cas. No. 160.

Mr Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an appeal from a decree of the circuit court of appeals affirming, on appeal, a decree of the district court, which allowed a proof of a claim in bankruptcy by the appellee. 53 C. C. A. 419, 115 Fed. 937. The appeal to this court was allowed by a justice of this court under the bankruptcy act, § 25b, 1 [30 Stat. at L. 553, chap. 541, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3432], and rule 36, 2, on grounds to be explained, and now is before us on a motion to dismiss or affirm. The facts, shortly stated, are as follows: Otis, Wilcox, & Co., having an admitted claim for $4,421.64, sued the bankrupts in New York and Illinois, and attached debts due to them, by trustee process. This was within four months before the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, and therefore was ineffectual as against the appellant by § 67 of the act. But Otis, Wilcox, & Co., supposing that they had valid attachments, took judgments by default, and collected their debt from the parties trusted, agreeing to save the latter harmless from liability to others. Satisfaction was entered of record in each suit. Subsequently the trustee in bankruptcy demanded payment of these debtors of the bankrupt, and, as they had no defense, Otis, Wilcox, & Co. paid over to the trustee the full amount of the respective debts. Otis, Wilcox, & Co. filed a claim in bankruptcy, and were allowed to prove their claim.

The trustee in bankruptcy took the ground before the referee, and seems to have adhered to it, that full faith and credit to the record of satisfaction forbade the allowance of the proof. It was because of this contention that the writ of error was allowed. The jurisdiction of this court is established, and the motion to dismiss must be overruled. But so little attention was paid to the question, and the contention seems to us so unmeritorious, that we think that there was color for the motion, and we therefore take up the motion to affirm.

No one denies the fact or effect of the record of satisfaction. N. Y. Code Civ. Proc. § 1264; Crotty v. McKenzie, 10 Jones & S. 192, 201. What is said is that, although it [554] is true that on a certain day a judgment on the appellee's claim was satisfied, since that time the satisfaction had been undone and the money restored. It is objected that Otis, Wilcox, & Co. did not purport to restore to the appellant what they had received from the parties indebted to the bankrupt estate, but simply paid the debts of those parties. But names make no difference in this case. There was no identified fund. When Otis, Wilcox, & Co. paid the debts out of which they had received satisfaction, they undid the satisfaction, and the trustee in bankruptcy knew it. We see no sufficient ground on which he can deny the consequence that the right to prove revived. That right cannot be made to depend on the views which the New York and Illinois courts may entertain as to the propriety of correcting the record of satisfaction to conform to present conditions, it having been right when it was made. Whether the record is corrected or not, it cannot be conclusive as to events of a later date. If it had been vacated, it would have restored the rights of the creditors by relation. Taylor v. Ranney, 4 Hill, 619, 623, 624.

The only difficulty is this: The adjudication of bankruptcy was on April 27, 1900. A petition and the original proof of claim of Otis, Wilcox, & Co. were filed on March 9, 1901. At this time the trustee in bankruptcy was suing for the debts in question, but, by agreement, time was given to the counsel for Otis, Wilcox, & Co. to look into the matter. The payment to the trustee by the last-named firm, although agreed upon before, was not made until April 29, 1901, more than a year after the adjudication, so that, technically, the record of satisfaction really was a bar until the time for proof had gone by. Subsequently, on November 12, 1901, an amended proof was filed by consent of the trustee, and was allowed as of November 4. We are of opinion that when the trustee accepted payment from Otis, Wilcox, & Co. in pursuance of his previous agreement, with this proof on file, and in this way undid the satisfaction of record, he must be taken to have done so on the understanding that he accepted the consequence that the bar to the proof was removed. We follow the interpretation of the circuit court of appeals, that the admitted belief of Otis, Wilcox, & Co., *that [555] they had been paid, was due to a mistake of fact, and the agreement to settle seemingly having been made within the year, the delay of actual payment for a day or two beyond, for convenience of counsel, ought not to affect the result.

The appeal being here, the trustee argues two other questions. The first concerns the amended proof. The proof of debt originally filed is admitted to have been defective. A substituted proof was filed by consent of the trustee more than a year after the adjudication, the facts having been agreed in the meantime and an appeal taken. It is argued that the allowance of the amendment is within § 57n, forbidding proofs subsequent to one year after the adjudication, etc. The construction contended for is too narrow. The claim upon which the original proof was made is the same as that ultimately proved. The clause relied upon cannot be taken to exclude amendments. An example similar in principle is the allowance of an amendment setting up the same cause of action after the statute of limitations has run, when the original declaration was bad. Sanger v. Newton, 134 Mass. 308. See Re Parkes, 10 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 82, Fed. Cas. No. 10,754; Re Baxter, 12 Fed. 72; Re Glass, 119 Fed. 509. The proceedings remained in the district court, notwithstanding the appeal, and the amendment properly was allowed there. It was little more than a form, as the facts had been agreed of record, and the filing was assented to by the trustee.

A petition was filed by Otis, Wilcox, & Co., asserting a lien on the proceeds of a seat in the New York Stock Exchange, which formerly belonged to the bankrupts. This lien had not been insisted on by Otis, Wilcox, & Co., because of their impression that they had been paid effectually. No one having changed his position on the faith of their waiver, the district court allowed the lien. The circuit court of appeals held that this portion of the decree of the district court was not subject to an appeal to the circuit court of appeals. The argument chiefly relied upon by the appellant is that this is an intervening petition to reach a fund in court, and is not a proceeding in bankruptcy. Under the circumstances of this case it seems to us that the petition was incident to the claim **Cunningham v. German Ins. Bank*, [556] 41 C. C. A. 609, 101 Fed. 977, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 192), and was a bankruptcy proceeding under § 2, el. 7, within the meaning of § 25, regulating appeals in bankruptcy proceedings, and that the decree upon it was not "a judgment allowing or rejecting a debt or claim of five hundred dollars or over," within § 25a, 3, and was not an independent ground of appeal. See Re Whitener, 44 C. C. A. 434, 105 Fed. 180, 186; Re Worcester County, 42 C. C. A. 637, 102 Fed. 808, 813; Re Rouse, H. & Co. 33 C. C. A. 356, 63 U. S. App. 570, 91 Fed. 96; Re York, 4 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 479, 483, Fed. Cas. No. 18,139. If the question should be held to come up as incident to the appeal on the proof (Cunningham v. German Ins. Bank, 41 C. C. A. 609, 101 Fed. 977, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 192), we see no error in the decree of the district court. It allowed Otis, Wilcox, & Co. to correct a mistake expressly made the ground of their waiver, no new rights having intervened. We deal somewhat summarily with this point, because the merits were brought before the circuit court of appeals by a petition for revision under § 24b, and were disposed of very satisfactorily, so far as appears on that petition. We find no error in the decree.

Decree affirmed.

190 U. S.

MEMORANDA

OF

CASES DISPOSED OF WITHOUT OPINIONS.

[557] MINNEAPOLIS & ST. LOUIS RAILROAD COMPANY, Plaintiff in Error, v. DAVID D. GANO et al. [No. 279.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Iowa.

Mr. Albert E. Clarke for plaintiff in error.

Mr. Chapman W. Maupin for defendants in error.

May 4, 1903. Judgment affirmed with costs and interest, on the authority of Electric Co. v. Dow, 166 U. S. 489, 41 L. ed. 1088, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 645; Atchison, T. & S. P. R. Co. v. Matthews, 174 U. S. 96, 43 L. ed. 309, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 609; St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Paul, 173 U. S. 404, 43 L. ed. 746, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 419. See case below, Gano v. Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. 114 Iowa, 713, 55 L. R. A. 263, 87 N. W. 714.

GEORGE E. GEE, Plaintiff in Error, v. HENRY D. GEE. [No. 285.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Minnesota.

Mr. Thomas G. Frost for plaintiff in error.

Messrs. Jed L. Washburn and Leon E. Lum for defendant in error.

May 4, 1903. Writ of error dismissed for the want of jurisdiction, on the authority of Beaupre v. Noyes, 138 U. S. 402, 34 L. ed. 992, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 296; Haseltine v. Central Nat. Bank, 183 U. S. 130, 46 L. ed. 117, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 49. See case below, Gee v. Gee, 84 Minn. 384, 87 N. W. 1116.

Ex parte: IN THE MATTER OF HELEN POST, Petitioner. [No. —, Original.]

Motion for Leave to File Petition for a Writ of Habeas Corpus.

Messrs. H. Bisbee and George C. Bedell for petitioner.

Mr. Assistant General Purdy opposing.

June 1, 1903. Denied, on the authority of Re Mirzan, 119 U. S. 584, 30 L. ed. 513, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 341; Re Chapman, 156 U. S. 211, 39 L. ed. 401, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 331; Re Belt, 159 U. S. 95, 40 L. ed. 88, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 987.

190 U. S.

A. NELSON LEWIS, Petitioner, v. CHARLES H. TROWBRIDGE, *Trustee, etc. [No. 671.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

Mr. A. Nelson Lewis, propria persona.

Messrs. John K. Beach, Edmund Wetmore, and Frank W. Hackett for respondent.

May 4, 1903. Denied.

FULLER & JOHNSON MANUFACTURING COMPANY, Petitioner, v. A. J. SEILER. [No. 673.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit.

Messrs. Wm. R. Bagley and Robert M. Bashford for petitioner.

Mr. Charles M. Peek for respondent.

May 4, 1903. Denied.

WESTERN ASSURANCE COMPANY OF TORONTO, CANADA, Petitioner, v. HENRI M. DE FARCONNET et al. [No. 678.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

Mr. Harrington Putnam for petitioner.

Mr. Wilhelmus Mynderse for respondent.

May 4, 1903. Denied.

AMERICAN NATIONAL BANK OF DENVER, Petitioner, v. SAMUEL W. WATKINS. [No. 680.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit.

Mr. T. J. O'Donnell, for petitioner.

No counsel for respondent.

May 4, 1903. Denied.

SUPREME COUNCIL AMERICAN LEGION OF HONOR, Petitioner, v. AUGUSTA E. ORCUTT. [No. 674.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit.

Messrs. Henry Newbegin, Robert Newbegin, and A. J. Carr for petitioner.

Mr. Alexander L. Smith for respondent.

May 18, 1903. Denied.

ANGLO-AMERICAN PROVISION COMPANY, Petitioner, v. UNITED STATES. [No. 681.]
 [559] Petition for a Writ of Certiorari *to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit.

Mr. James C. MeShane for petitioner.

Messrs. Attorney General and Solicitor General Hoyt for respondent.

May 18, 1903. Denied.

OCEAN STEAMSHIP COMPANY, Petitioner, v. JOHN RICHARD CROOKS. [No. 685.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

Messrs. Julien T. Davies and Frederic D. McKenney for petitioner.

Mr. Henry Galbraith Ward for respondent.

May 18, 1903. Denied.

WILLIAM B. GURNEY, JR., et al., Petitioners, v. STEAMBOAT JOHN H. STARIN, ETC. [No. 686.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

Messrs. Samuel Park and Jas. K. Symmers for petitioners.

Mr. Henry G. Newton for respondent.

May 18, 1903. Denied.

ELBERT R. ROBINSON, Petitioner, v. CHICAGO CITY RAILWAY COMPANY et al. [No. 688.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit.

Mr. J. Gray Lucas for petitioner.

Messrs. Thomas A. Banning and Ephraim Banning for respondents.

May 18, 1903. Denied.

FARMERS' LOAN & TRUST COMPANY, Trustee, Petitioner, v. LAKE STREET ELEVATED RAILROAD COMPANY. [No. 697.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit.

Mr. I. K. Boyesen for petitioner.

Messrs. Charles H. Aldrich and Clarence A. Knight for respondent.

June 1, 1903. Granted.

W. O. JOHNSON, Petitioner, v. SOUTHERN PACIFIC COMPANY. [No. 701.]

[560] Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to *the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit.

Messrs. Solicitor General Hoyt and L. A. Shaver for petitioner.

Messrs. Maxwell Evarts and M. L. Clardy for respondent.

June 1, 1903. Granted.

JAMES H. GILBERT, Sheriff, FOR USE OF ANDREW D. BISHOP, Petitioner, v. AMERICAN SURETY COMPANY OF NEW YORK et al. [No. 683.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit.

Messrs. Lynden Evans and Frederic D. McKenney for petitioner.

Messrs. T. A. Moran, Levy Mayer, and Alfred S. Austrian for respondents.

June 1, 1903. Denied.

AMERICAN SALES BOOK COMPANY et al., Petitioners, v. JOSEPHUS BULLIVANT, JR. [No. 693.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit.

Messrs. T. J. Geisler and Leon Tobriner for petitioners.

Messrs. C. H. Duell and Wm. A. Megrath for respondent.

June 1, 1903. Denied.

REID, MURDOCH & Co., Petitioners, v. UNITED STATES. [No. 698.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit.

Messrs. W. Wickham Smith and Charles Curie for petitioners.

Messrs. Attorney General and Solicitor General Hoyt for respondent.

June 1, 1903. Denied.

JOHN HOLMES et al., Petitioners, v. SHIP QUEEN ELIZABETH. [No. 699.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

Mr. Robert D. Benedict for petitioners.

Mr. Wilhelmus Mynderse for respondent.

June 1, 1903. Denied.

F. P. OLCOTT et al., Petitioners, v. COLUMBUS CARTWRIGHT et al. [No. 700.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari *to the [56] United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

Messrs. Maxwell Evarts and T. D. Cobbs for petitioners.

Messrs. M. L. Crawford and Edwin St. Clair Thompson for respondents.

June 1, 1903. Denied.

DELAWARE, LACKAWANNA, & WESTERN RAILROAD COMPANY, Petitioner, v. ESTON E. DEVORE, ETC. [No. 709.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

Messrs. Walter W. Ross and Wm. D. Guthrie for petitioner.

Mr. Wm. M. Offley for respondent.

June 1, 1903. Denied.

H. HOLLIS HUNNEWELL, Plaintiff in Error,
v. EDWARD W. PRESHO et al., Street Commissioners, etc. [No. 294.]

In Error to the Supreme Judicial Court of the State of Massachusetts.

Mr. Felix Rackemann for plaintiff in error.

Mr. Thomas M. Babson for defendants in error.

May 18, 1903. Dismissed with costs, per stipulation.

ALICE A. CABLE, Administratrix, etc., Petitioner, v. UNITED STATES LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY IN THE CITY OF NEW YORK. [No.
622.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit.

Mr. H. H. C. Miller for petitioner.

Mr. William G. Beale opposing.

April 14, 1902. Granted.

190 U. S.

NICHOLAS C. BENZIGER et al., ETC., Petitioners, v. UNITED STATES. [No. 679.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

Messrs. W. Wickham Smith and Charles
Curie for petitioners.

Mr. Attorney General and Mr. Solicitor
General Richards opposing.

June 2, 1902. Granted.

LA REPUBLIQUE FRANCAISE et al., Petitioners, v. SARATOGA VICHY SPRING COMPANY.
[No. 677.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

Mr. Archibald Hopkins for petitioners.

Mr. Edgar T. Brackett opposing.

June 2, 1902. Granted.

1185

APPENDIX I.

Supreme Court of the United States.

OCTOBER TERM, 1902.

UNITED STATES

v.

DORR et al.†

Constitutional law—application of Constitution—Philippine islands—jury trial—Philippine Commission—legislative powers—criminal libel—presumption of malice—privileged publication—report of judicial proceedings—comments on reports—index to report—intent of publisher.

1. While the Philippine islands belong to the United States, there is a difference between them and the territories which are a part of the United States, with reference to the Constitution of the United States.
2. The Constitution of the United States was not extended to the Philippine islands by the terms of the treaty of Paris, April 11, 1899, but by such treaty the status of the ceded territory was to be determined by Congress.
3. The mere cession of the Philippines to the United States did not extend the Constitution to those islands, except such parts as fall within the principles of fundamental limitations in favor of personal rights formulated in the Constitution and its amendments, and which exist rather by inference and the general spirit of the Constitution, and except those express provisions of the Constitution which prohibit Congress from passing laws in their contravention under any circumstances. The provisions contained in the Constitution in relation to jury trials do not fall within either of these exceptions, and hence the right to trial by jury was not extended to the Philippines by the mere cession of the territory.
4. Congress having passed no law extending to the Philippines the provision of the Constitution relating to jury trials, and there having been no laws in existence in the Philippines at the date of their cession providing for trial by jury, it was not error for the court of first instance to overrule the application of defendants in a prosecution for criminal libel for a trial by jury.
5. Congress could lawfully delegate to the Philippine Commission the power to enact laws, including the libel law enacted by it in October, 1901 (Act No. 277, Philippine Commission).
6. Philippine Commission, act No. 277, § 1. defines libel as malicious defamation, expressed either in writing or printing, or by signs or pictures or the like, or public theatrical exhibitions, tending to blacken the memory of one who is dead, or to impeach the honesty, virtue, or reputation, or publish the alleged or natural defects, of one who is alive, and thereby expose him to public hatred, contempt, or ridicule. Held, that headlines above an article published in a newspaper, reading: "Traitor, Seducer, and Perjurer. Sensational Allegations against Commissioner Legarda. Made of Record and Read in English. Spanish Reading Waived. Wife would have Killed Him. Legarda Pale and Nervous,"—were libelous, under the act.

7. No attempt having been made to show a justifiable motive, the publication of the headlines was "malicious defamation," within the meaning of the act, as § 3 provides that an injurious publication is presumed to have been malicious if no justifiable motive for making it is shown.
8. Philippine Commission act No. 277, § 7, provides that no reporter, editor, or proprietor of a newspaper is liable to prosecution for a fair and true report of any judicial, legislative, or other public proceedings, or of any special argument or debate in the course of such proceedings, except upon proof of malice in making the report, which shall not be implied from the mere fact of publication. Section 8 provides that libelous remarks or comments connected with matters privileged by the last section receive no privilege by reason of being so connected. Held, that the headlines were not privileged because appended to a privileged report of judicial proceedings.
9. The fact that the headlines were inserted to aid the reader in determining whether he cared to read the article was no defense.
10. The privileged report was a written statement prepared by an attorney in a prosecution for libel, in which he made an offer to prove the truth of certain statements regarded as material in the defense, and which was by the court excluded. Held, that the headlines could not be considered as a fair index to the report.
11. The fact that the headlines were no worse than the matter contained in the report was immaterial.

(Willard and Ladd, JJ., dissent.)

[No. 1,049.]

FRED. L. DORR and Edward F. O'Brien were convicted of the publication of a false and malicious libel, and appeal. Affirmed.

Cooper, J. On May 23, 1902, a complaint was filed in the court of first instance of the city of Manila against Fred. L. Dorr and Edward F. O'Brien, charging them with the publication of a false and malicious libel against Señor Benito Legarda, one of the United States Philippine Commissioners, by placing certain headlines or caption above an article published in the Manila Freedom, a newspaper in the city of Manila, of which the defendant Fred. L. Dorr was the proprietor, and the defendant Edward F. O'Brien was the editor.

†The above decision of the supreme court of the Philippine islands is published at the suggestion of one of the Justices of the Supreme Court of the United States, as involving similar questions to those raised in Territory of Hawaii v. Mankichi, 190 U. S. 197, ante, 1016, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 787.

The following are the headlines or caption upon which the prosecution is based: "Traitor, Seducer, and Perjurer. Sensational Allegations against Commissioner Legarda. Made of Record and Read in English. Spanish Reading Waived. Wife would have Killed Him. Legarda Pale and Nervous." The article over and above which the headlines were placed was a report of certain judicial proceedings had in the court of first instance of the city of Manila in the criminal case of United States v. Valdez for the offense of libel, and the report was a copy taken from a document prepared by the attorney for Valdez, in which the offer was made, as a defense, to prove the truth of the material allegations contained in, and which were the basis of, the complaint against Valdez. The facts offered to be proved were published in the Miau, a newspaper of which Valdez was editor, and related to Señor Legarda, the prosecuting witness in the Valdez Case as well as in this case. At that time, under the libel law, the truth of the libelous matter was inadmissible as evidence. The judge of the court of first instance excluded the proof tendered in the document, but permitted it to be filed in the case, and the copy was taken from it by one Vogel, the city reporter of the Manila Freedom. The report was handed by the reporter to the defendant O'Brien, the editor of the paper, and the headlines were written by O'Brien; and the report, with the headlines thus prepared, was published in the Manila Freedom of date April 16, 1902. The report seems to have been regarded by the prosecuting attorney as privileged matter, under § 7 of the libel act; and, as before stated, the prosecution is based upon the matter contained in the headlines.

On August 25, 1902, the defendants were tried and found guilty of the offense charged in the complaint, and each was sentenced to six months' imprisonment at hard labor, and a fine of $1,000, United States currency. From this judgment the defendants have appealed to this court.

A demurrer was filed to the complaint, based upon the ground that the facts charged in the complaint did not constitute a public offense. This demurrer was overruled by the trial court, and an exception to the ruling taken by the defendants.

During the course of the proceedings a motion was made by the defendants, asking that they be granted a trial by jury, as provided for in article 3, § 2, of the Constitution of the United States, and under the 6th Amendment to the Constitution, which motion was denied by the court, and an exception was also taken to this ruling.

Before entering into a discussion of the case upon its merits, it will be necessary to consider the questions of a preliminary nature which have been raised in the assignment of errors and brief of counsel for the appellants. The questions submitted may be embraced within the following propositions: (1) That by the treaty of peace between the United States and Spain, ratified on the 11th day of April, 1899, the Philippine islands became a part of the United States; (2) and, being a part thereof, they are subject to the provisions of § 2, art. 3, of the Constitution, and to the provisions contained in the 6th Amendment to the Constitution, by which in all criminal cases a trial by jury is guaranteed; (3) that Congress can exercise no power over the person or property of a citizen beyond what the Constitution confers, nor deny any right guaranteed to them by the Constitution.

Stated in its simple form, the proposition made is that the provisions of the Constitution of the United States relating to jury trials are in force in the Philippine islands. The determination of this question involves the consideration of the political status of these islands, the power of Congress under the Constitution, and the nature of the constitutional provisions relating to jury trials.

The political status of the Philippine islands has been defined, to a large extent, by the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States in the case of Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U. S. 244, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 770, 45 L. ed. 1088, in which case the status of Puerto Rico was directly involved. The question in that case was whether merchandise brought into the port of New York from Puerto Rico after the ratification of the treaty of peace with Spain, and since the passage of the Foraker act, is exempt from duty, and involved the question whether the revenue clauses of the Constitution extend of their own force to the newly acquired territories from Spain, and whether the act is in contravention of the uniformity clause of the Constitution. The conclusion was reached that the act in question was not unconstitutional. In the consideration of the case an exhaustive review was made of the powers of Congress to govern the territories belonging to the United States under the power to acquire territory by treaty and the incidental right to govern such territory, and under the clause of § 3, art. 4, of the Constitution, which vests Congress with the power to dispose of and make all needful rules and regulations respecting the territory or other property of the United States. This review was made in the light of the opinion of contemporaries, the practical construction placed upon the Constitution by Congress, and the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States upon questions arising thereunder. Distinctions were found to exist in the application of the Constitution, depending upon the relation which was borne to the national government, whether by a state or by the territories which belonged to certain states at the time of the adoption of the Constitution, and which were situated within the acknowledged limits of the United States, also such territory as might be acquired by the establishment of a disputed line, or by those which were acquired by cession from foreign powers, and to which the Constitution was extended by the treaty under which they were ceded, sanctioned by Congress, or to which the Constitution was expressly extended by congressional act, or by those territories acquired from a foreign power by treaty, which have not been incorporated as a part of the United States, nor to which has been extended the Constitution by act of Congress. The following conclusions are deducible from the decision in that case: (1) That Puerto Rico (to which the Philippines are equally situated) did not, by the act of cession from Spain to the United States, become incorporated in the United States as a part of it, but became territory pertaining to and belonging to the United States; (2) that as to such territory Congress may establish a temporary government, and in so doing it is not subject to all the restrictions of the Constitution; (3) that the determination of what these restrictions are, and what particular provisions of the Constitution are applicable to such territories, involves an inquiry into the situation of the territory and its relations to the United States; (4) that the uniformity provided for in the revenue clause of the Constitution is not one of those restrictions upon Congress in its government of the territory of Puerto Rico.

What is the character of these restrictions, and how are they to be ascertained and determined? And to what extent is the Constitution in force and effect in these islands? Both Mr. Justice Brown, in delivering the majority opinion, and Mr. Justice White, in delivering the concurring opinion, refer to these constitutional restrictions. In formulating certain propositions as his conclusions, Justice White uses the following language: "Whilst, therefore, there is no express or implied limitation on Congress in exercising its power to create local governments for any and all of the territories, by which that body is restrained from the widest latitude of discretion, it does not follow that there may not be inherent, although unexpressed, principles, which are the basis of all free government, which cannot be with impunity transgressed. But this does not suggest that every express limitation of the Constitution which is applicable has not force, but only signifies that, even in cases where there is no direct command of the Constitution which applies, there may nevertheless be restrictions of so fundamental a nature that they cannot be transgressed, although not expressed in so many words in the Constitution." He also says: "Undoubtedly there are general prohibitions in the Constitution in favor of the liberty and property of the citizen which are not mere regulations as to the form and manner in which a conceded power may be exercised, but which are an absolute denial of all authority, under any circumstances or conditions, to do particular acts. In the nature of things, limitations of this character cannot be, under any circumstances, transcended, because of the complete absence of power. The distinction which exists between the two characters of restrictions—those which regulate a granted power, and those which withdraw all authority on a particular subject—has, in effect, been always conceded, even by those who most strenuously insisted on the erroneous principle that the Constitution did not apply to Congress in legislating for the territories, and was not operative in such districts of country." Mr. Justice Brown, in this connection, quotes the following language used by Mr. Justice Bradley in the case of Mormon Church v. United States, 136 U. S. 1, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 792, 34 L. ed. 481: "Doubtless Congress, in legislating for the territories, would be subject to those fundamental limitations in favor of personal rights which are formulated in the Constitution and its amendments; but those limitations would exist rather by inference and the general spirit of the Constitution, from which Congress derives all its powers, than by any express and direct application of its provisions." Again he says: "There are certain principles of natural justice inherent in the Anglo-Saxon character, which need no expression in constitutions or statutes to give them effect, or to secure dependencies against legislation manifestly hostile to their real interests."

The case of American Ins. Co. v. Canter, 1 Pet. 511, 7 L. ed. 242, is a very interesting and instructive case, which well illustrates the difference in the application of constitutional provisions to territories which are a part of and within the United States, and to those acquired from a foreign power by cession, which have not been incorporated into the United States, nor have had by act of Congress the Constitution extended to them. Florida was ceded by Spain to the United States, as were, also, the Philippines. The status of the Philippines at the present time is very similar to that of Florida at the date of the act passed by the legislative council of Florida, the constitutionality of which was considered in the case of American Ins. Co. v. Canter. The statement of the case and the decision are taken from the opinion of Justice Brown in the case of Downes v. Bidwell, and are as follows: This case originated in the district court of South Carolina, "for the possession of 356 bales of cotton, which had been wrecked on the coast of Florida, abandoned to the insurance companies, and subsequently brought to Charleston. Canter claimed the cotton as bona fide purchaser at a marshal's sale at Key West, by virtue of a decree of a territorial court, consisting of a notary and five jurors, proceeding under an act of the governor and legislative council of Florida. The case turned upon the question whether the sale by that court was effectual to divest the interest of the underwriters. The district judge pronounced the proceedings a nullity, and rendered a decree from which both parties appealed to the circuit court. The circuit court reversed the decree of the district court upon the ground that the proceedings of the court at Key West were legal, and transferred the property to Canter, the alleged purchaser. The opinion of the circuit court was delivered by Mr. Justice Johnson of the supreme court, and is published in full in a note in Peter's Reports. It was argued that the Constitution vested the admiralty jurisdiction exclusively in the general government; that the legislature of Florida had exercised an illegal power in organizing this court; and that its decrees were void. On the other hand, it was insisted that this was a court of separate and distinct jurisdiction from the courts of the United States, and, as such, its acts were not to be reviewed in a foreign tribunal, such as was the court of South Carolina; 'that the district of Florida was not part of the United States, but only an acquisition or dependency, and as such the Constitution, per se, had no binding effect in or over it.' 'It becomes,' said the court, 'indispensable to the solution of these difficulties that we should conceive a just idea of the relation in which Florida stands to the United States. . . . And first, it is obvious that there is a material distinction between the territory now under consideration, and that which is acquired from the aborigines (whether by purchase or conquest) within the acknowledged limits of the United States, as also that which is acquired by the establishment of a disputed line. As to both these there can be no question that the sovereignty of the state or territory within which it lies and of the United States immediately attach, producing a complete subjection to all the laws and institutions of the two governments, local and general, unless modified by treaty. The question now to be considered relates to territories previously subject to the acknowledged jurisdiction of another sovereign, such as was Florida to the Crown of Spain. And on this subject we have the most explicit proof that the understanding of our public functionaries is that the government and laws of the United States do not extend to such territory by the mere act of cession. For in the act of Congress of March 30, 1822, chap. 13 (3 Stat. at L. 657), § 9, we have an enumeration of the acts of Congress which are to be held in force in the territory; and in the 10th section (3 Stat. at L. 658) an enumeration, in the nature of a Bill of Rights, of privileges and immunities which could not be denied to the inhabitants of the territory if they came under the Constitution by the mere act of cession. . . . These states, this territory, and future states to be admitted into the Union, are the sole objects of the Constitution. There is no express provision, whatever, made in the Constitution for the acquisition or government of territories beyond those limits.' He further held that the right of acquiring territory was altogether incidental to the treaty-making power; that their government was left to Congress; that the territory of Florida did 'not stand in the relation of a state to the United States;' that the acts establishing a territorial government were the Constitution of Florida; that while, under these acts, the territorial legislature could enact nothing inconsistent with what Congress had made inherent and permanent in the territorial government, it had not done so in organizing the court at Key West." Justice Brown further cites from the opinion of Chief Justice Marshall in this case, in which the latter held "that the judicial clause of the Constitution, above quoted, did not apply to Florida; that the judges of the superior courts of Florida held their office for four years; that 'these courts are not constitutional courts, in which the judicial power conferred by the Constitution on the general government can be deposited;' that 'they are legislative courts, created in virtue of the general right of sovereignty which exists in the government,' or in virtue of the territorial clause of the Constitution; that the jurisdiction with which they are invested is not a part of the judicial power of the Constitution, but is conferred by Congress, in the exercise of those general powers which that body possesses over the territories of the United States; and that, in legislating for them, Congress exercises the combined powers of the general and of a state government. The act of the territorial legislature creating the court in question was held not to be 'inconsistent with the laws and Constitution of the United States,' and the decree of the circuit court was affirmed." Remarking upon this case, Justice Brown says: "As the only judicial power vested in Congress is to create courts whose judges shall hold their offices during good behavior, it necessarily follows that, if Congress authorizes the creation of courts and the appointment of judges for a limited time, it must act independently of the Constitution, and upon territory which is not part of the United States, within the meaning of the Constitution."

The act of Congress of July 1, 1902, chap. 1369 (32 Stat. at L. 691), entitled "An Act Temporarily to Provide for the Administration of the Affairs of Civil Government of the Philippine Islands, and for Other Purposes," in § 5, extends to the Philippine islands nearly all of the provisions of the Constitution known as the "Bill of Rights." But there was expected from it the provisions of the Constitution relating to jury trials, contained in § 2, art. 3, and in the 6th Amendment. It becomes necessary for us to determine whether these provisions of the Constitution of the United States relating to trials by jury are in force in the Philippine islands.

It is difficult to determine from the general statements contained in these decisions what are "those fundamental limitations in favor of personal rights which are formulated in the Constitution and its amendments, and which exist by inference." It seems fairly deducible from all that has been said upon this subject that such provisions are negative in character, rather than of a direct, positive, or affirmative nature, denying to Congress the power to pass laws in contravention of such principles of the Constitution. If this is their nature, and this be the true distinction, it cannot be said that either Congress or the Philippine Commission have passed any laws which would come within the inhibition of the Constitution, or which tend to impair the right to trial by jury in these islands. All that can be said is that, in extending the various provisions of the Bill of Rights here, Congress has failed to extend those provisions guarantying the right to trial by jury.

We will now turn to the consideration of the question as to whether a violation of the right to a jury trial falls within the inhibition arising from the existence of those fundamental limitations in favor of personal rights mentioned in the decisions.

There are a number of cases cited in Downes v. Bidwell, establishing the right to trial by jury in territories of the United States; but these decisions have all arisen in cases relating to territories which were a part of the United States, and had been incorporated as a part thereof, and to which Congress had expressly extended the Constitution. In Webster v. Reid, 11 How. 437, 13 L. ed. 761, it was held that the law of the territory of Iowa which prohibited the trial by jury of certain actions at law, founded on contract, to recover payment for services, was void; but, as it is said, this case is of little value as bearing upon the question of the extension of the Constitution to that territory, inasmuch as the organic law of the territory of Iowa enacted by Congress, by its express provision, extended to Iowa the laws of the United States, including the ordinance of 1787, which provided expressly for jury trials, so far as they were applicable, and the case was put upon this ground. In Callan v. Wilson, 127 U. S. 540, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1301, 32 L. ed. 223, the defendant had been convicted, without jury trial, in the District of Columbia; but the District of Columbia was not only within and a part of the United States, but had formed a part of the original states of Virginia and Maryland. In the case of Springville v. Thomas, 166 U. S. 707, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 717, 41 L. ed. 1172, it was held that a verdict returned by less than the whole number of jurors was invalid, because in contravention of the 7th Amendment to the Constitution, and the act of Congress of April 7, 1874, chap. 80 (18 Stat. at L. 27), which provide that no party shall be deprived of the right of trial by jury in cases cognizable at common law. This is, as stated by Mr. Justice Brown, "obviously true with respect to Utah, since the organic act of that territory had expressly extended to it the Constitution and laws of the United States." The other decisions cited by counsel for the appellants can all be traced to the same principle; that is, that, where Congress has extended the laws and the Constitution to the territories, then Congress would be inhibited by the Constitution from enacting a law depriving persons living in such territories from the right to trial by jury.

The only case which we have been able to discover, arising under an act of Congress, which deprived a party of the right to a trial by jury at a place where the Constitution had not been extended by express provision, is the case of Ross v. McIntyre, 140 U. S. 453, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 897, 35 L. ed. 581. This was a case in which the American Consular Tribunal in Japan, created by act of Congress under treaty with the government of Japan, and vested with jurisdiction, to be exercised and enforced in accordance with the laws of the United States, to try Americans, had, in the exercise of this jurisdiction, convicted the defendant of the crime of murder; and he was sentenced by that court to the penalty of death. It was held that "the guaranties it [the Constitution] affords against accusation of capital or infamous crimes, except by indictment or presentment by a grand jury, and for an impartial trial by a jury when thus accused, apply only to citizens and others within the United States, or who are brought there for trial for alleged offenses committed elsewhere, and not to residents and temporary sojourners abroad." It seems from this decision that the power of Congress to enact a law which would deprive a person of the right to a trial by jury is expressly recognized, and that such legislation does not come within the fundamental limitations in favor of personal rights, for this act of Congress which operated upon citizens of the United States abroad is recognized as a valid act of Congress. The act is saved from the constitutional inhibition by reason that in such country the Constitution of the United States does not extend, and is not in force there; but the decision in this case nevertheless establishes the doctrine that there is not upon Congress an absolute and total inhibition, under any and all circumstances, to enact a law in which a person is deprived of the right to a trial by jury.

It may be further observed that, if it should be held that the constitutional provision guarantying the right to trial by jury has been introduced here by the simple act of cession, there is no law in existence to give such provision effect. Trial by jury was unknown to the law in force in these islands prior to the date of cession, nor has the Philippine Commission passed any law which would give it effect. Such provisions of a Constitution as those relating to trial by jury can hardly be regarded as self-executing. It is necessary that there should be some legislation carrying them into effect, such as laws prescribing the qualifications of persons for jury duty, for the organization of juries, and provisions of a like character. Suppose the Constitution has been extended here by force of the cession of territory, and that it should be held that there could be no legal conviction for crime in the Philippines, on account of the absence of the law prescribing the qualification of jurors or for the organization of juries, and Congress, in the exercise of its sound judgment, after a careful examination of the conditions prevailing in such territory, and in the exercise of its undoubted right to govern the territory, should reach the conclusion that an efficient territorial government could not be conducted, in which convictions for crime are dependent upon the verdict of juries, by reason of the hostility of the inhabitants of such country to the constituted authorities, or the lack of the qualification of the people of the country, or an extensive portion of it, to perform jury service, and should refuse to enact any law for jury trials; the criminal laws in such event must remain unenforced, and a state of anarchy would be the result. In such case the question assumes very much the nature of a political question, and the judicial department might well hesitate to interfere indirectly with Congress in the exercise of its judgment, and in the exercise of its broad discretion in the government of a territory so situated.

It is contended, also, by counsel for the defendants, that Congress could not lawfully authorize the Philippine Commission to enact the libel law passed by it on October 24, 1901, and under which the defendants have been convicted. The objection to the law is based upon the theory of the division of the Federal government into three branches, executive, legislative, and judicial, and that the powers of legislation vested in Congress to make laws cannot be delegated by that department to the judgment, wisdom, or patriotism of any other body or authority. While the authorities cited in support of the general proposition maintain the doctrine, there are well-known exceptions to the general rule, not referred to in these decisions, for the reason that the decision of the case did not require their consideration. A well-known exception is that of municipal corporations, upon which the powers of legislation are commonly bestowed. The case in question forms an exception to this general rule, equally well established. Congress, in the exercise of its power to make rules and regulations for the government of the territories, has often delegated the power of legislation to the territorial governments. The case of American Ins. Co. v. Canter, 1 Pet. 511, 7 L. ed. 242, before cited, originated under an act of the governor and legislative council of Florida organizing a court, and vesting in it admiralty jurisdiction, and in which the jurisdiction of the court was sustained by the Supreme Court of the United States. Speaking of the power of Congress in creating territorial governments, it is said in the case of DeLima v. Bidwell, 182 U. S. 1, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 743, 45 L. ed. 1041, that "the power to establish territorial government has been too long exercised by Congress and acquiesced in by the Supreme Court to be deemed an unsettled question."

We reach the conclusion in this case:

(1) That while the Philippine islands constitute territory which has been acquired by, and belongs to, the United States, there is a difference between such territory and the territories which are a part of the United States, with reference to the Constitution of the United States.

(2) That the Constitution was not extended here by the terms of the treaty of Paris, under which the Philippine islands were acquired from Spain. By the treaty the status of the ceded territory was to be determined by Congress.

(3) That the mere act of cession of the Philippines to the United States did not extend the Constitution here, except such parts as fall within the general principles of fundamental limitations in favor of personal rights formulated in the Constitution and its amendments, and which exist rather by inference and the general spirit of the Constitution, and except those express provisions of the Constitution which prohibit Congress from passing laws in their contravention under any circumstances; that the provisions contained in the Constitution relating to jury trials do not fall within either of these exceptions, and consequently the right to trial by jury has not been extended here by the mere act of the cession of the territory.

(4) That Congress has passed no law extending here the provision of the Constitution relating to jury trials, nor were any laws in existence in the Philippine islands at the date of their cession for trials by jury, and consequently there is no law in the Philippine islands entitling the defendants in this case to such trial; that the court of first instance committed no error in overruling their application for a trial by jury.

We also reach the conclusion that the Philippine Commission is a body expressly recognized and sanctioned by act of Congress, having the power to pass laws, and has the power to pass the libel law under which the defendants were convicted.

We will now pass to the third assignment of error, which is that the headlines or caption of the article charged to be libelous were legitimate deductions from a previous report of a public judicial proceeding, and were insufficient to constitute the offense of libel. The testimony shows that the defendant Fred. L. Dorr was the proprietor, and that the defendant Edward F. O'Brien was the editor, of the Manila Freedom; that the article upon which the complaint is founded was published in its issue of that paper on the 16th of April, 1902; that the privileged statements or report of the judicial proceedings, the headlines of which are the basis of the prosecution, arose on the trial of the case of The United States v. Valdez, in the court of first instance in the city of Manila, in which case Valdez was charged with the offense of libel, the complaining witness in that case being Señor Legarda, who was also the complaining witness in this case; that counsel for the defendant, Valdez, prepared a written statement of certain facts, and offered to prove the truth of these statements if permitted by the court. A copy of this statement was made by the reporter of the Manila Freedom,—one Vogel,—which having been presented to the defendant O'Brien, the editor, he prepared the headlines or caption set forth in the complaint.

The attorney for the defendants, under his assignment of errors, makes the proposition that the headlines or caption was a legitimate deduction from the privileged report of the judicial proceedings, and, as such, was itself a privileged publication. This proposition is succinctly made, and is easily understood. No material facts are in dispute. Our law of libel is contained in the few sections in which the law upon this subject is concisely and clearly stated, and renders it unnecessary to refer to textbooks or decisions of the courts of other jurisdictions. Thus the labors of the court have been simplified in the determination of the case.

Section 1 of act No. 277, Philippine Commission, gives the following definition of libel: "A libel is a malicious defamation, expressed either in writing, printing, or by signs or pictures, or the like, or public theatrical exhibitions, tending to blacken the memory of one who is dead, or to impeach the honesty, virtue, or reputation, or publish the alleged or natural defects, of one who is alive, and thereby expose him to public hatred, contempt, or ridicule." Did the matter contained in these headlines or caption have a tendency to impeach the honesty, virtue, and reputation of the injured party? We need not stop to discuss this question. Was it a malicious defamation? This appears equally plain, for § 3 is as follows: "An injurious publication is presumed to have been malicious if no justifiable motive for making it is shown." No attempt has been made by the defendants to show a justifiable motive, and the established presumption of law that the publication was malicious must prevail. Nor has there been any attempt made to show the truth of the matter contained in the headlines.

But it is attempted to bring the headlines or caption within the exception of privileged matter. Section 7 of the act defines this character of privileged matter as follows: "No reporter, editor, or proprietor of any newspaper is liable to any prosecution for a fair and true report of any judicial, legislative, or other public official proceedings, or of any statement, speech, argument, or debate in the course of the same, except upon proof of malice in making such report, which shall not be implied from the mere fact of publication." Section 8 reads as follows: "Libelous remarks or comments connected with matter privileged by the last section, receive no privilege by reason of being so connected." It has been seen that the matter is libelous; that it was a malicious publication, as defined by law. The only question that remains to be considered is, Were these headlines or caption "remarks" or "comments" on the privileged matter? The word "comment" is defined by Webster as a "remark, observation, or criticism; gossip, discourse, talk; a note or observation intended to explain, illustrate, or criticise the meaning of a writing, book, etc. Explanation; annotation; exposition." The word "remark" is defined by him as "an expression, in speech or writing, of something remarked or noticed. The mention of that which is worthy of attention or notice. A casual observation, comment, or statement." The headlines or caption come within the definition of "remarks" as given by Webster, in that they are "the mention of that which is worthy of attention or notice;" and they also fall within the definition of the word "comments," defined as "a note or observation intended to explain." The defendants' counsel denominates the character of the headlines or caption as a "legitimate deduction from the privileged report." The word deduction is defined by Webster as "that which is deduced or drawn from premises by a process of reason; inference; acquisition." It seems from these definitions that the word "deduction" conveys about the same meaning as the words "comment" and "remark." At least, it would be as objectionable to make injurious deductions as to make injurious comments or remarks. To say that the headlines or caption is not a remark or comment, but an "epitome" or "index" of what is contained in the privileged article, is simply a play upon words, and it is useless to follow this line of argument further. The intention of the statute, as shown in articles 7 and 8, is that the privileged matter should be a fair and true report, and must stand alone as such. If headlines or captions are used, the matter contained in them must not be remarks or comments of a libelous nature. If by any process additional significance is added, either by display letters or by the arrangement of catch words, under whatever name they may be designated, it comes within the denunciation of the statute. That the headlines were not a part of the report prepared by Vogel, the reporter who was present in the court, and who made a copy of the report, is shown in the testimony. The defendant O'Brien, who, so far as the testimony shows, knew nothing about the matters contained in the report, except that acquired by the reading of it after it was delivered to him, made the headlines or caption. It is said that it is the common practice in the United States to make such headlines in display letters, to render the necessary assistance to the reader in determining whether he cares to read the article. It is immaterial what the real intention of those who write such headlines may be. If such caption and headlines are libelous, the writer must bear the consequences. The law declares the motive of the writer, in the absence of proof of justifiable motive and the truth of the matter, to be malicious. The decisions of some of the courts of the United States have held that an index of words contained in the privileged matter, when fairly and truly made, will partake of the nature of the article indexed; but, as we have shown, our law does not permit this. Nor is it possible to reach the conclusion that the words contained in the headlines are a fair index. No idea can be gathered from these headlines of the real nature of what is contained in the published article. The privileged report was a written statement prepared by the attorney in the Valdez Case, in which an offer was made to prove the truth of certain statements regarded as material in the defense of the case, and which was by the court excluded. This was the general nature of the matter contained in the report. Can anyone, by reading the headlines or caption, form any conception as to the real nature of the document to which the headlines have been prefixed? It is also said that the headlines in this case are not worse than the matter contained in the report. This may be admitted as true, but, in the eyes of the law, there is a distinction. The injurious matter contained in the report is regarded by the law as protected by a privilege which should be extended to the report of judicial proceedings, but here the privilege ends. It is unnecessary to inquire why this distinction should be made. It is sufficient that the law so makes it. It is stated that there is not a word contained in the headlines or caption which is not found in the privileged report. We have attempted to show that this is immaterial. But this statement is in fact incorrect. The sentences: "Sensational Allegations against Commissioner Legarda. Made of Record and Read in English. Spanish Reading Waived. Wife would have Killed Him. Legarda Pale and Nervous,"—are not found in the report. Nor can the sentence, "Legarda Pale and Nervous," even be deduced from anything contained in the report, nor does it appear from the testimony to have been in fact true. When the statement in writing was offered and read before the court, according to the testimony in the case, Señor Legarda was not at that time present in court.

We will notice briefly the character of the caption and headlines, the effect of which can well be imagined. The copy of the Manila Freedom containing the article is attached to the record. An examination of it shows that the words "Traitor, Seducer, and Perjurer" were printed in large display letters, and were of a size sufficient, in the use of these words, to cover a space equal to that of three columns across the paper. They were placed at the top of the first page of the paper. The other words were in smaller type, but much larger than the ordinary type. It is hard to conceive language stronger than that contained in the three words, "Traitor, Seducer, and Perjurer." No more effectual means could be adopted to destroy the good name and fame of a person. More significant words cannot be found in the English language to impeach the honesty, reputation, and virtue. By skilful selection, the sting of the entire document has been placed in the caption and headlines, in such a manner that, in a literal sense, "he who runs may read."

We conclude that the publication of the caption and headlines in the Manila Freedom, upon which the information is based, constituted the offense of libel; that the judgment is sustained by the evidence; that the defendants, Fred. L. Dorr and Edward F. O'Brien, are guilty of the offense charged in the information; that no error was committed in the trial of the case prejudicial to the rights of the defendants; and that the judgment of the court of first instance should be affirmed, with costs against the defendants.

It is so ordered and adjudged.

Arellano, Torres, and Mapa, JJ., concur.

Willard, J., dissenting: The case presents two questions: (1) Were the headlines privileged? And (2) if they were, was there express malice in publishing them?

1. The important part of the article in question, and the only part which contained any libelous matter, was the offer to prove contained in it. This offer was actually made a part of the record of the case on trial in the court of first instance. Under article 7 of the libel law, the defendants had the right to publish it, if they did so without malice. The government recognized this right when it limited the charge in the complaint to the headlines of the article, and it is not, and cannot be, claimed that the defendants are guilty of libel for publishing the article itself. Nothing could be worse or more libelous than the statements contained in this offer. I do not wish to give them currency by copying them here, but it is necessary to say that it was distinctly charged in this offer, in so many words, that the complaining witness in the case seduced a girl living in his house. It was also distinctly charged therein that he had added to his other crimes those of treason and perjury. For the publication of these most grave and unfounded charges, the defendants are not prosecuted. They are, however, prosecuted for placing over the article certain headlines. That headlines to a privileged article may be used cannot be doubted. The public must be able to get some idea of what a newspaper article contains, without reading it entirely through. And it is not claimed that the defendants had not a right to put a proper heading to this report. The question is, Was the one actually used proper? If the heading is a fair index, and nothing more, of the article, it is as much privileged as the article itself. If it expresses the opinion of the editor on the statements in the article, it is not privileged as to such expressions. Such expressions of opinion are called, in our law, "comments and remarks." The rule is well illustrated in this case. The words, "Spanish Reading Waived," are a mere statement of what the article contains. They express no opinion of the editor upon any part of it. On the contrary, the word "Sensational," in connection with the word "Allegations," is a comment or remark, and is not privileged. It says that, in the opinion of the editor, the allegations made in the offer are sensational. It is not an index of any statement of fact made in the article, but is an expression of opinion upon such facts. The headline "Legarda Pale and Nervous" can perhaps be considered as an expression of opinion, although in this respect there is a statement of fact to this effect. But this is unimportant, for these words, even if not privileged, are not libelous. Neither is the word "Sensational" libelous. It is claimed that the words "Traitor, Seducer, and Perjurer," are not an index of the article, but are an expression of the opinion of the editor that the complaining witness was a traitor, seducer, and perjurer. In order to determine this question, it is necessary to consider the whole of the headline, and to consider it with reference to the article itself. The mechanical necessities of newspaper composition generally forbid the employment of complete grammatical sentences in headlines. They must of necessity be elliptical. The reader does not expect to find the whole thought contained in the first two or three isolated words. It is necessary to look at the whole of the headlines to ascertain this. The case at bar illustrates this proposition. The first line, consisting of these three words, of itself means nothing. The words are not spoken of any person. In order to find out to whom they refer, it is necessary to go to the line below, in which, while it is learned that they refer to Señor Legarda, it is also seen at the same time that they were allegations made against him. The necessity of reading the whole of the headlines in order to get the meaning of the isolated words is illustrated by the other half of this same page. On the first line are the words "Situation in Hongkong." On the next line are the words "Health Authorities," etc. The first line does not show what feature of the situation in Hongkong is treated of in the article. The second line does not show where the health authorities are taking action. It is only by reading them together that one learns what the article is about. Fairly construed, the headlines say that sensational allegations of being a traitor, seducer, and perjurer have been made against Commissioner Legarda. A person knowing nothing about the case or the parties to it, reading the whole of the headlines, could get no other idea from it. Omitting the word "Sensational," which has already been considered, this statement is a fair index of the offer to prove, which, as has been said before, was the principal part of the article, and the only libelous part. That these crimes were plainly and distinctly, and in these very words, alleged against him, is shown by a reading of the offer to prove. It is difficult to see how anyone could make a fair index of that offer without using those words. That was all there was of it. The result upon this branch of the case is that the headlines are nothing more than a fair index of the article, and are therefore privileged, with exception of the words, "Sensational" and "Legarda Pale and Nervous," which are not libelous.

2. What has been said already leaves out of consideration the question of malice. By the express terms of article 7, if the defendants published this judicial record with express malice, they are guilty. The government claims that there was express malice. It is not apparent why, with such a claim, the government did not prosecute the defendants for publishing the article itself, for, as we have said, it is infinitely worse in its details than the headlines. The article with the headlines being privileged, the burden of proving express malice was on the government. It relied upon two kinds of evidence. It claimed that the size of type and the arrangement of the headlines proves malice. There would be some force to this claim, were it not for the fact that the other headlines on the same page, to which we have referred, are in the same size of type, and the arrangement of the sub-heads is identical with the one in question. Each one takes up one half of the page. Any presumption of malice in the use of large type for the words "Traitor," etc., is to my mind conclusively rebutted by the use of the same size in printing the words "Situation in Hongkong." An examination of other numbers of this paper offered in evidence during the trial shows that this size of type was in frequent use for headlines of the most indifferent character. The only other evidence introduced consisted of articles in other numbers of the same paper relating to the same matter. These stated the gravity of the charges made, the condition of the law in regard to the presentation of the truth as a defense, and urged that an investigation be had for the purpose of showing whether the charges were true or not. There was no other proof of express malice. It was proved at the trial that neither of the defendants knew Commissioner Legarda, even by sight. There was no evidence that they had ever had dealings of any kind with him. The newspaper articles do not show any express malice, and any inference of that kind which could be drawn from them is, to my mind, overcome by the proof that the defendants did not know the person whom they are charged with having maliciously libeled.

In conclusion, it may be said that, while the defendants are not guilty, the person who made this offer in court is, for the reasons stated in my concurring opinion in the case against Lerma and, if prosecuted for this libel, could, as far as appears from the record in this case, have been convicted.

The judgment should be reversed, and the defendants acquitted.

Ladd, J., concurs.

APPENDIX II.

---

Supreme Court of the United States.

OCTOBER TERM, 1902.

---

ORDER.

It is ordered that the following allotment be made of the Chief Justice and Associate Justices of this court among the circuits, agreeably to the act of Congress in such case made and provided, and that such allotment be entered of record, viz.:

For the First Circuit, Rufus W. Peckham, Associate Justice.

For the Second Circuit, Rufus W. Peckham, Associate Justice.

For the Third Circuit, George Shiras, Jr., Associate Justice.

For the Fourth Circuit, Melville W. Fuller, Chief Justice.

For the Fifth Circuit, Edward D. White, Associate Justice.

For the Sixth Circuit, John M. Harlan, Associate Justice.

For the Seventh Circuit, Henry B. Brown, Associate Justice.

For the Eighth Circuit, David J. Brewer, Associate Justice.

For the Ninth Circuit, Joseph McKenna, Associate Justice.

October 20, 1902.

---

APPENDIX III.

---

Supreme Court of the United States.

OCTOBER TERM, 1902.

---

ORDER.

Ordered that the letter of resignation of the reporter of this court, Mr. J. C. Bancroft Davis, and the response of the court thereto, be entered upon the minutes of the court, as follows, viz.:

Nahant, Mass., September 11, 1902.

To the Chief Justice and Associate Justices of the Supreme Court.

Gentlemen:—

I hereby resign my office as reporter of this court, to take effect at once. I cannot do this without thanking you for the kindness and consideration which I have received from all.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. C. BANCROFT DAVIS.

Supreme Court of the United States,
October 18, 1902.

Dear Sir:—

In accepting your resignation as reporter we desire to express our appreciation of your long and valuable labors in that capacity, covering a period of nineteen years and seventy-nine volumes of reports.

We sever our relations, which have been uniformly intimate and cordial, with sincere regret, and with the earnest hope that you may enjoy for many years the repose you have so well earned.

Very truly, yours,

MELVILLE W. FULLER.
JOHN M. HARLAN.
DAVID J. BREWER.
HENRY B. BROWN.
GEORGE SHIRAS, JR.
EDWARD D. WHITE.

JOSEPH MCKENNA.

Hon. J. C. BANCROFT DAVIS.

And it is further ordered, that Mr. Charles Henry Butler be, and he is hereby, appointed reporter of this court in place of Mr. J. C. Bancroft Davis, resigned, and he is charged with the duty of reporting the decisions of the present term from its commencement.

Mr. Butler being present in court, the oath of office was administered to him by the clerk.

December 4, 1902.

---

APPENDIX IV.

---

Supreme Court of the United States.

OCTOBER TERM, 1902.

---

The Chief Justice said:

"It gives me pleasure to announce to the gentlemen of the bar the appointment of Oliver Wendell Holmes, of Massachusetts, to a seat upon this bench. Mr. Holmes is present and prepared to take the oath. The clerk will read the commission, to be subsequently recorded, and administer the oath accordingly."

The commission was then read and the oath administered by the clerk, and Mr. Justice Holmes took his seat on the bench.

December 8, 1902.

---

APPENDIX V.

---

Supreme Court of the United States.

OCTOBER TERM, 1902.

---

ORDER.

There having been an associate justice of this court appointed since the commencement of this term, it is ordered that the following allotment be made of the Chief Justice and Associate Justices of this court among the circuits, agreeably to the act of Congress in such case made and provided, and that such allotment be entered of record, viz.:

For the First Circuit, Oliver Wendell Holmes, Associate Justice.

For the Second Circuit, Rufus W. Peckham, Associate Justice.

For the Third Circuit, George Shiras, Jr., Associate Justice.

For the Fourth Circuit, Melville W. Fuller, Chief Justice.

For the Fifth Circuit, Edward D. White, Associate Justice.

For the Sixth Circuit, John M. Harlan, Associate Justice.

For the Seventh Circuit, Henry B. Brown, Associate Justice.

For the Eighth Circuit, David J. Brewer, Associate Justice.

For the Ninth Circuit, Joseph McKenna, Associate Justice.

December 8, 1902.

APPENDIX VI.

Supreme Court of the United States.

OCTOBER TERM, 1902.

Mr. Attorney General Knox addressed the court as follows:

May it please the court:

The bar of this court has requested me to present to you the resolutions recently adopted by it expressing its estimate of the life and character of the late Mr. Justice Gray, and its deep sense of bereavement occasioned by his death.

They are as follows:

"The bar of the Supreme Court of the United States, deploring the recent death of Horace Gray, an associate justice of the court, would put upon record a brief memorial of their esteem and admiration for his judicial achievements, as well as for his qualities as a man. Therefore, be it

"Resolved, That we of the bar are met together to pay tribute to the memory of an able lawyer, a scholar versed in the learning of the books, and a judge who never failed to uphold the dignity of his office. He did his work thoroughly and with scrupulous efforts to dispense exact justice.

"Resolved, That the labors of Mr. Justice Gray, which have been constant and arduous, are deserving of the country's gratitude. He spared nothing of health or of strength. With patience he explored the sources of the law, and gathered from the past much that proved of value in its application to the needs of the present. Of sound judicial instincts, he year by year visibly grew, alike in clearness of vision and in breadth of apprehension, until in these later days his ripened powers declared him to be a fit example of the strong and truly great judge.

"Resolved, That we shall ever cherish a remembrance of the manly qualities of our deceased brother. Large of stature, vigorous and firm in demeanor, it needed but a slight acquaintance with the real man to recognize in Mr. Justice Gray a generous, noble spirit, a pure-minded, brave, and Christian gentleman.

"Resolved, That the Attorney General be asked to present these resolutions to the court, with the request that they be entered upon the records, and that the chairman of this meeting be directed to send to the widow and family of the late Mr. Justice Gray a copy of these resolutions as an expression of our sympathy for them in the loss that they have been called upon to sustain."

This just and temperate expression by the bar will be received, I am sure, with sentiments of full approval by the members of the court, to whom the death of Mr. Justice Gray is a personal grief, as well as by the profession and the people, to whom it is a most serious public loss.

The character and work of a judge are an open record to the world. They are impressed on judgments which survive the man, and may be imperishable. A great judge hearing contending arguments and settling their issues with convincing logic erects and leaves behind him a monument standing high in the public view. All men may know him, and may estimate and speak of his labors. So men regard John Marshall, almost as if they had seen him and talked with him; and so those who did not have the privilege of intimate acquaintance with the living man might speak of Mr. Justice Gray.

He was born of the New England ancestry which has done so much to strengthen and adorn this nation,—strong, self-controlled, intellectual, and aspiring. Such ancestry has produced faithful men, men of action, and men of culture. Mr. Justice Gray, true to these inheritances, made early use of his advantages of environment and education. His career from his youth shows the steady advance in capacity of a man formed and trained to be a scholar, a lawyer, and a judge.

From his recognized position as a leader of the bar of his native state, he was advanced to be an associate justice and later to be chief justice of the supreme court of Massachusetts,—the court which contributed the illustrious name of Shaw to the roll of distinguished American judges. In that court Mr. Justice Gray delivered many luminous opinions marked by the comprehensiveness, thoroughness, and learning which were characteristic of him, including leading ones on the law of charities, ancient grants and boundaries, contracts ultra vires, and the conflict of laws.

No eulogy is needed to bring before this court and bar the recollections of the steadfast labors, profound learning, and ripe ability of intellect by which his judicial service to his country was here rounded out and completed. The opinions which he delivered reflect the robust vigor of his personality,—the clearness of mind and firmness of will, the strength and purity of moral purpose, which were part of his nature. His unremitting industry, his high conception of duty, his accumulated erudition, his dignity of diction and of character, combined to make him a great jurist in all branches of the law. This court is required to explore the entire field of jurisprudence. Its jurisdiction is as broad as the range of human controversy, and Mr. Justice Gray has left fitting memorials of his capacity throughout its range,—whether he deals with the technicalities of a statute, with constitutional or international law, with equity pleading, with admiralty, with the laws of property or of personal relations.

It is superfluous to comment particularly on his utterances for the court. The profession will not forget them. They will survive the passage of time, and remain for the instruction and guidance of ourselves and of posterity.

In presenting these resolutions to your honors, on behalf of the bar I express the consciousness of loss to public life and service which Mr. Justice Gray's private life and character emphasize. The generosity and purity of his nature, the modesty and simple dignity which adorn worth, the courtesy of the gentleman,—these qualities also marked his career and endeared him to those who were privileged to know him intimately.

I have the honor to move that the resolutions be entered upon the records of the court.

The Chief Justice responded:

It is difficult to express our sense of the loss the court has sustained in the departure of this eminent judge and dear brother.

The results of the labors of the court are announced from the bench, but the burden of its labors can be known only to those who participate in them. They only can know the value of aid in the discharge and alleviation of that burden. They only can know the closeness of the ties which bind the company of faithful workers together.

Speaking from that standpoint, it may be truthfully said of Mr. Justice Gray as he himself, when chief justice of Massachusetts, said in commemoration of one of his colleagues, that "every year of association with him brought a greater reliance upon his counsel and a closer friendship."

And, portraying on that occasion the lineaments of another, he drew a striking likeness of himself as we knew him in our common consultations. This is the portrait:

"His minute and accurate observation of the facts, his thoughtful comparison of the arguments, his careful weighing and scrutiny of precedents, his nice appreciation of legal distinctions, his grasp of fundamental principles, his strength in presenting his own suggestions, and his candor in considering those of his associates,—guided throughout by a love of justice, and tempered by common sense,—made his presence a peculiar safeguard. In arriving at results that would affect the rights of his fellow men, no detail was so small as to be neglected, no field of investigation too wide to be explored. Very cautious in forming his conclusions, he was correspondingly tenacious of them when formed. He always wished the opinions of the court to be placed upon such grounds as, not going beyond what the decision of each case required, should afford a firm foothold in determining future controversies."

The description also measurably indicates the character of his judicial utterances.

It was observed of the judgments of Lord Cottenham, that he who read them felt that they "fixed the law on the matter in hand upon a defined basis for future years." The same impression is produced by many of the judgments of Mr. Justice Gray, while other judgments are confined, with keen precision, to the bare disposition of the particular case.

All excellent, his opinions in leading cases—and he made cases leading when he thought the occasion demanded—constitute permanent contributions to jurisprudence and imperishable monuments to his memory. They do not simply lay down rules for guidance. They are treasuries of doctrine and precedent. And in the time to come it will be found—

"Hither, as to a fountain,
Other suns repair, and in their urns
Draw golden light."

Mr. Justice Gray was preceded as the head of the supreme judicial court of Massachusetts by Lemuel Shaw; he was preceded on this bench by Joseph Story and Benjamin Robbins Curtis. Eulogy can rise no higher than the expression of the conviction that he will be ranked with them without appreciable interval.

For nearly forty years he was given grace to execute justice and to maintain truth, with the dignity and power befitting his great office, and he arrived at the resting place with unclouded mind and ready for the change. His lips are dumb, but the devouring Past, cannot destroy the works which follow him.

The resolutions and accompanying remarks will be entered upon the records of the court.

January 5, 1903.

APPENDIX VII.

---

Supreme Court of the United States.

OCTOBER TERM, 1902.

---

The following correspondence is spread upon the record by direction of the Chief Justice.

Supreme Court of the United States.
In Chambers.

February 23, 1903.

Dear Brother Shiras:

We cannot refrain from the expression of our sincere regret at your retirement from the bench.

Some of us have been associated with you during the entire period of your service here, but all alike appreciate the single mindedness with which you have sought to do equal and exact justice, and the great value of your assistance to the court, and of your contributions to jurisprudence; and all alike feel for you the deepest affection and regard.

We earnestly hope that the personal intercourse with you we have so much enjoyed may be continued for many years to come.

MELVILLE W. FULLER,
JOHN M. HARLAN,
DAVID J. BREWER,
HENRY B. BROWN,
E. D. WHITE,
R. W. PECKHAM,
JOSEPH MCKENNA,
OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES. a

Supreme Court of the United States.
Washington, D. C.

My dear Chief and Associate Justices:

I gratefully acknowledge your kind letter of farewell.

I am glad to be thus assured, though indeed I never doubted it, that, whether I fully performed my judicial duties or not, you all felt that I earnestly endeavored to do so.

The ten years and upwards that I have spent on the bench have been very pleasant to me, and I quit the court and its labors with much regret. I have much enjoyed my personal intercourse with each and all of you, and hope that, in the few years that are left to me, I shall frequently meet you, and hear from you when we are separated.

Sincerely your friend,

GEORGE SHIRAS, JR.

February 24, 1903.

---

APPENDIX VIII.

---

Supreme Court of the United States.

OCTOBER TERM, 1902.

---

The Chief Justice said:

I am gratified at being able to announce to the gentlemen of the bar that William R. Day, of Ohio, appointed to a seat on this bench, is present and prepared to take the oath of office. His commission will be read by the clerk, to be afterwards recorded, and the oath will then be administered.

The commission was then read and the oath administered by the clerk, and Mr. Justice Day took his seat on the bench.

March 2, 1903.

APPENDIX IX.

---

Supreme Court of the United States.

OCTOBER TERM, 1902.

---

ORDER.

There having been an associate justice of this court appointed since the commencement of this term, it is ordered that the following allotment be made of the Chief Justice and Associate Justices, agreeably to the act of Congress in such case made and provided, and that such allotment be entered of record, viz.:

For the First Circuit, Oliver Wendell Holmes, Associate Justice.

For the Second Circuit, Rufus W. Peckham, Associate Justice.

For the Third Circuit, Henry B. Brown, Associate Justice.

For the Fourth Circuit, Melville W. Fuller, Chief Justice.

For the Fifth Circuit, Edward D. White, Associate Justice.

For the Sixth Circuit, John M. Harlan, Associate Justice.

For the Seventh Circuit, William R. Day, Associate Justice.

For the Eighth Circuit, David J. Brewer, Associate Justice.

For the Ninth Circuit, Joseph McKenna, Associate Justice.

March 9, 1903.

---

APPENDIX X.

---

Supreme Court of the United States.

OCTOBER TERM, 1902.

---

ORDER.

The reporter having represented that, owing to the number of decisions at the present term, it would be impracticable to put the reports in one volume, it is therefore now here ordered that he publish an additional volume in this year, pursuant to section 681 of the Revised Statutes.

March 23, 1903.

APPENDIX XI.

---

Supreme Court of the United States.

OCTOBER TERM, 1902.

---

ORDER.

It is now here ordered by the court that all the cases on the docket not decided and all the other business of the term not disposed of by the court be, and the same are hereby, continued until the next term of the court.

June 1, 1903.

1202

Ref 348.73 Un35
United States. Supreme Court.
Cases argued and decided in the Supreme Court of the

For Reference

Not to be taken from this room

PHILLIPS ACADEMY

3 1867 00062 0018

